Students sing, raise flags for the Constitution

By Andrew J. Davis
Herold Reporter

Schools throughout Manchester celebrated the 200th anniversary of the signing of the United States Constitution in grand style this morning.

The celebration at Buckley School was typical. Students and teachers dressed in colonial costumes, sang patriotic songs and ate Constitution birthday cake.

School Principal Edward H. Timbrell dressed as Thomas Jefferson, the third president of the United States.

Students marched in their costumes to the front of the school for a flag-raising ceremony. They sang a version of the Pledge of Allegiance as a 1776 flag was hoisted up the school's flagpole. The Preamble to the Constitution was read aloud in unison by the school's 430 students.

Many parents attended the flag-raising ceremony, and subsequent musical assembly. A plethora of cameras and movie cameras recorded the ceremony.

Joyce A. Yarnot's sixth-grade class led the flag-raising ceremony. Abbey Hamm led the reading of the Preamble and Steven Wade helped raise the flag.

Yarnot said the celebration gave teachers a chance to tell students why the document is so important to the United States.

"It's both an educational day and fun day," she said. "It's a great opportunity to teach students since it's at the beginning of the year."

"The document explains how the country is run," Hamm said. "It protects our individual rights."

That liberty was celebrated during the musical assembly after the flag-raising. Eleven students took the stage as the "Bill of Rights Rappers." The students, in rap fashion, told how each of the 10 bills protects the country. Entering the students sang patriotic songs such as "Yankee Doodle" and "America the Beautiful," and put on a square-dancing display.

But Buckley was not the only school participating in the celebration. Keeney Elementary School held a flag-raising ceremony this morning. Washington and Nathan Hale elementary schools held tree plantings, and Bennet Junior High School put on a Constitution play, among others.

Students at most schools will watch or listen to a 1:30 p.m. nationally televised speech by President Ronald Reagan and retired Chief Justice Warren Burger.

Other events planned throughout the week include: balloon launchings at a number of schools, an Uncle Sam look-alike contest at Manchester High School, and students from all schools signing copies of the Constitution. And at Martin School, students are being asked to test their parents to determine how many words of the Constitution's Preamble they can recite.

Dressed in colonial clothes, fourth-grade student Amy Gambala watches the "Bill of Rights Rappers" during a musical assembly at Buckley School this morning. Celebrations at Buckley and other schools marked the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

Bork denies illegal action in 'massacre'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork today denied that he had acted illegally in firing special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox 14 years ago and said that he "did my utmost" to make sure the investigation into the Nixon administration went forward.

"My moral and professional feelings were on the line if something happened to those investigations," Bork said and he recalled the dramatic events of 1973, which culminated in the resignation of President Nixon.

Bork also disclosed that he had refused a request from the White House to resign as a top Justice Department official at the time and become Nixon's chief Watergate defense lawyer. He said he convinced then-White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. that "it was not the right man for the job."

Bork stiffly turned aside a suggestion from Sen. Howard M. Baker, D-Ore., that he had acted illegally in firing Cox in what became known as the Saturday Night Massacre. "I don't think it was, senator," Bork said in the opening moments of the second day of his confirmation hearings.

Bork said he had fired Cox because Nixon had given him a legal order to do so. Even then, Bork added, he fully expected the Watergate investigation to go forward.

Bork's nomination has been intensely controversial, with liberals saying he would use his seat to attempt to overturn previous rulings that have established rights to abortion, privacy and affirmative action, and supporters attempting to portray him as a mainstream conservative judge. Bork has been a member of the Supreme Court since 1982.

Bork today stoutly defended his actions as a solicitor general in Nixon's Justice Department. Nixon ordered Bork to fire Cox after Attorney General Elliot Richardson and Deputy Attorney General William French Smith resigned rather than do so. Richardson has since said he believes Bork acted lawfully.

After 200 years, the party begins

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Their task complete after a long, hot summer, framers of the U.S. Constitution retired to a tavern to toast their work. Today, two centuries later, the party begins in earnest.

The 39 thirty men who affixed their signatures to the four-page parchment on Sept. 17, 1787, were among 56 delegates to the constitutional convention. The rest thought the document was flawed or had gone home early.

"That their work was done was 'little short of a miracle,'" said George Washington, the war hero who oversaw the debate and would become the fledgling nation's first president.

"The America we love must reach its poor constituents and give them some hope to stand on," Sullivan said.

This morning, an honor guard began a 24-hour vigil and a wreath was laid at Philadelphia's tomb of the unknown soldier, which honors those who died in the Revolutionary War.

Other observances scheduled for today included a gathering of judges from the highest courts of the first 13 states.

The jurists were to hear seven citizens speak on the importance of the Constitution in their lives.

The yearlong 200th anniversary celebration reaches "a rousing crescendo" on Thursday, says Willard Rouse III, chairman of the We The People 200 organization that planned the city's bash.

Officials expect about 800,000 people to attend.

Thursday's celebration opens with a 3.5 million, six-hour parade with 30 floats, 1,500 white doves and 20,000 marchers, recalling the Grand Federal Procession of 1788 that marked ratification of the Constitution and the centennial parade of 1887.

At least one descendant of each signer will march. The youngest will be fifth-grader Elizabeth Warrick, 9, a descendant of John Langdon of New Hampshire.

Reagan will view the parade and speak outside Independence Hall, where delegates secretly debated the founding of a government on a sturdy second floor.

Baseball fans at Thursday's Philadelphia Phillies game will see the largest band-led American flag ever made, 247 feet by 122 feet, unfurled while one of 200 new citizens leads the Pledge of Allegiance at a pregame ceremony.

Panel finds no evidence of hiring bias in schools

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Herold Reporter

The Human Relations Commission has found no evidence supporting allegations of discrimination by the Board of Education, a committee report Tuesday said.

Manchester resident A. Donald Thompson had complained to the HRC last month that he had applied for a custodial job in the school system about three years ago but only recently learned that he could not be considered for a position without an employer's reference.

At the same HRC meeting, Barry H. Baskerville, a custodian in Manchester schools, said that Thompson's case was indicative of continuing discrimination by the school board against blacks.

But a report prepared by a subcommittee formed to investigate the charges says that Thompson's allegations seem to have stemmed from a misunderstanding between him and Wilfred F. Dion, the school system's director of building and grounds.

Kathryn Dimlow, the chairman of the subcommittee, said at Tuesday's HRC meeting in the Municipal Building that Thompson apparently did not understand the importance of a background check for potential custodial workers. She said Dion had requested three references, but Thompson had been able to provide only one from Pillowtex Corp., where he has worked for the past six years.

Dimlow said that a thorough background check is required by the school board because custodians work around children and have access to every area of a school building. Assistant School Superintendent Wilson E. Deakin Jr. had made the same argument when Thompson first made public his charges.

Dimlow said that the misunderstanding has been clarified and that Thompson is now being considered for a custodial opening in the school system. "I think he feels, now that he has everything in, that he has a decent chance at the job," she said.

Deakin confirmed this morning that Thompson is being considered for the custodial job. Though he is not yet employed, Deakin said that Thompson will still be considered for the job even if the fourth reference is not received.

Deakin said he is pleased with the outcome of the HRC investigation. He said that some commission members appeared to have taken a position against the school board before the Thompson case was investigated, but relations between the board and the HRC have returned to normal.

Thompson's name is not listed in the telephone directory and he could not be reached for comment this morning.

Dion had written to Thompson in a letter dated July 21 that Thompson could not be considered for a custodial job until he provided a reference from a former employer who had worked for him. "Without this reference, we will not consider you for any future openings," the letter said.

HRC members were critical of the letter at the August meeting, calling it inappropriate. The report submitted Tuesday was also critical, saying that Dion's letter "did not effectively communicate its intent." The report said that the letter should have read, "We will not be able to consider you for future employment until you supply us with the information that is missing."

Besides the employer's reference from a former employer, Thompson said he had provided a reference from a former employer who had worked for him. "Without this reference, we will not consider you for any future openings," the letter said.

U.S., Soviet experts make some progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today reported some progress "on arms control issues as he renewed pre-summit talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

The headway, Shultz said, had been reached by a group of U.S. and Soviet negotiators who met in Geneva Tuesday night and also by a separate group that dealt with bilateral questions.

He did not provide any details in a brief exchange with reporters after the meeting. They are designed to iron out differences in the way of a treaty to ban U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear missiles and over human rights and Afghanistan as well.

Asked what he thought of the optimistic statements now coming from U.S. officials, Shevardnadze hesitated and then replied, through a Russian interpreter, "We also made some optimistic statements."

As for the two working groups that met at the State Department while Shultz and Shevardnadze took a boat ride along the Potomac River, Shevardnadze said that "if we didn't expect anything, we wouldn't be sitting here."

Shultz then volunteered, "They made some progress, but the minister and I agreed while they weren't perfect they were the best we had."

He could not be asked for clarification because the handful of reporters and photographers who were allowed a few minutes in the eighth-floor conference room were ushered out by State Department officials.

Charles E. Redman, the department spokesman, said that the morning agenda was devoted to arms control issues and that Shultz had received reports from U.S. members of the working groups before seeing Shevardnadze.

Their goal was to pare down their differences over a schedule for phasing out the missiles and over U.S. warheads on West German rockets, so the treaty could be in shape for signing at a superpower summit in Washington by year's end.

"I think both sides feel pretty much the same way," Shultz said at a White House news conference Tuesday. "And that is what we should work hard to prepare it carefully. And that's what we are doing."

Big storms in Plains; snow in high country

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms rumbled across the Plains today and a cold front powdered some Western high country with snow. Skies were clear from central Oklahoma and west Texas to the West Coast. A gale warning was posted for the northern California coast.

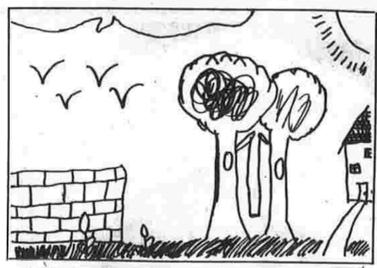

Clear to partly cloudy skies prevailed in the East, although some areas had haze and early morning fog.

Thunderstorms were widespread from southeastern South Dakota across eastern Nebraska, eastern Kansas and western Missouri into Oklahoma, Arkansas and northeastern Texas. A cold front moving through the Northwest pushed early-morning temperatures into the 30s to 40s. Snow fell at high elevations of western Montana.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered across the Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley, lower Michigan and the lower Missouri Valley, across east Texas, the Tennessee Valley, Maryland, Delaware and south Florida, and showers scattered across Wyoming, eastern Montana and northern New England.

Highs will be in the upper 50s to 60s from the Northwest through the northern Rockies to the northern Great Lakes; 90s from the desert Southwest through much of Texas and in the Gulf Coast and southern Atlantic Coast states; and 70s to 80s across most of the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 33 degrees at Burns, Ore., to 87 at Corpus Christi, Texas.

Today's weather picture was drawn by Kimberly L. Hoops, who lives on Dartmouth Road and attends Martin School.

Plymouth or Acomack

On this date in 1620, the Pilgrims left Plymouth, England, for America. According to popular myth, the Pilgrims named their settlement after the town of their departure. In fact, America's Plymouth had been named years earlier. In 1614, Captain John Smith showed a map of the area to Prince Charles, who promptly substituted "good English names" for the Indian-named villages. Thus, Acomack became Plymouth even before the Pilgrims arrived.

Behaving himself

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bad-boy actor Sean Penn has behaved himself in jail and is due for release after serving more than half of a 60-day sentence for probation violation, authorities say.

Penn, 27, whose film credits include "Bad Boys" and "The Falcon and The Snowman," will be eligible for early release on good behavior on his 32nd day behind bars, according to court records.

Penn's attorney Howard Weitzman calculates his client will have served 33 days by Thursday, and may seek release today.

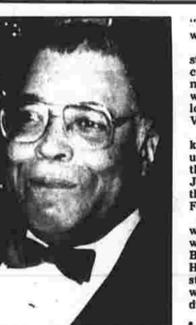

Deputy City Attorney Alice Hand, who prosecuted the actor, said she was satisfied with the shortened jail term. "We wanted 30 days in jail, so we got exactly what we wanted," she said.

Penn was jailed for violating probation imposed for two scuffles. He served the first part of his sentence in rural Mono County, was freed to work on a movie project, then served in the Central Jail in Los Angeles.

Penn's probation was extended to two years in June after he punched a movie extra who tried to take his picture on the set of the police film, "Colors." He already was on probation for punching a man he accused of trying to kiss his wife, pop singer Madonna.

filming "Matewan"

"Matewan" was something he's wanted to do for a long time. Sayles' fifth movie tells the story of the 1920 Matewan massacre, a shootout between coal-miners and strikebreakers that was the bloodiest episode in the long fight to unionize the West Virginia coalfields.

"The ironic thing is I don't know how long our present-day unions will let John make movies that cheaply and that well," said Jones, who introduced the film this week at Toronto's Festival of Festivals.

Jones said he wanted to work with Sayles since seeing the writer-director's 1985 film "The Brother From Another Planet." He said he worked for scale and stayed at an inexpensive motel with the rest of the movie crew during filming.

He hates to date

NEW YORK (AP) — Corbin Bernsen, who plays the sensitive divorce lawyer on NBC's "L.A. Law," is looking to get married. The problem is, he hates to date.

"I know what I like and I know what I don't like," the 33-year-old actor says in October's Glamour magazine. "I've been through two relationships (actress Heather Thomas and ex-wife Brenda Cooper) where I loved one woman five years at a time."

"Now, if I'm on a date and my mind is saying, 'You've got to be kidding.' I'd pay the check and leave in the middle of dinner if it weren't rude," Bernsen said.

The girl he marries will have to be intelligent, socially conscious, concerned, drug free, like the outdoors, and should have well-kept fingernails.

Bernsen says good nails are "usually a good sign of people taking care of themselves — paint chipped off drives me nuts."

Manchester Assistant School Superintendent Wilson E. Deakin Jr., left, looks at a display case with Dr. Richard F. Lindgren before ceremonies Tuesday for the gallery named in Lindgren's honor.

'I'm not even dead yet' Student art gallery dedicated at Iling

By Andrew J. Davis
Herald Reporter

Iling Junior High School's new art gallery was formally dedicated Tuesday night as 50 people watched.

The gallery was named after Dr. Richard F. Lindgren, Iling's principal. As everyone clapped, he cut a ribbon stretched across the entrance to the gallery, which is next to the school's main lobby.

"I'm not dead yet or retired, but it is an honor," Lindgren said. He was referring to a crack made by Assistant Superintendent Wilson E. Deakin Jr., who said during the ceremony that such honors are usually bestowed on dead or retired people.

Lindgren added that it was ironic that an art gallery was named after him since the only D he received in college was in art. But, he added, "I'm very proud it's named after me."

The gallery is the brainchild of Donna Fitzgerald, who heads the junior high school's art department. Fitzgerald said she and her colleagues have worked more than three years on the project.

She said she never doubted the gallery would open. "It's because of Dr. Lindgren. Once he commits himself to a project, he stands behind you."

The first show at the gallery is marking the 200th anniversary of the United States Constitution. The exhibit, "We the People," will run until Oct. 2.

On Tuesday, dedication guests walked through the gallery and looked over items such as an Amish quilt, Benjamin Franklin glasses, an 18th century rug, and a map of the country as it looked 200 years ago.

Dr. Lindgren turned the dedication into a family affair. His wife, Diane Lindgren, his parents, Leonard and Elizabeth Lindgren of New Britain and his daughter, Diane, and sons Rick and Stephen were present.

Elizabeth Lindgren said she was proud the gallery was named after her son.

"It's wonderful. But he's not one to talk of these things. He never brags," she said.

The new Lindgren Gallery will be open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The gallery will display works by students and professional artists. It is open to the public.

No one shows for Bolton town meeting

BOLTON — Not one Bolton resident attended Tuesday's town meeting, but the Board of Selectmen went ahead and approved spending a total of $41,000 in revenue sharing funds. They OK'd spending $36,000 to help pay for a new salt-storage shed near the town garage, a project which has not yet gone out to bid.

Three of the five town selectmen were present Tuesday to approve the measure. First Selectman Sandra W. Pierog, Douglas T. Cheney and Lawrence A. Converse. Absent were Michael A. Zizka and Carl A. Preuss.

The salt-storage shed is a necessity since the state's Department of Environmental Protection has said that salt stored in the open can pose a danger if it is rained on and seeps into ground water, possibly contaminating a well that serves Bolton Elementary and Center schools.

The remainder of the leftover money, about $5,000, was appropriated for renovations to the old firehouse on Notch Road. The building will be used to house offices for the resident state trooper and the Bolton constables.

During its regular meeting, the Board of Selectmen voted to pay back wages to four highway workers in town whose contract was recently ratified after more than two years of negotiations.

Selectmen also approved payments for the highway workers' Social Security pension, clothing allowance, and safety shoes. In total, they approved spending $17,388.39 for the period from July 1, 1985, to June 30, 1987. An appropriation covering the current year was also made, totaling $17,900.90.

A policy regarding the use of the new firehouse was expected to be discussed Tuesday, but the discussion was postponed because members of the Fire Commission were unable to attend the meeting. It will be on the next meeting's agenda.

Reunion catches the game warden's ire

BOLTON — Not everything was business Tuesday at the Board of Selectmen's twice-monthly meeting.

With a light agenda, no spectators, and two of the five board members absent, Selectman Lawrence A. Converse lightened the meeting by telling what happened to his family on Sept. 1, the day he missed the last selectmen's meeting.

Converse said he attended a family reunion at the home of his mother, Ruth Converse, who lives at 1066 Boston Turnpike, in honor of the return of his sister, Ellen Converse Nardine, from Seattle. His sister had moved there about 10 years ago when her husband got a job there.

According to Converse, there is little room to park at his mother's house, which is located next to the boat launch of the Lower Bolton Pond. So family members were forced to park illegally in the boat launch area, which is reserved after dark for fishermen.

"At about 9:30, a game warden knocked on the door, and he said he was doing us all a favor by having our cars towed away," said Converse.

But the game warden did issue six $40 parking tickets to the Converse family cars.

"The whole family said, 'You're a selectman — do something about it,'" Converse said. "I said, 'What the hell am I supposed to do about it?'"

Converse said that the warden was not content to just issue the tickets.

"He dragged us all outside to show us the sign that says not to park here. And he encouraged us to tell the world that no one will park there after dark. He wanted us to tell all our friends," said Converse.

Sutherland wins re-election

Dr. John F. Sutherland of Manchester Community College has been elected to a second term as president of the Connecticut Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History, a service organization of academic professors, museum personnel and history teachers.

A professor of history at MCC since 1970, Sutherland is also director of the college's Institute of Local History. He is a past president of the Manchester Historical Society and the New England Association of Oral History. In 1986, he received an award of merit from the Connecticut League of Historical Societies. He is the first community college faculty member to hold the position.

Briefings on accord planned

Meetings in three different schools in the northern part of town have been planned to help explain the tentative agreement between the town and Eighth Utilities District.

Walter Joyner, president of the district and one of the four district negotiators who worked out terms of the accord, said Monday the dates for the meetings at Waddell School, Robertson School, and Bowers School have not yet been set.

He said the meetings will be conducted jointly by the negotiating teams for the town and the district.

Joyner said the nucleus of a committee to promote the agreement has been formed with three of the four district negotiators, Joyner, James Sarles, and John D. LaBelle Jr., district legal counsel, as members. Joyner said he has not yet talked with the fourth negotiator, Gordon Lassow, who has been ill. The committee will be expanded, Joyner said.

Faucher won't seek 3rd term

Robert Faucher, the chairman of the town's Human Relations Commission, has announced that he won't seek reappointment to the commission for a third three-year term.

Faucher, 37, said at Tuesday's HRC meeting that the demands of a new job were behind his decision not to remain on the board. He said a desire to do something new was also a factor.

"Maybe I'm getting those 'pushing 40 blues,'" Faucher said.

Faucher, who has lived in town for 10 years, said he still plans to speak up on local issues and may again seek a post on a town commission in the future.

HOW TO EVALUATE COMPETING OFFERS

When faced with multiple offers, how do you pick and choose among them? Your Realtor can help by setting up a chart comparing the main features of each proposal. First, there's the price. Consider the closing costs you may be asked to pay. Be sure you understand any terms that might reduce your net profit. Can you work out a mutually agreeable date for you to move out and for the new buyers to move in? How clean is each offer? Do the buyers have another property to sell before they can settle on yours? Can you get reasonable assurances that the buyers will be able to qualify for the financing they will need?

Your Realtor can help you weigh the relative merits of each offer. Then you can accept or counter the best one, and perhaps line up one of the other offers as an alternative.

Manchester/Area Towns In Brief

Bolton store complex up for hearing

BOLTON — The Zoning Commission will hold a public hearing tonight to hear residents' comments on a small shopping complex proposed on Route 44, near the Coventry town line.

The small shopping complex was proposed at the Aug. 19 meeting of the Zoning Commission by Richard and Marilyn Vatteroni of 70 Notch Road. The Vatteronis want to build a small shopping complex on a 1.3-acre lot bordering Old Coventry Road. They have owned the property for three years.

Zoning Commission Chairman Philip G. Dooley told the Vatteronis on Aug. 19 that since the land is zoned for commercial use, permission to build the mall is not required.

Dooley's only concern was the possibility that there would not be enough space in the shopping center's parking lot for tractor-trailers to maneuver. He cited the parking lot of the Cumberland Farms on Boston Turnpike, where large trucks often experience problems.

I-84-I-91 work continues

Work on the new I-84-I-91 interchange in Hartford is scheduled to shift to daytime this week.

The work, which will be performed in the I-84 median area, will take place from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Motorists will be able to use two lanes in each direction while work continues.

This phase of the $88.5 million project involves the installation of permanent concrete median barriers on I-84 from Main street to the vicinity of the Bulkeley Bridge. The work will continue for the next three months.

Grammar schools seek volunteers

Manchester's grammar schools are recruiting volunteers to work in the school libraries and offices, and to tutor students or work with class projects.

Hours are flexible and positions are available in all grades. For more information, call Joyce Wazer at 647-3520 on Monday, Wednesday or Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Unemployment rate holds steady

Manchester's unemployment rate held at 2.8 percent for June and July of this year despite an increase in the unemployment rate. Connecticut Labor Department figures show 444 unemployed in Manchester this July, 8 fewer than in the previous month.

The actual number of unemployed in Hartford also decreased, from 12,900 in June 1987 to 12,800 in July, according to a report by State Labor Commissioner P. Joseph Ferraro.

The rise in state unemployment from 3.2 percent in June to 3.4 percent in July is due in part to summer furloughing of school workers and factory shutdowns in July, Ferraro reported.

Girl Scout registration in Bolton

Connecticut In Brief

Audit leads to two resignations

NEW HAVEN — A government audit that found the state was billed $27,602 for services never provided has led to the resignation of two prominent Yale psychiatrists from community health positions, officials said.

Two Connecticut Mental Health Center administrators also were fired, the school said.

State auditors have brought the matter to the attention of Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman while Yale has reimbursed the money to the state, officials said.

Dr. Gary L. Tlachler of Woodbridge resigned as chairman of the medical school's psychiatry department and as chief of psychiatry at Yale-New Haven Hospital, the school said. Dr. Boris M. Atrachan of Hamden resigned as director of the Connecticut Mental Health Center. Both men will keep their appointments as professors of psychiatry at the Yale medical school.

Fairfield cops fight 'Big Brother'

FAIRFIELD — A new vehicle-tracking system scheduled to be installed in the town's patrol cars is being opposed by some police officers who say it is like having "Big Brother breathing down our necks."

The system is part of a new, $800,000 shared dispatch center for police and firefighters, said police Capt. Ronald Sullivan. The center includes the vehicle locator and three computerized dispatch stations, Sullivan said.

When police officers respond to a call, they will push buttons in their cars, automatically recording their arrival times. They will do the same when departing.

But the locator system is not being well received by the police union.

"We don't want someone breathing down our necks," said Sgt. Angelo DeLeon, who said it was like having "Big Brother" watching. The reference is to the omnipresent character from George Orwell's futuristic novel "1984."

Jail chief brings warden along

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — An Oklahoma jail warden is expected to become deputy commissioner of correctional institutions in Connecticut under new Correction Commissioner Larry Meachum.

In a letter of resignation received Monday by the Oklahoma Department of Corrections, Thomas White, warden of the Conner Correctional Center, said he was resigning effective Oct. 31 and that his new job will begin Nov. 1.

Meachum, who has been director of Oklahoma's Department of Corrections for eight years, will become the head of Connecticut's prison system Oct. 1.

State levies $20,000 pollution fine

HARTFORD — A Waterbury company has been fined $20,000 as a result of violations of state water pollution laws, Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said.

The company, Waterbury Rolling Mills Inc., had been sued by the state last year, accused of discharging raw sewage into a metal-finishing operations without a permit, Lieberman said Tuesday.

Waterbury Rolling Mills' discharge permit from the Department of Environmental Protection expired in 1982. The illegal discharge was recorded on Jan. 5 and the matter referred by the DEP to Lieberman's office in March.

The settlement of the suit includes orders for the company to comply with discharge laws, test its discharges weekly and report results to the DEP. Violations can result in additional fines, the attorney general said.

Charges mount in tax fraud case

NEW YORK — The charges keep mounting against tax shelter promoter John Patrick Galanis and others accused of a multimillion dollar fraud and racketeering scheme extending from Connecticut to California.

A federal grand jury, sitting in White Plains, returned a superseding indictment Tuesday against Galanis and seven other men, accusing them of racketeering, securities and mail fraud.

The indictment contained new allegations of the fraudulent takeover of three California mutual funds and a Connecticut bank.

The 58-count indictment also added two new defendants: Washington, D.C., attorney Arthur D. Mason, 46, of Chevy Chase, Md., and John Geanoulis, 38, of Manhattan, a businessman. Both were charged in the alleged mutual funds scheme.

Work affects student performance

NORWALK — An increase in younger high school students who add full-time jobs to their schedules is resulting in fatigued students who come to school unprepared, according to some teachers and school officials.

"The crunch for labor in this area is so severe that younger students are working full-time, and are making jobs a higher priority than their school work," said Superintendent Ralph E. Sloan.

Sloan told members of the PTA Council Monday night that the problem is "across the board," and involves honors students, freshmen and sophomores.

Sloan said teachers have been complaining to him of more and more unprepared students coming to classes too fatigued to have completed their homework assignments.

"They are even falling asleep in classes," Sloan said.

Lieberman suggests relief fund

NEW HAVEN — State Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman is proposing that a percentage of the fines collected from polluters be shifted to subsidize the creation of a relief fund to help citizen groups with important environmental projects.

Lieberman's proposal was made Tuesday night at the annual meeting of the Connecticut Fund for the Environment at Yale University.

Lieberman said the fund, which must be approved by the General Assembly, could be used for such purposes as cleaning up a lake, studying an environmental hazard or waging a lawsuit. He said the pool of money available for such a fund is rapidly increasing as the state receives ever-higher court judgments against polluters.

State AFL-CIO begins convention

NEW BRITAIN — Some 600 labor leaders are prepared to discuss major issues affecting organized labor at the annual convention of the Connecticut State AFL-CIO, the state's largest labor federation.

The three-day convention was scheduled to begin today at Central Connecticut State University.

The delegates are expected to discuss laws the labor federation will seek on behalf of workers, particularly one that would require employers to provide notice of plans to close a plant, according to the organization's president, Betty L. Tianti.

Delegates also are to discuss establishment of a program that would give unions more control over how pension funds are spent, she said.

Tianti said the federation wants to establish an economic development committee composed of unions that have pension funds.

One incumbent loses in primaries

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

With just one exception, Connecticut voters stuck with incumbent mayors and first selectmen in primary elections and most now seem assured of victory in November.

Incumbents won in Tuesday's primaries in New Britain, Bridgeport, New Haven, Danbury, East Haven, Hamden and Griswold. The one town where the incumbent lost the nomination was Windham.

State Democratic Chairman John F. Droncy Jr. said he was "very pleased and excited" by Tuesday's results.

In New Britain, William J. McNamara, the state's most senior mayor, retained the Democratic nomination in a tight three-way race.

In Hartford, state Rep. Carrie Saxon Perry won a convincing victory over former state Rep. Richard P. Lawlor for the Democratic mayoral nomination. Perry had 6,705 votes to Lawlor's 4,682.

That race had been expected to be closer, but early returns were so clear that Lawlor conceded 40 minutes before the polls closed in Hartford, winning the Democratic nomination is traditionally tantamount to winning the November election, Perry, who faces Republican Philip Steele in November, would be the city's, and apparently England's, first black female mayor.

Three-term Democratic Mayor Thirman L. McFerrer had decided this campaign to seek re-election.

"We won this old-fashioned way: we worked for it," Perry, wearing her trademark wide-brimmed hat and with tears in her eyes, told cheering supporters. "You know what this is about? It's about our children. They're not to know we can be whatever we want to be."

The New Britain contest was also expected to be close as McNamara ended up winning the endorsement for a sixth two-year term by about 600 votes. Unofficial totals

Teen's letter promised to 'do the deed'

HARTFORD (AP) — The suspect in the strangulation murder of Joyce Aparo promised, in a letter to the victim's daughter, that he would "do the deed," according to court documents.

The comments were in an arrest warrant unsealed Tuesday in Superior Court. That warrant charges Dennis Coleman with the felony murder in the Glastonbury woman's death.

"To my dreamgirl... I will 'do the deed' I promise you!" Coleman, 19, of Glastonbury, wrote in the letter Aug. 3, less than two days before the woman's death.

According to the affidavit, Coleman had placed the body in Karin Aparo's bed, the affidavit said.

Karin Aparo turned the letter over to state police two days after her mother's death, but she was charged three weeks later with planning the slaying with Coleman for more than a year.

Two other Glastonbury teenagers, who are alleged to have hindered prosecution in the case, also were arrested.

The affidavit for Coleman's arrest did not reveal details of Karin Aparo's arrest warrant affidavit or any possible motives for her alleged involvement.

Aparo was in court Tuesday for a pretrial hearing, and Judge John M. Byrne ruled that her arrest affidavit would remain sealed until he decides whether the case should be transferred to Juvenile Court. Byrne will decide Sept. 29 whether a probable cause hearing should be held in Juvenile Court or in Superior Court in Hartford. Aparo was charged Aug. 28 with conspiracy to commit murder and with being an accessory to murder.

Joyce Aparo's bruised, nightgown-clad body was found under a bridge in Bernardston, Mass. Aug. 5 by an 11-year-old boy who was walking his dog, police said.

Coleman, according to the court documents, told Karin Aparo that he entered her mother's house in the middle of the night using a key left under the door.

Karin Aparo said Coleman told her he wrapped a pair of nylons around her mother's neck and "pulled for dear life."

The 47-year-old Aparo began to struggle and kick, so he covered her face with a pillow and continued pulling on the nylon, Coleman told Karin Aparo, according to the affidavit. He removed the pillow when he saw the victim's face was blue, the affidavit said.

Police said Coleman dragged Aparo's body to her car and drove to Massachusetts, where he dumped the body and the car. Christopher Wheatley, 19, and Kira Lintner, 16, are accused of following Coleman in a car and driving him home.

Japan and the U.S. signed the San Francisco peace treaty in 1951.

Iraq reports attack on oil centers

By The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iraq said its warplanes today bombed Iranian oil centers and hit a ship in the Persian Gulf, shattering a weeklong informal cease-fire in the waterway during U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar's peace talks.

Iraq also reported Iran shelled its southern city of Basra overnight after it pounded Iranian positions near the city Tuesday, the same day Perez de Cuellar ended six days of talks with Iraqi and Iranian leaders.

An Iranian frigate, meanwhile, reportedly has been harassing vessels heading for the Persian Gulf.

Tehran radio said Iranian forces will begin Thursday to hold major amphibious maneuvers in the Gulf of Oman off Iran's southeastern coast, between the Persian Gulf and the Indian Ocean, to counter what it called the threat from U.S. and Western navies.

Laurel won't serve in new Cabinet

MANILA, Philippines — Vice President Salvador Laurel announced today he would not continue as foreign secretary because of "fundamental differences" with President Corason Aquino.

Aquino later told a nationwide television audience she had accepted Laurel's resignation "with regret." He remains vice president, and said he would not align himself with the opposition.

Laurel and the rest of the 25-member Cabinet resigned Sept. 9, saying they wanted to give Aquino a free hand to reorganize the government after a failed coup attempt. It had been expected Laurel would be renamed to his post.

Laurel accused Aquino of reneging on promises made to him during the 1986 election campaign against ousted President Ferdinand Marcos.

Democratic Party-endorsed Benjamin A. Muzio, a former state motor vehicles commissioner, had an earlier-than-expected time of defeating challenger Brian W. Prucker in Stafford. Muzio had 1,558 votes to Prucker's 854, according to unofficial returns. Muzio attempted to make a political comeback, held the first selectman's job before becoming motor vehicles commissioner.

In Windham, Democratic First Selectwoman Hanna K. Clements lost the nomination to challenger Norman R. French, 1,458 to 1,358, according to unofficial totals.

Simsbury First Selectwoman Margaret C. Shanks, a Republican, held on to the nomination, defeating challenger Joan Coe, 1,363 to 884.

In Trumbull, state Rep. Mora L. Vance wrested the Republican first selectman nomination from party-endorsed Vivian L. Burr.

Ford, UAW move closer to pact

DEARBORN, Mich. — The United Auto Workers and Ford Motor Co. moved closer to a settlement covering 104,000 employees at the nation's No. 2 automaker during intensive contract talks that continued into this morning.

The session began Tuesday morning after the union, in an unprecedented act, extended its strike deadline of midnight Monday on a day-to-day basis. Local UAW leaders said the extension came after Ford made a new job-security offer.

"They're involved in intensive negotiations which will continue through the night," Ford spokeswoman Tom Foote said Tuesday. "We're not sure how long they will last. They have a lot of things to talk about. They're making progress, but there is still a lot to be done. They're working very hard and very constructively."

Guerrillas ambush Israeli soldiers

TEL AVIV, Israel — Lebanese guerrillas ambushed an Israeli patrol in south Lebanon, killing three soldiers and wounding four, the army spokesman said today. It was the highest Israeli casualty toll in one attack in more than two years.

The pro-Syrian guerrilla squad was on its way to carry out an attack inside Israel when it ran into the army patrol late Tuesday, the army said.

Israeli troops and allied Lebanese militia backed by tanks and helicopter gunships were rushed in as reinforcements to try to flush out the guerrillas in the foothills of Mount Hermon, Israeli radio reported.

The fighting lasted eight hours.

PLO has 30 days to close office

WASHINGTON — The State Department, in a demonstration of "U.S. concern over terrorism," is giving the Palestine Liberation Organization 30 days to close its information office in Washington.

Charles E. Redman, the department spokesman, on Tuesday cited as among the reasons the membership of accused hijacker Abu Abbas on the PLO executive committee and the reformation of militant Palestinian groups with the PLO last April.

"The U.S. believes that terrorism is committed overtly in behalf of the Palestinian people by some groups and individuals associated with the PLO, has done grievous damage to the achievement of legitimate Palestinian rights," Redman said. He said the PLO could maintain its New York office, which has "observer status" at the United Nations.

Democrats lose tug-of-warchests

WASHINGTON — Democrats have set a Senate record for dogged persistence, but they came up empty handed in their tug-of-warchests with Republicans over limiting election campaign spending.

Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., has called a halt, at least for this year, to efforts to break a three-month-old GOP filibuster against Democratic legislation aimed at limiting ever-rising campaign costs.

Byrd, faced with a crowded calendar and dwindling time this year, pulled the legislation off the floor Tuesday after losing a record-setting seventh cloture vote in a series that began on June 9. A successful vote would have cut off debate and allowed a vote on the bill itself.

WASHINGTON — More than one-third of federally certified nursing homes were found repeatedly deficient in at least one area affecting patient care during a four-year period, the General Accounting Office reported today.

"Repeated noncompliance with nursing home requirements is widespread," said the report by the investigative arm of Congress.

The biggest problem was found to be in nursing services, which include everything from treatment and medication, to preventing bedsores and injuries.

In addition to a survey of compliance reports on 8,298 nursing homes throughout the country, the GAO did in-depth studies on 28 nursing homes in five states.

Four of the states — Arkansas, California, Connecticut and Kansas — were picked because researchers said they "had a large percentage of their facilities repeatedly failed to comply with selected requirements." Homes in Wisconsin were added for comparison purposes because there were relatively few repeat offenders. No state-by-state compliance records were made available.

Ford, UAW move closer to pact

DEARBORN, Mich. — The United Auto Workers and Ford Motor Co. moved closer to a settlement covering 104,000 employees at the nation's No. 2 automaker during intensive contract talks that continued into this morning.

The session began Tuesday morning after the union, in an unprecedented act, extended its strike deadline of midnight Monday on a day-to-day basis. Local UAW leaders said the extension came after Ford made a new job-security offer.

"They're involved in intensive negotiations which will continue through the night," Ford spokeswoman Tom Foote said Tuesday. "We're not sure how long they will last. They have a lot of things to talk about. They're making progress, but there is still a lot to be done. They're working very hard and very constructively."

Work law is a step backward

Allowing 15-year-olds to work in retail establishments will have the short-term benefit of eliminating a lot of the "help wanted" signs from store windows, but it won't do much for nurturing the talents of future community leaders.

Clearly the change in the law allowing youngsters to get jobs before they are 16 years old is designed to meet the needs of merchants who face shortages of help in a booming general economy.

Most educators are understandably concerned about the effect the law will have on the amount of time and energy students will have left after work for study and for those after-school activities that are important to their development as people, and as citizens in a democratic society that requires leadership abilities in a broad spectrum of the population.

Eagerness for this economic expediency is puzzling when stacked against the ongoing criticism of schools for not doing more and not doing it better.

When the younger students go into the workplace — even under the limitations imposed by the new law — the burden on parents to keep the children's priorities in line will be even greater than it is now. In some cases, the money the young people earn will be money needed to augment family incomes. In most cases, however, it will be used to pay for unneeded indulgences, like a better car on the next birthday.

Ralph E. Sloan, the superintendent of schools in Norwalk, put the matter in perspective when he said, "The crunch of labor in this area is so severe that younger students are working full time, and are making jobs a higher priority than their school work."

Furthermore, Sloan said that the problem affects even honor students in his system.

It is an easy rationalization to conclude that the workplace gives young people a sense of relevance and responsibility, to conclude that if parents keep things in balance no harm will come from lowering the work age. But the truth is that too many students are already spending too much time and expending too much energy outside school.

The new law, despite the limits it sets on where and when and how long younger students can work, is a step backward, especially in view of the fact that those limits will be very hard to enforce and very easy to exceed.

Thoughts on the Constitution

Thursday, Sept. 17, is the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution, our most cherished legal document. It will join in celebrating events held at local schools and libraries.

Ronald Cournoyer, Manchester High School history teacher, is a co-coordinator of the celebration, which allows all students to participate by writing essays, making posters or joining in baking a big cake. The new arts center at Illing Junior High School is named for Dr. Donald Lindgren, school administrator. A large constitutional panel display is being shown there.

The time is right for all citizens to remember our sacred liberties and how to improve life in our nation. As the late folksinger Woody Guthrie sang, "This land is your land."

The state capitals of Hartford and Philadelphia are both admired because of their role in the first and final drafts of the Constitution. Several documentaries, news publications and special television programs have been appearing over the last three months.

Delaware was the first state to ratify the Constitution, on Dec. 7, 1787, as noted on a recent U.S. postage stamp.

Mayor Barbara Weinberg will read a proclamation on Thursday and the Manchester Historical Society of which I'm a member will have some constitutional displays and memorabilia at its site for a month.

She taught black children in Virginia and Florida.

Mrs. Hawkins hopes that racial prejudice in the DAR has ceased, especially since March 1985 when a black woman, Lena Ferguson, won her case by tracing her genealogy to a black American Revolutionary War veteran. The late Eleanor Roosevelt left the DAR in 1939 after members refused to allow black soprano Marian Anderson to sing at Lincoln Center. Today, there are only six women of color in the DAR. ## Secret Service is gearing up for campaign

WASHINGTON — In special training camps, the U.S. Secret Service is preparing a small army of 1,500 agents to protect the biggest crop of presidential contenders in recent memory. And service officials are worried that even this impressive number of highly trained bodyguards may not be enough, according to agency sources.

With eight Democrats and six Republicans already planning to throw their hats into the ring, the Secret Service faces its biggest political protection assignment in history.

The reason for the large number of candidates is that this will be the first time since 1968 that an incumbent president isn't running. That was also the year when the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.Y., led President Lyndon Johnson (and then Congress) to order Secret Service protection for all "major candidates" for president.

The choice of words has given the resolutely apolitical Secret Service a judgmental role usually assumed by pundits and party leaders. How does the service decide who is a "major candidate" and who is not? Whichever candidate will acquire the instant prestige of Secret Service protection, thus certified as candidates to be taken seriously? Agency sources have told us how the judgments will be made: An advisory committee of political pros will meet in November to make the determination. This unofficial committee will include the speaker of the House, the majority and minority leaders of both House and Senate (even though Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., is himself a candidate), the secretary of the Treasury (the Secret Service's boss) and an unnamed additional member chosen by the committee.

Protection of the designated candidates is currently scheduled to begin Feb. 1, 1988. Each contender will have two Secret Service teams assigned — an A and B team. The bodyguards will provide 24-hour protection in four shifts, on a 20-day rotation cycle per team.

Committee posts will be as close as possible to the candidate's homes, which will be guarded whether anyone is there or not. Each candidate will be accompanied by about seven agents while traveling, and will move about on the ground only in mini-motorcades. The federal government pays the Secret Service agents' salaries and expenses, but nothing more.

Each candidate will be assigned a Secret Service code name, primarily for use in radio communication between bodyguards. In 1976, for example, Dole's code name was "Ramrod," and his wife, now Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, was referred to as "Rainbow."

The senator probably won't have the same code name this time, and neither will his wife nor the Democratic candidate who might like the code name, Rev. Jesse Jackson, will be designated "Rainbow." That's because the moniker has been assigned to First Lady Nancy Reagan, Jackson, incidentally, was known as "Thunder" in the 1984 campaign, while Vice President George Bush's code name is "Timberwolf."

The Secret Service is widely respected for its professionalism and dedication. Agents must qualify with a small arsenal of weapons, including revolvers and the Uzi submachineguns they carry in briefcases or over-the-shoulder bags. They are also trained in karate, firefighting, crime detection, escape driving and the identification of potential assassins by psychological profile.

Growth in responsibilities has led to a huge increase in the Secret Service's manpower and budget. When President John Kennedy was assassinated in 1963, the service had about 350 agents and an $8 million annual budget; today it has 1,915 agents and a $323 million budget.

Has it paid off? Only one candidate under Secret Service protection has been shot; former Alabama Gov. George Wallace, crippled in an attempted assassination in 1972. Since then, the service has improved both training and deployment techniques — and increased greatly the number of bodyguards for presidential candidates.

Pope decries 'spiritual emptiness' as he prepares to meet bishops

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pope John Paul II decried the "spiritual emptiness and aimlessness" experienced by Americans as he prepared for an important meeting with U.S. Roman Catholic bishops today.

Speaking in a state-of-the-art front-of-theater, the pope told worshippers packed in to the Memorial Coliseum Tuesday night that no amount of progress "can eradicate our vulnerability to sin and death."

The pope was scheduled to address some 300 bishops at Our Lady Queen of the Angels Minor Seminary and hear reports from the prelates on the state of the church in the United States.

The speech was considered one of the most important the pope would deliver on his 10-day U.S. tour, and Vatican officials said the pope worked on it as he flew here from Phoenix on Tuesday.

Winding up his first day in Los Angeles, the pope celebrated a glittering Mass at sundown in the Memorial Coliseum before 103,000 people.

In his homily the pope stressed the need to be "Good Samaritans to all those who suffer," saying compassion was needed for those who suffered poverty, hunger and disease.

"Compassion is also called for in the face of the spiritual emptiness and aimlessness that people can often experience amid material prosperity and comfort in the developed countries such as your own," he said.

The pope said economic, scientific and social progress "creates new possibilities for evil as well as for good."

"Technology, for example, increases what we can do, but it cannot teach us the right thing to do. It increases our choices but it is we who must choose between evil and good."

Earlier, he told leaders of the communications industry that they should reject pornography, greed and violence, and "respect what is human and recognize what is good."

In a sense the pope is a consumer mercy," John Paul said, noting the influence Hollywood has on culture in other countries.

He said the communications industry has an obligation to truth "and to avoid any manipulation of truth for any reason."

His audience included such entertainment names as Bob Hope, Mario Thomas, Patty Duke, Charlton Heston and Loretta Young.

At Universal Studios Amphitheater, he addressed 6,000 young Catholics and an equal number linked by satellite from St. Louis, Denver and Portland, Ore.

The pontiff, who appeared more relaxed than at any earlier time on the tour, urged young people to lead a responsible moral life even if it means going against majority opinion.

For an armless young man who accompanied his song by playing a guitar with his toes, the pope had a kiss and praise: "You are giving hope for us," he told Tony Melendez, 25, who was a Thalidomide baby.

John Paul touched on his life in Poland in World War II and mentioned the Holocaust in reference to a question from 23-year-old Andrew Hill of Los Angeles, about his personal fears as a Christian.

"You know at least the word like Holocaust, Holocaust of the Jewish people. But there were different kinds of persecution of other nations, especially the nations like my nation."

"I should say that Providence guided me during the war, so could after the war continue."

In addition to the bishops' meeting on the seventh day of his nine-city tour, the pope was to tour a school with first lady Nancy Reagan, and meet with Hindu, Buddhist, Moslem and Jewish representatives. A Mass at Dodger Stadium was the big public event.

There are 2.6 million Catholics in Los Angeles — 5 percent of the nation's Catholics, and more than the combined Catholic populations of all the dioceses John Paul II has visited thus far — in Miami, Columbia, S.C., New Orleans, San Antonio, Texas, and Phoenix, Ariz.

The speech to the bishops was expected to give a clue to how the pope will direct the U.S. hierarchy in dealing with dissent among his flock.

Numerous surveys show that many American Catholics disagree with church teaching on such issues as birth control, divorce and abortion. A majority of American priests surveyed in a recent poll believe they should have the right to marry.

Optimism shines through rain for priest's part in papal visit

By Nancy Pappas Herald Reporter

The Rev. John Gwozdz says that he's an optimist, and not one to let anyone rain on his parade.

So he's trying to remain positive about his trip to Miami last Friday, when Gwozdz was to be in Miami to celebrate with Pope John Paul II who was cut short because of a heavy thunderstorm.

"Fortunately, I had kept my expectations minimal," said Gwozdz, who is a pastor at St. James Church. "This was an unusual event, and you never know what to expect. I guess I should have expected heavy rains, considering that's the same thing that happened when I went to see the pope before."

Gwozdz was referring to a time in 1979 when, as a lay person, he went to Boston to see the pope. "We were soaked, just soaked to the skin," said Gwozdz. "I felt like that all over again on Friday."

Gwozdz and other newly ordained priests across the nation were invited to travel at their own expense to Miami, Fla., to participate in a mass with John Paul II. Gwozdz was one of the 57 others from Hartford joined by others from other regions who accepted the invitation.

They flew to Florida Thursday, but were not officially involved with the papal visit until Friday. "We got up at 4 a.m., and had to board a bus by 5:30," Gwozdz said. "I went down there without any real feeling of thrill, but as I went among the people, I could pick up on their excitement that Gwozdz and other priests, seated fairly close, could not hear his words."

The service was beautiful, said Gwozdz, and the readings were proclaimed in Creole, English and Spanish. "You always got the feeling that they were addressing the diversity of Miami. The Cuban presence was very strong, and the Haitian feeling, too."

Through the service, the rain was heavy. People were warned to stay away from the sound towers, for fear they would be struck by lightning. By the time the pope was ready to deliver his homily, the rain was so heavy that Gwozdz and other priests, seated fairly close, could not hear his words.

The lightning was what made it necessary to cut things short, said Gwozdz. "I felt relieved to know I was going to get in out of the rain. But I felt bad for the people. We heard shouts of 'no' from the crowd. People did not want to go."

It was only later that his relief was replaced by a feeling of disappointment, he said.

Schroeder stacks the women's congress

The theme speaks of "room at the top" for women in politics, but U.S. Rep. Pat Schroeder got the word that it isn't an excuse to plug her budding candidacy for the White House when she gives the keynote address to a women's forum in West Hartford this weekend.

The timing is great for this Democrat from Colorado to make a few points here. The sixth Connecticut Women's Congress comes almost on the eve of Schroeder's declaration that she wants her party's nomination for president next year.

But Democratic organizers of the congress, aware that Republicans among them were nervous about partisan exploiting of a program that is supposed to stick to women's issues, thought it best to suggest that Schroeder resist the temptation even though they didn't really believe she would try to showboat or pass out campaign buttons.

"It was important that it be said," noted Senate Deputy Majority Leader Amelia Mastone of Meriden, co-chairwoman of the congress. The "concern" that politicking might rear its head and detract from the focus on women "had come up," said state Rep. Terry Bertinussen of East Windsor, an assistant House majority leader and the other co-chairwoman of the congress.

Republican legislators, outnumbered 21 to 8 on the advisory panel, were already calling it a "Democratic rally" when a likely candidate for however, came from a woman who turned down an invitation to play a role — former state Rep. Julie Belaga of Westport, last year's GOP nominee for governor. stacked." Sen. Adela Eads of Kent, a deputy minority leader in her chamber, said she was uncomfortable with the strong Democratic control over the planning. But she said Republicans could do little about it. A walkout, she said, would serve no purpose.

State Rep. Elinor Wilber of Fairfield, a GOP member of the committee, said she had stayed away from its meetings. She said she wanted to hear Schroeder, however, despite feelings that the program should have been balanced politically.

State Rep. Jo Fuchs of Westport was another GOP member of the advisory committee who regretted partisanship coloring the congress.

The strongest blast from the Republican side, however, came from a woman who turned down an invitation to play a role — former state Rep. Julie Belaga of Westport, last year's GOP nominee for governor. She would not have objected to booking Schroeder, either, as long as the congress were balanced by having a prominent Republican in its spotlight, too.

Lacking that balance, said Belaga, this year's congress shaped up as a "blatant Democratic trick." Would she participate? Thanks, but no thanks, she said.

Pat Schroeder has represented a Denver district in the U.S. House since 1971. In her last trip to the polls, she was re-elected with 68 percent of the vote. She has a national reputation as an activist for women's rights and opportunities. And, what may have bugged Republicans who knew about it, Schroeder is credited with coining the term "Teflon president" to describe Ronald Reagan.

The convenor of this year's congress is House Speaker Irving Stoller of New Haven — back this week from Bulgaria. Just in time to do the honors for the daylong sessions at the American School for the Deaf in West Hartford.

Political notes

- When Elizabeth Dole met with Republicans in Windsor Locks last week to boost husband Bob's candidacy for president, one state senator seemed to be trying to look inconspicuous at the rear of the room. He was Tom Scott of Milford, a leader in U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp's campaign for the same GOP nomination. Scott explained later he was there in his capacity as ranking GOP member of the U.S. Transportation Committee. Mrs. Dole was U.S. transportation secretary. "I'm not wavering," Scott said, as a Kemp man.
- Quote of the week: By U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennedy of Hartford — "John Bailey would not have lost the Fourth District," referring to the Democratic defeat in a special election there Aug. 18. Bailey, her father, was the legendary Democratic state chairman for 28 years. "It was the best opportunity we'll have in years to pick up that seat," she added.

Constitution party begins

At 4 p.m., the exact hour the delegates signed the document, former U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger, head of the Federal Commission on the Bicentennial, will ring a replica of the long-silent Liberty Bell and set off an international pealing of bells for 200 seconds.

In the evening, a black-tie gala will be held, with the finale a $150,000, 30-minute burst of fireworks above the Delaware River.

All the hoopla surrounds the 4,458-word document that is the morning's centerpiece. The United States together through 200 years of strife and success.

The colonies had declared themselves free from England 11 years before the Constitution was written. The freedom was earned in a war for independence, but the union was sailing under the 4-year-old Articles of Confederation.

Faced with a $42 million war debt and no way to collect taxes, the nation's leaders gathered in Philadelphia. Of the 55 delegates, eight had signed the Declaration of Independence, 41 served in Congress and 29 attended full-time.

Twelve of the 13 states sent delegates. Rhode Island boycotted the debate, earning the derisive nickname "Rogue Island." It was the last of the states to join the union, signing in May 20, 1790.

After it was signed, the Constitution cleared the Congress on Sept. 28 and Delaware ratified it in December. New Hampshire was the next to ratify it on June 21, 1788, becoming the ninth and deciding state for ratification. It made the Constitution the law of the land.

Cop assault leads to charges

A Manchester couple was arrested late Saturday night after the husband assaulted a police officer who had answered a complaint at a neighbor's house, police said.

Calvin Yost, 34, of 27 Chalmers St. was charged with disorderly conduct, assault on a police officer, interfering with a police officer, and two counts of risk of injury to a minor.

According to a police report, the officer responded to a complaint of a neighbor, who saw someone walking around her house with a flashlight. The officer checked with the Yosts, who live across the street from the neighbor, and they said they were looking for a set of keys at the neighbor's house.

The report said that Calvin Yost then began yelling and threatening the officer and slammed the door of the house, knocking his wife toward the officer. When the officer informed him he was under arrest, Yost tried to strike him, and then ran into the kitchen and fell on a rug, according to the report.

The report said that while the officer tried to handcuff Yost, Yost hit the officer in the cheek and eye and knocked the officer into a lamp.

As two other officers who arrived tried to assist, Kathi Yost continuously tried to help free her husband, according to the report.

Kathi Yost was released on $1,500 non-surety bond and is to appear in Manchester Superior Court Wednesday. Calvin Yost was released on a $7,500 cash bond. He is to appear in court today.

The officer was hospitalized at Manchester Memorial Hospital for a concussion and multiple contusions to his face, neck and back.

Bork hearings raise issues of Watergate

acted legally in carrying out the dismissal order.

Metzenbaum challenged Bork about his role in advising Nixon on the legal ramifications of refusing to turn over information to the special prosecutors who were investigating Watergate. But Bork said, "I never advised the White House how to deal with" the special prosecutors' requests for materials.

Bork said that after firing Cox, he came to no immediate decision about whether the Watergate investigation should be continued by Cox's assistants or a new special prosecutor.

Metzenbaum suggested that Bork appeared at the time to be dragging his feet.

But Bork said he never wavered in his belief that the probe should continue.

"My moral and professional lives were on the line if something happened to those investigations," he said.

"For a few moments, the hearings seemed to be in a time warp as Bork and Metzenbaum clashed over events of 13 summers ago. Ironically, the question and answer session took place in the same Senate Caucus Room where the Watergate hearings were held in 1974.

Bork defended his role in the Watergate events as two committee members who remain undecided on how to vote on the nomination said they still harbor questions about his qualifications.

"We've just begun to scratch the surface," Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said in assessing Bork's first day of testimony Tuesday. "Judge Bork came across as a strong intellect, very intelligent, with experience. But the real issue, as he said, is judicial philosophy."

Specter said Bork's writings have been at "an extraordinary variance" with tradition of the court, and the committee must determine whether those writings are just professional theorizing, hyperbole, or whether, if confirmed, he would really turn the court in a very sharply different direction.

It was the fourth Canada Cup tournament, and Canada has won three of them. But it was not easy.

Trailing 3-0 after eight minutes, Team Canada fought back with a determination that put the finishing touches to a three-week stint that will rate this tournament on a level close to the drama of the 1972 Summit Series, won by Canada on Paul Henderson's late-goal heroics in Moscow.

Henderson was on hand to congratulate Canada's newest heroes, who included the ubiquitous Lemieux and Gretzky. As they had been doing all tournament, they teamed up to score the Canadians' winning goal.

"It was a great victory for the country," defenseman Larry Murphy said. "There was a lot of pressure on us because a lot of people were counting on us to win."

Lemieux's tournament-high 11th goal nestled under the cross bar behind goaltender Sergei Mylnikov and the capacity crowd of 17,037 at Copps Arena went wild. Only 1:26 remained in the game.

"I had a couple of seconds to look (before shooting)," Lemieux said. "I was going top shelf all the way. Gretzky made a great play."

The assist was the 18th of the tournament for Gretzky, who also had three goals for a tourney-high 21 points.

Sergei Makarov, Alexei Gusarov and Viacheslav Fetisov led the Soviets ahead 3-0 before Rick Tocchet, playing despite an injured knee, scored for Canada at 8:50 of the first period. Brian Propp made it 3-2 but the Soviets regained a two-goal lead on a goal by Andrei Khomutov with 28 seconds left in the period.

"We knew we had a hill to climb, but we'd climbed that hill before and we knew we could do it again," Coach Mike Keenan said. "We had to go off the fitness game a bit and go the bump and grind."

Canada, bumping and grinding, took control in the second period, scoring three straight goals and grabbing a 5-4 lead. Murphy, Brent Sutter and Haverchuk did the damage, after defenseman Craig Hartsburg pummeled Vasily Perukhin with a hard check that seemed to stir up Team Canada.

The comeback goals came from the grinders and muckers." Keenan said. "The guys in the trenches really came through."

Aleksander Semak tied the game 5-5 at 12:21 of the third period. As the time slipped past it appeared as if the teams were going to go to overtime for a third straight game.

But then the Wayne and Mario Show turned the lights out on the Soviets in a game that saw the Canadians outshoot their opponents 46-23.

Keenan divulged afterward that goalie Grant Fuhr had played hurt. "Fuhr played the last three games with a hand injury and he didn't tell anyone," Keenan said. "Fuhr: 'It was a lot of fun. You gotta like doing this. These were two great hockey teams. You don't get it a lot closer.'"

The Soviet Union won the opener 6-5 in overtime last Friday night before the Canadians came back to win by the same score in the second overtime on Sunday night.

The next Canada Cup will not be until 1992, but this one will be remembered.

"It's the greatest feeling in the world," Hartsburg said. "I've never felt this way before. I just feel unbelievable. I was standing on the bench (when Lemieux got the puck) and I knew it was going in as soon as he got it. When that guy's got the puck around the net, it's in."

Canadian magic act thwarts Soviets

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP) — After the "muckers and grinders" set the stage, Wayne Gretzky and Mario Lemieux worked their magic one last time in the Canada Cup hockey tournament.

The champagne corks soon were ricocheting off the dressing room ceiling, the juke box screaming rock 'n' roll and Canada once again was claiming universal hockey superiority following its 6-5 victory Tuesday night over the Soviet Union in the decisive game of the championship series.

"It's a great victory for the country," defenseman Larry Murphy said. "There was a lot of pressure on us because a lot of people were counting on us to win."

Mets' Johnson incensed despite one-sided victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Davey Johnson couldn't contain himself. He was going to have a game by eight runs, but he was incensed.

"I can't stand another team dictating how we play the game," Johnson said.

The New York Mets manager said, "We're here, we're up, by a few runs midway through, and we stop running the bases. They have Andre Dawson in the dugout and we stop playing aggressively."

Johnson's second-place Mets played within 14 games of the division-leading St. Louis Cardinals in the National League East, pounding the Chicago Cubs for 16 hits and an 12-4 victory Tuesday night. Keith Hernandez led the attack with three hits, including the 2,000th of his career, and starter Sid Fernandez, 11-8, allowed two hits in five innings to notch his first win since July 24.

Rafael Santana broke a 1-1 fourth-inning tie with a run-scoring single, and the Mets scored five runs, including the sixth and eighth.

But Johnson wanted more. "When you were up 6-0-1 did we have any guarantee that they wouldn't come back?" Johnson asked. "Were we promised that they'd score only a run in the rest of the way? Like that we acted out there. Yet we had it sewn up. I never want my players changing their gameplan. No matter what, I don't care what the other club is doing."

After taking a 1-0 lead in the first, the Cubs didn't score again until the ninth, when Roger McDowell gave up three runs on a bases-loaded walk to Leon Durham and a two-run single to Ryan Sandberg.

The Mets broke the game open off starter Greg Maddux, 6-12, on what Hernandez called a "hustling inning" in the sixth. During the uprising, Howard Johnson, with one out, got a good jump off first base to prevent a doubleplay; rookie Keith Miller, inserted as a pinch runner, stole second and pinch runner, stole second and scored from there on an infield single, and Len Dykstra beat out a grounder to second.

When it was over, the Mets had 11 runs they need to sweep the Cubs in the two-game series. "It was a big night for the Mets," Cubs Manager Frank Lucchesi said. "It looks like they're going to be nip-and-tuck with the Cardinals right down to the wire."

Roughing up three of the five Chicago pitchers — Maddux, Drew Hall, and Jay Baller — for all their hits, the Mets received two-hit contributions from Dykstra, Darryl Strawberry, Gary Carter, Wally Backman while late-inning replacement, catcher Barry Lyons, hit the only homer of the game, a three-run shot in the eighth.

Fernandez, who hadn't won since being disabled with tendinitis of the left shoulder, allowed only Manny Trillo's single in the first and Bob Denyer's double in the fifth while walking and striking three.

Both Hernandez and Backman were forced to leave the game with injuries. Hernandez jammed his right ankle while rounding third in the eighth, but he later classified the injury as a "minor" and said he does not expect to miss tonight's game against the Montreal Expos. Backman sprained ligaments in his right wrist while sliding into second base on his double in the sixth. His status is day-to-day.

DETROIT (AP) — It's probably fitting that Detroit is playing Boston right now because the Tigers are winning this year the way Red Sox did in 1986.

That is, they're doing whatever it takes.

Monday night, for example, Detroit got shutout pitching when the bats could produce only seven hits. Tuesday night, the bats came alive, overcoming a 5-0 Boston lead for a 2-1 Tiger victory.

"The Tigers seem to be doing what they have to do," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "They're getting what they need when the need it."

Indeed, Tuesday night, after starter Frank Tanana failed to survive the first inning, the Tigers got a 2-3 inning of two-hit relief pitching from Dan Petry, 9-6, and a strong close by rookie Mike Henneman, who earned his sixth save.

They also got a three-run homer from Darrell Evans, his 29th, and two-run shot from Kirk Gibson, his 21st.

"They don't care," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said of his players. "Right now, we've got to play 18 more games. What difference does it make how we win or what it takes?"

Who's going to take it? The sentimental choice here, of course, is the Mets. But the way things have gone, it's too crazy to predict.

The AL East race is shaping up between the Tigers and Blue Jays, and if you're a betting man, lay your money on the Blue Jays. They have a deeper team than the Tigers and were in a pennant race not too many years before.

The AL West? Who cares? The "winner" won't survive the American League Championship Series. The NL West winner, which is shaping up to be San Francisco, will give either the Mets, Cards or Expos a fight in the NLCS. The Giants, with General Manager Al Rosen doing some wheeling and dealing, have assembled a pitching staff that is deep and talented. And Giant youngsters, and pickups like Kevin Mitchell, have been coming through in '87.

Witt's homer binge big plus for Jays

By Bob Greene
The Associated Press

Ernie Witt lost his home run swing in the seventh inning. "A lousy double," the Toronto catcher joked after his two-base hit Tuesday night in the Blue Jays' 6-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

In the fifth inning, Witt hit a solo homer — his 18th of the season — to extend a remarkable streak. Until his double, his previous six hits had all been home runs.

Witt also made all the pitching decisions as Mike Flanagan, 5-6, threw a five-hitter to keep the Blue Jays tied with Detroit for the American League East lead.

"It was a strange night and I tried not to dwell on it too much and be so professional as I could," said Flanagan, who was traded from Baltimore to the Blue Jays last month. "They (Orioles) have a great offensive club."

"I told Ernie before the game I've seen them do some fantastic things with you. I don't think I shoot him off more than twice."

Over 21 innings in three starts for Toronto, the veteran left-hander has allowed two runs and picked up two victories and a no-decision. He also has struck out 17 batters against five walks.

"To me the biggest thing about him since he came over here is the velocity of his fastball. It's hard. He's throwing it extremely hard. It had good movement and good location."

In other games, it was Detroit 9, Boston 8; New York 4, Milwaukee 3; Toronto 6, Baltimore 2; Chicago 6, Minnesota 2; California 7, Kansas City 1; Oakland 6, Texas 5; and Cleveland 4, Seattle 2.

Flanagan, 5-6, threw a five-hitter and struck out five to shut out the Orioles over eight innings. Lloyd Moseby drove in four runs with fourth hits, including a three-run homer. Baltimore scored both its runs in the ninth off reliever Duane Ward.

NFL is edging closer and closer to strike

By David Ginsburg The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The chief negotiator for the NFL Management Council left the bargaining table and returned to New York after reading the union's counterproposal to contract the owners submitted a week earlier.

The NFL Players Association on Tuesday presented the owners its counterproposal, exactly a week before its Sept. 22 strike deadline. The union softened its demand for unrestricted free agency, but still called for guarantees for player representatives and second-year players.

Jack Donlan, executive director of the Management Council, was scheduled to hold a news conference today to announce the owners' view of the counterproposal.

"We feel this counterproposal shows significant movement and is a great step forward in the areas that we feel can bring a clear and fast conclusion to this collective bargaining process," Donlan said.

In its proposal, the union withdrew its demand for unlimited free agency for those players in their initial four years in the league. Instead, the NFLPA suggested that a veteran free agent who has not completed his fourth year shall be paid to first refusal rights of his old club.

"We feel this is a big, big move," said Uplaw, adding that nearly 50 percent of the players in the league would be affected by the clause.

However, there would be no compensation to the club if any player jumps to another team. After his fourth year, a veteran not under contract would be free to go to another team and that team would provide, at its option, the player's old club any form of compensation.

Uplaw said he expected the union's new stand would help open up the negotiations.

"All we've heard is that if players move off their demand for unlimited free agency, we can be more progressive," he said. "Now we'll find out if that's true."

In its proposal, the union also asked that player representatives who have been released or assigned (picked up on waivers by another club, for example) since Jan. 1, 1987 be retroactively guaranteed their salaries for the seasons remaining in their contracts.

Further, the union proposed that player reps cannot be traded or assigned in the future without the consent and if they are cut, the team would be fined an average salary ($250,000) which would be paid to the player.

The union, which previously had demanded across-the-board guaranteed contracts, asked that owners guarantee to go into effect once a player has made the active list in his second NFL season.

Other issues in the counterproposal include:

- a drug program similar to the one currently used by the National Basketball Association, in which players are disciplined progressively for each violation;
- a limit of 80 players at training camp;
- a regular-season roster of 52 players;
- the inclusion of pre-1989

players in the pension plan and increased benefits for players from 1980 to present.

— the removal of artificial turf from outdoor stadiums by the 1989 season.

"We feel that we are willing to make steps toward management, but we expect management to make the same amount of steps in our direction," Uplaw said.

Uplaw had said management's proposal amounted to a "$90 million take-back." He said the union's counterproposal would cost the owners 60 percent of the league's gross revenue.

That would represent a slight increase over the percentage that owners paid according to the old collective bargaining agreement, which expired Aug. 31.

"We predict that over the next couple of days (management) will put together the real bribe, the bribe that they will put on the table in order to try to keep the players from striking," Uplaw said. "They will put something out loaded with land mines, exactly like their last proposal.... They give you something in dollars and take it away in language."

Uplaw, asked to assess the odds of a strike, said, "The odds are getting increasingly higher. There's no doubt about that."

And that was before he found out that Donlan had returned home a little earlier than expected.

Meanwhile, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported in its Wednesday edition that the owners would postpone play for a week if a strike is called Sept. 22, resuming on Oct. 4 with free-agents and non-striking players filling out rosters.

The owners had earlier announced their intention to continue play in the event of a strike. In 1981, players went on strike for 57 days, cutting seven weeks from the regular season.

Some NFL teams have paid some released players $1,000 apiece to return if a strike is called next week by the NFLPA.

Army and Navy Club gets Friend of Sport Award

By Earl Yost
Sports Editor Emeritus

Without question the busiest club in Manchester is the Army and Navy Club. Its full support of athletic and recreation programs is the Army and Navy Club.

The popular Main Street organization, which was founded 68 years ago in 1919, has been named to receive the fourth Friend of Sport Award from the Manchester Sport Hall of Fame Committee at the eighth annual dinner Friday night.

Just as at the seven previous induction dinners, the Army and Navy Club will play host and club members will prepare and serve a roast beef dinner.

UConn's Jeff Gallaher (1) is in the clear as he heads for a touchdown in last Saturday's game against Southern Connecticut at Memorial Stadium in Storrs. The Huskies host Northeastern Saturday at 1 p.m.

UConn, Northeastern expecting tough struggle

By Len Auster Sports Editor
STORRS — There are two items which UConn's Tom Jackson and Northeastern's Paul Pawlak have in common. Each is head coach of a football team nicknamed the Huskies. And each can fling compliments with the best of them. "I think this is Paul's best team. They have tournament potential. We'll certainly have a real challenge on our hands," Jackson said of Northeastern, which invades UConn's Memorial Stadium on Parent's Day Saturday at 1 p.m. "UConn to me, and that's as I look at it from the standpoint of playing them six years, going on seven. It looks to me as the best UConn team we will have seen up to this point. In fact, Pawlak said in an amplified hookup from Boston in the weekly Tuesday pregame luncheon. UConn, I, opened its season last weekend with a 38-21 win over Southern Connecticut. Sophomore redshirt quarterback Keith DeGennaro in his collegiate debut was 17-for-28 for 211 yards and two TDs.

Vets dot Bolton lineup

By Len Auster Sports Editor
BOLTON — There will be a sprinkling of veterans in the lineup when the Bolton High girls' soccer team kicks off its 1987 season Thursday against Hale-Ray in Moodus. The Bulldogs, under second-year Coach Mike Landolph, have nine returnees out of its roster of 22 who saw varsity experience a year ago. Either freshman Danielle Curlyo or senior Kerri Jedziewski will open in goal for Bolton. The backfield should include senior Ann Lewis in the middle with freshman Lisa Williams and sophomore Annie Cassella on either side. Junior Sara Lewis opens in the middle in the midfield with juniors Lara Clark and Robin Mitchell joining her. The front line has juniors Jennifer Maneggio and Leah Dinocena in the middle with juniors Amber Allemen and Meg Matyia and senior Justine Kolekso battling for the two wing positions. One big absentee from a year ago is Denise Welch, who had 19 of Bolton's 23 goals in a 2-12 season. "I expect them (Dinocena and Maneggio) to pick of the slack from Welch," Landolph said. "I think we'll start off slow until we familiarize ourselves and work together as a team. (But) I do feel we'll do much better than last year," he added. Schedule: Sept. 17 Hale-Ray, 22 Parish Hill, 24 Cromwell, 28 Bacon Academy H. # Inexperience is the word with Cheney Tech soccer

By Jim Tierney Herald Sports Writer
Inexperience is the unfortunate word which encompasses the 1987 Cheney Tech boys' soccer team. With only four returning lettermen from last year's 5-7-3 squad, uphill struggle all season. Seventh-year Cheney Coach Paul Soucy is faced with the dilemma of utilizing players on both the junior varsity and varsity level. "We're very inexperienced," Soucy said. "Hopefully, we can minimize our mistakes. A lot of players will be playing JV and varsity." The leading goal scorer from last year, senior midfielder Ba Pho tops the list of Cheney returnees. Senior Jim Krone will be at sweepback while junior Steven Infante will patrol the center midfield position. Junior Scott House will be relied upon for much of the Beaver scoring from his forward slot. "We need scoring from Pho and from House," Soucy said. Goaltending duties are still questionable with 6-foot-6 inch junior Terry Phillip and senior Norman Croteau being the prime candidates. Phillip is the center on the basketball team. Croteau will also see plenty of action at one of the forward slots. Along with Krone in the backfield will be sophomore Shannon Mallett, junior Tommy Mancano, and senior Alan Arel. Aiding Infante and Pho at midfield will be either sophomore Nick Werfel or senior Steve Loto. Others who will see their share of playing time are junior Rafael Meneses, sophomore Larry Oliver, freshman Andy Lagunabal and junior Roger Krauski. "They're a good group of kids," Soucy said. "They're hard to coach, but there are still a lot of question marks." Soucy sees the Charter Oak Conference East Division as a tossup between RHAM and Coventry. "The division we're in in the CCC seems to be pretty strong," he said. "RHAM and Coventry are the favorites." Schedule: Sept. 19 Cromwell H (10:30 a.m.), 21 Prince Tech A, 25 Coventry A, 29 Bolton A. Oct. 2 Portland H, 6 Bacon Academy H, 9 RHAM H, 13 Cromwell A, 16 Vinal Tech H, 20 East Hampton, 23 Bolton H, 27 RHAM A, 30 Rocky Hill H. Nov. 3 Bacon Academy A, 5 Coventry H. Games not noted begin at 3:30 p.m.

Ba Pho is one of the few returning players on the Cheney Tech soccer team in '87. He had six goals last year.

STORRS — Despite two losses on the West Coast last weekend, the University of Connecticut men's soccer team moved up in the weekly ISAA National College Soccer Top 20 poll Tuesday. The Huskies, who were in the also received votes category, moved into a tie for the No. 18 slot with Duke, each with 8 points. UConn lost to Fresno State, 2-1, and San Francisco, 1-0, last weekend. The Huskies are back in action tonight at Boston University.

Two Chargers up on drug charges
SAN DIEGO — Despite the arrest of two San Diego Chargers on drug charges, owner Alex Spanos maintains that his team is "as clean as any in the country." Defensive back Danny Walters, who was arrested Monday on a drunken driving charge, passed a drug test late Tuesday and remained on the San Diego Chargers' roster, team officials said. Defensive lineman Earl Wilson, who was cut by the Chargers early Tuesday, was arrested hours later as part of a police drug investigation. Team officials said Wilson's release was based on his performance. Team officials learned late Tuesday that Walters, 26, a fourth-year cornerback who underwent drug rehabilitation during the 1984 season, had been arrested early Monday after a traffic stop by police.

Giants waive CB Patterson

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Already hurting in the defensive secondary, the New York Giants nevertheless made a surprise move late Tuesday by placing starting cornerback Elvis Patterson on waivers. A day after a 34-19 loss to the Chicago Bears in their season opener, the defending Super Bowl champions discarded Patterson and signed free agent cornerback Harvey Clayton, cut last week by the Detroit Lions. The Giants offered no explanation for Patterson being placed on waivers. He had been beaten on a 56-yard touchdown pass by Bears wide receiver Willie Gault, but the Giants defense as a whole was mangled by the Bears. Signed as a free agent at a starter at left cornerback in 1985, but lost his job in training camp this year to Mark Collins. Right cornerback Perry Williams then was placed on injured reserve with a pinched nerve, opening the way for Patterson to regain a starting job at the right corner. Patterson had six interceptions in 1985 and two last season, plus another in the playoffs. Clayton spent four years with the Pittsburgh Steelers as a reserve, but was traded to the Lions at the beginning of training camp.

Tight-knit East girl runners could be among state's best

By Jim Tierney Herald Sports Writer
Since it began in 1979, the East Catholic High School girls' cross country program has always achieved a high degree of success. The Eagles have never had a losing dual meet season and won six consecutive state class titles until that string was broken last year by Darien High School. The brightest newcomer to the Eagle squad is freshman Nancy Byrne. Kirtredge indicated that Byrne has impressed in preseason workouts and should be one of her top three runners. "It's not often that a freshman (Byrne) comes close to running varsity," Kirtredge said of the promising youngster. "Other key personnel for East will be junior Lesley Perlmann and freshman Jen DeMarco. Kirtredge believes that her team may be overlooked by some, but will contend for state honors. "I'm really optimistic," she said. "All the girls look good and everyone is healthy. Everyone's starting to get in shape." Kirtredge sees her main competition in the MM division and in the Open as Bethel, Darien, and St. Bernard's. The Eagles' first dual meet of the season is Tuesday against St. Bernard's. "The other teams always had someone up front," Kirtredge said. "We're pushing each other. We're shooting for the top three in MM, the top three in the Open, and to be the top five in New England." # Martina critical of Open scheduling

By Barry Wilner The Associated Press
NEW YORK — Martina Navratilova has taken more than one million dollars from the U.S. Open vault. This year, she took an imposing three championships as well. Yet Navratilova does not carry totally happy thoughts about the 1987 tournament. Navratilova, who won the women's singles against top-seeded Steffi Graf on Saturday, teamed with Pam Shriver for the women's doubles crown and Emilio Sanchez for the mixed doubles title Monday. Her $806,413 earnings for two weeks of work added her total in 15 Open appearances to $1.135 million. She has won four singles titles, seven women's doubles crowns and two mixed doubles championships. "It's nice to hear that," Navratilova said when informed of her exclusive millionaire status at the American championships. The 30-year-old left-hander won $250,000 for her 1987 singles title to a $43,233 for teaming with Shriver for their 18th Grand Slam doubles title, and $15,000 with Sanchez. "Those girls are close together," third-year Coach Kathy Kirtredge said. "We have a tighter pack than last year. Any one of my top five could be my No. 1 runner." Kirtredge commented that only a 45-second gap exists among the top five stadium after the men's singles," she said. "But they never even give you that option. They do not have enough foresight to plan ahead. They're just reacting to the men's men's singles. Everyone plays second fiddle to the men's singles. The attention we get is nonexistent. CBS never even mentioned our doubles." Navratilova felt television was to blame for most of the scheduling woes. Open officials blamed the weather — the men's semifinal between Mats Wilander and Stefan Edberg began at 10 a.m. EDT Saturday morning because rain was forecast later in the day. "The women's final was played at 10 a.m. EDT. The men's semifinals rather than between them, as is customary. "That's ridiculous. Everything on TV," she said of Saturday's schedule. "I wish they would change it and play the women's semifinals on Thursday. The men's Friday, the women's final Saturday and the men on Sunday. "I don't know where the hangup is. Everyone passes the buck, it would be a better event all-around ... I'd rather be off television on Thursday for the semis and have a better schedule." Navratilova, a former president of the Women's International Tennis Association, said she would try to do something about it. "I intend to write a letter to the USTA and spell it all out," she said. "It's not complaining; it's constructive criticism to get a better deal for the players. "But it's been done before and nothing has happened." On the court, Navratilova made everything she hoped for happen at the Open.

FOCUS/Food

Easy Entertaining With Style

Why wait for an excuse to throw a party? Some of the very best party menus require little advance preparation. What makes them so memorable outside of the sheer spontaneity of it all is their reliance on simple foods, with lots of flavor, beautifully presented. Whether you're in the mood for a barbecue or sit-down dinner under the stars, a well-stocked pantry and freezer supplemented by a quick stop at the supermarket make it possible to put together menus for both in under an hour. Veal rib chops stuffed with a robust trio of Gorgonzola cheese, toasted walnuts and fresh chives make an impressive yet nearly effortless entree for a sophisticated barbecue. Purchase chops that are 1-inch thick, then use a sharp, thin-bladed knife to form the pockets. Veal is naturally lean, so grill or broil the chops to medium for best results. While the coals heat, start the pasta for the salad and assemble the eye-catching first course. A purchased dressing streamlines the preparation of colorful marinated mushrooms and Peppers Dijon, while crispy, crunchy California Iceberg Lettuce cut into rafts makes for a spectacular presentation. When selecting Iceberg Lettuce, look for a "springy-firm" head that gives slightly to gentle pressure. Pronto Pasta 'n Olive Salad goes together as fast as its name suggests. Quickly cool the pasta under cold running water, drain well and toss with a medley of fresh-from-the-garden vegetables. California ripe olives and an easy herb vinaigrette. Ripe olives add a rich color and subtle flavor to all kinds of salads, main dishes and snacks. And large pitted ripe olives have just six calories apiece, making them perfect for guilt-free, pre-dinner nibbling. For the after-five cook who has the luxury of a day's advance notice, the Summer Vegetable Veal Ragout featured in the second menu will be remembered long after the last glorious bite. Like most stews, a ragout actually benefits from being cooked ahead and reheated. Veal cubes can be cut from the shoulder, shank or round. Their delicate flavor is the perfect match for seasonal vegetables, and a gentle hand with the seasonings and flour produces a light, richly flavored sauce. Serve Pesto-Olive Pita Pizzas at the table or out on the deck while the ragout reheats. Packaged pita bread is topped with prepared pesto sauce, sun-dried tomatoes, California ripe olives and freshly grated Parmesan cheese, then baked just long enough to crisp the crust. Complementing the ragout is a melange of summer-fresh fruits tossed with bite-sized chunks of crisp California Iceberg Lettuce. Use the large outer leaves to shape the edible bowl. For a sweet, stylish finale that works with both menus, scoop several flavors of sorbet into stemmed glasses and garnish with fresh mint.

MUSHROOMS AND PEPPERS DIJON ON ICEBERG LETTUCE RAFTS

2 cups sliced mushrooms
3/4 cup each: red, green and yellow bell pepper strips
1/3 cup dijon-style vinaigrette dressing*
1 head California Iceberg Lettuce
1/2 teaspoons minced parsley
Combine mushrooms, peppers and dressing in bowl. Let stand 30 minutes, stirring occasionally, or cover and refrigerate overnight. Just before serving, cut Iceberg Lettuce into 6 slices or "rafts." Arrange on individual platters. Stir parsley into vegetable mixture and divide evenly between lettuce rafts. 6 servings. *Prepared or homemade Italian vinaigrette dressing blended with 1/2 teaspoons dijon-style mustard may be substituted.

VEAL CHOPS STUFFED WITH GORGONZOLA AND WALNUTS

6 veal rib chops (8 ounces each), 1-inch thick
4 ounces Gorgonzola cheese*
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
2 tablespoons chopped toasted walnuts
1 tablespoon snipped chives
Trim excess fat from veal rib chops. Cut 2-1/2-inch horizontal pocket through center of large muscle in each chop. Combine Gorgonzola and butter. Add walnuts and chives; mix well. Divide mixture into six portions, stuffing one portion into each pocket. Close pockets with small skewers or wooden picks. Place chops on grid over medium coals, and grill 12 to 14 minutes, turning once. It's a good idea for partners to clarify the meanings of special bids. Many players use weak jump overcalls (8-11 high-card points) and at least a six-card suit, but does a jump overall have the same meaning when made in the pass-out position? You must answer that for yourself, but I suggest you hold something like today's South hand (12-14 points and a six-card suit) with less, simply bid the six-card suit at the one-level. With more, make a takeout double and later bid your suit.

South could do better. After winning the second diamond, he should play to the spade ace and trump a diamond, then come to the spade king and lead a low heart toward dummy's king. When West ducks, declarer wins the king and returns a heart to his queen. Of course, when he returns a heart to his queen, West would now be undplayed, forced either to play away from that elusive heart jack or to play a club into declarer's king.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I made sweet pickles a month or so ago and just opened the first jar. The pickles are quite shriveled. What happened? — JANET

DEAR JANET — This can be a problem with pickles that are done in a strong sugar and vinegar solution, or in a brine that is extremely salty. Plunging the cucumbers into a solution of salt, vinegar or sugar that's too strong will cause shriveled pickles. Many recipes for sweet pickles have you add the sugar gradually over a period of a couple of days before final

NBC's new shows top Nielsen ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Audiences hungry for new TV fare snapped NBC's appetizers last week and put the "Family Ties" season premiere, as well as the movie premiere of "Private Eye," into the top 10 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

With the new season officially beginning next week, NBC was the first to put on any new shows. But even reruns of NBC's "The Cosby Show" continued to dominate the rankings. Back-to-back episodes from last Thursday ranked second and third.

The one-hour season opener "Family Ties" had a rating of 37.9 and a 48 share against reruns on CBS and ABC, and part of the first-run ABC movie, "Bluffing It."

The ratings is a percentage of the nation's estimated 88.6 million households with televisions. A share is a percentage of the audience tuned in during a particular time period.

NBC's Sunday night lineup started late because of a 16-minute overrun by an afternoon NFL football game.

NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartkoff was pleased with the results, even though "Ties" wasn't up against the competition it will face this season.

"While not conclusive, if it had gone the other way, it would've been devastating," he said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

"Private Eye," a new film noir detective series from "Miami Vice" creator Anthony Yerkovich, ranked eighth. The other season opener, "Our House," was 18th, a significant rebound from the bottom of the Nielsen series their reruns had been all summer.

NBC released new "people-meter" numbers for its new shows that showed them doing even better than under the old Nielsen system, which is having its swan song this week.

Nielsen switches next week to the more detailed rating system that erases a new sample of

CBS news loses

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS might have won the week's news ratings instead of finishing third. NBC Rather not walked off the set, causing a six-minute gap at the beginning of the network's early news.

Viewers tuned to NBC and ABC in droves when affiliates were forced to put on game shows or "please stand by" cards because of the gap last Friday.

CBS' network feed to its affiliates went black because Rather had left the set, angry that live tennis coverage was running overtime. CBS Sports quickly wrapped up, and it took time to get him back into his anchor chair.

The gap affected only the 6:30 p.m. EDT news feed, carried by about half the affiliates.

The effect was significant, said CBS analyst David Poltrack, who projected that based on figures for previous weeks, ABC and NBC each gained more than two rating points Friday, while CBS lost about three points.

migraines three days before my period. I do not get them when I'm pregnant. I read of a woman with similar symptoms; she had what secreted hormones into her body, and she has become migraine-free. Is this an experimental procedure?

DEAR READER: Yes, it is. A cheaper and easier way to prevent hormone-related migraine is to use low-dose oral contraceptives. These synthetic substances work by "fooling" the body into thinking it's pregnant. Therefore, in some women on the Pill, migraine headaches are stopped before they begin. The selective use of beta-blocker medicine (drugs to release arterial spasm) may also be appropriate for you. Ask your doctor, which approach might be best for you.

Fur is flying over revamping of 'Tale of Peter Rabbit'

By Debra Croine
The Associated Press
LONDON — Traditionalists are hopping mad over a new edition of "The Tale of Peter Rabbit" that replaces Beatrix Potter's inventive prose with everyday language and her delicate drawings with photographs of portly puppies.

The story has been changed, too. Readers of the new edition will find no mention of the tragic demise of Peter's father, who was baked in a rabbit pie by Mrs. McGregor. It was because of what happened to his father that Peter had been warned not to go into Mr. McGregor's garden.
In both versions, the naughty bunny disobeys his mother and narrowly escapes the clutches of Mr. McGregor, who chases him with a garden rake.

Hardy Alaskan language is in a struggle for survival

Editor's note — This is one of a series of articles resulting from a newsgathering trip through the Arctic by the writer, based at the AP Foreign Desk in New York.

By Charles J. Henley
The Associated Press
IQALUIT, Northwest Territories — The tongue-twisting language that gave the world "Igloo," "kayak" and 50 words for snow is under assault from the ganggangaitauk-tauk, the quarantining and other wonders of the modern age.

Canadian Inuit children are taught in Inuktitut only to Grade 3. The conference also wants to eliminate a linguistic barrier: The Inuit of Alaska and Greenland write their language in a Roman alphabet, as in English and Danish, but the Canadian Inuit use an exotic, specially designed alphabet called Syllabics.
As a result, any writings produced in Greenland, where up to 50 Eskimo-language books are published each year, are largely inaccessible to Canadian Eskimos.
Language protection can arouse nationalist passions in Greenland. Inuit poet-politician Aqaq Luqya said the Danes came "near to cultural genocide" in their dealings with the Inuit before granting self-rule to Greenland in 1979. "But we have changed that," he said. "We have proved we can develop our language as a modern language."
Harper sees another sign of hope for Eskimo: "The technology that threatened the culture before is now helping it."
For one thing, computer-maker Apple has devised a word processor keyboard in the Syllabics alphabet, facilitating publication of the weekly Nunatsiavut News here.
In other words, the qarasaasiing — "little artificial brain" — is becoming friendly.

Moving expenses under new tax law are strictly itemized

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 contains some little-known tax breaks for moving expenses, but also imposes a new crackdown.

Sylvia Porter

While most moving expense rules remain a great tax benefit, there are two areas about which you must be careful, stresses Eli J. Warach, chief consulting editor of Pratiche Hall Information Services.

residence to your new one. However, they are much more comprehensive than just that. They specifically cover the reasonable cost of:

1 - Moving household goods and personal effects from the old to the new home. In addition, the cost of packing, crating and in-transit storage of goods and effects is covered.

Added breaks: The cost of transporting a car to the new home also is deductible. And so is the cost incurred in bringing the family's pet cat or dog.

Both the direct and indirect cost of moving to a new job location are deductible, whether the job is new or is a transfer in an existing job.

DIRECT MOVING EXPENSES cover the cost of moving furniture and similar items from your old residence to your new one. However, they are much more comprehensive than just that. They specifically cover the reasonable cost of:

2 - The cost of getting to the new job site - including meals and lodging en route - for you and members of your family is deductible as well. A person qualifies as a "member of the family" if he or she lives in your home both before and after the move.

Computers do check on refunds, and their ability to spot refund cheats grows better all the time. You may already have been spotted as a problem. My advice to you is to get your act together and do the right thing.

crackdown, where the employer does not reimburse you for moving expenses, you can deduct only 30 percent of the meal expenses. If, however, you are reimbursed, it is tax-free to you - and the employer loses the 30 percent for meals for you and your family.

If you go by car, you can either itemize your actual expenses or deduct a flat 9 cents a mile in addition to your tolls and parking.

INDIRECT MOVING EXPENSES fall into three categories: 1) expenses of house-hunting trips; 2) food and lodging while waiting to move into a new home and 3) certain expenses of selling, buying or leasing a residence.

House-hunting expenses include the cost of transportation, meals and lodging for you and your family paid during the search for a new residence. To qualify for the deduction, you must already have obtained employment at the new job site and must travel from your former residence to the general area of the new employment and return.

Temporary living expenses at the new job location include the cost of meals for you and your family which are incurred within any 30 consecutive days after the new job is obtained.

Expenses of leasing, buying or selling a residence include the costs of settling an unexpired lease, acquiring a new lease, real estate agent's commissions, escrow fees, attorney's fees, appraisal fees, title costs, loan placement charges and the like.

EXCEPT FOR MEALS, your direct moving expenses are completely deductible. (Remember the 80 percent rule for meals.) But there is a $3,000 overall limit on your deduction of indirect moving expenses. What's more, the portion of indirect moving expenses that is for house-hunting and temporary living expenses cannot exceed $1,500.

To qualify for a deduction for moving expenses, you must satisfy two tests:

First, a distance test: Your new job must be at least 35 miles farther from the old home than the old job was from the old home. If there is no former place of work, your new job must be at least 35 miles from the former residence.

Second, the 39-week test: You, an employee, must work full-time in the general vicinity of the new job location for 39 weeks during the 12 months following the move.

Analysts predict bank layoffs

By Dave Skidmore
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The U.S. banking industry is losing money for the first time since the Depression, prompting analysts to predict layoffs and other cost-cutting measures at major banks.

The nation's 15,857 federally insured commercial banks reported a second quarter loss of $1.6 billion, the first red ink for the industry as a whole in more than 50 years, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Tuesday.

"It was clearly the worst quarter in the history of the industry since the FDIC began operating in 1934," FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman said.

The losses came as banks transferred an unprecedented $21.2 billion to reserves for bad loans, particularly those owned by Third World nations such as Brazil, which has stopped paying on its $23.6 billion debt.

Seidman said he believed the reserves were the banks' best estimate of future loss, but some analysts said the reserves were even higher and predicted banks would be forced to follow the cost-cutting lead of Chemical New York Corp., the nation's fifth-largest bank company.

Beet with shaky loans to Latin America registered recently, Chemical Bank announced this week that it is reducing its work force by 10 percent, or by about 2,100 jobs.

For the first time since the Depression, banks have reported a quarterly loss, the FDIC said Tuesday.

QUESTION: In May 1986, having received a lump-sum distribution from a retirement plan, I invested $50,000 in a rollover individual retirement account at a well-known brokerage firm. The money went into a convertible securities management program on which a 3 percent annual fee was charged.

I had no say over which securities were purchased and sold for my account. I clearly understood that. However, the program was presented to me as featuring safety and income. The broker said I could expect a 14 percent annual return.

I closed the account after 12 months, receiving $49,900 net. I was sorely distressed at this deplorable performance and so expressed myself verbally and in writing. What action should I pursue, in view of the brokerage firm's misrepresentation?

ANSWER: I'll try to let you down easy. If it will soothe your distressed feelings as you want to put in the time and effort, you can file complaints with the office manager of that brokerage, the firm's home office, its compliance department, the stock exchanges to which it belongs and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

However, it's more than unlikely you'll get any results. Based on your letter, you did get a "hard sell" - a "hard sell" tactic for people in the brokerage business and many other lines of work. But you're not a "hard sell" target.

You should have realized that there was some risk involved. The market prices of convertible securities - such as bonds, debentures, notes and preferred stocks which can be exchanged for common stock - are up and down pretty much in line with the common stocks into which they are convertible.

In one year's time, you lost $100 on a $50,000 investment. Although stock prices in general moved sharply higher during the same period, not all stocks were winners. Lots of people had bigger losses.

By turning over to the brokerage firm all decisions on your account, you gave "discretionary authority." This column has consistently cautioned against that.

The broker and the firm, no doubt, shared your account's 3 percent annual fee and the commissions on the purchases and sales of securities for the account by granting discretionary authority, you provided an open-ended opportunity to generate commissions.

QUESTION: You wrote that brokerage firms do not accept stock certificates in rollover individual retirement accounts. As a broker-financial consultant with a large firm, I know you are wrong. I have opened many rollover IRAs into which clients deposited stock certificates from retirement programs.

Hadn't you better apologize? ANSWER: Have you had your eyesight and/or reading ability tested lately? The column you mention says, "Many brokerages do not permit clients to put already owned stocks into IRAs." It went on to explain, "A fair number of them accept shares of stocks in rollover IRAs."

William A. Doyle, a syndicated columnist, welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column. Write to Doyle in care of the Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 591, Manchester 06040.

ANSWER: You'll never be able to prove it, but the fault almost certainly rests at Firm No. 2.

QUESTION: The process of transferring my individual retirement account from one brokerage firm to another took five full weeks. Firm No. 2, from which the account was being transferred, said it did not receive the first set of papers I signed appointing Firm No. 1 custodian and authorizing the transfer. Firm No. 1 says it mailed these papers immediately after receiving them from me.

I signed a new set of papers authorizing the transfer. By the time it was completed, the market value of the shares in my account fell $3,500.

Was my problem due to ineptitude, negligence or chicanery on the part of Firm No. 1 or Firm No. 2?

ANSWER: You'll never be able to prove it, but the fault almost certainly rests at Firm No. 2.

Hadn't you better apologize? ANSWER: Have you had your eyesight and/or reading ability tested lately? The column you mention says, "Many brokerages do not permit clients to put already owned stocks into IRAs." It went on to explain, "A fair number of them accept shares of stocks in rollover IRAs."

William A. Doyle, a syndicated columnist, welcomes written questions, but he can provide answers only through the column. Write to Doyle in care of the Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 591, Manchester 06040.

ANSWER: You'll never be able to prove it, but the fault almost certainly rests at Firm No. 2.

QUESTION: The process of transferring my individual retirement account from one brokerage firm to another took five full weeks. Firm No. 2, from which the account was being transferred, said it did not receive the first set of papers I signed appointing Firm No. 1 custodian and authorizing the transfer. Firm No. 1 says it mailed these papers immediately after receiving them from me.

I signed a new set of papers authorizing the transfer. By the time it was completed, the market value of the shares in my account fell $3,500.

Was my problem due to ineptitude, negligence or chicanery on the part of Firm No. 1 or Firm No. 2?

ANSWER: You'll never be able to prove it, but the fault almost certainly rests at Firm No. 2.

QUESTION: I wrote that brokerage firms do not accept stock certificates in rollover individual retirement accounts. As a broker-financial consultant with a large firm, I know you are wrong. I have opened many rollover IRAs into which clients deposited stock certificates from retirement programs.
