Rain widely scattered as temps dip in Plains

By The Associated Press
Rain was widely scattered today in sections of the West, Midwest and East as cold weather hit the Plains. Clear skies and light winds early today pushed temperatures into the 30s from New England to the Carolinas and into the Gulf states.

Today's weather picture was drawn by Kayle LeBlanc, 10, who lives on Fenwick Road and attends Buckley School.

FOCUS

The First Dunce

If you've ever been called a dunce, you should be flattered. The word comes from the name of one of the great academicians of the Middle Ages — John Duns Scotus. Duns Scotus wrote great treatises on logic, metaphysics and theology. In heated political battles between the Church and the state, Duns Scotus supported the pope. Two hundred years later, Reformation leaders ridiculed Duns Scotus' teachings. Any follower of these teachings was labeled "Duns man" or "Dunce."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to be a bit restless today. Try to team up with friends who are equally as energetic. You won't be content being a loner.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Channel your efforts toward a worthwhile objective today. The more ambitious the undertaking, the better. You'll perform well when you push yourself.
Singer out on bail
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Pop singer El DeBarge got out of jail on $1,000 bail two days after being locked up for not fulfilling a community-service sentence he received on his plea of no-contest to creating a disturbance.
The 25-year-old singer had entered the plea last year after a college student accused him of assaulting her when she refused his advances.
On Tuesday, the Grand Rapids native, who now lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., was given a 15-day jail term for contempt. District Judge Carol Irons ruled that he failed to meet deadlines for the community service work.
On Thursday, DeBarge left Kent County Jail pending an appeal.
Irons had ordered him to perform 80 hours of community service, which included the option of giving a benefit concert, and fined him $100.
Young lawyer
MIAMI (AP) — Stephen Bacus, the whiz kid who graduated from law school at 16 but was prohibited from taking the New York bar exam because of his age, has hung out a shingle in Florida.
The 18-year-old opened a firm Oct. 1 with two former University of Miami Law School classmates, with Bacus focusing on computer law.
He said he doesn't worry that clients will steer clear of him because of his age. "People have contacted me even when I was in law school," said Bacus.
His hopes of practicing in New York City were quashed by New York State regulations prohibiting anyone under 21 from taking the bar exam and excluding anyone who started law school before 18.
The Florida Supreme Court admitted him to the bar last year despite its rules requiring that an attorney be at least 18. His challenge to the New York law is pending in federal court.

Back to the stage

LONDON (AP) — Sir John Gielgud, the courtly British actor who has delighted stage and screen audiences for more than six decades, returns to London's West End stage in February after an absence of more than 10 years, his agent says.
The 83-year-old Gielgud will star in Hugh Whitmore's new play, "The Best of Friends," in a limited run. Laurence Evans said Thursday.
Gielgud, who last appeared on the West End stage in 1977, will play the British intellectual Sir Sydney Cockrell, a friend of George Bernard Shaw. Cockrell died in 1962.
In December the actor goes to New York to star in "Arthur: On the Rocks," the sequel to the hit comedy "Arthur," for which he won the 1981 Oscar for best supporting actor.

Chuck Berry's star

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock 'n' roll legend Chuck Berry did his signature "duck walk" to the cheers of hundreds who watched the unveiling of the guitarist's star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.
The ceremony Thursday was held in connection with the release of the Taylor Hackford film about Berry, "Hail, Hail Rock and Roll!" But to many of Berry's fans, the recognition for the 61-year-old rocker was long overdue.
"I've been dancing and listening to his music since I was a teen-ager. I love rock 'n' roll," said Renee Jones, 47, of La Crescenta.

High-rolling song

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr. and Jerry Lewis entertained some 2,000 high-rollers with a song about one of their own at the gala remaining of the Golden Nugget casino to Bally's Grand.
The three sang "Nathan Detroit" from the musical "Guys and Dolls" during the affair Thursday, which included a champagne reception and 10 pianists playing white baby grand pianos on the Boardwalk.
Bally's Manufacturing Corp. acquired the Golden Nugget in March for $440 million.
Wandering through the crowd was Robin Leach, narrator of television's "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."
"Only the rich and famous would ignore the bombing in the Persian Gulf to come here and quaff champagne and scarf caviar," he said.

Off the racetrack

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Actor and auto racing enthusiast Robert Carradine of the movie comedy "Revenge of the Nerds" pleaded innocent to leading a police officer on a 90 mph chase after a day of driving at a racetrack July 9.
Carradine, 33, of Los Angeles, entered the plea Thursday. Trial was set for Jan. 27. He was charged with speeding, reckless driving and fleeing a police officer who had tried to pull him over on a highway.
The most serious charge, fleeing a police officer, carries a maximum penalty of a year in the workhouse and a $3,000 fine.

DOT, town officials pay visit to Vernon St. to trade vows

The state Department of Transportation and the town of Manchester held an outdoor meeting Thursday afternoon at the intersection of Scott Drive and Vernon Street.
The subject, not surprisingly, was the delay-plagued Vernon Street reconstruction project.
On hand were Department of Transportation Deputy Commissioner James J. Rice, town directors Peter P. DiRosa Jr. and Kenneth N. Tedford, Town Manager Robert B. Weiss, and Public Works Director George A. Kandra.
The project will be finished by Nov. 30. Rice assured town officials.

Bolton ZBA takes action

Quarry owners told to halt operations

BOLTON — The Zoning Board of Appeals ruled Thursday that quarrying in Bolton Notch has been established as a legal, non-conforming use on only a small portion of the residential zone in the residential zone is not permitted by zoning rules.
The ZBA ruled further that quarrying on this portion of the residential zone, as well as in the industrial zone, must cease until certain requirements specified in a May 22 cease-and-desist order from the Zoning Commission are met.
The rulings came in the final session of deliberations that followed a Sept. 3 public hearing, in which attorneys for the quarry owner and the Zoning Commission presented opposing arguments on whether quarrying should be allowed in the residential zone. The deliberation began on Sept. 10 and was continued on Sept. 17, when the ZBA ruled that quarrying in the residential zone is not permitted by zoning rules.
The quarry's owner, Dr. Peter Lawler of American Heritage Stone Inc., appealed the Zoning Commission's denial of the quarry's 1986 annual permit to the ZBA. Attorney Mark Brannan, representing the quarry owners, argued at a Sept. 3 public hearing that the Zoning Commission, in denying the permit,

Campaign Notes

Florentino to head Dyer campaign

Board of Education member Richard W. Dyer has named attorney Thomas S. Florentino to lead his re-election campaign. Dyer, a Democrat, who has served on the board since 1981, is seeking a third term in the November elections. He has been the school board's chairman since 1986.
Florentino is a partner in the Manchester law firm Marté, Keith and Florentino. He is a member of the Manchester Conservation Commission, the board of directors of the Manchester Land Trust, and the board of trustees of the Lutz Children's Museum. He is a lifelong Manchester resident. He and his wife and two children live on Porter Street.
Dyer has also named attorney James Sulick of Manchester as his campaign treasurer, and attorney Michael Darby of Manchester as his deputy campaign treasurer.
Other campaign workers include Nancy Johnson, Dominic Squatrito, David Kritzman, Nancy Anderson and Roger Negro.
Dyer is a former juvenile probation officer who practices law in Manchester.

Thomas Florentino

Malone to serve in Werkhoven's run

Beverly R. Malone of 84 Prospect St. has been named treasurer of Theaunus Werkhoven's campaign committee for election to the town Board of Directors.
Malone has been an active member of many local organizations in Manchester for many years. She is a past president of the Women's Auxiliary of Manchester Memorial Hospital as well as the Manchester Women's Club and Gibbons Assembly, Catholic Ladies of Columbus.
Malone served on the Manchester Board of Education for three years and has been on the board of Manchester Visiting Nurses Association as well as the Manchester Human Relations Commission. At present she is a member of the Manchester Historic District Commission, vice president of the Ladies' Guild of the Church of the Assumption and secretary of the Southwest Property Owners Association.
Other members of Werkhoven's campaign committee include Carl Zinsser as his chairman, as well as Barbara Higley, deputy treasurer.

Mercier to head Naab's campaign

Donna R. Mercier has been appointed campaign chairman for incumbent Republican Director Geoffrey Naab.
Mercier is a former member of the Board of Directors. Republican Registrar Patricia Cottle is Naab's campaign treasurer.
Other committee members are: Barbara King, Marcia Memory, Harvey Steeves, Ellen Burns, Amory Stansfield, John Mercier and Patricia Cotten.
The Committee to Elect Geoffrey Naab will hold a Columbus Day Dance on Sunday, it will be held from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus hall, 138 Main St. Tickets are $12. Children under 12 are admitted free, teen-agers can attend at half price.
The second fund-raiser is a cocktail party, to be held at the Cottles' on Oct. 17 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 and reservations may be made by calling 646-3275 or 646-2668.

Morance supporters socialize

The Jim Morance election committee will be sponsoring a Sunday morning social on Sunday from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Democratic Headquarters at 192 Main Street, Manchester. Donations are $5 per person, with children admitted free. The committee will provide coffee, cider, donuts and a drawing of door prizes which range from folk art items to flower arrangements. Advance tickets are available through committee members or by calling Eleanor Colman, co-chairman of Morance's election committee at 644-1947. Tickets may also be bought at the door on Sunday.

Zinssers to host cocktail party

Former State Sen. Carl A. Zinsser and Mrs. Zinsser will host a wine and cheese party and fund-raiser for Theaunus Werkhoven, Republican candidate for the Manchester Board of Directors, on Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m.
About 100 people are expected to attend at the Zinsser home, 178 Ralph Road.
Werkhoven, a member of the town's Building Committee, is making his first bid for elective office.

"Bliz" to chair Garside campaign

John I. Garside Jr., Republican candidate for the town Board of Directors, announced today that former state representative Elsie "Bliz" Swenson will chair his election campaign committee.
In a news release, Garside said Swenson was a dedicated worker who had worked with him as a district leader and when he was elected in the past to the Board of Directors. Garside said he worked for Swenson in her campaigns for State Representative.

Mayor honors Giblin for hiring handicapped

Katherine M. Giblin, operator of Holiday House, a residence for the elderly on Cottage Street, was honored Tuesday for pioneering in hiring handicapped people.
The award, Mayor Barbara Weinberg's Citizen of the Day Award, was presented to Giblin by the mayor in a brief ceremony in the Municipal Building.
Also honored were John and Bernice Reiz, owners of Shady Glen restaurant, who were unable to attend the ceremony.
The presentations were made in connection with the observance of National Hire the Handicapped Week, Oct. 4 to 10 this year.
Weinberg said Giblin began hiring handicapped persons in 1981 before "hire the handicapped" became a slogan.
The person hired by Giblin was Mary Beckley, a resident of the Mansfield Training School, now 90 years old and a resident of Holiday House.
Others hired, from the Mansfield center, were Lila Gobar, now 79, Evelyn Florence, 64, both still working, and Marie Trostel, 86, who worked at the home for 25 years and is now a resident.

Dealership decisions under scrutiny

WETHERSFIELD — Decisions to reject some new car dealerships in the subject of investigations by both the Department of Motor Vehicles and the chief state's attorney, officials said.

Former Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Benjamin A. Muzio and one of his aides presided over departmental adjudicators to reach certain decisions, then sometimes changed or altered decisions when adjudicators refused, the department's chief adjudicator alleged.

Chief Adjudicator Jeffrey Ogin, who made the charges in sworn statements and interviews, said Muzio and then-Director of Communications Donald C. Byers attempted to influence cases before and after decisions were reached.

Ogin acknowledged earlier this week that he ruled in 1986 against the General Motors Corp. in its application for a Pontiac dealership in Watertown after Muzio ordered him to do so.

Muzio has denied ordering Ogin to rule a particular way in the General Motors case.

Honesty pays off for commander

NEW LONDON — A Coast Guard officer says honesty really is the best policy and he has $2,700 to prove it.

Cmdr. Wayne B. Gronlund, a chemistry professor at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, was buying ice cream for his two children at a restaurant in nearby Niantic when he spotted a stack of money lying next to a candy rack.

"I picked it up and started counting," he said. "When I got to $400, I called the manager."

Reluctantly, Gronlund ended up turning over $2,700 in cash to the state police.

No one claims the money, and state police on Wednesday returned it to Gronlund.

"I had the money six months ago, but now I've got it and I got it the right way," he said during a brief check-passing ceremony at the academy Wednesday afternoon. "Whoever it was who lost it didn't want to deal with the state police to get it back."

City fixes main after sewage leaks

NEW HAVEN — A ruptured sewer main that forced the city to dump more than 45 million gallons of raw sewage into its harbor has been repaired, officials said.

The pipe was repaired late Thursday, said John DeStefano, the city's chief administrative officer.

A subcontractor ruptured the line Monday with a hammer-driven steel piling while working on a Fusco Corp. project at the Long Wharf Maritime Center.

Large doses of chlorine were added to the sewage to kill bacteria.

Hilton, union make tentative deal

HARTFORD — A tentative contract settlement was reached early today in a negotiating session involving the Parkview Hilton Hotel and unionized workers.

The workers will be voting on the tentative agreement Saturday morning, said Henry J. Tamarin, secretary-treasurer of Local 217 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union.

"It will be presented with a unanimous recommendation from the union negotiating committee" for approval, Tamarin said.

Tamarin declined to disclose details of the new agreement, reached after several days of negotiations.

The new agreement for the Parkview Hilton had been put off last week following a strike by the union against the Sheraton Hotel. A strike against the Summit Hotel had been avoided when late-night negotiations led to a new contract for workers at that hotel.

Medical tests inconclusive in murder

HARTFORD — Authorities still don't know whether a 24-year-old reporter found dead in her apartment had been sexually assaulted by her killer, police said.

Capt. James Meehan said Thursday that medical tests to determine whether Kara Laczynski was sexually assaulted were inconclusive.

Laczynski, a reporter for the Journal Inquirer of Manchester, was found dead in her ransacked apartment on Monday. Police have concluded that her killer entered through the apartment's only door and not through a torn screen on the bathroom window, as initially suspected.

Lt. Frederick Lewis is calling Laczynski's death "very peculiar and mysterious."

Police have not said whether they believe anything was stolen from Laczynski's first-floor efficiency apartment.

Day-care center operated illegally

NEW BRITAIN — The day-care center that was caring for a 2-year-old boy who was struck and killed by a school bus was ordered closed after state officials determined the facility was not legally registered.

Geraldine Clark was baby-sitting for Gregory Miller at her home Wednesday when he apparently darted in front of the bus and was killed. Clark said she had left Gregory alone on the front porch for about 20 minutes while she fed another child in the kitchen.

"She was operating illegally," Jeanne Milstein, program manager for day-care services for the state Department of Human Resources, said Thursday. "She is no longer providing services."

Lt. James F. Ahearn, a police department spokesman, said state regulators are assisting police with their investigation into Clark's role in Gregory's death.

"We are pursuing everything," Ahearn said. "But that is where we are focusing our investigation."

Protesters picket lawyers' meeting

WATERBURY — One person offended by a seminar designed to train attorneys in the defense of clients charged with drunken driving said he doesn't understand the merit in teaching lawyers "how to get people who are probably guilty off."

About 30 members of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, or MADD, and a similar group, Remove Intoxicated Drivers, marched across the driveway of the Howard Johnson Plaza Thursday morning as nearly 30 lawyers attended the seminar, "The Drunk Driving Defense: An Expert's Approach."

The protest didn't interrupt the seminar, sponsored by the Connecticut Bar Association.

"We're not against the seminar," said Nancy Ricci, president of the state's RID chapter. "What we're really upset about is how technicalities can take the place of justice."

State probes allegations of abuse

SOUTHURY — Investigations focusing on allegations of abuse at a Southbury Training School cottage are under way, according to the director of the facility for the mentally retarded.

Steven Staugaitis, director of the school, said Thursday a new employee made some allegations several weeks ago and investigations were begun by the state police, the school's security force, the administration and the state Office of Protection and Advocacy for the Handicapped and Developmentally Disabled.

The allegations involved Cottage 21, where a new "gentle teaching" method was started last year. Gentle teaching uses no punishment or negative words. Instead, the instructors ignore inappropriate behavior, guide the retarded person to more positive behavior and reward the positive behavior.

Five mental retardation workers in Cottage 21 were accused of abuse, according to Staugaitis. He said it was alleged they struck clients, called them names and left a client unattended.

Radon now factor in home market

By Anne McGrath
The Associated Press

EAST HARTFORD — A naturally occurring, radioactive gas may soon become the center of home buyers' concerns and a major factor in Connecticut's unpredictable real estate market, an environmental lawyer says.

The gas, called radon, is known to cause lung cancer, is known to be present in a high number of Connecticut homes, experts said. Radon is emitted by the decay of uranium naturally present in soils and rocks, and often seeps into buildings through cracks.

Attorney Gregory A. Sharp, chairman of the state Council on Environmental Quality, said Thursday that some buyers already are making an acceptable radon reading a condition of a sale.

"Radon poses a major challenge for the legal system," Sharp told public health officials, industrial hygienists, and others attending a seminar, "Radon & You," organized by the Hartford County Medical Association.

He said he hasn't heard of any liability suits or other actions resulting from disputes over radon, but said it's probably only a matter of time before the first is filed in the state.

Several people attending the seminar said they had heard of house deals that fell through because tests showed high radon levels.

The experts noted, however, that measures can always be taken to reduce radon levels and often for no more than several hundred dollars.

Scientists estimate that between 5,000 and 20,000 lung cancer deaths a year in the United States may be attributed to radon.

The gas usually enters homes by seeping through cracks in floors and walls, and by getting into the water supply through private wells.

A state survey of 1,500 homes done in December 1986 showed that 18 percent of the homes had basement radon levels exceeding the "acceptable" level of 4 picocuries per liter set by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Seventy-three percent of the 187 towns in which houses were tested had at least one building with a radon level above 4 picocuries per liter.

Experts who addressed Thursday's seminar said they think every homeowner in Connecticut should test his dwelling for radon.

"New England is clearly an area for concern," because of the number of different geological formations in the region — including granite, phosphate rocks and marine deposits — known to emit radon, said Richard J. Guimond, director of the federal Radon Action Program.

"We don't want people to panic. We want to create what you could call controlled concern," Guimond said.

The state Department of Health Services is now putting together a program aimed at identifying homes with high radon levels and helping the owners.

State buys restaurant for shelter

MERIDEN (AP) —

With the purchase of a restaurant, the state has added to its network of shelters for the homeless.

Once the Protegna Restaurant is converted, another 50 beds will be available and likely to serve 450 people a year.

The property was purchased by the state Thursday in a deed-signing ceremony witnessed by Gov. William W. O'Neill and George Lombra, a former member of the city's homeless community.

"They try to help everybody. It's beautiful," Lombra said, seated in a wheelchair, said after the ceremony in the parking lot of the soon-to-be converted restaurant off the city's main street.

"What you see here this morning is an answer to a problem that has no place in a state like ours," said Housing Commissioner John F. Papanicolaou. "It is not enough today to take people and shelter them."

What's needed, he said, "is to take these people and get them to break the cycle of poverty that often thrusts them out shelters in the world's most affluent economy."

The Rev. Philip J. Cascia, president of the St. Vincent dePaul Society, which will operate the shelter, said it should be completed early in December. He said as many as 450 people would likely use it annually.

"We have really, really been hit hard in the past year," Cascia said. "Many of these people are what we would call working poor who have no place to live that they can afford. The market is way out of line with many people's income."

He said those wanting it will be provided with help finding a job, an apartment and medical care. But he said, "we can't run their lives for them."

He said there would be no limit on the length of time a family with children could stay in the shelter. For single men, he said, the usual limit is 30 days, although circumstances may dictate different arrangements. Families will be given three to six days.

"While it is important to understand that homelessness is a year-round problem, I know there's a growing public concern about this time of year for the homeless in our communities," O'Neill said.

"This problem, this terrible problem of people being without a place to lay their heads at night has got to be resolved," O'Neill said. The state is spending $15 million this year on services for the homeless, including shelters, food, and grants for transitional housing and security deposits.

AIDS reponse is 'a disgrace,' Weicker says of Reagan policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lowell Weicker says President Reagan's response to AIDS is "a disgrace" and it is time the president stop taking the administration's stance on the disease.

Weicker said in a speech Thursday night that the departure of Eugene Mayberry and Woodrow Myers — two highly respected physicians — from the president's AIDS commission earlier this week "is symptomatic of a condition present throughout this administration."

"Again and again, the men and women of science are being overruled by the philosophers, the supposed moral guardians of our nation," Weicker, R-Conn., said in a speech Thursday night. "The time has come to get the William Jennings Bryan and the Gary Bowers out and let the people with the facts and the knowledge fight the battle."

Numerous sources with knowledge of the commission's inner workings said Mayberry left after losing a power struggle with commission member William B. Walsh, the founder of Project Hope who has close ties to Bennett and Bauer.

"The president's response to AIDS, as reflected in the firing of this commission, is nothing short of a disgrace," Weicker told a cheering audience attending a dinner sponsored by the AIDS Action Council.

"The experts know what needs to be done," said Weicker, kicking off the names of Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen, Dr. Robert Windom, head of the Public Health Service, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and other top government health officials.

"You wouldn't send a doctor to direct the military operation in the Persian Gulf," said Weicker. "Neither should a philosopher direct the war against AIDS."

"It is time for the president himself to insist on a federal response to AIDS that is based on the facts, not fear, not philosophy," said Weicker. "We should be fighting ignorance at the grassroots rather than wallowing in it at the White House."

Earlier Thursday, actress Morgan Fairchild told a House tax force that college and high school students are not taking the threat of AIDS seriously enough.

Miss Fairchild has appeared on several television shows about AIDS and frequently speaks to student audiences.

Typical comments from people in those age groups, she said, are, "I only sleep with friends here at my school, so I'm safe," or, "By the time I come down with it, they'll have a cure."

Tibet orders travelers to leave

CHENGDU, China — Authorities in the Tibetan capital of Lhasa today ordered all travelers to leave Tibet within a week. The order followed the expulsion of 14 Western journalists covering pro-independence unrest in the remote Himalayan region last week.

The last of the journalists, including two Associated Press reporters, arrived today in Chengdu in nearby Sichuan province, the air gateway to Tibet. Most had arrived in Lhasa after the first two protests, on Sept. 27 and Oct. 1, and some witnessed a third protest Tuesday.

Jill Kluge, sales representative at the Western-run Lhasa Hotel, said police had told the hotel all individual travelers should be out of Lhasa within a week. There was no indication, however, that authorities planned to halt the lucrative four groups that brought 30,000 Western tourists to Lhasa last year.

U.S. protests arrests in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The U.S. military issued a protest after 10 Americans, nine of them soldiers, and five Panamanians were arrested and accused of disorderly conduct.

Col. Leonidas Macias, the Panamanian police chief, said the nine soldiers were turned over to U.S. authorities early Thursday. He refused to say whether the American civilian was still in jail.

The arrests came Wednesday night as opponents of the military-dominated government tried to organize a demonstration after President Eric Arturo Delvalle addressed the nation on television, witnesses said.

Delvalle said in the speech that he won't tolerate further anti-government demonstrations, which have been occurring sporadically since early June.

Soviets pull back from compromise

WASHINGTON — Soviet arm negotiators in Geneva have backed away from a key compromise on West German nuclear missiles tipped with U.S. warheads, but U.S. officials hope the move will not upset a tentative superpower arms control agreement.

Under the compromise worked out here last month, the 72 Pershing 1A missiles would not be included in the U.S.-Soviet agreement, but would be dismantled by the Bonn government and the warheads withdrawn from Western Europe.

In the meantime, all Soviet and U.S. intermediate-range missiles would be scrapped.

But this week, while working on a schedule for eliminating the nuclear weapons, Soviet negotiators surprised the American side by proposing that Moscow be allowed to retain some of its shorter-range rockets until the West German missiles were dismantled.

Aquino's foes get U.S. warning

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is reiterating its warnings to opponents of Philippine President Corason Aquino that her ouster by military action would trigger an immediate suspension of American aid.

The United States also says it will ship $35 million in military equipment to the Philippine armed forces before the end of the year, and two key senators urged the administration to make support for Mrs. Aquino's government a higher priority.

The warning and the pledge were made Thursday by Gaston Sigur, assistant secretary of State for Asian affairs, amid rumblings from Manila of a new plot against Mrs. Aquino. Her spokesman asserted the government had received "a warning of an impending coup."

Soviet journalists face restrictions

WASHINGTON — The State Department is imposing new restraints on Soviet journalists, requiring them to live in apartments selected by the U.S. government.

"It is no surprise to anybody that the Soviet intelligence services are not barred from using journalists for cover," James E. Nolan Jr., director of the Office of Foreign Missions, said Thursday.

"Therefore, we have a natural concern where Soviet journalists reside and what their activities are in the United States," he said in an interview.

Prospects brighten for arms deal

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will eliminate 1,600 Maverick air-to-ground missiles from a proposed weapons package to Saudi Arabia to ensure smooth shipping for the billion-dollar deal in the Senate.

The deal does, however, include 12 new F-15 fighters. But the jets would be stored in the United States and shipped to Saudi Arabia only as needed to replace lost or worn-out units currently in the Saudi air force.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., predicted Reagan would have no problem winning approval of the package after removing the missiles, which had brought the deal to a standstill because of congressional concern about their potential threat to Israel.

Robertson stung by news reports

LANCASTER, Pa. — Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson, stung by disclosures on his background and inaccuracies in his resume, condemned the news media's intense scrutiny of his personal life.

Robertson, a former minister and television evangelist, dealt with reporters' questions Thursday about his marriage, education and war record at stops in Philadelphia and Lancaster and on ABC-TV's "Nightline" news program.

Robertson told reporters at the Lancaster Airport that the public can pass judgment on his past, but that news reports were moving "beyond the bounds of ethical behavior."

On Tuesday, The Wall Street Journal reported Robertson and his wife, Dede, were legally married just 10 weeks before their first child was born. He has since acknowledged the report was accurate.

Scientists hunt Loch Ness monster

DRUMNADROCHIT, Scotland (AP) — Twenty-four boats carrying the latest sonar equipment swept the choppy waters of Loch Ness today in the biggest-ever scientific hunt for the legendary monster lurking in its depths.

Shortly after the first sweep began, the monster-hunters were reporting sonar echo contacts with unidentified objects. One boat discovered a "very large lump" at the bottom of the 754-foot deep lake, they said.

The contacts — which could be anything — were reported over a radio intercom linking the 24 motorboats taking part in the search.

Shorely after the first sweep began, the monster-hunters were reporting sonar echo contacts with unidentified objects. One boat discovered a "very large lump" at the bottom of the 754-foot deep lake, they said.

"I'm certainly not going to haul a Jurassic reptile out kicking and screaming for you," said Shine, referring to prehistoric creatures. "I am looking possibly for a very large fish."

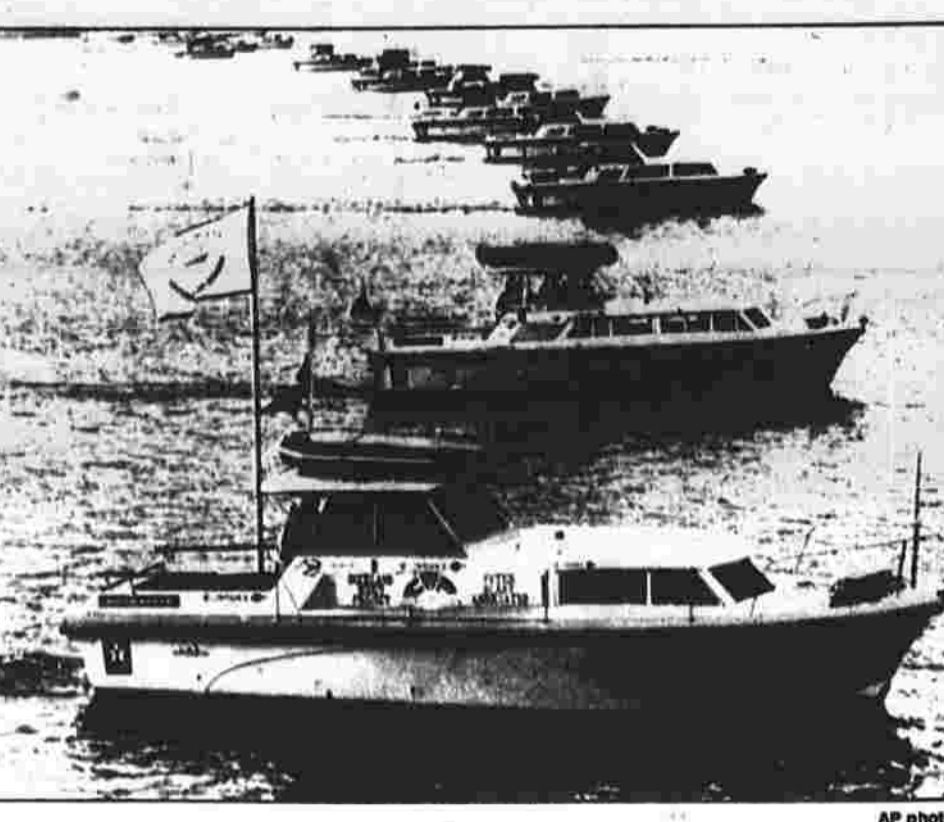

"I would be delighted with a 20-foot eel or sturgeon or something like that," he told a news conference Thursday night.

The motorboats formed a ragged line across the mile-wide lake, sweeping the murky depths through the inky blue waters of the northern Scottish loch, bounded by sheer cliffs and rolling green hills.

"The water's rough, but it will start to shape up in a little while," he said.

Andy Trickey, a Bristol toolmaker who is in charge of one of the boats, the Lochinor Castle, said: "I hope we're going to find something. That's the standard pattern for today."

"Whatever does emerge, even Shine says he legend that began in A.D. 565, when St. Columba castigated the monster for attacking one of his followers, will live on.

"You don't kill myths with science," he said. "Loch Ness monsters are different things to different people." Shine said, "My Nessie for today is a sonar contact that I don't understand yet."

In 1982, Shine led an expedition that recorded 40 sonar contacts with large, sometimes moving objects as much as 350 feet deep.

Shine said each sweep down the 23-mile-long lake is expected to take six hours.

Later, he said he met with credentialed PTL attorneys or his successor to allow an orderly transition, but he ruled out any return, saying he and the board, in resigning, weren't "issuing any ultimatum or putting on dramatics."

The resignations are subject to the approval of U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds.

Jim and Tammy ready to return to PTL

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL founders Jim and Tammy Bakker might return and make the TV ministry "what it was — the greatest scab and cancer on the face of Christianity in 2,000 years."

The resignations were prompted by a bankruptcy court ruling Wednesday allowing PTL creditors and contributors to file a competing plan for reorganizing the ministry, which is more than $50 million in debt, Falwell said.

"That ruling, it was felt, left the door open to a comeback by Bakker."

Falwell predicted after his resignation that within six months, "barring a miracle of God," Bakker would be back in control of the empire he founded and lost.

Bakker said during a news conference with his wife at their mountain retreat near Gallatinburg, Tenn., that he would return if invited by PTL's creditors. "We want to help in any way to restore our baby," he said.

Bakker said he thought Falwell was resigning to avoid testifying under oath in bankruptcy court.

"If they tell the truth they they will have to reveal that they plotted to steal PTL," said Bakker, who contends he gave Falwell only temporary safekeeping of PTL in March after admitting a 1980 sexual encounter with church secretary

AIDS job difficult, confusing

AIDS is dominating a lot of headlines these days, most of them over stories that are frightening and confusing. But perhaps the most significant development for Manchester in the confusing AIDS-awareness effort is to be found in a low-key account from the Manchester Area Conference of Churches last Saturday.

In MACC's weekly column in the Herald, Nancy Carr, executive director of the conference, described Project AIDS Manchester and the moves it has made toward getting a grant for a community-based health-planning AIDS project that will focus on prevention through education, development of medical and support services, and programs to affect community attitudes and policies.

Involved in the effort, under the MACC umbrella, are the town's Human Services Department, Manchester Memorial Hospital, and a number of social services and health care agencies.

Project AIDS Manchester will not accomplish any miracles in preventing AIDS or AIDS Related Complex locally, but it may help diminish the future incidence by education and persuasion as well as easing the pain of victims of the disease and their families.

MACC deserves praise for taking on an unpleasant and unpopular job.

It will not be easy, especially in light of the confusion and contradictions that have arisen nationally and statewide.

The state has apparently failed to plan well enough for AIDS Awareness Month.

The United States surgeon general and the state secretary of education continue to disagree over the right way to safeguard against AIDS.

The two top leaders in President Reagan's AIDS commission have quit, reportedly over disagreements and bickering within the commission ranks. The differences appeared so great that the last chairman reportedly concluded that the commission would never be able to make a consensus report.

Connecticut's Republican senator, Lowell Weicker, calls the administration's response to the AIDS crisis "a disgrace."

As health-care workers become increasingly concerned for their own well-being and use strong precautions in dealing with patients, the Food and Drug Administration suggests that latex gloves used by doctors may not be reliably leakproof and may have to have more testing.

Officials of the National Institutes of Health say they'll have to change their monitoring program following the disclosure that a second laboratory worker was infected on the job while handling concentrations of the AIDS virus.

Against that background, the Manchester Area Conference of Churches has undertaken a difficult task, mindful no doubt that it may face some consensus problems of its own.

Halting spread of AIDS is not impossible

WASHINGTON — Though there is no medical cure for AIDS, the epidemic can be halted, if sufficient political will can be mustered. Every person in the population with the deadly disease — or with the HIV virus that causes AIDS — must be identified. And they must stop spreading the disease to others.

It is that simple, and that difficult. But it is not impossible.

The current issue of Life spotlights the pioneering work of Colorado's Department of Health, which interviews all infected people, and asks for names of previous sexual partners. While homosexual sex is often anonymous, and previous partners can't be remembered, "the first 227 individuals who were HIV positive revealed 360 partners with whom they had sexual contact," Dr. Tom Vernon, state health director, told me.

"Forty-one of them refused to cooperate, and 38 had already been tested, but 228 of the 360 were tested as a result of the contact. Some 38 turned out to be HIV positive, or 16 percent."

When I reported these facts to Dr. William O'Connor, an AIDS expert who recently testified to Congress, he said, "That means 38 people will not contribute to the epidemic. It is also encouraging that only 16 percent were infected. That is dangerous, but it is not 100 percent."

But there are many hard questions which must be faced:

1. Will those identified as HIV positive stop practicing anal sex, the primary means by which AIDS is spread?

About 96 percent will quit, according to a study by Dr. Thomas Coates of the University of California. Of 505 gay men in San Francisco, 99 percent of those who were HIV positive were engaged in anal sex in 1984. Two years later, when re-interviewed, only 7 percent were doing so.

Apparently, testing and counseling sparked profound behavior change.

Soviets stock arms in Cuba

WASHINGTON — It is now 25 years since the Cuban missile crisis — which supposedly ended the Soviet Union backing off in the face of determined brinkmanship by the Kennedy administration. But the American public still has not been told officially by the White House the nerve-wracking confrontation between the two superpowers.

The State Department's determined cover-up has even extended to keeping top White House officials in the dark, by withholding secret documents that detail the delicate negotiations in the fall of 1962.

There's a reason for this continuing coverup: Soviet offensive weapons now in Cuba are far more numerous — and more sophisticated — than the 42 medium-range ballistic missiles that caused all the ruckus a quarter-century ago.

Secret and top-secret documents we've seen make clear that the "historic" agreement between President Kennedy and Soviet chairman Nikita Khrushchev was given a substantial "spin" by the White House to make it look like a diplomatic triumph.

In fact, the U.S. Soviet agreement was a compromise. Confronted by an unflinching U.S. military superiority — and Kennedy's evident determination to use it — Khrushchev grudgingly agreed not to deploy the missiles he was sending to Cuba and to remove those already there.

But the Soviet leader flatly refused to pull out the IL-28 Beagle bombers based in Cuba, despite repeated U.S. insistence. This insistence was made clear in the series of still-secret documents.

First, in a letter to the Soviets, U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson listed the weapons the United States considered to be offensive. Bombers were on the list.

In a memo to the president on Nov. 5, Attorney General Robert Kennedy reported on a meeting with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, saying he told the Soviets that "certainly it was very clear that the bombers, the IL-28s, had to go."

Khrushchev wrote to President Kennedy, complaining that, in their correspondence the month before, Kennedy had not made "a single mention of bomber planes." Khrushchev said the IL-28s were so old they couldn't be classified as offensive weapons, and anyway, "we intend to remove them within a month."

The Soviets eventually did remove the IL-28s, and the U.S. quarantine of Cuba was lifted. But the Soviets now have more and better warplanes in Cuba than they did then: a dozen Tu-95 Bear bombers (some with nuclear capability) and about 40 MIG-23 or MIG-27 fighter-bombers, all of which can carry nuclear bombs. Intelligence officials have told Congress that the Soviet presence in Cuba actually has nuclear benefits.

Furthermore, U.S. intelligence has confirmed the delivery of at least six nuclear missiles to Cuba by submarine in 1972 and 1974, and the naval base at Cienfuegos is linked by rail to a nuclear warhead storage facility.

By way of a 25th anniversary observance, may we suggest that the State Department finally let the American public in on the truth about the Cuban missile crisis?

Dreaming of Jeane

Two Republican presidential candidates — Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York — have been actively courting Jeane Kirkpatrick, the outspoken former ambassador to the United Nations. Vice President George Bush has made no special effort to win her support.

Ideologically, the ultra-conservative Kirkpatrick is closest to Kemp, but the word we get is that she has concluded he doesn't have a realistic chance to be nominated, so the contest is between Bush and Dole. She'd pick Dole in a minute, but she's holding off her endorsement because she doesn't want to put the kibosh on Kemp's struggling campaign. If she announced for Dole, other conservatives who are backing Kemp out of conviction might jump ship on pragmatic grounds and join Kirkpatrick in the Dole camp.

Black-market babies

The red tape of legal adoption procedures and the tremendous demand from affluent childless couples in this country have caused an epidemic of kidnapping in Central America. Infants are snatched at gunpoint from their mother's arms, and toddlers are grabbed when they're left alone on errands. In a few cases, destitute parents sell their children to black marketeers for a small sum. More commonly, youngsters are simply abandoned by parents who can't afford to feed and clothe them. One little boy in a group of orphans wandering around San Salvador was asked what they were doing and responded: "We're waiting for someone to come and steal us."

Move on to extend 65 limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A move is under way in the Senate to raise the speed limit on 65 mph on an additional 5,997 miles of highways in 42 states.

"I think we'll pass it," the measure's sponsor, Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., said Thursday. And even an opponent conceded it would be difficult to stop.

The proposal would allow states to permit legal driving speeds of 65 mph on stretches of roads that the federal government declares meet or come close to the engineering standards of interstate highways. It would be in addition to more than 30,000 miles of interstate highways that Congress in April allowed to Post 65 mph limits.

To be eligible, the federal, state or local roads must be divided, have at least four lanes and be reached only by using access ramps. The roads also must be located in urban areas with populations of 50,000 people or more.

When Congress earlier this year fought over a wider-ranging proposal to increase speeds, supporters said the slower 55 mph limits were unnecessary, while opponents said the faster driving would cause more deaths and injuries.

Nickles rejected the safety argument Thursday, telling a reporter of his proposal, "It just makes common sense. A lot of roads meet interstate standards and are just as safe as interstates."

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate transportation appropriations subcommittee, was among those opposing the provision when it was approved 127-79 by the Senate Appropriations Committee on Oct. 1.

Lautenberg said Thursday he would continue to work against the language, saying, "Injuries and fatalities go up when you increase the speed limit."

But he noted that recent votes in the Senate have gone in favor of the higher speed limits.

"I don't think there are enough votes here," he said. "I frankly think it's a little battle."

On April 2, Congress overrode President Reagan's veto of a highway bill that included a provision allowing states to raise speed limits to 65 mph on interstate highways located outside communities with populations of 50,000 or more.

The speed limit provision had passed the Senate in a 52-48 vote and applied to 33,810 of the 43,291 miles of road in the interstate system.

The latest proposal is part of the $11.1 billion transportation appropriations bill for the 1988 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1.

The House has passed its own version of the spending bill, but it does not include a provision increasing the speed limit.

Should the two chambers try to draw up a compromise version of the appropriations bill, Lautenberg said he would try to eliminate the speed limit language.

Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., left, watches as two workers remove an 1868 painting, depicting the scalping of a white man by an Indian, from the House Interior Committee room at Capitol Hill Thursday. Campbell, the only American Indian member of Congress, complained that the painting was offensive.

Congress unhangs oil painting that offended native American

WASHINGTON (AP) — Picture-hanging ceremonies are routine events in Congress, wherein an oil painting of a committee chairman, often still very much alive and wielding a gavel, is added to the Capitol artworks.

But a picture-unhanging ceremony? That's a very rare event, and it took the only native American member of Congress to pull it off.

Because of Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., there's a blank space today on the east wall of the House Interior Committee hearing room. Gone is "Death Whoop," a grisly oil painting of an Indian triumphantly holding the scalp of a slain white man.

The painting had hung in various interior hearing rooms for more than a century, apparently without complaint, until early this year when freshman Campbell spotted it at his first committee meeting.

"It's a depressing painting," Campbell, a Northern Cheyenne, said recently. "It's a sort of touch with the sensitivity of Indians. It plays on the prejudice of man."

He complained to a sympathetic Interior Chairman Morris Udall, D-Ariz., who agreed to get rid of the painting, one of a series of Indian scenes done in 1868 by retired Gen. Seth Eastman.

"This is one of the great historical moments of the House Interior Committee," Udall said Thursday at the brief-unhanging ceremony that ended with two workmen unceremoniously hauling away "Death Whoop" on a dolly.

The formal removal of a painting was yet another change brought by

Another lab worker gets AIDS from cut hand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal authorities say they are planning a new monitoring program for laboratory workers who handle concentrations of the AIDS virus following screening tests for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

National Institutes of Health officials said Thursday that a worker at a laboratory contracted to do AIDS work for the government apparently became infected when his or her hand was cut accidentally during the process of concentrating the virus.

The worker, whom NIH did not identify, was employed at one of a handful of contractor labs doing such work in the Washington area.

The worker was handling virus concentrates used for research and making screening tests for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Authorities last month disclosed the first such case when a worker at another Washington lab, who later acknowledged having cuts or abrasions of the skin, apparently had direct contact with concentrated virus because of leaky equipment or defective protective gloves.

Even with a second infection incident coming to light, officials said, existing occupational safety guidelines for lab workers are adequate and provide sufficient protection if followed.

Dr. Robert McKinney, director of the NIH's division of safety, said in an interview that federal health authorities began considering routine monitoring of these lab workers when they found out about the second incident.

Until now, workers dealing with concentrated virus were checked only for AIDS virus antibodies — an indication of infection — if they volunteered for certain studies, he said.

"We are looking at a program where people would be checked routinely," McKinney said. "Based on what we know about the AIDS virus, we foresee testing every six months. If there is an accident where there is a likelihood of exposure, that interval would be shortened."

"We anticipate we would have this program in place in no longer than 90 days," he continued.

Between 50 and 70 people who handle concentrated AIDS virus are employed at seven facilities around the country involved in large-scale production of the agent.

Dems eye tax hike despite GOP boycott and threat of veto

WASHINGTON — Democrats who control the two tax-writing committees in Congress are voting to write a $12 billion deficit-reduction tax increase that will appeal to both parties, even though Republicans are boycotting the process and President Reagan is promising a veto.

Despite Rostenkowski's opposition, the Democrats refused to let several suggestions for increasing individual income-tax rates and excise taxes on gasoline, alcohol and tobacco. Those items will still be up for deliberation next week, but it is generally conceded they will not become part of the tax bill.

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law, unless Congress and the president agree on a package of deficit reductions, $23 billion of spending cuts will take effect automatically on Nov. 20. That would mean a huge cut in defense spending, which Reagan opposes.

However, Packwood said he is convinced Reagan would find that more acceptable than having to agree to a tax increase. The senator, who said he could vote for some tax increases if necessary, said he generally opposed the committee would be to delay any decision until congressional and administration budget experts determine where the automatic cuts would be made.

Even if the president could swallow big cuts in the defense budget, there is no certainty Democrats would still carry large reductions in a variety of social programs.

Both parties have been stung by recent efforts to lower the deficit: Republicans by being forced to vote regularly to cut popular programs, and Democrats by being accused of cutting off of wanting to raise taxes, said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo.

"Neither side wants to go through the ordeal of writing a new bill if nothing is going to come of it," he said.

The only solution, Danforth said, is a package negotiated by House Speaker Jim Wright, whose anti-deficit plan is built around a soak-the-rich tax increase, and Reagan, who says anyone favoring a tax increase is "nuts."

Reagan batted the committee, probably until Tuesday.

Rostenkowski, who had seen the 13 GOP members of his committee walk away from the tax-increase bill a week earlier, met with the 13 GOP members of his committee, continued looking for relatively small tax proposals that could win a majority vote.

The Democrats agreed on none of those Thursday. However, they did

Iran accuses United States of starting an 'all-out war'

New Agency, described the attack by U.S. helicopter gunships as "open military action" by the United States against Iran.

A spokesman for Iran's War Information Headquarters was quoted by IRNA as saying Tehran holds the United States responsible for the lives of six Iranians it said were taken "hostage" by U.S. forces. The unidentified spokesman urged abstention immediately hand them back, said IRNA, monitored in Cyprus.

Weinberger said no Americans were injured or killed in the Thursday night fighting, which began when four Iranian gunboats opened fire without warning on a U.S. observation helicopter that Weinberger said was "on normal patrol" in the northern gulf.

The confrontation ended when Army attack helicopters strafed and disabled three of the Iranian boats, sinking one. The Navy rescued six Iranian crewmen from the gulf's waters, but two of them subsequently died. One of the survivors suffered serious injuries, Weinberger said.

"Our men are not expected to be hit before they respond," Weinberger told the conference sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency.

IRNA earlier quoted an "informed military source" in its first Iranian report on the clash.

"Iranian forces aboard speedboats shot down a U.S. helicopter with surface-to-air Stinger missiles and damaged an American vessel," it said. "Iranian forces also shot down a U.S. helicopter gunship attacked five speedboats in the international waters of the Persian Gulf Thursday," said the statement.

It said five Iranian speedboats were on a routine patrol mission in international waters near Farsi when "suddenly attacked by foreign helicopters" at 9:15 p.m. (9:18 p.m. EDT). IRNA quoted the official as saying the helicopter crash "was coupled with a huge explosion which lit the sky."

"Iranian units also fired 'light missiles at several U.S. vessels which had rushed to help the helicopter crash,'" it said. "Iranian sources in the gulf said the clash in the northern gulf was the second fatal encounter in three weeks between U.S. and Iranian forces in the waterway."

In another incident also Thursday, a U.S. helicopter reported shots were fired from an Iranian oil rig in the central gulf, Pentagon and U.S. sources in the gulf said. One U.S. source in the gulf said the fatal attack on the Iranian patrol boats caused concern among high-level officials in the American countries that make up the Gulf Cooperation Council.

"Many officials are deeply concerned, because such clashes can well broaden the scope of the war and turn the Arab powers from onlookers to participants," said the source, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We prefer to see the Americans exerting themselves to end the Iran war."

The Gulf Cooperation Council allies — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman — profess neutrality in the 7-year-old Iran war.

Gulf officials and shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said one of the U.S. helicopters swooped low and unleashed a barrage of fire that set the Iranian boats ablaze.

Pentagon officials in Washington said no Americans were hurt.

Laser-game injunction will remain temporary

The purchase of the proposed Laserquest site could be postponed for quite some time.

That delay is due in part to the fact that gasoline, believed to have leaked from an adjoining service station, has contaminated soil on the grounds of the former supermarket. The closing cannot be completed, but Cummings, a zoning and real estate attorney himself who has dealt with such matters before, said the cleanup should not take too long.

Under its present agreement with the buyer of the East Middle Turnpike property, Laserquest cannot move into the former supermarket building until after the closing.

Other issues are a pending building permit application filed by Laserquest and an appeal to the Zoning Board of Appeals of the denial of a previous building permit. Laserquest has already been turned down twice for a permit because of problems with the proposed parking layout.

The amusement center ordinance, passed by the town Board of Directors in July, prevents amusement centers measuring more than 5,000 square feet from operating within 1,000 feet of schools, senior citizens' housing, convalescent homes, hospitals and churches.

One of those issues, revealed for the first time in court Wednesday, is the possibility that the closing on

Whalers come out flat in the opener

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

NHL roundup
— see page 12

HARTFORD — As the 1987 Adams Division championship banner was unfurled and slowly ascended to the top of the Civic Center Thursday night, the fans of the Hartford Whalers had a moment to reminisce on last year's fine regular season and the brimming hopes of the 1987-88 campaign which was only to begin.

It seems like only yesterday that the Whalers were ousted from the first round of the playoffs by the Quebec Nordiques in a penalty-shootout six-game series. Well, it seemed fitting that the Whalers would get to face the nightmare which haunted them through the long summer nights in the season opener.

Instead of getting off on the right foot in defense of their Adams Division title versus the team which eliminated them from post-season play, the Whalers appeared as many clubs on opening night — flat.

Jason Lafreniere scored two goals while Peter Stastny had four assists to give Quebec an easy 5-1 victory over Hartford before an opening night crowd of 14,480. Nordiques goalie Mario Gosselin was superb in goal and recorded 29 saves.

"For whatever reason it was, I didn't think we were as sharp as we should've been," Whaler captain Ron Francis said. "Nothing seemed to be clicking. There's no reason for that in your opener."

It was an even first period while Quebec had the best scoring opportunity.

Twins feeling good after second straight win

By Mike Nodel
The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Jack Morris has never lost to the Twins in Minnesota. And during this American League season, Doyle Alexander had not lost to anyone.

But both Detroit right-handers met their demise in the American League playoffs with the Twins taking a 2-0 lead over the Tigers in the best-of-seven series.

Alexander, Wednesday's 8-5 loser, was 9-0 in the regular season after the Tigers acquired him Aug. 12 from Atlanta. He was 2-0 against the Twins, as was Morris — the winningest pitcher of the 1980s, who had been 11-0 in Minnesota including 8-0 in the Metrodome.

On paper, it had seemed the Tigers were favored and the Twins were in trouble.

"Paper doesn't win games," said Morris, who had said before the game that he desperately wanted to win to prove that Twins Executive Vice President Andy MacPhail erred in not signing him. Last December, the St. Paul native had come to town wearing his full-crown hair and a $2-million free agent.

"We're not quitting, but we have to win the first game at home," Morris said. "The thing is, they've got to play in Detroit now."

The AL East champion Tigers are counting on their prowess at Tiger Stadium — a 64-27 home record that was second only to the Twins' major-league leading 56-25 record at home — to win the series.

"I don't think I'll shoot myself," he said. "I'm not suicidal."

Morris, who won a $1.85-million contract from the Tigers in arbitration after no team would meet his demands, said the pitch he threw to Tim Lincecum with two outs in the second inning "was my poorest pitch, my biggest mistake, a nothing pitch, a slider down the middle."

"He hasn't pitched since last Thursday," Herzog said of Clark, who was 6-for-3 with two strikeouts Wednesday, lined a two-run double to left field, putting the Twins ahead for good at 3-2.

"I just wanted to see the ball and get a good swing," he said. "Last night I was a little tight. I felt the terrible memories of the playoffs in 1970, when he was a 19-year-old rookie on a veteran Minnesota ballclub.

"I've been scheduled to start the third game of that series, but when the Baltimore Orioles took a 2-0 series lead, he was benched in favor of Jim Kaat. Blyleven cried as Kaat was shelved and the Orioles swept what turned out to be the Twins' last postseason appearance until this year.

"The circumstances were a lot different then," said Blyleven, who is now the 36-year-old leader of the pitching staff.

After Kent Hrbek's solo homer in the fifth put Minnesota up 6-2, Blyleven surrendered Lou Whitaker's line-drive homer in the eighth. He then gave up a single to Darrell Evans and was removed to a standing ovation from the largest crowd ever to watch a baseball game in the state of Minnesota, 55,245.

Hard-throwing Jun Berenguer came on in relief and retired the final five Tigers, striking out four.

"First you get an assortment of curveballs and someone changing speeds all the time," Such said. "And, all of a sudden, here comes the big Panamanian Express. He obviously throws their timing off."

"We're definitely the underdog in this," Glants catcher Bob Brenley said of San Francisco. "We're a little bit of an underdog."

"I'm not on the other side, I'd have some thoughts going through my mind," Craig said. "But Leonard's a type of guy who can back up his actions."

Magnare said his attention was being directed toward the game rather than words being exchanged.

"I'm feeling nervous, it wouldn't hit me now," he said at Thursday's workout. "We're just in a relaxed atmosphere. This is the way the team has played all year."

The third period was all Quebec. The Nordiques extended their lead to 3-1 2:41 into the third period. Brown and Goulet converted a 2-on-1 situation when Brown's goal-wrister trickled through Lutz's legs. Goulet scored a power-play goal to make it 4-1 with a back-handed shot inside the 20-foot zone.

"He (Goulet) made an unbelievable shot," Lutz said. "We just didn't play well enough to win. You can always look back for an excuse. The bottom line is we didn't put it in the net. We had some tough luck around the net."

Lafreniere added the final goal with 3:07 left of the power play. "We didn't play the way we're capable of playing," Turgeon said. "It wasn't an auspicious opening in any respect for the Whalers."

"We just didn't seem to have that work ethic that's made us so successful," Francis said. Evans couldn't put a finger on his club's listless appearance.

"There's no doubt everyone wanted to play well," the fifth-year Whaler mentor said. "Maybe they put a little pressure on themselves."

WHALER NOTES — For Turgeon. It was his 140th career goal and 25th career point. The Whalers' season opener record in the National Hockey League is 2-4-1. The Whalers' next game is Wednesday at home against the New York Rangers and Sunday they travel to Boston. Defenseman Ulf Samuelsson played his 200th career NHL game last night. Doug Jarvis, who holds the NHL record for consecutive games played, appeared in his 38th straight game Thursday night. — Quebec Coach

Andre Savard coached his first NHL game last night. Quebec outshot Hartford, 31-30. The Whalers were 1-for-8 on the power play. Ferraro and Dean Evason assisted on Turgeon's goal.

Hartford goalie Mike Lutz goes down to make a save on Quebec's Alain Cote in their NHL opener Thursday night at the Civic Center. The Whalers' 87-88 debut was anything but auspicious as they bowed, 5-1.

Minneapolis Dan Gladden slaps a single to left to score two runs in the fourth inning against the Tigers Thursday night at the Metrodome in Minneapolis. The Twins won, 6-3, to take a 2-0 lead in the American League Championship Series.

"I learned a long time ago, you better leave a sleeping dog alone, don't embarrass him. Whatever this stuff is with his glove and his arms — someday, that dog is going to wake up and bite him."

In the meantime, the Tigers have to bite the bullet if they're to get back into this series.

"We didn't expect this," Evans said. "It's not so much a shock because they've got a good ballclub. But we're not where we thought we'd be."

"It's been tough," Kirk Gibson said. "And it's going to get tougher. But it's also not a time to quit."

The Oct. 14 date of the meeting, came in for discussion, with some directors and residents charging that the petitioners selected deliberately to conflict with a meeting set by YES, the pro-agreement group.

O'Brien says questions legal

Former Town Attorney Kevin O'Brien said today the town has authority to put four questions before the proposed agreement between the town and the Eighth District. He was referring to the question that will be put on the ballot, despite reservations about the practice on the part of state election officials.

O'Brien is one of the members of the town team that negotiated the agreement.

His comment came in response to a published report that an election division official had doubts about the legality of placing the questions on the Nov. 3 general election ballot.

The election official reportedly said neither the town nor the district charters contain provisions that would support placing the questions on the November ballot.

Cities' league explains views of 8 candidates

The National League of Cities has learned the views of eight presidential candidates on tax issues. It feels are of high interest to municipal officials, and plans to make those views known through a 66-member nationwide Election '88 Task Force.

Stephen T. Casano, president-elect of the league's small cities division, led a news conference on the project last week at the Hartford offices of the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities. Casano, a Manchester town director, is active in CCM.

The conference was one of 10 held simultaneously in various cities. The task force sent questionnaires to 12 presidential candidates, and got responses from eight.

The responses came from Democratic hopefuls Bruce Babbitt, Michael Dukakis, Richard Gephardt, Albert Gore, Jesse Jackson, and Paul Simon, and from Republican candidates George Bush and Jack Kemp. Robert Dole, Alexander Haig, Pierre du Pont IV, and Marion Robertson did not reply.

The questions centered on education, drug abuse, poverty, children at risk, jobs and job training, infrastructure, housing and neighborhood revitalization, conservation and partnerships with local governments.

Casano said this is the first time a concerted effort has been made by representatives of local government to ask candidates to deal with questions that concern municipal governments.

He said he was particularly interested in responses to the question on education. Which of the three top priorities regarding the educational needs of this country, and what would you, as president, do to meet those needs?

Babbitt responded in part that he would expand the commitment "to the preschool years by creating a universal child development certificate to help working parents pay for quality day care. Bush advocated more funding for some educational programs, such as Head Start, and more funding for the disadvantaged. Dukakis said he would "stop the annual assault on Pell grants and loans to students." Among other steps, Gore said the nation must move to fuller school days and smaller classroom size to promote a more intensive learning experience. Jackson said he would favor doubling the federal education budget. "Out of every federal income tax dollar last year, two cents went to education and 15 cents went for military purposes. Kemp said the federal government has an important, though limited role, and should focus on how best to spend the $308 billion Americans spend on education every year. Simon favored more extensive early childhood programs and said the nation has to provide assistance to people in higher education.

Limping Cardinals may be also without Pendleton

By Paul LeBar
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The St. Louis Cardinals, already limping without slugger Jack Clark in their lineup, may also be minus a second cog for Game 3 of the National League playoffs.

Everyday Danny Cox would be unable to pitch Game 3 as previously scheduled.

"He hasn't pitched since last Thursday," Herzog said of Cox, who is recovering from a stiff neck. Cox originally was to have pitched Game 1. His place will be taken today by Joe Magrane, 9-7, a rookie left-hander.

In the continued absence of Clark, who hit 35 home runs and totaled 106 RBI before sidelined a month ago by an ankle injury. Jim Lindeman and Tony Pena are St. Louis' everyday players who bat from the right side.

Pendleton is one of six St. Louis switch-hitters. Pena, the team's regular catcher, also played some right-handed bats. Pendleton and Lindeman moves from first to right field, the switch-hitting Quisenberry would bat third and Steve Lake, a right-handed batter, would spell Pena as catcher.

Herzog, before being hit by the latest in a season-long string of Cardinals injuries, expressed guarded optimism.

"I don't think this park's that tough," he said of Candlestick, where St. Louis was swept by San Francisco in a four-game July series. "We've played good here at times; we've played bad here at times."

Herzog had been scraping for productive hitting from the right side to face left-hander Albie Mackmaker, 0-10, the Giants' Game 1 starter.

"Every day he gets a little bit better, but that's still not good enough," Herzog said of Clark, who has been undergoing daily treatment for his ankle injury. "I could use him to pitch hit. That's as far as I'd go with him."

Cox will definitely pitch on Saturday for the Cardinals, Herzog said.

Even before Pendleton was hurt, San Francisco renewed its verbal jabs against a St. Louis team that has been stopped on the basepaths while dividing the best-of-seven playoffs' first two games at home.

"We're definitely the underdog in this," Glants catcher Bob Brenley said of San Francisco. "We're a little bit of an underdog."

Players not so anonymous with 130 regulars back

By Barry Winer
The Associated Press

Who are those guys? That week NFL fans might have to ask that question so often.

The teams for Game 2 of NFL replacement football won't be quite so anonymous, thanks to 45 regulars who crossed the picket line this week. To date, 130 union members have returned to the replacement.

In San Francisco, fans might see 10 players who start for the 48ers on the field against Atlanta. The Los Angeles Raiders got back star defensive lineman Howie Long and Bill Finkel for their Monday night game against Denver, which will have four regulars.

Dallas, which didn't even need quarterback Danny White, running back Tony Dorsett and receiver Mike Renfro in beating the New York Jets last week, probably will use them against Philadelphia.

The winless Los Angeles Rams hope that six starters, including both kickers, give them the edge against Pittsburgh.

In other games Sunday, the Super Bowl champion New York Giants try to break their three-game slide against Washington, and Detroit, the only other 0-3 team, plays Green Bay.

Also, it's New Orleans at St. Louis, Minnesota at Chicago, San Diego at Tampa Bay, Buffalo at New England, Houston at Cleveland.

land, the Jets at Indianapolis, Kansas City at Miami and Cincinnati at Seattle.

The 48ers, whose replacements beat the Giants 41-21 last Monday night, could start quarterback Joe Montana, running backs Roger Craig and Joe Cribbs, wide receiver Dwight Clark and tight end Ron Heller on offense, plus safety-linebacker Jeff Fuller, linebacker George Cooper, cornerback Eric Wright and defensive linemen Dwaine Board and Pete Kugler. That might lead to a mismatch.

Thinking about just that, Falcons tackle Mike Kenn, who is honoring the strike, said, "That's why we're going to be insistent that the games not be canceled, because they will have four regulars."

Bill Fralic, Atlanta's other tackle, called the strikers back Mike Renfro in beating the New York Jets last week, probably will use them against Philadelphia.

turn, said only, "I was going crazy. I just had to do it. I had to do it."

Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said no reason he had to use any of his strikebreaking veterans on offense, but he did turn loose defensive lineman Tom Till Jones, Randy White and Don Smerek against New York.

"It's a lot easier to play defense and just go at it under these circumstances than to have players go on offense," Landry said. "They had gotten enough work in practice (before the Jets) game," he said.

Raiders Coach Tom Flores isn't concerned about using Long and Finkel in such a game. Both players wanted to come in last week, but Flores might not be pulling their strings Sunday.

"We have room to maneuver," the 48ers coach said. "This is a strong 'B' team that our veterans could come in with and play with these people and not just be a total mismatch of personnel."

Last week, Walsh asked several players to wait another week before crossing the picket line.

"I wouldn't want to try it again," Walsh said. "We don't really have any other choice. If they want to come back, our doors have to be open."

But Management Council spokesman John Jones conveyed a different, more optimistic picture of player benefits.

Not since the negotiations began has the union side had four straight days, a fact that left the NFL Players Association hopeful that a settlement could soon be reached.

"Gene thinks the talks have been fruitful and productive," NFLPA assistant director Doug Allen said.

On the critical subject of free agency, Jones claimed the union was standing by its demand for total freedom for a player sometime in his career, a demand management has insisted it will not grant.

Allen would not categorize the talks on free agency. But he did say Uplaw has not deviated from his promise, made to the union's player reps Tuesday morning, that he would not let one issue stand in the way of another.

The owners have insisted that the games, which almost certainly will be held this Sunday and Monday for a second week, will occur in the standings. Jones said management would no longer be content with a three-year contract, which had been informally agreed upon weeks ago.

The players want the games featuring replacement players to be dropped from the standings. Owners want the new contract to run at least six years.

"We don't want these games to count," Allen said. "We have the structure of the playoffs and playoff compensation contained in that collective bargaining agreement and these (strike) games have an impact on that agreement."

"Yesterday it was five years, today it's six," Allen said. "We'd better get this thing settled soon or we'll have a 15-year agreement."

Allen said the union was annoyed that the owners would back off on what they had agreed to in principle. He pointed out that on Wednesday, management said it wanted a contract that would last a minimum of five years.

Union paints optimistic picture as talks continue

By David Ginsburg
The Associated Press

TSYONS CORNER. Va. — As talks designed to end the NFL strike continued for the fourth straight day, union officials painted an optimistic picture while management remained cautiously unenthusiastic.

Union chief Gene Uplaw and management head Jack Donnan were to resume negotiations today. Day 18 of the strike, after a lengthy season that began Thursday morning and ended early Tuesday. Neither side would say how long the season lasted.

During the marathon meeting

Donnan and Uplaw touched upon one of the major issues, including free agency, guaranteed contracts, pension and severance pay.

The major issues that the sides could agree upon, however, were minor ones such as club discipline, player security and the retention of player benefits.

Not since the negotiations began has the union side had four straight days, a fact that left the NFL Players Association hopeful that a settlement could soon be reached.

Xavier big test for EC while MHS visits Public

By Jim Tierney
Herold Sports Writer

The East Catholic football machine will be put to the test Saturday night at 7:30 at Strong Field in Madison when it faces long-time rival Xavier High School of Middletown in a key All-Connecticut Conference matchup.

Currently, East is ranked No. 4 in the unofficial high school poll while Xavier is No. 7. Both clubs are 3-0 with the Eagles 1-0 in ACC play. This will be the Falcons' first conference game. East has accumulated 120 points in its three games and has allowed 21 points. Xavier has scored 54 points in three games and has given up just 10.

"There's no doubt that it's a big game," Eagle Coach Jack Kelly said. "We've always had great respect for the Xavier program and players."

East is coming off a 40-8 romp over Wilbur Cross High of New Haven while Xavier shut out Hand High of Madison, 22-0, last week. Kelly's main concern is the emotional aspect of this confrontation.

Eagle junior signal-caller Marc Mangialicco had a big game for East last week when he rushed for 123 yards and two touchdowns. He (Mangialicco) played very well," Kelly said. "He did a nice job of running the option."

Senior running back Shaun Robinson, who sprained his left ankle in the season opener against Westford, returned on defense last week and should see time at quarterback.

Meanwhile, the Manchester Indians (6-3, 0-1 in CCC East) will travel to Hartford Public (1-1, 0-1 in CCC East) Saturday for a 1:30 p.m. start in a CCC East game. Manchester is coming off a 24-8 loss to South Windsor while Public blanked Weaver High, 17-0, last week.

"We're trying to cut down on mistakes," Indian Coach Ron Cournoyer said. "It's going to be an emotional game. It's Xavier, you know you're going to be in for a game."

Quarterback Dave Derita, linebacker Matt McLaughlin and wide receiver Rich Replich are the key personnel for Xavier.

Adams makes some points with Canucks

By Ken Roppoport
The Associated Press

Talk about a guy trying to make points with his new employer. Greg Adams really made a big impression with the Vancouver Canucks. "Everything went right for me," Adams said after scoring four goals to tie a club record in the Canucks' 8-2 NHL victory over the St. Louis Blues on Thursday night. "It was one of those games when everything bounced my way, especially on rebounds."

Adams, acquired by the Canucks from New Jersey in an off-season deal, slumped to 20 goals last season after breaking into the NHL with the Devils two years ago with 28.

"I was disappointed last year and I feel a lot of pressure here because they expect me to score," said the native of Nelson, British Columbia. "Four goals should help me relax a little and have a good season."

Eight other games were played as the NHL opened its 71st season.

Elsewhere, Toronto beat Chicago 7-5, Quebec whipped Hartford 5-1, Montreal and Philadelphia traded to a 2-2 tie, Boston edged Washington 4-3, Minnesota tied Buffalo 2-2, Pittsburgh and the New York Rangers played to a 4-4 tie, the New York Islanders stopped Los Angeles 4-1 and Calgary turned back Detroit 5-1.

Adams scored twice in the first period and had single goals in the second and third. Two of the goals came on power plays and Tony Tanti assisted on all four.

Adams tied the Canucks' single-game record of four goals shared by Petr Brkro (1960), Rossie Fotheringham (1971), Bobby Schmutz (twice, 1972) and Rick Blight (1976).

Kirk McLean, also obtained in the deal with New Jersey, played a steady game in goal for the Canucks, who had four rookies in Their opening-night lineup. Coach Bob McCammon made his Vancouver debut.

Doug Wickens, a member of the Blues until the waiver draft Monday, Barry Pederson, Dave Bruce and rookie Dan Woodley completed the Vancouver scoring. Rick Meagher scored both St. Louis goals.

Leafs 7, Blackhawks 5

Tom Fergus scored midway through the second period, then set up Miroslav Frycer's goal with 16 seconds remaining in the period as Toronto beat Chicago.

The largest opening night crowd in the Blackhawks' 62-year history, 18,471, saw Toronto's Mark Osborne and Dan Daout score twice. With the score tied 3-3, an alert Fergus picked off an errant pass at center ice, passed, then scored on a return pass from Frycer at 11:47.

With a loose puck lying behind the Blackhawks' net near the end of the period, Fergus dug it out and passed in front to Frycer, who stuffed the puck under goaltender Bob Mason.

It was Bob Murdoch's first game as Chicago coach.

Canadiens 2, Flyers 2

Montreal's Claude Lemieux scored with 3:19 to play to give the Canadiens a tie against Philadelphia in a rematch of last year's Wales Conference final.

Lemieux took a pass from Bobby Petrillo (1986), Rossie Fotheringham (1971), Bobby Schmutz (twice, 1972) and Rick Blight (1976).

Kirk McLean, also obtained in the deal with New Jersey, played a steady game in goal for the Canucks, who had four rookies in last season's Stanley Cup playoffs. Philadelphia had taken a 2-1 lead at 3:35 of the third period on a power-play goal by rookie left wing Magnus Rupe.

Bruins 4, Capitals 3

Cam Neely scored on a pass from Geoff Courtnall with 2:08 remaining in the third period to lead Boston past Washington.

Boston rookie Bob Sweeney and Washington's Mike Gartner scored two goals each.

Sweeney, a former Boston College star who won a regular job with the Bruins at the outset of his second pro season, snapped a 2-2 tie by converting a rebound with a 16-foot shot midway through the final period.

North Stars 2, Sabres 2

Minnesota goalie Don Beaupre made 36 saves as the North Stars rallied from a 2-0 deficit. It was Herb Brooks' first game as coach of the North Stars.

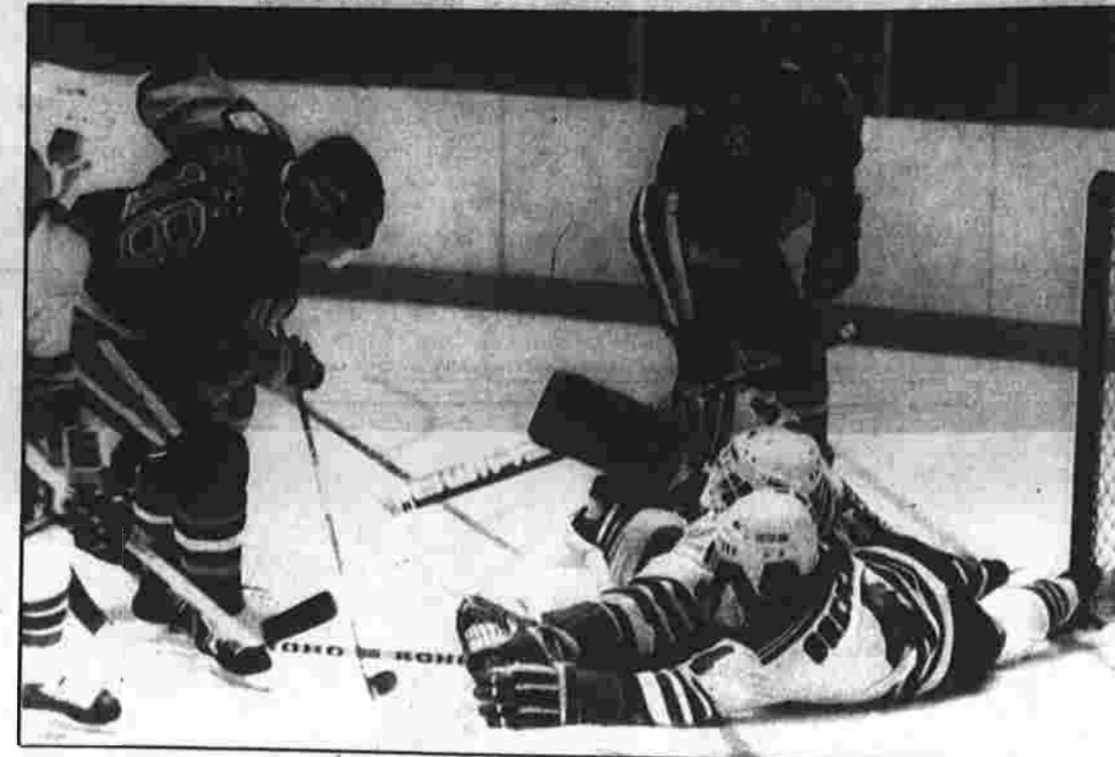

Neal Broten and Brian MacLellan scored the Minnesota goals, while the Sabres got goals from Scott Arnie and John Tucker early in the first period.

Before the first period was half over, the Sabres had a 2-0 lead. From then on, the North Stars controlled the game, with Broten scoring at 14:15 of the first period and MacLellan tying it up with the second period's only goal.

Penguins 4, Rangers 4

Walt Pate's goal at 9:41 of the third period gave Pittsburgh the lead. Pate, a former Ranger, tipped Moe Mantha's slapshot past Rangers goaltender Bob Sandstrom 15 seconds after Tomas Sandstrom's second goal of the period had given the Rangers a 4-3 lead.

The Penguins led 3-2 after two periods, with Mario Lemieux setting up all three goals. Walt Pate scored twice for the Islanders, including his 100th NHL goal.

The Rangers' Ron Greschner (4) and goalie Bob Froese (33) put their gloves together to block a shot by Pittsburgh's Craig Simpson (18) in their NHL opener Thursday night at Madison Square Garden. The clubs wound up in a 4-4 tie.

Flames 5, Red Wings 1

Jim Peplinski, Al MacInnis and rookie Brian Glynn scored first-period goals for Calgary.

Peplinski opened the scoring at 8:58 of the first period and MacInnis made it 2-0 on a power play at 13:34. Lee Norwood scored the Red Wings' only goal just eight seconds after MacInnis' goal, but Glynn gave the Flames a 3-1 lead with his first score as a professional at 16:46.

holding the Kings to one shot on goal in the third period.

Wood, who scored once in six games last year with the Islanders, fired a 35-foot slapshot through the legs of goalie Rolfe Melanson to give the Islanders a 2-1 lead with 15:51 to play.

The Islanders padded their lead with goals by Brent Sutter and Brian Trotter, extending the Kings' non-winning streak to seven in season openers. Los Angeles is 6-4-3 over the past seven years.

Dawkins deal a big gamble for Jazz

By Bob Black
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah Jazz President Dave Checketts admits he's taking a chance in trading for a backup center and promising guard for injury-prone Darryl Dawkins, but he's thinking about the payoff if the former New Jersey Net performs.

"Darryl Dawkins is a risk," Checketts said Thursday. "We're making an NBA trade that involved the Jazz, Nets and Cleveland Cavaliers. But at some point we're going to take these risks if you want to take the next step."

The Jazz acquired centers Dawkins and Mel Turpin in a complicated player shuffle designed to bolster Utah's front line.

It began with New Jersey sending Dawkins and forward James Bailey to Cleveland in exchange for guard John Bagley and forward Keith Lee. The Cavaliers then sent Dawkins and Turpin to Utah for playing in only six games in 1986-87 and 87 during the past three seasons.

Since March 1986, Dawkins has had two major back operations in which two discs were removed, but the Jazz didn't make a physical examination of Dawkins a condition of the trade.

"I'm not a doctor, but he looks in great shape to me," said Harvey LaKind, Dawkins' agent. "He certainly is a fan of (Jazz Coach) Frank Layden's and I think they'll get along famously. He's deterioratingly happy to get back into the game."

Dawkins' best NBA season was 1983-84 when he averaged 16.8 points and 6.6 rebounds per game for the Nets. He was drafted out of high school by Philadelphia in 1975 and was traded to the Nets in 1982.

Turpin, 26, a three-year player for Cleveland with a 10.4-point career average, scored 6.1 points per game in 64 games last season. Plagued by weight problems, the 6-11 former Kentucky star lost playing time when the Cavaliers drafted North Carolina's Brad Daugherty.

"I was pretty happy about it," Turpin said of the trade as he arrived in Salt Lake City on Thursday night. "I knew I was going to be traded but I didn't know to whom."

Turpin said he was unsure what his role with the team would be, but would meet with coaches later.

Layden said the acquisition of Dawkins and Turpin would help the Jazz against Midwest Division rival Houston, with its Twin Towers of Ralph Sampson and Akreem Olatunji.

In addition to backing up Eaton at center, both Dawkins and Turpin may see action at power forward, allowing Karl Malone to switch to small forward at times.

Meanwhile, Nets Coach Dave Wohl said the trade would help his squad in the frontcourt and backcourt.

Palmer contends he can still win

By Tom Solodino
The Associated Press

ROSOWELL, Ga. — Arnold Palmer says he still can win, has no excuses going wrong and a victory list this year with earnings of $192,910.

A third place finish in the Northwest tournament is the closest Palmer, 58, has come to winning.

"I could give excuses — business — not playing golf all the time, which is a major problem," said Palmer, who has not won since the 1985 Senior Tournament Players Championship, his ninth triumph since joining the senior tour in 1981.

"I've always said when I know in my mind that I can't win, I'm gone. You won't see me anymore," said Palmer, who won 61 PGA tournaments, including seven major titles and nearly $1.9 million.

"The problem has not been in striking the golf ball. It's been bad judgment, not getting the putts in the hole, a bad shot here or there."

But, Palmer said he was looking forward to the tournament.

"I certainly do not lack for enthusiasm when I play. I'll just go out this week and play and see what happens."

Arnold Palmer smiles as he catches the ball thrown by his caddy after making a birdie during Thursday's pro-am round of the PGA seniors tournament being played in Roswell, Ga.

Putting lesson helps Mahaffey at Pensacola

By Bill Kozzor
The Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. — John Mahaffey has finished second in two of the last three Pensacola Opens and his putter has started him on his way to the winner's circle this year.

Mahaffey said Bill Kratzert, who beat him here in 1984, gave him some putting lessons in April that paid off Thursday on the greens of the Perdido Bay Resort's 7,154-yard, par-71 course as the Houston native made four putts 20 feet or longer.

"He just gave me a couple of keys and it helped me," Mahaffey said after shooting a 5-under-par 66 in the opening round of the $300,000 tournament.

He added with a smile that he had better give Kratzert credit or he may not get any more help.

Kratzert, however, may be asking Mahaffey for some pointers after finishing the first round back in the pack with a 72.

"Suman said he has an extra bit of incentive this year at Pensacola one of the last events on the PGA Tour," because he is trying to secure a position for the Nabisco Championship that features the year's top 30 point-getters. He now ranks 27th.

Bobby Cole, Jeff Sluman, Phil Blackmar, Trevor Dodds and Danny Edwards, who defeated Mahaffey for the 1985 Pensacola Open title.

Blackmar leads the tour in eagles and he made his 13th of the year on the par-4, 418-yard third hole. His approach shot landed eight feet short of the pin and rolled in.

FOCUS/Weekend

Hot-air high in — and over — the Adirondacks

Story and Photos
By Mark F. Abrattis

GLENS FALLS, N.Y. — What better way to spend an autumn weekend than at the 15th annual Adirondack hot-air balloon festival in Glens Falls, N.Y. Especially because my wife, Rochelle, and I were going to take our first hot-air balloon ride during the festivities.

This annual event is usually held the third weekend in September, but poor weather forced it to be postponed a week. Balloonists from around the country participate in various contests that take place high above the Warren County Airport. Crowds can number more than 80,000.

Postponing this year's event did affect both the size of the crowd and the number of balloonists. Consequently, fewer than the 120 originally scheduled balloons went off and only about 20,000 people attended.

Balloons take off at sunrise and at sunset because that is when the winds are calmest. We arrived at the airport at 4:15 a.m. Sept. 26 and took our places behind the line of cars waiting to enter. As soon as we were inside the airport, we began to look for our pilot, Mike Bollea. Mike is from Farmington, and has been ballooning for more than three years. This year, he obtained his commercial pilot's license, allowing him to carry passengers. This was our third visit to the festival, but now we would be able to have a bird's-eye view of the liftoff.

ABOUT 6 A.M., the balloons were taken out of their nylon sacks and spread out on the grass. A gasoline-powered fan blew air into the balloon to partially inflate it, after which the propane gas burners were lit and the hot air completed the inflation. Soon we had all we could do to keep the balloon on the ground. Mike was going to attempt a simultaneous liftoff with a second balloon he'd brought. A crepe-paper banner was strung between the two balloons, making a rather impressive sight.

Rochelle and I hastily climbed into the woven wicker basket and, silently, with only the slightest hint of movement, we were up! Before I knew it, we had reached an altitude of 2,800 feet. It surprised me as I had been taking pictures and hadn't noticed the ground slipping away. What an experience!

SOMEHOW THE HEIGHT of the basket we'd just climbed into seemed to have shrunk, and was shrinking more with each foot of altitude we gained. Could this be possible?

It's odd the questions you can think of when you're at 3,000 feet. There's almost no sensation of movement at all, except, of course, when we had to change positions within the basket. That it rocked a bit, and the wicker gave a little creak. What a time to remember helping my mother take in the laundry in her although I'm definitely not ready for "around the world in 80 days."

Later that afternoon, the weather cleared and about 30 balloons took off. It was a beautiful sight — all those colorful balloons against a darkening sky, with the setting sun lighting them. Sunday was a much better day. There was a stillness in the morning that kept the balloons concentrated to the east, giving the sky a polka-dot effect. Even when we were heading for home at about 9 a.m., we could still see some balloons just hovering motionless over the Glens Falls area. They had to have been up for more than two hours. That's what I'd call hanging around!

Finally, I asked Mike the ultimate question I'd wanted to ask.

Do balloons like this crash very often?

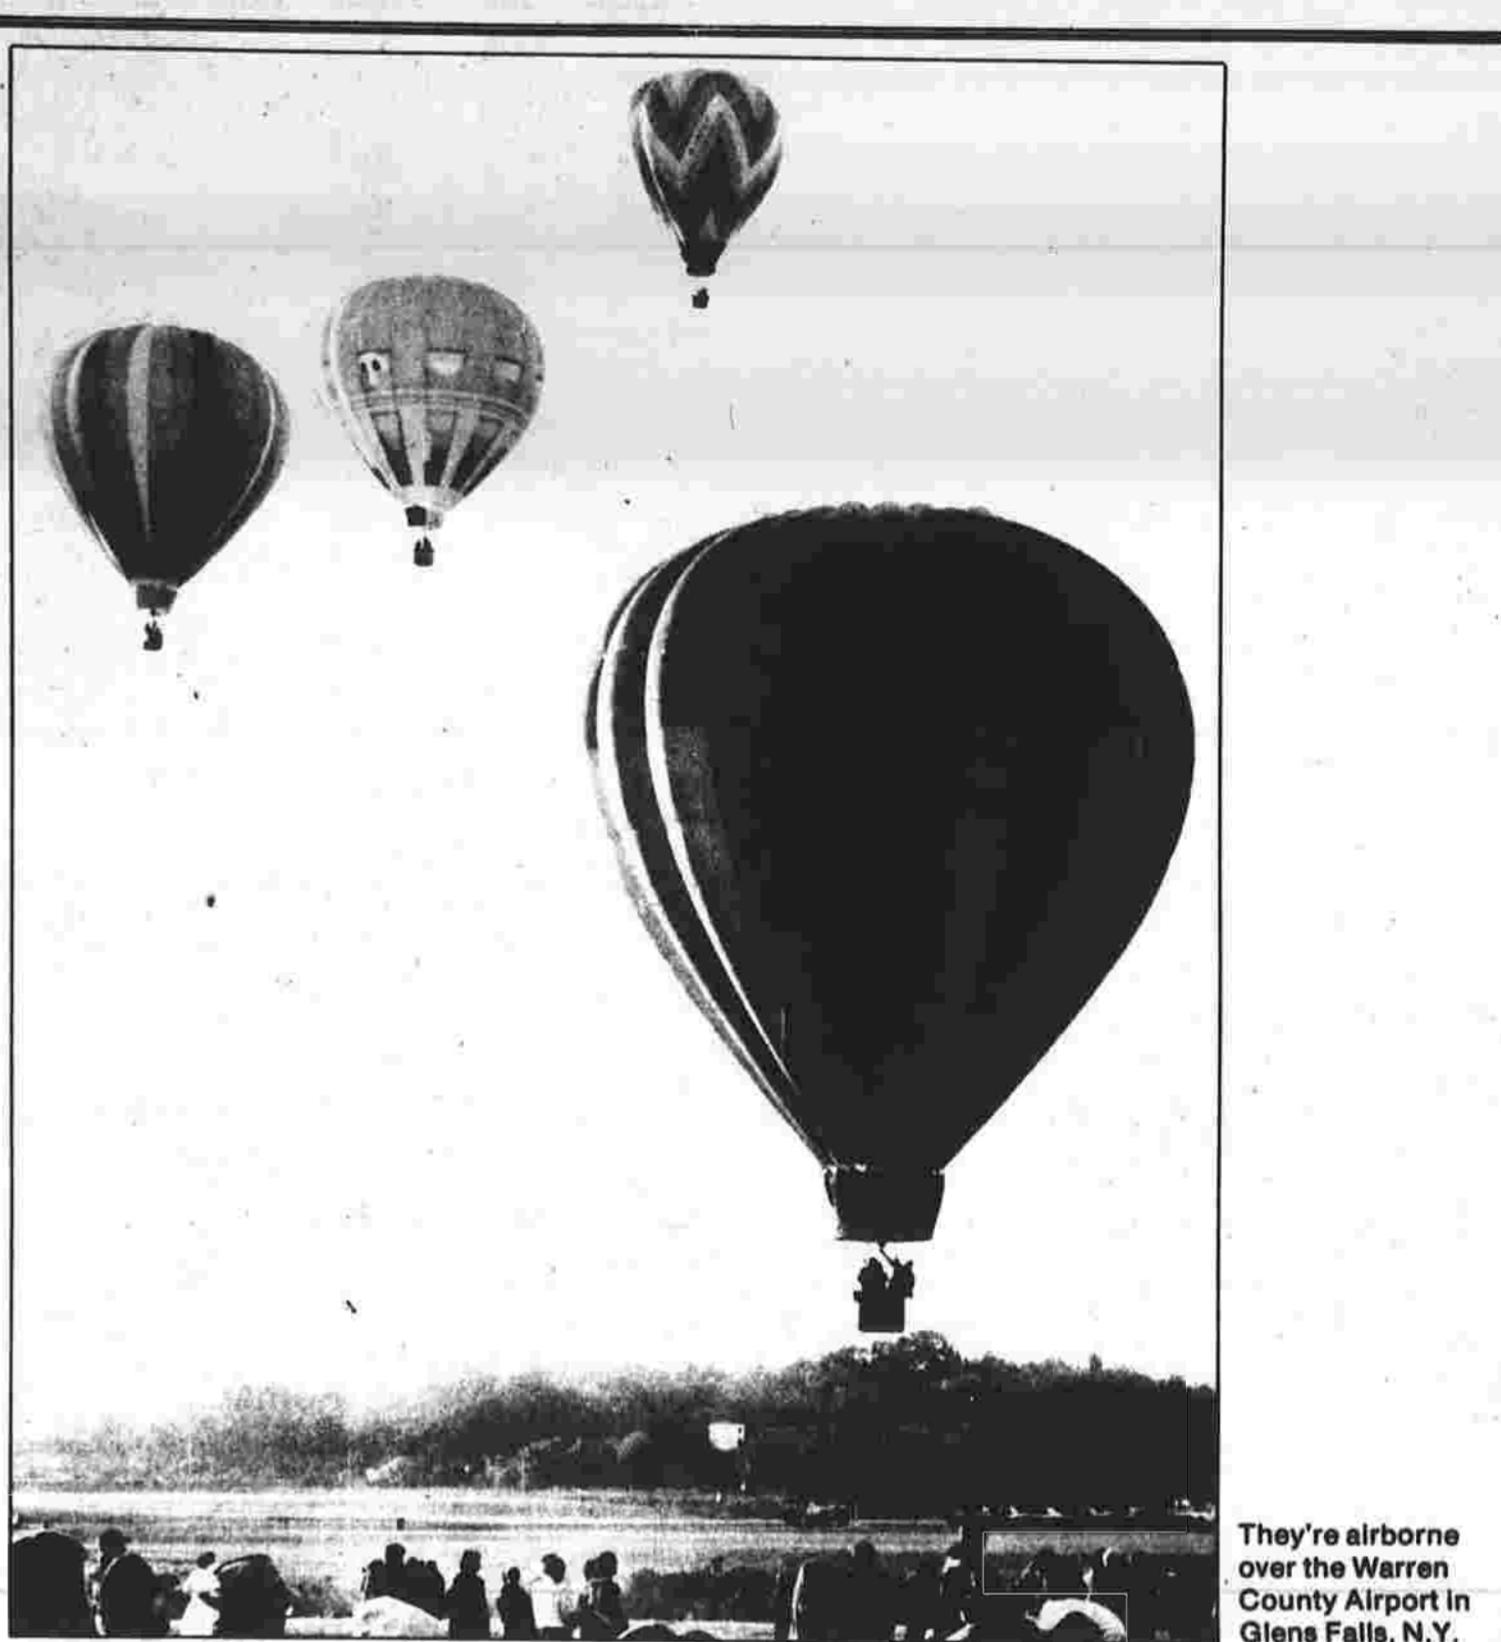

Nope, only once, he responded.

Mark Abrattis is the business manager of the Manchester Herald. His wife, Rochelle, is the principal of Robertson School.

Advice

Animal control officer pleads for help

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, you had a letter in your column that began: "I am your animal control officer..."

DEAR MILTON: That letter went up on the bulletin boards of many schools. Thanks for asking. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am your animal control officer. I am not the dreaded "dogcatcher" or the "murderer" you call me.

DEAR DR. GOTT: The tips of my fingers feel numb. I wouldn't worry, but my grandmother lost the first joints off of all her fingers before she died.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Whenever I have a bowel movement, within hours, fluid (and rarely feces) leaks and stains my underwear.

Equity loans beat new tax rules

Sylvia Porter

The tax reform act phases out the deduction for interest on personal loans, such as interest on car loans or credit-card balances for personal expenditures. You can deduct 65 percent of your personal interest payments for 1987, 40 percent for 1988, 20 percent for 1989 and 10 percent for 1990. The deduction is completely gone after 1990. But that's only part of the story.

You also must keep in mind this key point: The change applies to interest on personal debts you had before 1986 as well as new debts you took on later.

However, there is a way you can continue to deduct the full interest paid on personal debts in 1987, 1988, and for years to come.

If you have outstanding debts from credit card purchases, car financing and the like, consider consolidating them in a home equity loan. In brief, take out a new first or second mortgage in 1987 and use the proceeds to pay off the other debts, according to Eli J. Warach, chief editorial consultant of Prentice Hall Information Services Division.

Reason: Mortgage interest paid on your principal residence and one other home is exempt from the new crackdown. You can deduct all the mortgage interest you pay on amounts up to the original purchase price of the home (plus improvements) — even if the loan is not actually used to buy the home.

Example No. 1: Smith bought his home in 1980 for $100,000. Since then, Smith has put in a new swimming pool and a deck. The improvements cost $15,000. Smith has $80,000 of unpaid principal on his mortgage plus outstanding consumer loans of $25,000 on which he pays $2,500 in interest every year. Idea in action: Smith consolidated his consumer loans under a home equity loan at the end of 1986. Simply put, before the end of the year, Smith borrowed an additional $25,000 and paid off all his outstanding consumer loans.

Result: All the interest paid on the home equity loan is fully deductible because the total amount borrowed on loans secured by his home ($104,000) does not exceed the purchase price of the home plus improvements ($115,000).

By comparison: If Smith did nothing, his interest deduction in 1987 is $1,625 (65 percent of $2,500). Even if he didn't act before, Smith can do it now and deduct 100 percent of the interest in 1988. If he does nothing, his 1988 deduction on the $2,500 would be only 40 percent or $1,000.

But check how much you will pay to get an equity loan, cautions Warach. You have to pay the $25,000 in principal in either case.

Your equity loan may give you an additional break. Interest on mortgage debt gets special treatment under the reform law if the loan proceeds are used for educational or medical purposes for you, your spouse or dependents. In these cases, you can deduct all the interest you pay on a mortgage up to the fair market value of the home. The mortgage is not limited to your original purchase price. So you can tap your home's appreciation in value.

Example No. 2: Black bought his home for $100,000. The home is now worth $120,000. Black has $80,000 of mortgage principal outstanding on his home. He wants to borrow $20,000 for personal reasons and he also needs to borrow $10,000 to help pay for his daughter's college education.

Wrong way: Black borrows the $30,000 as a personal loan. Result: The interest deduction on the whole $30,000 of the loan is cut back.

Better way: Black borrows $20,000 for his personal expenses and $10,000 for the college expenses. But he uses a home equity loan. New result: he can deduct all the interest paid on the $30,000. The amount borrowed for personal reasons does not exceed the purchase price of his home. And he can deduct all the interest on the $10,000 educational loan since the mortgage debt incurred does not exceed the difference between the purchase price and value of the home.

Thoughts

In the medieval ages there was a man named Brother Lawrence. He worked in a monastery. He cooked, he washed pots and pans, he mopped floors, and did other types of janitorial work. The miracle of Brother Lawrence's life was that whatever he did, he did it for Christ. He wrote a little book that continues to be read by thousands. "The Practice of the Presence of God". The challenge of each day is to practice the presence of God. Christians say "Whatever you do, in word or deed, do everything in the name of the Lord Jesus."

Leaders see stable growth and no recession next year

By Marc H. Crotwell
The Associated Press

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—The nation will achieve moderate economic growth next year, with no threat of a recession, even though inflation and interest rates will be headed higher, top business leaders predicted today.

The Business Council, composed of 45 executives from America's largest corporations, forecast the economy will be spurred by the first improvement in the country's first-trade deficit this decade.

Despite the fact that the stock market suffered a record one-day decline earlier in the week, investors' fears about inflation and rising interest rates, the business executives said those concerns were being overblown.

"The overall view is that we will have relatively predictable and stable growth in 1987 and 1988," said John S. Reed, chairman of Citicorp.

The business executives forecast that the economic outlook was issued at the beginning of a three-day conference at this mountain-top resort where the executives will be briefed by Reagan administration officials including Attorney General Edwin Meese III, Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen, and Labor Secretary William E. Brock.

The focus of the council's fall meeting is on the problem of drug abuse and AIDS.

Robert D. Kilpatrick, chairman of CIGNA Corp., the large insurance company, said AIDS, which already has killed 24,000 Americans and is expected to claim 155,000 report reflects a consensus of views held by the council's consultants, who are chief economists for the member corporations.

Reed said the consultants believed there was less than a one-in-three chance the country would be gripped by severe inflation, which they defined as price increases of 8 percent or more.

Fears in financial markets that the Federal Reserve will have to tighten up on credit to dampen inflation have helped push interest rates up sharply in recent weeks.

The nation's major banks raised their prime rate, a benchmark rate for many business and consumer loans, to 8.25 percent on Wednesday, the fifth increase this year.

The Business Council said recent developments had forced a revision in their interest rate predictions as well, with a minority of the consultants warning that rates could climb by as much as 2 percentage points over the next year because of Federal Reserve tightening moves.

report reflects a consensus of views held by the council's consultants, who are chief economists for the member corporations.

Reed said the consultants believed there was less than a one-in-three chance the country would be gripped by severe inflation, which they defined as price increases of 8 percent or more.

Fears in financial markets that the Federal Reserve will have to tighten up on credit to dampen inflation have helped push interest rates up sharply in recent weeks.

The nation's major banks raised their prime rate, a benchmark rate for many business and consumer loans, to 8.25 percent on Wednesday, the fifth increase this year.

more lives in the next four years, was "costly at this point, in a financial sense."

But he said officials were still trying to come to grips with the problem, and "every time you see a new set of figures (on estimated cases) they are worse than the last set."

In other economic predictions, the business executives said:

• The unemployment rate, which fell below 6 percent in September for the first time this decade, will remain around 6 percent for the rest of this year and 1988.

• The federal budget deficit improved to around $160 billion in the budget year just ended, down from a record $211 billion deficit in 1986. However, the deficit was forecast to rise again to $187 billion in 1988.

• While the U.S. trade deficit has been shrinking on a volume basis because of rising sales of American exports, this has not been reflected yet in dollar terms because of rising import prices.

The executives forecast a trade deficit of $100 billion in 1987, surpassing last year's record $137 billion deficit. In 1988, they forecast the trade deficit would shrink for the first time since 1982 to around $140 billion.

Ruben Mettler, chairman of TRW Inc., said his company's export sales of auto parts has benefited considerably from the lower value of the dollar against other currencies.

"We are now shipping parts into Germany, into Japan and even into Korea from the United States. That is a big, big change," he said.

The nation's largest general retailers on Thursday reported a moderate improvement in their September sales, although it was mainly because most people had put off back-to-school buying.

UAW-GM accord achieves goals of union and company

By Janet Brounstein
The Associated Press

DETROIT—United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. officials say their tentative contract agreement achieves union goals of protecting job security and company goals of cutting costs.

Neither union nor management, however, was releasing details of the pact.

The agreement must be approved by a meeting Sunday of the 23-member UAW executive board and a meeting Monday of the 300-worker GM bargaining council before it can be ratified by the 385,000 active UAW workers at GM.

UAW officials announced the settlement late Thursday.

The UAW's contract with the nation's largest automaker will be a basis for agreements for 31,000 additional GM hourly workers represented by other unions and will influence contracts throughout U.S. manufacturing.

"UAW members at General Motors have unfortunately become demoralized because of the layoffs and cutbacks here," said union President Owen Bieber. "The new agreement that we've reached here will help to turn that around by providing a stronger basis for job security and a stronger sense of attachment to this corporation and its future."

GM's chief negotiator, Alfred Warren, also touted the contract's "unprecedented job security" but at the same time he said it will help the company cut its costs. GM officials had said they needed flexibility in a new contract to trim the work force and buy more parts from outside the company.

Industry analysts originally predicted a long and bitter strike at GM, which has announced plans to close 16 plants and consolidate work performed at four others by the end of 1990. Three of the plants have closed and three more are scheduled to shut in December.

They said GM workers were angry for much of the year because Ford workers received profit-sharing checks averaging $2,100 for 1986 while GM workers received none. Meanwhile, GM earned $3.9 billion and executives shared $170 million in bonuses.

The UAW began talks in late July with both GM and Ford, whose contracts expired Sept. 14. On Aug. 21, the UAW decided to settle first with Ford, and extended GM's contract indefinitely. The UAW turned its attention to GM last week.

Buick's New Regal Custom is Customer Oriented!

Any car that offers the customer as much as the new Buick Regal, in terms of performance, handling, and styling, must be said to be "customer oriented." The new Regal takes that phrase a step further, though. Myriad details show that the Regal was designed for real drivers in the real world, not merely as an exercise in state-of-the-art engineering.

"Quality is our first customer priority," says David S. Sharpe, Buick's general engineering and planning manager, whose mission it has been to maintain the Regal's product focus since the car's inception. "The words are easy but the execution is what we're trying to accomplish."

Take the hidden wet arm windshield washer, for example. In some cars, when you turn on the windshield washer at 60 mph, the spray shoots over the roof of your car. In the new Regal, the washer nozzle is built into the washer arm itself, so you end up washing only your own windshield, not the windshield of the car behind you.

As another example, consider what happens if a driver has to stop the car at night to look under the hood. First, the hood lifts easily and stays up, thanks to new gas struts that replace the former spring supports. Second, there is an underhood light on a retractable cord, enabling the driver to light any part of the engine compartment, then quickly store the light away for next time.

The new Regal is on display at Clyde Chevrolet-Buick, Route 83 in Vernon. The dealership is open Monday through Thursday until 8 p.m., Fri. & Sat. until 5 p.m. Call anytime. 872-9111.
