

Storms in Southwest; wintry in Northeast

By The Associated Press

Pacific storms brought showers and some heavy rain to the Southwest from California to the southern Rockies and dusted some mountains with snow today, while a wintry blast chilled the Northeast.

Rain was expected to taper off in Southern California today after causing flooding, mud slides and power outages Thursday.

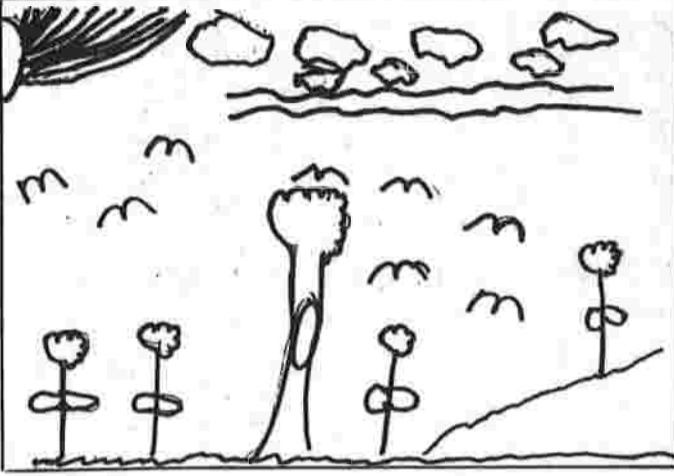

The San Diego County Health Building caved in under heavy rain, causing no injuries but about $350,000 in damages, authorities said.

At least one waterpump was seen offshore from the El Segundo-Manhattan Beach area. There were unconfirmed sightings of funnel clouds around Southern California, along with spectacular rainbows, including one that seemed to frame the Hollywood sign overlooking Los Angeles.

Snow fell in higher elevations of California's southern Sierra Nevada, Arizona's central mountains and Utah's southern mountains, where up to 5 inches accumulated early Thursday evening at Long Duck Creek.

Williams, Ariz., had 2 1/2 inches of snow on the ground early Thursday evening and the southern rim of the Grand Canyon had an inch.

High winds blasted the Northeast, prompting gale warnings today for Lakes Erie and Ontario and the eastern half of Lake Superior, and off the coast of New Hampshire and Maine. Winds downed some utility poles Thursday night near Waterbury, in northern New York state.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It will be up to you today to show more initiative than a friend in an important matter that is of equal concern to you both. Be the leader.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Because you are likely to be ambitious today in an area where others fail to get involved, the lion's share of the spoils could be yours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In social activities with friends today, make it a point to put yourself out a little more than usual. Make sure that everyone is having a good time.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There are strong indications that you could reap material benefits today. They will come in two areas that you do not normally depend upon as sources of gain.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's time to stop talking about what you intend to do and start taking action. Do something about it today, before both time and your inclinations run out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This should be a materially rewarding day for you, provided you play your cards right. However, be prepared to work for that which you hope to gain.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're a competent, capable person, but if something comes up that you can't manage today, don't be too proud to let someone who is more skilled take over.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) It's OK to delegate certain assignments to others today, but to be on the safe side, you'd be wise to do the one that has lots of critical details yourself.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22) Others will be responsive to your requests today, because they'll know you won't ask anything of them that you could not or would not do yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Lessons you've learned from experience will greatly benefit you at this time. It looks like you are going to profit today from yesterday's mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your possibilities for success will be greatly enhanced today if you proceed one step at a time. Impulsive or erratic actions could retard your progress.

Manchester Lumber gets OK on drainage funds

By Nancy Concepcion Herald Reporter

The Economic Development Commission Thursday unanimously approved Manchester Lumber Inc.'s request to have the town pay for a portion of the new storm sewer drainage system under New State Road through the industrial guidelines program.

The commission will recommend that the subsidy be approved by the town Board of Directors when it votes later this month.

The company, which is moving from its 285 Center St. location to 401 New State Road, is eligible for reimbursement under the guidelines program because the new sewer line may benefit future developments at five other sites, including those owned by A. Raymond Zerilo and Sons carpet dealers and Jarvis Realty Inc.

Through the industrial guidelines program, a developer finances the utility improvements for project, but, over a seven-year period, the town reimburses the developer for these improvements using tax revenues collected from the properties in the area. The amount of reimbursement is based on assessed values before and after properties are developed.

Installation of the more than 2,200 feet of pipe required for the site would most likely lead to development of the area, said Manchester attorney David Golas, who represented the company.

The $160,000 the town would reimburse Manchester Lumber from the new company site would not cover the estimated $206,000 cost of the sewer repairs, but future development in the area could make up the difference.

Another alternative would be to have the Board of Directors extend the payback period beyond seven years.

The current 18-inch pipe that runs from the Hockanum River to Burnham Street would be inadequate to service the new lumber facility. Plans call for 48-inch and 36-inch piping to run from the lumber site, down New State Road, to the Hockanum River.

Manchester Lumber's revised site plans were approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission on March 2, after conservationists raised concerns that development of the New State Road site, which sits on top of the town's largest watershed, could contaminate drinking water.

The PZC approved the site plans with safeguards to protect the aquifer, including the installation of the storm sewer drainage system. Manchester Lumber will also be required to submit a list of chemicals and materials stored on the site to the town.

Ministry focuses on young

Trinity's Schwamb works with teens

By Andrew J. Davis Herald Reporter

The wait is over for the young pastor of Trinity Covenant Church. After an almost three-year vacancy, the church has hired Kevin E. Schwamb as its full-time youth pastor. Now that a permanent youth pastor has been named, the ministry can now focus on the spiritual needs of its young people, Schwamb said.

"My role (is) the same as a senior pastor," he said. "I'm responsible for the department of the last full-time youth pastor, Matt Hennigan. For the last year, Associate Pastor Paul F. Knight has filled in as youth minister, but other duties left him unable to give as much attention to the post as needed, Schwamb said.

A native of Centereach, N.Y., Schwamb is a former youth pastor at the Baptist Church of Northville, N.Y. He and his wife, Heather, moved to Manchester in early September along with their three children.

He said his main responsibility will be to set up religious and social programs for teenagers.

Schwamb, 35, fills a void created with the departure of the last full-time youth pastor, Matt Hennigan. For the last year, Associate Pastor Paul F. Knight has filled in as youth minister, but other duties left him unable to give as much attention to the post as needed, Schwamb said.

"Basically, I'm here to establish a program for junior highers and senior highers," he said. "But I just don't want to do a program for the sake of doing a program."

The young people's program will center on the individual's role with God, Schwamb said. Sexual choices, nuclear warfare and drugs will be part of the discussion topics.

"They're not dry topics. They're things they are facing," Schwamb said. "The task (is) to entertain them. It is to establish their need for God and their personal relationship with him."

Sometimes, though, it is difficult for teenagers to understand the need for God in their lives, he said. "It often becomes very abstract for a young person to question the need for God."

"In terms of choices, kids today are going through adolescence earlier than kids three years ago, because they're more exposed to the pressure on them," he said. "The question becomes, 'Do we believe

More charges are pending in the Aparo murder case

HARTFORD (AP) — Two people previously charged with hindering prosecution in the murder of Glastonbury woman knew about the plot in advance and agreed to help cover up the crime, according to a newly released affidavit.

Kira Lintner, 17, of Glastonbury was charged Thursday with conspiracy to commit murder and being an accessory to murder after she was released from the psychiatric ward of Manchester Memorial Hospital.

The affidavit released Thursday said Wheatley had agreed to help Dennis Coleman, 18, kill Aparo for a newly released affidavit.

A judge is expected to announce next Tuesday whether Karin Aparo will be tried as a juvenile or as an adult.

Wheatley, Coleman and Karin Aparo could be sentenced to 60 years in prison if convicted of the charges. Lintner could be sentenced to 20 years if convicted.

Hirt divorce

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The wife of New Orleans jazz trumpeter Al Hirt has sued him for divorce, asking $10,000 a month for pain she said endured from her husband's "violent physical abuse."

"I loved him. I still love him. I'm very, very sad," Hirt's wife, Zida Jabocke, said in an interview Thursday.

Hirt could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press because he has an unlisted phone number. His lawyer, Russell J. Schonekas, did not return repeated phone calls.

The suit was filed in Orleans Civil Court on Oct. 30 but not made public until Thursday.

Hirt, who won a Grammy in 1953, ran a nightclub in the French Quarter for 22 years until sagging business forced him to close it in 1985. He has recorded more than 50 albums.

Visiting babies

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Benjamin Spock, hospitalized and fitted with a cardiac pacemaker, felt so good before his scheduled release today that he was prowling the halls looking for seriously ill babies to visit.

"I'm ashamed to be occupying a hospital bed," Spock said Thursday at the New England Medical Center. "I feel like a fraud."

The 84-year-old baby-care expert and peace activist, visited a hospital playroom, where he folded his 6-foot-3 frame into a child-sized chair and chatted with about eight children between the ages of 2 and 8.

Spock's wife, Mary Morgan, said he had insisted on going for a walk through the hospital the night before because he "wanted to find some babies. We got lost but he found a couple babies."

Spock was hospitalized Saturday after fainting at a Boston restaurant and falling on the marble floor.

MACC shooting for $25,000 for Seasonal Sharing Appeal

The Manchester Area Conference of Churches has again set a $25,000 goal for its Seasonal Sharing Appeal.

The money will be used to pay for Thanksgiving and Christmas food baskets and for vouchers for clothing redeemable at local stores, said Beth Harlow, MACC's director of human needs.

Human Needs in Center Congregational Church and at the Manchester Department of Social Services in Lincoln Center.

Monetary donations for the appeal may be mailed to MACC Seasonal Sharing, P.O. Box 773, Manchester 06046. For the Thanksgiving food baskets, non-perishables should be dropped off by Dec. 18, and perishables by Dec. 21.

MACC has exceeded its $25,000 goal by $1,000. Harlow said she hopes the goal is again surpassed this year.

MACC plans to distribute about 350 food baskets for Thanksgiving Day and 350 for Christmas. Many baskets will be prepared by MACC and local churches, but individuals are also encouraged to make up their own baskets.

Guidelines on what the baskets should include can be obtained by contacting Harlow at 646-4114.

A free Thanksgiving dinner for those who will be alone on the holiday is scheduled for noon Nov. 26 at St. James School cafeteria, 78 Park St. Tickets for the dinner may be obtained at the Department of

UConn dormitory crunch worsens
STORRS — University of Connecticut students face a worsening housing situation and the school could shut short of beds for as many as 870 students on the main campus next year, university administrators say.

UConn's dormitory crunch has forced some students to live in converted studios or to triple up in rooms designed for two. The school has 9,586 undergraduates, 344 more than its intended capacity, said Jane E. Lovel, assistant assignments director in UConn's residential life department.

"Projections that I have made indicate that next year we will be above by 450 to 670, and perhaps more," Lovel said Thursday. Carol A. Wiggins, vice president for student affairs and services, has created the Housing Guidelines Ad Hoc Committee to study whether UConn should abandon its open house policy. The committee includes four administrators, four students and three faculty members.

Panel to investigate nurse shortage
HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has named a commission to look into the causes of Connecticut's nurse shortage and recommend ways to attract people to the profession.

O'Neill estimated there are 1,000 vacancies for nurses in the state's 84 general hospitals. Although there are 38,000 licensed nurses in Connecticut, fewer than 25,000 are currently working in that field.

The commission was appointed on Thursday. Gardner E. Wright Jr., head of the state commission on Hospitals and Health Care and co-chairman of the task force, said that "as our population gets older, the demand for nurses and other health-care professionals is only going to get greater."

Employees sue for lost wages
BRIDGEPORT — Three companies implicated in a 1985 natural gas explosion are being sued for back wages lost by employees of a Derby restaurant leveled in the blast.

The suit was filed in Bridgeport Superior Court on Wednesday on behalf of former River Restaurant employees Agnes Roman of Derby, Grace Ungaray of Shelton and Richard Urbanczyk of Derby.

The three, who worked as waitresses and a cook, claim they were deprived of a stable financial future by the explosion. None of the plaintiffs was hurt in the blast on Dec. 6, 1985, in which six people died.

They are seeking damages in excess of $15,000 from Northeast Utilities, The England Railroad Construction Co. of Bridgeport, and Philip W. Genovese & Associates of Hamden.

Troubled plane lands on golf course
STAMFORD — A single-engine airplane made an emergency landing at a local golf course after developing engine trouble, authorities reported.

A student pilot and instructor pilot were en route from Westchester County Airport in New York State to Islip, N.Y., authorities said. The plane landed at 9:40 a.m. after clipping some trees at the Innis Arden Golf Club.

No one was injured in the landing.

The student was identified as Tod Kawer of Mount Vernon, N.Y., while the instructor was Dana Archibald of Pleasantville, N.Y.

Feds halt probe of ballot fraud
WATERBURY — The top federal prosecutor in Connecticut has called off an investigation into absentee ballot fraud in the May 1986 Democratic gubernatorial primary in Waterbury because of limits imposed by a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision.

U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said the decision in McNally vs. United States bars prosecution of voting fraud under the federal mail fraud statute.

"We have reluctantly concluded that, in light of McNally, there is no appropriate basis upon which to proceed further in this investigation," Twardy said in a letter to Waterbury State's Attorney John A. Connelly.

Complaint filed over nurse hiring
WATERBURY — Having invalidated contracts with replacement nurses, the National Labor Relations Board has filed a complaint against Waterbury Hospital, alleging that the institution refused to reinstate some nurses who went on strike last year.

A complaint issued Oct. 29 by Peter B. Hoffman, officer-in-charge of the NLRB's Hartford office, charges that the hospital gave preferential treatment to replacement nurses hired during the strike and refused to reinstate some union nurses to the positions they had before the bitter, four-month walkout.

The hospital signed individual contracts with nurses who agreed to work during the strike, granting them "superior" status, according to Hoffman's complaint. The status meant that they were treated as though they had longer service than union nurses with years of service.

Five-year-old dies in house fire
NEW LONDON — A 5-year-old mentally retarded boy was killed early today, but his 2-year-old sister and father survived when a fire swept through their two-story home in New London, police report.

Jonathan Gnanidi was pulled from the fire by his father, but was unable to survive the 2:12 a.m. blaze, said fire department Battalion Chief Edward L. Hallisey.

The father, Martin Gnanidi, also pulled his 2-year-old daughter from the blaze. Both were treated for smoke inhalation.

The family's mother was at work and returned home as Martin Gnanidi was pounding on neighbors' doors seeking help, Hallisey said.

The fire was thought to have started in a refrigerator motor, Hallisey said. The home had a smoke detector, but its battery appeared to be disconnected, Hallisey said.

Meriden to consider ultralight ban
MERIDEN — City officials might reinstate a ban on ultralight aircraft at Meriden-Markham Airport following the fatal crash of an experimental gyrocopter at the airfield Wednesday.

Jerome Lamb, 57, of Vernon died of multiple injuries he suffered when the craft crashed during an apparent takeoff attempt at the airport.

Airport manager Hal Schneer said Lamb did not have permission to use the airport.

The city's Aviation Commission imposed a ban on ultralights, which weigh less than 250 pounds, in August 1986 after an ultralight pilot flew out of the airport's flight path and crash landed. The ban was lifted three weeks later after the commission decided to require ultralight pilots to be certified.

Richard Blantz, chairman of the commission, said the panel will consider a ban at its meeting on Monday.

Coin toss saves cost of election
NORWALK — A flip of a coin today will save taxpayers up to $10,000 for a special election that would decide the next first taxing district treasurer.

After a recount on Thursday, incumbent Charles S. Marshall Sr. and Republican challenger Robert Fabrizio were declared tied with 719 votes each in the election for the largely ceremonial, two-year job that pays $400 annually.

Marshall, who was endorsed by the Democratic and Independent parties, suggested holding a coin toss to break the tie. Fabrizio agreed.

An Artell, Republican registrar of voters, said a special election could cost $10,000.

Kasmer's lawyer to probe sting

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Timothy C. Moynahan, the lawyer for the executive director of the Liquor Control Commission arrested on bribery charges, says he plans a careful study of the sting operation that snared his client.

"There are stings and there are stings," said Moynahan, representing Charles W. Kasmer, who was charged Thursday with bribery and conspiracy to commit bribery.

Some stings, Moynahan said, "are sort of entrapments, and there are others that are conducted properly."

Kasmer, 54, of Bristol was arrested in his office. He was arrested in Hartford Superior Court and released on $25,000 bond.

He stood silently in a shirt and tie by Moynahan's side during a five-minute proceeding before Judge Raymond R. Noriko.

Moynahan described Kasmer as upset and distressed and "in a state of emotional agitation." He said he had not had a chance to talk to Kasmer about whether he would plead innocent when he returns to court Nov. 19.

Hartford County State's Attorney John M. Bailey said Kasmer was arrested as the result of a sting operation. Kasmer allegedly took a total of $120,000 in bribes to IRS undercover agents in an attempt to avoid paying taxes.

"The corruption of public officials is among the most serious of so-called white-collar crimes," Twardy said.

Regarding the Kasmer and federal arrests, Twardy said, "They're all part and parcel of the same undercover operation."

But Bailey said while Kasmer's arrest resulted from the federal investigation, it wasn't directly connected. He said authorities didn't expect it to implicate any other state officials.

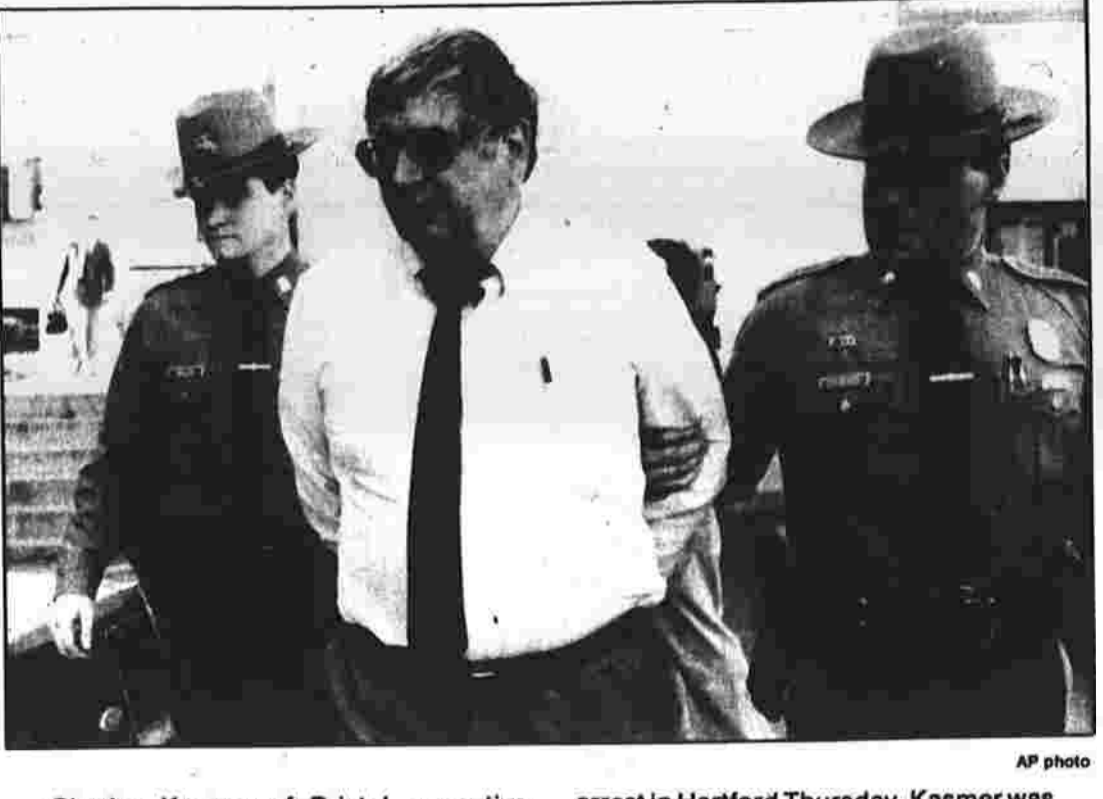

Twardy said the federal investigation began in 1982 when Nicholas Georganis, 41, of Southbury approached an IRS agent and told him that Leo Perteles, age unknown, of Trumbull "had a problem."

The agent was paid $3,000 to eliminate Perteles' tax liabilities, Twardy charged.

In June 1984, Nicholas Georganis, age unknown, of Danbury also allegedly met an undercover IRS inspector and arranged for a bribe to be paid to benefit him, Twardy said.

Charles Kasmer of Bristol, executive director of the state Liquor Control Commission, is taken to court after his arrest in Hartford Thursday. Kasmer was charged with bribery and conspiracy to commit bribery.

Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said federal agents had arrested 10 people in the state — including a Greek Orthodox priest, a doctor and seven businessmen — and 25 people in New York.

Twardy said the 10 Connecticut residents arrested on federal charges were accused of paying a total of $120,000 in bribes to IRS undercover agents in an attempt to avoid paying taxes.

Devil worship worries West Haven

WEST HAVEN (AP) — Local clergy say the discovery of evidence of a devil-worshipping cult in the city, and the possible impact while a lecturer on the occult warned that the group could be violent.

"People tend to pass these things off as psychological or psychiatric, but they're not," said the Rev. Biggie Cretella of St. Paul's Church.

"This should be taken seriously but let's not overdo it. The thing that is disturbing is in this area."

In the past few weeks, police have found evidence of satanic worship in two places — an abandoned incinerator building and a part of an auto parts complex. The locations are about 500 yards apart.

Four-foot identical markings were in both places, including a painted disc with a cross and other symbols.

Discovered at the auto parts complex was an altar covered by a woman's black dress, a wax skull, ginger root, several candles and a jar with cat remains and blood.

Police believe the same group operated out of both places.

"This is something to be concerned about, especially with young people," said the Rev. Ernest Bodenweber of the First Congregational Church of West Haven.

Bodenweber, who said he did not know much about the occult, said the greatest danger he saw was that young people could be influenced by the cult and join it. He said he has discussed the cult with some of the young members of his congregation.

West Haven Chief of Detectives Theodore W. Forbes said investigators have no evidence to believe the local cult is not to commit violent crime.

Forbes said he called the Forces for advice on the meaning of the discovered paraphernalia but said their opinion provided no new evidence in the case.

Warren, who said he would not associate with devil worshippers, said he has heard of other cult groups in Connecticut, including one that stretches from East Haddam to Westport.

"This thing is growing by leaps and bounds, and if any clergyman thinks this could be dangerous, he better take another look because it is dangerous already," said Warren.

West Haven Chief of Detectives Theodore W. Forbes said investigators have no evidence to believe the local cult is not to commit violent crime.

Allies, adversaries mourn Markel

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Legal allies and adversaries alike mourned the death of New Haven State's Attorney Arnold Markel, an authority on constitutional law enforcement, on Monday.

Markel, who was 60, died Thursday at Yale-New Haven Hospital after apparently suffering a heart attack at his home in Woodbridge, hospital spokesman Thomas Urtz said.

"He was a great scholar and a brilliant lawyer," said New Haven defense attorney John Williams, who frequently opposed Markel in court.

"He was the first really professional prosecutor the state of Connecticut ever had. He handled every important case in New Haven in his last 12 years."

Williams called Markel "unquestionably the greatest and most professional of all the prosecutors the state of Connecticut ever had. He was a man who can never be replaced."

Markel was an innovator who was renowned for his teaching of police how to do their jobs without violating the Constitution and for developing a list of proteges that read like a who's-who of prosecutors and judges.

For years, Markel taught a 16-week police course in search and seizure procedures.

He was the originator and director of the State's Attorney's Law Enforcement Training Program and originator of the Narcotics Enforcement Officers Association and the New Haven County Detectives Association.

He was also a founder of the Rape Crisis Unit of New Haven, and originated the first arson squad in the state.

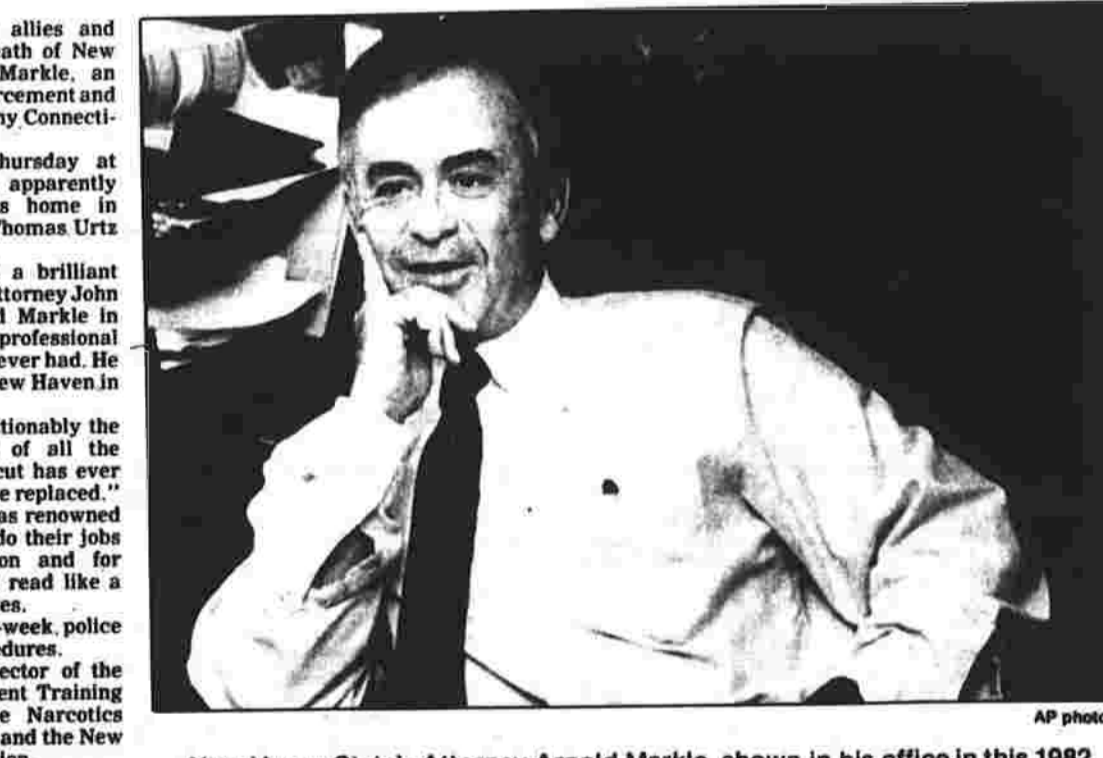

Markel authored two books, "The Law of Arrest and Search and Seizure" and "Criminal Investigation and Presentation of Evidence," considered bibles for law enforcement officials.

Markel was a frequent lecturer and speaker on numerous law enforcement subjects throughout the country. Earlier Thursday, Markel had delivered a lecture in Hartford to law enforcement officers. He had been scheduled to return there Thursday night with his wife, Jane White Markel, for a dinner.

He had returned Tuesday from an arson seminar for prosecutors in Atlanta. Two members of his staff were still in Georgia Thursday night when news of his death reached them.

"The guy is a legend — I still can't believe it. I want to see it with my own eyes," said Joseph Toscano, the city inspector with the office's arson control program. Toscano said Markel made a habit of rushing out to fires and scenes of other major crimes.

His proteges included John J. Kelly, now chief state's attorney; John T. Redway, state's attorney for the Middletown Judicial District; Michael Dearington, state's attorney for the Ansonia-Milford Judicial District; Judge Thomas V. O'Keefe; newly appointed Judge Edward J. Mullarkey.

Markel also was the first state's attorney in Connecticut to lead a woman prosecutor to his staff, Mary Galvin.

Superior Court Judge William Hadden, who knew Markel for 15 years, said his death came as a "terrible shock." "I had come to consider him the outstanding state's attorney in Connecticut. The state of Connecticut has lost a man of unquestioned and unmatched ability and integrity."

Mullarkey said his former boss was known for his hard work and dedication.

"He would wear out his younger assistants," Mullarkey said. "He had incredible energy, and he was a real fighter for the job."

As dean of Connecticut's state attorney, Markel was a fierce protector of local prosecutors in jurisdictional disputes with the chief state's attorney's office. Markel clashed publicly with Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly — his former pupil — on this question.

He also was tough on police officers who went wrong.

On Oct. 30, he joined federal law enforcement officials to announce that two New Haven police officers had pleaded guilty to felony charges and resigned their jobs for the death in May 1980 of Alex Rackley, a member of the New York City chapter of the radical organization and an alleged police informer.

Charges were dismissed against Seale, but 13 other defendants in the case, one was convicted of a crime after trial and two pleaded guilty of second-degree murder and were sentenced to life in prison.

Haiti may postpone free election
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The Electoral Council, reacting to fires that gutted its headquarters and a company printing ballots, said it will decide soon whether to cancel Haiti's first free elections in at least 30 years.

Opposition groups and prominent citizens in Haiti have charged the fires were aimed at derailing the electoral process and may have been set by supporters of the former Duvalier regime, a charge the supporters deny.

"So far, elections are still scheduled for Nov. 29," council member Alain Rocourt said Thursday after an all-day meeting of the independent body at which postponement was a main topic. The board's decision could be announced as early as Saturday, council members and aides said.

Rocourt said he and his eight colleagues were concerned about suspicious fires that on Tuesday gutted the council's headquarters, and on Thursday heavily damaged one of three plants printing ballots for the election.

Market Nervous after dollar drops
NEW YORK — Stocks opened slightly higher today in nervous trading after an assault on the dollar pushed the currency to new lows, creating uncertainty again on Wall Street.

"The confidence in the market is extremely fragile," said Peter J. DePuzo, manager of the retail equity group at Shearson Lehman Bros. Inc. "That could cause buyers to step aside."

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which rose 46.12 points to 1,865.41 Thursday on the strength of lower interest rates, rose slightly in the first minutes today but then fell back for a 6-point loss. However, gaining issues outnumbered losers by about 7-5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The dollar sank to its lowest level in four decades against the Japanese yen in Tokyo today, finishing at 155.50, down 0.45 from the record low set Thursday. Foreign exchange dealers also sold the dollar lower in Europe and the United States.

Korean students battle police
SEOUL, South Korea — Hundreds of students battled police with firebombs and stones today in an anti-government demonstration. They demanded a neutral interim government to ensure fairness in upcoming elections.

No injuries were reported.

Fighting raged when plainclothes officers hauled away at least six students who were collecting signatures at the gate of Seoul's Yonsei University to back a campaign being launched by opposition groups.

Scores of students retaliated with firebombs and stones, gas grenades and gas masks.

Police escaped unhurt, but the attack triggered heavy fighting for two hours between about 700 students and riot police at the school's gate.

U.S. sells Stingers to Libyan foe
WASHINGTON — The United States has reversed its position and agreed to sell Chad Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to defend against Libyan air attacks, a Defense Department spokesman said today.

"In response to the continued air threat from Libya, we have decided to honor Chad's request for Stingers," said Lt. Col. Keith Snyder.

Snyder said, "The package is a complete one, including training."

He declined to discuss the number of missiles and the delivery schedule, but defense sources speaking on condition of anonymity said 24 Stingers and seven launchers worth a total of $2 million would be delivered in about two weeks.

Deficit-cut negotiations continue
WASHINGTON — Republican congressional leaders discussed the ongoing deficit-reduction negotiations with President Reagan today, indicating afterward they had more work to do before completing a budget compromise.

"Making headway, no deal," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, senior Republican on the Budget Committee, as he left the hour-long White House session and returned to Capitol Hill.

Congressional and White House bargainers were entering their 10th day of searching for some combination of new revenues and spending reductions that would slice at least $23 billion from the deficit.

"Sometimes it takes a while to do things," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said after Thursday's talks ended. "Hopefully by tomorrow evening or early next week, there can be some agreement put together."

Talks break off over jets in Spain
MADRID, Spain — Two days of talks on the future of U.S. military forces on Spanish soil ended in stalemate today over the government's insistence on the removal of American jet fighters based outside Madrid.

The chief Spanish negotiator, Maximo Cajal, said Spain had notified the Americans of its refusal to renew the countries' 34-year-old defense accord in its current form.

Still, both Cajal and U.S. ambassador and chief negotiator Reginald Bartholomew insisted both countries were interested in maintaining a solid military relationship.

Bartholomew said after today's two-hour session that "questions remain to be resolved."

Neither Cajal nor Bartholomew elaborated on what was discussed.

'Cap' makes last pitch for arms

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is retiring with a final plea to Congress not to reduce President Reagan's defense budget, but lawmakers say money problems will be one of the main headaches of his successor, Frank C. Carlucci.

"For the life of me, I don't see what the reluctance is to voting the amounts that are necessary for the nation's security," Weinberger told a Pentagon news conference Thursday, echoing appeals he made for seven years as he pushed for ever-rising defense budgets.

Weinberger's long-expected resignation was announced earlier in the day by Reagan in a White House ceremony during which the president praised his old friend as "the finest secretary of defense in the history of our nation."

Carlucci, Weinberger's deputy during Reagan's first term and chief of staff to Reagan's national security adviser, was named to succeed Weinberger. Reagan also promoted Carlucci to the position of second-ranking member on the National Security Council staff, to succeed the retiring William Clark.

Weinberger, 70, will remain in office until Carlucci is confirmed by the Senate, a process which is expected to be quick and smooth.

"I can assure the president we will act expeditiously on this excellent nomination to insure a timely transition," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which will hold hearings on Carlucci's nomination.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., ranking Republican on the panel, said, "I anticipate that those hearings will go smoothly and that the Senate will confirm Carlucci very shortly."

Weinberger was the architect of Reagan's plan to "rearm America" and battled — often successfully — to win sharp increases from Congress in the defense budget. Weinberger often flatly refused to negotiate with legislators about defense budgets, insisting instead that the entire amount was needed. The day was marked by a clash in northern Guatemala that left 13 soldiers and three leftist rebels dead.

In El Salvador, President Jose Napoleon Duarte declared a unilateral cease-fire in that nation's civil war with leftist guerrillas that has killed an estimated 60,000 people.

In Costa Rica, Pedro Joaquín Chamorro, a director of the rebels' Nicaraguan Resistance umbrella group, called Ortega's announcement "a triumph for the resistance" and said the Contras want to know who will mediate.

Chamorro noted the Contras had accepted a proposal by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, author of the regional peace plan, won the 1987 Nobel Peace Prize.

Cautious optimism on Ortega's offer

It would be "very difficult for us to accept anyone but Cardinal Obando y Bravo," Chamorro said. However, he said he had to see the names proposed. It will depend on the Sandinista proposal.

Sources close to the regional peace negotiations said Obando y Bravo, long a critic of the Sandinistas, was unacceptable to the Nicaraguan leadership.

The source said Arias has talked at least once by telephone with the highly respected former Colombian leader and that Betancur has expressed willingness to act as intermediary between the Contras and the Sandinistas.

It was not immediately known if Betancur will be accepted by either side.

Ortega called on the Contras to take advantage of an amnesty offer before Saturday's expiration of a one-month, limited unilateral cease-fire.

Courier's criticism "prattle."

"Our mission was to get the facts," Rudman said. "I believe we succeeded."

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House panel, said publication of the report will mark the midpoint of the investigation process. He said leads will be followed up by the government's independent counsel, Lawrence E. Walsh, who is pursuing criminal cases in the affair, and legislation will be recommended to congressional committees.

Iran-contra report to urge controls

Leaders of the two panels called the majority-written document fair and balanced, tough in laying blame for the Iran-contra affair at the feet of President Reagan and as thorough as could be achieved within time limits imposed on the committee.

But GOP members were quick to brand the report biased, saying it was too harsh on Reagan and used critical rhetoric unsupported by evidence brought out during the summer's public hearings on the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and the diversion of proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Rep. Jim Cooper, R-N.C., quoted the report as saying Reagan's "unabashed zeal for the Contras" set a climate at the White House that led staff members to circum-

Remember Democrats' promises

When the Democratic candidates for the Board of Directors held their first joint press conference of the political campaign, Mayor Barbara Weinberg said the candidates expected to be held to account for their promises.

In Tuesday's election, the voters retained the Democrats as the majority party, entrusting the party with stewardship of the town for the next two years.

Most of those voters probably voted for the candidates on the basis of their individual worth. The lack of a party lever on the machines in this election made it more difficult for voters to cast ballots for Democrats automatically.

But the political parties do offer their candidates as a team and they are supposed to run as a team.

In some elections, including Tuesday's, the majority party campaign is overshadowed by political maneuvering within the party for election to the post of mayor, a contest that is not supposed to be part of the election.

As a result of that shadow election, Peter DiRosa will be the new mayor. And DiRosa is divided by Weinberg's pledge of accountability for the planks in the platform.

These are some of the things the Democrats promised:

- Restoring Center Springs Park to a practical facility for active and passive recreation. That involves putting the fire-damaged lodge to good use and making it possible again to skate at Center Springs Pond.
Upgrading the fire protection facilities of the Town of Manchester Fire Department. That includes renovating or relocating the firehouse on School Street.

The controversy between the town and the Eight Utilities District over fire protection in the northern part of town has diverted attention from increasing needs in the southern end of Manchester.

Expanding the emergency medical service, perhaps with a second paramedic unit. This includes providing a vehicle specifically designed for medical calls.

Protecting the town's aquifer. This will require some hard decisions on what kinds of development will be prohibited over the aquifer.

It may not be possible, affordable, or even desirable to do all of the things the party said it wanted to do. But the Democrats are bound to give them serious consideration and to carry them out unless they can find good reason not to.

One way to be sure these matters are not given short shrift is to meet regularly twice a month instead of once.

What do you MEAN we're just going through a Prince Charles and Princess Di thing?

Jeanne Kirkpatrick says 'no' to GOP race

Jeanne Kirkpatrick's decision not to toss her champagne into the ring for the Republican presidential nomination makes it likely that the six contenders now visible — Bush, Dole, Kemp, Robertson, du Pont and Haig — are the only ones there will be.

It's always possible, of course, that some dark horse — Gov. Thomas Keane of New Jersey, for example — may dash onto the scene at the last moment. But the mechanics of the modern nomination process, which tend to reward the winners of the major primaries (and even the winners of the earlier caucus states), and which make it very hard to hold back major blocs of delegates for last-minute commitment, militate against newcomers. The chances are that the Republican nomination will go to one of the above short list, and in all probability that he will be one of the first three: Bush, Dole or Kemp.

Kirkpatrick's decision not to run was a wise one. The United States is probably quite ready for a female president. If only one with the skills and personality of a Margaret Thatcher were available. But for some reason American politics has not produced such a figure, and nominating someone simply because of her gender is no way to the hearts of American voters. As Walter Geraldine Ferraro as his running mate.

Jeanne Kirkpatrick is a remarkably intelligent woman, and has moreover an enthusiastic personal

Washington Wire Politics and the dollar

By Tom Raum

WASHINGTON — The U.S. dollar may be the latest casualty of presidential politics as the Reagan administration, striving to avoid a recession on the final year of its watch, has signaled it will let the currency fall.

Comments by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III on Thursday, later reinforced by presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater, that the United States would let the dollar fall rather than raise interest rates helped fuel a rally in bond and stock markets.

A lowering of the prime lending rate by major U.S. banks, a drop in a key West Germany interest rate, and the prospect of an imminent cut in a bellwether rate by the Federal Reserve also contributed to Wall Street optimism.

But the remarks by U.S. officials — confirming what analysts have speculated for days — also led to a further weakening of the dollar on foreign exchange markets, a tumble that will further erode Americans' purchasing power but could help narrow the U.S. trade deficit.

Since last February, the administration has publicly vowed support for a Paris agreement among industrial nations to seek exchange-rate stability around "current levels."

But the stock market collapse and the looming threat of a recession have seriously undermined that so-called "Louvre" accord — which many economists have suggested was always more important to U.S. trading partners than it was to the United States.

Baker reverted to an old tactic of "talking down" the dollar when he suggested, in an interview in the Wall Street Journal, that the administration was willing to let the dollar fall internationally as part of a package of avoiding a recession at home.

The dollar probably would need a dose of higher U.S. interest rates to prop it up at this point, while a policy of temporarily ignoring it could help spur the economy through lower interest rates.

That, in turn, could help delay the arrival of the next recession

after a record 60-month peace-time expansion, a recession which chief White House economist Beryl Sprinkel said may be inevitable but "we don't want it our watch."

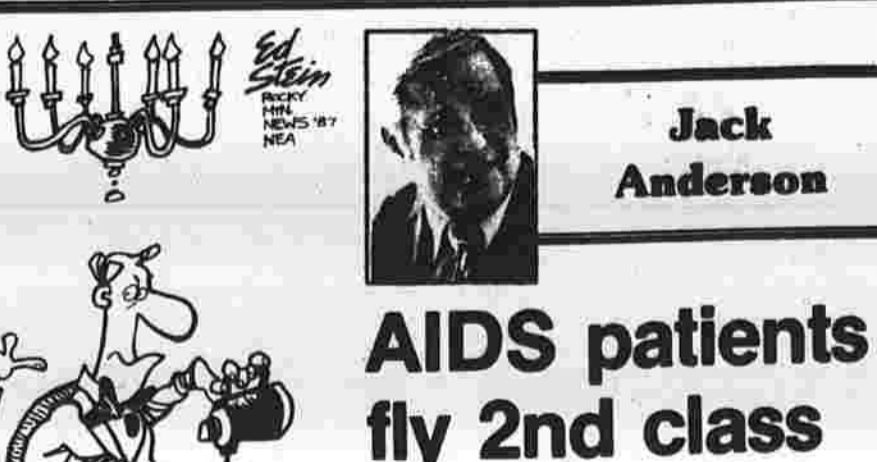

The dollar's plunge on Thursday was partially braked later in the day by a second Fitzwater statement that the administration still supported "exchange rate stability," in line with February's Louvre accord.

But Baker's and Fitzwater's initial comments were not lost on financial market traders.

"The U.S. economy seems to be getting the best of all possible worlds," said David Berenson, senior economist for the Federal National Mortgage Association, known as Fannie Mae. "We are getting the dollar down, which will help our trade deficit, and we are getting interest rates down as well."

A lower dollar can help ease the U.S. trade deficit, but it pits the dollar against the currencies of U.S. trading partners by battering their export industries.

Before the stock market collapse, most economists agreed that too sharp a fall in the dollar

AIDS patients fly 2nd class

WASHINGTON — Last year Delta Airlines promised to educate its employees about AIDS and the ways the deadly disease is transmitted. The company sought advice from recognized experts, and twice distributed AIDS information to airline personnel.

But a recent incident about a Delta plane suggests that the company's educational effort still has a few gaps. Here's what our reporter Jennifer Smith has learned:

Jim Leahy and John Schauer were flying Delta from Washington, D.C., to Orlando, Fla. on the morning of Oct. 12 after a business trip to the capital. They noticed that several passengers were wearing gay-rights badges on the weekend march on Washington, but thought no more about it.

Then, after snacks was served, Leahy pointed out to his companion that the flight attendant had put on disposable plastic gloves to retrieve the plates and leftovers from the passengers. Schauer, a frequent flyer, said he had never seen that before.

When they changed planes in Atlanta, he noticed that no gloves were worn by attendants on the other Delta plane. The two men are heterosexuals.

Delta spokesman Jim Lundy said he didn't know why a flight attendant would wear gloves while serving passengers on the first flight and had needed oxygen. He was then taken off the plane without explanation — while his painkillers and other medication in his suitcase were flown to San Francisco.

Sigler's companions, his brother and sister-in-law, said the flight attendant had fled. They said Sigler had no trouble, sleeping most of the way, and had never used oxygen.

After being contacted by the California-based Mobilization Against AIDS, Delta apologized to the couple and assured them it welcomed AIDS patients as passengers and that information on AIDS would be given to all Delta personnel who deal with the public.

Three months later, though, Delta's insurance lawyers calculated the compensation for passengers killed in a crash and argued that since his companion was known to be homosexual, he probably had AIDS and soon would have died anyway.

"I think the administration now only wants to pump liquidity (additional cash) into the economy. They don't care what happens to the dollar," Evans said.

Taft said he was "unaware of the extent to which it tracked earlier testimony."

Her announcement is said to be a boost for Jack Kemp, and this seems likely — after all, it was widely agreed that, if he had entered the race, Kemp would have been damaged worst, since they appeal to the same basic conservative constituency. It is now up to Kemp to demonstrate, if he can, that his is an overwhelming choice of the GOP's dominant conservative wing. If he fails to do this, George Bush is still the man to beat.

Now, at any rate, the pre-primary stages of the contest are dropping in a close race.

How about the vice presidential nomination? Kemp has been the favorite for this year. The Republican will clearly indicate which candidates have real pulling power and which are running, for all practical purposes, on empty. By the end of March the race will probably have narrowed to three or even two top contenders, and the battle will be entering its decisive stage.

Defector returns to the U.S.

FORT DIX, N.J. (AP) — An American soldier who defected to the Soviet Union last April is back in the United States today facing an interrogation and disciplinary proceedings, authorities said.

Pvt. Wade Roberts, 22, who defected last month ago, arrived at Dover Air Force Base, Del., early today after being flown from Rhein-Main U.S. Air Base outside Frankfurt, West Germany, on Thursday.

Military police accompanied Roberts, clad in blue jeans and a blue and white sweater, to a van and whisked him to a security building where a chaplain, lawyer and commander from Fort Dix were waiting.

The group arrived here a few hours later at the base here, where officials planned to debrief him today after Roberts got some sleep, said Richard V. Dowling, spokesman for Fort Dix.

Roberts is being held on the original desertion charge filed in April in Germany, but that could be changed to an absent without leave charge, Dowling said. In either case, Roberts could be allowed to leave the Army under the discharge he has requested, the spokesman said.

"Fort Dix is now responsible for the disposition of the case, and will decide whether to prosecute Roberts and if so, on what charges," Dowling said. "Roberts has expressed a desire to get out of the Army and go on with his life, and the Army at this point sees no reason why that shouldn't happen."

The CS-A jet arrived in the United States late Thursday in New Hampshire for refueling. Roberts deserted from an Army base in Giessen, West Germany, in April and fled to East Germany where he was in the trunk of a rented car driven by his West German girlfriend, who is now pregnant. The couple defected to the Soviet Embassy in East Berlin and then went to Moscow.

Roberts' girlfriend, Petra Neumann, also returned to West Germany but did not accompany him to the United States, said Walter Neuberger, spokesman for the 3rd Army Corps in Frankfurt. Under Army rules, Roberts can request a discharge rather than face a court-martial on AWOL charges, said a statement issued by the Dover base late Thursday.

The usual discharge under this procedure is known as an AWOL discharge under other honorable conditions. It is midway between an honorable discharge and a dishonorable one, and it involves the loss of all benefits," the statement said.

Against that background, Reagan now has to argue that the best qualified candidate for the nation's highest court is a sometime marijuana user, the spokesman said.

"You like to think people who are appointed to the Supreme Court respect the law," Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said.

"It certainly isn't a development that we would have hoped for or desired," he acknowledged. Gary Bauer, the president's assistant for policy development and a leader of conservative forces in the White House, said.

"It was the latest blow in an unrelenting series of setbacks, including the stock market dive, the loss of his first Supreme Court nominee, Robert H. Bork, cancer surgery for his wife, the resignation of longtime ally Caspar W. Weinberger at the Pentagon, rising tension in the Persian Gulf and difficult negotiations to reduce the budget deficit."

And there's more bad news ahead. In less than two weeks, the congressional Iran-Contra committees will issue their final report, reviving the arms-for-hostages episode. Supreme Court nominee Douglas Ginsburg, right, talks with Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., during a visit to Capitol Hill Thursday. Ginsburg's confirmation hearing is scheduled to begin Dec. 7 but concern is mounting over his admission that he has smoked marijuana.

Ginsburg's 'pot' problem embarrassment for Reagan

By Terence Hunt The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Just when things were going badly for President Reagan, they suddenly got worse. Douglas H. Ginsburg, his nominee for the Supreme Court, revealed he had smoked marijuana.

Reagan, whose wife, Nancy, is a champion of the program to "Just Say No" to drugs, now finds himself in the awkward position of defending someone who admits having used an illegal drug, if only on a few occasions.

"It's surely an uncomfortable spot for a president who advocates a tough law and order philosophy and whose core constituents are bedrock conservatives."

"Drugs are menacing our society," Reagan said Sept. 14, 1986, as he and his wife made a televised appeal from the White House for an anti-drug campaign. "They're threatening our values and undermining our institutions. They're killing our children."

Against that background, Reagan now has to argue that the best qualified candidate for the nation's highest court is a sometime marijuana user, the spokesman said.

Body chemicals 'turn on' AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A substance normally produced by the body during infection or drug use can play a role in changing latent exposure to AIDS into an active disease that kills, a federal researcher says.

Dr. Anthony S. Fauci said in an interview Thursday that his research at the National Institutes of Health he and four colleagues for the first time were able to show how a natural body chemical can "turn on" the virus that causes AIDS, or acquire immune deficiency syndrome.

Fauci said the findings suggest that perhaps those people who have tested positive for the presence of the AIDS virus could delay the active stage of the disease by making fundamental changes in their lifestyle. He emphasized, however, that this was still only speculation.

Fauci was a member of a team of researchers that included Thomas M. Folks, Jesse Justement and Andrew Kinter at NIH, and Charles A. Dinarello at Tufts University. Their findings were reported today in Science magazine.

AIDS is caused by the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV. This virus typically lies dormant for five to seven years before it progresses to an active infection that disables the body's immune system.

A key goal of AIDS researchers has been an understanding of the mechanism that causes the HIV virus to evolve from a harmless latency detected only by blood tests into a vicious infection that kills.

Using human cells infected with the AIDS virus, Fauci and his colleagues were able to cause the virus to become active by exposing the cells to cytokine, a protein substance that is secreted into the bloodstream by the body's immune system.

Fauci also suggested persons exposed to AIDS start following "safe sex" practices for their own benefit, because "sexually transmitted infections are important modulators of the immune system," he said. "It might hasten the active expression of the AIDS virus."

AIDS is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products.

Jogging not vital to improve health

CHICAGO (AP) — Running is a needlessly strenuous way to fight the risk of a fatal heart attack, says a study published in the journal of the American Heart Association.

"Moderate and low intensity activities, done frequently enough and in long enough duration, can reduce the chances of dying of heart attack," said Dr. Arthur S. Leon, who conducted a study of more than 12,000 men.

"This would include walking, working around the house and yard, light sports, like golf and bowling," said the researcher from the University of Minnesota's School of Public Health.

"About three-quarters of an hour a day of this type of activity seemed to offer this protection. That seemed to be the optimal amount."

Longer periods of activity or more intense exercise offered little additional protection against coronary artery disease, he said.

"There is no reason to assume that this is not also true for women," the researcher added during a telephone interview Thursday from Minneapolis.

The findings come from a study of 12,138 men whose high cholesterol levels, high blood pressure and smoking habits put them in the upper 10 percent to 15 percent of risk level for heart disease among middle-aged U.S. males.

Results of the study by Leon and colleagues at the university were published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The subjects, ages 35 to 57 at enrollment, were questioned about their leisure activities four times during the six to eight years they were tracked in a nationwide study.

Experts on physical fitness often recommend three 25-minute sessions of heavy activity a week, Leon said.

"Our study seemed to show that in (high-risk) middle-age men... moderate and low-intensity activities done frequently enough and for long enough duration can reduce the chances of dying of a heart attack," Leon said.

Findings were reached after correcting statistically for differences in heart attack rates that might have been caused by age.

Senate OKs railroad safety fines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators spurred by the nation's worst Amtrak accident unanimously passed legislation calling for $10,000 fines and one year of suspension for railroad workers for safety violations.

The Senate on Thursday approved a measure that would increase the penalty for rail safety violations from the current $2,500 and, for the first time, give federal officials authority to sanction rail employees directly.

The bill's unanimous approval increased concern in Congress about rail safety in the aftermath of last January's collision of an Amtrak passenger train and a string of freight locomotives near Chase, Md.

Sixteen people were killed and 175 injured in the accident, which was the worst in Amtrak history.

Investigators have determined that the operators of the Conrail freight locomotives had marijuana in their systems at the time of the accident and that some safety equipment on board the locomotives had been tampered with so it wouldn't work.

The Senate-approved bill calls for the Transportation Department to issue rules and standards spelling out minimum qualifications for train operators, although it stops short of actually licensing such employees.

The bill boosts penalties for violation of federal safety rules from $2,500 to $10,000 per violation and would allow the Federal Railroad Administration to take action directly against a train operator or employee. Currently, action can be taken only against the railroad, which in turn could discipline the employee.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said the bill would allow the Federal Railroad Administration to take action directly against a train operator or employee. Currently, action can be taken only against the railroad, which in turn could discipline the employee.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Conn., said the bill would allow the Federal Railroad Administration to take action directly against a train operator or employee. Currently, action can be taken only against the railroad, which in turn could discipline the employee.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said the bill would allow the Federal Railroad Administration to take action directly against a train operator or employee. Currently, action can be taken only against the railroad, which in turn could discipline the employee.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-N.H., said the bill would allow the Federal Railroad Administration to take action directly against a train operator or employee. Currently, action can be taken only against the railroad, which in turn could discipline the employee.

Interest rate dip aids Wall St.

By Vivian Marino
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A coordinated drive to help push down global interest rates has given Wall Street a much-needed shot in the arm, but the falling dollar only grew weaker in foreign exchange. On Thursday, major U.S. banks cut their prime lending rates another quarter percentage point to 8.75 percent, as European central banks lowered their interest rates to stem the economic crisis precipitated by last month's stock market crash.

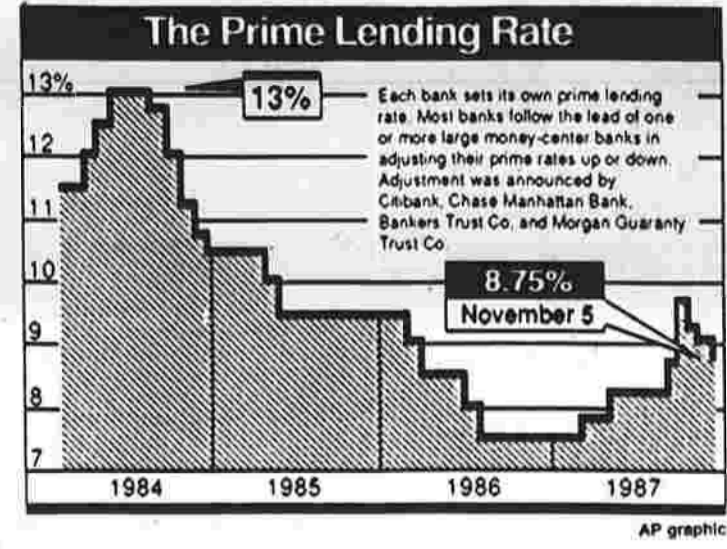

The decline in rates aided stock prices in London and on Wall Street, where the Dow Jones industrial average recovered 40.12 points to 1,965.41.

The dollar continued to plunge in value today, sinking to its third-straight record low against the yen in the Tokyo exchange. On Thursday, it also fell to record lows against most major currencies in the United States and Europe.

"Perhaps sufficient damage has been done to the global attitude about the dollar that these rate cuts are being viewed as a mere political covering up," said William V. Sullivan, director of money market research for Dow Witter Reynolds Inc.

Sullivan pointed to lingering market concerns about the swollen U.S. budget and trade deficits.

In addition to spurting economic growth, lower overseas interest rates normally would allow the United States to hold interest rates down without jeopardizing the health of the dollar, which has been falling steadily for months. The first announcements on the

The Prime Lending Rate
Each bank sets its own prime lending rate. Most banks follow the lead of one or more large money-center banks in adjusting their prime rates up or down. Adjustment was announced by Citicorp, Chase Manhattan Bank, Bankers Trust Co., and Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

Fed expected to cut discount rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Economists believe the Federal Reserve, urged on by the Reagan administration, is intensifying efforts to keep the country out of a recession. It means further declines in the value of the dollar.

Some economists are predicting the Fed will soon cut its discount rate, the strongest signal it can send of intentions to drive interest rates lower.

The discount rate, the interest the Fed charges to make loans to banks, now stands at 9 percent. Many economists say they are looking for a one-half percentage point cut before the end of November, with some suggesting the rate cut could come as soon as today.

That speculation was fueled by comments made Thursday by the Reagan administration, which signaled a strong desire to see interest rates fall in order to keep the country out of a recession.

The comments, first from Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and then affirmed by the White House, sent the dollar plunging to record lows on foreign currency exchanges.

U.S. credit markets, where interest rates declined on the belief that the Federal Reserve, responding to administration pressure, will not water down efforts to restrict money supply. Major U.S. banks also got into the act Thursday when they lowered their prime lending rate from 9 percent to 8.75 percent. It was the second time in two weeks that banks have cut their prime rate, the benchmark used to set interest rates on a variety of corporate and consumer loans.

Before the two cuts, the prime had been raised five times in the past year because of worries about the falling dollar and fears of higher inflation.

Responding to those same fears, the Fed hiked its discount rate from 5.5 percent to 9 percent on Sept. 4 as new Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan sought to assure nervous investors that the central bank was not going to let inflation get out of control.

However, since then the economy has suffered record-breaking declines in the stock market, which have shaken consumer confidence and prompted forecasters to reduce their economic growth forecasts for next year dramatically. Greenspan and the Fed have switched quickly from fighting inflation to working to keep the economy from stumbling into a recession.

The comments from Baker, who has been conferring regularly with Greenspan on government policy, seem to indicate that the central bank's easing monetary stance would continue.

Efforts by the Fed to reduce interest rates have come at a price. The dollar's decline has meant foreign investors earn less of a return on their dollar-denominated assets.

A falling dollar can also raise fears of higher inflation as it drives up the costs of imported products. But the administration seems to be betting that the slower economic growth now expected because of the plunge in the stock market means that market fears about inflation have cooled considerably.

Economists expressed support for the emphasis on lower interest rates even if it means a weaker dollar, arguing that the stock market collapse has changed the economic landscape.

Here's how to safely sell a mortgage

QUESTION: I sold my home three years ago and gave the buyer a $20,500 second mortgage. It is due in 12 years at 12 percent. There is a balance of $19,017. The buyer has made all payments within 30 days of the monthly due dates. However, I do not need this income. Nor do I wish to be bothered with administering this loan.

Can I sell this mortgage and discount for a reasonable amount?

ANSWER: Selling first mortgages, second mortgages and other loans isn't easy. But it can be done. Contact banks, savings and loan associations and mortgage investors. Ask if they will buy the mortgage or if they know any potential buyers. Also check with realtors to see if they are aware of investors who purchase mortgages. Place advertisements in classified sections of newspapers. People who purchase mortgages comb through classifieds and run their own ads offering to buy. You're almost certain to get a number of responses.

Then comes the tricky part — pricing the mortgage you hold.

California sets fashion pace

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Can a city famed for movie stars, palm trees and designer pizzas transcend bicoastal snobbery to become a fashion style setter?

The answer, although hotly disputed on that other coast, appears to be yes — if you leave out winter. Fashion in Los Angeles does not acknowledge cold weather.

The Southern California apparel business, once known only as the capital of swimwear, has grown into a $9.9 billion industry this year on the strength of work by hordes of young designers.

"Everybody likes to put down California as the young offspring that just grew up yet. It's just not true anymore," said David Morse, one of the owners of the sprawling California Mart, where buyers and fashion writers descended en masse for the preview of spring clothes from about 150 West Coast designers.

The downtown complex opened in 1984 with 350 occupants. It now houses 1,400 showrooms representing 10,000 different fashion lines. Morse says. It has 3 million square feet of space spread over 13 floors, and plans call for a new building that will add 500,000 square feet. Pat Miller, fashion coordinator for the Mart, sees the California fashion boom as symptomatic of a national shift in lifestyles.

"California is a passerette," she said. "The lure is obvious. It's a total lifestyle. There's an emphasis on youth, a healthy approach to life. It's the ease of dressing."

Although the California apparel business is still heavily dominated by sportswear, Ms. Miller says a new side is emerging.

Nancy Heller, winner of the 1987 California Designer Award, specializes in cashmere and leathers, she notes. Newcomer Kevin Hall has done elegant evening dresses. "Everyone's not just running around in sweats and tennis," said Ms. Miller. "There's a real quality to the market."

Morse credits the Los Angeles style to a baby boom of talented designers. "California has become far more sophisticated. Because of the lifestyle we offer, we're attracting a different segment of designers," said Morse, noting that an array of top-flight West Coast design schools have sent talented graduates into the market by the hundreds.

"The annual growth of major new designers has been staggering," said Morse, who cited companies such as Union Bay, Ocean Pacific and Genera Sportswear as leaders in the field.

Every-day, he suggests, millionaires are being made on Los Angeles Street, much as they were decades ago on New York's Seventh Avenue.

But it is easier, he says. Smaller investments are required and there is a multiplicity of small contractors for manufacturing. The role of migrant labor also has been cited as a factor in lower West Coast costs.

As an example, Morse tells of the success story of Leon Max, a Russian emigrant who once designed clothes for the Soviet Union's Kirov Ballet. Max launched his Los Angeles fashion house in 1979, evolving a line of knit and linen sportswear for men and women.

"Leon shot from nothing to $40 million," said Morse. "I've watched that happen so often."

Springer named law firm partner

Felix J. Springer of Manchester has been named a partner at Day, Berry & Howard, the largest law firm in Connecticut with offices in Stamford, Hartford and Boston.

Springer practices in the litigation department of the firm's Hartford office, specializing in wrongful termination, civil rights and employment discrimination litigation in state and federal courts. He lectured widely and written frequently about wrongful termination and employment discrimination in the Connecticut Lawyer magazine and at the Hartford Graduate Center. Much of his practice involves advising employers about employment matters.

Springer is an honors graduate of the Loomis School and a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Amherst College. He attended Columbia University on a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship and received M.A. and M.Phil. degrees with honors from that school.

Before attending law school, Springer was a consultant to the American Council on Education and College Entrance Examination Board on a study of intercollegiate athletics.

Springer received his law degree from the University of Connecticut School of Law, where he was editor-in-chief of the Law Review. Before joining Day, Berry & Howard, he was a law clerk to Chief Justice John Cote of the Connecticut Supreme Court.

Springer serves on the board of directors of the Urban League of Greater Hartford, Temple Beth Shalom of Manchester, and is president of the board of directors of Crossroads of Manchester. He also serves on the national allocations committee of the Greater Hartford Jewish Federation.

Springer and his wife, Helene, have two daughters, Shira and Dena.

MIT scraps computer purchase

BOSTON — The Massachusetts Institute of Technology says it dropped plans to purchase a supercomputer after federal officials expressed concerns that the contract would be won by companies selling Japanese products.

"In the course of the bidding process, it became clear that important elements of the federal government would like to see MIT acquire a supercomputer based on U.S. technology," university Provost John Deutch said Thursday.

The federal government provides research grants to MIT, and the views of the federal government had to be seriously assessed by us," he said.

In addition, the U.S. Commerce Department "threatened litigation" if any of the companies involved were "dumping," or selling at below-cost prices, Deutch said.

Carlesimo believes UConn may surprise in Big East

By Chris Dahl
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Despite getting picked in the annual poll of coaches to repeat a dismal eighth-place finish, there is at least one opposing coach who believes Connecticut may startle a few of the traditional powers in the Big East Conference this season.

As coach of the Big East team that toured Australia this summer, Seton Hall's P.J. Carlesimo believes he may be privy to some information that's been a little slow getting around the conference.

"I think the Connecticut people and maybe the coaches in the league realize how good Cliff Robinson is, but a lot of other people don't," Carlesimo said Thursday at the Big East media conference.

"I think he's going to explode in the Big East this year," Carlesimo said.

Connecticut's chances of making the top ground in the conference rest with the promising skills of the junior forward.

Robinson was averaging 18.1 points and 7.4 rebounds when he and guard Phil Gamble were declared academically ineligible midway through last season, but Carlesimo and Connecticut Coach Jim Calhoun believe Robinson has come back this season even better.

Carlesimo ticked off the name Robinson first when asked to name the players who impressed him most during the Big East's all-star tour of Australia this summer.

Robinson averaged as perhaps the top all-around player on the team, emerging 16.6 points and 7.3 rebounds.

"He's a great player, and when you have a great player, that can elevate an entire team," Carlesimo said. "I think, because of Robinson, Connecticut is going to become a force in the league this year."

Judging from the outcome of the coaches' poll, few of the other Big East coaches think Connecticut can become a contender — even with Robinson leading the way.

But forward Jeff King, a string-bencher senior, thinks that may be a blessing in disguise for the Huskies.

Robinson to sign with Spurs

By David Sedeno
The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — The San Antonio Spurs have coaxed top draft pick David Robinson to sign a six-month contract with the NBA plans with a contract reportedly worth $28 million.

Robinson, a 7-foot-1 center who set several basketball records at the Naval Academy, was expected to end months of speculation today by signing a contract with the Spurs, team officials said Thursday.

Details of the pact have been announced, but the New York Times reported that it is a guaranteed contract worth $28 million over eight years, including a $1-million signing bonus payable immediately.

"It's all just falling into place," Spurs chairman Angelo Drossos said Thursday.

Robinson, the Spurs' top draft choice and No. 1 overall pick in the draft, had kept silent about his plans after months of speculation with the Navy. Robinson was selected the college basketball player of the year last season as he set 33 Navy records, including 2,659 career points, 1,314 rebounds and 516 blocked shots.

Spurs Coach Bob Weiss said he felt confident Robinson could be signed after talking to the Navy star in September.

"I felt he was open-minded, and if he was open-minded I knew Angelo could get it done," Weiss said. "Somebody could have come here and it didn't matter what you did, you couldn't sign them."

The Spurs are coming off their worst season, 24-58, as they prepare to open against the Houston Rockets tonight, and management sees Robinson as a crucial spark for the team and its fans.

"I'm happy for the city of San Antonio because I think it might give us just what we need to perk up interest in the team," Weiss said.

"It's nice for the organization, but we've got 12 players and two coaches who are concerned with their jobs for the next two years," Weiss said. "We're not just going to sit around and wait for goals to make the playoffs."

Celtics out to regain NBA championship

By Bill Bornard
The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics figure it is their turn to win the NBA championship, even with Kevin McHale out of the lineup for a month or two.

The Celtics, who have traded championships with the Los Angeles Lakers the last four seasons, can begin to prove they can win the team's 17th NBA title when they play host to Milwaukee tonight in one of 11 season-opening games.

"The edge we have this year is that we didn't guard Dennis Johnson said, referring to last June's defeat against the Lakers. "That just makes you want to beat him even more."

"We had a good pre-season. Now it's time to get going," Coach K.C. Jones said. "We've been working on defense and the running game and we got kind of rusty in the half-court game, but we'll see."

With McHale out after foot surgery, the Celtics went 7-1 in exhibition games, with Reggie Lewis and rookie forward Brad Lohman and Mark Acres played better than expected.

"They've shown what they can do in preseason, so now we'll see what they can do when the bell rings," Jones said.

In other games Friday night, it will be Cleveland at New Jersey, Indiana at Philadelphia, Washington at Atlanta, New York at Detroit, Golden State at Sacramento, Utah at Dallas, San Antonio at Houston, the Los Angeles Clippers at Denver, and Seattle at the Lakers and Phoenix at Portland. The only team not seeing action Friday is the Chicago Bulls.

McHale averaged 26.1 points last year and led the league in field-goal percentage. His absence could place more of a scoring burden on Larry Bird, who slumped down his body and his hairstyle after averaging 22.1 points last season.

"I'm pleased with the way I played and I'm very pleased with the way the team played," Bird said of Boston's exhibition performance.

The Celtics aren't the only team with designs on challenging the Lakers.

"Our major goal in the '87-88 season is to get closer to the NBA title," Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello said. "We'll continue to work hard and earn the title."

And I'm a believer that good work habits lead to victories."

The Hawks, who won 57 games and the Central Division last season, are led by Dominique Wilkins, who averaged 29 points.

"Each of these teams seems to have improved itself over the summer and competition ought to be tougher than it usually is," Fratello said. Dallas, which last year won the Midwest Division for the first time, was disappointed with a loss to Seattle in the first round of the playoffs.

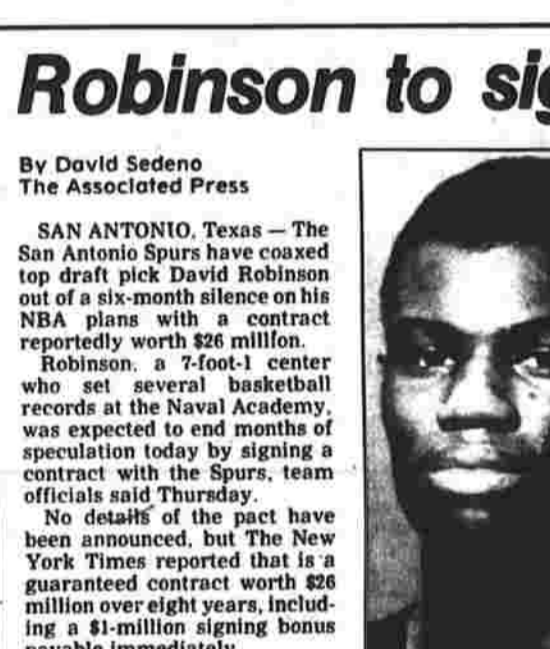

"I just want us to play better when the playoffs roll around," Coach John MacLeod said. "That's our goal."

MacLeod replaces Dick Motta, whose seven years as Dallas coach was surpassed only by Red Auerbach's 16 with Boston for the longest continuous service with one club in league history.

"Dick built a great winning tradition and I hope to carry on that tradition and hopefully get the Mavericks up to the next level."

The Mavericks have one of the best starting lineups in the league in forwards Mark Aguirre and Sam Perkins, center James Donaldson and guard Orlando Blackman and Derek Harper.

The defending champion Lakers won their first seven exhibition games before losing the Hall of Fame game to Chicago on Tuesday night. Magic Johnson, last season's most valuable player, and 46-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar missed that game with nagging injuries, but were expected to play tonight.

IN ITS 20-14 COME-FROM-BEHIND win over Fermi last week, Driggs had six receptions for 106 yards, including a 42-yard touchdown. Rasmus had three for 94, including a 42-yard TD, and Russell caught three for 46 yards. Senior running back Ron Smith has shown his talents of a year ago, and sophomore running back Aris Leonard (14 carries for 91 yards vs. Fermi) is making vast strides each week.

George, a point guard, has taken over as leader on and off the court while Pikiel will be asked to extend his shooting range.

Break-in, assault ends with arrest

A Manchester teen-ager broke into the Eldridge Street home of his friend early Thursday morning and assaulted the friend's mother, police said.

Police said Anthony Boniface, 17, of 800 Spruce St., began pounding on the door of 101 Eldridge St. about 3:30 a.m. and broke into the house after the mother told him to go away. After entering the home, Boniface slapped the 53-year-old woman several times in the face, police said.

Police said that officers called to the scene found Boniface in the home when they arrived. He told the officers that he had been taking amphetamines.

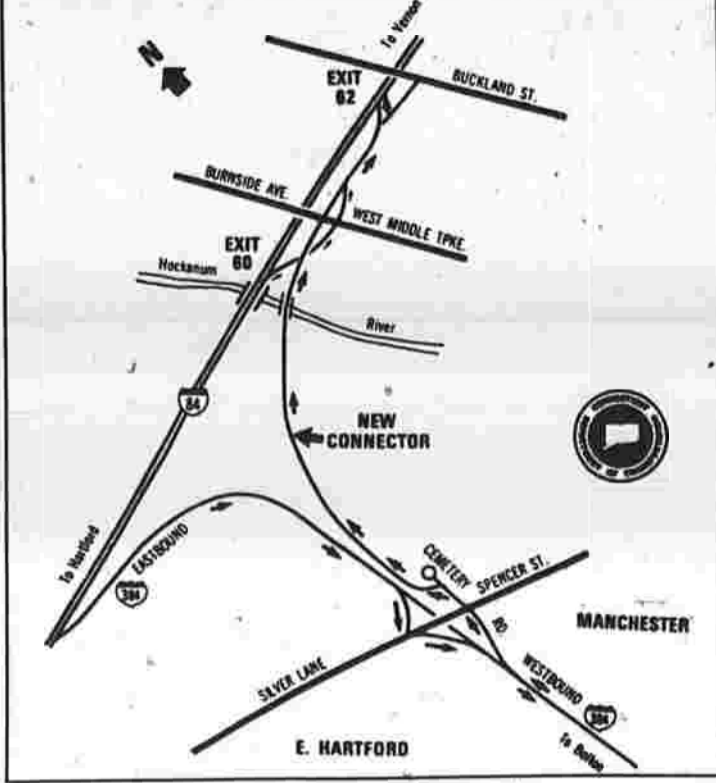

Boniface was charged with third-degree assault, second-degree burglary and criminal trespass. He was released on a $2,500 cash bond and was to appear in court this morning in Manchester Superior Court.

Husband charged with threatening

A Manchester man who threatened to kill his wife Thursday night was taken into custody by police when he arrived home in his car intoxicated, police said.

Police said Richard J. Price, 37, of 144 Eastbound Open, threatened to kill his wife early Thursday evening and threatened to kill her for the insurance money.

Police arrested Price when he arrived home. He was charged with threatening and operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated. He was held on $1,000 bond and was to appear this morning in Manchester Superior Court.

New connector

A permanent connecting ramp, which will join Interstate 384 westbound with Interstate 84 eastbound, will be open to traffic Thursday. For the next few weeks, the ramp will be accessible from Cemetery Road off Spencer Street in Manchester. Story on page 1.

Two dead in crash of small plane

LACEY TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Searchers dug the bodies of a Connecticut couple reported missing last weekend when their light plane failed to arrive at its destination in North Carolina.

The wreckage of the Beechcraft Bonanza was discovered Thursday by New Jersey Civil Air Patrol rescue teams in a heavily wooded area, CAP Lt. L. Constantine O'Grady said.

She identified the victims as Wesley F. Hull, who piloted the plane, and his wife and sole passenger, Caren Hull, of Greenwich, Conn.

The plane took off Sunday from Westchester County Airport in New York for Kill Devil Hill Airport in North Carolina, said Ms. O'Grady. She said CAP officials didn't immediately know why the plane crashed.

"It was known before he was nominated he would be nominated," Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said of the drug revelation.

ment with pot. Apparently he (Ginsburg) did, and I'm sorry about that."

Contrary to Byrd's assertion that it sends a negative message to young people, Reagan said, "I think it's a helpful message." He said, "I think the message it sends is that he regrets and shouldn't have done it."

Asked if the nomination could survive, Reagan replied, "If there's any justice in Washington he can." He said that "converts (against drugs) are sometimes the most devoted."

Ginsburg, 41, revealed Thursday that he used the drug once in the 1960s and on a few occasions in the 70s, adding, "It was a mistake and I regret it."

The statement followed National Public Radio's request for his comment on NPR interviews in which a half-dozen people indicated Ginsburg used marijuana while teaching at Harvard Law School.

The development came just as there was movement in the confirmation process. Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said earlier in the day that he hoped to begin confirmation hearings the week of Dec. 7 and finish well before the Senate adjourned for the year.

A source close to Ginsburg, speaking on condition he not be named, said the nominee told senators he "didn't buy it (marijuana), didn't sell it and used it just a few times."

But comments from conservative Republican senators made clear that only two weeks after the embarrassing defeat of Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork, the successor candidate was in trouble.

"It was known before he was nominated he would be nominated," Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said of the drug revelation.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the admission might not make a difference in and of itself, "except that you like to not be named." He heard several Republican senators say it's going to hurt.

Grassley, asked if the disclosure would hurt Ginsburg among conservatives, said, "Yes, without a doubt."

"It's not good news — it's bound to hurt," said one prominent GOP senator who spoke on condition he not be named. "I heard several Republican senators say it's going to hurt."

"If public opinion rises against him," the senator said, it could cause the administration to pull back the nomination, which has not been formally sent to the Senate.

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., said "it's an embarrassment to a number of the conservative senators who were announcing their support of him minutes after he was nominated."

Ginsburg's chances, he said, "will depend upon how embarrassed they (the conservatives) are by their own poor judgment. If they get over the embarrassment, it won't hurt him. If they cannot get over it, it will hurt him."

Singer Anita Baker poses during an interview in New York last month. She became a star in 1986 with an LP titled "Rapture."

Critics applaud talented Baker

By Mary Campbell
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Anita Baker is a way of wrapping a song around her body and eagerly caressing it like a hungry lover. It is that intimacy, laced with her talented jazz-pop soul styling, that has sent her to the top of the charts with one of the best love songs albums of the year.

"Rapture" has sold more than 3 million copies and was No. 22 on Sept. 26, its 77th week in Cashbox magazine's best-selling list.

The 29-year-old Baker grew up in Detroit. She won two Grammys this year, as best female rhythm 'n' blues vocalist for "Rapture" and as writer of the best R & B song, "Sweet Love." Critics have applauded her smoky style and have compared her to Whitney Houston and Sade.

Baker began the six-month second leg of an American tour in mid-July, which carried her to New York and a recent four-day, sold-out stint at Radio City Music Hall. She discussed her career in an interview with The Associated Press. Q. Are you doing a follow-up album to "Rapture?"

A. "I'm doing the worst part of pre-production, which is listening to a backlog of six months of tapes. Tapes are submitted daily. We're trying to come up with a concept for the next album. This is the tough part. Once the concept is here, I know where I'm going. Right now I'm just taking songs that sound good to me and seeing if I can sing them properly."

Q. What was the concept for "Rapture?"

A. "Fireside love songs, with jazz, blues and gospel overtones. It was very simple, but I need to set up some kind of criteria so I know what I'm looking for."

Q. Have you written any new songs?

A. "No. I can't write in hotels. I have to be domestic, washing dishes and stuff."

Q. Where is home?

A. "I've been in Los Angeles since 1982. Wait (her fiancé, whose last name she will not reveal) and I are looking for a home in Michigan. He's in marketing for IBM in Detroit. We met when I was home visiting my family. I didn't have a record company then. If we can find a house by January, we can have the wedding ceremony in the spring, after I deliver the next album."

Q. How has fame changed your life?

A. "I was determined not to change my lifestyle, but I've had to. I was burglarized last year. People were leaving

That amazing Sheen family

By Bob Thomas
 The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — You wonder how Charlie Sheen keeps his feet on the ground. After all, he's 21 and during a short period has starred in four major films, including one that collected an Academy Award.

"It's simple," he said. "I visit my family twice a week. They kick me around a little bit."

That's the amazing Sheen family. There's father Martin Sheen, one of the most visible and respected of today's actors. Then comes Emilio Estevez, actor-writer-director who broke out of the Brat Pack when he starred as Richard Dreyfuss' sidekick in "Stakeout."

Ramon Sheen and Renee Estevez are actors on the rise, and Charlie (real name: Carlos Irwin Estevez) is on the brink of superstar status. However, there's no chance of his new status going to his head, not amid the give-and-take of the Sheen household in Malibu.

"I haven't placed a label on myself the way society or the moviegoing public might," Sheen said. "So maybe they say, 'Now you're a star.' I have a hard time with that. People ask, 'What's it like to be a movie star?' I say, 'I'm a movie planet.'"

Just try to maintain the perspective of longevity. If I'm going to be in this business as long as I'd like to be, then I'm going to take it one day at a time, one film at a time, one relationship at a time. I'd like to plan my strategy and still take the risks as an actor."

Sheen admitted that growing up in the family of a working film actor gave him the opportunity to jump on the inner workings of the business and to learn how movies are made.

"If I were to become an actor, I could judge exactly what my role would be as a professional. Witnessing my dad as early as I can recall, doing his thing. I naturally took an interest," he said.

"It has helped me tremendously not to lose sight of the reality of what I'm doing now, because of Dad's devotion to what he does."

Born in New York City, Sheen moved to California at the age of 3 when his father's film career began to blossom. As a boy, he spent much time on his father's movie locations, including eight months in the Philippines on "Apocalypse Now," during which Martin suffered a near-fatal heart attack.

"When I went back to the Philippines to do 'Platoon,' after having been there as a 10-year-old and returning as a 29-year-old, it was amazing," marvels Charles.

"If you looked at it on paper, you wouldn't believe it: narrating the film, playing the central character. It was the same place, but I was different. I'd come home."

Sheen admitted that members of the anti-legislative "Platoon" location didn't anticipate the film's impact.

"We were in the jungle, tired, hot, bored, miserable, ticked-off," he said. "We knew we were capturing moments, certain things were working, and we had a pretty good story. But we didn't think anybody would see the film. We didn't think anybody would care about the film. The fact that it was received critically so well — and commercially — was an amazing surprise to all parties involved.

"Except maybe Oliver (Stone, writer-director). The rest of us were blind to it. There was no 'epic' feel on the set. It just felt like 'quality' film."

Sheen is a startling carbon of his father: same dark unruly hair, serious eyes, wide smile, gravelly voice. The young actor recently came to Los Angeles to promote his new release, "No Man's Land." He came from Indianapolis where he is filming his fourth film in a row, "Eight Men Out," John Sayles' tale of the Chicago "Black Sox" scandal of the early 1920s.

In "No Man's Land," he plays a role far removed from the impressionable idealist of "Platoon." He's the leader of a Porsche-stealing ring who is capable of murder.

"I received a script and read a role that would offer me an opportunity to wear a different hat," Sheen said. "The character is an adrenaline junkie. He steals Porsches not because he needs the money; it's just being on the edge for a few moments. He's grown up wealthy, and he's on the edge for five seconds or 10 minutes is what his life is about at this time."

Sheen's next release could scarcely be more timely: "Wall Street," again with Oliver Stone.

"I play a character named Bud Fox, a young trader who is not putting his quota with his firm," said the actor. "He's been struggling as a stockbroker, and he's been calling Michael Douglas, who is a financial tycoon, trying to get him as a client."

"He finally gets brought into Douglas' inside world when he gives him an inside tip. It's not until Douglas sucks him in that he realizes how corrupt Douglas really is, and how much he wants to be Douglas as such a falsity when it comes to a head."

In "Eight Men Out," Sheen plays an outfielder who accepts a bribe to throw a World Series. That makes three shady characters in a row for the actor.

Calling all retired musicians!

By Carole Thompson
 The Associated Press

NEW LONDON — Abandon the assembly line, desert the desk, but retire from music? — Never!

Victor Norman, 81, founder and conductor emeritus of the Eastern Connecticut Symphony, is putting out a call for 100 musicians over age 55 to form the National Senior Symphony.

"There must be hundreds, if not thousands of musicians who miss playing in a symphony," Norman said. "You can retire from a particular job, but you can't retire from music."

Norman already has the support of two legendary seniors — conductors Sir Georg Solti, 75, music director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and Leonard Bernstein, 69, of the New York Philharmonic. Both men are honorary board members of the senior symphony.

Born in Oslo, Norway, Norman founded the Eastern Connecticut Symphony in 1945 and retired from it in 1980. He still serves on its board of directors, arranges concerts, selects programs and occasionally conducts.

Norman, who lives in New London, got the idea to form an orchestra of senior musicians when he remembered a musician who refused to let his advancing years stanch the creative urge.

"He was a cellist who had been with the NBC symphony under (conductor Arturo) Toscanini," Norman said. "When I knew him he was in his 80s and he just loved that he still had the opportunity to play myself, the thought occurred. 'Well, I've seen how much I like to keep doing it and I see there are lots of others who don't have the chance that I have.'"

For his senior symphony, he is seeking active or retired musicians willing to spend a week next spring at their own expense — in the seaside community of Mystic, Conn., preparing for a free concert on April 22 at a site yet to be selected.

"There will be no auditions. Professional symphonic musicians will be considered on a first-come, first-served basis."

Norman is confident he can shape his new orchestra in one week.

"After all, these are trained musicians.

Conductor Victor Norman, at the piano in his home, is looking for 100 symphony musicians age 55 or older to become part of the fledgling National Senior Symphony. The group already has the backing of conductors Leonard Bernstein and Sir George Solti.

They are individuals, they have feelings and the main reason they belong to an orchestra is that they like to play," he said.

The conductor's job is to "absorb the score," he said.

"You look at the music and you hear the music inside and of course you hear it in a faultless performance because there's nobody performing it," he said with a smile.

"And then you come down to rehearsal. And now it sounds entirely different because all of a sudden you have maybe a

Hall of Famer Lou Boudreau will be the special guest at the Illing Junior High School baseball card show on Sunday in the Manchester High School cafeteria. The show is open from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and Boudreau is expected to sign autographs from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Admission is $1, which goes to support the Illing cross country and basketball invitational.

Blow up the house

"Everyday Chemistry — Or How to Blow Up Your House" will be the children's presentation tonight at 7 at Central Connecticut State University's Cooperian Planetarium and Space Science Center, on Wells Street in New Britain. It will be followed at 8:30 by "Chemistry of the Cosmos," geared toward an older audience. Both shows are free and open to the public.

Artists and change

Art historian William Gerdtz will give a free lecture called "Women in the Arts: Some Changes" at the Wadsworth Atheneum on Sunday at 3 p.m. The discussion, accompanied with slides, will feature Gerdtz's encounters with artists. The lecture will be in the museum's Avery Theatre, 600 Main St., Hartford.

All set to pour

Volunteers prepare to serve Connecticut-made wines at a harvest fest buffet, wine tasting and auction on Sunday, at the Connecticut State Museum of Natural History on the Storrs campus of the University of Connecticut. The event features a complete meal of Connecticut-grown foods and beverages. Wine tasting, including bottles from Nutmeg Vineyards of Coventry, begins at 5 p.m., and a buffet of roast beef, ham, turkey and more starts at 6. An auction of wines and Connecticut-made crafts will start at 7 p.m. Jim McDonald will sing early American folk songs throughout the evening. Those who attend will receive honey and preserves to take home. The event is $20 per person, which covers annual membership in the museum.

Come to the cabaret

The annual Musical Theatre Revue, featuring excerpts from "A Chorus Line," "Bye Bye Birdie," "Purlie" and others, will be presented tonight through Sunday at 8:15 p.m. in the Austin Arts Center of Trinity College. Tickets are $5. For reservations, call 527-8062.

Out of this world

A Psychic Energy Fair is being organized at the New Britain Holiday Inn on Columbus Boulevard. It will be open Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Readers will offer tarot, astrology, palmistry and crystal work. No admission will be charged, but each psychic charges a fee to look into your future. Call 767-1854 for information.

In the grand tradition

Internationally acclaimed pianist Adrzej Anweiler will present a recital at the Hartford Camerata Conservatory of Music & Dance, 834 Asylum Ave., Hartford, on Sunday at 3 p.m. Admission is $5 at the door. For more information, call 246-2588.

Puppets and fun

Puppeteer Marge Roccobert will lead a shadow puppetry workshop on Saturday at 10 a.m. at the South Church-First Baptist Church, 90 Main St., New Britain. This is for children who are kindergarten age and above. The $3 fee includes materials and a snack. On Sunday at 4 p.m., the folk duo Peanutbutterjam will present a performance of song and puppets. Call 223-3691 for more information.

Dance the night away

The Children's Cooperative Nursery School of Bolton is planning a dance on Saturday at the Elks Lodge in Willimantic. Tickets are $15 per couple, available by calling Lynn Sobol at 742-8575 or Phyllis Bonneau at 647-8961.
Can't stop dancing? From 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, there will be a dance at the Elks Lodge on Biswell Street. Proceeds benefit the music and uniform fund of the Manchester Senior Citizens Orchestra, which has played recently at the Rockville Fair, and at several convalescent homes.

Enjoy some sketches

There will be a spaghetti dinner tonight with entertainment at Bolton Elementary School. The supper is sponsored by the Bolton Arts, a school fund-raising group. The dinner will have two seatings at 5:30 and 7 p.m. Tickets are $4 general, $3 senior citizens. Call 647-1396.

Think Polish

Sue Krowchenko, left, and Stella Pardo flank Rev. Stanley M. Lancola of St. John the Baptist Polish National Catholic Church as they prepare for their church's Polish foods and crafts sale today from 5 p.m. until 9 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. Polish foods will be for sale and a dinner will be served both days at the church hall at 23 Galloway St. Crafts will be on sale at the Lithuanian Hall across the street.

It's a weekend for fair-goers

This is an enormously busy weekend for those who enjoy crafts fairs. The area offers more than a dozen fairs, for those willing to buzz around from location to location. Here's a roundup of those closest to home:
Bolton Congregational Church, 228 Bolton Center Road, Bolton, will have its fair from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday. Visits with Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, luncheon, candy shop, kitchen cupboard and more.
At Center Congregational Church, 11 Center St., you'll find antiques and handicrafts, a brand new church cookbook, baked goods and more. It's open Saturday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.
Cornerstone Christian School at the Church of the Nazarene, will have a Country Store Fair from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday. Crafts and baked goods will be featured.
Greater Vernon Jaycees will have a fair featuring 80 New England crafters, Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Vernon Center Middle School. Admission is $1.50, children under 14 free.
Manchester Grange 31 will have its annual apple festival and Christmas bazaar on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the grange hall on Olcott Street. Baked goods and an auction table will be featured.
Manchester WAT'S will have its Autumn Jubilee on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Orange Hall, 72 E. Center St. The fair will feature a Christmas booth, doll clothes, snack bar and more.

Old is beautiful

You'll find much that's beautiful at the Manchester Rotary Club's annual Antique and Collectibles Show on Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School. Seventy dealers from around the region will be on hand. Profits support the Rotary Club's scholarship fund.

Go see the doc

The king of bluegrass music, Doc Watson, will be in West Hartford on Sunday for a special concert. The Sounding Board Society has arranged this concert at 4 p.m. in the auditorium of the King Philip School, 100 King Philip Drive. Tickets are $8, and they are selling quickly. Call 563-3263 for reservations.

Students in spotlight

Students from Manchester High School will be featured in Saturday's concert with the Manchester Symphony Orchestra and Choral. The 21 outstanding young musicians were asked to perform in the piece, "In the Steppes of Central Asia," by Alexander Borodin. One of the other works will be "Premiere Rhapsody" by Claude Debussy, with Margaret Donoghue as guest clarinetist. The concert is the symphony's first of the season. It will be Saturday at 8 p.m. in Manchester High School's Bailey Auditorium. Tickets are free to anyone under 18, $6 for all others.

Playing house

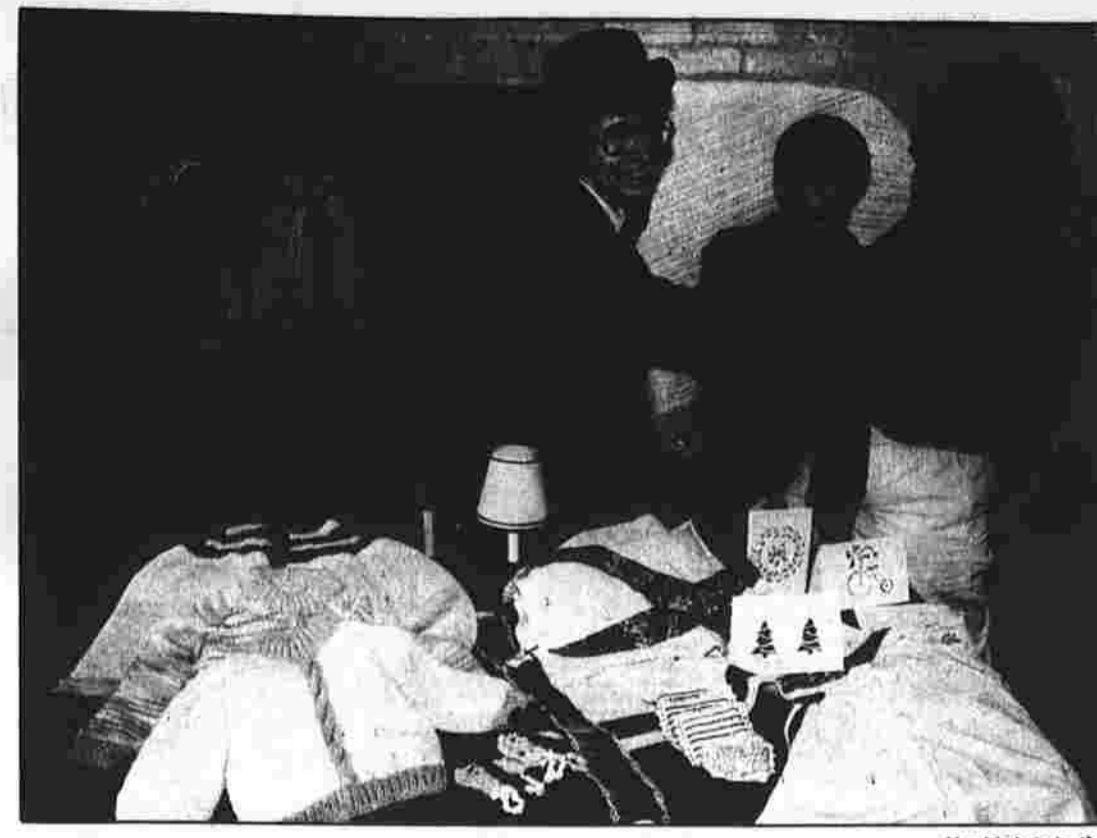

This weekend the Hartford Civic Center will be home to more than 170 companies. Everything, including the kitchen sink, will be on display at this year's Home & Energy Expo. It is open tonight until 10, Saturday from noon to 10 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m. Admission is $3.50 general, $2.50 senior citizens, with children under 12 admitted free.

On the line

The Little Theatre of Manchester's production of "A Chorus Line," Broadway's longest running musical, is playing at East Catholic High School's auditorium. Performances are tonight and Saturday, Nov. 13 and 14 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 for adults, $6 for children and senior citizens. Call 528-8868 for reservations.

Fun to dress up

Don't put away your costume trunk yet. The Manchester Gilbert & Sullivan Players is holding a Decade Dance tonight at 8, and guests are to come dressed in the style of their favorite decade. Music will be from the 1920s to the present. Tickets are $8 per person or $15 per couple. The dance is at the Army and Navy Club on Main Street.

Just a little too big

Capt. Pearl Asperschlager of Manchester's Salvation Army checks the fit of a sweater on Phillip Andrew, 3. Phillip sits comfortably in the arms of his mother, Gail Andrew, who is the chairman of the Salvation Army's annual holiday fair, Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Salvation Army Citadel on Main Street. The fair features a luncheon, arts and crafts and lots of Irish shoe bread.

Modern myths run forever without a leg to stand on

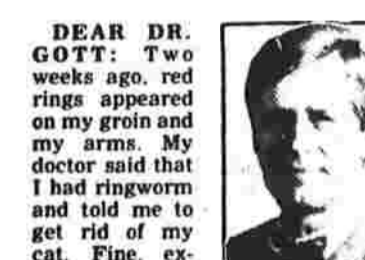

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You recently printed a letter from a lady regarding the horrible consequences suffered by a young woman when she overused the facilities at a tanning salon. The story she told was obviously farfetched. Why did you print the lady's name? You must have known it would embarrass her.
I have read your column for many years, and while I don't always agree with you, I have always looked forward to seeing what you had to say. No longer, I think printing the lady's name when you knew it would make her look foolish, was just plain mean!
Now every time I read your column, I feel resentment. Please notice, I am not signing my name. You are not to be trusted with it.
UNSIGNED IN OREGON

DEAR UNSIGNED: I'm glad you wrote because other readers may have felt as you did, and I welcome the opportunity to publicly state that before I published the woman's letter, I obtained permission to use her name. Furthermore, if I had thought she might be embarrassed by the publicity, I would not have identified her.
Incidentally, after that item appeared, I heard from folklorist Jan Harold Brunvand, author,

Close the door to ringworm

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Two weeks ago, red rings appeared on my groin and arms. My doctor said that I had ringworm and told me to get rid of my cat. Fine, except I have no cat. However, my neighbor's eight cats use my garage for their bathroom and I'm in and out of there several times a day. How do I clear up the ringworm? What is it?

DEAR READER: Ringworm is a term that refers to a group of skin diseases caused by fungus. The lesions are typically itchy and scaly and tend to spread centrifugally in ever-enlarging circles. Several over-the-counter lotions and creams, including Tinactin and Desenex, are useful in curing the infection, which, by itself, is a harmless annoyance.
Ringworm is a common affliction of domestic animals; humans can catch the infection from dogs and cats.
I think that your fungus condition is going to prove to be less of a problem than you neighbor's eight cats. Allowing them to use your garage is inappropriate, unsanitary and probably places a lot of social pressure on your relations with your neighbor. I suggest that you close your garage door and inform your neighbor that you're no longer in the business of operating a public feline restroom. If your neighbor has such a hankering for cats, let him assume the responsibility for their care. It seems to me that your garage could be put to use some years ago.

It seems that during the Civil War (May 12, 1863, to be exact), a young Virginia farm girl was standing on her front porch when a stray bullet first passed through the scrotum of a young Union cavalryman, then lodged in the reproductive tract of the young woman, who thus became pregnant by a man she had not been within 100 feet of. And nine months later she gave birth to a healthy baby.
You don't believe it? If it hadn't been published in the very reliable American Heritage magazine (December 1971, page 99, in a story titled "The Case of the Miraculous Bullet"), I wouldn't have believed it either.

LELAND E. SMITH
NASHVILLE, TENN.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Several years ago I ran that item in this space, which brought me a letter from a 99-year-old South Dakota Indian. He said he had heard a different version of the same story. Only the girl wasn't a Virginia farm girl, she was an Indian maiden who claimed she had been impregnated by a bow and arrow.
Maybe that's where the traditional Indian greeting "Howdy" originated.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it true that the tobacco processors are permitted to add opium to their products, particularly snuff?

DEAR READER: Wrong. Opium products are classified as narcotics and their sale is carefully regulated by both federal and state authorities. Opium or its derivatives are not added to any tobacco products processed or manufactured in the United States.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My grandson roughhouses with his son, age 2. He takes him by the ankles and swings him 360 degrees. How much is too much?

DEAR READER: I believe that 360 degrees is too much. Children are amazingly adaptive in putting up with adults' wacky behavior. However, swinging a 2-year-old by the ankles in a circle exceeds the boundary of fun and games, unless your grandson is training the

Thoughts

Framed in my office is a small card with the following quotation: "The measure of our holiness is not the perfection of our personality and the avoidance of all faults but the extent of our love."
Father Joseph S.M.

How true. When all is said and done, it all comes down to love. For God the bottom line question is "How much have you loved?"
If we do not love, St. Paul reminds us, our eloquence becomes a noisy growl. Our knowledge and even our faith mean nothing. Our sacrifices gain nothing. (1 Corinthians 12: 1-3)
When all is said and done, for God the bottom line is love.
