TREATY DUE BY SUMMIT

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced Friday he would meet here Dec. 7 with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and expects to sign a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Reagan said he hoped to visit Moscow next year and sign a second pact to slash their long-range arms by 50 percent. A joint announcement said the summit was envisaged for the first half of 1988.

The treaty to eliminate U.S. and Soviet missiles with ranges of 215 to 3,125 miles is still not finished. But Secretary of State George P. Shultz said confidently: "We will get that treaty done before the summit. You can be sure of that."

Among the remaining issues is whether Soviet inspectors will be stationed at bases in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium where the U.S. missiles are deployed. Shultz said at a news conference.

Gorbachev estimated in a letter to Reagan it would take two or three weeks to clear up all the details, said a White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We're down to the short strokes," he said.

The scheduling of Gorbachev's first visit to America sharply reversed his hesitation only last week to set a date for his third summit meeting with Reagan.

But Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, standing next to the president, insisted "There was no flip-flop," and Reagan avoided any direct criticism of the Soviet leader.

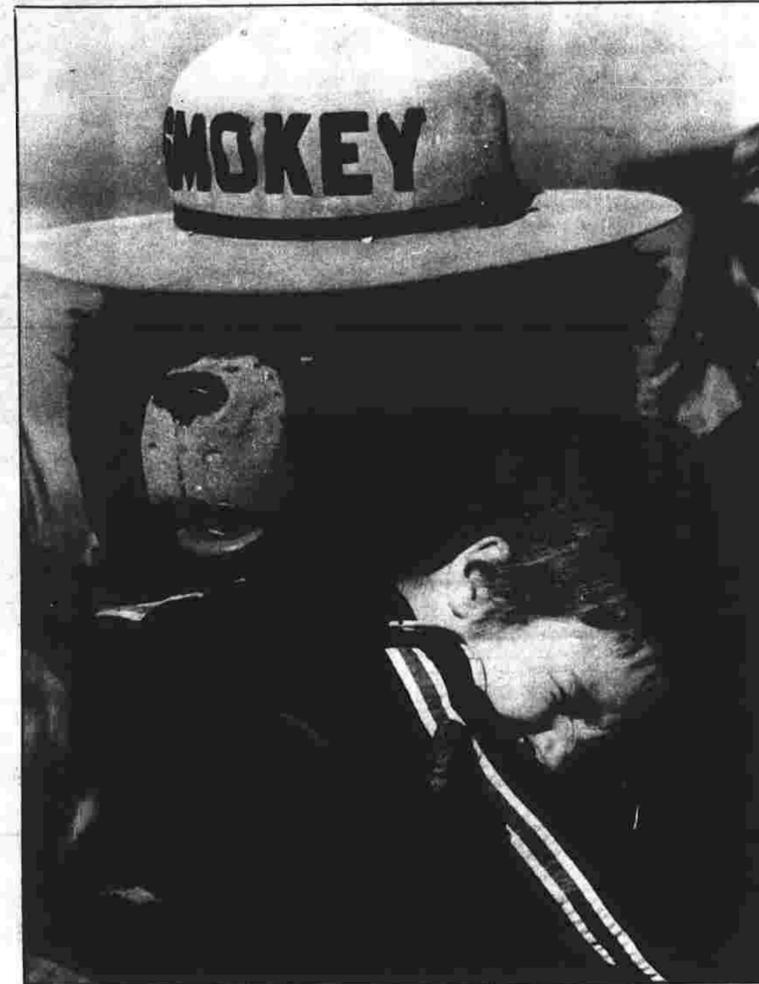

"There never has been to my knowledge any negative from him," he said.

The visit evidently will be confined to Washington. Reagan said "scheduling problems" on both sides precluded a tour of other parts of the United States. A White House official said the summit would last two or three days.

On Capitol Hill, the reaction was generally positive, but congressional leaders said any arms pact would be scrutinized "with our guard up and our ears open."

Many senators said they must be assured that Soviet compliance with the treaty can be adequately verified before approving it. Others said the West must quickly move to modernize conventional forces in Europe in the aftermath of agreement to eliminate the shield represented by U.S. intermediate and shorter-range

Many get a jump on Halloween with ghostly fun and frolicking

By Andrew J. Davis
Herald Reporter

Ghosts, goblins and witches were out in force Friday night, the night before Halloween.

Halloween parties and fairs were not hard to find as many people took to early celebrating. The Lutz Children's Museum, the Mahoney Recreation Center, and Illing Junior High School had parties. The Manchester Jaycees also held a pre-Halloween fair.

The museum was packed as children and their parents learned the meaning of the word "wait." People stood in long lines to enter the haunted house, the arts and crafts room, and a refreshments area. All in all, though, the waiting was worth it to Nora P. Sollecito, who came to the museum with her daughters, Amanda and Alycia.

"It was a big turnout," she said as she held 1-year-old Alycia on her lap. "It was a lot of waiting, but it's nice what they had for the kids."

The museum has had the program for about eight years, said Susan Craig, the museum's naturalist. She dressed as a scarecrow for the festivities. The museum has averaged 900 people each year for the program, which continues tonight at 8 for members and 7 for non-members.

Illing Junior High School got into the act, too. The school held a dance, requiring students to bring canned goods as the price of admission. The food will go to the Manchester Area Conference of Churches. Bennet Junior High School also had a dance for charity. Its event benefited UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund.

The Jaycees teamed with the Manchester Parkade Merchants Association to put on a party at the Cutter Operating Corp. offices at the Parkade.

About 50 people attended the celebration during the first hour, said Thomas P. DeGrimmis, the party's co-chairman. It will continue today from 4 to 8 p.m.

At the Mahoney Recreation Center, about 200 people lined up for games, a costume contest and a trip through the haunted house. This was the sixth year the town's recreation department has held a Halloween party, said Liz A. Mielcarz, gymnasium director.

"We have it as an alternative from going house to house," she said. "It's just a community event. People can be sure it's a safe event."

It also was a scary event, said 12-year-old Jason D. Varney. He and 12-year-old Gary W. Bacon were pale as ghosts after going through the haunted house.

"I thought it was a scream," Jason said.

Judge lets Houdini seance go on CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A judge Friday denied a request to halt a telecast of a live Halloween special on escape artist Harry Houdini after a protest developed over a seance in the show.

Community activist Dan Martino filed a $6 million lawsuit in Chancery Court, arguing the nationally syndicated show would violate an old city law against fortune-telling.

He also sought a restraining order to block the broadcast Saturday of "In Search of Houdini," by WTVC, the local ABC affiliate. The show includes a seance trying to contact Houdini on the first anniversary of his death.

Chancellor R. Vann Owens denied the motion, citing prior restraint of freedom of expression, among other things.

Martino vowed to go to federal court and said he would pursue damages in the Chancery Court suit. Defendants include the television station, general manager Lewis Robertson, and actor William Shatner, host of the show.

"The lawsuit goes on," Martino said. "I think what we have done is alerted a lot of parents to the program. This will not boost their ratings. If anything, it will have the reverse effect."

"There is a Chattanooga city code — whether you like the code or not, whether you think it's a good code — that restrains activity of occult nature for profit."

Dems knock Reagan pose on Ginsburg

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic senators on Friday accused President Reagan of taking a confrontational approach on Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg.

The nominee himself, largely unknown to many in the Senate, made a quick trip to the Capitol and met with key lawmakers in their offices.

Less than 24 hours after Reagan nominated the 41-year-old appellate court judge, senators began a series of floor speeches with two basic messages: Keep an open mind and hold down the rhetoric.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said he thought Reagan's announcement of the Ginsburg nomination was "rather confrontational and combative. I don't understand why the president ... would start off with that sort of an attitude."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said, "No president is going to stampee this Senate into acting with undue haste as long as I'm majority leader. I hope the White House will restrain its collective tongue on this matter."

Reagan said in his announcement that if Ginsburg's confirmation hearings "take more than three weeks to get going, the American people will know what's up."

Byrd and Bumpers both called for fair hearings and urged senators not to make early judgments. Those thoughts were echoed by three crucial swing-vote senators on the Judiciary Committee — Howell Heflin, D-Ala.; Arlen Specter, R-Pa.; and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

All three voted against the president's previous nominee, Robert H. Bork, whose nomination was defeated 58-42.

Specter said, "A presumption of innocence is equally applicable to a nominee to the Supreme Court of the United States. ... We really do have to hold back."

Ginsburg was accompanied in his Capitol visits by White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., who was reported to have lost an internal battle with Attorney General Edwin Meese III over whom should be nominated.

Meese reportedly favored Ginsburg, who is known as a staunch conservative. Baker was said to want the more moderate U.S. Circuit Judge Anthony M. Kennedy of Sacramento, Calif.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater denied Friday that the widely reported rift took place.

Ginsburg's first stop was at Heflin's office. When Bork was on his courtesy calls, he made Heflin his last visit among Judiciary Committee members, even though it was known the senator's vote could be crucial not only in committee but among Southern Democrats.

Heflin is respected on judicial matters in that bloc, because he is a former chief justice of the Alabama Supreme Court.

Asked in Heflin's office if he looked forward to the confirmation process, Ginsburg told reporters, "I do. I've been through it two times before and I look forward to this one more than ever."

Ginsburg previously was confirmed as assistant attorney general in charge of antitrust in 1983, and a year ago as a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Bork serves on the same court.

"My first impression is that he will not be as controversial," Heflin said after the 20-minute meeting. "That's a first impression, but I reserve judgment on it."

Heflin said he asked Ginsburg how many opinions he has written in the year he has been on the federal bench, how many times he has dissented from opinions and about his writings before becoming a judge. But the senator said there wasn't time for a substantive discussion on those matters.

Asked to compare his first impressions of Ginsburg with those of Bork, Heflin said, "He (Ginsburg) was much more relaxed. I felt like Bork, the first time I talked to him, was a little more tense."

And he said that Ginsburg's relative youth would not be a problem. Heflin commented, "Age has got nothing to do with this overall situation. Some of the greatest contributions to civilization were made by people at early ages."

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., also met with Ginsburg, telling reporters beforehand, "I have a completely open mind."

President Reagan, joined by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Secretary of State George Shultz, meets with reporters at the White House

Friday. It was announced that a superpower summit will begin Dec. 7 in Washington between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Gorbachev to visit Washington; Reagan expects to sign treaty missiles there. In announcing his determination to pursue a treaty to cut back on long-range bombers, missiles and submarines, Reagan said he was not retreating on his "Star Wars" missile-defense program, known officially as the Strategic Defense Initiative or SDI.

"I made it clear, and they did not reject this, there is no way we can give up SDI, which we believe is offering an opportunity for peace in the world," he told reporters in the White House briefing room.

Gorbachev has tried to restrict the SDI anti-missile program, saying it threatens to extend the nuclear arms race. But Reagan suggested the Soviet leader would not hold up a treaty in an effort to stop the program, known popularly as "Star Wars."

"It is no longer put down as a flat demand," Reagan said.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze stood at his side, beaming his approval of the president's remarks.

Reagan indicated Gorbachev's visit would be restricted to Washington.

Asked about a summit on the 46th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Reagan said: "I thought to myself, wouldn't it be wonderful if Pearl Harbor Day would become superseded by the day that we began the path to peace and safety in the world."

At the same time, the president avoided any direct criticism of Gorbachev, who only last Friday backed away from setting a date to visit.

"There never has been to my knowledge any negative from him," Reagan said.

The Soviet leader backed off after Secretary of State George P. Shultz told him he could not guarantee a summit would produce an agreement on ways to defend against missile attack.

Several senior U.S. officials speculated Gorbachev might be experiencing political difficulties at home. But Shultz said on the way home from Moscow last Friday that the "pieces of evidence" he had seen did not support the theory.

Shevardnadze delivered a message to Reagan from Gorbachev. As he left the State Department for the White House after three hours of talks with Shultz, he flashed a thumbs-up sign.

As Shevardnadze entered the State Department building, he joked: "Well, we meet with you sometimes at least twice a week, but it's a good sign. That means work is going ahead, and when people are at work results also come. The rest of it I'll say to you after the talks."

The foreign minister then repeated what he said when he was here last month for talks: "I'm a natural optimist."

At the end of Shevardnadze's visit last month the two sides issued a statement saying Reagan and Gorbachev would meet in the fall. A precise date and site were not announced.

Shultz then went to Moscow expecting to get a proposal from Gorbachev and also to clear some of the remaining hurdles to a treaty to ban U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Before summit planning fell through, the two sides reached agreement on a schedule for dismantling the missiles and to deal with U.S. nuclear warheads atop 72 West German rockets in a protocol. U.S. officials said the warheads would be removed and withdrawn to the United States within three years.

Tracy Chartier and her daughter, Jennie Lee, watch balloons sail over Keeney Street School Thursday. The two were at the school for a dedication ceremony honoring reading teacher Jacqueline Wagner, who died of cancer in March. Standing next to Chartier is her father, Ted Wagner.

Teacher remembered at Keeney St. School

By Andrew J. Davis

Hundreds of students lined the outside walkway at Keeney Street School Thursday afternoon to pay tribute to a former teacher.

The 420 students, teachers and visitors paid tribute to reading teacher Jacqueline Wagner, who died March 18 of cancer. She was a teacher at Keeney Street School for six years. She had taught previously at Lincoln, Verplanck, and Washington schools.

"I want you all to think of the happy times when you read with Mrs. Wagner," said school Principal Francis J. Amara. "That's what I want you to think about." Amara spoke during a short dedication ceremony of a flower bed in front of the school.

After his speech, the students and adults released about 25 balloons into the air. Attached to the balloons were cards containing messages of sympathy and the name of each homeroom's favorite book. The students cheered as they watched the balloons sail toward Hartford Road.

The school also dedicated a book shelf in the school library after Wagner. Because she loved ducks and swans, books about the animals had been chosen to adorn the shelf. Books such as "The Runaway Duck," "One Duck, Another Duck," and "Rumpelstiltskin" will be included on the shelf.

Wagner's husband, Ted, and her two daughters, Robin Wagner and Tracy Chartier, attended the ceremony. Jennie Lee Chartier, Wagner's granddaughter and a kindergarten student at Keeney Street School, also attended.

Robin Wagner said that the dedication was special to her family, but above all, she wanted to thank the school staff for its support.

"The entire staff was fantastic during her illness," she said, her eyes filling with tears. "They have a great staff here."

Aparo defendant hospitalized

HARTFORD (AP) — A defendant charged with hindering prosecution in the slaying of a Glastonbury woman has been hospitalized, forcing prosecutors to delay his case and that of a co-defendant.

Christopher Wheatley, 28, and Kara Lintner, 17, were scheduled to appear in Hartford Superior Court Thursday, but both cases were continued until Nov. 5.

Wheatley is in the psychiatric ward of Manchester Memorial Hospital, a spokeswoman from the hospital said.

William Fisher, one of Wheatley's attorneys, declined to comment as did Assistant State's Attorney James E. Thomas.

The two are charged with hindering prosecution of the case against Dennis Coleman, 19, of Glastonbury, in the strangulation death of Joyce Aparo who was killed in her home Aug. 5.

The woman's daughter, Karin, 16, has been charged with conspiracy and being an accessory to murder in the case. Coleman was her boyfriend, authorities say.

Laser war is headed for court

By Andrew J. Davis
Herald Reporter

The battle over Laserquest is headed for the courtroom again.

The Manchester Zoning Board of Appeals and town Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas R. O'Marra have been ordered to appear in Rockville Superior Court on Nov. 17 to answer an appeal filed by Laser Games of Hartford, said Jeanne Bromley, spokeswoman for Laser Games of Hartford. The company claims that the ZBA acted illegally earlier this month when it sided with Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer B. Clevenger Jr., who claimed Laserquest was not a permitted use of the former Mott's supermarket on East Middle Turnpike, she said.

The Clevengers were victorious Oct. 13 when they appealed an Aug. 7 decision by O'Marra that stated Laserquest was a permitted use. Laser Games says in its appeal filed Wednesday that the ZBA was wrong when it sided with the Clevengers.

Laser Games also claims in its appeal that the Clevengers had filed their appeal after deadline. The Clevengers, who live next to the former supermarket, filed their appeal on Aug. 25, though O'Marra had made his original decision on Laserquest in April, the appeal states. That is far past the 20-day deadline for appeals stated in the Manchester Zoning Regulations, the appeal states.

The appeal also contends that the ZBA was incorrect when it denied Laser Games appeal of the Clevenger's decision. Laser Games appeared before the ZBA Monday to appeal the Oct. 13 decision, but it was denied without testimony. The appeal states the ZBA failed to exercise its duties to review the orders of O'Marra when it denied the appeal.

On Nov. 12, the issue also will be heard in Rockville Superior Court to determine whether a town ordinance that bars Laserquest from opening is legal. The ordinance, passed in July by the town Board of Directors, prohibits amusement centers measuring more than 5,000 square feet from operating within 1,000 feet of senior citizens' housing, convalescent homes, schools, hospitals, and churches. The Laserquest building is within 1,000 feet of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

Laser Games was granted a temporary injunction earlier this month that would prevent the town from enforcing the ordinance only in the case of Laserquest, and only in the case of the proposed site at 587 E. Middle Turnpike. The temporary injunction replaces an injunction granted Laser Games in August.

"Having lived in Houston, Texas, where development was rampant and the sense of community destroyed, I know the importance of careful planning," he said. "I feel bringing that perspective to the council — a new perspective — will be a plus."

Bray said the GOP slate is stressing economic development. The rest of the council ticket includes Jane Ferry, retired from Aetna Life and Casualty Co., Frederick Pogmore, a retired conservation officer, and James O. Sullivan, an instructor at Manchester Community College and a retired quality assurance manager for Pratt & Whitney.

Coventry GOP hanging tough

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — Despite some tough blows, the Republican candidates for the Nov. 3 election are hanging in there.

"Yes, we've had some rough breaks, but you have to duck 'em and bob around," said GOP Chairman Al Bray. "We have good candidates who can really perform if they get in."

Bray was referring to the Republicans' inability to fill the Town Council slate. With four people running, they are short one contender. The deadline to fill that spot was Monday.

Throughout the campaign, the GOP has been short on funds, forcing some candidates to finance their own campaigns.

And the seeming final blow came when Michael Cleary surprised members by resigning as GOP chairman less than a month before election, after announcing that he had become discouraged that the party had so little spirit.

Bray, appointed by the committee as chairman Tuesday night, has picked up the pieces and gone on.

"We're willing to commit our time and our energy," agreed candidates Patricia and Mark Soltys.

Patricia Soltys, 33, is a candidate for the Board of Education. She is northeast district director for Century 21. Her husband, 33, is an information systems supervisor for Pratt & Whitney and is running for Town Council. The couple have two children and have lived in town for one year. Although neither has previously held public office, they have been active in the community and were host family to a visiting English student during the town's recent 275th anniversary celebration.

"We have a vested interest in the community. Our children attend school here and we own property," Patricia said.

The other school board candidates are: Ellen Sullivan, Robert Christie and Thomas Sohr. Sullivan is retired from Travelers Insurance. Christie is a local legal analyst for Aetna Insurance, and Sohr is an engineer at the Hartford Boiler Inspection and Insurance Co.

In a prepared statement, the Republican candidates suggested that the school system should be run more like a business.

"While the object is education, administering the multi-million dollar budget demands the same caliber of management skills required to operate a successful, future minded business," the statement reads. Also, the school board candidates emphasized the need to deal with the increased rate of housing construction, which is likely to yield increased numbers of students.

Growth of the town appears to be the issue most on the minds of the Republican candidates for the Town Council. They say the completion of the Route 6 expressway will likely bring a building boom to town.

"The most important matter facing the town is updating the master plan of development to take us through the year 2,000," said Mark Soltys. "I will emphasize the need to 'formalize' our current planning efforts into the master plan. All planning efforts would be directed to 'deliver' the updated master plan."

Soltys said the town must expand its tax base by attracting new commercial development to ease the tax burden on residents. However, he cautioned, the council must still protect the town's sense of community.

"Having lived in Houston, Texas, where development was rampant and the sense of community destroyed, I know the importance of careful planning," he said. "I feel bringing that perspective to the council — a new perspective — will be a plus."

Bray said the GOP slate is stressing economic development. The rest of the council ticket includes Jane Ferry, retired from Aetna Life and Casualty Co., Frederick Pogmore, a retired conservation officer, and James O. Sullivan, an instructor at Manchester Community College and a retired quality assurance manager for Pratt & Whitney.

Democratic slate in Coventry anxious to get the job done

By Jacqueline Bennett
Herald Correspondent

COVENTRY — With a majority of incumbents on the ticket, the Democrats are heading for the Nov. 3 election with a desire to get on with their work.

"There are a number of projects we have begun we would like to complete," said Joan Lewis during an informal gathering of the candidates Tuesday night at the Democratic headquarters on the corner of Lake and Main streets.

Lewis, 50, is the chairwoman of the council, which has a Democratic majority. She is one of three incumbents running for re-election to the council.

"We want to review and implement the recommendation of a current study due Nov. 12 to encourage economic development. We plan to revise the town master plan to encourage economic development, but we must also encourage tourism, agriculture, and existing commercial business to continue and expand," Lewis said.

In other interviews she has said the incumbents would like to continue efforts to improve the recreational playing fields in town.

"ANOTHER CRITICAL issue is the handling and disposal of solid waste," said Lewis. She would like to continue the study by the Solid Waste Commission, which was appointed by the current council.

The other incumbents are Rose Marie Fowler, 45, and Elizabeth Paterson, 46, current vice chairwoman. New to the ticket are Alvah H. Phillips, 59, a professor of molecular biology at the University of Connecticut and past chairwoman of the Democratic Town Committee, and Richard Paton, 43, director of corporate risk and safety management at the Travelers Insurance Cos. in Hartford.

All the candidates have lived in town for a number of years and been active in the community. Paton served on the Board of Personnel Appeals, and Phillips is a member of the Coventry Historical Society. Lewis chaired a previous council and was a member of the Board of Education for 10 years.

FOWLER IS a past chairman of the town council and chaired the Economic Development Commission. Paterson served on a previous council, the Water Pollution Control Authority, and Zoning Board of Appeals.

"There's a lot to be done. We want to get on with our work," Fowler said recently.

Lewis, a paralegal for a Vernon law firm, was elected in 1985. Paterson, a loan assessment officer at the University of Connecticut, was appointed by the town manager to fill a spot left vacant by a resignation. Fowler, a payroll personnel assistant for the Mansfield Board of Education, won her seat in a special election held in March of this year.

Included on the slate for the Board of Education are four incumbents. They are Chairwoman Judith Halvorson Lawrence Mickel, Kathleen Ryan and John Fleming.

"I would like to see completion of the building projects," Halvorson said Tuesday. "I would like to see that the school district accommodates the expanding population and our buildings are brought into compliance with health and safety codes."

HALVORSON, 44, is a six-year incumbent and a primary school teacher in Chaplin. Mickel, 50, has been on the board four years. He is a principal in South Windsor where he is a member of the board's Teacher Negotiations Committee. He is also Coventry's representative to EASTCONN, an educational consortium.

Fleming, 40, is a physician's assistant in Manchester, and Ryan is an educator at Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School in Manchester. Both filled seats left vacant on the board by resignations.

Among the achievements the current Democratic majority points to are the establishment of a foreign language program in grades 7 and 8, and renovation of Robertson School.

City asks kids to give up guns

HARTFORD (AP) — Law-enforcement authorities on Friday pleaded with gun-toting youths and their parents to surrender their illegal weapons under a partial amnesty program, but officials conceded that they expected few to respond.

Hartford police, reacting to a rash of random shootings that have left two people dead, said they will do ballistics test to determine only if the weapons have been used in any crimes.

"If they're transporting it down here to the police station, we're not going to arrest them for carrying a weapon without a permit," said police Lt. James Looby.

"But if it was used in a serious crime, then that's a different story. We don't want people to say, 'I can get rid of the evidence by turning it into the police department.'"

Police said they would accept the weapons at their headquarters. They appealed particularly to parents to turn over firearms belonging to their children.

Hartford State's Attorney John Bailey said authorities were turning to parents for help because they can search their children's rooms while police officers cannot.

"I am sure that there are a lot of citizens out there who believe in their constitutional right to bear arms and probably have the naive belief that it won't be stolen from my home, that my child won't do anything with it. I don't anticipate us being deluged" with weapons, said city Police Chief Bernard Sullivan.

"I don't think anybody 200 years ago anticipated the right to carry machine guns, rapid-fire semiautomatic pistols or anything of that nature," Sullivan added.

The latest shooting occurred Monday, when a 15-year-old boy standing on a street corner was killed by shots fired from a passing car in the city's North End.

An 18-year-old man has been charged in the murder, although authorities said they couldn't determine any motive for the crime.

It was the fifth random shooting in the North End this year. Matthew Cauley, a 27-year-old father of four, was killed by shots fired from a passing car last month.

Obituaries

Oskar Metskula

Oskar Metskula, 66, of Hartford, formerly of the Manchester area, died Wednesday at a local convalescent home.

He was born in Estonia on Dec. 31, 1920. He had lived in the Hartford and Manchester area for many years. He was a tool and die maker.

He is survived by a friend, Y. Anson of Andover. A memorial service will be Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Watkins Funeral Home, 142 E. Center St. There are no calling hours.

Rites set for Woody Herman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The funeral for Big Band era jazz great Woody Herman will be held Monday, his daughter said.

Meanwhile, the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce on Friday placed a wreath at Herman's star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

The musician's daughter, Ingrid Herman Reese, said services will be held at Monday afternoon at St. Victor's Church in West Hollywood.

Herman died Thursday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center of cardiopulmonary arrest at age 74. The musician had suffered for weeks from congestive heart failure, emphysema and pneumonia, hospital officials said.

Herman, whose energetic "Thundering Herd" bands continued to attract young fans many years after the heyday of the big band, recently faced eviction from his home of 40 years.

The Hollywood Hills home was auctioned by the Internal Revenue Service to pay a tax assessment. The man who bought the house at auction allowed Herman to continue renting, but planned an eviction in August because the ailing musician was unable to pay the rent.

In the weeks before his death, hundreds in the entertainment community rallied round him, donating money and staging a concert to raise enough money to keep Herman in his home.

Yale president attacks court's sodomy ruling

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Yale President Benno C. Schmidt Jr., who last month tried to quell a controversy stirred up by an alumna's contention that Yale is a "gay school," on Friday attacked the Supreme Court's "flight from intelligence" in a 1986 ruling decried by homosexuals.

Addressing about 200 people at a Yale conference on homosexual studies, Schmidt, a noted legal scholar, attacked the high court's decision that upheld Georgia's prosecution of homosexuals under a sodomy statute.

"It is not clear that the Supreme Court of the United States is a bastion of liberty and protector of minority rights," Schmidt said during a panel discussion entitled, "Gay People and the Constitution."

He called the court's decision in the Georgia case "a judicial flight from intelligence."

Schmidt also defended his reaction to an opinion piece by a 1977 Yale graduate who wrote in the Wall Street Journal that the Ivy League university has a reputation as a "gay school."

In a letter to alumni, Schmidt criticized the article as "lurid" journalism. Schmidt said Friday that media reports about his letter were distorted.

A woman in the audience alleged during a question-and-answer session that after Schmidt's letter became public, three people were assailed verbally on the Yale campus and had objects thrown at them.

Schmidt said he considered such actions "an outrage." "I do not think that anything I have said would contribute to such an atmosphere," he said.

About 25 children came to the library party, all wearing homemade costumes.

Wildlife refuge named in McKinney's memory

NORWALK (AP) — The late Congressman Stewart B. McKinney was hailed Friday as "a champion of Long Island Sound" during ceremonies renaming the Connecticut Coastal National Wildlife Refuge in his honor.

"When Stewart McKinney heard that possibly Chimon Island might come under development, he banged his fist and said if he had anything to do with it, Chimon Island would never be developed," said Alexander S. Gardner, a trustee for the Nature Conservancy Connecticut Chapter. "The rest is history."

McKinney, a Republican who represented Connecticut's 4th District for 17 years before his death in May, is credited with getting legislation passed approving $1.8 million funding to create the 150-acre wildlife refuge.

The 1984 legislation culminated a 20-year effort to preserve the area, which consists of four parcels of land: Chimon Island and Sheffield Island in Norwalk; Falkner Island, three miles off the Connecticut Coast at Guilford, and Millford Point at the mouth of the Housatonic River.

"Indeed this is a day of celebration," said Mrs. Lucie McKinney, who attended the rededication with most of her family. "As Stewart said we have something that will always be here ... he was so proud to accomplish something that will last forever."

Researchers say food smells tend to have a calming effect

NEW HAVEN (AP) — If meditation, massage and sensory deprivation haven't helped you relax, Yale University researchers suggest turning your nose to some apple pie or chocolate layer cake.

The researchers have found that food odors produce more brain activity associated with relaxation than do other odors. Just thinking about food is as calming as some relaxation techniques used in therapy, they say.

"Smelling or even imagining food induces changes in brain waves that are very similar to those we find during relaxation therapy when we ask patients to concentrate on breathing deeply and slowly while they envision themselves sinking down into a comfortable chair," Tyler Lorig, an associate research scientist in psychology, said in a news release distributed Friday.

Lorig and Gary Schwartz, a professor of psychology and psychiatry at Yale, made the discovery while studying physiological reactions to fragrances under a five-year, $800,000 gift from International Flavors and Fragrances Inc., of Union Beach, N.J.

"The use of food odors or food imagery has potential for becoming a good adjunct to other kinds of stress-reduction techniques," Lorig reported to a meeting last week in Amsterdam of the Society for Psychophysiological Research.

Lorig, who was attending to a hospitalized family member Friday and unavailable for comment, cautioned in the news release that the thought of food may trigger anxiety in individuals with eating disorders — a hypothesis he and Schwartz hope to test in future experiments.

In their initial study, Lorig and Schwartz found that an apple-spice fragrance can reduce stress while lavender has the potential to keep drivers alert.

Yale and IFF, which is one of the world's leading producers of fragrances, have applied for a joint patent involving the apple-spice fragrance because the results of the study were so promising, the news release said.

Four electrodes were attached to the scalps of each of 40 Yale undergraduates while a computer recorded brain activity 128 times a second in the study. The resulting electroencephalograph, or EEG, revealed which areas of the brain were stimulated and the types of brain waves they emitted in response to various fragrances.

"When we compared EEG readings for lavender, eucalyptus and apple-spice fragrances, we confirmed that apple-spice produces brain activity characteristic of a person in a relaxed-but-awake state with eyes closed," said Lorig, who received his Ph.D. in psychology from the University of Georgia and joined Yale in 1986.

"THE REFERENDUM IS in part a question of whose judgment should be trusted, and in that respect the town administration has earned far more trust. Encouraging commercial and industrial development as it proposes to do with the mall, the administration has kept Manchester's per capita tax burden among the lowest and town services among the highest in Connecticut."

Stratford dispute ends in death

STRATFORD (AP) — A Shelton man was in critical condition Friday after he fatally shot his former girlfriend and then turned the gun on himself following a dispute at a restaurant, police said.

Kenneth Curtis, 32, was taken to Bridgeport Hospital with a gunshot wound to the head, a hospital spokeswoman said. His former girlfriend, Donna Kelson, 21, of Shelton died at the hospital at 11 a.m., the spokeswoman said.

Curtis was asked to leave the Frog Pond Restaurant around 1 a.m. after he and Kelson got into an argument, Stratford police Capt. Michael Kovach said.

According to witnesses, Curtis rammed his car into Kelson's as she and her new boyfriend, George Kavulich, 21, of Stratford, were leaving the restaurant, Kovach said.

After smashing into the car, Curtis jumped out of his vehicle, ran in front of Kelson's car and fired a shot into her head at point-blank range before shooting himself in the head, Kovach said.

Simon: Ginsburg's age matters

WINDSOR LOCKS (AP) — Sen. Paul Simon, an Illinois Democrat and presidential candidate, said Friday that the relative youth of 41-year-old Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg is a legitimate factor to be considered in confirmation hearings.

Ginsburg's age "will cause extra care as you look at the nominee," Simon told reporters at an airport news conference on his way to accepting an honorary doctorate at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

"If he were going to be on the court six months, obviously you would not look as carefully," the senator said. "He has the potential to be on there 30 years or 35 or 40 years. I think that is a factor that legitimately should be considered."

Little help for lead in wells

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut has done what it can to minimize lead in public water supplies, but can do little to help individuals with private wells, a top state health official said Friday.

Ray Jarema, chief engineer in the water supply section of the state Department of Health Services, said the state can only advise homeowners with wells to get their systems checked.

"There's no requirement to do testing," Jarema said at a forum on lead in drinking water sponsored by his agency "Who would enforce it?"

He said there have been efforts in the General Assembly in the past toward mandatory private testing, but "it's always been shot down."

He said a 1986 law banned the use of lead solder in water-supply pipes. That solder, long used to connect copper piping, has been identified as a chief source of lead ingestion in humans.

Domestic law swamps courts

CROMWELL (AP) — Connecticut's year-old domestic violence law has swamped courts and social service agencies that handle such cases, a panel created to study the situation has concluded.

Domestic violence arrests have increased 92 percent since the Family Violence Prevention and Response Act became law on Oct. 1, 1986, said Astrida Olds, who chaired the 10-member panel made up of high-level state officials, lawyers, a judge, and others involved in public-policy making.

After hearing two days of testimony at a colloquium sponsored by the Connecticut Coalition Against Domestic Violence, the panel members Thursday released a report containing eight recommendations they believe will strengthen the domestic violence law and make it easier to enforce.

Parking garage may be unsafe

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The new $10 million Union Station parking garage will be inspected next week after its designers raised doubts about its safety.

City Parking Authority Executive Director Timothy Phillips said Thursday that the designers have narrowed their concerns to about 40 problem areas that will be inspected.

The five-level garage, located next to New Haven's railroad station, is scheduled to open in mid-November.

Gary Kirschner of Cincinnati, creator of the Toys for Adults Fair, poses in New York Friday during the show. He displays a toy train inside a briefcase.

Toy fair for adults has pricey dreams

NEW YORK (AP) — Toy trains chug around tiny tracks inside staid-looking briefcases. Stereo speakers loom 7 1/2 feet tall and have an equally huge pricetag: $48,000.

It's called the Toys for Adults Fair, but many of the toys — personal saunas, laser jukeboxes, a restored 1962 Ferrari — are only for those adults to whom money is a plaything.

"I think most people would find it very intimidating, walking into a Porsche showroom, knowing they can't afford it," said Gary Kirschner, 35, who created the show and counts himself in that majority.

So Kirschner, a former scrap-metal recycler, persuaded exhibitors to bring their flashy cars, dream boats and other extravagant toys to convention halls. It started five years ago as a one-weekend-a-year venture in Cincinnati. This fall, it spread to Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Hartford, Milwaukee, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Many attend the shows to dream, he said. A few actually buy. But the exhibitors consider everyone as "future customers," said Kirschner.

As New York's first show opened a three-day run Friday at the Javits Convention Center, Kirschner pointed out his own favorite: a gray 1962 Ferrari. Driven just 42,000 miles, it is offered for $235,000 by an exotic-car dealer.

"Americans love cars. It's the biggest toy you can own," said Kirschner.

The big stereo speakers are lower on his list. He'd buy them "if I were a billionaire."

When you order those beauties, they cut down a rosewood tree in Brazil and ship it to the United States. Then a shipbuilder cuts and polishes the wood into 1,500 pounds worth of wood and woofers and tweeters.

Got a hernia from moving a speaker across your livingroom? No problem: a soak in your new $1,995, black-leather hot-tub should ease the pain. The tub was invented "in California — where else?" said company president Jerry Deveney.

The frugal executive may prefer to spend a mere $529 for the battery-operated toy train, which circles tiny-bitty houses, animals and people inside a briefcase.

"My wife would really kill me if I came home with a $529 briefcase train set," Kirschner said wistfully. "But the kids would love me."

Study bolsters controversial link between cancer and electric lines

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Human and rat tumor cells displayed greater enzyme activity when exposed to electricity, and researchers said the study bolsters a theory linking power lines to a higher risk of cancer.

The study "may be the beginning of a biological explanation of how magnetic fields from power lines could — and I emphasize could — increase the risk of cancer," said epidemiologist David Savitz of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The findings were published in the October issue of the journal Carcinogenesis by biomedical scientist Craig Byus and technician Susan Pieper, of the University of California at Riverside, and neuroscientist W. Ross Adey, of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Loma Linda.

Several studies, including one conducted by Savitz, have found higher rates of leukemia, brain tumors and miscarriages among people who live near high-voltage transmission lines or low-voltage distribution lines, as well as among linemen and others who work with electricity. But other studies have found no such link.

The California study, funded by the U.S. Department of Energy, is among the first to seek a biological explanation for the possible connection between cancer and low-energy electromagnetic fields, which are produced not only by power lines but by household appliances.

"It's just another indicator there may be a concern," Sheldon Meyers, director of the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Radiation Programs, said from Washington, D.C. "Additional work needs to be done to get some definitive answers."

But Dr. Leonard Sagan, radiation studies manager for the utility-financed Electric Power Research Institute in Palo Alto, said that to "extrapolate from changes in enzyme (activity) levels in a cell to cancer (in people) requires a leap of several thousand light years."

The study found electrified tumor cells displayed up to double to triple the activity of an enzyme named ornithine decarboxylase.

Airline bill protects consumers

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Friday to force the nation's airlines to let would-be passengers know which carriers are most — and least — likely to get them where they're going on time and with all their luggage.

The 88-5 passage of the consumer-oriented bill capped three frenetic days in which the Senate also voted to ban cigarette smoking on most airline flights and authorized $15.6 billion for airport and air traffic control improvements over the next three years.

The measure passed Friday would require airlines to compile monthly figures on canceled and late flights, delayed luggage, and passengers "bumped" from oversold flights. The information would be available to the public at airports and, in some instances, from ticket and travel agents.

Juvenile arson arrests rise

BOSTON — Juveniles accounted for 40 percent of arson arrests last year, with 5.6 percent of those arrests involving a child under 10, according to a report Friday that said arson caused 705 deaths and nearly $1.68 billion in property damage in 1986.

There were 111,000 confirmed or suspected arson fires in the United States in 1986, down 5 percent from 1985 and 34 percent from the 1977 peak of 167,500, the National Fire Protection Association said in its annual arson report based on figures supplied by fire departments nationwide.

The 705 civilian deaths represented a 5 percent increase from the 1984 total of 635 and one of every seven lives lost in building fires, the Quincy-based group said.

Arson was the largest single cause of property damage by fire, accounting for more than one of every four dollars lost in building fires.

Missile attack fifth this month

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iran fired a long-range missile into Baghdad early Friday and killed civilians in the fifth such attack on the Iraqi capital this month, the military said.

Iraqi officials vowed revenge and demanded that the United Nations condemn and punish Iran. But Iran said the attacks will continue until Iraq stops attacking economic and industrial targets in the Persian Gulf and on the Iranian mainland.

A U.S. warship and a reflagged Kuwaiti tanker meanwhile steamed south through the gulf. The 14th U.S. convoy left Kuwait late Wednesday for the 550-mile trip through the gulf and out the Strait of Hormuz.

Commission says Shin Bet lied

JERUSALEM — A judicial commission reported Friday that Shin Bet secret service agents for the past 16 years routinely perjured themselves about their interrogation methods. It said, "This evil has to be uprooted."

The findings, which stem from a five-month probe, could spur a rash of court cases from Israel's nearly 4,000 security prisoners, most of them Palestinians, who are expected to seek new trials.

The 88-page report does not call for resignations of senior officials. Nor does it recommend against prosecuting Shin Bet agents for past misdeeds.

It does call for a house-cleaning in the secret domestic counter-terror agency and greater government oversight.

The report says Shin Bet agents lied in court "in a methodical and ongoing way" to conceal the use of force and other questionable interrogation techniques.

Communists blamed for killings

MANILA, Philippines — Communist guerrillas almost certainly masterminded the slaying of three Americans and they plan to kill more, a newspaper quoted a rebel leader as saying Friday.

A Manila-based communist rebel group denied responsibility, but did not rule-out the possibility that another communist group might have killed the Americans.

But President Corason Aquino told foreign correspondents that authorities had not yet determined if communists were responsible. She said Americans were not in danger.

The U.S. Embassy said CIA deputy director Robert Gates was in the Philippines but refused to say why he was here.

As synod ends, pope promises early document on role of laity

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said in closing the worldwide synod of bishops Friday that lay people are "the hope of the church today" and he soon will issue a document on their role.

In the homily of a Mass in St. Peter's Basilica the pope singled out women, whose place in the church caused some divisions among the more than 200 bishops who met as an advisory body to the Vatican.

Near the end of the Mass, an American rushed forward screaming and was grabbed by Vatican security men about 20 yards from the altar. John Paul continued and it was not known whether he saw the man, who was not armed.

Vatican spokesman identified him as Thomas Siemer, 57, of Columbus, Ohio. They said he told police he wanted to express his ideas on peace and nuclear weapons to the pontiff.

The synod's final recommendations condemned discrimination against women but omitted U.S. proposals, included in an early draft, that the church open all non-ordained ministries to women.

Such ministries include acolytes, lectors and altar servers, people who assist in functions at Mass such as lighting candles and preparing the altar.

A Senegalese cardinal told a concluding news conference the women's issue and problems about movements within the laity caused "tensions" during the month-long conference.

John Paul said at the Mass: "The synod has given special attention to women and to youth ... from a profound conviction that it should give full consideration to these two vast areas in the people of God."

"Profound and stimulating things have been said on these points and it will be my task in the coming months to gather them together and present them in an orderly form to the entire people of God."

His apparent reference was to an apostolic exhortation, the name of an official papal document.

Addressing the bishops Thursday night, the pontiff said he would use their recommendations as the basis for a document on the synod. He said he would prepare the report "as soon as possible," which a Vatican official said prompted applause.

The pope had instructed the synod, which met in closed session, to examine the role of lay people in the church and society.

He said in his homily that participation of lay observers underscored the laity's importance to the church.

"In a certain sense the experience of this synod is unprecedented and hopefully it will become a model, a reference point for the future," he said. "Now we have turned our thoughts towards the laity, fully aware that they are the hope of the church today, a hope rich in promise."

The synod's document of recommendations stressed the "dignity" of women and recommended further study of their anthropological and theological roots.

"A wish became manifest: that every expression or attitude that leads to discrimination of women be avoided," said a summary released Friday. "Women will have to be called ... even more actively to the councils and the various pastoral structures of the church."

Wall Street's comeback finishes on an up note

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street capped a week of measured comebacks Friday with a 56-point advance that left the Dow Jones industrial average up more than 40 points for the week.

The Dow average rose 55.20 points to close at 1,993.53, still more than 250 points below its level of two weeks ago, before the Oct. 19 collapse erased more than $500 billion from the value of all stocks.

The market continued to pick up confidence — in itself, the dollar and negotiations in Washington toward cutting the federal budget deficit, analysts said.

"With every passing day a little more confidence comes into the market for investors," said Hugh Johnson, a senior vice president at First Albany Corp. "You can buy stocks without believing you'll be absolutely killed in the next minute."

Friday's jump in the Dow, the average's seventh-largest point gain ever, represented a 2.8 percent increase in its value and followed a 91.51-point climb Thursday. The gain for the week totaled 42.77 points, or 2.2 percent.

The market value of all stocks, as measured by Wilshire Associates, rose $88.13 billion, or 3.65 percent, Friday, to $2.44 trillion. On Thursday, stocks rose $106.57 billion.

Despite this week's improvement, the market value of stocks as measured by the Wilshire index has lost 13.16 percent, or $370.19 billion, over the past two weeks.

The broader market, which had trailed the blue-chip issues represented by the Dow average, continued to catch up Friday. Seven stocks gained in price for every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, and issues also were broadly higher on the American Stock Exchange and on the over-the-counter market.

NYSE volume totaled 303.36 million shares in another abbreviated, but hectic session. The markets closed two hours early through Friday to allow Wall Street to catch up on paperwork following the collapse nearly two weeks ago.

The NYSE, American exchange and over-the-counter markets said they would curtail hours again next week, closing at 2:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday and at 3 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

"Barring any unforeseen market event we expect to resume normal trading on Monday, Nov. 9," said Martha Cid, an NYSE spokeswoman.

Other markets, including the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, Chicago Board of Trade and the Kansas City Board of Trade, said they also would shorten their sessions for trading of stock index futures and stock index options.

Analysts said Wall Street's continued strength was partly a technical comeback from its collapse.

Economic forecasting is off by 0.1%

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lengthy string of increases in the government's main economic forecasting gauge was broken by a 0.1 percent decline in September as economists warned that Wall Street's troubles will lead to even sharper drops in the months ahead.

The Commerce Department reported Friday that its Index of Leading Indicators, after posting seven consecutive gains, fell for the first time since January.

Strength in several components of the index was offset by a big drop in manufacturing hours and a fall in stock prices during the month.

Because the figures do not reflect the record plunge in stock prices which took place the past two weeks, many analysts predicted the October index would fall by a much sharper amount.

Some economists said the collapse of the market could well lead to a negative figure in November, especially if the market turmoil spreads to other parts of the economy.

Economists said they believed the index was correctly signaling at the very least slower growth for next year, with the chance of a recession, an increasing possibility. In the past, three consecutive declines in the index has often, but not always, signaled an impending downturn.

"If we get three consecutive declines and the stock market is near the lows it reached, then that will be a clear signal of a recession," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of Shearson Lehman Bros. "But if the stock market bounces back, then three consecutive declines may only be signaling a major slowdown for the economy."

The last time the leading index dropped for three consecutive months was in mid-1984. While no recession followed, economic growth did slow sharply for two years.

Keep careful records on fund switching

QUESTION: I'm sure many people encounter the same problem I have in this new day of frequent mutual fund switching. What kind of records should one keep in the fund switching merry-go-round to properly fill out an income tax return next April 15?

Investors' Guide
William A. Doyle

ANSWER: Very careful records.

Mutual fund switching, of course, is the tactic of moving from one type of fund to another in the attempt — "hope" would be a better word — to be in the right investment at the right time.

The basic notion is to be in a mutual fund holding common stocks when the stock market is booming, then get out and into a money market mutual fund when stock prices start to fall.

Switching can get much more complicated than outlined in the preceding paragraph. It can involve moving in and out of many different types of mutual funds.

With each switch, you redeem — sell — shares of one fund and purchase shares of another fund. Each sale results in a profit or a loss, which you are required to report on Schedule D of your Form 1040 federal income tax return.

On that schedule, you list your purchase price, your sale price and your capital gain or loss on each fund redemption. The funds send you confirmation statements each time you buy and each time you redeem. Hang on to those confirmation statements and use the numbers they contain.

Come January, you'll receive a Form 1099-B from each fund whose shares you redeemed. So will the Internal Revenue Service, to feed into its computers. That form will list the dollar amount of each redemption. If you neglect to report any shares in order to establish a capital loss, which I would report on my 1987 income tax return. I feel the best way to this is to pick the shares I bought at the highest prices and redeem those shares. Correct? If so, how do I handle this on my income tax return?

Good luck to you in your switching endeavors, but I have to sound the warning that frequent mutual fund switching, like in-and-out trading of individual stocks, usually results in losses. It's a merry-go-round on which mighty few folks catch the brass ring.

QUESTION: If I transfer my investment from one mutual fund to another within the same "family of funds," does that result in a capital gain or loss for income tax purposes?

ANSWER: Yes, indeed! The transfer is the redemption — sale — and simultaneous purchase of shares of two different mutual funds. You must report the sale and any profit or loss it produces on your income tax return.

QUESTION: I have a large number of shares in two mutual funds, a Ginnie Mae fund and a bond fund, acquired through various purchases. I have records of all those purchases and the prices I paid. The values of the shares have dropped considerably.

I would like to redeem some of my shares in order to establish a capital loss, which I would report on my 1987 income tax return. I feel the best way to this is to pick the shares I bought at the highest prices and redeem those shares. Correct? If so, how do I handle this on my income tax return?

ANSWER: You are absolutely correct. By redeeming your highest-cost shares, you'll take a bigger capital loss than you would by redeeming your lower cost shares. The capital loss can be used to offset any capital gains you've taken this year. If you have no capital gains, the capital loss can offset up to $3,000 of ordinary income. Either way, it will reduce your tax bill.

Send the fund written instructions to redeem X number of shares you bought on such-and-such dates at certain prices. That's known as the "identified share" or "specific identification" method. Keep a copy of your letter and the confirmation statement you receive after the sale. Just in case the IRS questions you.

On Schedule D, Form 1040, report the redemption of the fund shares and your capital loss just as you report all capital losses and capital gains. Here's hoping you have more capital gains than losses.

Business in Brief

Aetna's third quarter better

HARTFORD — Aetna Life & Casualty on Friday reported third-quarter operating earnings of $231 million or $2.01 per common share compared to $199 million of $1.72 per common share for the same period a year ago.

Net income in the third quarter was $254 million or $2.21 per common share and included tax benefits of $13 million from the utilization of operating loss carryforwards and $10 million of capital gains.

In the third quarter of 1986, net income was $265 million or $2.31 per common share and included tax benefits of $54 million from the utilization of operating loss carryforwards and $7.9 million of capital gains.

"Earnings in our casualty-property businesses continue to show significant improvement over last year," Aetna Chairman James T. Lynn said in a statement. "Their performance more than offsets lower results in our group insurance operations."

Armstrong uses rhino again

NEW HAVEN — The rhinoceros is making a comeback as an advertising symbol for the Armstrong Tire Co., officials say.

The company has launched a campaign picturing the animal with tires for passenger cars, trucks and farm equipment in national magazines. A television commercial also is planned.

The rhino was a familiar company symbol in the late 1950s and early 1960s, appearing in national advertising and billboards and on distributors' buildings. It was called "Tuffy" in advertising.

"Research among consumers and dealers shows that the rhino is a perfect symbol for us," Daniel A. Cutrone, director of marketing, said earlier this month.

Spectrum Group up for sale

GREENWICH — Chesebrough-Pond's Inc. announced Friday it is putting its Spectrum Group up for sale to focus on its traditional businesses.

The Spectrum Group is a Florida-based company which manufactures and markets consumer packaged insecticides, herbicides and fertilizers for household, lawn and garden use.

The Spectrum Group had 1986 annual sales of $42.1 million.

The decision to sell is consistent with Chesebrough's long-term strategy of focusing on its traditional core businesses, which include cosmetics and fragrances, personal care and packaged foods, the company said in a statement.

USAir & Piedmont merger gets an OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department on Friday approved the $1.6 billion merger of USAir and Piedmont Airlines, overruling a law judge's recommendation that the merger would reduce competition in some markets.

The two airlines had argued that the merger was necessary for them to survive in an industry which has been dominated in recent years by an increasingly smaller number of large airlines.

The agreement, which was announced last March, will create the nation's fifth largest air carrier. It also combines two of the industry's most financially successful airlines.

The decision by the department came despite an administrative law judge's recommendation against the merger. Judge Ronnie Yoder had said the acquisition of Piedmont by USAir would "substantially reduce" competition in some markets.

But in its decision, the department said it did not agree with Yoder's assessment. It said there is no barrier for other airlines to enter those markets and that at airports where entry is restricted nearby airports could provide adequate competition.

USAir issued a statement saying the merger would allow USAir and Piedmont to "achieve important efficiencies, provide better service ... and compete more effectively with the industry giants."

"We intend to move promptly to complete the acquisition," said USAir Chairman Edwin Colodny.

USAir, which has its headquarters near Washington, offered to buy Piedmont Aviation Inc., which is based in Winston-Salem, N.C., last March for $69 a share.

Players deserve better

To the Editor:

Len Auster's thoughts of Oct. 21 concerning the MHS soccer team should have found the circular file rather than the press.

The repeated statement that last season's losing record of 7-8-1 (the first since 1949) never includes the footnote that seven of these losses were one-goal games. The "fall" from the top was not a long one, either. The competition has been losing for years. This fact is even more in evidence this season, as the CCC East leaders struggle for consistency.

Goal scorers — everybody is looking for them. Any suggestions? Natural born? Exchange student? How about developing some? Illing, Bennet and the JV teams are all writing their own success stories as has been their habit the last three years. Maybe a superstar will just "walk on" between late August and early November!

So much for fantasy. Let's talk reality. Let's talk about pride in the MHS soccer team.

It's about a group of young soccer players who play their hearts out every game — who have worked every practice, who worked in August in the captain's practices. And they also took as many other opportunities to play, as available — many with the single goal of self-improvement so their school might be judged the best at a tournament time.

Too many shirts? Look closer, Mr. Auster. It takes more than watching one high school game to appreciate these young players. The game, the players, the coaches, the league — all are changing — developing.

Open your eyes, Mr. Auster. The community needs educated and accurate commentary.

Thanks to the merchants

To the Editor:

The Keeney School Street PTA would like to extend their thanks to the downtown merchants for all the activities that they sponsor and support throughout the year.

Such activities include the Halloween picture painting on store windows by school children; decorating the street and Christmas trees during the holiday season; and overall beautification of Main Street during other holidays.

Without the help of the merchants, none of these activities would be possible, and we would like them to know that their efforts are truly appreciated.

Education helps fight AIDS

Thomas L. Stringfellow

October 1987 has been AIDS Awareness Month nationwide. Several seminars, television programs and videotapes have been offered to educate people about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

I participated in a program entitled "AIDS: Issues of Discrimination" Oct. 5 at the West Hartford Town Hall. The co-sponsor was the Greater Hartford Human Relations Rights Commission.

The speakers were Laurie Andrews, an epidemiologist at Hartford Hospital, and Kathleen Linares and Ann MacGillis, both of AIDS Project Hartford. This group, founded in 1985, provides a "hot-line" number (247-AIDS) from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., a buddy support system for afflicted patients, and outreach educational programs for local communities.

Andrews explained that the first AIDS cases were reported in 1981 at the Wadsworth Veterans Administration Hospital in Los Angeles. Later that year an outbreak of infections was diagnosed in New York City. Some doctors thought the symptoms indicated pneumonia and not AIDS.

In Connecticut, Bridgeport, Fairfield and Hartford are three critical places where AIDS occur. Andrews said. She said that 50 percent of people of color (blacks and Hispanics) have the symp-are important to the battle against AIDS.

I agree with Linares that a federal insurance policy should be made available to victims of many terminal diseases. Rep. Donald Dellums of California has reintroduced a House bill which should provide adequate health care for all Americans.

Linares mentioned the danger of racial discrimination, and said Africa should not be blamed alone for the origin of AIDS. Drug users come from all socio-economic groups.

I commend Nancy Carr of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches and Lynne Gustafson, R.N., for establishing AIDS Project AIDS Manchester. Community education to quell stereotypes and hysteria will succeed, Carr said she hoped that clubs and other groups in town will attend future seminars to become more informed about AIDS.

The Manchester Board of Education has provided information to pupils and established a policy under which those afflicted with AIDS are not ostracized, as Ryan White of Ohio was.

To learn more about the educational effort, Secretary of Education William Bennett's brochure about AIDS is available from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. E.D. Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

As the MACC's Carr quoted from a pastoral statement, "Judgment belongs to God alone."

Trucks belch as government dawdles

WASHINGTON — Whenever you're engulfed in a dark cloud of foul-smelling, eye-smarting exhaust fumes from a passing bus or truck, the thought may have crossed your mind: Why doesn't the government do something to stop the poisonous emissions from these behemoths of the highway?

Jack Anderson

It's a good question. Unfortunately, the answer seems to be that Environmental Protection Agency bureaucrats have been lollygagging for more than 20 years, while special interests like the Engine Manufacturers Association have been able to throw sand in the gears of the federal government's underpowered enforcement machinery. The Clean Air Act amendment of 1965, which Congress passed in response to a public outcry, authorized the EPA to crack down on the exhaust belchers, but the agency has yet to follow its orders.

When nothing had been done by 1977, Congress passed a stiffer amendment, ordering the EPA to come up with a detailed set of emission standards for heavy-duty vehicles, and see that they are enforced. This would have put buses, dump trucks, diesel rigs — all vehicles bigger than pickups — in the same position as passenger cars, which for years have been subject to strict emission standards.

As envisioned by Congress, the standards would reduce the amount of nitrogen and oxides, or NOx (as in noxious), and particulate matter, or PM, emitted by trucks and buses. The emission curbs were to be enforced in three stages.

Once again, though, the law was ignored. The EPA failed to set the promised standards — until a public-interest group, the Natural Resources Defense Council, filed suit against the agency and won. In October 1984, under court order, the EPA finally published NOx and PM standards, with enforcement regulations following in March 1985.

Because of an expected increase in the number of heavy-duty vehicles, both NOx and PM emissions would be reduced in new-model engines. Though the gaseous NOx emissions create special hazards for children and persons with respiratory ailments, the EPA standards permitted the total amount of NOx fumes emitted to remain at current levels. Overall PM emissions, the tiny bits of solid matter that sneak past the lungs' natural defenses and are suspected of causing cancer, were to be substantially reduced under the EPA rules.

To make up for lost time, the agency ordered the reductions to start with the 1987 model year heavy-duty vehicles. Hooray? Not quite. Incredibly, the EPA action was attacked by both sides. The Engine Manufacturers Association and several engine makers sued the agency for being too severe; the Natural Resources Defense Council and other environmentalists sued it for being too lenient. The predictable result was further delay, thus guaranteeing that no substantial reductions in the big boys' emissions would take effect in the 1980s.

In federal appeals court, the industry argued that the standards had not been calculated correctly, that they would require technology not yet developed and that the four-year deadline for compliance with regulations had been violated by the EPA. An engineer for Cummins Engine, a leading manufacturer, however, told our reporter Jennifer Smith that the EPA's initial deadline for NOx reductions could have been met.

Environmentalists argued that the standards were too lenient and based on the largest manufacturer's capabilities, rather than on the industry's "technological leaders," and also faulted the EPA for allowing companies to avoid penalties by averaging the emissions of all their vehicles.

The appellate court agreed generally with the EPA's interpretation of the 1977 amendment, but gave the manufacturers a break, delaying the NOx emissions reductions till the 1990 model year.

It remains to be seen whether the EPA, after 22 years of stalling, will finally decide to protect the public's health from the toxic titans of the traffic jam.

Cramping their style

As we've reported, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission seems determined to keep its Office of Investigation from getting too independent. The latest harassment the investigators are faced with involves the agency's move to new headquarters in Rockville, Md.

The space allocated for the investigators is not secure enough for sensitive criminal investigations. For example, their suite of offices is not shut off from the others, which will allow nosy officials from other departments to wander through. And the investigators will have to evict their director or deputy director if they need a private office in which to interview confidential sources. Or they'll have to ask for private conference rooms elsewhere in the building.

Diplomatic digest

• Flying saucer sightings are not unknown in communist countries, but one earlier this year in China was given some credibility by the Peking government. More than 20 individuals claimed to have seen an unidentified flying object near Chengtu in central China. They thought it was about 3,000 feet up, and described it as looking like a straw hat. A high-flying candidate missed the ring, maybe?

• Here's a switch on the fight to save the world's endangered animal species. Since collectors with more cash than conscience are the main source of demand that keeps poachers busy, the government of Papua New Guinea has made a business out of raising the rare species for sale. It offers help to anyone willing to breed the country's exotic butterflies, which can fetch upward of $1,000 apiece. Farmers also raise thousands of crocodiles. How? Carefully, of course.

Politics and the stock market

By Chuck Stone

Stock-market collapses are bipartisan, equal-opportunity panics. And in their unpredictability, they can be as paradoxical as they are cruel.

What greater paradox than a stock market collapsing during the administration of one of its most passionate cheerleaders? What harsher cruelty than that collapse causing the election of the cheerleader's opposing party to the White House? And could there be a more bittersweet poetic justice than the prevention of a Republican 1929 stock-market crash in Republican 1987 because of the safety network the Democrats put into place?

"No matter whether th' constitution follows th' flag or not," observed Peter Dunne's Irish wit, Mr. Dooley, "th' supreme court follows th' illiction returns."

And just as faithfully, election returns follow the stock market. The moment the market plummeted, the odds on a Democrat being elected president in 1988 quadrupled. In 1912, 1932, 1960 and 1976, it should be remembered, Democrats were elected after recessions had occurred during Republican administration.

Despite the market's belated rally, some economic experts still foresee serious trouble. "I think we'll see a recession of several months," predicted the Philadelphia Inquirer's Pulitzer prize-winning business writer Joe Livingston.

But it's unlikely that Humpty Dumpty will fall off the stock-market wall in 1987 as he did in 1929. Federal deposit insurance, Social Security insurance, unemployment insurance, a Securities and Exchange Commission, and more government regulation in stabilizing financial markets have combined to create a safety network for investors and the economy. And in the past week, the bipartisan forces of the White House, Congress and the corporate sector have been cooperating to calm the financial markets, as investors tentatively leave their worries on the bull-market doorstep and direct their feet to the sunny side of the bear-market street.

More paradox: That entire safety network was put together by Democratic administrations. But pointing fingers of recrimination isn't going to solve the market crisis. Instead, the American people should be united in demanding that this Republican administration and Democratic Congress unite to stabilize the market.

"The U.S. budget deficit should be substantially reduced," insists Livingston.

Agrees Washington Post economics writer Hobart Rowen, "First priority must go to reduction of the budget and trade deficits ... by cutting expenditures."

By definition, deficit and trade reductions mean a tax increase and a firm clamp on military spending, two economic imperatives that Reagan reacts to with the enthusiasm he would bestow on a suggestion that he swallow a bottle of castor oil blended with cocaine and laced with sulfur. But he may have no choice if he is to assert the kind of leadership that inspires world confidence.

Meanwhile, it's worth noting that there are still a few experts who maintain that the stock-market panic was caused not by an imposing array of economic forces but by deliberate manipulation on the part of a stock market specialists.

"Specialists have got to be held accountable by law," contends Richard Ney, a millionaire stockbroker and investment adviser in Pasadena, Calif.

In a country that is run by politics, even the stock market may have to respond to the winds of political change.

Honor Court has a birthday

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
MACC Director

"God grant me the serenity to accept things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference." The words of the Serenity Prayer of Alcoholics Anonymous are printed in clear gold on a large blue board. The words of the prayer dominate the front of the court room. The sign, facing the attendees, sits on the center table, filled with stacks of books. Other large blue and gold signs stand around the room. Remember when. Think. One Day at a Time.

Monday evening was the 13th anniversary of Manchester's Honor Court, an alternative sentencing program operating out of Circuit Court 12 for offenders whose crimes, all misdemeanors, have been committed while under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol.

Sixty men and women filled the room to capacity. They were a cross section of the community: young, middle aged, several who were clearly senior citizens. Men in suits and ties, in flannel shirts, in torn jeans and leather jackets. Women in neatly tailored outfits and London Fog trench coats. In bright tight pants and immense sweat shirts, in baggy sweaters and faded house dresses that have seen better days.

Following the speaker, there was a raffle. Everyone at the anniversary celebration had a ticket that entitled him/her to choose one of the books at the front of the room. One by one they chose: "Living Sober," "Come to Believe," "Twelve Steps and Traditions," "Dr. Bob and the Good Old Times," "AA," "As Bill Sees It."

Those who have been assigned to Honor Court by the Court/Family Relations, sign in as they arrive. (They are required to attend six sessions. "No shows" are usually prosecuted.) They are asked not to leave until the close of the meeting when all there link hands and join in the Lord's Prayer. After Monday's meeting, there were sandwiches, hot tea and coffee, provided by volunteers from Wapping Community Church. There was also a special anniversary cake.

Every Monday night from 7 to 8, one and sometimes two speakers openly and frankly share their personal and sometimes tragic struggle with alcoholism. They also talk about AA and how AA has helped them stay sober and rebuild shattered lives.

Last week's speaker held everyone riveted as he shared his own devastating history: the inability to control his drinking, the onset of blackouts, the tragic blackout in which he shot and killed his wife, the years in jail and in personal hell, and finally, the road back to sobriety and new life.

Honor Court is monitored by the Family Relations Division of Circuit Court 12, operated by volunteers who are themselves recovering alcoholics and endorsed by MACC and the 20 churches and church groups who provide sandwiches and finger foods 52 Monday nights each year.

Our thanks to Ginger Smith, our wonderful Honor Court coordinator over the past 11 years, and to the men and women of the 20 organizations that help support the work of Honor Court: Center Congregational, Community Baptist, South Congregational of East Hartford, St. Bridget Rosary Society, Our Saviour Lutheran, Concordia Lutheran, Emanuel Lutheran, South Methodist, St. Francis X. Mother's Circle, St. Bartholomew's Our Lady of Unity Mother's Circle, Wapping Community Church, Church of Christ, Second Congregational, Church of the Nazarene, St. Maurice of Bolton, Bolton Congregational, Faith Lutheran of East Hartford, Trinity Covenant, North Methodist.

In order to schedule each of these organizations twice a year, we need to recruit six additional co-sponsoring groups.

Help us support a most needed service for our neighbors struggling with alcoholism.

P.S. All Honor Court meetings are open. Come share.

The Rev. John Connor is returning to his people on Nov. 8. Those who wish to contribute to a medical assistance fund to buy medicine for his "delegados" can send donations to Padre Juan Conner, Padres Francis Canoscapuchinos, Nueva Ocotepique, Honduras, C.A. Father John says to tell you not to send cash, checks are safer.

A conversation with the Rev. John Conner, Rev. Newell Curtis and Rev. Kim-Eric Williams turned out to be a mountain-top experience for 50-plus men and women who attended.

Highlights of the sessions: - Rev. Williams beginning to set the stage and focus the camera for us as we sang "Let the Power Fall on I" and tried to bridge the tremendous cultural difference between our lives and the ordinary lives of our brothers and sisters in the Caribbean and Central American countries.

The poverty, the struggle for power, the upswing of Christianity — Father Connor drawing a painfully funny parallel between the situation in "The Gods Must Be Crazy" and our inability to understand what is happening in Central America, where in his parish of 54 villages, there is no education, no health care (1/3 of the babies die in their first year) but the coke bottle has dropped with a vengeance in arms and military — Rev. Newell Curtis describing the devastation he saw in Mirra Flores, still smelling of burned potatoes and his conversation with the father of a 9-year-old girl killed by the Contras in their attack on the village just two weeks before. "They will come again and again and again but they can't kill our spirits. You North Americans provide the bullets, we provide the bodies."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
by Eugene Brewer

A favorite catch-phrase in recent years had been "victimless crimes" — violations allegedly harming no one. This concept is applied widely to pornography.

But the recent exposure of the use of children in producing such material right here in our state shows that the pornography business involves more than "consenting adults." And even adults are victimized psychologically and emotionally.

Print and electronic media (including our telephones) have been prostituted to the spread of this emotional virus. But federal officials are now effectively enforcing laws against pornography. New federal legislation, growing out of recommendations by the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, are in the offing. But in the final analysis, these efforts will succeed only when the populace sees the problem. Romans 1:24-27 should help us to this end. Note: Reading, watching, or listening to the products of this moral sickness aids and abets it!

Thoughts

Learning to grow old

I have tried to list some important ingredients in the process of growing old gracefully — things like having a sense of humor, a realization that we are more than a body, an openness to new people and new ideas, a willingness to get involved, and a faith in life after death.

On this eve of Halloween, people of faith remember the saints of the past. The spirits of the dead are not to be feared, they are friendly spirits. The ghosts of the past are not frightening, they are holy.

It is easier to grow old if you believe you are moving closer to dear friends who now live in the heavenly kingdom.

Don't miss the center's fair

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Jeanette Cave
Senior Center Director

The Manchester Senior Citizens' Center's annual holiday fair will be held Nov. 7 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Although many other activities are going on that day, this affair should not be missed. Where can you have a nice meal on a Saturday for less than $2?

Have you seen the new crocheted collars that everyone is wearing? We'll have some at the fair. If you're a Whalers fan, we have Whalers clocks made by Larry Lombardi. Avid readers can browse through our collection of new books that will be on sale. You can buy a raffle ticket for such items as a ceramic bear set, some handcraft and unique items.

There will be special sale every hour. Grinders, and other refreshments will be served throughout the day. The senior center will provide transportation to and from the center on that day. Donations of white elephant items, handcrafts, and baked goods are still being accepted. Please, no shoes or clothing! If you need a ride, please call us for this free service no later than Friday noon.

Because we have to set up for the fair, all upstairs activities will be canceled Friday afternoon, namely Setback at 12:30 p.m. and exercise with Rose at 1:30 p.m.

A trip to Atlantic City has been planned for Jan. 25 & 26, for $72.50. You will be staying at the Trump Castle Casino Hotel, where you will enjoy an evening show, and rebates during your stay. Sign up for this trip on Nov. 16 at 9:30 a.m.

The center will offer stenciling classes on Nov. 20, Dec. 11 & Dec. 18 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Classes will be taught by the Black Sheep Three. Each week, a different item (paid for by the participant) will be made. Register no later than Nov. 13.

Other activities are as follows:
Nov. 5 — Stress management sessions will continue for the next three weeks from 10 to 11 a.m. The subject matter deals with coping with changes, past and present.

Nov. 6 — 9:30 a.m. Sign up for "Guys & Dolls" at the Coachlight Dinner Theater. The cost is $24 and will leave Dec. 9.

Nov. 9 — 9:30 a.m. sign up for Christmas shopping at the Ingle-side Mall on Dec. 7, 8.

Nov. 10 — Thanksgiving day trip to Plymouth, Mass. Call Friendship Tours if interested, 243-1630.

Nov. 11 — Closed for Veterans Day.

Mother seeks the best defense against war-related toys for son

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Next month my son will be 6 and I will be giving a birthday party for him. Some of his kindergarten friends will be invited. They are very normal kids, and it is common to see one or two on any given day playing with war toys or wearing camouflage uniforms. My husband and I both feel very strongly that we don't want our children playing with those kinds of toys.

How do I get this across to the kids' moms (or do I say it at all) in the invitations and still not step on any toes? I don't want it to appear that a gift is required to attend the party, as it most certainly is not. When my daughter turned 6, her kindergarten teacher gave her a toy gun in a pink holster! We were appalled; our daughter was delighted. I ended up taking her to the store for a more acceptable item, thanking the teacher, then getting rid of the gun on the QT as soon as possible.

Is there a tactful way of dealing with this beforehand without causing hurt feelings or an upset 6-year-old? Please answer quickly, because the time for me to be getting the invitations out is drawing near.

C.B. IN SPRINGFIELD, ORE.

DEAR C.B.: It would not be out of line for you to call the mothers of the prospective guests and tell them what you've written me. Let the mothers know that a gift is not mandatory, but if the child brings something, you and your husband are, in principle, opposed to war-related toys.

DEAR ABBY: I chose not to take my husband's surname as my legal surname when we married; instead I kept my "own" surname. This has caused some distress with both his family and mine. They claim not to know how to introduce you, simplify it by saying, "My name is Susan and I am married to Frank Hall." Period.

NAME AND TITLE
DEAR NAME: Right! If it's too complicated for those who claim not to know how to introduce you, simplify it by saying, "My name is Susan and I am married to Frank Hall." Period.

P.S. All social mail should be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall; your business mail to Susan Jones.

To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long stamped (38 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

DIABETES

If you are diabetic, your vitamin C requirements are likely in excess of other persons, states Dr. G. V. Mann, biochemist at Vanderbilt U. He theorizes that diabetics lack the ability to transport adequate vitamin C across cell membranes, resulting in serious blood disorders associated with some lifelong diabetics. Extra-vitamin C could help prevent many complications that diabetes brings with passing years.

Between the Lines

The story behind the story

By Josie

Michael Landon

Q. I really enjoy "Highway to Heaven" and Michael Landon. What can you tell me about him? Ora Hunter, Hopkinsville, Ky.

A. Eugene Maurice Orowitz is 51, from Forest Hills, Queens, and Collingswood, N. J., the son of a Russian Jewish father who was a publicist in the movie industry and an Irish Catholic mother who was an actress prior to her marriage.

In high school, he was a terrible student who barely graduated but also a champion javelin thrower who earned various athletic scholarships. He chose the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, enrolled in 1954, but had a rather uneasy time there. His fellow jocks taunted him for his trademark long hair (he feels that the length gives him strength, a la Samson) and, ganging up on him, cut it off. After that trauma, his javelin shots averaged 50 feet less and trying to make up the difference, he tore the ligaments in his arm, an injury that eventually ended his career. After his freshman year, he left USC. Over the next few months, he worked at various jobs, including a stint unloading freight cars during which he met an aspiring actor. His actor friend asked him to help him prepare a scene by reading with him, which he did and, in the process, discovered his own acting skill.

He immediately signed up for acting classes, changed his name first to Michael Lane, then Landon (a name plucked out of the L.A. phone book). Within months, his good looks had earned him roles in various TV productions, among them the westerns "Wanted: Dead or Alive" and "Cheyenne." His film debut in "I Was a Teenage Werewolf" has since become a cult classic, at the time, it led him to other, more mainstream roles, in "God's Little Acre" and "The Legend of Tom Dooley."

In 1959 he was called in to read for the series that would make him a star, "Bonanza." It premiered that September and lasted until 1973, during which time he expanded into writing and directing as well by doing several of the show's episodes.

After "Bonanza," he created and starred in the series "Little House on the Prairie" which ran for eight seasons on NBC. He followed it with the current "Highway to Heaven." He's also done a variety of TV movies such as "The Loneliest Runner" about bedwetting and "Sam's Son" about his college javelin experience.

He's been married three times and has a lot of children: two adopted with his first wife, Dobic; four with his second wife, Lynn; two with current wife, Cindy.

Q. Please tell me if Don Ameche is going to be in any more movies. He's my favorite. E.H., Madison, Wis.
A. He's in the process of making a film with playwright-director David Mamet called "Things Change."

Q. I thought Lea Thompson was such a great singer in "Howard the Duck." Does she have any plans to do an album? Billy Bateman, Puumene, Hawaii

A. According to her agent, no plans at the moment but of course, nothing's impossible. In the meantime, she's making a movie called "Casual Sex."

Heidi Bohay

Q. I think Heidi Bohay of "Hotel" is adorable. Please tell me about her. Maritza, Union City, N.J.

A. She's 27, from a small town outside Princeton, N.J., where her parents ran an ice-cream store. Her high-school years sound storybook. She was a cheerleader and homecoming queen, her boyfriend was the quarterback of the football team. (They were voted class hunk and hunkette.) There was a definite, sobering edge to those years, however, when her younger sister was diagnosed as mentally impaired. She spent a great deal of time working with her and gaining so much satisfaction from it that she decided to aim for a career in special education.

She met a New York agent in the interim, though, who encouraged her to audition for commercials. She landed the first one she tried for: a Colgate spot in which she played a cheerleader. Two years and 30 commercials later, the agent suggested she move to Hollywood, which she did.

This time, it took a little longer — she auditioned all summer before landing her first role, in a short-lived TV series called "California Fever."

She was soon cast in other TV shows, "Happy Days" and "Hart to Hart" among them, but then nothing so she worked as a salesgirl, a babysitter, a lawyer's assistant, and collected unemployment.

In March of 1983, she was called in to read for "Hotel" and has been there ever since. You should notice some changes in the new season, however; she and her husband moved away during the first two shows and will be back for visits three times. In the meantime, she's reading scripts, as they say, and preparing for a role on the next "Circus of the Stars."

Q. What's David Hartman doing? We miss him. A. & J. Waterbury, Conn.

A. Producing specials for ABC. After leaving "Good Morning, America," he devoted his time to the special on the Constitution that aired September 8. He also has a five-part series due to air this month on "Good Morning, America" and another special due to air early next year, but as we go to press, he won't divulge either of their subjects. Besides his TV work, there's a lingering rumor that he wants to run for office.

Cover Story

Corbin Bernsen gets personal

By Fred Robbins

Corbin Bernsen wanted to be Oliver Twist. In the worst way. Instead here he is, wildly popular on one of TV's most respected shows, "L.A. Law," and starring in his first leading role in a feature film, "Hello Again," with Shelly Long. But when he was 9 years old he saw a production of "Oliver Twist" in New York... and that was it. He was bitten, hooked — irreparably and forever.

"From that point on I knew that I wanted to be an actor," he says. "I wanted to be Oliver Twist. I did everything in the world to be him. I came back to L.A. I did my own production in the backyard."

It must have been in the genes, because his mother, Jeanne Cooper, is an actress. She has starred in the daytime series "The Young and the Restless" for over 15 years. And his father is producer Harry Bernsen.

"I used to go the studio with her all the time," he remembers. "And I wanted to meet actors and do all sorts of things. There used to be a certain smell of the sound stage, kind of like fake trees and fake lawn. I can still smell it. You smell it in theaters backstage. And it just attracted me. And to this day I get excited with the smell."

He was ready to be a child star way back then, and if someone had "picked me up then and made me into an actor I probably would have gone that route at that point, but nobody did."

So the dream had to be deferred and the millions of viewers who now watch the 32-year-old, blue-eyed, blond charmer operate every week as shrewd divorce attorney Arnie Becker in that high-powered L.A. law firm, would have to wait for him to grow up. Because along came those rebellious teen-age years and "girls and going out and playing baseball and playing football and driving cars, and all of that stuff."

All of which meant acting could wait. It was also a time during which his parents separated and he began to realize it wasn't the most secure family life. So he rebelled against his mother and father, repressed his childhood fantasy and enrolled in pre-law courses in college. Little dreaming, of course, of what was to happen later on. He majored in philosophy toward that end, and it seemed his legal activities would take place in real law offices and courtrooms instead of those that look and sound so true to life on "L.A. Law."

But his dad changed all that when he offered him a small part as — are you ready for this? — a pair of limbs thrashing around in the back seat of a Rolls Royce in "The Hard Way," in 1974.

"I got paid a handsome little sum for that one day of work and said, 'This is it. This is what I'm going to do for the rest of my life.'"

But getting from there to here was no easy matter for the 6-foot, 1-inch heartthrob. Wearing a yellow silk sport shirt, jeans, tennis shoes and a denim jacket, while working in New York on "Hello Again," he looks like he belongs on a surfboard, hanging 10 off Malibu beach.

Divorced from his wife of four years, actress Brenda Cooper, ("the relationship wasn't right, and we love each other but we're not compatible to live together as man and wife" and his affair with Heather Thomas now history, the social side of his life hasn't fallen into place.

He lives in a small rented house in the Hollywood Hills, actually a bungalow of his godfather's house, but expects to put his carpentry expertise to work and build his own home.

He says, ruefully, "every night I put my head on the pillow and I just wish there was somebody I cared about to share this with. Other than my family and friends. Somebody I could hold in my arms and just, you know, say 'can you feel it? Isn't it great?'"

So he's looking for someone. Yes, Corbin Bernsen, Arnie Becker of "L.A. Law," and Jason Chapman of "Hello Again," does want to have a significant other. And he knows what he's looking for.

"I like a woman who can go climb a mountain with me one day, and put on a backpack and be rugged and be right along with me, and come home at night and put on an evening gown and I'll put on a tuxedo, and she'll be a smash at the ball."

The line forms on the right. ■

Corbin Bernsen loves his role as a heartthrob but wishes he had a heartthrob of his own.

Are pit bulls our newest enemy?

By Sandra Gurvis

A retired Ohio surgeon was killed by them, as were toddlers in Oklahoma and California. Countless others have been injured, mauled or mutilated. And the menace seems to be growing, striking mostly the elderly and children.

This is not a disease or a wild animal, but a long-established member of the canine world, the pit bull terrier. Yet those who own pit bulls and even some veterinarians believe the dogs can be loving, loyal pets.

Still, pit bulls have been responsible for 50 percent of all fatal bites since 1984 and all so far this year. This includes 20 of 28 deaths since that time and hundreds of mutilations.

A study done at Mercer College in Georgia found that one-fourth of all bites from pit bulls required hospitalization.

According to Dr. Alan Beck of the Center for Interaction of Animals and Society at the University of Pennsylvania, their bite is epidemiologically different from other dogs. "The jaw latches onto the object with the front incisors while chewing with the back molars at the same time. It's instant trauma the moment the animal makes contact with flesh and bone."

As a result of the attacks and the subsequent public furor, more than 50 communities have written laws to ban, prohibit sale of, and confine pit bulls. These include the states of Ohio, Illinois and cities such as Tijuana, N.M.; Lynn, Mass.; Liberty, Mo.; Shawnee, Kan.; and Chester, Pa. At least three dozen other communities, such as Los Angeles and New York, have updated their more general vicious dog statutes.

But what, exactly, is a pit bull? And why do they act the way they do? Has there been a sudden onslaught of attacks, or is the dog's recent notoriety the result of public enlightenment, otherwise known as media attention?

According to Dr. Randall Lockwood of the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS), "pit bull" can encompass a wide variety of canines, including the American Pit Bull Terrier, the American Staffordshire Terrier and "mixtures of other breeds including but not limited to the Staffordshire Bull Terrier, Bull Terrier, and Bulldog."

"People know what they're buying," asserts state senator Neil Zimmers, co-author of the recently passed Ohio Law. "It either is or is not a pit bull dog."

Even owners admit it is a breed apart. Norman DeVictor, who has raised and shown the American Pit Bull Terrier around the country for seven years, states that the "dogs have been bred to be aggressive toward other dogs. But," he adds quickly, "there is no record of a registered show bull dog ever biting or attacking a human in this country."

To begin to understand the pit bull is to examine its history. Although its fighting past can stretch as far back as 2,000 years, both the American Staffordshire Terrier and American Pit Bull Terrier directly descend from the combat bulldogs of 19th century England. Originally these large, slow-moving animals were used for bullbaiting, a barbaric activity in which the dogs were physically goaded into attacking a tethered bull.

Bullbaiting became illegal in 1835, and was quickly replaced by dogfighting. "These fights were often conducted in hastily prepared pits near the (coal) mines (of Staffordshire)," explain Lockwood and Investigator Paul Miller in a report to the HSUS. "As dogfighting became popular, there was greater selection for smaller and faster dogs."

Which is where the "genetic engineering" of today's 18-inch-high, barrel-chested, 30-70 pound powerhouse comes in. According to Lockwood and Miller, pit bulls were bred for certain qualities, many undesirable by present standards. The first, "gameness" was a willingness to attack despite injury and fatigue. The HSUS report found this has resulted in a lowered sensitivity to pain. "Many fighting breeds show no outward sign of disturbance by severe injuries," it states.

Jaw strength was another sought-after trait, with the pit bull's being up to seven times stronger than the average dog's. A 55-pound pit bull can exert up to 1,800 pounds of pressure per square inch. "Once the dog 'locks on' to a person or object, there is virtually no prying it apart," explains Dr. Robert Andryscio, an animal behavior specialist in Columbus.

Animals genetically selected for fighting "gain an advantage by not revealing their intentions or weaknesses," the report continues. Unlike other breeds, which give fair warning such as a growl, aggressive body language, and raising of neck and back hair, pit bulls "offer little or no indication that a(n) attack is imminent."

"Most animals give the other person or animal a chance to back off," Andryscio observes. "Two thousand years of genetic engineering tell the pit bull to attack until the other creature stops moving."

In the 1980s, "Pit bulls have become very popular with a bad element of society," asserts Sherry Silk of the Michigan Humane Society in Detroit. "Drug houses use them for protection, as do gangs. Teen-agers walk down the street with a dog, thinking it makes them macho and tough." She sighs. "These dogs are abused and chained and bred to fight each other and attack. And the more publicity they receive, the more this group finds them attractive." Although pit bulls displaying hostility to people were culled out by breeders, they have recently been crossed with canine species traditionally used against human intruders.

Max celebrated his birthday at a fabulous place.

Chances are, Max won't remember what a great time he had at The Family Birthing Center at Manchester Memorial Hospital. But his parents will never forget the wonderful experience.

From the moment they arrived, they enjoyed the special attention and personal care that are so hard to come by in some of the bigger hospitals. Throughout labor and delivery, Max's parents had the support of their own nurse in the privacy of their own birthing room, using the prepared child-birth methods they learned at the Center. After Max's arrival they celebrated with photo-taking, a champagne toast and hugs all around. All with the security and confidence that Max and Mom were getting the expert medical attention of Manchester Memorial's top-notch doctors and nursing staff.

After delivery, Mom was settled into her comfortable room where Max was welcome to "room-in" anytime. Dad even spent the night! The next day, Mom and Dad shared a special "Stork Club" gourmet dinner and got instructions on how to care for their little birthday boy.

If you see a "birth day" celebration in your future, The Family

Birthing Center would be delighted to show you their facilities and offer you more information. After all, doesn't your baby deserve as warm a welcome as little Max?

Astrograph

Your Birthday

Nov. 1, 1987

In the year ahead, you will reap benefits from seeds you've planted in the past. Several situations that looked as though they failed to take root will suddenly start to sprout and blossom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Members of the opposite sex will find you especially appealing today. If there is someone in that set you want to impress, this is the time to make your move. Major changes are ahead for Scorpios in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A concerned friend has nice things to say about you to others today. This person is interested in helping to improve your financial position.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An interesting experience is in store for you today, because you will learn by teaching. When you attempt to explain something to another, it will suddenly become crystal clear to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you are presently involved in a shared commercial venture, there are strong indications that both parties stand to benefit today. Good Luck!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) The most effective way for you to make a serious presentation today is to coat the hard points with touches of tact, humor and charm.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be helpful to others today. Kind gestures will make indelible impressions that will be remembered long after you've forgotten them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You are presently in Cupid's good graces — he'll do all that he can to make life pleasant for you and the one closest to your heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Give expression to your artistic urges today, and put your talents to work beautifying your surroundings. You'll do equally well inside or outside of your house.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Business and pleasure make a compatible mix today. If you have a client you'd like to impress, take this person out to lunch or dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're offered a business proposal today by one you know and trust, give it serious consideration. It might be an outstanding opportunity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Change your usual routines today to do something exciting and different. This can be a fun day for you if you get away from the grind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The aspects are favorable for personal accumulation today. Your gains could come in unorthodox ways, from unusual sources.

Seizure medication concerns couple

Wife wonders if anti-epileptic drugs affect pregnancy

By Dr. June Reinisch

The Kinsey Report

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 31 and began having seizures (grand mal and petit mal) five years ago. I have taken Dilantin for four years and still have a few seizures each year.

My husband and I have been talking about starting a family. What should I know about taking this drug and its effect on pregnancy? What effect would a seizure have on a fetus?

after anything I eat. I eat large amounts of food at least three times a day and throw it up again.

People tell me I am messing up my body; Am I? How? Believe me, if I could just stop, I would; but I can't. I've tried too many times, and two days without doing it was my limit.

Who can I go to for help? I know I need it.

P.S.: I am only 15. Will this stunt my growth?

DEAR READER: According to the manufacturer of Dilantin (an anti-epileptic drug), the majority of mothers who take anti-epileptic medications have normal babies, but they also state that there is a higher incidence of birth defects in children born to epileptic mothers and to epileptic mothers who take these drugs. It is not clear whether this greater risk is due to the medications or to the epileptic condition itself.

Ask your pharmacist for a copy of the product information insert for the type of Dilantin you are taking, or go to your local public library and ask a reference librarian to help you find information about your medication in a drug reference book. Reading this information should help you to make a list of more specific questions to ask your physician.

Then discuss the question of pregnancy with your physician. As you will have read, seizures can become more frequent during pregnancy and drug dosages may require close monitoring and readjustments. Babies born to epileptic mothers may also require special testing and treatment in the first few hours after birth.

If you or your husband still have unanswered questions about your condition or a future pregnancy, ask your physician to suggest an epilepsy expert with whom you can speak.

DEAR READER: I'm glad you're ready to look for help. Get your telephone book and look in the Yellow Pages under "Physicians and Surgeons." There should be a listing for a local medical society. Call them and ask who they could recommend for a young girl with an eating disorder.

The Yellow Pages also carries listings for individual physicians and clinics; many communities have specialists in eating disorders. In addition, a reference librarian at the public library can help you find the telephone number of the nearest medical school or large hospital that has an eating-disorders clinic.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My husband and I desperately want a child, but because he had a vasectomy nine years ago, we're looking into artificial insemination.

Is there a high risk of getting AIDS or do sperm banks screen donors thoroughly? I know it takes several weeks for the AIDS virus to show up and wonder if some virus is getting through undetected. Has it been proven that freezing semen kills the AIDS virus? Or should we even be considering artificial insemination?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: You and your husband should try to find a fertility specialist or clinic. After an evaluation, these experts can tell you which options are best for you and your husband. For example, they might recommend trying to surgically reverse his vasectomy.

The use of donor sperm does present some degree of risk for STDs (sexually transmitted diseases), including AIDS. The Centers for Disease Control have recently urged careful screening of sperm donors, but experts disagree on the exact procedures to use.

mess up your body seriously. For example, bulimia has been associated with abnormal kidney function, rupture of stomach due to eating large amounts of food, and imbalances of body fluids, in severe cases, leading to irregular heart function and death.

Menstrual cycles often are irregular or cease entirely, but the long-term effect on future fertility is not clear. Problems with tooth decay and gum disease are common because the mouth is subjected to the effects of digestive acids during vomiting. Abnormal levels of growth hormone have been reported with bulimia patients.

It will take a person experienced in diagnosing and treating eating disorders to decide whether you have bulimia or some other eating problem. Treatment will consist of stabilizing and monitoring your physical condition while helping you change your eating behavior.

You may need a great deal of psychological support in order to stop bingeing and purging. Treatment usually involves individual counseling, and, in some cases, counseling for other family members.

Don't delay seeking help. The sooner you get medical attention, the faster any health damage can be halted, treated and reversed.

Health

The electric energy of exercise

By Robert Brody

You've just polished off a five-mile run, or a swim in the Atlantic through the breakers, or maybe some full-court basketball. Now you're awash with a sense of well-being, electric with energy. You feel a rare clarity and quickness and a fluency of thought. Your mind pops with new ideas, new connections. Well, congratulations are in order. You've just climbed to an altered state of consciousness. Maybe you've even reached ecstasy, the feeling of being beside, beyond or outside of yourself.

What was once the province of poets and philosophers — this transcendental buzz — is now coming under the scrutiny of scientists in many disciplines. We're closer than ever to understanding what accounts for the exercise high, and why it's good for you.

Years ago, pioneer psychologist Abraham Maslow coined the term "peak experience" in reference to episodes of delight, clarity, or revelation. How does a vigorous workout bring on a peak experience?

At some point, scientists believe, your body issues a prescription to the pharmacy in your brain. After all, most known drugs — or the chemical cousins thereof — are already in the brain. The brain has its own private stock of amphetamines (dopamine), cocaine (norepinephrine), opiates (endorphins and enkephalins), tranquilizers (serotonin) and hallucinogens (dimethyltryptamine).

Arnold Mandell, professor of psychiatry at the University of California Medical School at San Diego, speculates that we may owe flashes of metaphysical lightning to our personal biochemistry. He theorizes that strenuous athletic activity leads to what he calls "the second second wind." Years of continuous exercise, he suggests, could even serve as "transcendence training" for keeping us all perpetually high.

To explain, he points to a possible clue: the hormone serotonin. It's a key chemical messenger produced from tryptophan, the amino acid component of protein in your diet.

The cells secrete serotonin as a tranquilizer to regulate sleep, appetite, pain, aggression, sexual behavior and overall emotional excitement. Mandell claims that serotonin is the spoilsport that dampens arousal, and that rapture is most likely brought on by the shutting down of serotonin synthesis.

This serotonin shutdown is at the root of all human spirituality and religious ecstasy. Mandell says. He believes the brain houses a built-in mechanism designed to get us high.

The exercise high is similar to the religious high, Mandell says, and appears to mimic the drug-induced high as well. Euphoria acts very much like an amphetamine in buoying mood and self-confidence, creating extra energy and hyper-alertness, diminishing appetite and anxiety.

How so? Well, brain scientists believe that the chemicals coursing through our temporal lobe limbic system in the brain may well constitute an intricate "reward-punishment" system that accounts for our feelings. All emotions, including elation, originate as electrochemical impulses in the cerebral cortex. Such impulses are sent scudding, via chemical couriers called neurotransmitters, across the synapses and along the "reward" circuits into the "pleasure" centers of the brain.

During a demanding workout, Mandell says, autoreceptors in your muscles may eventually stop serotonin nerve cells from firing signals to one another. With serotonin syntheses altogether arrested, it's a bit like giving yourself a "jump start."

In throwing the brakes on serotonin syntheses, Mandell says, we create theta waves in the brain, possibly enhancing our powers of memory and cognition, creativity and concentration. Over the long haul, we could reverse lingering habits and free our senses to savor new stimuli. Years of vigorous athletic training could give us fresh energy and born-again hope, a lifelong defense against despair, maybe even a ticket to truth and beauty.

But hold on a minute now. Does this explanation mean we can concoct a recipe for bliss? Hardly. For starters, the answer lies somewhat in aerobics. Heavy breathing makes your heart pump faster. Fresh blood pours into your body cells and tissues for manufacture of adenosine triphosphate. Vital nutrients are synthesized into energy. The brain gets in a new shipment of revitalized, heavily oxygenated blood, in turn delivering new nutrients to circulate through your body.

It's as if your brain, somewhat computer-like, goes on-line.

Richard Solomon, psychology professor at the University of Pennsylvania, believes this special afterglow springs from simple stress relief, a sense of pride in proving oneself equal to a challenge. You've pumped a few extra reps on the Nautilus or run a mile farther than your personal best. "The key is intensity of effort," he says. "The more stressful the activity, the better the buzz."

Even so, fatigue and relief from stress are not always translated into a state of divine grace. Though some weekend athletes find euphoria in exercise, others find only discomfort, hardship and misery.

Reason: Your attitude toward the activity at hand comes into play. In the aftermath, you may often feel exactly as you expected to feel, depending on whether you saw the exercise as fun or drudgery or something in between. "It's like a placebo effect," says Rod Dishman, exercise physiologist at the University of Georgia in Atlanta. "The bottom line is your expectations."

How will the high-on-health mystique pan out?

First off, new evidence shows that we may learn best when alert, motivated, aroused — all characteristics of the exercise high. During euphoria, both brain hemispheres seem to achieve exquisite electrical equipoise — you think with your whole brain.

In addition, the brain gives off alpha waves, regarded as ideal for clarity of mind, sustained attention, improved cognition, imagination and creativity. In our bliss, we may have easier access to our subconscious, our deepest thoughts, our truest feelings.

Down the road, we may see less reliance on prescription drugs for mood disorders, less drug addiction and alcoholism, fewer psychologists, and growing emphasis on exercise "therapy" for the sick and elderly.

"Feeling happy is a function of a viable culture," says Charles Tart, author of "States of Consciousness." "Altered states remind us that we're much more than we think we are. Through ecstasy, we can get a glimpse of our real selves."

TIPS ON TAPPING IN

Can we draw ecstasy from inside ourselves as if through the spout of a picnic thermos? Can we, in fact, shift it into a higher mode of being?

Listen — it's certainly worth a try.

No single formula exists, though, says Chris Meade of the New York Sports Training Institute: "It's like driving a car. First you have to know how to put in the key."

Remember: Euphoria should be spontaneous, not willed. You're trying not so much to induce elation as to let it wash over you.

Herewith, some tips on tapping in:

- Breathe deeply and evenly through your diaphragm.
- Empty your thoughts. Put yourself on automatic pilot. Try to drift into a trance-like state.
- Tune in to your physical sensations, to the details of your body action.

- Focus only on the activity at hand, the present moment, the tennis ball spinning briskly into view.
- Operate at an intensity reasonably comfortable for you.
- "You should be pretty open-minded," says psychologist Charles Tart. "You need a certain mindset to reach euphoria. Keep yourself open to the experience."

A final tip: make sure you pick an activity you find satisfying.

"Everyone has the potential to experience the buzz," says William Glasser, M.D., author of "Positive Addiction." "But the key is to like what you're doing."

The secrets of an oyster lover

By Ted Larsen

If your only introduction to oysters were to be through their dictionary definition, you might be revolted. Who in their right mind would willingly touch their lips to "...any of several edible bivalve mollusks found in brackish waters and marshes"? But as I always say, "Don't judge a bivalve by its shell."

It's easy for me to make such generous remarks now, since I became an "SOE (Equal Opportunity Eater)." But in those sad days when I was a mollusk bigot, I viewed oysters with suspicion. The thought of raw oysters was extremely unsettling. Their consistency was too gelatinous, their pallor too indolent and, well — purple. Long ago my mother had warned me of the dangers of purple food.

When my oyster prejudice finally fell, it collapsed immediately and completely. While lunching with a worldly friend 15 years ago, I suspiciously followed his suggestion of an extra-dry martini followed by a dozen oysters, spawled on their bottom shells. He also prescribed all the classic accompaniments: oyster crackers, cocktail sauce, horseradish, Tabasco and lemon.

The martini did wonders for my bravery as I protectively filled my mouth with crackers and placed condiments on the quivering oyster with the care of a bomb-squad technician.

Still unconvinced, I lifted the loaded fork to my mouth. Talk about a delicious surprise! I immediately inhaled the other oysters in record time. They remain one of my favorite foods.

Oysters have been cultivated for at least 2,000 years, usually as a delicacy. But American Indians considered them a daily staple. Early settlers were agog over their abundance, and oysters became as American as apple pie. The poor ate them with beer, the wealthy with champagne. As the East Coast shippers found ways to keep up with the demand, pickled and canned oysters found their way to sea hats on the prairie.

It is difficult to imagine today just how "oyster-happy" Americans were in the 1800s. A dozen was considered a snack. Oyster bars were fixtures, even in small cities. Suddenly economic development spoiled all this abundance as pollution from growing cities cast a deadly cloud over hundreds of harbor beds. When the Industrial Revolution reached maturity in the 1880s, the "age of the oyster" ended.

Despite their luxury, shucked oysters are a calorie bargain with a mere 300 to the pound. There is also something to all that sturr about only eating oysters in months containing an "r." From May to August they are busy spawning and are less meaty and flavorful. After all, even homely bivalves have social lives... at oyster bars, of course.

I am convinced that roast oysters are one of the finest and simplest ways of enjoying the luxurious mollusks. The lovely sauce brings the package closer to perfection.

ROAST OYSTERS WITH RED PEPPER CREAM

- 2 dozen oysters, well scrubbed
- 6 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1 (6-ounce) jar roasted sweet red peppers
- 1/2 cup clam juice
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
- salt
- pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon chives, fresh or dried

Preheat oven to 450F. Roast the oysters, unopened, on a cookie sheet for 10-15 minutes or until the shells open. Do not overcook. While oysters are cooking, puree drained peppers, clam juice and heavy cream in a blender until very smooth. Pour into a saucepan and cook over high heat until reduced by about half, stirring constantly.

Remove from heat and whisk in butter, cut in small pieces, until sauce is smooth and silky. Add chives and salt and pepper to taste. Serve oysters on their lower shell with a tablespoon of sauce spooned over the top.

Serves 4.

HINTS

This recipe works equally well with fresh clams or mussels. For a smoky variation, add 2 tablespoons of finely chopped, cooked bacon to the completed sauce.

For a slightly more complex variation, sprinkle 1/2 cup of freshly grated Parmesan cheese over the sauced oysters and place under a hot broiler for 2 minutes, to brown.

In the Caribbean a similar hearty soup is made with conch. Oysters add an elegant North American touch to this great one-dish meal.

OYSTER CHOWDER WITH PEAS AND RICE

- 3 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 rib celery, minced
- 1 cup clam juice
- 2 cups water
- 1 cup white rice
- 1 cup fresh parsley, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

- 1 1/2 cups peas, fresh or frozen
- 1/2 cup pintos, cut in squares
- 3 cups milk
- 2 cups fresh oysters with liquid
- cayenne pepper
- nutmeg, grated

In a large saucepan, melt butter and saute onion, garlic and celery until onion turns golden. Do not brown. Add clam juice, water, rice, parsley, salt and pepper. Bring to boil and cook, covered, 20 minutes.

Add peas and simmer 5 minutes. Then add the remaining items and increase heat to medium, but do not boil. Cook for 3 minutes, then reduce heat to a simmer. Cook until oysters slump up and edges curl. Overcooking will toughen oysters. Serve with a sprinkle of cayenne and nutmeg.

Serves 6.

HINTS

This soup tastes best if made a day ahead and carefully reheated. For a thicker chowder, add 1/2 cup instant potatoes with the peas.

For a more complex flavor, add 2 tablespoons dry sherry or to taste.

Here is a simple way to elevate the status of lowly cod to royalty in 30 minutes or less.

BROILED COD WITH OYSTER SAUCE

- 2 cod steaks or fillet
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- pinch sweet Hungarian paprika
- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1 medium shallot, finely chopped
- 3 tablespoons fresh chives, finely chopped
- 1 pint oysters, shucked.

- with liquid
- 1/2 teaspoon Pernod
- 1 cup heavy cream
- salt
- pepper

Preheat broiler. Whisk oil, lemon juice and paprika together. Pat cod dry of any excess moisture and paint with oil/lemon mixture. Set aside.

Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in a heavy saucepan. Add shallots and saute over medium heat until tender but not browned.

Drain oysters but reserve liquid. Add them to butter and shallots. Stir frequently and cook until firm, about 2 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons of chopped chives and the reserved liquid, straining out any pieces of shell. Reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes.

Remove from heat and place all contents of pan into blender. Puree at high speed until smooth.

Put cod steaks on a broiler rack and place 5 inches under broiler. Brush at least once with oil/lemon baste. Return contents of blender jar to saucepan and increase heat to high. Bring to boil. Reduce by about one-quarter. Add cream and bring to a boil again. Reduce again by one-quarter.

Remove from broiler and keep warm. To finish sauce, whisk in remaining chopped chives and butter. To serve, place a pool of sauce on each plate topped with a cod steak. Fish can be garnished with additional chives if desired.

HINTS

This recipe works equally well with swordfish or halibut.

For an especially luxurious garnish, reserve four of the poached oysters, dip in the finished sauce and place them on fish.

Hall! Hall! Rock 'n' Roll! (PG) This tasty musical tribute to Chuck Berry proves its point — that the 61-year-old composer of "Maybelline" and "Johnny B. Goode" is still the purest rocker of them all. Daddy of the duckwalk, dean of street doggerel, Berry has triumphed in a field known for burnout — marshalling his talents with businessman's cunning while cloaking himself in enigma.

This Berry-produced documentary offers an authorized view that suits the star's legend, but it also shows the control that goes into sustaining that legend. Directed by Taylor Hackford ("An Officer and a Gentleman"), with musical performances produced by Berry admirer Keith Richards, "Hall! Hall!" is a celebration of a thorny showman.

To honor Berry's 60th birthday in October 1986, Keith Richards assembled a top-notch group for a concert with the maestro at the resplendently restored Fox Theatre in St. Louis. This film is largely a record of that event, joined to behind-the-scenes rehearsal footage. The latter shows why Richards can say with impunity that Berry is even more trouble to work with than Mick Jagger.

Some attempt is also made to sketch in Berry's career, without much help from the star. (He may have wanted to save some juicy material for his just-published autobiography). Interspersed throughout are comments and reminiscences from Bruce Springsteen, Jerry Lee Lewis, Bo Diddley and a hilariously hyped-up Little Richard.

The handsomely photographed concert includes somewhat out-of-place contributions by Julian Lennon and Linda Ronstadt — performers clearly included to widen the film's audience. But there's a galvanic, full-throttle number by Etta James, and Berry and band are almost consistently spectacular. This musical documentary is a rare tribute that doesn't settle for fawning: It validates Berry's greatness without diminishing his cockiness. Grade: *****

Suspect (R) Loaded with trendy topical touches and attractive, talented performers, this suspense thriller nevertheless comes to naught. It alternates between talky courtroom scenes, convoluted plot developments and several throat slashings.

A crimped-haired Cher stars as a Washington, D.C., public defender with almost no life beyond her work. She's assigned to defend a homeless, deaf-and-dumb Vietnam vet accused of murder. On the jury sits a Washington lobbyist (Dennis Quaid) a devious charmer who is not above violating the law to please the groups he lobbies for — or to feed crucial evidence outside the courtroom to the public defender.

Directed by Peter Yates, the movie fashionably partakes of the current expectation of corruption in high places, making the real murderer a well-respected government official. A plot full of holes is never fashionable, though — the lead actors are left stranded. Cher comes through a warmly anyway, even though she's not ideally cast as a workaholic do-gooder who doesn't have a date on Friday nights. While he seems to have fun playing a slippery snake of a guy, Dennis Quaid has looked better in other films. The theater-bred supporting cast injects some personality, but the material is hopelessly hokey. Grade: ****

50th anniversary

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kitty Wells, the Queen of Country Music, and her husband, country star Johnny Wright, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Friday.

Asked the secret of their long marriage, Wright said: "The only answer I can give is that we're not jealous of each other. I've tried to help her and she's helped me."

"We're together constantly," Ms. Wells said. "We've worked together and traveled together and been at home together for 50 years."

Ms. Wells, a Country Music Hall of Famer, popularized many country standards, including "Release Me" and her signature song, "I Wasn't God Who Made Honky Tonk Angels."

Wright's 1965 solo hit "Hello Vietnam" introduced Tom T. Hall's songwriting and has recently gained attention again with the release of the movie "Full Metal Jacket."

Leading film actors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Guillaume, Danny Glover, Eddie Murphy, Dexter Gordon and Robert Townsend were nominated as leading film actors for the 20th annual Image Awards presented by the National Association of Colored People.

However, the association made no nominations in the leading actress category this year because officials said Thursday they found no movie that cast a black actress in a positive starring role.

Guillaume starred in "Wanted Dead or Alive." Glover in "Lethal Weapon," Murphy in "Beverly Hills Cop II," Gordon in "Round Midnight," and Townsend in "Hollywood Shuffle."

Planning for the worst

By James Jacoby

Willy Nilly was back in his element with today's deal, stroking the dummy with aplomb and completely overlooking the right play to cover most of the bases. He won the ace of spades and first mentally congratulated himself for being clever enough to open one no-trump with a six-card minor suit. Of course he was looking at six potential club tricks, the spade ace and the A-K of diamonds for a total of nine tricks. So he played a club to dummy's ace and a club back to his king. When West showed out on the second club, Willy lost his aplomb and the contract. He was set two tricks.

Please don't think I am suggesting that Willy should have taken a club finesse. That is not the right percentage play in the suit. Here is how Careful

Charlie hit upon the right play for the deal as a whole. Charlie won the first spade. He then played the king of clubs and a club to dummy's ace. He too was confronted with the bad news that the club suit was not working. But unlike Willy, he had arranged to be in the right hand at the right time. Since he was in dummy, he was able to play a low diamond and finesse the jack. That worked, so he was able to cash the club queen and run the diamond suit for the nine tricks that Willy found to be so elusive.

Bidding lesson: With 15-17 high-card points and a six-card minor, open one no-trump with a balanced hand unless you have a worthless doubleton in a side-suit.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

from CONSUMER REPORTS

Cheap cars offer quality

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

The world's auto makers have rediscovered the huge American market for cheap, basic transportation. Now, it seems every manufacturer outside of Detroit is offering a low-priced little car.

There are two types of cheap cars: Those that are originally low-priced, such as the Hyundai Excel, Chevrolet Sprint and Ford Festiva; and cars that are the least-expensive versions of models that normally sell for $8,000 to $10,000, such as the basic two-door Honda Civic and Toyota Tercel.

Consumer Reports' auto engineers recently tested the basic versions of the 1987 Honda Civic and the Dodge Colt E.

For a small car with a $5,900 price tag, the 1987 Honda Civic offers superior handling, excellent braking and a remarkably comfortable ride.

The engine and transmission of the basic 1987 Civic two-door hatchback are different from those in other Civics. The four-cylinder engine is smaller (1.3 liters compared with 1.5 liters) and the manual transmission has four speeds, not five. Civic's basic version for 1988 has a bigger engine and costs a bit more.

Standard equipment on the 1987 Civic tested includes a four-speed manual transmission, power brakes, rear-window defroster and remote-control outside mirror. Adding a right-hand outside mirror and stereo radio raised the price to about $7,000, including destination charge.

The engine sometimes started reluctantly, and stalled occasionally after a cold start. The basic 1987 Civic has a carburetor instead of fuel injection, which makes it more likely to run erratically. Expect about 38 miles per gallon overall.

The car offered exceptionally good steering response and road feel. Handling was quick and precise in routine driving, nimble in accident-avoidance tests.

In bumper-bashing tests, the front bumper was undamaged. But repairs to the bent rear bumper were estimated at nearly $500.

The Honda Civic has proved to be one of the most trouble-free cars made, and among the cheapest to fuel and maintain.

The basic Dodge Colt E is a peppy performer and very reliable. It's essentially the same as the Plymouth Colt and Mitsubishi Mirage, and lists for under $6,000.

The two-door hatchback tested comes with a 1.5-liter four-cylinder engine, four-speed manual transmission and power brakes. Missing from the basic Colt: a right outside mirror and, more unfortunate still, a day/night rear-view mirror. With a dealer-installed stereo radio, the Colt E cost $6,400, including destination charge.

The car started easily and ran well most of the time. Acceleration was good and braking was faultless. Fuel economy was thrifty without sacrificing performance. Expect about 34 mpg overall.

The Colt's steering response felt a bit sluggish. Handling was predictable, but somewhat sloppy in routine driving. In accident-avoidance maneuvers, handling was also sloppy and sluggish.

The Colt's ride was harsh, especially when fully loaded. The suspension jerked and hammered hard on back roads. Rear-seat passengers felt particularly abused.

The car earned top marks in the engineers' bumper-bashing tests: It survived unscathed. Predicted reliability for the Colt E is excellent.

Low-Beam Headlights Safer For Fog, Rain

In poor weather conditions such as fog, rain, and snow, use low-beam headlights to increase visibility. Recognize that these conditions make the road slippery and affect your ability to start, stop and turn.

When you are blinded by the high beams of another vehicle, switch your lights to low beams; reduce your speed, and look to the right edge of the pavement as a guide until the danger has passed.

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

How to shop for vintage cars

By Peter Bohr, Contributing Editor, Road & Track

I bought an 18-year-old MGB roadster recently. For a measly $1,700, I couldn't resist. Wire wheels, British racing green paint, twin carburetors and cozy seats for two — the car had the sentimental pull of a steam engine.

When Thoreau remarked that most men live lives of quiet desperation, he may have foreseen 20th century citizens slogging through rush-hour traffic in gas-guzzling Impalas.

But driving a cheap and cheerful MGB along a tree-lined back road in Southern California, with the top down and the smell of orange blossoms wafting through the cockpit, is an experience even Thoreau might have savored. And all for the price of a down payment on some new and boring econo-car.

Of course, buying any used car, whether it's a sporty convertible or a family sedan, is always a bit of a gamble. The typical 1970 or 1975 model car will have suffered through three or four owners, a couple of crack-ups, an engine or two, 120,000 miles and basically will be a clapped-out heap.

The savvy used-car buyer's task is to find the exception. Here are some tips:

• Have patience. The ideal used car is complete, well-running, unrestored and is being sold by its original owner. That way you have a good idea of what you are getting.

But such cream puffs take time to find. I must have passed over a dozen MGBs before I found the one that seemed to have my name on it.

• Look underneath the car for rust. Shiny paint, unblemished seats and even a smooth-running engine mean nothing until you've gotten down on your hands and knees and inspected the car's underside for insidious rust bubbles.

Paint, upholstery and mechanical components can always be replaced or rebuilt, but widespread corrosion is forever.

• Unless you wield a mean compression gauge, always have an expert mechanic examine a prospective purchase before you buy.

Good mechanics can also usually spot signs of any botched collision repairs in addition to checking the condition of the drivetrain.

• Do a little research on the strengths — and especially the weaknesses — of the kind of car you wish to buy. Ask mechanics familiar with the model for their thoughts. Check "Consumer Reports" annual auto issue for frequency-of-repair records.

And if a sporty car like the MG appeals to you, pardon a plug here for my book, "Road & Track's Used Car Classics, Revised Second Edition" (by Peter Bohr, $12.95 at bookstores, or $15.95 including postage from Road & Track, P.O. Box 749, Holmes, PA 19043). It contains detailed buying advice on some 70 older cars, from BMWs to Volkswagens.

• Remember the axiom taught to every first-year marketing student. The market, not your costs, determine the price or value of a product. Although I paid $1,700 for my MG, if I were to spend $1,500 on an engine rebuild, $1,500 on paint and body work, and $300 on tires, that doesn't necessarily mean the car will be worth $5,000.

In the long run, it's better to pay a little more for the cream puff than buy a "bargain" that needs expensive repairs.

• Leave some cash in the piggy bank for the maintenance that previous owners invariably neglected.

Even if you're careful to buy a car that requires no major repairs, it will almost always need several hundred dollars worth of work to put it in top shape. Relatively minor things like hoses, mufflers, bushings and batteries can add up quickly. By the time I replace the worn-out clutch master cylinder, shock absorbers, convertible top and have the car tuned up, I'll have invested about $2,600 in my MG.

Of course part of the charm of owning a basic, inexpensive old car is that with some time and a shop manual, you can fix it yourself. Which certainly beats wasting weekends on the yard.

Lakers want to defend title

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

The only thing the Los Angeles Lakers haven't accomplished in the Magic Johnson era is win consecutive championships. No one in the NBA has done that since the 1969 Boston Celtics, but this could be the year.

Boston is a year older and will play without the injured Kevin McHale until December or January, jeopardizing the homecourt advantage the Celtics needed so desperately last spring in the playoffs.

Dallas, Detroit and Atlanta have the players to challenge, but they did little to improve themselves in the off-season and lack championship-round experience.

Houston has Twin Towers Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson signed and healthy, but the never-ending search for a backcourt continues.

Seattle and Chicago are stocked with young talent and took big steps to improve themselves, but both lost more often than they won last season and can't be expected to make the giant leap to the top.

AP photo

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) and his Laker teammates want to do something that no team in the NBA has done in recent times, namely defend their championship.

So AS THE NBA OPENS its 42nd season next Friday, Coach Pat Riley is feeling frisky about the Lakers' chances of a fifth title in this decade and a repeat of last June's championship.

"Repeating is the only thing left for this team," Riley said. "It's something that could make us special. It's a two-year window we have to face."

After winning the 1987 title, Riley said the Lakers would win again this season.

"When we win in June, I guaranteed that we would repeat," Riley said. "I'm not a boaster as a rule, but I still stand by that statement because I believe we can rise to the challenge."

Riley is standing pat with the lineup that won a league-best 65 games in the regular season.

Even if free agents Jeff Lamp and Milt Wagner crack the roster, they won't take playing time away from the seven-man nucleus: 40-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, MVP Johnson, James Worthy, A.C. Green, Byron Scott, Mychal Thompson and Michael Cooper.

Riley said past champions took a defensive stance against the rest of the league.

"We don't want to take the attitude of defending champion because that means we're 'fending off' the other teams," Riley said. "We want to have the attitude of teams like Dallas and Atlanta that want to go out and win it the first time."

TO REPEAT THE LAKERS must avoid the kind of injuries that sabotaged Boston last season.

"The main area we can improve is the health area," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said, but his team was already hobbled.

"Kevin McHale might be out until January and the earliest we can expect Bill Walton is March," Jones said.

But with a starting lineup that includes Larry Bird, Robert Parish, Dennis Johnson and Danny Ainge, the Celtics should be able to win the Atlantic Division again and battle Detroit and Atlanta for the best record in the Eastern Conference. Rookies Reggie Lewis and Brad Lohaus and free-agent acquisition Mike O'Koren could give relief to the overworked starters.

The Julius Erving era is over in Philadelphia, but rebounding champion Charles Barkley and guard Maurice Cheeks will keep the 76ers from falling far. Other keys will be the improvement of center Tim McCormick and whether Andrew Toney steps forward at shooting guard.

Washington, New Jersey and New York, with new Coach Rick Pitino, should bring up the rear in the Atlantic Division. All three could be squeezed out of the playoffs by teams from the strong Central Division.

The Pistons, who came within a Larry Bird steal of upsetting the Celtics in the playoffs, have a good mix of veterans Isiah Thomas, Bill Laimbeer and Adrian Dantley and young players Dennis Rodman, Joe Dumars and John Salley. William Bedford, the No. 6 pick in the 1986 draft who got involved in the Phoenix drug scandal, could be a steal or a divisive factor.

ATLANTA ADDED JUMPING-JACK rookie Dallas Comegys to a stable of strong players who appear to lack only maturity. Dominique Wilkins no longer has to score 30 points for the Hawks to win thanks to a supporting group of Kevin Willis, Glenn Rivers, Randy Wittman, Spud Webb and Cliff Levingston.

Chicago hopes to rely less on Michael Jordan. Last season he became the only player other than Wilt Chamberlain to score 3,000 points in a season, but the Bulls finished 40-42.

Swingman Scottie Pippen and 6-10 forward Horace Grant will make the team along with 7-2 Artis Gilmore, no longer an All-Star at 38 but able to provide inside help to forward Charles Oakley.

"Michael shouldn't have to take every big shot," Chicago Coach Doug Collins said. "We got too predictable in close games last season. We were 5-16 in games decided by three points or less, and we need to turn that around."

Milwaukee won 50 games but had its streak of six straight division titles snapped last season. The Bucks have a new coach in Del Harris, replacing highly regarded Don Nelson, and pivotal star Sidney Moncrief is on the sidelines with knee problems.

Ricky Pierce, the NBA's top sixth man, and fellow guards John Lucas and Craig Hodges missed training camp with contract problems.

CLEVELAND'S RON HARPER, Brad Daugherty and John Williams all made the NBA all-rookie team, and Indiana has young frontcourt talent in Chuck Person, Wayman Tisdale and Herb Williams. But both teams need a few years to make progress in a strong division.

In the West, Houston will improve if Sampson and Olajuwon stay healthy, while Dallas, which won the Midwest Division for the first time, has to overcome the shock of losing to Seattle in the first round of the playoffs.

Mark Aguirre, Sam Perkins, James Donaldson, Rolando Blackman and Derek Harper form a solid starting five for new Coach John MacLeod, but the Mavericks didn't have a productive draft for the first time since 1982.

It could be a breakthrough year for Utah, which added strength in a fitness conference when it acquired Darryl Dawkins and Melvin Turpin while giving up little. Karl Malone is an emerging all-star forward for the Jazz, who could win the division if Darrell Griffith regains his shooting touch.

Denver also is hoping for a comeback, from oft-injured forward Calvin Natt to help high-scoring Alex English. Sacramento might do better to hire Bill Russell as a player rather than as a coach, while San Antonio must wait and pray that No. 1 draft pick David Robinson will some day sign the Spurs' dotted line.

Seattle, with 20-point scorers Xavier McDaniel, Dale Ellis and Tom Chambers, had two top 10 draft picks in Olden Polynice and Derrick McKey.

Rose Bowl slots are up for grabs

By Herschel Nilsen
The Associated Press

What happens Saturday will go a long way toward determining who goes to the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

In Tempe, Ariz., seventh-ranked UCLA (6-1 overall, 4-0 in the Pac-10) meets Arizona State (5-2, 2-1). Meanwhile, No. 20 Michigan State (4-2-1 overall, 3-0-1 in the Big Ten) visits No. 15 Ohio State (5-1-1, 3-1). Eleventh-ranked Indiana, which leads the Big Ten at 4-0, visits Iowa.

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue says that "whoever is fortunate enough to win this game has the opportunity to control their own destiny. That's very important going into the last three weeks of the schedule. But that doesn't mean whoever wins this game is going to the Rose Bowl."

Besides Michigan State-Ohio State the weekend's only other game between members of the Associated Press Top Twenty has 10th-ranked Florida (5-2 over-all, 2-1 in the Southeastern Conference) at No. 6 Auburn (6-0-1, 2-0-1) under the lights. Fifth-ranked LSU (6-0-1, 3-0) the league leader, has a night game against Mississippi in Jackson while No. 12 Georgia (6-2, 3-1) is idle and No. 16 Alabama (5-2, 2-1) plays Mississippi State at night in Birmingham.

The nation's top three teams are on the road — No. 1 Oklahoma at Kansas, No. 2 Nebraska at Missouri and third-ranked Miami, Fla. at East Carolina.

Rounding out the Top Ten, fourth-ranked Florida State entertains Tulane under the lights. No. 8 Syracuse visits Pitt and ninth-ranked Notre Dame plays host to Navy.

In the Second Ten, No. 13 Tennessee is at Boston College. Wake Forest at No. 14 Clemson. Kansas State at No. 17 Oklahoma State. West Virginia at No. 18 Penn State and North Carolina State at No. 19 South Carolina.

After this week, UCLA plays Oregon State, Washington and Southern Cal. Arizona State's remaining opponents are Oregon, California and Arizona.

"The players are looking forward to playing Arizona State," Donahue says. "But players look forward to big games. They knew all along this would be a big game."

Jets, Colts in big matchup

By Bob Greene
The Associated Press

Ken O'Brien (7) and his Jets' teammates meet the Indianapolis Colts Sunday in an AFC East clash between two of the top four in the division.

There's a logjam at the top of the AFC East with four teams tied for first place.

That could change this Sunday when two of the top teams — the Indianapolis Colts and New York Jets — battle at Giants Stadium.

"The standings are no surprise — nothing in this league ever surprises me," said New York wide receiver Wesley Walker, an 11-year NFL veteran. "It's circumstances."

"But it would be surprising if this was the end of the season."

It could be the beginning of the end for the loser. The Colts, Jets, New England Patriots and Buffalo Bills all are at 3-3. Only Miami, 2-4, is not tied for the lead.

"We feel we're in a position to make a move, to control our destiny," Indianapolis Coach Ron Meyer said. "Last week was a big win, against the defending (division) champion Patriots. No question it was a boost to morale."

Meyer has led the Colts to a 6-3 record since being named head coach near the end of last season. Going into Sunday's game, Indianapolis has won three consecutive divisional games.

"They're well-coached, they try to stay basic and beat you up," Jets quarterback Ken O'Brien said. "They've had the same philosophy as long as I've been here — they make you make mistakes."

In other games Sunday, it will be Houston at Cincinnati, Kansas City at Chicago, the Los Angeles Raiders at New England, New Orleans at Atlanta, Philadelphia at St. Louis, Pittsburgh at Miami, Tampa Bay vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Washington at Buffalo, Cleveland at San Diego, Detroit at Denver, Minnesota at Seattle, and San Francisco at the Los Angeles Rams.

On Monday night, the New York Giants will be at Dallas.

rivals Buffalo and the Jets.

"I don't even pay attention to those games," Holmes said. "The replacement stuff is behind us. This is a game for first place and we're acting like we haven't played them before."

Bo Jackson, the Heisman Trophy winner from Auburn who decided to concentrate on baseball, will make his NFL debut for the Los Angeles Raiders against New England.

Jackson suited up but didn't play last Sunday against Seattle. The Seahawks led 22-0 at halftime forcing Raiders Coach Tom Flores to concentrate on passing and keep Jackson on the bench.

When he announced during the baseball season that he would play for the Raiders, Jackson said football was a hobby.

"Not for me," New England linebacker Don Blackmon said. "This is the way I pay my bills and feed my family. This is a job for me."

Blackmon said focusing on Jackson could be harmful to the Patriots. The Raiders have more proven offensive weapons in running back Marcus Allen and tight end Todd Christensen.

"If he Jackson comes in, he's a factor but we're concentrating on the game," Blackmon said. "We don't know how they're going to feature him so we can't concentrate on him."

Patriots Coach Raymond Berry said he plans to stick with Tony Eason as his starting quarterback even though Steve Grogan apparently has recovered from a nerve problem that weakened his throwing arm.

"We need a win," New England free safety Fred Marion said. "I'm not going to say it's a make-or-break week. There are still a lot of games left."

The season's first meeting between Houston and Cincinnati will determine whether the Oilers' 4-2 are on the upswing.

Americans aren't marathon threats

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Shorter, the 1972 Olympic marathon champion, says it's clear why Americans don't win marathons anymore.

"The fact is we have no good American distance runners," Shorter said Friday, the day before turned 40 and two days before he competes in the New York City Marathon.

Not since Alberto Salazar dominated the marathon during the early 1980s, winning the New York City Marathon from 1980-82 and the Boston Marathon in 1982, and Greg Meyer won Boston in 1983, have Americans done exceptionally well in the event.

Not Shorter, not Bill Rodgers — a four-time winner of the New York and Boston marathons earlier in his career — not Salazar, not Meyer, not anyone.

Shorter said American road racers have prospered both financially and somewhat artistically, because it is much easier to run in shorter races more frequently than the 26-mile, 385-yard marathon tests.

"Americans have them (the shorter races) thrown at them week in and week out," Shorter said. "Americans race too much."

"In other countries... big money races are not held very often. So foreigners can pick their events. They can decide which events they want to compete in. And they can point for them."

That is why Italian runners have done so well in the New York event, Shorter said.

Italians have won the last three races, with Orlando Pizzolato finishing first in 1984 and 1985, and Gianni Poli No. 1 last year.

The Manchester High freshman football team crushed Fermi High of Enfield, 34-12, Friday afternoon. Terry Perry scored two touchdowns for the young Indians while Kevin Martinez, who rushed for 117 yards, scored the other two TDs. John Rossetti, Dean Maleski and Dwayne Goldston added the conversion points. Offensively, Norm LaRose, Dana LaPointe, Jon Corbett, John Corbin, and Rob Bovee played well. Defensively, Dennis Tardona, Chris Menna, Alex Williams, Bovee, and Bill Polare played well. Walter Scott had two interceptions and Donald Duboldo added one for the 3-2 Indians. Manchester's last game of the season is next Friday at home against Enfield.

MNS JV girls' soccer

The Manchester High junior varsity girls' soccer team shut out Rockville High, 2-0, Friday afternoon. Julie Holmes and Melanie Harley each scored a goal for Manchester. Others playing well for the Indians were Karen Harley, Erin Egan, and Almy Adabbo. Manchester's record is now 6-5-1.

MNS JV boys' soccer

The Manchester High junior varsity boys' soccer team dropped its first of the season Friday, 2-1 to visiting Rockville High. Danny Langer had the lone Manchester goal. David Chokos, Lucas Cosgrove, Greg Murray and Mike Coligan played well for the young Indians, now 12-1-1 for the season.

Thomas Hearns holds aloft the middleweight championship belt he won Thursday night when he knocked out Juan Roldan in their title fight in Las Vegas. Hearns wants to fight either Sugar Ray Leonard or Marvin Hagler next.

Hearns looking for rematches

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Thomas Hearns would like to turn to the past for his boxing future. "Basically I would like a rematch somewhere down the line with Ray Leonard or Marvin Hagler," the first fighter ever to win four titles said Friday.

Hagler is more interested in a rematch with Leonard than with Hearns, while Leonard insists he will not fight again.

"The only reason I would come out of retirement is for Ray," Hagler said after serving as a television commentator Thursday night on Hearn's fourth-round knockout of Juan Roldan for the World Boxing Council middleweight title.

"I don't have any interest in Tommy," said Leonard, who also was at ringside. "I'm happy for him, but that's all."

"I think both of those guys will fight again," Emanuel Steward, Hearns' manager-trainer said. "Marvin definitely is going to fight again. I'm sure of that."

"I believe Marvin and Ray want to fight again," promoter Bob Arum said. "My game plan is to talk to both of those camps."

Arum also said he felt a Hearns rematch with either Leonard or Hagler would be a bigger fight than a Leonard-Hagler rematch.

"Tommy winning a fourth title killed off all talk of a Hagler-Leonard rematch without one of them going through Tommy," Arum said.

Leonard stopped Hearns in the 14th round for the undisputed welterweight title in 1981, while Hagler scored a sensational third-round knockout of Hearns in defense of the undisputed middleweight title in 1985.

Leonard upset Hagler on a split decision last April 6, then retired again.

"What I'd love to see happen," Steward said, "is in April of '88 for Tommy to fight Marvin or Ray, and then for the one who doesn't fight in April to fight the winner."

"I could be very, very satisfied by fighting both guys and being victorious in both fights," Hearns said.

Hearns, one of 10 fighters to win three titles, made history with a smashing right hand that knocked out Roldan at 2:01 of the fourth round of an action-packed fight.

D.C. Int'l wide open race

By Dick Joyce
The Associated Press

LAUREL, Md. — In sizing up Saturday's $750,000 Washington D.C. International turf race, Soviet trainer Nikolai Nasibov compared it to "a dark forest — nobody can see anything."

It was Nasibov's way of saying any of the 14 horses, including his own, Gjatsk, can win the 36th running of the 4 1/4-mile event at Laurel Race Course. The field is the largest and richest in the history of the International.

Dick Dutrow, who trains Takakeno, one of the five horses representing the United States, was more succinct.

"It's a wide open race," he said, because Manila and Dance of Life have retired and Theatrical, winner of five graded Stakes, is skipping the race.

Anka Germana, another U.S. representative and winner of five straight races, was installed as the 3-1 early favorite. She is a 5-year-old Irish-bred mare.

Takakeno, a 7-year-old horse who has won three of 10 starts this year, is 9-2.

The intriguing aspect of this year's race is the presence of the two Iron Curtain entrants — Gjatsk, 20-1, and Omen, 15-1, from Poland.

It marks the first International appearance by a Soviet horse since Nasibov, now 57, rode Aniline race to a second place finish in 1966.

Gjatsk, a 3-year-old colt, has won three of five starts this year, including the Grand All-Union Prize in Moscow, the equivalent of the Russian Derby, over 1 1/4 miles.

While the rest of European horses race solely on grass, the Soviets have only dirt tracks, so Saturday will be Gjatsk's first start on turf.

"He's taking well to the grass," Nasibov said through an interpreter. "It's easier to go from a worse track to a better track. Our tracks are not very good."

After Gjatsk galloped at Laurel Friday, Nasibov said, "He was just like a winged rocket."

Omen, a 3-year-old who has won five of seven starts this year, beat Gjatsk by a length in Moscow Aug. 30.

The Poles recruited American jockey, Mario Pino, a regular rider at Laurel, to ride Omen.

"It's a big advantage if the rider knows the track well," said Marek Grzybowski, a Polish racing official. "Also, the style or riding is different in Poland. The jockeys in Poland wait longer and ride near the end. In America, they ride from post to finish."

Under the two-tier purse structure for the International, the winner will get $450,000 unless it's Gjatsk or Omen. As the only invited horses — the others were nominated — they would receive $240,000.

Still, the winning purse would be a windfall for the Eastern bloc competitors. Gjatsk has earnings of $8,997 and Omen has won $9,233.

Other leading contenders are Stately Don of the United States, 5-1; Risk Me of England, 6-1, and Le Giorieux, the 6-1 West German representative who finished second to Theatrical in the Man o' War Stakes at Aqueduct last Saturday. It was his U.S. debut.

The remainder of the field consists of Libertine of France, 12-1; the Canadian entry of Blue Finn and Grey Classic, 15-1; Motley of France, 15-1; Great Communicator, U.S., 15-1; Dasteen, France, 20-1, and Southjet, U.S., 20-1.

McPhee's goal lifts Montreal

NHL Roundup

DETROIT (AP) — Mike McPhee's fourth goal of the season with 5:29 remaining in the third period snapped a 4-4 tie and lifted the Montreal Canadiens to a 5-4 NHL victory over the Detroit Red Wings Friday night.

The win left Montreal at 7-4-1, while Detroit fell to 5-4.

McPhee collected a loose puck in front of Detroit goaltender Glen Hanlon and poked a shot between Hanlon's legs.

Montreal, which overcame a 2-0 first-period deficit, twice took the lead in the second only to see the Red Wings come back.

Craig Ludwig's slapshot from the top of the faceoff circle gave the Canadiens a 3-2 lead 3:30 into the middle period, but Bob Probert finished off a pretty three-way passing play with Gerard Gallant and Steve Yzerman to pull Detroit even.

Montreal regained the lead at 10:06 on Bobby Smith's club-leading eighth goal of the season, but Joe Murphy answered for the Red Wings 1:32 later with his second of the game to knot the score 4-4.

Murphy, the NHL's top draft choice in 1986 who played just five games for Detroit last season, collected the first two goals of his NHL career.

Brent Ashton and Murphy staked the Red Wings to a 2-0 lead before the first period was half over, but Shayne Corson and Chris Chelios scored 2:37 apart midway through the period to pull Montreal even. Chelios, who assisted on all three Canadiens' goals in Wednesday's 3-1 victory over Edmonton, collected a goal and two assists against Detroit.

Sabres 5, Kings 1

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Adam Creighton scored one goal and assisted on two others Friday night to lead the Buffalo Sabres to a 5-1 NHL victory over the Los Angeles Kings.

The victory moved the Sabres into a tie for second place in the Adams Division with the Quebec Nordiques. Both teams have 11 points, but the Nordiques have two games in hand.

Each team scored once in the first period, but Buffalo scored twice within 40 seconds late in the second period to take control of the contest.

Scott Arniel scored the first goal at 18:29. He drifted in along the right side and steered in a backhand off a rink-wide pass from Lindy Ruff.

Kings goalie Roland Melanson protested the goal, claiming it was kicked in, but referee Dan Marouelli allowed it to stand.

Creighton made it 3-1 when he was left alone in front of the net, took a pass from Dave Andreychuk and shoveled it into a gaping corner with Melanson out of position. The assist was the 200th of Andreychuk's NHL career.

Joe Paterson opened the scoring at 3:30 of the first period, blasting a 30-footer to the far corner against Sabres goalie Daren Puppa.

Buffalo tied it 1-1 less than four minutes later when Creighton dug the puck out from behind the net and fed Clark Gillies in front. Gillies scored his fourth goal of the season on a wrist shot into the right corner.

The Sabres put the game away with two more goals in the third period.

Watson stretches his lead at Nabisco Championships

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Tom Watson compiled a front-running 4-under-par 66 Friday and stretched his lead to four strokes after the second round of the $3 million Nabisco Championships of Golf, the richest tournament in the sport's history.

Watson, seeking an end to a frustrating three-year non-winning string, reached the halfway point in 131, nine shots under par on the 6,556-yard Oak Hills Country Club course.

Watson, a non-winner since July, 1984, had a one-shot lead at the start of the day's play and kept putting more distance between himself and the rest of the elite, 30-player field.

The five-time British Open champion birdied three holes in a row, beginning on No. 5, and never looked back.

Ben Crenshaw, Mark Calcavecchia and Mike Reid shared second after 36 holes at 135.

Reid, who scored the first victory of his 11-year PGA career last week by winning the Tucson Open, matched Watson with a bogey-free 66. Calcavecchia had a 68 and Crenshaw a wildly erratic 67 that included seven birdies and four bogeys.

"Consistency. The name of my game," joked Crenshaw, who remained in contention for the $300,000 first prize and, possibly, the year's money-winning lead, which will be determined by this tournament — the last event on the regular PGA Tour schedule.

"I think I'm playing well enough to give myself a chance," said Crenshaw, who ranks fourth on the money-winning list at $463,394.

In addition to the $2 million purse in the Championships of Golf, another $1 million — with $175,000 to the winner — will be distributed in the Grand Prix of Golf, a season-long competition that also ends here.

Australian Greg Norman, West German Bernhard Langer, South African David Frost and Steve Pate were next at 137. Norman matched par-70 despite putting a ball out of bounds. Pate shot 68, Langer 69 and Frost 71.

Curtis Strange damaged his chances of capturing Player of the Year honors and the No. 1 spot on the money-winning list when he took four strokes — including a whiff — to get out of a grass bunker near the 17th green.

East girls win away from tournament berth

Scholastic Roundup

WATERFORD — After falling behind, 1-0, the East Catholic High girls' soccer team came back and scored twice in the second half to register a 2-1 victory over homestanding Waterford High School Friday afternoon.

East is 6-3-3 and must win or tie one of its two final games to make the state tournament. The Eagles will host Hand High of Madison Monday. Waterford falls to 7-5-2.

Shawna Brennan opened the scoring for Waterford at the 20-minute mark of the first half. Deana Devanney tied it for East with a goal at the 16-minute mark of the second half. It was her second goal of the year. East won it four minutes later on Amelia Bearer's 11th goal of the campaign.

Outstanding play for East was turned in by Lynn Gentileore, Patty McDevitt, Melissa Carroll and Amelia and Andrea Bearer.

East Catholic 2-1
Waterford 1-0-1
Scoring: EC—Devanney, Bearer, W.—Brennan; Saves: EC—Laura Gunstein 4; W.—Cindy Walker 16.

Coventry triumphs

WOODSTOCK — If the Coventry High girls' soccer team isn't ready for state tournament play this year, then first-year Coach Chris D'Amrosio isn't sure what he'll do. Loading up the end of the season with stiff competition, the Patriots continued their trek through treacherous waters with a 2-0 win over host Woodstock Academy Friday afternoon.

The Patriots are now 11-1-2 for the season while Woodstock stands at 8-4-2.

Coventry began its end of the campaign with games against RHAM (loss), Rocky Hill (tie) and now Woodstock, and winds up with two road dates, Wednesday at Ledyard and Thursday at Windham.

"If this doesn't prepare us for the tournament, nothing will," D'Amrosio said. "None of these teams are easy."

Two second-half goals, one each from Leslie Danehy and Monica Hodina, upended Woodstock. Danehy's goal at 23:12, assisted by Hodina, was her 25th of the season and 122nd of her career. Hodina, assisted by Nektaria Gitsis, has 12 goals for the year. She scored at the 33:55 mark.

Coventry had a 20-7 edge in shots. "We were a little shaky the first period. Maybe it was due to the tie with Rocky Hill. We gave them a couple of real good chances," D'Amrosio said. "The second half we buckled down defensively and gave them very little."

"We were a little lackadaisical the first half but then we dominated the last 10 minutes of that and that

Green will likely resurface again

CHICAGO (AP) — Dallas Green, who left the Chicago Cubs in the same gruff manner he used while running the team, should have no trouble finding a new job despite his occasionally abrasive style, other major league executives say.

The 53-year-old Green on Thursday became the latest general manager to land on the unemployment line since the end of the season. Green's resignation followed his apparent failure to stop encroachment from the Cubs' front office.

"I think he'll turn up somewhere before you know it," said Andy McKenna, a member of the Cubs board who was chairman of the team in 1981, when he spotted Green's name in a National League guidebook and put the Philadelphia Phillies' manager in charge of the Cubs' day-to-day operations.

"I think it's related to the whole shaping of the organization. It's not one single or overriding issue," McKenna said. "These things happen — in sports, business everywhere."

The Chicago Sun-Times reported Friday that Green quit because John W. Madigan, executive vice president of the Tribune Co., which owns the Cubs, vetoed his choice of coach John Vukovich as field manager.

The newspaper did not reveal a source for its story but said Vukovich arrived for a final interview Thursday.

Boys' soccer

Cheney outdistanced

With Joe LaBella leading the way with a three-goal hat trick, Rocky Hill High blanked Cheney Tech, 7-0, in Charter Oak Conference boys' soccer action Friday afternoon at the Beavers' field.

The Terriers are now 12-2 for the season while the Techmen slide to 1-10-2 for the campaign. Cheney's next game is Tuesday, against Bacon Academy in Colchester.

Cheney Coach Paul Soucy said the final score wasn't an indication of how well his team played. "We played our best 80 minutes against a top-rated team," he said. "The score was not an indication of how well we played."

Jason Cassarino added two goals for the Terriers with Kirk DeMeo and Manny Melounis chipping in one apiece. Rocky Hill outshot Cheney, 31-5. Tech goalie Nate Paradis was busy with 16 saves.

Fullbacks Scott House and Kettaphone Keovilay played well for the Techmen.

Aggressiveness earned Manchester both goals.

"For about 15 minutes, we played the most aggressively we have all year. We made things happen," Manchester Assistant Coach Stu Wolff said.

Rockville tied it on a goal from Dave Zenczak. Two five-minute overtime periods couldn't produce a winner although Manchester was pushing forward toward the end. "Five minutes just doesn't give you much time to do anything," McCarthy said. "It was a real close game and the score reflected it," he added.

Lyder had a real strong game for Manchester with Doug Harvey, Joe LaRosa and Mike Sardo also turning in good efforts for the Indians. Manchester outshot Rockville, 19-10.

Patriots top Bolton

BOLTON — Bolton High has its back against the wall. The Bulldogs, who could only afford one loss in their closing three games, suffered that setback Friday afternoon as Coventry High took home a 2-0 verdict in Charter Oak Conference boys' soccer action.

The Patriots are 9-3-2 overall and headed for the state Class 8 Division tournament, a place Bolton would also like to be after the regular season. But the Bulldogs are now 6-7-1 overall and must either win their final two games, or win one and tie the other. Bolton's path is not an easy one as it faces unbeaten RHAM High Tuesday at home at 3 p.m. "We just have to take it to RHAM. We have got to do it," emphasized Bolton Coach Ray Boyd.

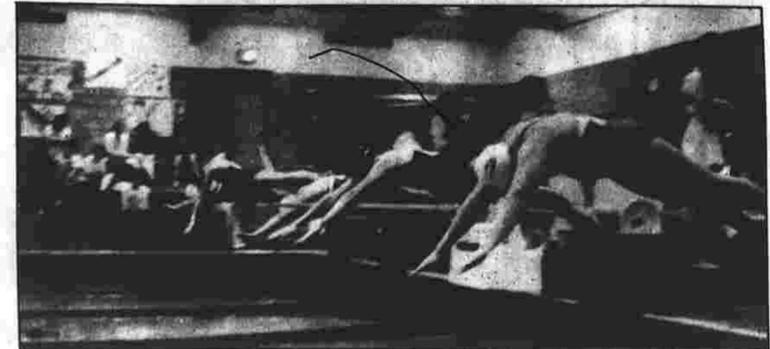

Senior striker Dave Poulin registered his 19th goal at the 27:14 mark of the first half for the game-winner for Coventry. He picked up a through pass about 40 yards out, warded off Bolton's stopperback who was marking him, eluded the sweeper and went in alone on Bulldog keeper Dan Titus. He didn't miss.

Midfielder Jack Aver added some insurance for Coventry with his fourth goal of the campaign at 9:04 of the second half. Rob Berkowitz drew an assist.

"It was a pretty good game," Boyd said. "It was real physical. I was glad to see our kids play with as much emotion as they did. They didn't want to lose but Coventry is a good team with good balance throughout the team."

Nathan Krider, off the bench, played well for Coventry which enjoyed a 19-10 edge in the shots department. Jon Wiedie and Dave Curylo played well for Bolton.

Coventry's next game is Tuesday at home against Vinal Tech.

MHS plunges ahead

The Manchester High girls' swimming team continued its fine 1987 campaign with an impressive 86-59 win over Fermi High Friday afternoon at the Indians' pool.

Manchester won all 11 events en route to winnings its eighth in nine outings. Fermi is 1-7.

Sue Burns won the 200 free and 100 backstroke while Lisa Phillips secured the 50 free and 100 butterfly for the Indians. "This team continues to amaze me with its progress. We're peaking just right for our last two meets against East Catholic (Tuesday night at 7 p.m.) and East Hartford (Thursday away at 3:30 p.m.)," said Manchester Coach Dave Frost.

Kerri Lindland, Lori Gallo, Sonya Gulliksen, Beth Cool, Teresa MacDonald and Gracie Phillips performed well for the Indians.

Girls' volleyball

MHS wins fourth

Manchester High girls' volleyball team upped its record to 4-10 with a five-set win over visiting Rockville High Friday at Clarke Arena. Scores were 13-15, 15-6, 15-6, 11-15 and 15-1.

Meredith Dugan served well. Lisa Cartier hit well. Lisa Moriconi played well and Hongfa Luangprasueh had some good saves for Manchester.

Manchester also won the junior varsity match, 15-9 and 15-11, with Anne Marie MacDonald, Missy Colon and Erin Twible playing well.

Manchester's next match is Monday at 3:30 p.m. at East Catholic.

St. Joe's sweeps EC

Unbeaten St. Joseph's of Trumbull visited East Catholic High School Friday afternoon and made short work of the host Eagles in ACC girls' volleyball action, sweeping the match in three sets. Scores were 15-11, 15-0 and 15-6. East is now 2-11 for the season while St. Joseph's is a perfect 16-0.

East's next match is Monday at home at 3:30 p.m. against crosstown Manchester High School.

MHS girls' soccer keeps going with 4-1 win

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

ROCKVILLE — After a perilous beginning, the Manchester High girls' soccer team, ranked second in the unofficial state poll, kept its continuity and came back to post a 4-1 victory over host Rockville High School in CCC East action Friday afternoon.

It was the 14th consecutive victory for the unbeaten Indians who are 13-0 in the league and 14-0 overall. Rockville drops to 8-3-1 in the CCC East and 9-3-1 overall.

Manchester's string of shutout wins came to an end. The Indians, who had blanked their 12 previous opponents, hadn't allowed a goal since its opening day 4-1 victory over Windham. If Manchester wins its final two regular season games, Monday at home against East Hartford and Wednesday at Glastonbury, it will be the first undefeated, untied regular season in the program's history.

The homestanding Rams' auspicious start saw them take a 1-0 lead just 24 seconds into the match. Rockville's Kelly Fraleigh crossed it from the left side to Melissa Aiello and she found the back of the net. It was the first time this season that Manchester had trailed in a game.

"It was probably a good thing for us," Manchester Coach Joe Erardi said, referring to his club falling behind. "We didn't panic. We're able to wear teams down."

After the Rams' goal — on its only shot of the first half — Manchester dominated the remainder of the 40 minutes. It took awhile for the Indians to gain the equalizer, but it finally came at the 32:47 mark of the first half. Sophomore Karen Rattanankou, who scored two goals, tied it when she took a pass from freshman Shelly Dieterle and skimmed a header into the right side of the net.

"I think Karen was absolutely super," Erardi said. Manchester played without senior All-State performer Jen Atwell who is out with a sprained ankle. "She took it (leadership) upon herself," Erardi explained of Rattanankou's assertive role.

Previous to Rattanankou's goal, she had caromed a left-footer off the crossbar. Manchester outshot Rockville, 14-1, in the first half, and 26-2 for the game. Rockville goalie Deb Raber, who made some fine saves, stopped two point-blank shots by freshman Kathy Cumberbatch and Dieterle with 5:45 left before intermission.

"The first half we played better soccer," Erardi said. "We had some excellent chances."

Cumberbatch put Manchester on top to stay 2-41 into the second half when a cross from Dieterle carried along the goalmouth before she easily one-timed it into the left side of the net for the 2-1 lead. Two minutes later, Dieterle made it 3-1. Raber fell to the ground after a shot rebounded off her chest and Dieterle collected the ball, side-stepped Raber, and deposited the ball into the empty net.

Rockville had a goal at 11:59 by Aiello disallowed because Indian goalie Michelle Callahan was taken down on the play. With 15 minutes left, Raber made a brilliant save off a hard shot from Rattanankou. Rattanankou finished off the scoring with only 25 seconds left when she fired a 20-yarder from the right side which dented the back of the twine. Rattanankou leads the team in scoring with 15 goals.

Seniors Sue Webb, Jen Faber, Heather Bogli and Rachel Odell, along with sophomore sweeperback Meg Berte, played fine games for Manchester.

"This is a tight-knit group," Erardi said. "This is the closest I've ever seen a girls' soccer team be."

Manchester 4 1-1
Rockville 1 0-1
Scoring: M—Rattanankou (2), Cumberbatch, Dieterle, R—Aiello. Saves: M—Callahan 1; R—Raber 17.

EAST BLASTS NORTHWEST

By Jim Tierney
Herald Sports Writer

If anyone was waiting for a letdown by the East Catholic Eagles after they assumed the No. 1 spot in the state rankings last week, you can forget it.

The Eagles drubbed Northwest Catholic, 56-13, in a non-conference tilt Friday night at Mount Nebo to maintain its perfect record intact at 7-0. The visiting Indians dropped to 2-4. East faces a tough contest next Saturday in Trumbull as it faces St. Joseph's in a key ACC battle.

East totaled 521 offensive yards, 471 coming on the ground. Senior running back Jason Talbot tied the school's single-game rushing record set last year by Aaron Alibrio with 204 yards on 17 carries and scored three touchdowns. Junior fullback Scott Beaulieu rushed for 133 yards on 15 carries and a touchdown while junior quarterback Marc Mangiafico had 75 yards on nine carries and two touchdowns. Senior running back Alibrio (12 carries for 59 yards) added the other Eagle score.

"I was impressed with our intensity," East Coach Jude Kelly said. "I think our defense has played real well. It was important for us to keep the same level of consistency."

The East varsity, removed with 10 minutes left in the fourth quarter, scored on each of its seven possessions. Northwest, on the opening drive of the game, got all the way to the Eagle 13-yard line but, three plays later, Indian quarterback Rich Collier's pass intended for senior Brian Mathews was intercepted by Alibrio after Mathews deflected the ball.

East then utilized a 12-play, 95-yard drive for the first score of a game — a 9-yard keeper by Mangiafico with 3:05 to go in the opening quarter. Mangiafico added the conversion and East led, 8-0. Northwest battled back and Mathews romped down the right sideline for a 69-yard touchdown with 1:48 left in the first quarter.

"They have backs with speed," Kelly said. "They broke a couple of big plays." Mathews' conversion run failed and Northwest trailed, 8-5.

East broke the game open in the second quarter by scoring three touchdowns, one each by Mangiafico, Talbot, and Alibrio to take a commanding 32-6 lead. Talbot's TD was set up by a 58-yard Beaulieu run. Talbot accounted for two of the conversions in the second quarter with the other coming on a Mangiafico to senior tight end Doug Rizzuto pass play.

"They (East) don't do anything really fancy," Northwest Coach John Shukie said. "They run real hard. They're quick off the ball. They're extremely well disciplined. They crank it (yardage) out."

The Indians gave East something to think about during halftime when the visitors scored on the last play before intermission — an 82-yard pass play from Collier to Mathews who caught the ball at his own 35 and sped down the right sideline for the score. Shawn Duffy kicked the extra point for Northwest and the score was 32-13 at half.

The Eagles regained the momentum in the third quarter and tallied 16 unanswered points to go up, 48-13. The highlight of the first Eagles' score after the intermission was a 64-yard jaunt by Talbot which brought them to the Indian 15. Three plays later, Talbot went over from two yards out. On its next possession, Talbot scored on a 40-yard run.

Beaulieu put the final nail in Northwest's coffin with a 10-yard score with 10:16 left in the game.

"We moved the ball really well," Kelly said. Shukie knew his club was outclassed by the Eagles

In the grasp

Manchester quarterback Rob McLaughlin (21) found himself in the grasp of South Windsor defender Scott Andrews three weeks ago when the teams met. McLaughlin was the difference last Friday night when he threw two TD passes in leading the Indians past Windham. Manchester will go for its third consecutive win today against Fermi High at 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Field.

MHS out of tourney picture

A tie is certainly more appealing than a loss, anytime.

Except when it has the same effect.

The Manchester High School boys' soccer team, with its second consecutive deadlock and third in its last four games — the fourth being a victory — finished in a 2-2 stalemate with Rockville High in CCC East Division play.

The tie leaves Manchester out of the state tournament for the first time since 1965. The Indians are now 3-6-5 overall for the season with two games left. They finish the campaign Monday at East Hartford High and Wednesday against Hall High in West Hartford.

Rockville is now 9-3-2 for the season. Manchester Coach Bill McCarthy was not disappointed with his team's effort against the Rams. "I was pleased with the way we played. We have nothing to be ashamed of. They gave a lot of effort and heart and that's all you can ask for," he said.

Rockville had the game's only goal in the first half with Lee Curtis giving the Rams the lead. Manchester scored twice in the second half with Jeremy Dieterle and Chris Lyder putting home the tallies. It was Dieterle's third goal of the season and Lyder's second.
