GINSBURG TOLD TO QUIT

Fighting 'hurts the president'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as he publicly defended his Supreme Court nominee, President Reagan gave a Cabinet member permission Friday to ask Douglas H. Ginsburg to withdraw from consideration because he had used marijuana.

Ginsburg was non-committal when Education Secretary William Bennett told him that the fight was "not winnable" and that staying in "hurts the president," according to Bennett's spokesman, Loye Miller.

Miller said Bennett told Reagan on Friday afternoon that it was essential that the nomination be withdrawn and that he was willing to give Ginsburg the message.

"Do what you think is right," Miller quoted Reagan as responding.

A senior White House official later confirmed the account and said it would be best if Ginsburg stepped aside because it was a "hopeless cause."

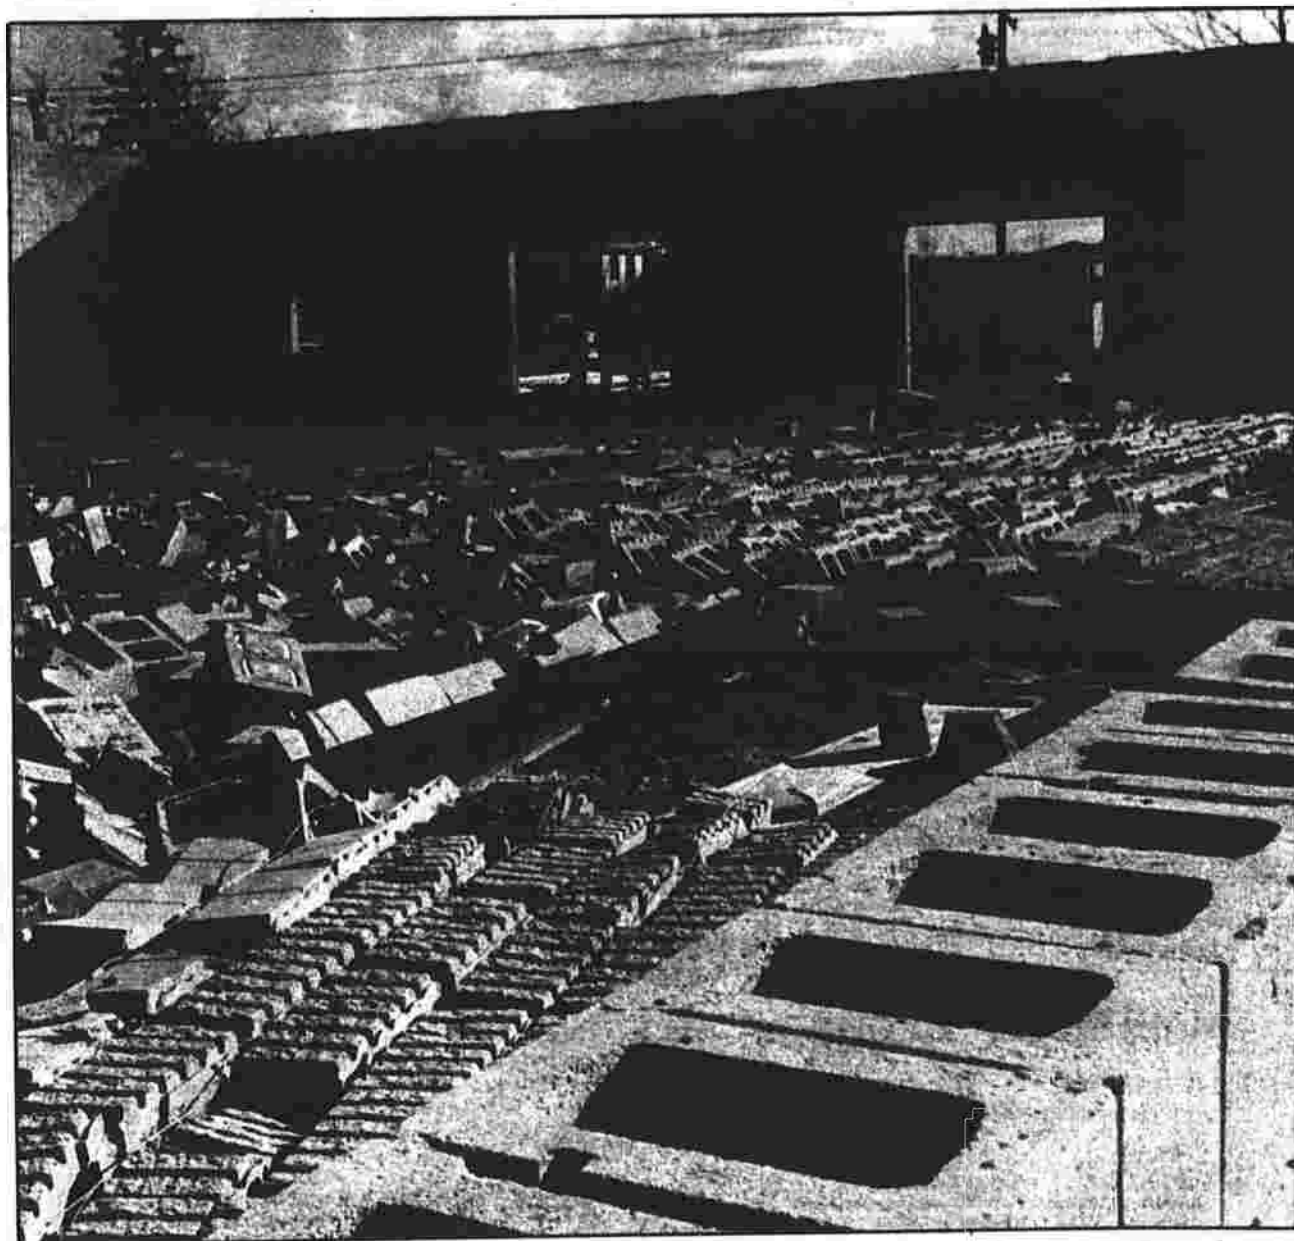

"I don't think any major conservative organization is going to be able to generate any grass-roots support for him. It would be best for him to step aside and let us get on with naming another nominee," the official said.

And while Ginsburg "was not persuaded" by Bennett's call, the official said, "something needs to happen in the next 72 hours."

Earlier Friday, Reagan rejected senators' suggestions that he withdraw the nomination and said Ginsburg's admission of drug use in the 1960s and 1970s didn't make him "an addict." Reagan said he was confident the nation would show compassion to a man who "erred in his youth."

According to Miller's account, Bennett called Ginsburg about 4 p.m., about an hour after speaking to Reagan, and told the judge that continuing to seek the seat was "not right." He said Ginsburg would be able to withdraw "gracefully" now but would not be able to do so later, Miller said. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "Bennett called the president this morning. I don't know what he said." "We don't discuss private phone calls and we won't in this case," Fitzwater said.

Ginsburg told to withdraw Supreme Court nomination

The department issued a statement late in the day saying the FBI in its background checks of Ginsburg for various government jobs apparently never asked him whether he had used drugs. Earlier, Reagan said Ginsburg's admission of drug use in the 1960s and 1970s didn't make him "an addict," and the president said he was confident the nation would show compassion to a man who "erred in his youth."

However, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said Ginsburg had told senators he had used the illegal drug as recently as 1979, while a Harvard Law School professor. And criticism from conservative senators mounted.

In addition, Democratic Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama said Ginsburg's admission raised questions of possible perjury if the nominee lied about drug use on previous government documents.

In response, Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said that "I have made a vigorous effort today to find out whether Douglas Ginsburg was ever asked about drug use, whether on employment forms related to government service or in interviews conducted by the FBI or other Justice Department and White House officials."

"I have been unable to find any evidence that any such questions were asked," Eastland said at a news conference.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who heads the Justice Department, was instrumental in bringing about Ginsburg's nomination and has defended him since his drug admission.

Reagan appeared to be paying little attention to the advice of some key senators that the nomination be reconsidered. Such suggestions came from Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and from several Republicans who had been expected to lead the charge for confirmation.

The president, asked whether the 41-year-old federal appellate judge could be confirmed, said, "If there's any justice in Washington, he can."

Ginsburg acknowledged on Thursday that he used marijuana once in the 1960s and several times in the 1970s, an admission that came after reporters sought his comment on drug use allegations.

Specter said on Friday, "Yesterday afternoon Judge Ginsburg met with members of the Judiciary Committee and sat down with me and the date given to me as the last date of use was 1979."

Byrd, D-W.Va., who voted with the majority in defeating previous nominee Robert H. Bork, said Ginsburg himself "should give very, very serious consideration" to withdrawing his name.

He pointed out the president and his wife, Nancy, are outspoken critics of drug use, and he said, "What concerns me is the image a Supreme Court justice presents to the young people of this country. It wasn't just a youthful indiscretion. He did it as a law professor."

On Capitol Hill, some of the Democrats who had opposed Bork jumped to Ginsburg's defense on the drug issue.

Distraught man takes over jet, holds ax on pilot for 3 1/2 hours

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An "emotionally distraught" man took control of an Air Canada jetliner at the airport Friday and held an ax to the pilot's head before giving up his siege 3 1/2 hours later, a spokesman said.

The man, identified as James Barrett Drake, 37, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., told investigators "he was being chased by the Mafia and wanted FBI protection," said FBI Special Agent Dick Held. "There's no indication that his statement is true."

Drake raced aboard the Boeing 767 at 12:15 p.m. PST, shortly after it arrived at San Francisco International Airport and the passengers had departed, officials said. He initially took the pilot, first officer and 10 flight attendants captive but later ordered everyone except the pilot, Capt. J. David Robertson, off the plane, said airport director Louis A. Turpen. During the siege, the man grabbed a fire ax in the cockpit and threatened to kill Robertson while making rambling demands to be flown to London or Dublin and to talk to the FBI, said airport spokesman Ron Wilson.

At about 3:45 p.m., Drake surrendered peacefully to FBI agents and police who had boarded the plane to negotiate for the Robertson's release. During the discussions, Drake had stood with both hands on the ax and held it poised over the captain's head.

Robertson was unharmed, Held said, but emotionally exhausted by the ordeal.

Barry Mawn, the agent in charge of the negotiations, said Drake probably would be charged with air piracy, and other charges would be considered.

"He was emotionally distraught," Mawn said of Drake. "Initially he was tense, but as the afternoon went on he became more congenial and less threatening until he finally gave up."

Paul Wing of Toronto, who had been waiting to board the plane when the hijack began, said he spoke briefly to Robertson as he walked from the plane at the end of the ordeal.

"I said, 'Good job, sir,' and he said, 'Thank you very much.' He looked a little gray," said Wing. In addition to the FBI, SWAT teams had been called to the site in case they had been needed to storm the plane.

"There's a man in the cockpit with a fire ax over the head of the pilot," Wilson had said.

"He has threatened the life of the pilot if he doesn't get the plane," said Wilson before the drama ended. "He seems to be somewhat unstable. That's all we can say, mentally unstable."

Turpen said the man had rushed aboard the plane, which was empty of passengers, and grabbed an ax in the cockpit.

High winds topple wall on Spencer Street

By Andrew J. Davis and Nancy Concelman Herald Reporters

No one was injured when most of the 106-foot-long, 16-foot-high wall of a Spencer Street building under construction was blown over by strong, gusty winds Friday.

No one was at the site at Spencer Street Plaza when the accident occurred at 11:32 a.m., said Alfred Roy, owner of Royelton Corp., the Hartford company constructing the building. The remaining three walls were left intact, he said. The National Weather Service reported wind gusts as high as 51 miles per hour in the Hartford area Friday.

"I couldn't believe it," Roy said. "But I'm glad no one got hurt. The hell with the wall." The building did not have any support beams in place. The company was scheduled to install steel framing next week, Roy said.

Workers spent part of Friday afternoon clearing debris and placing 2-by-4 support beams 20 feet apart along the remaining walls, said Peter Lindstone, project manager. He estimated it would be a month before the building could be repaired.

Mid-State Mason of West Hartford finished putting up the building blocks two months ago, said Sal Ganci Jr., general manager of the company. He said the time lapse between the completion of the first phase of building and putting in steel supports was due to the shortage of steel on the market.

"It's just a fluky thing," he said. "As far as I know, all the precautions were made. There's no one to put the blame on."

Chief Building Inspector Russell Davidson said an inspector went to the site after the incident, but Davidson had no report yet. He said he would not know if the town Building Department would take any action until the inspection was completed.

"Anything other than this wind, there wouldn't be a problem," Davidson said. The investigation will probably continue until the middle of next week, he said.

Police, fire and emergency vehicles arrived at the scene after the accident. Police stayed at the scene to warn onlookers to stay away from the building.

Royelton has already constructed three buildings at the plaza: Blimpie's sandwich shop, Dunkin' Donuts and California Concepts Sander Center. The building under construction is owned by Geal Inc. of Hartford. Roy said it has not been officially decided who will rent the building once it is completed.

Ede May LaPointe, secretary-treasurer for Royelton, said three stores will occupy the building.

Mary L. Flore, manager of Blimpie's, said she was talking to a customer when the wall collapsed. Her front window faces directly toward the collapsed west wall of the building.

"It all came down at once," she said. "It just fell. A lot of kids hang around that building. It's all that I thought of."

Flore added that her building shook as though she was in the middle of an earthquake.

"This whole building shook," she said. "I thought it was this building going down. I'll never go in there. Never."

Commission fires state liquor boss charged in bribe

By Judd Everhart The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The state Liquor Control Commission voted unanimously Friday to fire its executive director, Charles W. Kasmer, who was arrested this week on bribery charges.

The move outraged Kasmer's lawyer, Timothy C. Moynahan, who called the action "a conclusion that he's guilty."

The firing "undermines the presumption of innocence" of his client and said he would be meeting with Kasmer this weekend to discuss appealing the firing.

But Gov. William A. O'Neill said that "given the facts as presented, the commission's decision to dismiss is proper." He refused further comment.

Kasmer was arrested Thursday on one charge of bribe receiving and one charge of conspiracy to commit bribery. Officials allege that Kasmer accepted two bribes in 1988, one of $500 and one of $1,000, to arrange for liquor broker licenses. State authorities say the bribes were filmed on video tape at a Hartford restaurant. The described it as a sting operation.

He is free on $25,000 bond, pending a Nov. 19 court appearance, during which he is expected to enter a plea.

After a closed-door executive session, the three-member commission emerged, convened a public meeting and voted to fire Kasmer effective immediately. There was no indication of whether the commission considered suspending Kasmer with or without pay.

In a letter to Kasmer, the commission appeared to have made up its mind about his guilt.

"Specifically, we find that the acceptance by you of certain monies on July 7, 1988, and Aug. 6, 1988, at Valle's Steak House in Hartford to influence you in the discharge of your duties as executive director of this agency constitutes grounds for dismissal under state personnel regulations (barring public officials from) 'Engaging in any activity which is detrimental to the best interests of the agency or of the state,'" the letter stated.

The letter, signed by Commission Chairman John F. Healy and Commissioners David L. Snyder and Philip N. Costello Jr., also asks Kasmer to make an appointment with commission Assistant Director Bonnie Carey "to arrange to pick up your personal belongings."

Kasmer was arrested in his office Thursday morning and immediately taken away by state troopers. He was forced to leave his sports coat behind and, during arraignment in Hartford Superior Court, appeared only in shirt and tie.

His arrest was a byproduct of a federal bribery investigation that resulted in the arrest of 45 taxpayers — 10 in Connecticut and 35 in New York.

An 11-foot sturgeon weighing nearly half a ton is the center of attraction in Bellevue, Wash., Friday. The fish was found dead Thursday, floating in Seattle's Lake Washington, where tales have long persisted of a huge, duck-eating "monster."

'Monster' found dead in lake

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — An 11-foot sturgeon weighing nearly a half-ton has been found dead in Lake Washington, where tales have long persisted of a huge, duck-eating "monster."

Police found the fish floating at the north end of the lake on Thursday, said Officer Roger Heath of King County's marine patrol unit in suburban Kirkland.

Matt Kramer, who operates Underwater Specialists Inc., hauled the fish out of the lake with his 50-foot dive boat.

State fisheries officials determined it weighed close to 900 pounds and estimated it was born somewhere around the turn of the century, said state Department of Fisheries spokesman Tony Florio.

One of the largest freshwater fish in the world, sturgeon are suction feeders that scoop up snails and small fish. They can grow to more than 1,000 pounds and 20 feet but their mouths are not structured to eat ducks, officials said.

The state sturgeon specialist, Gail Kreitman, said she doubts if there are many more like it left in the lake.

Short-term spending bill approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Friday approved a short-term stopgap spending bill to keep the government running into December, while Congress and the Reagan administration try to work out their budget differences.

Included in the bill is $3.2 million in new non-lethal aid for Nicaragua's Contra rebels, which congressional backers said would ensure the rebels are supplied with food, medicine and clothing while a Central American peace process unfolds.

Without debate, the Senate approved the measure on a voice vote, a day after the House took similar action. The bill was sent to the White House, where President Reagan is expected to sign it.

The bill permits government programs to continue operating at fiscal 1987 spending levels from next Tuesday, when the current short-term spending bill expires, until Dec. 16.

Local News in Brief

Werkhoven to resign two posts

Republican Director-elect Theunis "Terry" Werkhoven has announced he will resign from the town's Building Committee and the chairmanship of the Southwest Property Owners' Association.

Werkhoven said Friday he was resigning from the two posts to avoid any conflict of interest with his new duties as director.

Werkhoven has been on the Building Committee for 20 years and chairman of the property owners' association for 15 years.

"My association with the members of the committee for 20 years has been most rewarding, and researching and reviewing plans with the architects has been a challenge," Werkhoven said.

Unemployment level drops

Dentist's office hit by fire

A fire broke out in the attic of a dentist's office on Spencer Street Friday, causing damage to the roof of the building and requiring the office to be closed for at least two weeks.

Deputy Fire Chief Robert Bycholski said that the fire department received a call at 2:28 p.m. that a fire had broken out at 162 Spencer St., a one-floor converted barn where Brian Bottaro, D.M.D. has his practice. Bycholski said firefighters arrived at the scene at 5:30 p.m. and had the fire under control within 20 minutes.

Bycholski said Bottaro was working on a patient when a smoke detector in the attic went off, and smoke began coming through the vents. Bottaro opened the door to the attic, and tried unsuccessfully to put out the fire with an extinguisher, Bycholski said. Bottaro, the patient, and two assistants evacuated the building.

The fire was confined to the attic. Bycholski said. It destroyed the heating system and all the electrical wiring in the attic. The fire also caused holes in the roof. Bycholski said.

Bycholski said the fire started in either the heating system itself, or in combustible materials near the system. He said Chief John Rivosa and Capt. Rudy Kissman are investigating.

Court denies Gerber appeal

A motion by Gerber Scientific Inc. to dismiss an appeal of a zone change on its Spencer Street property has been denied in Hartford Superior Court, the company's attorney said Friday.

Gerber attorney Edward F. Spinella sought in August to have the appeal dismissed on the grounds that the plaintiffs failed to deliver a copy of the appeal to the chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Spinella declined to comment on why the motion was dismissed.

In May, the Planning and Zoning Commission approved changing the zone on a 34-acre parcel from Rural Residential and Business II to Industrial. Gerber planned to build a 100,000-foot complex on the property.

The owners of the Town Line Liquor package store, located just north of the proposed complex, appealed that decision in June in Hartford Superior Court. The owners, Gary E. Herman of Manchester and Michael E. Herman of Bolton, charged that the PZC failed to take into account the effects of the zone change on the neighboring properties.

The Hermans rent the building in which Town Line Liquor is located from Leone Brothers Associates, the same company that owns the land on which Gerber wants to build the complex.

On Sept. 11, a Hartford law firm representing Homart filed a brief supporting the town's appeal. The brief stated that a referendum is required for approval of general obligation bonds, paid off by taxpayers' money, but a referendum does not apply to state guidelines for tax-increment bonds.

The Hermans' attorney, William A. Roberto, could not be reached for comment.

Gov. Ross Barnett, fought integration

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Former Gov. Ross Barnett, whose last-ditch stand for segregation made Mississippi a civil rights battlefield 25 years ago, died Friday, his son said.

The 89-year-old Barnett, catapulted into the national spotlight when he sought to bar a black man from entering the University of Mississippi under a federal court order, had been in declining health for a number of years.

His son, Ross Barnett Jr., said the elder Barnett died at 5:30 p.m. at Doctor's Hospital in Jackson.

"He just quit breathing," his son said. "He'd gone as far as he could go, I guess. He'd been pretty weak the past few months."

Barnett, who had promised "no school will be integrated while I am your governor," had returned to his private law practice after his 1960-64 term as governor, though he made an unsuccessful attempt to regain office in 1967.

His administration was marked by major industrialization achievements. Barnett was best remembered for his role in the Ole Miss riots that occurred on Sept. 30, 1962, when James Meredith sought to enroll at the Oxford campus.

After pressuring the Legislature to cloak him with legal authority usually exercised by the state College Board, Barnett set the stage for the last major confrontation over the issue of federal government supremacy when he denied Meredith admission to the university for the 1962-63 school year.

When Meredith and white federal marshals arrived at the College Board office in Jackson during one episode, Barnett deadpanned, "Which one of you is Meredith?" He confessed afterward that he had rehearsed the line before Meredith arrived.

Later, a rag-tag army of segregationists assembled just off the campus when a group of federal marshals escorted Meredith. They poured onto the campus when the Highway Patrol guard forces were withdrawn from the entrances, and in the subsequent rioting two people were killed and hundreds injured.

The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals cited Barnett for contempt of court for his part in the affair and he was assessed a penalty of $10,000 a day, plus jail. However, he never served the time or paid the fine, and the charges finally were dropped in 1965.

While in later years Barnett was reluctant to discuss the federal-state confrontation because he said he didn't "want to open up old wounds," he claimed, "Generally speaking, I'd do the same things again."

Barnett was barred by law from running for a second consecutive term in 1963. In 1967, he ran a poor fourth in the Democratic primary in a bid to regain the governorship.

His son said that funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Fire kills 5-year-old boy

NEW LONDON (AP) — A 5-year-old mentally retarded boy was killed Friday when fire swept through a two-story home in New London, authorities said.

Jonathan Gnant was pulled from the fire by his father, but was unable to survive the 2:12 a.m. blaze, said fire department Battalion Chief Edward L. Hallisey.

The father, Martin Gnant, also pulled his 2-year-old daughter from the blaze. Both were treated for smoke inhalation.

The family's mother was at work and returned home as Martin Gnant was pounding on neighbors' doors seeking help, Hallisey said.

The fire was thought to have started in a refrigerator motor, Hallisey said. The home had a smoke detector, but its battery appeared to be disconnected, Hallisey said.

Whopper of a shell on historic register

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Don Watson is a shell collector of sorts. He only has one, but it's a whopper. It's 20-feet tall.

Watson, a machinist for R.J. Reynolds, owns a bright yellow, shell-shaped building that once housed a Shell Oil Co. service station. In the early 1930s, hundreds of such shell-shaped buildings were built all over the country as promotional novelties, but few survive today.

Because of its age, distinctive shape and rarity, Watson's Winston-Salem shell has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

State legislators told they should watch the bucks

HARTFORD (AP) — Legislators from around the country were cautioned Friday that they need to do a better job of planning for the $30 billion they spend every year for such things as roads, prisons, colleges and other infrastructure projects.

"We have to learn not to just rely on a pork-barrel approach," Nancy Kopp, a member of the Maryland House of Delegates, said at the annual meeting of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

She urged legislators to exercise more control over capital spending, rather than going along with whatever the executive branch of government wants. Legislatures, she said, should have "at least as strong ... a hand as the executive branch."

Connecticut House Speaker Irving J. Stolberg, D-New Haven, who is president of the NCSL, said the capital budget is often the "underbelly" of state budgeting, used to pay for projects that might not survive the traditional budget process of hearings and votes.

Connecticut pays for most capital projects by borrowing money through the sale of bonds.

Texas state Rep. Wilhelmina Delco said her state has traditionally operated on a pay-as-you-go basis, but that bonding is likely to be used more, now that Texas voters have approved it in a recent referendum. The standing Texas approach to new projects, she said, has been "if you don't have the dollars, you don't do it."

Also at Friday's session, Gov. William A. O'Neill told the convention of Connecticut's strong economy and how the state had gone from being part of the route between New York and Boston to a state that puts a major emphasis on promoting itself.

"Now tourism is a multibillion-dollar industry," O'Neill said.

More than 500 legislators were attending the three-day conference, which opened Thursday in Connecticut's capital.

Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire was to address the conference Saturday on state and city relations.

Lawmakers were given a tour of the Mystic Seaport and the U.S. Submarine Base in Groton Friday.

Saturday's agenda includes discussions on ethics for lobbyists, sales taxes on services and new car lemon laws.

Condo village may raise its own flag

STRATFORD (AP) — Residents of a large condominium village, disturbed by what they view as mistreatment by Stratford officials, say they're so riled they may try to secede from the town.

"Of everything we've asked for from the town, we've never gotten a thing," said John Thompson, president of the Oronoque Village Condominium Association.

"We may file a letter to secede from the town of Stratford," he said Thursday. "We've seriously discussed it in committee. We've been advised by several big state attorneys that it can be done. We're in a perfect position to have it done."

Oronoque Village is a 939-unit condominium complex built in 1970 in the town's North End. It allows no permanent residents under age 16. Heads of households must be over age 35.

The villagers maintain their own streets, which are private, and pay taxes to the town and the Oronoque Village Tax District.

Name sub after us, rep says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Sam Gejdenson says his home state of Connecticut, where the giant Trident nuclear submarines are built, is not getting the recognition it deserves.

Tridents traditionally are named after states. There is an Ohio, Michigan, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Alaska, Nevada, Tennessee and Pennsylvania, but no USS Connecticut.

"Connecticut residents are tremendously proud of their role in the Trident submarine program," Gejdenson said Friday in a letter to Navy Secretary James Webb.

"The naming of a Trident after our state will recognize Connecticut's unique contribution to our nation's entire submarine force."

The submarines, each 18,750 tons and nearly as long as two football fields, are built exclusively by the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamic Corp. The main shipyard is in Groton, Conn., with another major facility just north at Quonset Point, R.I.

Gejdenson said the work of "our friends and relatives" has "paid off with the development of a nuclear ballistic missile submarine that is truly the envy of the free world."

Navy Lt. Ken Ross said the decision of naming Tridents and other Navy ships is the responsibility of the Navy secretary.

"It's a personal decision what he wants to do," Ross said.

There are four unnamed Tridents that are under construction. They can be named at any time, Ross said. Ten Tridents have been named, nine for various states and one for the late Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson, D-Wash.

Ross said various politicians, state groups and citizens lobby for names of Tridents and other Navy vessels.

Politics plays a dominant role in the naming of Navy ships. Many Trident names were derived from the home states of high-ranking officials involved in the Trident program.

Tennessee, the name of a Trident christened in December, is the home state of Adm. Frank B. Kelso II, commander in chief of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet, and his wife, who was sponsor of the submarine.

Joly judged unable to stand trial

HARTFORD — A 29-year-old man whose murder conviction was overturned has been judged incompetent to stand trial again in the bludgeoning death of the Bristol teen-ager.

Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Corrigan issued the ruling Thursday in the case of Michael Joly, who was convicted in 1984 of the murder of Diane Mattei, 15, three years earlier.

The girl's body was found in a wooded area of Bristol. An autopsy report said she died from blows to the head and neck from a blunt, heavy object.

Joly's conviction was overturned because of jury misconduct. A second trial ended in a mistrial in December 1986.

Joly has been held in the Hartford Community Correctional Center for six years. Corrigan ordered that Joly be taken to the Whiting Forensic Institute for the criminally insane in Middletown. He is expected to be re-examined in 18 months.

New London recount is uneventful

NEW LONDON — Some numbers changed but the final outcome in all races remained the same after officials spent all day Friday recounting ballots cast in Tuesday's election for members of New London's City Council, Board of Education and Board of Selectman.

Master Moderator Dominic S. Piacenza ordered the recount after reports of discrepancies in final vote tallies. In all, about a dozen discrepancies — ranging from one candidate missing 72 votes and another who got 16 more than cast — were discovered. Other errors included numbers being transposed from the voting machine to the tally sheet and errors in addition.

"It was simply a case of human error," City Clerk Clark van Der Lyke said Friday. "So much pressure is put on people the night of the election to declare the winners that sometimes speed is more important than accuracy."

Ex-state official pays ethics fine

HARTFORD — A former vice chairman of Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority has paid a $200 fine for failing to disclose his interest in a landfill company.

Milton Levine of Bloomfield paid the state Ethics Commission fine Thursday, according to commission attorney Brenda Farrell.

Commission members imposed the fine after determining Levine violated the state ethics code by failing in 1983 and 1984 to include his landfill interest on a disclosure form he was required to file.

The commission said Levine used poor judgment by failing to disclose his 20 percent interest in Blue Hills Landfill Inc.

Good news for Middletown callers

NEW BRITAIN — Middletown residents will soon be able to call Hartford toll free under a decision by state utility regulators.

More than 54 percent of 17,514 telephone subscribers voted last summer in favor of the toll-free calling, the state Department of Public Utility Control said in a decision dated Tuesday.

It could be up to two years before the additional switching equipment is installed and other engineering work completed. Southern New England Telephone Co. must report to state regulators in six months on progress of the project.

Lawmakers get tough on dogs

HARTFORD — Two Democratic state senators said Friday they would introduce a bill next year aimed at protecting the public from vicious dogs.

Sens. Cornelius P. O'Leary, D-Windsor Locks, and Anthony V. Avallone, D-New Haven, said they were studying a Rhode Island law that allows a dog to be declared vicious and then set restrictions for owners of such animals.

Among other things, the owner must carry a $100,000 insurance policy and keep the dog in a six-foot-high enclosure, under Rhode Island law.

"With new and disturbing reports being made of brutal attacks by dogs willing to fight to the death, we feel it is important that Connecticut improve its laws dealing with these animals," said O'Leary, the Senate majority leader.

"We do not believe it is enough to simply put on the books laws that penalize vicious-dog owners after their dogs have injured someone," added Avallone.

Stamford-area doctor is facing charges after abortion death

HARTFORD (AP) — A Stamford-area doctor has been charged by Connecticut authorities with improperly performing an abortion that resulted in a woman's death, a state official said Friday.

Dr. Hanan Rotem of Larchmont, N.Y., is scheduled to appear Nov. 17 before the Medical Examining Board for charges related to an abortion he performed in his Stamford office on April 29, 1985, said David Pavis, head of the Division of Medical Quality Assurance in the state Department of Health Services.

The patient, a woman in her early 20s, died the same day from complications, officials said.

Rotem said Thursday that the charges are "preposterous." He said the woman's death was caused by a medical condition related to her pregnancy, not the dilation-and-curettage abortion.

According to the charges filed by the state, Rotem failed to administer ultrasound prior to the procedure to determine the age of the fetus, and the fetus was too large for the safe administration of the type of abortion used.

In a dilation-and-curettage abortion, the cervix, or opening to a woman's uterus, is expanded and the fetus is removed through suction or a scraping process. In the abortion performed by Rotem, the fetus was removed through scraping, Pavis said.

The woman's uterus was perforated and Rotem failed to properly control her bleeding, according to the state's charges.

Pavis said the woman died later in the day in St. Joseph's Hospital in Stamford after amniotic fluid from her uterus leaked into her bloodstream and traveled to her brain and lungs.

The state said Rotem didn't have privileges at any hospital at the time and his office was not equipped to handle a medical emergency.

Rotem said the woman told him

she was 16 weeks pregnant, although doctors at the hospital determined that the uterus was 18 weeks to 19 weeks old, Pavis said.

He said that generally abortions of fetuses more than four months old are not performed by dilation-and-curettage and are done in hospitals.

Pavis said New York state medical licensing officials have been notified of the charges against Rotem.

If the examining board finds that the charges against Rotem are accurate, it "can do anything from dismissing the case to revoking his license to anything in between," Pavis said.

Pavis said police investigated the case last year and found no reason to bring criminal charges against Rotem.

He added that "there aren't very many deaths due to abortion" in Connecticut.

State told to build horse complex

HARTFORD (AP) — The state of Connecticut is being encouraged to get into the horse business by construction of an elite horse show complex that would cost taxpayers between $20 million to $24 million.

Garnet Development Group Inc., a consulting firm in Cheshire, has determined in a draft report that the such an operation is economically feasible and would turn a profit.

Connecticut has more horses per square mile than any other state — 60,000 over 5,000 square miles.

Multipurpose, state-funded equestrian centers are reported to be flourishing in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, California, Oklahoma and Kentucky.

"No one is in favor of it yet" said Gabe Moquin, executive assistant to Agriculture Commissioner Kenneth Andersen. "This is something promoted by the Connecticut Horse Council dating way back to the seventies."

A final version of the report, which cost $48,000, is not expected until early December, Moquin said Friday. The study was sponsored by the state agriculture, environmental protection and economic development departments.

The Garnet Group said its proposed complex would make money in its first year of operation and predicted that profits would exceed $700,000 by the fifth year.

It also pointed out that the state would realize a boost in tax revenues and the economy would benefit from spending by the class of citizens attracted to horse shows and other elaborate equestrian vents. This spending was estimated at more than $1 million the first year and $2.5 million by the fifth year.

The report did not address the question of a locale for the complex, but said that should be the next step. A similar study commissioned five years ago found that Newtown, Granby, Woodstock, East Haddam, Storrs and Killingly should be considered as sites.

Support from the governor and state Bonding Commission is needed before a formal presentation can be made to the legislature, probably by next spring.

Nicaraguan cleric agrees to be go-between MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo agreed Friday to a request by President Daniel Ortega that he serve as go-between in the effort to arrange a truce between the Sandinista government and rebels known as Contras.

Ortega visited the Roman Catholic archbishop of Managua in the cardinal's office for 45 minutes.

Afterward, Obando y Bravo told reporters gathered outside: "I have accepted the proposal."

The president said: "The cardinal considers this positive and we are going to continue discussions with him to make it more concrete in coming days."

Most observers had doubted Obando y

Bravo, head of the church in Nicaragua, would be acceptable to the Sandinistas as an intermediary. He leads the National Reconciliation Commission formed under the Central American peace plan, but also is a frequent critic of the leftist government.

Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, a director of the rebels' U.S.-supported Nicaraguan Resistance umbrella group, said Thursday night in San Jose, Costa Rica, that it would be "very difficult for us to accept anyone but Cardinal Obando y Bravo."

In another development, the Defense Ministry said Sandinista soldiers would return to combat Saturday in four areas where a unilateral cease-fire has expired, and expect to face a rested, better equipped rebel force.

"The time was used to strengthen the Contras by resupplying them," the ministry spokeswoman, Maj. Rosa Pasos, said in an interview. "We know the Contras are going to try to put their forces into a northern operation, but we're not afraid."

Ortega's government has said it expects the Contras to attack to show the U.S. Congress they are a viable fighting force. The Reagan administration is asking Congress for $270 million in new aid for the rebels.

The government declared a one-month cease-fire in four war zones, pulling its troops out, as part of its compliance with the peace plan.

Ortega said Thursday night that, because the Contras failed to put down their arms, the army would go after them "tooth and nail." He said the rebels could seek amnesty or "prepare to die, to fight or to run to their bases in Honduras."

He also said his government, in a reversal, is willing to hold indirect cease-fire talks with the Contras "to strip all pretext from our enemies and unmask those who say they are for peace and don't really want it."

Also on Thursday, Ortega gave the legislature proposals for an amnesty and for an end to a state of emergency in effect almost continuously since 1982.

'Red flag alert' called in South as fires continue

ATLANTA (AP) — Blazes in the mountains of Kentucky on Friday could be smelled 300 miles away in South Carolina as thousands of fires kept burning in 13 Southern states with no rain in sight before Monday.

Foresters blamed a combination of dry weather, brisk wind, falling leaves and arsonists.

South Carolina posted its first-ever "red flag alert" for 16 counties, meaning the area was ripe for wildfires. Officials there logged more than 115 wildfires in the first week of November.

Three states — Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia — and 24 counties in western North Carolina banned outdoor burning. Alabama was considering a ban.

From Texas to Virginia, more than 121,000 acres of land — 190 square miles, an area more than three times the size of Miami — has burned in 8,018 fires in 11 days, according to the U.S. Forest Service.

That didn't include West Virginia, which is just outside the Forest Service's 13-state Southern Region. Damage there would bring the total to at least 249,000 acres.

Seven homes have been damaged by fire this week in West Virginia, and fire ignited a CSX Corp. railroad tunnel. Firefighters sealed the tunnel Friday and pumped foam inside to smother the blaze.

The regional toll includes fires from Oct. 27 through Thursday night. State-by-state figures were still being tallied for late Thursday, but included at least:

Alabama, 342 fires, 2,125 acres; Arkansas, 232 fires, 3,442 acres; Florida, 272 fires, 2,078 acres; Georgia, 239 fires, 1,062 acres; Kentucky, 620 fires, 28,304 acres; Louisiana, 3,037 fires, 32,338 acres; Mississippi, 997 fires, 14,416 acres; North Carolina, 310 fires, 555 acres; Oklahoma, 11 fires, 177 acres; South Carolina, 188 fires, 666 acres; Tennessee, 588 fires, 12,891 acres; Texas, 81 fires, 595 acres; Virginia, 457 fires, 2,662 acres.

No immediate relief was in sight; chances for rain Saturday were called dim by the Forest Service. Rain was possible Monday for most Southern states.

"This wind's killing us. We're in a nightmare," said forester Allen Waldron in MacArthur, W. Va. At least 10 fires in his eight-county district went untended Friday morning because there was no one to fight them, Waldron said.

People in Charleston, S.C., smelled the smoke from fires 260 miles away in the mountains of Tennessee and 320 miles away in Kentucky, said said Jennie Morris, spokeswoman for the state Forestry Commission.

Coy Mullins, a forester with the West Virginia Agriculture Department, blamed some of his state's fires on squirrel hunters who set trees afire in an effort to flush out their prey.

Charlie Crail of the U.S. Forest Service in Kentucky blamed "99 out of 100" of his state's fires on arsonists. To help fight them, 450 firefighters from 17 Western states have been flown in, and 220 National Guard troops have been mobilized.

Firefighters also were worried about "breakovers" — which happen when winds blow dried leaves across fire lines, restarting dormant fires or starting new ones.

Alabama's fire alert was expanded to cover the northern half of the state.

Teen says solo voyage around globe worth it

NEW YORK (AP) — Tania Aebi, who says she embarked 2½ years ago as an aimless 18-year-old in "pure ignorance," completed her solo round-the-world sail Friday as an "an accomplished person," her father said.

The poised, smiling Miss Aebi, now 21, docked at the South Street Seaport Museum at 12:40 p.m. after being towed by a Coast Guard power boat from Sandy Hook, N.J. She had sailed her 26-foot sloop, the Varuna, into Sandy Hook on Thursday, the real finish of her 27,000-mile circumnavigation. But with a broken engine and the wind against her, it was decided to use a tow to bring her to the seaport, her starting point on May 28, 1985.

Later, amid popping champagne corks and a full-scale press conference, Miss Aebi said, "I'm happy to be home. It means I'm alive."

Cruising World magazine said she was the first American woman to sail around the world alone, and a telegram from President Reagan congratulated her for having "in a way few people have, conquered the beauty, the majesty and the danger of the sea."

Her plans now are to write a book about the voyage and do some more sailing, but not another solo voyage.

"I wouldn't do it again, not by myself," said Miss Aebi, whose name is pronounced "abbey."

A traditional harbor welcome for a hero was laid on — a fireboat with four nozzles spraying preceded the Varuna and boat horns blared as her vessel, with sails furled, landed between the museum's two 19th-century cargo sailing ships.

Miss Aebi, in a yellow slicker and white wool cap, embraced her boyfriend, whom she met at one of her Pacific Ocean stops, then was reunited on the dock with her father, Ernst, a Swiss-born artist, and two sisters and a brother.

Her mother, Sabine, died of cancer midway through the voyage and Miss Aebi flew back to her home in New York for a week.

Iranians attack oil tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian commandos shot up a U.S.-managed tanker from a speedboat Friday, and Iraq said its warplanes bombed a petrochemical plant the Japanese are building on Iran's Persian Gulf coast.

The 103,584-ton Grand Wisdom anchored off Dubai in the southern gulf with five rocket-grenade holes in its hull from the first attack on neutral shipping in nearly two weeks. The tanker is registered in Panama.

No casualties were reported in the pre-dawn assault and the crew quickly extinguished a small fire, marine salvage executives said.

They said the raid was the first by an Iranian speedboat since Oct. 24 and appeared to be retaliation for an Iraqi air raid on an Iranian tanker Wednesday. The gulf neighbors have been at war since September 1980.

The attack took place about 25 miles from where the U.S. Navy frigate Carr fired on a United Arab Emirates fishing boat Sunday, killing an Indian seaman. The Carr's officers apparently believed the boat was an Iranian craft preparing to attack a refueling tanker the Carr was escorting.

Shipping sources, all of whom spoke on condition of anonymity, said no American warships were in the area when Grand Wisdom was hit. They said the tanker is managed by the Teekay Shipping Company of Long Beach, Calif. and was sailing down the gulf with a load of Kuwaiti crude oil.

U.S. warships escort only U.S.-flagged ships, which include 11 Kuwaiti tankers that have been registered in the United States so the Navy can protect them.

Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq, its neighbor at the head of the gulf, and last year began attacking ships owned by or serving the sheikhdom. Iran fired three missiles into Kuwait's oil terminal anchorage complex last month, hitting two tankers and a major loading dock.

American officials say the "rules of engagement" allow U.S. warships to offer humanitarian aid to other ships that request it, but not to intervene in an attack on a vessel that does not fly the Stars and Stripes.

U.S./World In Brief

Mexico, U.S. sign trade pact

MEXICO CITY — The United States and Mexico on Friday signed a trade agreement that sets up a new mechanism for resolving trade spats between the neighbors and calls for fresh discussions of more thorny issues.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter and Mexican Commerce Secretary Hector Hernandez signed the document in front of a group of prominent U.S. and Mexican officials and business executives.

"The document," said Hernandez, "satisfies the interests of the United States as well as Mexico." "We want to point out that for us ... it establishes extremely important steps for arranging the commercial, investment and intellectual property relationship between the two countries," he said.

Also on Thursday, Ortega gave the legislature proposals for an amnesty and for an end to a state of emergency in effect almost continuously since 1982.

South Korean students fight police

SEOUL, South Korea — Hundreds of students shouting "Fair elections!" battled police at three universities Friday, and a dozen people shaved their heads to protest opposition failure to agree on one presidential candidate.

Police fired tear gas at Seoul National University to disperse 1,000 students hurling firebombs and rocks. The violence broke out after a rally to demand formation of a neutral interim government to ensure the honesty of presidential elections, expected in mid-December.

The government has rejected the demand. About 500 students clashed with police at Yonsei University after police seized six students collecting signatures to back the demand for an interim government. Students threw gasoline bombs at a police bus, setting it aflame.

Arms merchant wins legal point

WASHINGTON — Arms merchant Albert Hakim won a legal point in an Iran-Contra case Friday when a federal appeals court including Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg slapped at independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's tactics.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals unanimously refused to enforce a contempt order against Hakim for not giving prosecutors records of eight foreign companies involved in the Iran-Contra affair.

The appeals judges also criticized Walsh for using congressional testimony obtained through limited immunity grants to document the claim that Hakim controlled the records.

U.S. to arm Chad with missiles

WASHINGTON — The United States will arm Chad with Stinger anti-aircraft missiles and has sent a military training team to the African country to boost its defenses against what the State Department says is the threat of Libyan attack.

The decision was taken two months ago, but not announced until Friday by the department's spokesman, Charles E. Redman. "It is obvious the reason we do this," he said, "these are defensive weapons systems, they are air defense systems, and Chad is subject to continuing overflights by Libyan aircraft."

The shoulder-fired missiles are relatively easy to handle, and sometimes are described by weapons experts as "a terrorist's dream." Congressional concern that they could be used by guerrillas against Israel forced the Reagan administration last month to remove Stingers from a proposed arms package for Saudi Arabia.

GOP offers $30 billion cut plan

WASHINGTON — Congressional Republicans proposed on Friday a $30 billion deficit-reduction compromise with more taxes than President Reagan wants and more domestic spending cuts than Democrats support.

The offer was made to the Democrats after a White House meeting at which Senate Republicans urged Reagan, apparently unsuccessfully, to reconsider his opposition to cutbacks in Social Security benefits.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., presented the new plan as the second week of budget talks was coming to a close. He said the reaction was "better than I thought" it would be.

Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, one of the Democratic negotiators, called the plan "a constructive step forward" but said he thought it needed more taxes.

Bullets spray Haiti party offices

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Attackers sprayed two party headquarters and a presidential candidate's home with bullets early Friday, the fourth day of violence that appears designed to stop elections scheduled for Nov. 29.

Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, president of the military-dominated ruling junta, promoted himself on Friday from army chief of staff to commander in chief of the armed forces. The junta has governed since dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country Feb. 7, 1986.

"Nobody knows what it means," a U.S. Embassy official said of Namphy's change in title. "We have no reason to believe he has changed his announced intention to be out of the palace one hour after Feb. 7, 1986, or his allegiance to the constitution."

A new president is to assume power on that date, exactly two years after three decades of family dictatorship ended with Duvalier's flight to France.

Gunfire riddled the headquarters of centrist presidential candidates Marc Bazin and Leslie Manigat early Friday and shots were fired at the home of Gregoire Eugene, another centrist candidate. Eugene's watchman was wounded in the knee and Eugene's car was damaged.

Bazin, Manigat and Eugene publicly endorsed the nine-member independent Electoral Council's disqualification of 12 presidential candidates this week because of their close ties to Jean-Claude Duvalier or his father Francois, known as "Papa Doc."

Clovis Desnor, the most prominent, denied he was involved in shooting and arson attacks on the council and its members. When asked Thursday whether his recent statements had encouraged supporters commit such actions, he said: "No! We are not assassins."

Among other things, Desnor has said "the people will do their duty" if his candidacy is rejected.

Mirlande Manigat, who is Manigat's wife and a Senate candidate, said Friday: "Those who commit these attacks possess very modern and powerful weapons. Democrats are not armed. In this country we can only count on our democratic conviction and the support of the people."

She refused to blame the Duvalierist candidates directly, but declared: "That is the sector that has the most interest in committing these crimes and attempting to prevent the holding of free elections."

Rebels threaten Yanks in Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist rebels made a formal threat Friday to kill Americans as the price of continued U.S. involvement in the Philippines, but did not mention the murders last week of three Americans and a Filipino.

No group has taken responsibility for the slayings Oct. 28 near the U.S.-operated Clark Air Base.

A statement by delivered to Democratic Front delivered to news agencies accused the United States of encouraging a brutal counterinsurgency campaign and declared Americans "targets for attack."

Rebels say hundreds of anti-communist vigilante groups, sanctioned by the government, have been formed in rural areas at the instigation of the CIA.

The Front represents the communist New People's Army, which began its rebellion against President Ferdinand E. Marcos in 1969 and continued fighting after he fled in February 1986 and President Corason Aquino took over.

Rebels made similar threats against Americans in recent interviews with local and foreign reporters, but Friday's declaration was the first issued on the Front's letterhead. It was signed by Satur Ocampo, a rebel delegate to peace talks with the government that collapsed last January.

"The National Democratic Front warns the United States government to stop meddling in the internal affairs of the Filipino people or pay a high price for its political-military intervention in terms of American lives and property," the statement said.

"The revolutionary forces assert the right to defend themselves and the Filipino people against U.S. military and civilian officials and personnel involved in carrying out the 'total war,' whether as advisers, intelligence operatives, action agents or in any other function, are therefore targets for attack."

After the crash there's calm but brokers cautious

NEW YORK (AP) — As the financial spotlight swung away from the U.S. stock market in recent days to currency markets around the world, many Wall Streeters were happy to see it go.

The relative calm that prevailed in stock trading for most of the past week provided a respite from the waves of selling that swept through the market last month.

At the same time, however, many market participants were leery of relaxing too much, or letting down their guards. The October crash raised a bewildering array of questions that haven't been answered yet.

"A sailor in a storm knows the alarming sensation of losing one's bearings," observed Robert S. Salomon Jr. in a commentary for Salomon Brothers Inc.

"Stockholders are in the same predicament: Stock prices, investor sentiment and the views of many market prognosticators have undergone radical changes in a short period."

One view of the recent stability of stock prices holds that the market has finished playing its role for the moment in a world financial drama that continues to unfold.

Having sounded a warning, the market is now presumed to be waiting for the full response of world financial leaders to trade and debt imbalances and the threat of recession.

Another interpretation says that investors scared themselves so thoroughly in the selling frenzy that they simply didn't know what to do next.

Tentative hopes seem to have increased lately among market analysts and economists that a severe recession can be avoided.

"We do not inevitably have — at least not yet — a classic cyclical bear market and a recession," maintains Jeffrey Applegate, chief investment strategist at E.F. Hutton & Co.

Investors now, he said, are "awaiting action on lower interest rates and fiscal readjustment from policymakers in Washington, Tokyo and Bonn so that the global economic expansion can proceed — and global bull markets can recommence."

"We anticipate that those actions will be forthcoming. But if they were easy in coming, they already would have happened."

The market's still-edgy state was evident in the performance over the past week of the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which dropped 34.48 points to 1,959.05.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .76 to 149.04; the American Stock Exchange market value index fell 5.13 to 233.23, while the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 3.10 to 326.40.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 212.13 million shares a day, down from 281.99 million the week before. One source of optimism on the economic outlook is abundant evidence that output, employment and other key forces were in strong shape when the financial crisis hit.

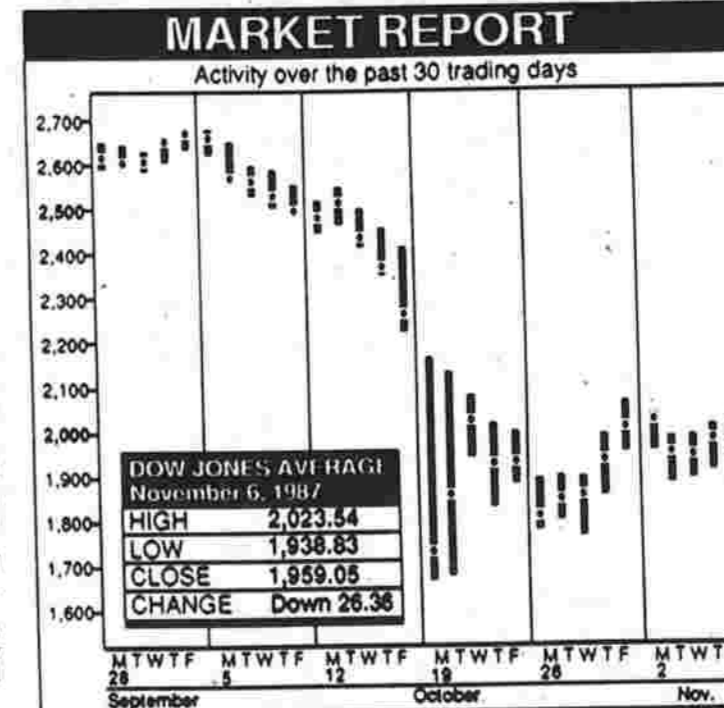

"We've learned not to underestimate the resiliency of our economy," said Edward Yardeni, economist at Prudential-Bache Securities. "Obviously, if stock prices continue to crash the way we'd become more concerned about an imminent recession."

"But we don't believe the economy's fundamentals justify another crash."

Analysts also note that the typical modern recession has begun with the Federal Reserve tightening credit and interest rates rising under the pressure of mounting business activity.

Today the circumstances are much different. Thanks in large part to the stock-market crash itself, interest rates have fallen sharply of late, and the Fed has been openly pursuing a policy of pumping money into the system.

Some skeptics argue that the drop in interest rates is merely a response to recessionary forces that may already have been set in motion — including a drop in consumer confidence in the wake of the stock-market collapse.

Markets are awash in contrary signals

NEW YORK (AP) — Contrary signals buffeted financial markets Friday, creating fresh uncertainty that nudged the dollar to record lows, blunted stock rallies abroad and yanked the Dow Jones average down more than 26 points.

As Wall Street wrapped up the third week of business since the Oct. 19 crash, analysts agreed that the stock market remains vulnerable to more turmoil, even if it shows some signs of stabilizing.

"People are queasy at the present time," said Peter J. DePuzzo, manager of the retail equity group at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. "It's an uneasy market and one that takes time to settle in."

The Dow Jones average, the nation's best-known stock barometer measuring the value of 30 blue-chip stocks, dropped 26.36 points to close at 1,959.05, leaving it with a net weekly loss of 34.48.

Most broader market indexes also fell, though the number of gaining and losing issues traded were even on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 228.29 million shares.

The value of all U.S. stocks fell by $24.99 billion, according to the Wilshire Associates 5,000 Equity Index.

Most of the loss in the Dow average came in the last half hour of trading after the NYSE announced it would relax restrictions next week on computer-assisted program trading, a controversial technique that involves the simultaneous buying and selling of stocks and stock index futures.

Program trading has been accused of causing wild swings in stock prices and was a possible culprit in the market collapse that erased a record 508 points from the Dow average and $500 billion from the value of U.S. stocks Oct. 19.

Some traders said the NYSE's announcement unnerved investors who had come back into the market, persuading them to dump stocks in a late selloff.

"When the news came out that one of the catalysts to the crash would be coming back in force, the memory of Oct. 19 came back very quickly," said Jonathan Groveman, head of equity trading at the New York investment firm of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co.

The NYSE also said it would keep abbreviated trading hours through Wednesday, closing at 3:39 p.m. instead of the customary 4 p.m. The country's biggest stock exchange has been operating on a curtailed schedule since the collapse.

The tumbling dollar also alarmed some Wall Street investors and may have contributed to the late selloff, analysts said. By contrast, Wall Street had greeted the weaker dollar with a rally Thursday, choosing to focus instead on the Reagan administration's commitment to lower interest rates.

"These people assumed that overbidding the declining dollar will do is positive, totally ignoring the inflationary aspects," said Alfred Goldman, a market analyst at the St. Louis investment brokerage A.G. Edwards & Son Inc. "The bullishness was oozing out of everybody's pores. That's what makes me nervous."

In foreign exchange markets, the dollar hit new lows against the Japanese yen and West German mark, the two most important foreign currencies.

Earlier Friday, the dollar's erosion blunted rallies on foreign stock markets, notably in Tokyo, where the key Nikkei 225-stock average shot sharply higher but fell back in late trading, closing at 22,795.02, up 165.37.

Economy OK when the ax fell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment edged up to 6 percent in October but payrolls surged by 550,000 jobs, indicating the economy was robust when the stock market plunged, the government said Friday.

While the 0.1 percent increase in the jobless rate was its first move up in 13 months, 415,000 more Americans were working in October than in September when the rate fell to 5.9 percent for the first time since 1979, the Labor Department said.

Payroll growth in October, a four-year record, was more than twice the average monthly gain over the past year. The unemployment rate climbed only because of a jump of a half-million people, triple the normal monthly increase, in the labor force, those either holding jobs or looking for them.

"The resurgence in the American economy means that as employment prospects brighten, more people are lured into the labor force," said Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "The increase in the unemployment rate should not be interpreted as a negative development."

The percentage of all Americans — including children but excluding institutionalized people such as prison inmates — holding jobs continues to reach new highs almost every month. It climbed to a record 62.1 percent in October, up nearly a full percentage point from a year ago.

All October figures are based on surveys of households and business payrolls taken the week before the record 508-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial stocks index Oct. 19.

Even so, both government and private economists used such terms as "strong," "extraordinarily strong" and "impressive" to describe the first fourth-quarter indicator of the economy's basic health.

"The economy had a tremendous amount of momentum going into the stock market crash and didn't flinch in the face of it," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "Consumer spending is driving the economy. The key to that is jobs, not stock prices. And the job market is very, very strong."

Of the 550,000 new payroll jobs in October, 65,000 were on manufacturers' assembly lines, raising to 220,000 the growth in factory employment since June.

Labor Statistics Commissioner Janet L. Norwood said payroll employment rose last month in more than 60 percent of the nation's goods-producing industries, a sector left largely behind for most of the latest economic recovery.

Business and hospital services provided 150,000 of the new jobs and retail trade added another 70,000.

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

- The dollar continued to plunge to record lows against other currencies while stock prices were more stable.

- Factory orders increased 1.1 percent during September, while construction spending jumped 1.5 percent, the government said.
- The Treasury sold $23.79 billion in three-year notes, 10-year notes and 30-year bonds in its quarterly refinancing auction.

- The Texas Supreme Court affirmed Pennzoil Co.'s $10.3 billion judgment against Texaco Inc.
- Henley Group Inc. offered to buy Santa Fe Southern Pacific Co. for $63 a share, or about $2.94 billion, but Olympia & York Developments Ltd. indicated it may match or surpass that bid.

Borrowing is up on cars, cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans, borrowing heavily to purchase new cars, took out $6.06 billion in credit in September for the biggest increase in a year, the government said Friday.

The Federal Reserve said consumer debt rose at an annual rate of 12.2 percent in September and was the largest advance since a $7.6 billion rise in credit in September 1986. Both months were heavily influenced by car sales spurred by dealer incentive programs. Consumer credit rose $5 billion in August.

Automobile loans climbed at an annual rate of 15.3 percent in September, rising by $3.24 billion following a $3.03 billion August gain.

Consumers also borrowed heavily on their credit cards, boosting this category of debt by $2.02 billion in September, almost double the $1.09 billion August increase. Credit card debt rose at an annual rate of 17.4 percent, the largest advance since April 1986.

The category that includes cash loans from banks that are not secured by real estate rose $990 million in September, compared with a $1.04 billion August increase. Loans for mobile homes fell by $95 million following a $105 million August decline.

For the July-September period, total consumer debt was climbing at an annual rate of 9.8 percent, a substantial pickup from a 3.5 percent increase in the first six months of the year.

However, economists said all of these figures reflect economic conditions before the record declines in the stock market in October. Many analysts are predicting that jittery consumers worried about the future will cut back on their spending and borrowing in coming months.

The various changes in September left total consumer debt at a seasonally adjusted $602.2 billion.

Execs from Stamford helping poor South African businesses

STAMFORD (AP) — In racially troubled South Africa, a white businessman entered a black neighborhood for the first time to help a businessman with his struggling company.

The visit was part of a new program developed by Stamford-based International Executive Service Corps. Called IESC-South Africa, the program's goal is to help struggling black businesses by hooking them up with volunteer white businessmen who will share their expertise.

"There was one man who had spent his life repairing auto bodies who helped another man struggling to develop a business, and because of the many things they had in common, they didn't talk politics or black and white," said Hal Hallock, a retired American executive who helped set up the program.

Hallock, who was IESC director of operations in Morocco, is now living in Vermont.

IESC has been sending retired American executives to underdeveloped countries to assist private enterprises for 22 years.

The South Africa program is different because it's the first attempt into that war-torn area, and the white executives are from South Africa, not the United States.

IESC selected volunteers from South Africa in order to cut costs, but also because people in South Africa "know the customs and hazards involved," said IESC President Thomas S. Carroll. Carroll went to South Africa a year ago to determine whether there was a need for such a program. Hallock spent the first six months of this year in South Africa setting the program up.

Since the program began in April, 55 projects have been started with about 100 volunteers, Hallock said. The volunteer executives have helped all kinds of businesses, including banks, a dressmaker, a supermarket and printing company. IESC has offices in Cape Town, Johannesburg and Durban.

"People in the United States have a rather erroneous impression of South Africa," Hallock said. "What we are doing is constructing something to help the black economy. Until they can manage things, it's not going to be that easy to fill the role one day they'll have to fill."

IESC-South Africa began with a $96,000 project grant from the United States Agency for International Development in cooperation with the USAID Mission Pretoria.

The eventual goal is to have a self-supporting agency from local contributions. When a board of directors is put together, it will eventually decide on a fee per project.

IESC did not ask the government's permission to set up the project, and the volunteer businessmen did not seem concerned about the politics there, Carroll said.

"What we want to do is help build a black middle class because the middle class is the best prospect for political stability and solution to the aggrieved situation there," Carroll said.

"The need is greater there than the Third World countries," Hallock said.

Judge throws out Xerox age suit

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A federal judge has ruled 1,325 former employees of Xerox Corp. cannot sue the company as a group for age discrimination.

In a 75-page decision filed late Thursday, U.S. District Judge Alfred J. Lechner granted Xerox's motion to decertify the case as a class-action suit, which both sides said was the nation's largest such case, charged that the Stamford, Conn.-based company had a campaign to replace older workers with younger, less experienced and lower-paid employees from 1980 to

It was filed by four men who worked for the company in New Jersey and New York for at least 10 years before they were laid off in 1981. Nine other plaintiffs were added, and in 1983, more than 1,300 joined after being solicited in a mailing.

Another judge had granted conditional class certification. If the plaintiffs had maintained the class certification and had the case structured as they wanted, the burden would have been on Xerox to prove each individual was not discriminated against.

Lechner's ruling means each ex-employee will have to file suit individually, but it did not decide the outcome for the 13 lead plaintiffs. Lawyers for the former workers have said decertification would be a major setback.

One of their attorneys, Alan S. Weitz in Washington, said Friday he had not read the opinion and could not comment. But Weitz said he and fellow attorneys would discuss whether to appeal.

In essence, Lechner found the 1,325 plaintiffs did not have enough in common to justify class-action status.

No rule against IRA withdrawal

QUESTION: My individual retirement account is with a brokerage firm. It is a self-directed IRA and is invested in stocks, bonds and a money-market mutual fund.

When I retire and begin making withdrawals from the IRA, I plan to request that the stock certificates be issued in my name and that enough of the money market mutual funds be redeemed so I can pay income tax on the entire withdrawal.

By doing things that way, I will hold on to the high dividend paying stocks without having to sell them and repurchase the same stocks.

Is this permissible?

ANSWER: There are no federal rules against it. But you might have problems with some brokerage firms. IRA rules permit you to take withdrawals by check or "in kind." The latter means the assets now in the IRA, which is a trusteeship, would be transferred to your direct ownership.

To accomplish what you have in mind, instruct your broker to withdraw X number of shares of stock from your IRA and have those shares registered in your name.

That can be done. However, a number of brokerages refuse to handle things that way and have in-house rules saying they will pay IRA withdrawals only by check. The obvious reason is that those brokerages want to collect commissions on the sale of stocks to provide money for IRA withdrawals and, perhaps, additional commissions when that money is reinvested.

If you run into that roadblock, you can get around it. Check with a number of brokerages until you find one willing to allow IRA withdrawals in shares of stock. Then move your IRA to the more cooperative brokerage through a trustee-to-trustee transfer.

I suggest you ask your present broker, now, if his firm will allow you to take your IRA withdrawals in shares of stock. If the answer is negative, line up another brokerage and shift your IRA well in advance of your retirement.

QUESTION: The Tax Reform Act of 1986 prohibits anyone who is "covered by another retirement plan" from making annual tax-deductible contributions to an IRA if his or her adjusted gross income exceeds $35,000 a year — $50,000 for a married couple filing joint federal income tax returns.

How about a retiree collecting both a pension from his former employer's retirement plan and Social Security benefits? If he earns at least $2,000 from a part-time job, can he put $2,000 in an IRA and deduct the $2,000 on his 1987 income tax return?

ANSWER: Sure. The prohibition on making tax-deductible IRA contributions applies to taxpayers who earn either $35,000 or $50,000 from employment. Pension and SS benefits don't count in calculating that number.

If you're retired and earning $2,000 or more from part-time work, you're permitted to make a $2,000 annual tax-deductible IRA contribution. If you're earning less than $2,000 a year, you can put everything you earn from employment into an IRA — again, tax-deductible.

You can, that is, until the year you reach 70½. At that point, you can't make annual tax-deductible IRA contributions.

Limiting all talk, no action

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., has a plan to eliminate one of many opportunities for a filibuster on the Senate floor.

Byrd and two of his colleagues have introduced a resolution seeking "to limit debate on the motion to proceed to a bill to two hours."

Under normal circumstances, the Senate usually begins work on a bill by asking for unanimous consent. If such consent is not granted, the majority or minority leader makes a debatable motion to take up the bill.

That debatable motion offers senators opposing the measure a chance to launch a filibuster even before the Senate can begin working on the legislation.

Byrd's idea is certainly not a new one. At least three ad hoc study groups have proposed such a move in the last four years.

Paper tigers

In a modest attempt to fight a mounting national garbage pile, the federal government has announced it is recycling a discarded rule to prod its agencies into buying recycled paper.

No action on the new rule is expected right away, since agencies have one year to discuss its implementation.

The unwanted garbage barge that wandered from port to port last summer is on the minds of those dealing with the issue, federal officials say, since by some estimates, half of the barge load was paper.

No one will predict how the new rule will reduce the garbage pile and no one has any numerical estimates, but recycling advocates hope that it will be a catalyst for others and eventually mean a substantial reduction in waste.

Under house arrest

A group of rebellious Republicans launched a parliamentary attack on their Democratic house colleagues last week, even going so far as to ask for the "arrest" of members absent from requested roll call votes.

Still smarting over House Speaker Jim Wright's stall tactics which bought him enough time to persuade one of his Democrats to switch sides during a crucial vote, the GOP requested various parliamentary moves to prevent the house from "journing."

One Republican lawmaker filed a motion to direct the sergeant-at-arms "to arrest absent members," knowing very well that most congressmen were still out of town on weekend trips to their homes and districts.

Wright, who took the nearly four-hour GOP parliamentary stall maneuver in stride, was able to joke about the situation, even though the Republicans were preventing any legislative business.

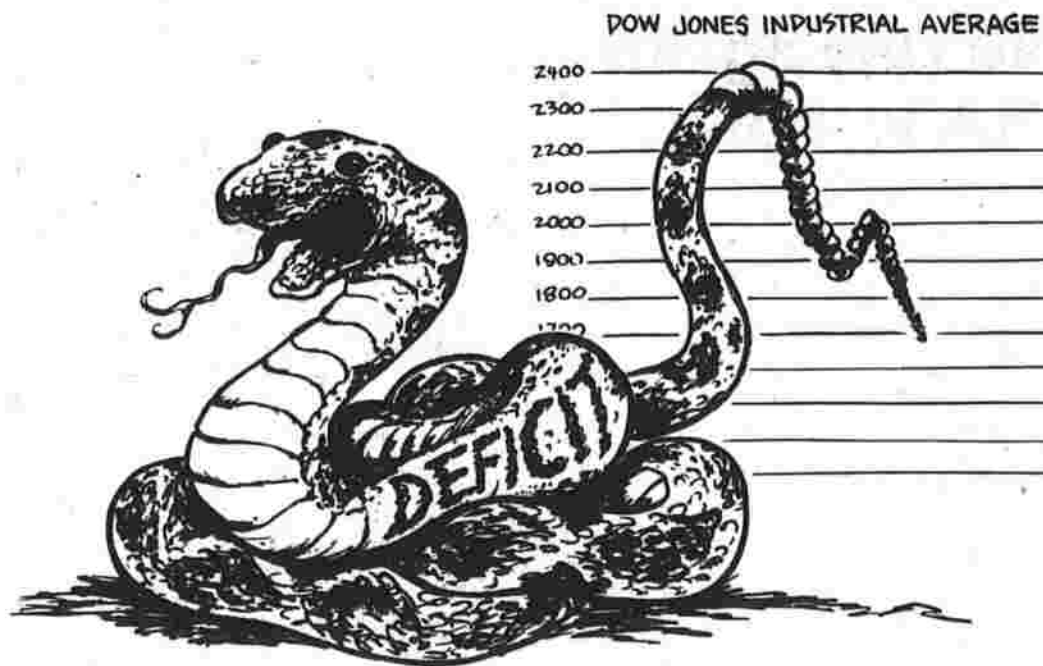

"The chair (man) desires to announce that in the event the sergeant-at-arms were instructed to find and arrest absent members, (he) has informed (me) that he already has enough volunteers to find and arrest members from Hawaii," said Wright.

Polyps & cancer: Get examination

To the Editor:

I recently attended a seminar at the American Cancer Society headquarters in Wallingford. Drs. Bernard Kaplan and Saumitra Banerjee lectured on the importance of colorectal exams. Digital, stool samples and proctosigmoidoscopy (all three, not just one) should be done in two consecutive years on persons 40 and over and at a younger age if there is a history of cancer in the family.

Colon cancer is the second highest cause of cancer deaths; outdone only by lung cancer. It takes, normally, 5 to 13 years for a polyp to become cancerous.

Therefore, colon cancer is preventable. If your physician is not equipped to perform this examination, ask him or her to refer you to a physician that is and have the exam two years in a row. After that you can wait three years before having it done again.

Also, much to my surprise, women get colon cancer at a rate 2 percent higher than men.

Although diet is important in the curtailment of some cancer, you must remember that this cancer is preventable.

Out of 150,000 cases of colon cancer expected in 1987, approximately 65,000 will result in death. For additional information, stop in the American Cancer Society office, 243 E. Center St., for literature on the subject.

The life you save may be your own, so call your doctor and make an appointment for an exam.

Fortunately for me, my doctor examined me 18 years ago. Two polyps were removed and in subsequent years the operation has been performed four times or I might not be here.

Naab puts foot in his mouth

To the Editor:

My only regret regarding our recent election is that I included Geoffrey Naab in my split vote. By his own admission, he should have campaigned more, possibly revealing his penchant for putting his foot in his mouth.

I was shocked by his remarks about the Eighth District in Wednesday's Herald and his sick joke about doctors in the Courant.

He insulted people who were exercising the democratic right to vote for what they believed was best for their town. I believe Mr. Naab owes us a public apology.

President's transition funds open to abuse

WASHINGTON — Most Americans probably figure a presidential "transition" involves packing up the outgoing president's belongings and moving the new one's into the White House. That may have been true in Coolidge's day (when, according to a famous New Yorker cartoon, Silent Cal refused to leave until his other rubber was found).

Jack Anderson

But the transition process is a lot more complicated — and costly — these days. The major part of the operation consists of various "teams" of the new president's stalwarts planning their takeover of the various federal agencies and coordinating with the lame-duck administration's top bureaucrats. In theory this is to assure a smooth transition.

In practical political terms, of course, the main function of the winner's teams is to hunt for party loyalists to fill the top jobs in the new administration. And possibly with this in mind, many patriotic Americans donate big bucks to help pay the expenses of a presidential transition. Some of them — or their friends — undoubtedly wind up with influential or high-paying jobs in the new administration.

No one can be sure, because there is no accountability required for private funds donated to a presidential transition — in contrast to the strict accounting of campaign donations. Also unlike the rules on campaign contributions, corporations can donate directly to a transition fund, and there is no limit on the amounts that can be donated.

The possibilities for corruption in this system worry some members of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee. The fear is that a corporation, a labor union or a wealthy individual could secretly "buy" a Cabinet post or other position of influence in Washington — and the public would never find out, because of the lack of accountability in transition financing.

Until 1968-69, transition expenses were paid by the political parties. That year, Congress allocated a relatively modest $900,000 — half for the incoming Nixon administration and half for the outgoing Johnson administration. Since 1976, new presidents each have been given $2 million in public funds for transition expenses, while the outgoing president has received $1 million. Re-elected presidents, understandably, get nothing.

But the expenses of transitions have grown enormously for new administrations besieged by office-seekers. So private donations have been solicited. In 1980, as near as can be estimated, the Reagan transition team raised at least $1.2 million in private funds. It's impossible to know if any of the donors later joined the administration.

The Senate committee chairman, John Glenn, D-Ohio, told our reporter Gary Clouser he hasn't decided which of several corrective proposals he will support. In general, though, he said he wants any changes to result in more accountability in transition funds. He added that he thinks a president-elect should have better things to do with his time and energy than trying to raise money for his transition teams.

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., who introduced the original transition-funding bill, echoed this sentiment when he told the Glenn committee: "There is a lack of dignity in a system which requires party solicitors to seek out private funds to support the necessary activities of the president-elect of the United States."

Among the proposals the committee is studying are an outright ban on private donations; regulating campaign contributions like campaign donations; and raising the amount of public funding to obviate the need for private donations. One proposal would double the president-elect's transition money to $4 million — an option likely to run afoul of congressional budget-cutters.

AIDS facing?

New transmissions of AIDS have decreased to almost zero among San Francisco gays and bisexuals, according to studies conducted by the city's health department. The twin reasons, according to Dr. George Rutherford, head of the agency's AIDS office, are fear and education.

The effect of fear is obvious, while education provides "a framework for rationally changing sexual behavior," Rutherford told our reporter Jennifer Smith. Using frozen blood samples taken years ago for another health crisis (the search for a Hepatitis B vaccine), Rutherford was able to determine what percentages of those tested had acquired AIDS since 1978. He was then able, through periodic testing, to chart the rise and fall of AIDS transmissions and conclude that they were now close to zero.

Dr. Thomas Peters, associate director of the San Francisco Health Department, said there are also other indicators that show the dramatic decrease in AIDS transmissions. He credited "the educational campaign and booklets — in all their sexually graphic detail and instructions on how to have safer and more satisfying sexual encounters."

A burning issue

In the United States, woodburning stoves are mainly an idea from the energy crisis that's lost popularity; in India, they are the mainstay of family cooking for millions. The Indian government has estimated that 133 million tons of wood are burned each year in cooking fires. That's more than can effectively be replaced by growing trees, and some areas of India are rapidly turning into deserts as a result. The government is understandably anxious to stop the ominous trend toward deforestation. One gimmick it's trying is to encourage Indian women to use an inexpensive solar-energy cooker as a conservative measure.

Hite: the P.T. Barnum of sex

By Chuck Stone

If we didn't have Gary Hart, Donna Rice and Jim and Tammy Bakker to kick around, Shere Hite wouldn't have us to hustle her books.

Hite, a self-styled "cultural historian," has parlayed a national obsession with libidinal foreplay into a personal accumulation of queently fortunes. And with her just-published third book, "Women and Love, a Cultural Revolution in Progress," Hite brings gender equality to P.T. Barnum's boast, "There's a sucker born every minute."

She analyzed written responses from a self-selecting sample of 4,500 women, then compiled a literary con job that is as scientifically accurate as the fraudulent Hitler diaries.

Four years ago, you may recall, Newsweek magazine published a cover story on the Hitler diaries and then had to eat journalistic crow. Four weeks ago, Time magazine published a cover story on the Hite Report. Now, a just-released scientific ABC News/Washington Post poll questions Hite's findings, contradicts her conclusions and indicts her methodology. Time isn't eating crow yet, but it concedes that the Hite Report is "murky in methodology." Murky?

"... and if elected, I will erase the deficit, turn around the balance of trade and thicken up the ozone layer."

It's as reliable as a textbook on morality in politics by Gary Hart, Joe Biden and Mike Dukakis.

In Hite's skewed sample, she depended on 4,500 responses from a mailing of 100,000 questionnaires (4.5 percent). Her respondents were mainly literate middle-class women who could spare the time from job or family and weren't turned off by Hite's lengthy questionnaire. Black, Hispanic, low-income and poorly educated women were not represented equitably.

According to Hite, 70 percent of her respondents who had been married five years or longer have cheated on their husbands. But only 7 percent of the married women who were part of the ABC News/Washington Post scientific sample, have been romping in the hay with another man. (I'm sure you can appreciate the Socratic dialectic that this delicate subject provoked in the Stone household.)

While 84 percent of Hite's respondents said they were dissatisfied with their marriage or male relationship, 83 percent of the women in the ABC/Washington Post poll said they were satisfied with their marriage or male relationship.

Somebody's lying. And science rarely lies.

Given Hite's unrepresentative sample, unscientific methodology and clumsy questionnaire, her conclusions can be neither validated nor defended. "We set out to see if her results could be duplicated scientifically," said Jeff Alderman, ABC's polling director, "But they could not." Hite protested that the two polls' different questions caused different answers. "That wouldn't affect the outcome," Alderman told this reporter.

But something else is operating here. It's the sociology of prejudice. Hite starts out with a lopsidedly biased framework in her determination to liberate a repressed — and oppressed — female libido.

That intention is commendable. A male bastion that has kept women in a sexual dungeon for centuries should be demolished. On the other hand, Hite's methods misrepresent the many-splendored complexities of the female psyche. But the Madame LaFarge of testicular excesses wouldn't sell books if her conclusions were scientifically verifiable.

But even if Hite makes a small fortune selling this literary turkey, the rest of us may still be in her debt — for making us think.

Nonstop call lasts 72 hours

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (AP) — They say teen-agers spend a lot of time on the phone, but a couple of over-30-year-olds chatted it up for 72 hours, nonstop.

The publicity stunt left Kathleen Butler with a sore throat. Brian Vouglas said he didn't want to touch another phone for two months.

They hung up at noon Thursday, ending what was billed as the world's longest phone call, although no such category exists in the Guinness Book of World Records.

The call was staged by a public relations firm hired by San Jose-based U.S. Telecenters Corp. to draw attention to their business phone systems.

Butler, 35, and Vouglas, 33, actors who answered an ad for a job that paid $40 a day plus a $50 bonus if they lasted three days, gabbed, played games, recited poetry and sang their way through the stunt.

They frequently switched costumes, playing different characters in interviews during the call, and took breaks of five minutes an hour, or accumulated the time for longer breaks, such as 15 minutes after three hours.

Art students kill chickens for bone-sculpture project

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — An art teacher at Harvard assigned her students to adopt a live chicken for a day, then take it to a slaughterhouse, watch it be processed, and cook and eat it before making a sculpture from the bones.

Ritsuko Taho, a lecturer in the school's Visual and Environmental Studies Department who teaches "Fundamentals of Sculpture," said Thursday the task was intended to reduce the distance between art and object.

"Because they will have eaten it, the chicken will be part of (the students') bodies," Taho said. "This experience will expand their imagination and understanding."

But some students in the class and members of animal rights groups complained that this week's assignment promoted cruelty to animals.

Three of the 17 students refused it, said senior Hannah Gittleman. Gittleman said she couldn't undertake the project because she was apprehensive about developing a relationship with the chicken.

"It would be like a pet, and to take your pet and have it killed is not a comfortable thing for me," she said.

Thoughts

How petty the divisions we place between ourselves must seem in God's eyes. How much God-given human talent has been wasted because of racism, sexism and religious discrimination.

See yourselves the way I see you. God says to his human creation. Put away the fears that separate you. Discover one another and be pleasantly surprised!

Why sit at dirty tables?

DEAR ABBY: I'm always telling my co-workers that I'm going to write to you with a question that puzzles us all. I'm finally doing it. We work in a coffee shop in a tourist town and want to know why people prefer to sit at dirty tables. It's not because there are no clean tables, because this often happens when there is only one dirty table. A party leaves, and before we've had a chance to clear the table, someone else sits there!

If we're busy, we put out a "Please Wait to Be Seated" sign, but people walk right past it and sit at the dirty table anyway! It is much easier on a waitress if customers sit at a clean table. Sometimes when we're busy, we might not realize that they aren't the previous party, so they won't be served as fast. Also, we'd rather have them sit at a clean table because it gives a better impression of our establishment than if they start out with someone else's dirty dishes in front of them. So, Abby, if you can tell us why so many people prefer to sit at a dirty table, we'd sure appreciate it.

WAITRESS IN BANFF, ALBERTA

DEAR WAITRESS: Beats me. Perhaps the location of the dirty table is preferable to the available clean ones. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: Four and a half years ago, my brother (age 49) — an aerospace executive — borrowed 50 record albums from my mother and me. These albums belong to us.

After two years and no return, I asked my mother to please ask my brother to return the record albums. Brother brought them back in anger, without a word of thanks, and at the same time he asked to borrow 50 more albums!

It's been two years, and still no return of the 50 albums, so I called my brother, and his wife answered the phone. I very politely reminded her that her husband had 50 albums of mine and I would appreciate having them.

So said, "I thought we brought those back."

I replied, "No, you didn't." Then she had the nerve to say, "Well, you shouldn't loan things to people if you're going to worry about getting them back."

Abby, we enjoy sharing our videocassettes and records, but we would like them returned after a reasonable length of time. How should we handle this if they want to borrow something in the future?

LENDER

DEAR LENDER: When you lend something, have a clear understanding of when it should be returned. And if the borrower "forgets," remind him.

DEAR ABBY: I need to get a couple of things off my chest: I work in the personnel department of a Fortune 500 company, and we receive approximately 100 resumes every day from people applying for jobs or scholarship money.

At least 20 of those 100 people do not include an address in their letters and/or their handwriting is not legible, so obviously we have no way of responding to their requests.

The other thing that irritates me is the number of people who write to ask for jobs and use the stationery-/letterhead of their present employer.

ANONYMOUS, OF COURSE

Dear Abby

Problems with bladder started after surgery

DEAR DR. GOTT: About a year after prostate surgery, my bladder problems began. If I do not get to the bathroom as soon as I have the urge to urinate, my bladder will close off and I cannot void. Within five to 10 minutes, I get very severe pain and have to use a catheter. Urologists are no help. I also have diabetes and take blood pressure medicine.

DEAR READER: You seem to be describing bladder-outlet obstruction, a blockage of urine flow caused by muscle spasm. Prostate surgery often results in unavoidable nerve and tissue damage that can interfere with both urination and ejaculation. This can be made worse by diabetes-induced nerve malfunction and by certain medications that are used for hypertension.

If your local urologists cannot help you, ask for a referral to urological specialists at a teaching center. You need cystoscopy and cystometrics, two related tests to examine bladder function and control. Perhaps special medicine — or alteration of the drugs you are currently taking — would solve this uncomfortable problem. In any case, repeated self-catheterization should be a last resort; the procedure will eventually introduce bacteria into your bladder and give you a urinary infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In a previous column you said there was no connection between eczema and hormonal imbalance. You're the doctor, but I'm not sure you are correct in my case. I developed "housewife's eczema" after my first child was born. It resisted treatment, but disappeared when I went on birth-control pills. We moved a lot, and sometimes my prescription would run out. Like clockwork, the eczema returned until I started the pills again. There is a definite connection in my experience.

DEAR READER: OK, I won't argue with your analysis of your case. Although eczema is commonly associated with small residues of soap or detergent that stick to the skin and provoke an allergic reaction the condition involves complex responses in the skin. In some people, hormones probably play a role. So does stress. My brother used to get fierce eczema from handling our housecat. I suppose that the most important consideration regarding eczema is: If you can discover the factors triggering your eczema and can avoid them, fine. Otherwise, remove your rings when bathing or washing dishes, thoroughly rinse your hands and use over-the-counter cortisone cream on the affected areas.

ALCOHOL & STILL BIRTH

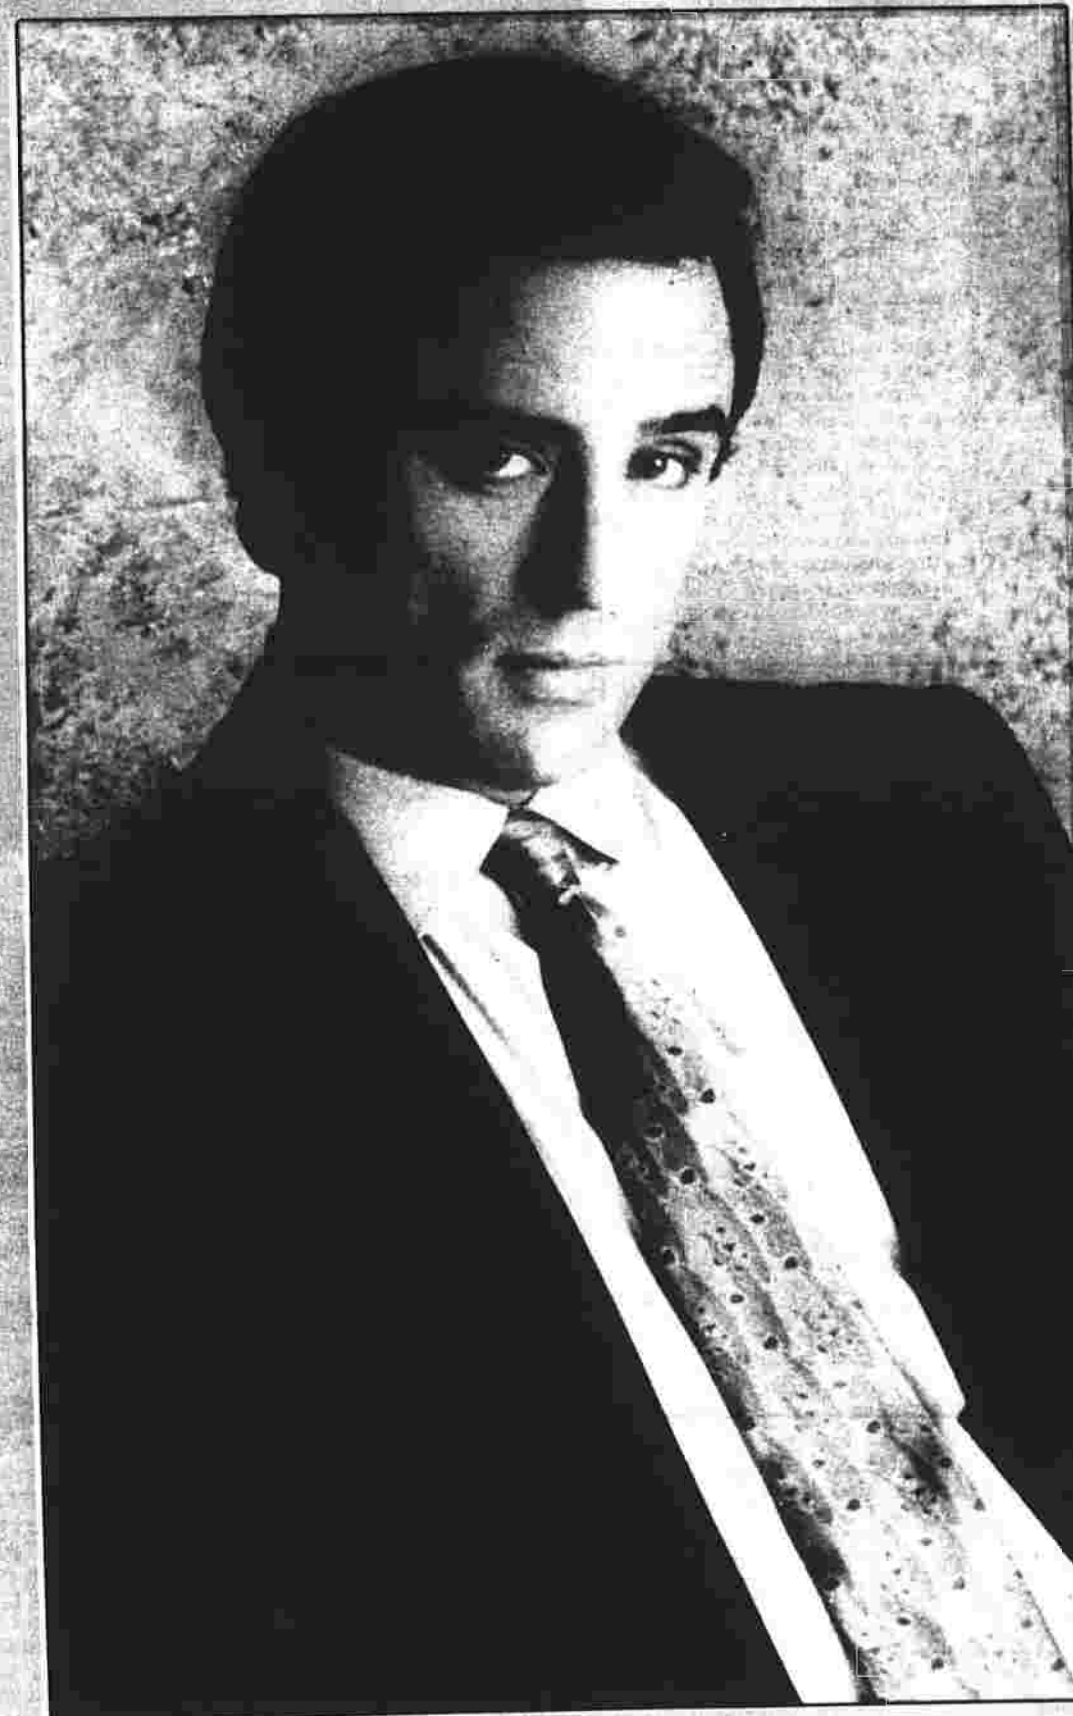

Even moderate drinking during pregnancy greatly increases the risk of stillbirth, report separate medical researchers in N.Y. and California. Pregnant women who drink even small, non-intoxicating amounts of alcohol twice or more each week, have about a 20% chance of aborting. As drinking more than 1 oz. of alcohol (1 can of beer, 1 glass of wine, or 1 small cocktail) more often than once a week can be so very toxic to the fetus, it is wise to avoid alcohol entirely during pregnancy.

Between the Lines

The story behind the story

By Josie

Liza Minnelli

Q. I've been a Liza Minnelli fan for 25 years. Please tell me what she's been up to lately. Raymond Dow, Plainsboro, N.J.
A. Performing in sold-out, highly acclaimed concert appearances, most recently in Europe. She also co-starred with Burt Reynolds in the movie "Rent-a-Cop" due out this month and is talking about recording a new album. There has also been talk that she might appear with Patti LaBelle in the movie "Sing," about a famous high school music competition but it is, at this point, just talk.

Q. Please tell me what Telly Savalas is currently doing. A.F., North Bergen, N.J.

A. As we go to press, he's preparing the TV special scheduled to air in late October in which the vault of the Titanic will be opened live on-camera. He also appeared recently on the season opener of "The Equalizer," as you're probably aware. Currently, he's working on a TV movie based on the life story of gambler Nick the Greek, a project he's had in the works for the last two years.

Telly Savalas

Q. Please tell me all about Charlton Heston. He's been my favorite for a long time. Cecilia Narimatsu, Lansdale, Pa.

A. He's 63, was born in Evanston, Ill., and raised in St. Helen, Mich., where his father ran a lumber mill. The area was remote, providing few playmates, so he amused himself by acting out stories and making up games.

Adding to his isolation was his parents' divorce when he was about 10; his mother remarried (Heston is his stepfather's name; his father's name was Whitford) and moved her son to the Chicago suburb of Wilmette. He was a shy, unsophisticated child and found it difficult to adjust to city life and school life at New Trier High School.

He found refuge, however, in the school's theater program. After graduation, he decided to continue on in drama, accepting Northwestern University's offer of a drama scholarship. He starred in a variety of campus productions but it was the mid-'40s, wartime, and he decided that his country needed him more so he left school after two years to enlist in the Army Air Force. He spent the next three years as a radio gunner based in the Aleutians.

He was discharged from the military in 1947 and moved with his wife, actress Lydia Clarke (they had married in 1944), to New York where both tried to find acting jobs. Unsuccessful, they signed on instead with the Thomas Wolfe Memorial Theater in Asheville, N.C., but later that year returned to New York where he was cast in "Antony and Cleopatra" on Broadway.

That led to more roles on Broadway and in the just-beginning dramas on TV, including the acclaimed CBS anthology series "Studio One." Impressed by his performance in a "Studio One" production of "Jane Eyre," producer Hal Wallis signed him, in 1950, to a long-term movie contract.

Charlton Heston

He made his film debut later that year in "Dark City," followed by a string of roles in "Ruby Gentry," "The Greatest Show on Earth," "The President's Lady," "Pony Express," and in 1956 "The Ten Commandments." His portrayal of Moses made him a star.

Movies that followed include Orson Welles' "Touch of Evil," "The Big Country," "The Buccaneer" and "Ben Hur" which won him an Oscar. Perceived as a larger-than-life figure, he then starred in a number of spectacles, including "El Cid," "The Greatest Story Ever Told," "The Agony and the Ecstasy," "Khartoum" and other adventures including "Planet of the Apes," "The Three (and Four) Musketeers," "Gray Lady Down," "Airport 1975," "Midway" and "Earthquake."

In recent years, as you undoubtedly know, he's returned to TV, first in the miniseries "Chiefs," then in "The Colbys." His most recent project was the ABC TV movie "Proud Man," which was scheduled for October as we go to press. Other TV projects are in the works.

He and wife Lydia have a son, Fraser, and a daughter, Holly, and live in Los Angeles.

Joe Penny trades anger for acting

By Linda-Marie Singer

"Angry. I was so angry about everything. Pick a subject. My parents. The world.

Resentment was ruining me, until I realized what I desperately needed was an identity."

The search ended brightly for actor Joe Penny, who stars in CBS's "Jake and the Fat Man" with William Conrad. For instead of remaining the renegade and outsider, Penny learned to channel his hostility.

"Acting. At 17 I quickly understood that the camera provided me with a needed release. And you can see that result: It's right up there on the screen. I'm that guy who'll always get you an FBI, who'll always hit a single, maybe a double. Every now and then I'll even manage a home run."

Even though he portrayed Buggy Siegel in "The Gangster Chronicles," and detective Nick Ryder in "Riptide," Joseph Edward Penny Jr. really spent most of his childhood fantasizing about becoming a bombardier pilot.

"It never went any further, because most of the time I was upset, hurt and frustrated. See, I became a victim of circumstance when my parents divorced," he explains softly.

London-born and Georgia-bred, at 8 Penny was separated from his dad and went to live with his mother in California. He didn't see his father for another 13 years.

Bringing all this back to the 31-year-old is still painful.

"Because my father was a man who could do no wrong, maybe it put some kind of stress on me that I wasn't aware of. You see, Dad was All-American in school and then played semi-pro football around the country. After Korea he reinvented himself with education, beginning as a math professor and winding up a school principal."

Joe Penny didn't exactly follow in his father's footsteps, and upon graduation from California's Marina High School, he "walked rather quickly, shall we say, out of there." From baker to dishwasher, the teen-ager set out on a journey of self-discovery.

"I did receive a football scholarship to Orange Coast College in California, but never took it up. It was just time to get on with life, you know? And that student body card seemed meaningless. It was never going to do a damn thing for me, so I left." Pushing the past away momentarily, the rugged six-footer makes his way into a restaurant where he immediately fishes for a pack of cigarettes. "This place is out the way, isn't it?" he asks, shunning the idea of publicity.

As the actor is seated away from the crowds, customers stare inadvertently at the attractive television star whose "Riptide" series caused a continual flutter of fan mail.

"Here was the funny part about Nick Ryder in that show. His character was based on my brother John and he knew it. I mean, he saw me doing him." He laughs. "But I got all the letters."

Especially from male viewers who saw Penny's role "as a man's man, and not just a pretty boy with a suit on." Female reaction was predictable, with propositions of marriage pouring in from housewives and their daughters. "One lady even sent me a wedding ring," he adds with an afterthought.

All this talk inevitably leads to romance. He admits tersely. "There is no one seriously at this moment, but there was." His voice trails off.

A restrained look indicates he's ready to move from the subject, although when reminded that the audience finds him sexy (especially after his mini-series "Roses Are for the Rich" with Lisa Hartman), Penny doesn't object.

"But if you're asking if I feed into it, I don't. That is, come to my house and you won't find posters of me, nor will I be walking around in tight shirts."

Fighting any kind of sweet and gentle nature, Penny by his own admission, is no angel. "I can still go out with the boys and tear the place down," he claims, without sounding boastful. "Only now I know what my priorities are, and I've learned to take care of my needs as opposed to my wants."

That includes acting. I never for one minute kid myself about the business. It's for full-grown men and women, and I prepare for it like war. I know what I'm up against, because as soon as I got "The Gangster Chronicles," I gave up everything. Maybe that's typical, but prior to that I worked sporadically. You know, guest shots here, a few lines there.

"All I had were part-time jobs until I was 25. In those days I did anything to survive. I drove fork lifts and became a foreman on a maintenance crew. During the holidays, I signed up to wash mail trucks in Santa Monica. Hey, that was good for an extra five dollars.

Joe Penny, star of "Riptide" and now "Jake and the Fat Man" remembers how success runs hand-in-hand. He never takes things for granted.

"Then I made one of the biggest mistakes in my life with my first taste of success. That was in 1980 when I finally earned a nice sum of money. But you know what? I p--- it all away. I got so depressed afterwards that I lost myself for a year."

"What bothers me is knowing I took things for granted and that was a sin, for success is God-given. You've been kissed." He pauses. "Well I didn't mean to get into a religious thing."

Penny, trying to look nonchalant in faded blue jeans and blue striped shirt, eyes the waitress who eyes him.

"Hi, Carol," he says, reading her name tag. "What's the special for today?"

Before she can enumerate, a fan rushes up with a request.

"There are about 20 ladies out there who nearly fainted when they recognized you. Do you think it's possible? I mean, I'm sorry to intrude, but..."

"If you give me a few minutes, I'd be glad to come over to your table and say afternoon is wearing on, he's becoming more approachable and warm.

"The whole thing about 'Riptide' that pleases me is how Penny (co-star Perry King) and I came away friends. We never had problems because we're both tenacious and passionate about our work. All along we were there for the betterment of the show. No egos involved."

"Naturally you hear stories: Many actors haggle over lines but we had this philosophy: 'Here, take it.' Because you know why? I've got 19 more shows, man, and about 3,000 more close-ups, right? It all evens out. Why bother?"

Calling himself "a 13-year overnight success," Penny feels misconceptions still exist. "People keep thinking you're everything you portray on the screen. Some see me as stuck on myself or arrogant. Viewers seem to get a sense of that when they see me perform. Sorry, I'm not the swashbuckling type, although I do have my moments and can be a real son-of-a-bitch when I have to."

Perhaps the biggest turnaround for new stars is a change not only in lifestyle, but also an altering of personality. "Nothing like that has happened," he contends, "because I still know where my realities are. If you knew me all along, you'd know I'm the same guy walking around in my sweats and Reeboks."

"Success is important in anyone's life, but recently something even greater happened. I explained that I was reunited with my dad after 13 years. Well, one day he called for my opinion concerning his beach house property. ■

Getting help when a loved one dies

By Jean Guarino

When Lynn Trapp lost her 2-year-old son Jeremy three and a half years ago, she seriously considered suicide. "Our son was diagnosed improperly and I was wracked with guilt that I had let myself be talked out of getting a second opinion that could have saved his life," she said. "I wanted to take him to another hospital but our doctors asked for six months to pursue their treatment. Jeremy died five months later."

Lynn and her husband, Gary, were fortunate in being directed to The Compassionate Friends shortly after the death of their son. Members of the suburban Chicago TCF chapter, bereaved parents themselves, were able to show Lynn that guilt in the death of any child is normal and, while suicide might be a solution for her pain, she would only be compounding the grief of her husband and surviving son.

"The Compassionate Friends kept me alive at a time when I had no reason for living," says Lynn, who now has a 14-month-old son.

The Compassionate Friends is a nationwide nondenominational self-help group for parents who have experienced the death of a child. The primary method of support for bereaved parents is by providing sharing groups, newsletters, lending libraries, guest speakers and telephone friends are part of most programs in the 540 TCF chapters throughout the United States.

The Compassionate Friends was founded in 1969 by Reverend Simon Stephens, an Anglican chaplain at the Coventry-Warwickshire Hospital in England, after he noticed that two sets of bereaved parents were of more comfort to each other than he or any other professionals could be. Arnold and Paula Shames brought him and TCF to the United States in 1972 after the death of their daughter.

Today Lynn and Gary Trapp have healed themselves of their grief and head the TCF chapter where they once sought help.

The group meets the third Friday of every month at a local church and also hosts a monthly morning meeting just for mothers.

"There are usually about 50 people at each meeting," says Lynn, who emphasizes that the length of a parent's participation depends entirely on the individual.

"Some people have come for as long as seven years while others need just a few meetings to put them back on the right track. But the average attendance is between two and three years."

"Many people find milestones such as the anniversary of the death, birthdays and holidays difficult to get through and so come back for support during these periods," she adds.

Bereaved parents who often feel alienated from family and friends learn at this self-help group that they are not alone; that they have not been singled out for this unspeakable affliction. Each meeting includes a program about some aspect of grief and healing (speaker, therapist, film, etc.) but it is the sharing that brings parents back again and again.

"The most important thing that TCF offers is the endless capacity to listen with real empathy and the reassurance that one is not 'going crazy,'" says Ronnie Peterson, a staff member of the TCF national office in the Chicago suburb of Oak Brook whose son was killed in 1970.

"People come together with nothing else in common but their bereavement, and nothing else matters. We listen to each other's stories told over and over as each tries to convey the specialness of the lost child, to deal with the event surrounding the death itself," she adds.

Because of the sensitive nature of these gatherings, parents are guaranteed complete confidentiality. "Sometimes it's easier to open up to complete strangers who are tied to you by the common thread of your losses," says Lynn. "And it's much easier to bare your wounds when you know that what you say won't go beyond the room. We treat what we learn about each other as privileged information."

Monthly meetings usually include a speaker or film but several times a year the "main event" is a question-and-answer session in which parents anonymously write questions on a slip of paper to be answered by other parents who have healed themselves of their grief over a period of years.

"A parent may have hesitated to ask a 'stupid' question in public but once it is aired and answered he or she is relieved to find that most of the people shared the same concerns," says Lynn.

Feelings that might otherwise be depressed are aired at these meetings. A wife may say that her husband won't talk to her about their child. (He may be sitting next to her when she says it!) Other wives present know all about that. But a husband in the group will counter his wife would talk about nothing else, so that he doesn't even want to come home at night.

Yet another couple may tell that they had not been able to resolve this lack of communication and were growing further apart. Together they had gone to a counselor and learned to reach compromises that worked for them. A woman will say that's why she comes to TCF. She can talk about the child and someone will listen. It takes the pressure off her husband. All the women present have learned a little more about men and marriage.

A problem bereaved parents face together is friends and family members who find themselves at a loss on how to deal with them. "Our chapter newsletter has phone numbers to call when a parent needs to talk and that first year I made a lot of calls," Lynn says. "TCF understands that each parent must find his or her own way through grief. No one ever told me there was a timetable for grieving or a quick solution to my problems. All they did was listen."

Lynn suggests that, when in doubt, don't hesitate to bring up the child's name. "Parents would rather hear the child's name brought into conversation as a recognition that he or she was alive and was very much loved by their family than have people act as if the child had never existed," she says.

Another common fallacy is that, after two or three months, all wounds should have nearly healed and the bereaved parents should be getting on with their lives. "The reality is much different," says Lynn. "At the end of the first year I still thought it was all a nightmare and when I awoke Jeremy would be there."

This wide discrepancy in attitude often makes it difficult for parents to burden family and friends with their grief that, according to popular belief, should be subsiding. "Our chapter newsletter has phone numbers to call when a parent needs to talk and that first year I made a lot of calls," Lynn says.

"TCF understands that each parent must find his or her own way through grief. No one ever told me there was a timetable for grieving or a quick solution to my problems. All they did was listen."

Ask Dick Kleiner

Dear Dick: I tuned in to watch Sally Jessy Raphael's program. She was introducing some people and Phil Donahue came out and she said, "I want you to meet my father." Then I saw her on another program and she said that neither she nor her husband had any living parents. Could you straighten me out on this? — D.H., Crossville, Tenn.

Dear D.H.: Sally Jessy Raphael was just being facetious when she called Phil Donahue her father. Apparently, she has a great deal of respect for him. So she said that to indicate her debt to him. He is not her biological daddy.

Dear Dick: On the TV show "Hogan's Heroes," John Banner played the part of Sgt. Schultz. Although the show was incredibly corny, he was a great Schultz. Is he still alive? — J.G., Amarillo, Texas.

Dear J.G.: Banner died in 1973.

Dear Dick: Will you settle an argument about who played what in "Malice in Wonderland." My husband tells me I'm wrong. Did Elizabeth Taylor play Hedda Hopper, who was married and had a daughter and was the first gossip columnist? Did Jane Alexander play Louella Parsons, who was an actress and had a son and became the second columnist? — V.P., Muskegon, Mich.

Dear V.P.: You are a trifle confused. Elizabeth played Louella, who

When Shatner made that movie, he was only 30 and still struggling in his pre-"Star Trek" days. Like most actors, he took virtually any part that came along.

Dear Dick: Many years ago, I saw the movie "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." It was the first color movie I had seen and my memory of it is great. I would like to see it again, to see if it was as good as I remember it to be. Any way to see it again? — W.V., Rock Island, Ill.

Dear W.V.: Probably not. That's a real odd, presently not available on VCR, and probably not the kind of film TV shows very often. It's probably just as well — chances are it would be a big disappointment to see it now. You can't go home again, and neither can you ever recapture old movie thrills again.

Dear Dick: While watching "Roomies" with Bart Young, what a surprise! A show about Saginaw University! The logo on the shirt looked like the city of Saginaw logo. Was it? — R.M.J., Saginaw, Mich.

Woman asks about breastfeeding

Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am pregnant and trying to decide about breastfeeding. My doctor says it is better for the baby than using bottle formulas. Is that true?

The Kinsey Report

mothers breastfeed their babies, although this percentage appears to be increasing, especially among women in higher socioeconomic groups.

Men's problems

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Many men, including myself, have fatty deposits (or whatever) in the breast area. What causes this in men? What can be done to end this so you don't have to worry about this abnormality?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Gynecomastia (excessive development of the male breasts) is common. It is often associated with changing hormonal levels. For example, many young men have a period of six months to a year during puberty when their breasts enlarge; this disappears once adult hormonal levels are stabilized.

For adult men, gynecomastia may be related to a higher-than-normal level of estrogen (this hormone is usually produced in higher levels by women during their reproductive years) and/or a lower-than-normal level of testosterone (a hormone usually produced in higher amounts by men).

Among the conditions that can change these hormonal levels are alcohol consumption (because a damaged liver cannot deactivate the estrogen that all men normally produce), damage to the testicles (such as from mumps, injury or aging), tumors of the pituitary gland, and some drugs (such as digitalis).

Men with gynecomastia are thought to be at increased risk of having breast cancer, and so should do regular self-examinations to feel for lumps and look for any changes in the breast shape, skin or nipples. Any change must be reported immediately to a physician, because the survival rate is increased by early treatment of this cancer. Unfortunately, many men do not check their breasts or they delay seeking help, contributing to a higher breast-cancer fatality rate among men than among women. You must have a complete medical evaluation to determine what has caused your breasts to enlarge. Treatment will vary, depending on what is found. Because measurement and monitoring of hormone levels may be involved, ask your family physician about referring you to an endocrinologist.

If no underlying health problems requiring treatment are found (or if treatment does not reduce your breast size), ask to be referred to a plastic surgeon.

Surgery can be done to reduce the amount of breast tissue. If the enlargement is mostly fat rather than actual breast tissue, suction can be used to remove the fat. Either procedure can successfully reduce breast size and result in a natural-looking chest.

Has tubes tied

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I just had my fourth child and had my tubes cut and tied. I was surprised to find out that I still have periods. Why?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: The only effect of tubal ligation (cutting, burning or tying the Fallopian tubes) is to disrupt the path traveled by sperm and eggs, thereby preventing conception. Sperm will still swim through the uterus and into the two Fallopian tubes, but they are blocked from reaching any eggs.

The two ovaries continue to release eggs; the various glands and other organs continue to produce the hormones that raise and lower in an approximate monthly cycle; and the uterus (womb) continues to first build up a lining each month in response to these hormonal messages and then to shed it (called the menstrual flow, or period) when a fertilized egg does not arrive. A woman stops menstruating (menopause) when she no longer produces the high amounts of hormones (particularly estrogen) that she began to produce during puberty and that caused her to begin having periods then.

The average age for a woman to have her last period is 50, but the hormone levels usually begin to drop several years before that. This is one reason that many women in their 30s and 40s begin to have irregular cycles, hot flashes and other symptoms associated with menopause. Perhaps you've confused tubal ligation with hysterectomy (the surgical removal of the uterus). When a woman has her uterus removed, she stops having periods. This is because she no

It should come as no surprise that human milk is ideally formulated for feeding human babies.

Questions hormones

DEAR DR. REINISCH: In a column you said that a lack of hormones could keep a man from performing. Can I get hormones from changing my diet or do I need a prescription to get some pills to take?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: The only time that adding hormones reverses a man's problems with erections is when a blood test has established that he is deficient in producing testosterone (a hormone usually produced in higher amounts by men than by women).

Adding testosterone when a man already produces an adequate amount does not usually improve erectile functioning. Moreover, taking testosterone in pill form is usually not effective even when testosterone levels are low; injections are considered to be the best way to administer testosterone in a form the body can utilize.

Both pills and injections require prescription by a physician. I know of no dietary source of testosterone. Identifying the cause of reduced sexual functioning, especially erectile difficulties, requires a thorough medical examination because there can be many different causes. For example, a physician must determine whether the blood vessels that supply the penis are partially blocked. Only when a specific cause has been established can a prescription be expected to work.

Locate a urologist or other physician who specializes in diagnosing and treating male sexual dysfunctions. Such experts can often be found at medical schools or large hospitals.

AIDS confuses

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm confused about who might have AIDS. After a divorce several years ago, I had a lot of "one-night stands." I have remarried and have had sex only with my husband since I met him three years ago. He also fooled around until we met, but now is faithful. In articles about AIDS, one risk listed is having multiple partners (which we've both had), but neither of us is homosexual, nor have we had sex with homosexuals. Is there a chance that one of us could have AIDS?

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Part of the answer to your question depends on how much you know about the sexual partners you and your husband had before you became a monogamous couple.

Were any of the sexual partners users of intravenous drugs, recipients of a blood transfusion or blood products, or bisexual males? What do you know about the sexual partners they had contact with before you or your husband? This type of personal information is not often volunteered or asked for during a "one-night stand."

Unless you both are absolutely certain that none of your previous sexual partners (and their other sexual contacts) engaged in high-risk behaviors, there is a risk that one or both of you were exposed to the HIV virus (the virus that causes AIDS).

Did you and your husband always use condoms and spermicidal foam containing nonoxonyl-9 in those sexual contacts? If both of you can truthfully answer "yes," then the risk of having been exposed to HIV would be reduced, but not completely eliminated.

You both should consider having an HIV antibody test. Locate a confidential testing center that also offers educational and support services. These are often called "alternative test sites" and can be found by calling your local or state health department.

It is important to find the type of center that offers individualized counseling both before and after the test. This way you and your husband will be helped to analyze your personal risks and advised about low-risk sexual activities.

If there is a positive result (antibodies to the HIV virus are found), such a clinic will ensure that you receive accurate and sensitive information about how to medically and psychologically cope with having a positive test result.

The only effect of tubal ligation (cutting, burning or tying the Fallopian tubes) is to disrupt the path traveled by sperm and eggs, thereby preventing conception.

Weather-lore may hold some truth

By Karen Judson

A Canadian businessman who pilots his small plane on cross-country trips decided not to take off recently, even though the skies were blue and fair weather was forecast. "I noticed flocks of birds sitting in the bushes on the drive out to the airport, but not one bird in the sky," he said.

"I knew that meant there was a good chance for rain. I decided to cancel my flight and, sure enough, a thunderstorm moved in. 'Birds high in the air, the day will be fair; birds roosting all day, a storm's on its way' proved true once again."

Most of us have favorite methods of do-it-yourself weather forecasting: bunions that ache before a storm, counting black stripes on woolly caterpillars, noticing when birds begin to flock. One native American Indian, who claims to predict the weather, says he simply "watches the white man put up storm windows."

But are homespun practices like these, passed from generation to generation and country to country, a dependable means of predicting the weather or strictly myth?

Many such methods appear to be pure fiction, but on closer examination, some have a connection to weather forecasting. For example, as humidity rises before a storm, joints made tender by arthritic conditions (such as bunions) may fill with fluid and throbb with weather-change warning.

Birds do seem to fly lower before a storm, and may be seen flocking in bushes or on wires, possibly because of changes in air pressure as a front moves in. One theory: Lower air pressure before a storm causes discomfort to birds' sensitive "ears," so they stay closer to the ground where the pressure is higher.

According to legend, the wider the middle brown band on the woolly caterpillar in the fall, the milder winter will be, but most experts debunk the creature as a weather indicator. "I've found woolly caterpillars of all color combinations, including pure black, in the fields in the fall," explains Hampton Shirer, associate professor of meteorology at Pennsylvania State University and an expert on weather folklore. "I'd say the differences in color combinations are probably genetic."

When popular weather sayings work, says Shirer, it's because they have some basis in fact. "My favorites are those about watching the sky, because most of them work well and they get people in the city to look up from the sidewalk once in a while."

But before you begin searching the sky for tomorrow's weather forecast, it may help to brush up on a few facts about weather changes. "Weather" is simply the result of collisions between hot- and cold-air masses. Warmer air moves toward cooler — as the air at the equator is heated by the sun, it begins heading toward the North and South Poles. There, the warmer air cools and moves back toward the equator, but the earth's rotation causes the north-south movement of the air masses to veer off course.

In the Northern Hemisphere this means the predominant wind movement will be from west to east, while in the Southern Hemisphere winds usually move east to west. Winds power moisture-laden cloud banks, causing weather "fronts" to sweep across the globe.

Every country has its prevailing winds and — weather lore. In Europe a northwest wind is said to improve dispositions.

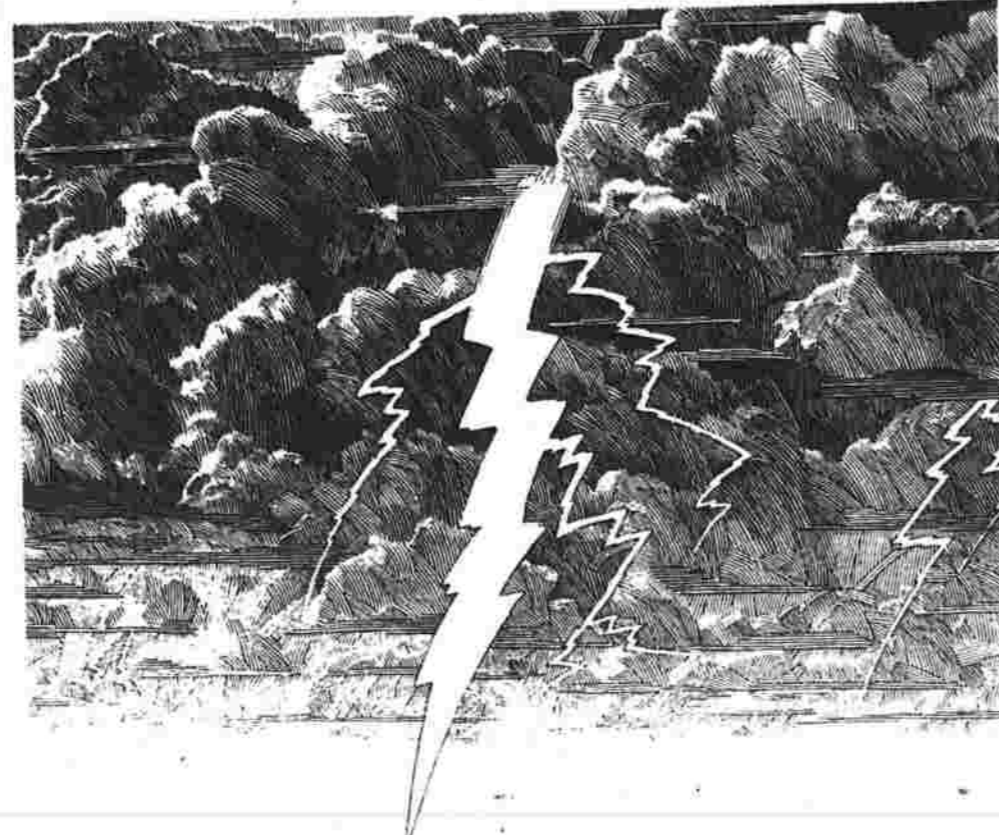

"Do business with men when the wind is in the northwest" is an old Yorkshire saying. (Since westerly winds usually bring good weather after a spell of bad, dispositions seem to improve with them.)

A hot, dry wind, born in the Sahara Desert, is the "sirocco," the "father of depression." The sirocco often crosses the Mediterranean, where it picks up moisture before settling in southern Europe. Once, the result was a dusty reddish "snow" that fell over Germany, and in 1901 a sirocco dumped 1.8 million metric tonnes (two million tons) of desert dust on the European continent.

In Italy and Sicily violent crime reportedly increases when a sirocco passes through, and severe headaches and other physical symptoms are reported in many countries along its path. A Viennese surgeon once said that when the warm, dry "fohn" of Austria blows, it creates "a general tension, wounds become infected, sutures break, complications arise."

In Spain, the sirocco's counterpart is the "leveccio," in Egypt the "chamsin" and in Argentina the "zonda." France has the warm "autan" and the cold, dry "mistral" that blows through the Rhone Valley to the Mediterranean Sea. Arabia has the "simoon" or "poison wind."

In the Middle East and Israel the "sharav" and the "chamsin" blow, while Norwegians speak of the "bora." Canadians and Americans tell of warm

"chinooks" in the middle of winter, and California has the mood-altering "Santa Ana."

Spaniards believe, "If it rains with a northeast wind, it rains with a vengeance." And in Ireland they say, "An easterly wind's rain makes fools fain." A Chinese proverb predicts, "If wind rises at night, it will fall at daylight." In the Northern Hemisphere, weather observers say, "When the wind veers toward the sun, trust it not for back 'twill run." (That is, winds may "veer" — change to easterly or northerly directions — shortly before an approaching storm.)

Winds move cloud formations that are universally used to predict the weather. A general belief is "the higher the cloud, the finer the weather" — usually true, except for high-altitude cirrus clouds, or "mares' tails," long considered the earliest sign of a weather change. "Mares' tails, mares' tails, make lofty ships carry low sails." And, "When clouds look as if scratched by a hen, be ready to reef your top sails in."

"Mackerel clouds," small, puffy, white clouds forming a ribbed sheet in the sky, may foretell approaching warm fronts, with increasing winds and rain possible. "Mackerel clouds in sky, expect more wet than dry." Sky color is also a time-honored means of weather forecasting. Hampton Shirer explains how to use a rainbow to predict rain:

In the Northern Hemisphere, "a morning rainbow in the west indicates rain is moving toward you. In the evening, a rainbow in the east indicates the storm has passed. Fifteen to 20 minutes after a morning rainbow appears, sailors take warning."

The color of the sky at sunrise and sunset is less reliable as a weather predictor, according to meteorologists, but may have some basis in fact. A pink hue is the result of light passing through dry dust particles, while a deep-red color stems from moisture-laden dust and is more likely to indicate rain. The saying "red sky at night, sailor's delight" might be true if you substitute "pink" for "red."

According to Shirer, sky color is a more reliable weather predictor when combined with clouds. "Clouds at 10,000 feet might look red in the spring and summer sunrise, and are often precursors to afternoon storms. That same deck of clouds seen in the evening might look pink as the sunlight is fading, and indicate less risk of a storm as they move east."

Halos — small colored rings around the sun or moon — are often accurate indicators of weather changes, Shirer continues. One Pennsylvania State University study found halos a reliable indication of storms 90 percent of the time in the winter and 80 percent of the time the rest of the year, with precipitation occurring 48 hours within halo sightings.

A shrinking halo means the water vapor comprising it is evaporating and weather is clearing. An expanding halo indicates the water droplets in the air are growing and will soon fall as rain or snow. As farmers used to say, "When the wheel is far (from the sun or moon), the storm is n'ar. When the wheel is n'ar the storm is far."

Another moon maxim: "Sharp horns do threaten high winds." That is, "horns" are clearly seen, it means high-altitude air is unusually clear — the result of high-speed winds aloft. Since winds begin aloft and move lower to earth, "sharp horns" on the moon could very well spell high winds the next day.

Whatever our methods of tracking the weather — physical aches and pains, professional forecasts, or "signs" from nature — the topic matters. We start conversations with it: "Hot (or cold) enough for you?" We swear it changes for the worse when we wash the car, get out the golf clubs or plan a picnic. We speak of "hot tempers," "sunny dispositions," "cloudy thinking," "starring out of the room," and being "under the weather."

Add zest with American mustard

By Shirley E. Sump

What's a hot dog without mustard? Naked! Americans love mustard, especially the bright yellow kind, and consume more than 30 million gallons in a year.

Mustard seeds have been used in cooking since ancient times. But it wasn't until the middle of the 1700s that they discovered how to make a flour or powder of them. This made it easier to make sauces or pastes to be used to disguise everyday meat dishes.

While Europeans make a wide variety of mustards, they look upon our American mustard with scorn. Our mustard is a combination of mustard powder mixed with vinegar, salt and water. The yellow color is due to the addition of turmeric.

Gourmets just turn their noses up and say maybe you can use it as a spread for sandwiches, but never as a cooking ingredient. Gourmets don't know everything! These recipes will prove that American mustard is more than just a condiment. It can add flavor and zest to many dishes.

This is nothing fancy, but it's a real family-pleaser. Serve with macaroni and cheese, buttered carrots and butterscotch meringue pie.

DEVILED MEAT LOAF
2½ pounds ground beef
2 eggs
¼ cup milk
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 medium onion, chopped
3 tablespoons prepared horseradish mustard
2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup ketchup
2 tablespoons prepared (regular plain) mustard

Preheat oven to 350F. Combine beef, eggs, milk, crumbs, onion, horseradish mustard, parsley, cinnamon and salt in a large mixing bowl. Mix thoroughly. Spread in a 8½ x 12 x 2" baking dish. Bake for 30 minutes.

Meanwhile combine ketchup and regular mustard. Mix well. Spread on top of meat. Bake for 20 minutes more or until meat tests done. Spoon off drippings. Let stand 5 minutes. Cut into squares and serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Baby Boom (PG) Diane Keaton has given fresh, risky performances in her recent films, so it's good to see her doing something light — and looking terrific. Keaton brings a new assertiveness to this breezy yuppie-feminist fantasy, and she — if not the picture — is wonderful.

Keaton plays a hard-driving Manhattan management consultant with a six-figure income and an equally hard-driving live-in boyfriend. Their relationship is a matter of convenience: Before falling asleep, she puts down her contracts, he finishes giving himself a facial and the make very businesslike love. Sex to this couple is timed, like a three-minute egg.

Suddenly, in a clear bit of plot contrivance, Keaton inherits an adorable baby girl. Soon she ditches her wimpy beau, quits her job and moves with baby to a charming rustic house in Vermont. Now what's she going to do?

"Baby Boom" answers this question in a mostly agreeable, preposterous manner. Our resourceful heroine starts a gourmet baby appeasement business... and presto! It's a huge success. She may be lonely, but the town vet (Sam Shepard) turns out to be the Gary Cooper dream man no woman will ever meet on Madison Avenue. Soon, the New York firm she worked for wants to buy her baby food business — an offer she proudly rejects!

Clearly this film contains a sneaky retrograde message for career women: Having a baby is more meaningful than a high-powered job, the real men are in the country and the rat race isn't worth it. But Diane Keaton is definitely worth it, and she milks every joke and bit of cleverness for maximum effect. Grade: ★★★

The Sicilian (R) Gore Vidal has gone to court to claim authorship of this latest Michael Cimino ("The Deerhunter," "Heaven's Gate") epic. Why Vidal wants his name on this film about Salvatore Guigliano — the Sicilian Robin Hood who took on the church, mafia and the state to acquire independence for Sicily — is anybody's guess. The picture is lousy, with only Alex Thomson's beautiful cinematography to sustain it.

Based on a novel by Mario Puzo, the movie proves that director Cimino has no sense of dramatic structure or character development — and very little common sense. His movie is full of potentially striking tableaux, but he hasn't inhabited them. His lead actor, Christopher Lambert, is fatally inexpressive: Lambert strikes poses, like a model, and his sullen, slick manner grows quickly ludicrous.

In supporting roles, Terence Stamp and the sloe-eyed, feral John Turturro give some distinction to their performances. But the movie lurches along, offering only the most muddled and romanticized view of Guigliano — a man who was corrupted by his own obsessive devotion to idealism. Skip this movie, and keep a look out for Francisco Rosel's quasi-documentary 1981 film "Salvatore Guigliano" instead. Grade: ★★

New home video

Colonel Redl (not rated) Pacific Arts $79.95. Hungarian director Istvan Szabo made this study of a man corrupted by power — a follow-up to his similarly themed "Mephisto" — and featuring the same actor, the formidable Klaus Maria Brandauer.

Brandauer gives one of his fiercest and vaguely kinky performances as the Ukrainian peasant of possible Jewish background who climbs the ranks of the military in the last days of the pre-World War I Austro-Hungarian empire, sacrificing scruples along the way. Szabo and his production team keep us quietly entranced, and the film is a seductive blend of period evocation and corrosive irony. Grade: ★★★

People in the News

Rooney's show

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Who else but Mickey Rooney would appear in the world premiere of "Mickey Rooney in Mickey Rooney."

The actor will perform, present film clips from his movies, tell stories, do impersonations and answer questions during the show, premiering Nov. 22.

Rooney chose Omaha, said Karen Engelsman, executive director of the National Kidney Foundation of Nebraska. Rooney is national spokesman for the kidney foundation.

"Mickey Rooney likes the family, the small town rather than the big city," she said. "He likes the heartland, so what better place for a premiere than Omaha?"

Rooney starred in "Boys Town," the movie about the Omaha boys home.

Attracting visitors

BOSTON (AP) — Charles U. Daly, new director of the John F. Kennedy Library, said Friday he wants to expand exhibits and archives in an effort to attract more visitors, both old and new.

His appointment was announced Friday at a news conference at the library by Frank Burke, acting archivist of the United States.

"His academic experience combined with a broad knowledge of government and community af-airs will add a new and enriching dimension to the library's administration," said Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late president and president of the John F. Kennedy Library Foundation.

The library, one of eight presidential museums, has attracted more than 2.3 million visitors since its opening in 1979.

Daly takes over Jan. 1 from John Stewart, who has been acting director since Dan Fenn's retirement in January 1986. Daly was a staff assistant to President Kennedy for congressional liaison from 1961 to 1964.

Unhappy trails

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Roy Rogers and a posse of attorneys galloped into U.S. District Court to head off Happy Trails Department Stores at the pass.

Rogers and the attorneys claimed the stores were using the name without permission.

The saga ended peacefully Wednesday when Judge Earl H. Carroll approved a settlement under which Happy Trails will change the name of stores here and in Denver by March 1. The stores also will stop using the song "Happy Trails" which was written in 1951 by Rogers' wife, Dale Evans.

Happy Trails Department Stores, owned by Asco Inc., has operated five stores in the Phoenix area since 1976, selling clothing, tobacco and records.

Asco's attorney, Gregory J. Nelson, said a new name has not been picked.

Rogers and Evans sued the stores in May 1985, saying they had suffered damage to their reputations as "champions of decency, law and justice" because the song and phrase Happy Trails were used to help sell "drug paraphernalia."

Star for Meredith

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three hundred people warmly congratulated Burgess Meredith as his star was unveiled on the Walk of Fame.

Meredith, known as the villainous Penguin on the "Batman" television series and as the hard-nosed fight manager in the "Rocky" and "Rocky II" movies, became the 1,659th person to be honored with a star on the Hollywood walk.

The actor, 78, and his family were joined by actors Brenda Vaccaro and Carroll O'Connor, said Hollywood Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Anna Martinez.

Meredith has starred in movies and television and on Broadway and radio and has also worked as a writer, director and producer. His more than 80 movies include "Of Mice and Men," "Day of the Locust" and "Tom, Dick and Harry."

Bridge

A dramatic false-card
 By James Jacoby

If you've read the Jacoby column the last couple of days, you may think that doctors of medicine make good declarers. In today's vintage deal, Dr. Llewellyn Lord of Baltimore demonstrated his skill as a defender, employing an unusual coup.

With the queen of hearts lead, the defenders quickly took the first three tricks against South's four-spade contract. West then played a club. Declarer won the ace and entered dummy with a diamond to play a spade. When he led dummy's spade two, Dr. Lord played the king. Now if you were South, what would you think? Are you surprised that declarer did in fact believe that West held 10-8-5-3 of spades originally? And so he confidently played back a low spade to dummy's nine. Dr. Lord produced the 10 for the setting trick.

For what it's worth, another K-10 doubleton of trumps came up in a world championship some 40 years later, with declarer in a seven-club contract. Since the A-Q doubleton of clubs was in the dummy and the K-10 contract made. But if the defender had not despaired when dummy came down and had instead remembered the play made by Dr. Lord, there might well have been a different winning team.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Is there a way to save gas?

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

My friend Mike drives a big comfy Jeep Grand Wagoneer with all the trimmings. He loves the thing, though he's not too crazy about its dissolute way with gasoline. Around town it guzzles a gallon every 10 miles, while on the highway it drinks only slightly less.

So it's understandable that Mike would notice a newspaper ad for a wondrous device that dramatically boosts fuel economy. The ad proclaims, "The government awarded the National FuelSaver Corp. $22,000 for developing a simple automotive accessory that increases gas mileage by 22 percent."

The ad goes on to say the device raises the octane level of gas and extends engine life. It also alludes to "independent tests" that confirm these claims.

Mike called the telephone number in the ad and a friendly Texan explained that the device, named the Platinum GasSaver, injects a liquid containing platinum into the engine's combustion chambers. The noble metal acts as a catalyst, allowing more efficient burning of the gasoline.

That sounded reasonable to Mike.
But the GasSaver's $89 price (not mentioned in the ad), which included an 18,000-mile supply of the liquid, gave him pause before he whipped out his charge card. He asked me for my

I contacted Merrill Korth, the fellow in charge of testing such devices for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. It seems inventing gas-saving gizmos is something of a national pastime. Unfortunately, it also seems the vast majority are about as useful as square tires.

"We've tested over 100 devices and additives," said Korth. "Six showed minor fuel-saving improvements, but not of significant benefit to consumers. Four others showed improvements, but they also increased air pollutants to illegal levels."

As for the GasSaver, Korth said, "we have no information that it improves fuel economy because we haven't tested it. On a technical basis, we can't understand how you can get a significant number of platinum molecules into the combustion process with the device."

He added that the EPA is willing to test the GasSaver if the company voluntarily cooperates. "If the device works, why do they hesitate to go through with the EPA testing program?" Korth wondered.

In fact, in their advertising the manufacturers claim the GasSaver's process "meets EPA and California standards." However, only California has examined the GasSaver, and then only for its effect on exhaust emissions — not for its gas-saving benefits.

Anna Lee of California's Air Resources Board told me the GasSaver is approved for use only on 1983 or older vehicles. If Mike, a California resident, were to install it on his 1987
Jeep, it would be illegal.

The U.S. Postal Service was so dubious about the National FuelSaver Corp.'s claims about the device that it sued the company for mail fraud. The kicker is, the post-office guys lost.
They failed to prove that the GasSaver didn't work. That's not to say National FuelSaver proved that it did work, though the district court judge was favorably impressed with some of the company's tests.

However, according to Minnesota's Better Business Bureau, the $22,000 government award mentioned in National FuelSaver's ads was actually paid by the Postal Service to reimburse the company's legal fees in connection with the lawsuit, not as "development" funds.

A September report by the BBB states, "The BBB has requested either proof or discontinuance of the company's advertised product-performance claims. The company provided some information. However, follow-up correspondence to the company remains unanswered."

So there it is: The Platinum Gas-Saver may or may not work. Meanwhile, the company continues to sell the device, and says it has already

CONSUMER REPORTS

What's new in econo-cars

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

The new Volkswagen Fox and Subaru Justy DL are designed as low-priced little runabouts that offer basic transportation. Along with a number of other little cars such as the Hyundai Excel, the Japanese-made Chevrolet Sprint and the Ford Festiva (made in Korea), they sell for less than $8,000. They are targeted for the huge American market dominated by Ford before World War II, by the VW
Beetle in the '50s and by Honda and Toyota in the '70s.

The Fox and Justy DL were both tested by Consumer Reports' auto engineers.

The two-door Fox tested comes with the same relatively big 1.8-liter fuel-injected four-cylinder engine in the VW Golf and Jetta. A four-speed manual transmission, power brakes, rear-window defroster, tinted glass, remote-control outside mirror and interval windshield wipers are standard equipment, too.

dio with cassette player brought the price to $6,913, including destination charge.

The engine ran flawlessly without the hitches common to carbureted engines. Acceleration was strong enough. Fuel economy, at about 32 miles per gallon overall, was respectable.

On the open road, the Fox's steering was steady and accurate. But in low-speed turns and when parking, the steering felt slow and heavy — manageable, but a chore.

In accident-avoidance tests, the Fox responded reliably, but its response could have been more crisp.
The car's braking was nearly ideal, although stopping distance wasn't as short as that of the other tested cars.

The Fox's ride and front seating were adequate. Rear seating was possible only for two small occupants.
The seat design thwarted all efforts to find a comfortable position.

Unlike previous Volkswagen models, which were fully and properly assembled, the new Fox was betrayed by sloppy manufacturing. Until its reliability is established, this Fox must be viewed as a people's car with good potential.

Everything about the Justy DL — the new small, two-door hatchback from Subaru — is less. At $5,400, it's one of the cheapest cars around, and at about 1,650 pounds, it's one of the lightest. It comes with a 1.2-liter three-cylinder engine rather than the four-cylinder more common in cars of this type.

Standard equipment on the Justy
DL tested includes a five-speed man-

stalled right outside mirror boosted the price to $6,190, including destination charge. An important piece of safety equipment — a rear-window defroster — is not available in the base model.

The small, lightweight engine started reliably, but hesitated and sagged badly until fully warm. Acceleration was peppy. Fuel economy was frugal.
You can expect about 38 mpg overall.

The Justy's handling in routine driving was unusually sloppy and imprecise for a small car. In abrupt avoidance maneuvers, the car's handling was sluggish and somewhat unpredictable. Braking was flawless.

The car's ride and seating were below par — even for a small, bare-bones car. And rear seating was no place for adults. In addition, the car's bumpers didn't hold up in the auto engineers' bumper-bashing tests. Repairs are estimated to cost about $400.

The Justy DL is a new model. But if its reliability matches other Subarus, the Justy should be much better than

Gasoline Not Light

We fill our tanks with gasoline by the gallon, not by pounds, but it is interesting to note how much weight we add when we load our tanks with fuel.

A gallon of gasoline weighs 6.042 pounds, more than two pounds per gallon less than water. Filling up with 10 gallons of gasoline adds about 60 pounds to the traveling weight of the car; 15 gallons weighs more than 90 pounds; and 20 gallons of gas checks in at more than 120 pounds.

Cash ousted in Paris play by Leconte

By Salvatore Zanca
The Associated Press

PARIS — France's Henri Leconte ousted Wimbledon champion Pat Cash of Australia 6-4, 6-7 (9-11), 6-3 Friday in the quarterfinals of the $840,000 Paris Open, leaving the tournament without any of its top four seeds entering the semifinals.

Cash, the second seed, followed top-seeded Czechoslovak Miloslav Mecir, France's Yannick Noah, seeded third, and Ecuador's Andres Gomez, No. 4, to the sidelines. Noah defaulted due to an injury Friday, while Mecir and Gomez were eliminated earlier in the week.

Leconte and Cash battled for more than three hours. Leconte served for the match at 5-4 in the second set but Cash, with three superb backhands, broke serve to even the match and eventually forced the tiebreaker.

Leconte had three match points in the tiebreak, but Cash rallied each time. Leconte had a chance on his own serve, leading 9-8, but Cash's backhand that hit the line tied the score 9-9.

Cash then got to his second set point with a backhand lob and fired a service winner to even it at one set apiece.

"I was a little disappointed after losing the second set," Leconte said. "But in the third set I changed my tactics and played back and got confident again. I felt good and played my best tennis."

In the third set, Leconte held serve, the two exchanged service breaks and Leconte won the fourth game on Cash's service to go up 3-1.

The two exchanged games until, serving at 5-3, Leconte rallied from 0-40 by forcing two errors, evening the game with a service winner and finally winning as Cash netted an approach shot and pushed a service return long.

"It's been a long time since I had a victory like this. I've had a lot of injuries," said Leconte, who was ranked in the Top 10, but has fallen to 32nd in the world. "I'm very pleased it was in Paris since I lost in the first round at Roland Garros."

In other quarterfinals, Tim Mayotte of the United States, seeded No. 5, whipped Amos Mansdorf of Israel, 6-4, 6-2 to earn a berth against Leconte in Saturday's semifinals, and in an all-American match, Brad Gilbert defeated Kevin Curren 7-5, 6-4.

Gilbert held off Curren's big serve when he had to and broke him in the 11th game of the first set. In the second set, Gilbert had a golden opportunity slip away early when he was ahead, 40-0, in the third game on Curren's serve but Curren evened the score at 2-2. "I was close to jumping on him but I let him get away," Gilbert said.

However Gilbert, ranked 14th in the world, broke Curren in the ninth game and closed out the match in the following game on his third match point.

"I've been serving good all tournament and got a high percentage of points on my serve," said Gilbert. "I also volleyed well and came in more than he expected me to."

Gilbert meets Michiel Schapers of the Netherlands in the semifinals. Schapers advanced when Noah had to default due to a stomach muscle. Noah practiced early in the afternoon but decided to heed the advice of the physiotherapist and rest.

Mayotte had an easy time against Mansdorf, who had just won one tournament and finished second in another and moved up to 21st in the world.

"I played a pretty good game," Mayotte said. "I was pretty strong and I played an attacking game."

Mayotte, ranked 15th in the world, was in control from the start, breaking Mansdorf's service in the first and third games of the match on his way to a 4-0 lead.

The second set was just a continuation of the first, with Mayotte driving to a 5-1 advantage and coasting from there.

The tournament, which offers a $140,000 first prize, runs through Sunday.

Ivan Lendl says that John McEnroe, unless he improves on his recent performances, should think seriously of getting out of tennis.

Lendl says McEnroe should quit the game

By The Associated Press

ANTWERP, Belgium — Top-ranked tennis player Ivan Lendl says his long-time rival, John McEnroe, should quit the sport unless he can improve on his recent performances.

McEnroe has failed to win a tournament on the Grand Prix circuit in more than a year and Lendl says that the American is in danger of tarnishing his image as an all-time great with below-par performances.

"If he is going to keep on and not improve the level of the game he is producing right now it would be better if he retires quickly because he is really hurting his image in terms of his tennis," Lendl said. "I think he will always be remembered for two things, his genius and his behavior. What will be more in the front of the memory is hard to tell."

"If he retires quickly I think he will be remembered for his genius." McEnroe, who was ranked No. 1 in the world for four years until he was replaced by Lendl in 1985, is currently serving a two-month suspension. At last week's European Community Championships — which is not part of the official circuit — McEnroe talked of plans to play for a further two years.

But Lendl, who won the tournament by beating Czechoslovak Miloslav Mecir in Sunday's final, said McEnroe's career may end much sooner. "He may be talking about two years but I would not be surprised if it was four to six months. I really wouldn't," Lendl said in an interview after the tournament.

Lendl also said that McEnroe's attempt at a comeback from a seven-month sabbatical last year was being made even more difficult by his family life. McEnroe and his wife, Tatum, recently became parents for the second time.

Lendl, a 27-year-old Czechoslovak who lives in Greenwich, Conn., said he would not fall into the same predicament. He has made a pact with his long-time girlfriend, Samantha Franke, not to have children while he still tops the world rankings.

"Kids are out for us while I am at the top but marriage isn't," he said. "I think I could still be No. 1 if I get married but I would hate to be in McEnroe's position. I think the moment you have kids it can't work because either you cheat your tennis or you cheat your kids."

With McEnroe and Jimmy Connors apparently fading, the biggest challenge to Lendl's position seems certain to come from Europe. But Lendl said American challengers may not be far away.

"I think within five years the United States will have a player in the top three again, and then there will be a big boom," he said. "The United States Tennis Association is starting a program and once they put their mind to it I am sure the U.S. will be able to dominate again."

Robinson signs lucrative pact with the Spurs

By David Sedeno
The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Center David Robinson, the top pick in the 1987 NBA draft, signed a contract with the San Antonio Spurs Friday that reportedly will pay him at least $24 million over eight years.

The 7-foot-1 Robinson, who was named College Basketball Player of the Year as a senior at the Naval Academy, said he wants to fulfill his two-year service commitment before starting his pro career.

Robinson, his agent, Lee Fentress, and Spurs Chairman Angelo Drossos declined to discuss the details of the contract.

Team spokesman Wayne Witt said no details would be announced. Published reports placed the contract's value at amounts ranging from $24 million-$30 million.

"I have one of the best contracts. As far as pay goes, I guess there might be some people around with more total money or something like that, but I'm happy with the contract," Robinson said.

Robinson said money was not the only incentive to join the Spurs, who had their worst season last year at 24-58.

"There is no amount of money I would have signed for if I didn't think this team had a commitment to becoming better and to becoming a successful franchise," Robinson said during a news conference attended by about 700 fans. "Bringing me in I feel like wouldn't be enough to make a successful franchise, but there are some talented young players who are going to get a lot of experience in the next few years."

"I feel I can come in here and make my impact and we will be successful," he said.

Drossos, who had negotiated with Fentress and Robinson for 10 days, said Robinson would be among the highest paid athletes.

He said Robinson could have an impact on the team and fans as early as this season, another rebuilding year.

"I think that this team could surprise a lot of people and the players may be that just more determined to show that 'we can do it on our own,'" Drossos said.

At the news conference, Robinson told the fans that he and his parents, Ambrose and Freda Robinson, had appreciated their hospitality during their first visit to the city in September.

"I'm the one who had to live with this decision and I sat down and carefully thought it out and I decided this was the place where I wanted to be," Robinson said.

Robinson said he thought about his chances of signing with high-profile team, like the Los Angeles Lakers, but said the Spurs reminded me of his underdog Navy team.

"This is a similar situation and we have a commitment to becoming what we can be and I feel a big part of taking us where we want to be," Robinson said.

Robinson set 33 school records at Navy, including 2,669 career points, 1,314 rebounds and 816 blocked shots. He had kept silent his plans about joining the NBA team for six months and said he will not want to get out of his Navy commitment.

"I have a commitment now and it's a good situation now for me and I enjoy it," Robinson. "When it comes to play ball, I'll be ready."

Robinson also said he would be like to play in the 1988 Olympics, but is awaiting word from the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"That may be the time I get next chance to play organized ball and that's something I'm looking forward to," Robinson said.

He was given standing ovation after receiving Spurs jersey, which had his last name and No. 50 on it.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, who had done his part in trying to woo Robinson to the city, also congratulated Robinson on his decision.

"We have a growing city and we have a superstar for our city," Cisneros said.

NFL strike may never end for some parties

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

The strike is over. It ended Oct. 15. For some, it may never be over.

The NFL players who crossed teammates' picket lines have met with varying reactions since their comrades returned. In New Orleans, quarterback Bobby Hebert threatened never to throw another pass to strike-breaker Eric Martin.

Mark Gastineau, who had the strikers spit at him and pounded on his car, gets icy stares from a few of the New York Jets.

The fans haven't always been enamored with the performances of the regulars who spent nearly a month on strike. In Washington, the Redskins were greeted with loud, frequent boos as they stumbled to a sloppy victory over the Jets.

The St. Louis fans, all 24,896 of them, chanted derogatorily in a loss to Philadelphia, telling owner Bill Bidwell he can make good on his threat to leave and they won't miss him.

Not that everyone who crossed the line has struggled.

San Francisco's Joe Montana, Roger Craig and Dwight Clark performed well before, during and after the strike.

Ed "Too Tall" Jones had one of the best games of his 13-year career in Dallas' upset of the New York Giants last Monday. John Stallworth and Steve Largent, two of the NFL's all-time best receivers, have been as dangerous as always.

But the lingering bitterness caused by the strike has had an impact on teams which didn't stay united.

Perhaps the most visible problems have been in New York and Los Angeles. The Jets and Raiders were the only 2-0 teams in the AFC before the strike. Both are 0-2 since the regulars returned.

Gastineau was the most visible of the 10 Jets who broke with the strike. He never actually went out, citing loyalty to team owner Leon Hess. He had the run-in with the picketers as he drove into the Jets' training camp.

Worst of all for the Jets, Gastineau has not produced on the field. He has only one sack, against Miami in a replacement game, and has gone through some games without making any tackles.

"I feel I'm getting better," Gastineau said. "But the team isn't winning, so it doesn't mean much."

"What a team is all about is going out and complementing each other. We have to let whatever happened in the past be forgotten when we get on that field."

"If I'm thinking about it or somebody else is thinking about it, it will take away from him doing his job. That lets the team down."

The Jets have been down for two weeks partially because the players haven't overcome their strike hangover. Even though every defensive lineman except injured Tom Baldwin crossed the picket line, they have had virtually no pass rush. The offensive line, from which regulars Joe Fields and Ted Banker defected during the walkout, has allowed 14 sacks in two post-strike games.

"Things will never be the same," Al Toon admitted. "People have a different frame of mind. Hopefully, it will be on football. But you can't forget what happened. A lot of people are bitter and will be for a long time."

Bears look to shore up their vaunted defense

By The Associated Press

Can those preppies from Chicago stop the Green Bay Packers Sunday? The Bears will go into Green Bay with a 6-1 record, but while they have won both games since the NFL strike ended, their vaunted defense has yielded 27 and 28 points.

"People have been scoring on us," complains Coach Mike Ditka. "It looks like St. Aloysius High School. They just go up and down the field on us."

The Bears rallied behind Jim McMahon to win both those games. The quarterback has been suffering from a leg injury but has recovered and is likely to start.

Randy Wright will start at quarterback for the Packers. With Green Bay trailing Tampa Bay 20-0 last Sunday, Wright entered the game in the third quarter and completed 13 of 19 passes for 161 yards and one touchdown, but the Pack fell short 23-17.

The San Francisco 49ers, 6-1, will be at home against Houston, 5-2. The other two 6-1 clubs will be on the road — the Washington Redskins at the Philadelphia Eagles, 3-4, and the San Diego Chargers at the Indianapolis Colts, 4-3.

Other Sunday games have the Pittsburgh Steelers at the Kansas City Chiefs, Tampa Bay Buccaneers at St. Louis Cardinals, Miami Dolphins at Cincinnati Bengals, Atlanta Falcons at Cleveland Browns, Denver Broncos at Buffalo Bills, Los Angeles Raiders at Minnesota Vikings, New Orleans Saints at Los Angeles Rams, Dallas Cowboys at Detroit Lions and the New England Patriots at the New York Giants.

The Seattle Seahawks will be at the New York Jets Monday night.

Oilers at 49ers: The Oilers have won four of their last five games and are off to their best start since 1980. Their three road victories this season equal their total number of wins away from home in the five previous seasons. But 49ers quarterback Joe Montana could make it a rocky road for Houston.

Redskins at Eagles: The Redskins will try for a fifth straight win against a National Conference East rival, Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham, who hit for the winning TD pass against St. Louis with 40 seconds left, will try to sour the Redskins' successful diet.

NFL Roundup

Chargers at Colts: Winners of six straight games and off to their best start since 1961, the Chargers will count on the arm of Dan Fouts and try to stop Eric Dickerson, who has had another week to learn the Colts' offense. Fouts has completed 83 of 134 passes for 1,630 yards and six touchdowns and thrown five interceptions. Dickerson, acquired in a trade with Rams last Saturday, rushed 10 times for 38 yards and caught a pass for 28 more in the Colts' 19-14 win over the Jets last Sunday.

Steelers at Chiefs: If the Steelers can force the Chiefs to use Todd Blackledge at quarterback in place of Bill Kenney, they might be able to figure out Kansas City more easily. Blackledge's father, Ron, is a Steelers assistant.

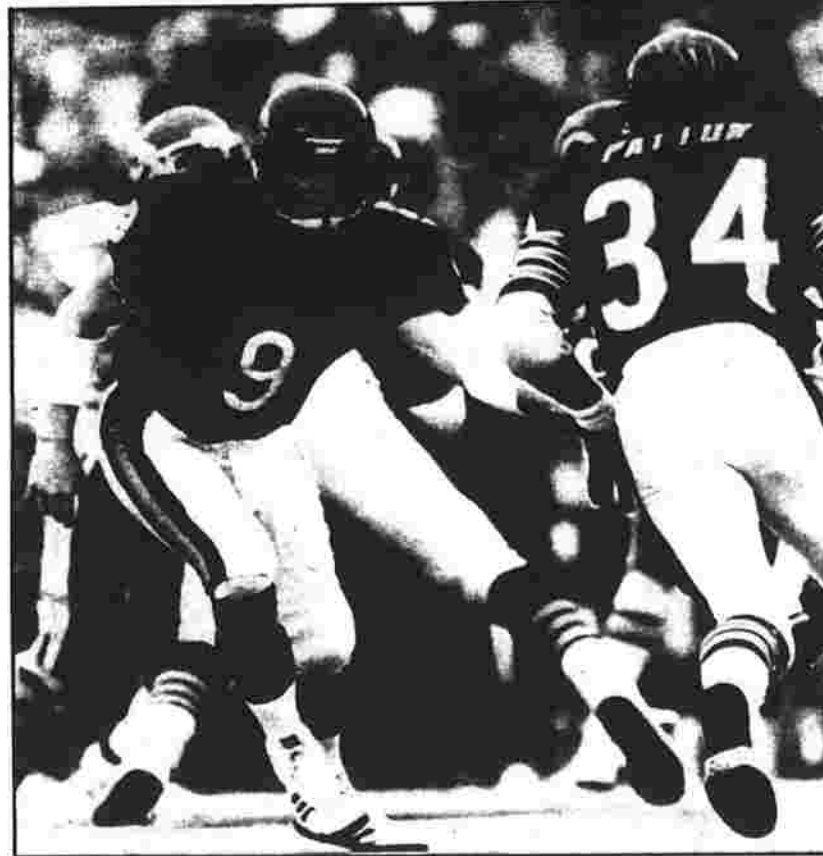

Buccaneers at Cardinals: The Buccaneers can count on the crowd not getting into the game at St. Louis. The question is whether the Cardinals are going to move because of poor fan support or whether the fans are staying home because the Cardinals are going to move or because they're inept.

Dolphins at Bengals: Bombs away. The Dolphins' Dan Marino has hit for 91 of 136 passes for 1,054 yards and 14 touchdowns, with only four interceptions, and is the NFL's top ranked passer. Boomer Esiason of the Bengals is merely third with 77 of 128 for 1,106 yards and seven touchdowns, with five interceptions.

Falcons at Browns: The Browns' three losses have been by a total of 15 points. The Falcons' defense leads the American Conference with an average yield of 259.7 yards and is first against the pass (152.9) and third against the rush (106.9).

Broncos at Bills: The Broncos recorded their first shutout since 1964 with a 34-0 win over Detroit last week. Bills quarterback Jim Kelly is tough to shut out.

Raiders at Vikings: The Raiders are seeking their 25th regular-season win in their initial visit to the Metrodome, where the Vikings are not nearly as tough as the baseball Twins.

Chicago's Jim McMahon (9) hands off to Walter Payton during their game against the Chiefs. McMahon has guided the Bears to two victories since his return to the lineup.

Saints at Rams: The Saints are hoping history repeats itself. They swept both games against the Rams in 1981. In their first meeting this season, the Saints won 37-10 Oct. 4 at New Orleans.

Cowboys at Lions: The Cowboys could feel at home on the range in the Silverdome at Pontiac, Mich., where the Lions have lost a club-record eight straight games.

Patriots at Giants: The game at East Rutherford, N.J., will be the first of eight straight Sunday night prime-time games on ESPN. Injuries have sidelined the first-string quarterbacks for both teams. Jeff Rutledge fills in for Phil Simms on the reeling Super Bowl champion Patriots, 1-6, and Steve Grogan replaces Tony Eason.

Seahawks at Jets (Monday Night): Seattle brings in a three-game winning streak, but quarterback Dave Krieg, and bitter memories of last year's 38-7 whipping by the Jets. Johnny Hector will replace demoted Freeman McNeil as the Jets' starting running back.

Lot at stake as Auburn, Florida State collide

By Herschel Nissenon
The Associated Press

There will be at least one less challenger for college football's national championship this weekend.

Neither fourth-ranked Florida State, 7-1, nor No. 6 Auburn, 7-0-1, can afford anything but a victory and Saturday's loser will drop out of the title chase.

"For Florida State to go to a big bowl and have a chance at the national championship, we must win this game," Coach Bobby Bowden says. "Now Auburn can still get in a big bowl by winning their conference, but it is also a mighty big one for them."

Top-rated Oklahoma and fifth-ranked LSU also face members of the Associated Press Top Twenty — Oklahoma entertaining No. 12 Oklahoma State and LSU playing host at night to Alabama, which is tied for 13th with South Carolina. A fourth pairing of Top Twenty teams finds Georgia, tied for 16th with Clemson, meeting No. 17 Florida in their annual border war in Jacksonville's Gator Bowl.

Elsewhere, second-ranked Nebraska is at home against Iowa State, No. 3 Miami of Florida entertains Miami of Ohio under the lights in what has been dubbed the Confusion Bowl, No. 7 UCLA is at Oregon State, No. 8 Syracuse at Navy, Boston College at No. 9 Notre Dame and Clemson at North Carolina.

In the Second Ten, Purdue visits No. 15 Michigan State, No. 16 Penn State plays Maryland in Baltimore, Illinois is at No. 18 Indiana and Louisville at No. 19

NCAA Football

Tennessee, South Carolina and No. 20 Texas A&M are not scheduled.

How good is Oklahoma? The Sooners are 29-point favorites over the nation's No. 12 team and, as Auburn Coach Pat Dye puts it, "Those people that set the line don't do it with their heart, they do it based on knowledge."

Oklahoma leads the nation in scoring, total offense, rushing, scoring defense and total defense, but the Sooners are only second in passing defense and sixth in rushing defense and lost to Oklahoma State in 1976 so Coach Barry Switzer has to be concerned.

"This has always been a backyard brawl, and I expect the same this week," he says. "Oklahoma State has some truly outstanding skill people."

(Quarterback) Mike Gundy concerns me with his ability to scramble and make a good play out of a bad one. We all know the abilities of (tailback) Thurman Thomas and (wide receiver) Hart Lee Dykes and Barry Sanders has added a new dimension to their kick-return team. They have had success and know what kind of season it will be if they can beat us. I expect the toughest test of the year."

Thus far, Oklahoma's toughest "test" was a 24-6 victory over Colorado.

"We should score," says OSU's Gundy, who directs a not-too-shabby offense that ranks 14th nationally at 419 yards a game — to Oklahoma's 531.6. "If we don't, we're going to get blown out. If our defense plays great, they're still going to score some points, so we've got to score."

Oklahoma leads the series 63-12-6, including 10 in a row and two straight shutouts.

With 145 victories, Switzer and Nebraska's Tom Osborne are tied with former Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson as the winningest coaches in Big Eight history.

"A bunch of us made it all happen, a lot of good coaches and players through the years," Switzer says. "It's something we thought a couple of years ago would be attainable, but we've never seen it as a milestone for us. If this was our last year, it might be. But hopefully I can look back eight years from now and know we kept this string going."

Meanwhile, Nebraska is a 48-point favorite over Iowa State and there isn't even a line on the Miami-Miami game.

Auburn, however, is an underdog at home — by 3½ points — for the first time since a 1982 visit by No. 1-ranked Georgia and Dye rates the Seminoles two touchdowns better than Miami despite a 28-25 loss to the Hurricanes.

"Florida State is a great football team," he says.

Bird, Roberts lead Celtics to opening victory

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird scored 28 points, Fred Roberts 20 and Danny Ainge 19 as the "new look" Boston Celtics opened their 42nd NBA season with a 125-108 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

With reserves playing a key role, the Celtics broke open a close game after Milwaukee closed to within two points with less than four minutes left in the third period. Boston then pulled away to its ninth consecutive opening-game victory at Boston Garden.

Bird, who also had 15 rebounds and eight assists, sparked the Celtics, but he had plenty of help from Roberts, who is filling in for the injured Kevin McHale, as Boston took a 65-60 halftime lead.

The Celtics widened the advantage to eight with a 9-2 run midway through the third quarter, but Milwaukee rallied to close to within 84-82.

Conner Henry, who earned a job in the final days of training, then hit from the top of the key and Bird followed with a 3-pointer. Bird followed that by grabbing a rebound and tossing Henry a long pass for another easy basket.

For the first time since 1974, Boston opened a season with three rookies — Brad Lohaus, Reggie Lewis and Mark Acres — and they combined for 16 points.

The Celtics spotted Milwaukee a brief early lead, then took command for their 96th victory in their last 100 home starts, including playoff losses to the Bucks and the champion Los Angeles Lakers last spring.

The Bucks were led by Terry Cummings with 26 points, Randy Breuer with 23 and Jack Sikma with 18.

76ers 106, Pacers 95

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley scored 29 points as the Philadelphia 76ers opened their 25th NBA season with a 108-95 victory over the Indiana Pacers Friday night.

Roy Hinson added 19 points and 12 rebounds for Philadelphia, which for the first time since 1976 began a season without Julius Erving on its roster.

The Sixers never trailed in the game and took their biggest lead, 89-72, on a jump shot by Tim McCormick with 9:45 left in the game.

McCormick added 17 points and David Wingate added 15 for the 76ers, while Chuck Person had 21 points and Wayman Tisdale 16 for Indiana.

Hawks 114, Bullets 97

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 34 points as the Atlanta Hawks overcame a sluggish third quarter to down the Washington Bullets

NBA Roundup

114-97 in the NBA season opener for both teams Friday night.

Atlanta built a 73-45 halftime lead, which gave the Hawks a cushion to get through the third quarter, when the Bullets shaved the margin to 82-72.

Randy Wittman added 14 points for Atlanta and Glenn "Doc" Rivers had 13.

Malone led the Bullets with 31 points and Terry Catledge added 12.

Pistons 110, Knicks 99

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Isiah Thomas scored 21 points Friday night to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 110-99, season-opening victory over New York, spilling the NBA debut of Knicks Coach Rick Pitino.

Bill Laimbeer made two free throws and John Salley and Rick Mahorn scored field goals as the Pistons stretched a 95-94 lead to 102-96 with 1:48 left in the game.

Two free throws by Thomas followed by a layup by Laimbeer gave the Pistons a 106-97 lead with 1:10 to play.

Salley finished with 19 points for Detroit. Vinnie Johnson scored 18 and Laimbeer had 15, 13, of them in the second half.

Gerald Wilkins led the Knicks with 25 points and Pat Cummings added 17.

With starters Thomas and Laimbeer on the bench, Joe Dumars scored five points to lead the Pistons on an 11-4 surge that gave them an 85-80 lead in the opening two minutes of the fourth quarter.

Johnson scored five points to lead Detroit on a 13-4 burst in the final 2:44 of the third quarter, but New York carried a 76-75 lead into the final period.

Five different Knicks made field goals in a 10-3 run that gave New York a 66-57 lead with 6:41 left in the third quarter.

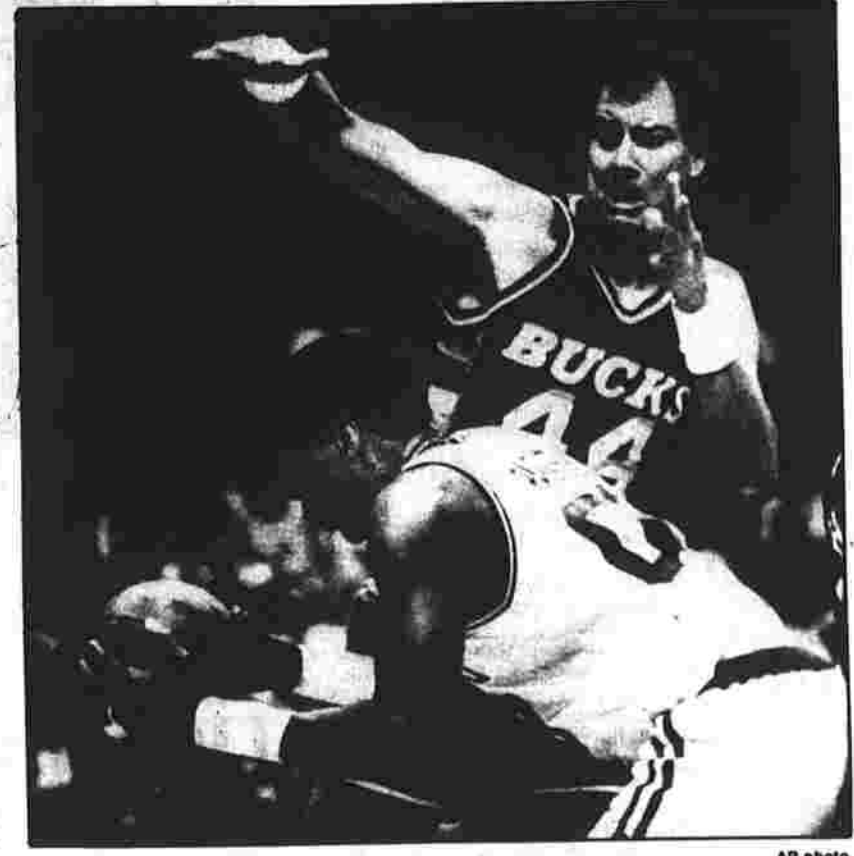

The Knicks, trailing by eight points on three occasions in first quarter, harassed the Pistons with a three-quarter-court trap defense and outscored Detroit 15-3 to take a 30-26 lead with 1:24 gone in the second quarter.

Cummings scored five points and Wilkins added four to lead the Knicks' rally.

New York eventually built a 38-29 lead before settling for a 49-47 halftime edge.

Cavaliers 114, Nets 108

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Ron Harper scored 26 points and Brad Daugherty started a crucial fourth-quarter spurt with three-point play Milwaukee's Paul Mokeski gets an arm over Boston's Robert Parish to block his shot during first-quarter action of their NBA opener Friday night at Boston Garden. The Celtics opened with a 125-108 victory.

Friday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers opened the NBA season with a 114-108 victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Daugherty, who finished with 17 points, broke a 91-91 tie with a 10-foot jumper and free throw, igniting a 10-2 run.

Harper followed with a steal and slam dunk to make it 98-91, and Daugherty hit a jump hook from the baseline for a seven-point Cleveland lead.

After Pearl Washington narrowed the margin to 98-93 with a steal and layup, Dell Curry capped the spurt by hitting a jumper from the top of the key and one of two foul shots with 7:45 to play.

New Jersey, which struggled to a 24-58 record last season, twice closed to within four points in the closing minutes. But Harper hit a 3-point goal and banked in a 10-footer with 1:28 to play to make it 111-105.

Rockets 106, Spurs 102

HOUSTON (AP) — World B. Free hit four straight third-quarter baskets and Rodney McCray came off the bench with one day's practice to score 23 points, rallying the Houston Rockets to a 106-102 NBA victory over San Antonio Friday night.

A crowd of 16,611, the largest Rockets crowd in history, watched Houston overcome a 63-59 halftime deficit to win its fifth straight season opener.

Houston's Akeem Olajuwon scored 22 points, while Johnny Dawkins scored 21 points and Alvin Robertson added 20 for the Spurs.

Three Twins file for free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Gaetti, the Most Valuable Player in the American League playoffs, was among 11 players, including three members of the World Series champion Minnesota Twins, who filed for free agency Friday.

The other Twins filing for free agency were catcher Tim Laudner and relief pitcher George Frazier.

Also filing were pitcher Bryn Smith and utilityman Dave Engle of Montreal; outfielders Steve Henderson and Dwayne Murphy of Oakland; pitcher Dave LaPointe of the Chicago White Sox; catcher Mike Heath of Detroit; outfielder Rick Manning of Milwaukee and pitcher Charlie Leibrandt of Kansas City.

Friday's additions bring the number of players who have filed for free agency to 58. Players have until Nov. 9 to file.

WORCESTER, Mass. — Gordie Lockbaum is Holy Cross' cover boy, who plays both offense and defense, returns kicks and makes the dean's list.

He is, not, however, a one-man team. There is a lot more to the 8-4 Crusaders, who have dominated their Division I-AA rivals.

"Weaknesses? They don't have any," said Massachusetts Coach Jim Reid, whose Minutemen were trounced 54-10.

Holy Cross' potent offense revolves around Jeff Wiley, the top-ranked quarterback in the division.

Going into Saturday's game with Harvard, Wiley has thrown for 2,723 yards and 38 touchdowns. Last weekend against Massachusetts he completed 27 of 39 passes for 438 yards and four touchdowns before leaving the lopsided contest with 12:38 to go.

"The credit should go to the offensive line," Wiley said. "They've just done an unbelievable job, and the receivers have made me look good by turning an average play into a big play."

Star of the defense, which has held opposition to an average of 200 yards per game, is linebacker Bob McGovern, the latest of three McGovern brothers to play for the Crusaders. McGovern has 51 tackles and 53 assists in eight games.

Lockbaum has 16 tackles and two sacks, but offense is where his best numbers are.

Lockbaum is second in Division I-AA in scoring with 96 points and fifth in all-purpose running with 1,375 yards. He has rushed for 275 yards from the tailback slot, added 781 yards receiving, 128 yards returning punts and 191 returning kickoffs.

Evert rallies for net win

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Top-seeded Chris Evert dropped the first set Friday night but rallied to defeat Barbara Potter in the quarterfinals of the $250,000 Virginia Slims of New England tennis championships at the Centrum.

Evert, who has downed Potter in five earlier meetings, advanced to Saturday's semifinals, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Evert won 14 straight points on her own serve at one stage of the 102-minute match and captured eight of the last nine points.

Her victory meant the four top-seeded entries all earned berths in the semifinals.

Potter, of Woodbury, Conn., threw a flurry of service aces at the 32-year-old star in the early stages but had trouble getting her first serve in during the second set and was broken twice in the decisive third set.

In the semifinals, Evert will meet third-seeded Gabriela Sabatini, who took a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Lori McNeil.

Earlier Friday, second-seeded Pam Shriver withstood two minor rallies by Bettina Bunge before advancing, 6-4, 6-4.

Shriver won 15 straight points to take charge in the second set but failed to get a service break in the ninth game to prolong the match.

On Saturday, she will meet number-four seed Helena Sukova, who ousted unseeded Eva Pfaff of Germany, 6-2, 6-1.

The 6-foot Shriver joked that she is looking forward to playing somebody taller than she is. Sukova stands 6-foot-2.

Edberg sets up all-Swedish field

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Top-seeded Stefan Edberg overcame a slight hand injury to defeat Peter Lundgren 6-1, 7-6 (7-4) Friday and set up an all-Swedish field for the semifinals of the $525,000 Stockholm Open Tennis Championships.

Edberg, ranked second in the world, slipped on the Plexipave court and injured his racket hand after being broken at love in the seventh game of the second set.

"It's a bit swollen and it feels stiff," Edberg said after his quarterfinal match at the Royal Tennis Hall. "But it didn't hurt when I was playing."

Tournament physician Bertil Stener said Edberg probably would be able to play Saturday. But Edberg said he would default if the injury gets worse overnight.

"I'm not taking any chances," Edberg said. "I might play a Wimbledon final with an injury, but I'm not going to gamble here. Hopefully, I'll be all right tomorrow."

Anders Jarryd, Edberg's doubles partner, knocked out Canadian qualifier Martin Laurendeau, the remaining non-Swedish player, 6-2, 6-4 in the last quarterfinal. He and Edberg will meet in one semifinal.

Earlier, Jonas B. Svensson and Magnus Gustafsson eliminated the two remaining Americans from the tournament.

Svensson, the No. 7 seed, easily stopped Jim Grabb 6-1, 6-3, while Gustafsson, who got into the main draw as a wild card, knocked out Matt Anger 6-2, 6-4.

Gustafsson, 20, was ranked 106th on the computer before the tournament, but moved up more than 50 spots by getting into the semis. His previous best finish in a Grand Prix event came last week, when he reached the second round at Vienna.

"This was my best match so far," said Gustafsson, who had earned only $17,000 before the Stockholm Open.

Edberg, the defending champion, played brilliant serve and volley tennis until he was broken midway through the second set.

Until that point, Edberg had only lost six points in six service games. He took the opening set in just 20 minutes, breaking Lundgren's serve three times.

Lundgren, who sometimes works out with former Swedish superstar Bjorn Borg in Stockholm, has had a successful fall campaign with wins over Wimbledon champion Pat Cash, U.S. Open winner Ivan Lendl and fellow Swede Mats Wilander.

UConn gains Big East final

STORRS — The Big East Conference soccer season will come down the way it started for two teams. Seton Hall University and the University of Connecticut engaged in a scrimmage on August 29 with the teams deadlocking at 0-0. They'll meet again Sunday at 12:30 p.m. at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium for the Big East championship as each advanced with semifinal wins Friday.

Seton Hall, No. 6 nationally, blanked Providence, 1-0, in one semifinal while the Huskies, No. 16 in the latest national poll, topped St. John's, 1-0, to gain their berth in the championship round.

Seton Hall is defending champion. Seton Hall goes to the final with a 13-3-3 mark while the Huskies are 13-5-3. Husky Coach Joe Morrone viewed Friday's win as a big one for his team. "It was a very important win for us because not only does it put us in the Big East championship game but because of overall won-lost record," he cited. UConn was denied an NCAA Tournament berth a year ago and Morrone does not want to see a recurrence.

Jan Hennessey had the only goal for Seton Hall in the opener at the 39:24 mark. The Pirates outshot Providence, 11-4.

Junior All-America Dan Donigan accounted for UConn's goal at the 4:30 mark. Kanto Lulaj passed it in the middle to Diego Borja and he slid a pass through the St. John's defense to Donigan to the right of the box. He blasted it in from 12 yards out. It was Donigan's 10th goal of the year, one more than he had as a sophomore.

Donigan was injured with 12 seconds left in regulation as he was leveled by St. John's goalie Walter Gartner. Donigan drove in goal and his shot went over Gartner's head. It was cleared off the line by a defender before Gartner leveled Donigan, who was forced from the game. Wayne Churyk's subsequent penalty kick was stopped by Gartner.

Donigan suffered a thigh bruise but is expected to play in Sunday's championship game. UConn outshot the Redmen, 16-10. Tom Foley had three saves in goal for Connecticut.

A tight finish was anticipated in the boys' race at the State Open High School Cross Country Meet Friday afternoon at Wickham Park in Manchester and that's exactly what transpired.

Staples High of Westport, the Class LL champs from a week ago, came way with the state championship with a total of 133 points, led by a stunning first-place finish by Tom Sheeran. Xavier High of Middletown edged out Manchester High for second place with 158 points compared to the Indians' 165. Xavier also beat Manchester by seven points at the LL Meet.

Xavier's J.T. Burke, the Class LL and defending Open champ, never got untracked and finished a disappointing sixth. Sheeran's winning time was 16:18 for the 3.1 mile course.

The third-place finish qualified Manchester for the New England meet next Saturday. Along with Staples, Xavier, and Manchester, Newtown High and Amity High of Woodbridge will represent Connecticut at the New England Meet meet which will also include teams from Vermont, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island.

"I'm disappointed for the kids," Indian Coach George Sutor said. "I think everyone ran a great race. We just came up a little bit short."

Manchester was led by senior Shaun Brophy, Junior Todd Liscomb and senior Dana Dieterle, who secured 2nd, 3rd, and 21st, respectively. Junior Craig Hempstead was the next Indian in 33rd while senior Mike Sears took 61st. Senior Sean Toland and Junior Rick Eaton finished 103rd and 126th, respectively.

Staples Coach Laddie Lawrence, who took home the school's first LL title last week, capped the season off with the victory his team has been aiming for since last year.

"From last year, we've been thinking about this

The story of the girls' race in the State Open High School Cross Country Championship on an extremely windy Friday afternoon at Wickham Park in Manchester belonged to 14-year-old East Catholic freshman Nancy Byrne and Manchester High senior Kim Jarvis.

Byrne ran a phenomenal race and placed third, only four seconds behind state champion Cindy Davis of Darien. Jarvis, who had placed 25th and 29th in her two previous Open appearances, garnered 10th place to earn All-State honors. The top 20 finishers were named All-State and the top 25 qualified for the New England Meet Saturday, Nov. 14 at Wickham.

Byrne, who was the top freshman finisher in the elite state field, became only the second ninth-grader in Eagle history to earn All-State honors. Teresa Kittredge took 19th place during her freshman year in 1980. Byrne's time was 14:48 for the 2.5 mile course while Davis was caught in 14:44. Jarvis finished in 15:02.

Jarvis became only the second girl in Manchester history to make the All-State team. Kate Hennessey placed 20th in the 1978 Open.

The East Catholic girls placed third with 202 points. St. Bernard's of Uncasville won the girls' race with 99 points followed by surprising Lyman Memorial High of Lebanon which accumulated 173 points. The third-place finish by the Eagles qualified the team for the New England Meet. The top five Connecticut teams advanced to the regional meet with the other qualifiers being Bethel High and Darien High.

Manchester placed 21st in a 21-team field with a total of 608 points. Early pace-setter and race-favorite Margaret Barbour of Cheshire High faded to 17th at the tape.

"I couldn't feel my face," Byrne said after the race, illuminating the weather factor. "It felt great," Byrne said. Byrne was in third place at the mile mark and dropped back to sixth after two miles. "I didn't want to go out fast," Byrne added.

When the girls emerged from the woods for the final third of the race, Byrne was in fourth and actually moved into second place with a quarter of a mile to go. Nicole Aparian of Conard High School in West Hartford just edged past Byrne at the wire for second.

"I'm really happy," Jarvis said. "I felt good. It was chilly," Jarvis who admittedly had a bad race in last week's

East's girls experienced some bad racing luck when senior Dawn McCauley, the Eagles No. 2 runner, fell at the start which, apparently, fazed the rest of the team.

"Overall, I'm pleased," East Coach Kathy Kittredge said. "Dawn fell and got up and she was in last place. Mentally, the rest of the girls got a shock."

Manchester Phil Blanchette felt his team would have difficulty at this high level of competition. "The competition in this race is unbelievable," Blanchette said. "I'm proud of her (Jarvis). She went out a little bit slower than last time. She has the highest Manchester finish (ever)."

Senior Julie Ray was second across the line for East in 45th place followed by juniors Noel Feehan and Sarah Thiery in 48th and 49th, respectively. Junior Betsy Dickinson was 57th. McCauley recovered to finish 64th, and junior Jen DeMarco was 136th.

Junior Merry Chadlewicz was the No. 2 girl for Manchester in 116th place with senior Mindy Forde 119th. Junior Jessica Nielson was 122nd, sophomore Diane Pappas 141st, junior Jessica Marshall 145th, and senior Jen Tucci 157th for the Indians. Manchester had wanted to beat neighboring rival Rockville High, which defeated the Indians by a mere three points in the LL meet. Rockville placed 15th with 489 points while Carolyn Verdon of Rockville, the LL individual champ, finished eighth.

Entering the Open, Byrne was seeded seventh based on her time in the MM meet. Byrne, whose parents both hail from Ireland, has worn an Irish claddagh ring for good luck since her first race of the year. Byrne didn't need any luck Friday.

"The team always comes first," Byrne said. Kittredge knows that Byrne's potential is unlimited.

"I'm very, very pleased," Kittredge said of Byrne's finish. "She has been consistent and has improved every race." Byrne's time Friday was 12 seconds faster than her third-place finish in the Class MM meet last Saturday.

"She's a very tough competitor, mentally as well as physically," Kittredge said. The state of Connecticut will hear much more from Byrne in the three years ahead of her.

race, Lawrence said. Steve Luba of Terryville High, Michael Evans of Amity High, Lou Bregou of Brookfield High and Bill Gill of St. Bernard's rounded out the individual top five placements.

"These kids are winners in every sense of the word," Sutor said. "I don't know if they can run any better. I'm very proud of them."

Evan Grayer, Staples' second man in 10th place, almost didn't run due to a problem which arose earlier in the week. Staples won the championship by taking first, 10th, 24th, 30th, and 60th. Manchester will get one more opportunity at its two Connecticut arch-rivals, Staples and Xavier, at the New England next Saturday at Wickham.

The third-place Indian finish matches Manchester's best Open placement ever. The 1977 and '79 teams, which both won LL titles, also took third in their respective Opens.

NHL Roundup

DETROIT (AP) — Brent Ashton scored the go-ahead goal midway through the second period and Joe Kocur added an insurance goal in the third, as the Detroit Red Wings beat the Hartford Whalers 3-1 Friday night.

Goalie Greg Stefan turned back 28 shots for the Red Wings, who broke a four-game NHL winless streak. Hartford, which had won five games and tied two since dropping the first five games of the season, fell to 5-6-2.

The Red Wings dominated play late in the second period and had several scoring chances, but managed just one goal. Right wing Bob Probert stole the puck in the corner near the Hartford net and hit Ashton with a centering pass in front of the crease.

The two teams traded power-play goals in the opening period, which ended with the score tied 1-1.

Detroit opened the scoring at 4:57 of the period when Steve Yzerman tipped a slapshot from the point for his 10th goal of the season and fifth on the power play. Probert and Darren Veitch assisted on the goal.

The Whalers tied the score at 1-1 when Kevin Dineen beat Stefan at the 8:18 mark. It was Dineen's second power-play goal of the season and eighth overall.

Nordiques 4, Capitals 1

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Michel Goulet scored on power plays in the first and third periods, and set up Lane Lambert's goal late in the second, as the Quebec Nordiques defeated the Washington Capitals 4-1 Friday night.

The victory, which improved Quebec's overall record to 7-5-1, enabled the Nordiques to maintain the distinction of being the only team in the NHL to not have lost on the road this season. Quebec has four wins and a tie away from home.

Former Capital Gaetan Duchesne, who was traded to Quebec last June, gave his new club a lead it never lost when he fired from above the left wing circle, beating goaltender Clint Malarchuk low on the stickside at 5:59 of the first period.
