Jail a life-saver

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock singer David Crosby says he's grateful for his drug and weapons convictions, which cost him five months in prison before he was thrown out by an appeals court. "Even though they put me in the penitentiary on a case they shouldn't have, I feel gratitude because it may have saved my life," Crosby said after a Texas appeals court ruled Thursday he was caught in an illegal search. "I hope other people will learn from my experience and avoid drugs. I've been clean for nearly two years now and I have the state of Texas to thank for it," he said.

Crosby, who became famous with The Byrds and later with Crosby, Stills and Nash, was arrested in 1982 in his dressing room at a night club in Dallas. He was convicted on cocaine and handgun possession charges.

"Because I'm no longer a convicted felon that means that I get my vote, which is very, very valuable to me. I care a great deal about it," he said. "It also gives me my right to travel and means I'm off parole and that's nice."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Martin Sheen, after an overnight stay in jail, has pleaded innocent to charges stemming from his protest at a subway station where transit officials have fenced out homeless people.

Sheen went to jail Thursday on an unlawful entry charge with activist Mitch Snyder, whom the actor portrayed in a TV movie last year.

Snyder began leading a demonstration at a subway stop after the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority erected a fence to keep homeless people from sleeping at the entrance after the subway closes at midnight.

The six living inductees will attend with Edie Adams, who will accept for her late husband, Kovacs.

No quorum, no decision on signs

Not enough members showed up for a meeting of the Cheney Historic District Commission Thursday to make a quorum so the commission made no decision on what kind of signs will be permitted for stores located in the former Cheney Yarn Mill when conversion of that building is completed.

Only five of the commission's 14 members were at the meeting. The decision on a sign policy was put off until the commission's Dec. 3 meeting.

In an informal discussion, the members who did attend the meeting in Probate Court agreed tentatively that cast or forged metal signs will be permitted as well as wooden ones. Aluminum signs would not be allowed.

An application by Brophy Aherm, West Haven developer who plans to convert the mill at 210 Pine St. into 108 apartments and 18 stores, will be heard Dec. 7 by the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The hearing has been delayed several times because the developer has not resolved some development problems.

William FitzGerald, chairman of the Cheney Historic District Commission, said Thursday he can foresee no problem in getting approval by the commission of a policy on signs that has been worked out by a subcommittee from the commission and city representatives of the developers.

Parking appeal planned

A court appeal will be filed against a Zoning Board of Appeals decision to allow the Army and Navy Club to put 20 parking spaces on property it owns in the Cheney Historic District. The Cheney Historic District Commission will join in the challenge.

Attorney Malcolm Barlow said today the appeal will be filed on behalf of Wilfred and Ann Campbell Maxwell and William and Laura Beilore, owners of houses near the 22 Forest St. property the club plans to use for parking.

William FitzGerald, chairman of the Cheney Historic District Commission, told commission members Thursday he will seek commission support for hiring special legal counsel to represent the commission in the appeal.

The ZBA approved a variance for the parking Oct. 26. At a hearing that day, the commission, the Maxwells, and the Beilores all opposed the parking plan.

At the hearing, FitzGerald argued that the creation of a parking lot would damage the historic area.

And at a meeting of the Republican Town Committee Wednesday, Beverly Malone, a member of the historic commission, had strong criticism for the ZBA over its decision. She said the ZBA had ignored the recommendation of the historic commission.

The appeal will be filed with the Superior Court, which will be asked to review the transcript of the Oct. 26 hearing at which Barlow, representing owners of the two nearby properties, sought to lay the basis for the appeal.

The property owned by the Army and Navy Club is a house built on Forest Street about 1870 for a gardener who worked at the Cheney family mansion. The club proposes to use part of the land around the house for the 20 parking spaces.

Laser Games injunction bid must wait 3 months

By Nancy Concelmone
Manchester Herald

Laser Games of Hartford continues to play a waiting game with the town of Manchester.

At Thursday's hearing in Rockville Superior Court, attorneys representing the town of Manchester and Laser Games, who live next door to the proposed center, the Cleverings appealed Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas R. O'Marra's Aug. 7 decision that Laserquest is a permitted use in a Business II zone.

On Oct. 26 the ZBA denied Laser Games' appeal of O'Marra's decision that Laser Games requires a special exception permit from the Planning and Zoning Commission for the site.

In a citation filed with the town clerk Nov. 6, Laser Games of Hartford Inc. and 587 East Middle Turnpike Associates, a real estate partnership formed to buy the former Mott's Shop-Rite building and lease it to Laser Games, ordered the Zoning Board of Appeals and O'Marra to appear in Rockville Superior Court Nov. 17 to answer the appeal.

The appeal states that the ZBA failed to give reasons for sustaining the Cleverings appeal, failed to exercise its duty to review the Zoning Enforcement Officer's orders and applied a "restrictive interpretation of Manchester Zoning Regulations." The appeal also states that the Cleverings' appeal was filed after the deadline following O'Marra's decision.

The appeal states that the ZBA denied Laser Games' right to

Ambulance inquiry satisfies council

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The chairman of Manchester's Emergency Medical Services Council says he is "satisfied" after a council inquiry into an Aug. 28 incident at the Meadows Convalescent Center, in which a private ambulance company was called to transport a patient to Manchester Memorial Hospital.

"I'm satisfied with their answer," said Dr. Joel J. Reich, chairman of the council and chief of the Meadows Hospital's emergency department. "We'll never have a clear answer on this, but no harm was done to the patient." He made his comments at a council's Thursday night meeting in Lincoln Center.

Reich and Town Fire Chief John C. Rivosa contacted the Meadows staff after the incident in which the staff telephoned Professional Ambulance Service Inc. of East Hartford for a local ambulance or 911, because they apparently considered the incident to be a routine matter rather than an emergency.

After receiving the initial call from the Meadows, the Professional dispatch center apparently judged the situation to be an emergency. He called 911 and asked that Manchester paramedics be dispatched. A dispatcher at Ambulance Service of Manchester has stated that the call to Professional concerned someone having difficulty breathing, which is considered an emergency situation.

Reich said he has had discussions with the Meadows staff, which has agreed to dial 911 in an emergency. He said the distinction between an emergency and routine situation has been made clear to Meadows personnel.

"We need to satisfy ourselves that for an emergency (they) will dial 911," Reich said. "They've agreed to do that."

Classifying an emergency situation as a convalescent center, however, may be different than it is elsewhere, since people at such centers usually have a number of health problems, Reich said.

"The question has been raised about calling the Professional company when an emergency might have existed," he said. "What I think I found was that they have health professionals there (Meadows) and what they term as an emergency differs."

In the long run, Reich said, whether to call 911 still lies with the Meadows staff, Reich said.

"The health professionals at Meadows have to make choices," he said. "You have to assume the worst. I may be wrong, but you have to take the chance."

Manchester In Brief

- #### Shopping center needs parking
- The Planning and Zoning Commission has voted to continue a hearing on a special exception permit that would allow 68 parking spaces at the West Side Village Square shopping center at 200 W. Center St.
- The developer, P & K Associates, plans to build a 1,538-square-foot building in the center and add nine spaces to the 58 already on the lot. Sites with more than 60 spaces require a special exception permit. But residents said at a Monday hearing that traffic is already a problem at the center.
- "It's very congested down here now. I think the last thing it needs is additional traffic," said Al Lutz of Stuyvesant St. "If the board goes down and take a look at the site." The commission agreed, and voted to hold the hearing Nov. 23.
- #### 10 single-family homes proposed
- A local developer planning to build 10 single-family homes on Center Street will have to wait until Nov. 23 for the Planning and Zoning Commission's decision on the application.
- Center Street Associates appeared before the PZC Monday requesting a zone change from Business II to Residence A for a 10-lot, 1.71-acre parcel on Center Street, between Dougherty and McKee streets.
- The developers, who propose "modest" single-family homes on lots ranging in size from 7,500 to 8,500 square feet, said a zone change to Residence A would fit in well with the residential McKee Street. However, the owner of property at 320 Center St. disagreed.
- Sheila Flanagan, who owns the building at 520 Center St., felt the noise and traffic make the area inappropriate for residential use. "My major concern is looking after the people who live in that area," she said. "It's a safety factor, and that's what we're concerned about."
- The developer's plans include additional space between the street and the homes to protect against noise, but the PZC voted to inspect the site before making a decision. The development would provide more reasonably priced housing, said a partner in Center Street and P & K Associates. "Economically, it can work and provide a level of housing that's not available at this time," said Gary Pierce.
- #### PZC puts Holiday Homes on hold
- The Planning and Zoning Commission has voted to continue a hearing on a request to abandon a 60-foot right of way in the Parker Street subdivision to create a building lot.
- When the 96-lot Parker Street subdivision was approved a few years ago, the right of way was reserved for a possible extension of Elvree Street, now a dead end. Holiday Homes, which proposes 92 single-family homes for the subdivision, requested that the town abandon the right of way so two parcels can be added to form a separate, 12,504 square-foot building lot.
- The commission was concerned Monday that property next to the Parker Street subdivision would be developed commercially and would make the area inappropriate for residences. But a 10-foot hill at the rear of the proposed lot would probably provide a natural buffer, said Planning Director Mark Pellegrini. Though town staff were in favor of abandoning the right of way, the PZC will examine the site and continue the hearing Nov. 23.

Delegates cautious on Democrats

Two for Dukakis, one for Gore and eight others undecided

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The 11 Connecticut men and women already designated delegates to next year's Democratic National Convention are being cautious in their assessment of the six candidates for their party's presidential nomination. Just three of the 11 have formally declared a preference.

Two are backing Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis. They are Mary Sullivan of Greenwich and state House Speaker Irving J. Stoberg of New Haven.

The other Connecticut delegate who has formally stated a preference is Peter G. Kelly of Hartford, who is backing Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee.

The nomination won't be formally decided until the July convention, although depending on the outcome of the winter and spring caucuses and primaries, one candidate could easily have it sewn up before July.

State Democratic Chairman John F. Dronsey Jr. of West Hartford, who will be a delegate, is remaining neutral for now, as is the state's top Democrat, Gov. William A. O'Neill. The governor will also be a delegate and says he won't make an endorsement before the end of the year.

Dronsey said he won't decide before Super Tuesday, March 8, when 14 Southern states hold primaries and caucuses. He said Thursday he may not even make an endorsement before the Connecticut primary March 29.

Arline Bidwell of Simsbury, vice chairwoman of the state Democratic Party, is also remaining neutral for now.

Connecticut's four Democrats in Congress — Reps. Barbara B. Kennelly, Sam Gejdenson and Bruce A. Morrison and Sen. Christopher J. Dodd — have not declared a preference.

Another delegate, John J. Flynn of Farmington, is said to be leaning toward Dukakis, but has not made it official. Flynn is a top United Auto Workers union official in Connecticut.

Kelly, a former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee and a fund-raiser for Senate Democratic candidates, said he lined up with Gore because "he represents the only mainstream Democratic candidate in the pool."

Gore "deals with foreign policy and defense like most voters deal with them," Kelly said.

Further, he said, since the West frequently goes Republican, it's important for the Democrats to win the South. Gore is the only Southerner in the race.

"I don't think there's a Democrat in the race other than Gore that can win" the general election, Kelly said.

Sullivan said she chose Dukakis because of his stands on issues; he opposes additional American aid to the Nicaraguan contra, he favors bolder moves toward arms control, he opposes the Reagan administration's strategic defense initiative.

State suggests homes for 2,000 retarded people

By Dean Golembeski
The Associated Press

EAST HARTFORD — Communities across the state could soon be homes to thousands of mentally retarded people under a five-year plan in which the state proposes to reduce its dependence on training schools and similar facilities.

The plan, announced by the Department of Mental Retardation and Developmentally Disabled Persons, says it wants to relocate 2,000 people from institutions, and some from their parents' homes, to community group homes by 1992.

The first long-range plan ever developed by the Department of Mental Retardation would reduce the number of institutionalized people to about 2,000 and increase the numbers in community-based homes to 5,000 by 1992.

"We feel that the plan will guide the fulfillment of our legal obligations under all the lawsuits. We feel it will guide the efforts to strengthen our programs and services," Mental Retardation Commissioner Brian Lenskik told a news conference. "It will really let everybody know what we're doing so there will be no misconceptions."

Lenskik said financial support from the General Assembly and the backing of advocacy groups and parents of advocacy groups, he said, are essential. He said his department has requested $40 million in its next budget for the first year of the plan, but he declined to estimate the total cost of the proposal.

"We need a lot of help from the public," Lenskik said.

Joyce Peters, programs and services director for the Greater Hartford Association for Retarded Citizens Inc., said her organization is supporting the state's deinstitutionalization efforts. She said her agency's special concern was for parents who have cared for their mentally retarded children at home.

"Many of these parents opted to keep these children home, but these parents are growing older, so that their children are in need of community residences. We can't forget these parents who followed the rules of the professionals at that time," she said.

The union representing department workers expressed support for the shift to community homes, but also voiced reservations about who would operate the new homes. The state plan calls for both private and state-run homes.

"I think it is important for clients to have the best possible living arrangement with appropriate staff levels and a qualified staff that is trained," said Marilee Milstein, vice president of District 119 of the New England Health Care Workers Union.

Milstein said she would like to see the state expand its group homes and not rely on the private sector to provide all the new facilities. She said the plan is "laudable, but the resources have to be there to implement it."

Under the state plan, the department proposes to place about 400 people a year in its two types of residential facilities — community training home and community living arrangements.

The reduction of institutionalized people will enable the department to reduce its staff through turnover and reassignments. There will be no layoffs, Lenskik said. The state proposal would create enough facilities to house 4,253 people by 1992.

The state also licenses or operates 298 community living arrangements serving 1,985 people. Community living arrangements serve up to six adults who share an apartment, condominium or house with supervision ranging from almost none to 24-hour-a-day. The state proposal would create enough facilities to house 4,253 people by 1992.

Under a 1984 consent decree reached in C.A.R.C. v. Thorne, the state must provide community residential placements and day programs for 633 residents at Mansfield Training School by June 30, 1990. The state wants to house just 123 people at the school by 1990.

Under the 1984 USA vs. Connecticut consent decree, the state also must improve programs and services to residents at Southbury Training School. The state plans to reduce the population at this facility to 222 by June 1989.

At the state's four regional centers in Waterbury, Hartford, New Haven and Waterford, the state intends to reduce the total population to 446 by June 1990, under the five-year plan.

The state currently has about 3,900 institutionalized individuals.

Dead boy's parents turned down shelter

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — The parents of a 5-month-old boy who died after the family spent the night in a car apparently declined several offers of shelter because they didn't want the family to be separated, even temporarily.

Peter Martinez died early Thursday morning and his parents were charged with risk of injury to a minor, police said.

The parents — Pedro Martinez, a 26-year-old Mexican citizen in the United States on a residential visa and 21-year-old Wanda Ortiz, a New Britain native — were being held in lieu of $18,000 bond pending an appearance in New Britain Superior Court today.

A spokeswoman at the state medical office in Farmington declined to reveal autopsy results, saying the cause of Peter Martinez's death could not be released until further studies had been done.

The family had been sharing a one-bedroom apartment with Ortiz's mother, Anna Corchado, and her teen-ager son, but had been asked to leave by the building's management, police said.

Officials said the couple refused an offer from the state Department of Social Services to place the infant in a foster home, would not stay at a shelter that would separate them and apparently refused assistance from Corchado, who said she offered to keep the baby in the apartment after the parents had been asked to leave.

"I found them a shelter in Hartford but they didn't want to stay in the shelter," the grandmother said. "So I told my daughter to give me the baby but she doesn't want to give it to me."

Corchado said she sought help from the city's Spanish Speaking Center, where a worker suggested that the family try the South Park Inn in Hartford, a facility that houses homeless families. Many facilities do not accept families.

John Ferrucci, director of South

Park, said the couple did not come to the shelter, which was full Wednesday night anyway.

Police Lt. James Ahern said the parents had turned their 1981 Ford LTD on several times overnight to get some heat as an autumn snowstorm drove temperatures into the 20s.

Police got a call at 6:39 a.m. Thursday that an infant who wasn't breathing was in the lobby of an apartment building on Walnut Street, Ahern said.

A police officer attempted to revive the infant before he was taken to New Britain General Hospital by ambulance, Ahern said. A hospital spokesman said the infant was revived briefly but was pronounced dead at 7:40 a.m.

Corchado said her daughter and Martinez came to New Britain from Chicago two weeks ago so Martinez could look for work. Last week, he found a job at Viking Aluminum Products Inc. on John Street, company officials said. The couple stayed with Corchado until Monday.

Corchado's landlord, Douglas Militzok of West Hartford, said the lease permitted only two people to live in the apartment.

"She was told whoever was staying there would have to leave," Militzok said. "As far as I'm concerned, they were trespassing. The family checked into a motel, but moved out Wednesday when it rained out of money, Ahern said.

"They parked car at about 10 o'clock at night (Wednesday). The husband started the car intermittently during the night to provide heat," Ahern said. "The baby had last woken up about 3 in the morning, crying, and was discovered not breathing about 6:35."

Gregory Steltner, New Britain welfare director, said social service officials were stunned by the news of the infant's death.

"All I can really tell you is we were totally unaware of the situation," Steltner said.

Judge agrees to unseal affidavit in Aparo case

HARTFORD (AP) — A judge has agreed to unseal the affidavit authorities prepared in support of their request to arrest a 16-year-old Glastonbury girl in the strangulation death of her mother.

Superior Court Judge John Byrne ruled Thursday that most of defendant Karin Aparo's arrest affidavit can be unsealed today after her attorney and the prosecutor excise one or two paragraphs.

Earlier this week, Byrne ruled that the teen-ager would be tried as an adult on charges she conspired with her boyfriend to kill her mother.

Byrne said Thursday the public should not be allowed to see the paragraphs of the arrest document referring to incidents that occurred before Aparo turned 16.

The body of Joyce Aparo, 47, was found in Bernardston, Mass., near the Vermont border in August. She had been strangled to death.

Miss Aparo's lawyer, Hubert Santos, said Tuesday he would appeal Byrne's decision to try his client as an adult to the state Supreme Court.

Santos had argued that his client should be treated like a juvenile by the courts because she was just 15 when the murder conspiracy allegedly took place.

Miss Aparo faces up to 60 years in prison if convicted of conspiracy and being an accessory to murder. Dennis Coleman, 19, Miss Aparo's boyfriend at the time of the slaying, has been accused by police of strangling Mrs. Aparo in her Glastonbury condominium, driving her body into Massachusetts in her car and dumping her body under a bridge. Her car was found nearby.

Police allege that Coleman and Miss Aparo plotted the woman's death for more than a year.

Two other people also face charges in the case. Police said Kira Lintner, 17, and Christopher Wheatley, 20, both of Glastonbury, followed Coleman in a car to Massachusetts and drove him back to Connecticut.

Miss Lintner pleaded innocent Tuesday in Superior Court to a charge of conspiracy to commit murder. She was arrested by state police last week on the charge.

She had been charged previously with hindering prosecution in the case, but an affidavit released last week alleged that Miss Lintner knew about the murder plan in advance.

State police said last week that they intended to add charges of conspiracy and being an accessory to murder against Wheatley. He has been committed to Elmcrest Psychiatric Institute in Portland, lawyers in the case said. Wheatley is scheduled to appear in court Nov. 24.

An affidavit released last week alleged that Wheatley agreed to help Coleman in exchange for money Coleman expected to get from the victim's life insurance policy.

Body is that of runaway teen-ager
HARTFORD — A body found in Sherman Nov. 2 has been identified as that of a 17-year-old runaway girl from Illinois, state police said.

The body, which was identified through dental records, was that of Mary Vickery of Shipman, Ill., state police said Thursday. Authorities estimated the body had been dumped in a wooded area months before it was discovered by a man walking his dog.

The teen's grandmother reported her as missing on June 18. She had last been heard from on June 5, when she made a telephone call home from Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks, state police said. The girl said she was headed to a friend's home in New Fairfield, the town adjacent to where her body was found, state police said.

Group to fight tire incinerator
FOSTER, R.I. — About 70 residents slogged through the snow to oppose plans for a tire incinerator in Connecticut that they said would litterally stink.

Prevailing westerly winds would blow fumes from the plant over western Rhode Island, carrying pollutants such as carbon dioxide, cadmium, zinc, lead, sulfur and arsenic over Foster and Coventry, said Paul Cady, liaison for the Concerned Citizens of Sterling Inc.

Sterling, Conn., about two miles from the state line, is the proposed location of the $40 million Oxford Energy Co. plant. It would burn more than 8 million discarded tires a year, producing electricity to sell to Connecticut Light and Power Co.

Man rams police station with truck
THOMASTON — A local man who reportedly had been turned down in his request to be jailed earlier this week, got his wish after ramming his truck into the police station, Thomaston police said.

Animal-rights activists protest hunt
NEW HAVEN — Animal rights activists renew their opposition today to the annual deer hunt allowed on Yale University's 7,800-acre forest in eastern Connecticut.

The Animal Rights Front, a statewide group, and the Yale Student Animal Rights Coalition plan an all-day protest today on the campus, ending with a candlelight procession to the home of school President Benno C. Schmidt Jr.

The group plans to distribute petitions and postcards to Schmidt, asking for an end to the hunt, now in its fourth year.

On Nov. 21, the first day of the hunt, activists plan to travel to the forest's Ashford section, carrying cameras with which to take pictures of the hunters.

Agency circumvented lease policies
HARTFORD — The commissioner of mental retardation acknowledged that "a lot of things were done wrong" in the state's handling of leases for two homes for clients, but said criticism of the way the transactions were handled was faulty.

State Auditor Leo V. Donohue said Thursday that the Department of Mental Retardation circumvented leasing regulations when it allowed clients to enter into leases for the two homes in Chester and Old Saybrook.

Further, Donohue said, the homes, leased for a total of about $31,000 since November 1986 and January 1987, have never been occupied.

Donohue said auditors from his office were sent in this week to make further inquiries.

Texstar contests L'Amblance fine
HARTFORD — A Texas company that lifted concrete slabs into place at L'Amblance Plaza has announced its intention to contest a $2.52 million federal fine proposed for alleged safety violations at the site of the Bridgeport building collapse.

Chris Geckler, vice president of Texstar Construction Corp. of San Antonio, Texas, said Thursday that the federal report on the cause of the collapse is incomplete, inconsistent and inaccurate.

"Texstar believes further investigation is necessary to determine the cause of the collapse of the structure," Geckler said in announcing his company's intentions to appeal the fine proposed by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Firewood supplies may dwindle
NEW HAVEN — Cut firewood this winter could be in shorter supply than past seasons because of a dwindling number of woodcutters, officials say.

Wages are low for choppers, margins are low for sellers and help is hard to come by, dealer say.

"It's tough work, and nobody wants to do it," said Larry Foote, owner of Glenwood Lumber in Bridgeport. "People can't make a living out of it."

Foote sells firewood as part of his building business. In past years at this time he had 100 to 150 cords in stock. This year "maybe 20 to 25" cords remain, he said.

Much of the firewood delivered to homeowners in past years was cut by unemployed building tradesmen or by laborers wishing to supplement incomes, dealer say. But interest whittled down as wages and opportunities boomed in Connecticut's building trades industry.

Prices vary. A cord of wood — split, stacked and delivered — ranges from less than $100 to $180.

Group demands Seaside abuse probe

EAST HARTFORD (AP) — A state investigation into alleged physical abuse of three mentally retarded clients at Seaside Center is to be completed next week, but a private group in Norwich is demanding an independent inquiry into the matter.

Six employees at the state-run facility in Waterford were suspended with pay Monday after the state Office of Protection and Advocacy for Handicapped and Developmentally Disabled Persons received three complaints.

The most recent complaint came in an anonymous letter Friday that alleged one Seaside resident suffered a broken arm on two separate occasions and that another resident suffered a broken collarbone. The letter also alleged that some of the suspended employees used drugs, officials said.

The New London County Association for Retarded Citizens in Norwich Thursday called on Mental Retardation Commissioner Lenskik to appoint a blue-ribbon panel to examine possible violations of human rights, as well as conditions and programs at Seaside.

Carl Loges, the association's director, said he wants members of his organization, mental retardation experts and parents of Seaside residents to be included on the panel.

"Every parent of a son and daughter has a right to expect their children are living in a safe environment," Loges said.

An assistant to Lenskik said, however, that such a panel would not be appropriate.

"It's hard to do an investigation with a blue ribbon panel going around," said Gayle Kranz, the commissioner's executive assistant. "It really muddies the waters. We're afraid a panel at this time would reduce the effectiveness of an internal investigation."

Earlier Thursday, Lenskik said at a news conference in East Hartford that he expects his department to complete its investigation next week. The commissioner said that the panel would reduce the effectiveness of an internal investigation.

Kathryn duPre, director of the Department of Mental Retardation's Region 6, which runs the Seaside Center, said earlier in the week that none of the suspended workers has been the subject of abuse complaints in the past.

"State police are not involved yet, they will not involve themselves on an anonymous complaint. They have to have one that has a name on it," he said. "However, we're also trying to see if we can locate a name and get them involved. It would really assist us if we could get their involved."

No apology for use of 'his or hers'

The Manchester Board of Education has decided to remove sexist language from two of its policy statements. The decision was a good one, obviously. There is no reason in modern times to force a "him" to serve as a "her" or to force a "his" to mean a "hers."

It is not nit-picking, as school board member Frank Maffe suggested, to raise objection to that language.

The continued use of male pronouns understandably rankles those who want our language to reflect our current acknowledgement of the equal role women have in our culture.

Language does adjust itself to changing cultural reality although it does so slowly. Every now and then it needs a bit of a shove, like the one it got Monday when the Board of Education voted to purge policy statements of their sexist taint.

But the solution the board apparently settled on is not the most attractive.

There is no more justification for writing "his/hers" than there would be in writing "ham & eggs" in ordinary text.

"Or" is a perfectly good English word, and it should be used in the phrase "his or hers" without apology.

One of the pleasant things about the appearance of written English is that, aside from necessary punctuation, it does not contain a lot of marks that are not letters. We should keep it that way.

The "diagonal" has a place in written communication, but there is no reason to reach for it when a good English word is at hand to do the job.

WASHINGTON — Mikhail Gorbachev hasn't set foot in America yet, but a veteran American negotiator already is looking beyond the Dec. 7 summit meeting with President Reagan to a larger arms control treaty and general improvement in East-West relations.

However, the official, Edward L. Rowny, is strongly against abandoning the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, known popularly as "Star Wars," even if there were no U.S. and Soviet missiles left on earth.

Rowny, who negotiated over strategic weapons in Geneva and now is a senior adviser to Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, said Thursday that "even if we and the Soviets were to reduce to zero, we would still want an SDI program."

One reason, he said, is that other countries would be in a position to consider a nuclear attack if the United States were unable to defend itself against ballistic missiles. Also, Rowny said, the Soviets still would have the capability of suddenly breaking out of the treaty.

The centerpiece of the Reagan-Gorbachev summit is to be a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles. Over three years, 364 U.S. and 683 Soviet missiles would be destroyed. Nuclear arsenals would be reduced to an estimated 4 percent to 6 percent overall.

But U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva are still grappling with measures to guard against cheating. The chief U.S. negotiator, Max M. Kampelman, is being rushed to the Swiss city for talks Sunday night and Monday with Yuri M. Vorontsov, a deputy Soviet foreign minister who plays a leading role in arms control decisions.

Shultz may have to go to Geneva for a pre-Thanking meeting with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze if knotty issues remain, though Charles E. Redman, the State Department spokesman, said Thursday there were no plans for such a trip.

According to Rowny and other U.S. officials, the Soviets have not provided enough detail about missiles they may have in reserve, and also are resisting a U.S. demand for inspection of SS-25 installations.

The SS-25 is an intercontinental ballistic missile, which would not be restricted by the treaty. But Rowny and Redman said the SS-25 in its first stage of construction looks exactly like the SS-20, which would be banned.

As a result, the United States wants to send American inspectors to SS-25 sites to make sure the missile is not being modified to replace the SS-20.

In Moscow, the Soviet foreign minister spokesman, Gennadiy Gerasimov, accused the United States of making unacceptable "last-minute, final-curtain proposals."

Rowny denied that the U.S. side was "trying to get into the ICBM problem."

But he said, since the missiles look alike "we have to see them. It's something that has to be resolved."

Even with these problems, Rowny finds it unlikely the treaty will not be ready by the time Gorbachev arrives.

"I think that Gorbachev deciding he's going to come here seems to me to mean they are not going to take the risk of upsetting this thing," Rowny said.

He then launched into the long-range U.S.-Soviet arms control agenda. It is to carry out the understanding Reagan and Gorbachev reached in Reykjavik to scrap 50 percent of U.S. and Soviet intercontinental nuclear weapons.

Rowny has campaigned for a both deserve support. Mergers are concentrating too much economic power in too few hands.

But if the deficit is to be reduced substantially, increased taxes (like spending cuts) must hit the middle class as well as the rich. Here is how it can be done without touching overall tax rates:

1. Double the cigarette tax from 16 to 32 cents, raising $2.9 billion. More than 300,000 people die each year due to smoking-caused diseases. A high tax would limit some consumption, saving lives while raising taxes.

2. Raise taxes on beer and wine to that of liquor, raising $4.2 billion. At present, the tax on a bottle of wine is only 9 cents. Yet a glass of wine is as intoxicating as an ounce of Scotch or a glass of beer. Why shouldn't wine taxes be the same? Wine and beer taxes have not increased since 1951.

3. Increase the tax on gasoline 12 cents in 1988 to raise $10.6 billion. As oil prices dropped, Americans began buying bigger cars. Since U.S. oil production is dropping, imports are up 40 percent over 1985. That creates a dangerous foreign dependency and widens the U.S. trade deficit.

In fact, a case can be made to increase the gas tax a dime a year for four years, which would only bring prices back to their previous level if adjusted for inflation. They would still be 50 to 60 cents below Europe.

The major criticism of these increases in excise taxes is that they are regressive — hitting lower income people harder than the affluent. For example, a 12-cent gas tax hike reduces the income of a family earning under $10,000 by 1 percent, but only two percent of a family with $50,000.

That regressiveness can be offset, however, by increasing the "Earned Income Tax Credit" of low income people, adjusting it for family size.

It is time to slash the federal deficit with sizable cuts in spending matched by increased taxes on items which society should consume less of.

Washington Wire Looking beyond the summit

By Borrv Schwed

WASHINGTON — Mikhail Gorbachev hasn't set foot in America yet, but a veteran American negotiator already is looking beyond the Dec. 7 summit meeting with President Reagan to a larger arms control treaty and general improvement in East-West relations.

Study report on 'death ray' went unnoticed

WASHINGTON — The chemical laser weapon being developed with top priority on President Reagan's secret order would be the first "death ray" ever tested in space, according to highly sensitive documents we've seen.

As we reported earlier, the president, eager to speed up research on a laser space weapon personally ordered an accelerated development program last December. Code-named Zenith Star, the program aims to test a cylindrical, hydrogen-fluoride-fueled laser in space as early as 1990.

This means Reagan is bequeathing his successor in the White House a certain fight with Congress. Under the traditional interpretation of the U.S.-Soviet Antiballistic Missile Treaty of 1972, the United States would have to give the Soviets at least six months' notice that it intended to scrap the treaty by testing a missile-killing weapon in space.

If the next president does this, he is sure to provoke a row with Congress, which will challenge his authority to abandon the ABM Treaty.

In fact, the battle would have been joined months ago if Reagan had heeded the advice of Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, director of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization. The general urged Reagan to go public with the program last December, but the president, already taking a battering over the Iran-contra arms scandal, elected to keep Zenith Star a closely held secret.

Since then, good soldier Abrahamson has been driving full speed ahead on the laser weapons development — and the space test that would shoot down the ABM Treaty.

As often happens, Congress helped to set itself up. Abrahamson has total discretion to shift tens of millions of dollars from one project to another, as long as they are within one of five general SDI programs Congress has voted funds for. The major program that covers Zenith Star is Directed Energy Weapons. It had $843 million last year, and the president is asking for $1.1 billion next year — which Abrahamson can divvy up any way he chooses without telling Congress.

Congress was notified earlier this year, in secret report, that a chemical laser test in space was contemplated for the "early 1990s." Such a test, the administration admitted, would be acceptable only under a new, "broader" interpretation of the ABM Treaty.

An unclassified version of that secret Pentagon report was released on Sept. 21. But it was totally ignored by the general press, which failed to spot the enormous implications of even the limited, carefully worded admissions contained in the 24-page public version.

The overlooked key was "LISE," an acronym that stands for "Laser Integrated Space Experiment." That will be the end product of the secret Zenith Star project.

"LISE is a fully integrated, completely autonomous experiment that would test the ability of a space-based chemical laser to negate a booster in ballistic flight and also to demonstrate interactive discrimination," the unclassified version states. In plain English, the test would try to destroy a missile in its vulnerable, fuel-heavy lift-off phase, and also try to pick out the real warheads from the decoys coming off the missile.

LISE would use the Alpha chemical laser being developed by TRW Inc. at its facility in San Juan Capistrano, Calif. Sources add there is genuine confidence that the laser can perform at the five-megawatt power level at which it is being designed.

Using selective semantics in a classic subterfuge, the Pentagon's unclassified report concluded that "planning for this experiment would have to begin now to conduct the experiment in the early 1990s." In fact, Abrahamson has been secretly planning the LISE test ever since he got Reagan's order last December.

Intelligence sources believe the 1990 target date is earlier than the Soviets could test a similar device in space, which would make the U.S. laser the first space "death ray" in history — if the next president so chooses.

Confidential file The nation's emergency oil stockpile won't reach its targeted level of 750 million barrels until 1995, but Energy Department officials are already worrying over the best way to do it in a future crisis. By law it must be sold to the highest bidder, but officials are trying to figure out how to keep big distributors from profiteering. If the emergency were to last any great length of time, the needs of the military, and of the 21 other countries in the United States, is pledged to share the stockpile with, would send petroleum prices skyrocketing — perhaps five times higher than current prices, according to Energy Department forecast. That would enrich distributors who bought government oil early and hoarded it.

Manila, Philippines — Suspected communist rebels killed an army colonel today in Manila's escalating war of the streets and three more arrests in the slayings of three Americans.

Also today, about 4,000 leftists marched near the presidential palace to mark the first anniversary of the unsolved assassination of labor leader Rolando Olalia.

The march took place without serious incident. But Olalia's successor, Crispin Beltran, said an escalating assassination campaign is pushing the nation toward disaster.

"There's going to be civil war very soon," predicted the leader of the militant May 1st Movement.

El Salvador frees murder suspects SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The government has ordered the release of three men charged in the 1985 slayings of six Americans, including four U.S. Marines. U.S. officials said the suspects should be prosecuted.

Military Judge Jorge Alberto Serrano on Thursday ruled the suspects must be freed under an amnesty program called for by the Central American peace plan.

Since Nov. 6, the government has authorized the release of 473 political prisoners under the amnesty program.

It was not immediately clear when the three suspects ordered freed Thursday would be released from prison. Under Salvadoran law, it is not uncommon for suspects to be held for long periods of time without being brought to trial.

Two seamen killed in Iraqi attack MANAMA, Bahrain — Iraq today said its warplanes attacked five vessels off the Iranian coast in an unprecedented "massacre" of ships. Two crewmen were killed and a tanker and a tugboat were on fire, shipping sources said.

In Iran, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called for urgent victory over Iraq in the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war, fueling speculation that a big Iranian offensive was imminent.

Four other crewmen were injured when Iraqi jets fired radar-guided Exocet missiles on the Iranian-chartered tugboat, the shipping executives said.

The identities of the dead and wounded could not immediately be determined because the vessel was in Iranian waters in the northern gulf, close to the war zone.

39 killed in bus crash in Mexico MEXICO CITY — A city bus skidded off a road in heavy fog today and plunged into a lake, killing 39 people, authorities said. Six people were reported injured.

Federal District police spokeswoman Carmen Gutierrez Zamora said in a telephone interview "the casualty toll may still go up."

She said the bus left the road in the capital's southern Tlahauc district and tumbled into the San Miguel de Xico Lagoon at about 8:30 a.m.

Divers and other rescue personnel were sent to the scene. "As of now, 10:30 a.m. (11:30 a.m. EST) the bodies of 39 people have been retrieved," she said. She quoted witnesses and survivors as saying the bus was full when it skidded, overturned and plunged into the water.

New heart drug is major advance WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration announced approval today of a new clot-dissolving drug that could save the lives of thousands of heart attack patients each year.

FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young termed approval of the genetically engineered drug — widely known as TPA — "a major advance in the management of coronary heart disease."

It is an emergency treatment most effective when administered within the first minutes or hours after a patient has suffered a heart attack. The official labeling will call for its use "as soon as possible after the onset of symptoms."

Officials of Genentech, Inc., the California company that developed the drug, said initial distribution will be to hospitals and that it should be available nationwide within two to three weeks.

Deficit negotiators resume talks WASHINGTON — Congressional and White House negotiators resumed bargaining today over how to shrink the federal deficit, trying "to pick up the pieces" after seeing prospects for an imminent agreement fade into a grim mood of confrontation.

"When I was practicing law, I had a jury that got hung up over whether or not to eat lunch. That's the kind of way this is right now," said Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, as he entered the meeting room for the 18th day of talks.

"It seems to me what we've got to do now is go back and try to pick up the pieces," said another negotiator, Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., and the House Budget Committee chairman.

Ethiopian rebels attack aid convoy NAIROBI, Kenya — Ethiopian rebels said they killed 85 soldiers and destroyed 32 vehicles heading to Eritrea, Ethiopia's drought-stricken northern province.

At least some of the vehicles in the convoy were carrying relief supplies. The rebels claimed that several carried military hardware.

The Eritrean People's Liberation Front said the attack occurred 50 miles south of Asmara, the Eritrean capital. The statement was broadcast on the clandestine rebel Voice of the Broad Masses of Eritrea radio late Thursday.

The broadcast claimed the destroyed vehicles included two trucks and trailers "loaded with bombs and ammunition," one truck carrying arms and soldiers, one Soviet-made military vehicle carrying a 33mm weapon, three trucks carrying clothing, bombs, medicine and other items, and 10 loaded fuel tankers.

Suspected communists kill colonel MANILA, Philippines — Suspected communist rebels killed an army colonel today in Manila's escalating war of the streets and three more arrests in the slayings of three Americans.

Also today, about 4,000 leftists marched near the presidential palace to mark the first anniversary of the unsolved assassination of labor leader Rolando Olalia.

The march took place without serious incident. But Olalia's successor, Crispin Beltran, said an escalating assassination campaign is pushing the nation toward disaster.

"There's going to be civil war very soon," predicted the leader of the militant May 1st Movement.

El Salvador frees murder suspects SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The government has ordered the release of three men charged in the 1985 slayings of six Americans, including four U.S. Marines. U.S. officials said the suspects should be prosecuted.

Military Judge Jorge Alberto Serrano on Thursday ruled the suspects must be freed under an amnesty program called for by the Central American peace plan.

Since Nov. 6, the government has authorized the release of 473 political prisoners under the amnesty program.

It was not immediately clear when the three suspects ordered freed Thursday would be released from prison. Under Salvadoran law, it is not uncommon for suspects to be held for long periods of time without being brought to trial.

Carlucci: Nothing sacred in budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank C. Carlucci, who is expected to be approved next week as the new secretary of defense, says nothing in the Pentagon budget should be sacrosanct during efforts to cut the federal deficit.

"We have to look at everything," he said Thursday, although he refused to be specific about what, if any, weapons might have to be canceled.

The deficit-cutting effort could mean "we may be looking at a smaller military force," Carlucci, currently Reagan's national security adviser, was praised generously by senators of both parties, who noted that he has spent almost three decades in a variety of high-level federal jobs, including a two-year stint as deputy secretary of defense.

Carlucci was nominated by Reagan last week to replace Caspar W. Weinberger, who is retiring after a seven-year tenure during which the Pentagon spending doubled. Weinberger will remain in office until Carlucci is confirmed.

Carlucci was cautious in his statements Thursday, breaking no new ground as he defended administration policies on a variety of national security issues.

Many of the senators' questions and comments involved the Pentagon budget, which has been a chief subject of negotiations between Carlucci and the White House in the effort to reduce federal budget deficits. Carlucci has been involved in those talks.

Nunn cited a "need to bring the defense budget into sync with fiscal reality," explaining that the Pentagon assumes it will receive increases of 3 percent above inflation for each of the next five years. That is "an unsustainable level," said Nunn, noting that defense budgets have been cut in each of the past two years.

Carlucci promised to work closely with Congress, a statement that contrasted with Weinberger's steadfast refusal to tell Congress where the military budget could be reduced with the least harm to U.S. military forces.

"My style in the past has been to function in close collaboration with the Congress," he said. "We may differ, but you will never find me unwilling to state where I stand nor unwilling to work toward constructive solutions."

Carlucci told the panel that "I bring no other agenda than the president's to provide efficiently and effectively for today's defense needs, and to build the bipartisan consensus necessary to provide for our nation's future security."

He defended the "Star Wars" anti-missile plan. Known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative, it is a "need to bring the defense budget into sync with fiscal reality," explaining that the Pentagon assumes it will receive increases of 3 percent above inflation for each of the next five years. That is "an unsustainable level," said Nunn, noting that defense budgets have been cut in each of the past two years.

Sikorsky working on radio shield

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sikorsky Aircraft is designing a way to shield part of the Black Hawk helicopter's control system from radio waves, but says electromagnetic interference cannot cause the Army helicopter to crash.

The Army instructed Sikorsky officials in October 1986 to develop a shielding proposal because it is planning new missions for the Black Hawk, company officials said Thursday.

The Stratford, Conn. company said the Army's request had nothing to do with published reports that ordinary radio waves from microwave towers, radio antennae and radar could cause the troop- and cargo-carrying helicopters to crash.

"It was not requested for any safety reason," said Fred Brisobis, Sikorsky's deputy Black Hawk program manager. "It's a mission compatibility requirement for future needs. It has nothing to do with any accidents."

Army Maj. Phil Soucy would not verify if the Pentagon plans to use the Black Hawk for new missions, but vehemently denounced newspaper reports that said radio waves can cause a Black Hawk to crash.

Sikorsky spokesman Marty Moore said the Army has conducted extensive tests that prove only extraordinary bombardments of radio waves triggered the crashes of five Black Hawks since 1982, killing 22 servicemen.

Brisobis said the Black Hawk is susceptible to radio waves only at 50 to 100 times those experienced under ordinary flying conditions.

Markets thrive, but analysts say rally won't last

By Rick Gladstone, The Associated Press. NEW YORK - A drop in the U.S. trade deficit roused Wall Street to its best day in two weeks, bolstered the dollar and sent prices soaring today in Tokyo, but analysts say the rally won't last without more severe economic remedies.

Unless the U.S. government tries harder to ease its budget and trade deficits, "this could be short-lived," said Stephen B. Timbers, investment strategist at Kemper Financial Services in Chicago.

The 225-stock Nikkei average registered a 901.75-point surge to close the day's session at 22,448.25. The market's single-day record gain was set just one day after the Oct. 29 crash when the index scored a 2,027.29-point rebound, beating the previous 906.42-point gain set July 24.

The U.S. dollar, meanwhile, broke the 138-yen level for the first time this week to finish the day's trading at 138.65 yen. It was sharply up from its Thursday close of 134.40 and Friday opening of 138.75 yen.

Stock prices also closed sharply higher on the Hong Kong stock exchange, with the blue-chip Hang Seng index rising 75.87 points to close at 138.74.

13th is a lucky day for bride

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Many people think of Friday the 13th as something to be feared, but not Rebecca Guillot, who finds the day so welcome she's getting married on it. Just listening to the number 13s that have crossed Guillot's path is enough to make people cross their fingers. Her sister began dating her husband-to-be on a Friday the 13th, and their wedding anniversary is Dec. 13. One of Guillot's close friends was born on a 13th. Guillot and her fiancé first pledged their love on a Friday the 13th back in high school. And she worked 13 months at her mother's boutique. So today, this year's third Friday the 13th, holding off departures until 12:01 a.m. Saturday. Hotel rooms, office buildings, steamship cabins and city streets often skip the number 13 because it is believed to be unlucky. But Guillot and Griffin aren't fazed; in fact, they're amused by their friends' reactions. "Friends have told me this marriage is destined to fail, just because of the date," she said, recalling how some even tried to convince her to get married a day later. But Guillot wasn't about to let anything stop her from getting married on exactly the same date she and Griffin first promised to wed. "The date doesn't really bother me," added Griffin. "I break mirrors driving my red car under ladders and over black cats all the time." But there is one number 13 that the couple is not interested in. "We're definitely not having 13 children," Guillot said.

O'Neill, offended, blasts press

MYSTIC (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill, offended at being asked if he had ever smoked marijuana, lashed out at the news media today, saying he wondered how many reporters would bear up under the scrutiny to which they subject public officials. Addressing the New England Society of Newspaper Editors, O'Neill said the presidential campaign has produced "a crisis between the press and public figures." He said the nation appears headed toward the day when "only saints will be able to pass safely through the gauntlet of media scrutiny." "Now, a saint may be good and flawless through and through, but I doubt that a saint knows how to get a highway built," O'Neill said. The governor said he had been asked twice last weekend whether he had ever smoked marijuana. The question came as Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg withdrew after a flurry over his admission that he used marijuana several times in the 1960s and 1970s. "After I had answered in the negative — and I must tell you that I was so offended I considered not answering at all — I began wondering just what sort of question it had been," O'Neill said. "I hope you will understand that I found this level of inquiry to be disturbing," he added.

Ortega's top critic to get plan

There were strong hints that Wright might also play some role in the cease-fire process, perhaps as sponsor of a congressional monitoring group. Wright suggested last week that he might create such a delegation. Ortega, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning, America," said his proposals were all within the peace agreement reached by five Central American presidents "and they are aimed at allowing the contrast to the opportunity so that the cease-fire will be effective with all the securities and guarantees that they need. "We believe that this should be as soon as possible. Therefore, the proposal is very realistic, very flexible and is aimed at being effective," Ortega said, speaking through a translator. Meanwhile, a contra leader, Alfredo Cesar, said on NBC-TV's "Today" show that he felt Ortega would have to disband the national directorate of the ruling Sandinista Party in order to comply with the peace plan. "I don't think it is feasible if the party remains as a Leninist party with a pollitburo," Cesar said. He also questioned the need for Ortega to meet with the cardinal in Washington, since they both live in Managua and met there earlier in the week. "I don't know what has changed between Monday and today," he said. "We are trying to see how to make peace a reality in Central America," Ortega said after the meetings.

Town claims union wrong

Continued from page 1 since January. Werber said that the administration is interested in working out an agreement, "but it becomes more difficult when you negotiate through the press." At the Nov. 2 hearing, town administration and union officials discussed the impact of the suspension of blackjacks, and agreed to negotiate on whether a substitute weapon shall be authorized. The union has said it agrees with the administration about the possibility of liability resulting from use of blackjacks. But they are concerned that the administration has turned down a proposed alternative, the PR-24, a weapon similar to a nightstick. Werber said that issuing the PR-24 would merely duplicate the nightsticks already carried by officers.

At St. Louis, the Islanders recorded their third straight 4-3 decision. Pat LaFontaine and Greg Gilbert each had a goal and an assist and Bob Bassen added a 4-1 lead and held on. The NHL record for consecutive wins at home is 11, set by Chicago from Oct. 9-Nov. 28 in 1985-86. Only three other NHL teams had won at least nine straight home games, the last being another Blackhawks team between Oct. 10 and Nov. 21, 1971. The Devils still are the only NHL team not to lose at home this season. "They play good, sound defensive hockey," said Winnipeg star Dale Hawerchuk, who scored the other goal. "They don't give you a lot of quality opportunities. They play good position hockey and play with a lot of confidence." The Jets have been doing well, with a 9-1 record and only one loss in the last seven games. Also on Thursday, it was Philadelphia 2, Pittsburgh 2, and Boston 3, St. Louis 2.

Devils' goal is first place By Barry Wilner The Associated Press The New Jersey Devils will have to wait for their piece of history. Not that they care much — they'd rather have a piece of first place. The Devils carried an eight-game home winning streak into Thursday night's game with Winnipeg. They also carried a share of the top spot in the NHL's Patrick Division. After a 1-1 tie with the Jets, New Jersey no longer had either — the New York Islanders beat St. Louis 4-3 for a one-point lead in the division. "We expect to win every game," said Pat Verbeek, who scored the Devils' goal. "We're aren't thinking about streaks. We're gunning for first place." Ndayisenga returns for Turkey Day trot

By Jim Tierney Manchester Herald In his inception into the Manchester Thanksgiving Day Road Race during the Golden Anniversary edition in 1986, he was a key ingredient in one of the most memorable duels over the 4.77 mile loop. He wound up leading the newly crowned Manchester champ, John Doherty, by only two seconds. Now he is back to attempt to move up one notch on the prize list. Jean-Pierre Ndayisenga, originally from Brussels, Belgium, and who grew up in Burundi, Central Africa, is committed to return for the 51st running of the Manchester Thanksgiving Day Road Race on Nov. 26, 1987. West Virginia graduate has made quite a name for himself in running circles around the United States, on both the roads and the track. In his runner-up position to Doherty a year ago, Ndayisenga's time was 21:47 — the 10th fastest time ever run in Manchester. When briefed of the field for this year's race, Ndayisenga feels that he is one road race people should not miss. "It's going to be quite a show," the year-old said from his home in Fairfax, Va. Two other key entries have also been filed for Turkey Day. Gerard Donakowski and Yohes Ondieki. Donakowski, a three-time All American while at the University of Michigan, was the champion in the 10,000 meters at the U.S. TAC (The Athletics Congress) Track and Field Championships last June. He qualified first in the 10,000 event for the World Track and Field Championships in Rome in September. Ondieki was an All-American while at Iowa State University and now is one of the premier road racers in the country. Some of Ndayisenga's key achievements in 1987 have been: first place in the Fairfax (Va.) 10K where he defeated Jon Sinclair; first place in the Maryland 10K where he defeated Joseph Kipsang; first place in the Penn Relays 10K in May; seventh in the Falmouth (Mass.) Road Race; eighth in the Pittsburgh Great Race 10K in Pittsburgh where Keith Van Meter, third in the October/Feb 12K in Chicago; and second place in his most recent race at the Tulsa (Ok.) 15K where he lost to Gidamis Shabanga and defeated Ed Eyston and Sinclair. Ndayisenga placed sixth in the NCAA Division I Cross Country Nationals in 1984 and was third in the NCAA outdoor 5000 in 1985. He has run 25:17 for 10,000 meters (6.2 miles), 13:27 for 5000, and 22:30 for five miles. Sponsored by Adidas, Ndayisenga has unlimited potential, but realizes that there's a lot to learn about road running. "Guys like (John) Treacy are consistent," he said. "People like me, we're still learning. These guys already have some tricks." One thing is certain, Ndayisenga will not let Treacy get away on the Highland Street Hill where the latter has made his decisive move in the past.

Storm creates havoc with schoolboy slate

If you know when the football, soccer and cross country events that were scheduled to be played today are going to take place, please call. The mid-week snowstorm that dumped six to eight inches of snow around the state has created havoc with the scholastic calendar and there's no telling when events are going to be played. The East Catholic High football game against St. Bernard's of Uncasville has definitely been postponed. East Director of Athletics Tom Mall called Friday morning and, after a conference with St. Bernard's AD Art Lamoureux, said the game will be played Monday at 3:30 p.m. at Mount Nene. The Manchester High football game against East Hartford High School at East Hartford's Ted Knurek Memorial Field tonight at 7 was still scheduled at press time. The Manchester High girls' state Class 1 soccer match with Staples High, after stops and starts, has been set for Monday at 2 p.m. at Memorial Field. CIAC Assistant Executive Director Mike Savage said Friday all first-round games must be played by Saturday, but not enough available sites were available. The Coventry High state Class 5 Division game at home with East Hampton is in the same boat as Memorial Field. The Patriots' game was scheduled Friday but Coventry's field was still under six inches of snow this morning. A decision on this game is to be made.

MHS looks for winning campaign while EC wants an unbeaten year

By Jim Tierney Manchester Herald The CCC East Division football matchup between Manchester High and East Hartford High, scheduled tonight at 7 at Ted Knurek Memorial Field in East Hartford, could have had larger implications if the Indians had knocked off Enfield a week ago. Nevertheless, this matchup remains very important to Coach Ron Cournoyer and his players. First, they would like to knock off the Hornets who are 7-1 overall, a perfect 5-0 in the CCC East, and the top-ranked Class LL team in the state. Second, a win over East Hartford would keep Manchester's hopes of a winning campaign alive. The Indians are 3-4-1 overall and 3-2-1 in the CCC East. "They (East Hartford) have an excellent team," Cournoyer said. "It would be a tremendous reward to knock off a tournament-bound team. We're looking for a winning season." If Manchester wins tonight, it would give them a 4-0 record, leaving them with one obstacle left between itself and a winning season — the No. 1 ranked team in the state, East Catholic, on Thanksgiving Day. East Hartford is led by 6-foot-2 senior quarterback Dan Lawrence and senior halfback Bob Stefank. "Lawrence can throw the ball all over the lot," Cournoyer said. "He (Stefank) is a very quick back. They have an exciting team." Another key offensive threat was pon 6-2 senior tight end Dion Crump. Manchester, which has endured injuries since Day 1 of the season, seems to have come around in the health department. "This is the healthiest we've been," Cournoyer said. Senior linebacker Chris Rossito and junior noseguard Ray Angie have returned to the Indian lineup. What will it take for Manchester to beat East Hartford? "We have to be able to pass the ball and exploit our speed," Cournoyer said. Senior quarterback Rob McLaughlin has three main targets: seniors Dave Russell and Eric Rasmus, and junior tight end Chip Driggs. Senior halfback Ron Smith and sophomore halfback Art Leonard possess the game-breaking speed in the backfield. "We're capable of scoring from anywhere on the field," Cournoyer said. "Our defense has played solid. I think we can beat them." East Hartford's only loss was to Concord High of West Hartford, 23-16. Fermi High of Enfield, which Manchester defeated, 20-14, had the Hornets on the ropes in the fourth quarter of an earlier game. East Hartford came back and won, 21-17. Meanwhile, East Catholic (6-0, 4-0 in the ACC) will host St. Bernard's (3-5, 0-3 in the ACC) of Uncasville Monday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. at Mount Nene in an ACC tilt. The game was originally scheduled Friday night but was postponed because of unplayable field conditions. With the Eagles' big 6-6 win over St. Joseph's of Trumbull last week, they clinched their first outright ACC title. Despite having no league implications, this matchup with the Saints looms large as the Eagles attempt to produce the first undefeated campaign in school gridiron history. "I think our kids have enough to keep them motivated," Eagle Coach Jude Kelly said. "They respect it because it's a league game." St. Bernard's lost, 37-35, on the final play of the game earlier to powerful Notre Dame of West Haven. They (St. Bernard's) are really quick," Kelly said. "They'll be highly motivated. They make you work for everything." They throw the ball quite a bit." Senior halfbacks Aaron Albrico and Jason Talbot lead the Eagles with nine and eight touchdowns, respectively, while junior quarterback Marc Mangialicco has six TDs. East is averaging 30 points per game. "We can't have a letdown," Kelly warned.

Devils' goal is first place

By Barry Wilner The Associated Press The New Jersey Devils will have to wait for their piece of history. Not that they care much — they'd rather have a piece of first place. The Devils carried an eight-game home winning streak into Thursday night's game with Winnipeg. They also carried a share of the top spot in the NHL's Patrick Division. After a 1-1 tie with the Jets, New Jersey no longer had either — the New York Islanders beat St. Louis 4-3 for a one-point lead in the division. "We expect to win every game," said Pat Verbeek, who scored the Devils' goal. "We're aren't thinking about streaks. We're gunning for first place." The NHL record for consecutive wins at home is 11, set by Chicago from Oct. 9-Nov. 28 in 1985-86. Only three other NHL teams had won at least nine straight home games, the last being another Blackhawks team between Oct. 10 and Nov. 21, 1971. The Devils still are the only NHL team not to lose at home this season. "They play good, sound defensive hockey," said Winnipeg star Dale Hawerchuk, who scored the other goal. "They don't give you a lot of quality opportunities. They play good position hockey and play with a lot of confidence." The Jets have been doing well, with a 9-1 record and only one loss in the last seven games. Also on Thursday, it was Philadelphia 2, Pittsburgh 2, and Boston 3, St. Louis 2.

NHL Roundup

Hawerchuk evened it on a power play 40 seconds into the third period, tipping a blue-line shot by defenseman Dave Ellett past goalie Bob Sauve for his seventh goal of the season. "I thought we could have won, but Sauve made some good saves," Hawerchuk said. "A 1-1 game, you can't be too disappointed." Wolanin echoed those thoughts. "We'll take the point," he said. "We play everyone at an obstacle we have to overcome. Islanders 4, Blues 3 At St. Louis, the Islanders recorded their third straight 4-3 decision. Pat LaFontaine and Greg Gilbert each had a goal and an assist and Bob Bassen added a 4-1 lead and held on. Lakers already in midseason form

By The Associated Press Everything I've said about us will happen, but will take time. This team will look like a cohesive team about a month down the line." Rockets 116, Kings 114 World B. Ralph Sampson scored 41 points for the visiting Rockets. Reggie Theus led the Kings with 34 and Otis Thorpe had 29. Spurs 123, Sonics 118 Johnny Dawkins scored 23 points, Walter Berry 23 and Alvin Robertson 20 as San Antonio held off visiting Seattle. "We're not in the Lakers' class," he said. "My optimism is still there."

Storm creates havoc with schoolboy slate

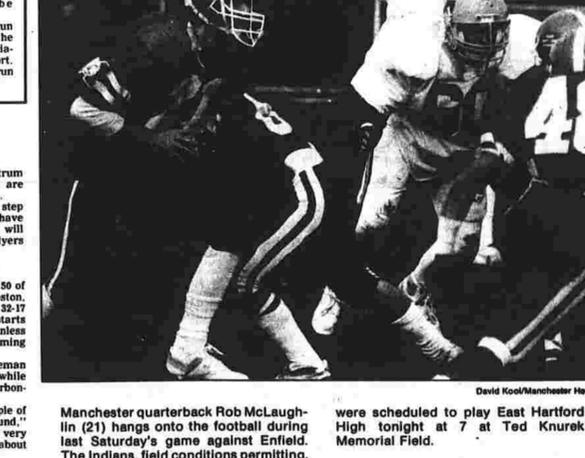

If you know when the football, soccer and cross country events that were scheduled to be played today are going to take place, please call. The mid-week snowstorm that dumped six to eight inches of snow around the state has created havoc with the scholastic calendar and there's no telling when events are going to be played. The East Catholic High football game against St. Bernard's of Uncasville has definitely been postponed. East Director of Athletics Tom Mall called Friday morning and, after a conference with St. Bernard's AD Art Lamoureux, said the game will be played Monday at 3:30 p.m. at Mount Nene. The Manchester High football game against East Hartford High School at East Hartford's Ted Knurek Memorial Field tonight at 7 was still scheduled at press time. Bidwill is meeting with Maryland Stadium Authority officials to discuss the possibility of relocating his football team, according to a published report. The Baltimore Sun today quoted Herb Belgrad, the authority chairman, as saying that Bidwill would meet with them and hold a news conference this afternoon at the World Trade Center. The visit will be the first by Bidwill since he began actively exploring other homes for his National Football League team. In recent weeks, he has also visited Memphis, Tenn., Phoenix, Ariz., and Jacksonville, Fla. The cities of Phoenix and Tempe reportedly are offering a $10-million package to entice the Cardinals to move.

Cash advances in Wembley play

WEMBLEY, England — Wimbledon champion Pat Cash of Australia struggled to beat Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 in the second round of the $375,000 Benson and Hedges tennis championships. In the quarterfinals, Cash will meet No. 5 seed Anders Jarryd, who beat Switzerland's Claudio Mezzadri 6-4, 6-3. Yankees purchase six contracts

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees purchased the contracts of six players from the Columbus Clippers of the Class AAA American Association Thursday, bringing them to the 40-man roster limit. The six are: catcher Mitch Lyden, outfielder Darren Reid, third baseman Chris Alvarez and pitchers Amalio Carreno, Troy Evers and Steve Frey. None of the players have any major-league experience. The Yankees also signed left-hander Mike Kinnunen to a minor-league contract. Kinnunen was 0-0 with a 4.95 earned run average in 18 games this season with Baltimore.

Knicks send Sparrow to the Bulls

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks traded veteran guard Rory Sparrow to the Chicago Bulls Thursday in exchange for a 1988 draft choice. The Knicks said they will receive the lower of the two second-round picks that previously belonged to Indiana and New Jersey. The Bulls acquired both selections in earlier trades. Sparrow, 25, saw limited playing time this season, scoring just 10 points in three games. He entered the season with a career average of 9.5 points per game in seven NBA seasons, including a 7.6 ppg average in 40 games last season. Sprow, who played collegiately at Villanova, began his NBA career with New Jersey in 1980-81. He was released by the Nets, picked up by Atlanta in 1981-82 and was acquired by the Knicks on Feb. 12, 1983. The Knicks also announced the signing of 6-foot-6 swingman Johnny Newman, a second-year player who was a late cut by the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Montana 'doubtful' to start Sunday

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — Joe Montana reported to practice with a swollen knuckle on his right hand Thursday, and San Francisco 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said that it was "very doubtful" Montana would start Sunday's game against the New Orleans Saints. "I woke up this morning and it was pretty stiff. So we'll just have to see how much better it gets," said Montana, who wore an electrical stimulator on the hand Thursday. The quarterback, who has thrown an NFL-leading 19 touchdowns passes this season, apparently was hurt on Wednesday while holding the ball for placekicker Ray Wersching. Steve Young, the backup quarterback who has not thrown a pass yet this season, did all the passing in Thursday's practice.

Blue Jays name Hebner manager

TORONTO — Former major-league infielder Richie Hebner was appointed Thursday as manager of the Toronto Blue Jays' farm team at Myrtle Beach, S.C. In the Class A Southern Atlantic League. Hebner, 39, was out of baseball in 1987. He replaces Barry Foote, who was promoted to the Blue Jays' Class AA team at Knoxville in the Southern League.

Patriots release TE Greg Baty

FOXBORO, Mass. — Tight end Greg Baty, who served as a backup to veteran Lin Dawan, was waived by the New England Patriots Thursday, club officials announced. "Greg came to talk to me Wednesday. He was very unhappy about his playing situation and expressed a desire to be traded or waived," Coach Raymond Berry said. "Since the trading deadline has passed, I decided to place him on waivers." The trading deadline was Nov. 3. Baty had 15 catches for 138 yards this season. He played in all of the Patriots' non-strike games. He was third in receptions on the Patriots, behind Stanley Morgan with 24 and Tony Collins with 18.

Graf warns all: She's improving

By Rick Warner
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Steffi Graf has a frightening message for women's tennis: She's getting better. "I'm coming to the net more," she said Thursday. "When I played Hana Mandlikova in the finals at Zurich (Nov. 3), I came in on the important points and I always won. That gave me more confidence." Not that she needed it. Graf has won 10 tournaments and 71 of 73 matches in 1987. Regardless of how she does at next week's Virginia Slims Championships in New York, the 18-year-old West German will finish the year ranked as the No. 1 female player in the world. "It makes it easier knowing that even if I lose, I will still be No. 1," she said. "That takes away a lot of the pressure."

The $1 million Slims tournament, which begins Monday at Madison Square Garden, features the top 16 singles players and top eight doubles teams in single-elimination competition. Graf, the top seed, plays unseeded Zina Garrison in the first round Wednesday. No. 3 Chris Evert, No. 5 Mandlikova and No. 7 Helena Sukova are also in Graf's half of the draw. Second-seeded Martina Navratilova, who is seeking her fifth straight Virginia Slims title, opens Tuesday against unseeded Catarina Lindqvist. Other seeds in that half of the draw are No. 4 Pam Shriver, No. 6 Gabriela Sabatini and No. 8 Manuela Maleeva. Navratilova's road to the final appears easier than Graf's, but that doesn't bother the teenager with the booming forehand. "It's the best 16 players, so every match is a tough one," she said. Graf's only two losses of the year were to Navratilova in the finals of Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. She beat Navratilova in their other two 1987 matches, the French Open final and the semifinals of the Lipton International. Navratilova, who values Grand Slam events above all others, says she would not trade her year for Graf's even though her young rival won seven more tournaments. The feeling is mutual. "The most important thing for me is to be consistent and always play my best," Graf said. "I won 10 tournaments this year, so I'm very happy. I wouldn't trade that for anything."

West Germany's Steffi Graf, who is No. 1 in the women's tennis rankings, said Thursday that she has bad news for all her foes. She said she's getting better.

"Maybe in five years, I'll appreciate it. Maybe I'll wonder, 'How did I do that?'"

"It's impossible to top this year. So busy in fact, that her accomplishments have yet to sink in."

Gompert in major upset win

CHICAGO (AP) — Unseeded Kate Gompert, never a winner of a major tennis tournament, is making a move in that direction thanks to her stunning upset of second-seeded Hana Mandlikova at the Virginia Slims of Chicago.

Ranked 25th in the world, Gompert a 6-2, 7-6 victor over the Czechoslovak to advance to the quarterfinals of the $150,000 tournament, today will face 16-year-old Natalie Zvereva of the Soviet Union. "I have no illusions about Zvereva," Gompert said Thursday. "I know she's tough and I'll have to be exceptionally sharp and on my toes to win." "She only missed about seven balls and stayed on the baseline so much, I never knew when I should come to the net," Mandlikova said of Gompert.

Zvereva's teammate on the five-member Soviet touring group, Lelita Meshki, upset seventh-seeded Bettina Bunge of Switzerland, 6-4, 6-2. Meshki must battle third-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia in another quarterfinal match.

Kate Gompert, of Rancho Mirage, Calif., chomps on her racket during a break in her match Thursday against No. 2 seed Hana Mandlikova at the Virgins Slims of Chicago tournament. Gompert was an upset 6-2, 7-6 winner.

Bean strings together two good rounds

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

KAPALUA, Hawaii — Andy Bean knuckled a problem. "Often, the hardest thing in the world to do is put together good rounds back to back," he said. And, at the start of Thursday's play in the $600,000 Kapalua International golf tournament, it appeared Bean wouldn't be able to follow an opening 66 with a decent second-round score. He failed to birdie the par-5 opening hole — "like giving away a shot," the long-hitting Bean said — then missed the green on No. 3 and faced an 18-foot putt for par. He made the par putt. "I just turned it all around," Bean said. "I felt great. I felt like, 'We're off. Let's go. Let's see what we can do.'"

Bean romped through the final 15 holes, trimming seven strokes off par to finish with a 65. His three-round total of 131 gave him a three-shot lead at the midway point. Bean, the defending champion of this unofficial but PGA Tour-sanctioned event, completed 36 holes without making a bogey. He set a tournament record with his 13-under-par score after two tours of the 6,761-yard Bay course at the Kapalua resort. "I feel like it's January and we're just starting the season," said Bean, who missed most of the 1987 season with an elbow injury. "This is the best I've played in a long time, the best in at least two years," said Bean, who had a gaudy collection of nine 30 on his card.

Lenny Wadkins and Sandy Lyle of Scotland each staged a rally to gain a tie for second at 134. Wadkins came back from a double bogey on No. 2 to score seven birdies — giving him 15 for two days — and a 67. Lyle also had to overcome a front-side double bogey, as well as some stomach problems, to salvage a 69.

Payne Stewart, who had a 69, was at 136, five shots off the pace. It was two strokes farther back to Ben Crenshaw and Ian Woosnam of Wales. Crenshaw had a 68, Woosnam a 70. Jack Nicklaus improved with a 70 on Thursday.

Napoleitano, whose best time of 1:53 2-5 equaled the old mile-track world record, has won 14 of 22 starts this year, with three seconds and four thirds.

Among the faster pacers, Jate Lobell, trained and driven by Mark O'Mara, has posted a fine record of 15 wins and seven seconds in 23 starts in 1987, but there has been some criticism in light of his unimpressive 15-race season as a 2-year-old. "I think he was built up bigger than life last year," O'Mara said. "He's proved he's a good horse on all site tracks and under all type circumstances. He's missed a check one time."

Jate Lobell is the co-second choice at $2 with Run The Table.

Two of Mack Lobell's 12 victories and all three of his losses this year came in meetings with Napoletano. In the Accorn, Mother Goose and Included in his victories were the fastest trotting mile in history, a 1:52 1-5 on a mile track at Springfield, Ill., and a world-record equaling 1:57 2-5 on a half-mile track at Rosecroft Raceway.

A victory for Mack Lobell would clinch Trotter of the Year and probably Horse of the Year. He was champion 2-year-old trotter last year.

Mack Lobell, Napoletano in another showdown

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — There is no question that Napoletano stands behind Mack Lobell in what was supposed to be a showdown battle between the two dominant trotters of the year. "A lot depends on the draw and how many horses are entered," John Campbell, the driver of Mack Lobell, history's fastest trotter, said last week. "It's unfair," Tommy Houghton, the trainer of Napoletano, who has beaten Mack Lobell in three of five meetings, said after post-positions were drawn on Monday. Mack Lobell will start from the No. 5 post in the middle of the first row for tonight's $442,662 Breeders Crown 3-year-old Colt and Gelding Trot over Pompano Park's five-eighths-mile track. Napoletano, meanwhile, drew No. 11, meaning he will start second from the rail in the second tier.

"Every horse belongs with his nose on the gate," Houghton said. In order for that to happen, 13 horses have to be entered. But the trot drew only 12, moving Napoletano into the second tier.

The Breeders' Cup 3-year-old Colt and Gelding Pace, on the other hand, drew 13 entrants and was split into two $70,822 divisions. The first four finishers in each heat will return for the $429,999 final.

Armenian rugs have symbolism

NEW YORK (AP) - A shopper looking for an Oriental rug is fortunate to come across one that carries the symbol of the Khatchkar, or Armenian cross, within the intricate design, notes the primate of the Eastern Diocese of the Armenian Church of America.

"These unique rugs, many of which may be anywhere from 100 to more than 100 years old, embody the very expression of the Armenian Christian soul," says His Eminence Archbishop Terkman Manogian. For centuries the Khatchkar, which somewhat resembles the Celtic cross, has been one of the most important motifs in Armenian sculpture and manuscript illumination. He points out that the Khatchkar is used for commemorative purposes and is found on all Armenian religious edifices. The one on the altar stone of St. Yartan Cathedral in New York City, headquarters of the Armenian Church of America, is more than 400 years old.

"In rugs, the cross was often subtly woven into decorative and elaborate lacelike designs," the archbishop explains. "It may appear in the center, in a medallion, in a series of designs along horizontal or vertical borders, or it may be integrated in some other fashion into the overall design of the rug."

Armenian sculptors were said to have carved the Gospel in stone on our churches, and so our rug weavers used the symbol of the cross to demonstrate "their faith in many unusual ways."

He notes that Armenia, converted by St. Gregory in A.D. 301, was the world's first Christian nation.

"As master weavers for centuries, the Armenians wove all kinds of rugs, including the most famous in the Persian, Turkish and Caucasian repertoires," he said. "In some cases, they openly wove the cross into rugs, while in many others they did it secretly so as not to offend the Moslem rulers of the countries in which they lived. This was especially true in Ottoman Turkey, where Armenians were cruelly persecuted."

Khatchkars can be found on many types of old Oriental rugs, particularly Karabagh, Gendjer and Zoras, the primate said. Like other weavers, the Armenians utilized flowers, birds, trees, animals and geometric designs of every description.

"Very often, the use of certain symbols, such as the dove, the dragon and, of course, the Khatchkar, identifies the rugs specifically as the product of Armenian weavers," he said. "There has been a great deal of exchange of artistic interpretation, and at the present time it is possible that many non-Armenian weavers in the Middle East may be reproducing the Khatchkar in new rugs without realizing its religious significance."

Among the most avid collectors of rugs with the symbol of the Khatchkar are the Armenians themselves, he said.

"Whether they are in their ancient homeland in the Caucasus, or scattered in the diaspora throughout the world, it is their Christian faith that binds them together as one people."

Padding brings jail sentence

PELL CITY, Ala. (AP) - A woman who drew five years in prison for hitting an assistant principal with the paddle three times used to spank her son says there's no way it could happen again - she's taken her children out of the school.

Yvick Elmore, who was sentenced Thursday by Circuit Judge H.E. Holladay, was convicted Oct. 28 of first-degree assault for striking Elsie McGowan and causing a gash in the woman's forehead that required four stitches.

"I'm real sorry it happened. The 30-year-old mother of four told the judge in this Birmingham suburb, "There's no way it could happen again... Our children are no longer enrolled at that school."

Mrs. Elmore struck Mrs. McGowan three times in the head Feb. 12 at an elementary school, said many people were skeptical about Mrs. Elmore's contention that the paddling was tantamount to child abuse.

"That same day a white teacher paddled her daughter in another class and she didn't do anything," Lawley said, on the bus, according to testimony. Attorneys said Mrs. McGowan had hit the boy with the paddle three times without the permission of his parents, who had asked to be notified before their children were disciplined.

"I was pleased with the sentence, because I feel like justice has been done," said Mrs. McGowan.

She said the paddling incident was "blown out of proportion. I still believe in paddling - but only as a last resort and when done mildly with love and care."

James Lawley, principal of the elementary school, said many people were skeptical about Mrs. Elmore's contention that the paddling was tantamount to child abuse.

"That same day a white teacher paddled her daughter in another class and she didn't do anything," Lawley said.

Denver auto auction goes state-of-the-art

By Robert C. Unruh
 The Associated Press

DENVER - State-of-the-art mass auction centers are becoming as central to America's used-car businesses as the ubiquitous Main Street car lot.

Trend leader General Electric Co. recently opened the Denver Auto Auction, its latest auto auction outlet. The sleek auction operation can display 5,000 vehicles and keep six auctioneers talking at the same time.

"General Electric intends to change the image of local auctions," said Donald B. Fowler, vice president for sales and marketing of GE Credit Auto Auctions.

The concept of auto auctions is simple: Dealers can get rid of vehicles they don't want or need, and they can acquire those they do want. For example, four-wheel-drive vehicles in Rocky Mountain states bring a premium, while tow cars and Cadillacs are popular in Texas and Oklahoma.

The National Auto Auction Association has nearly 300 members, but some experts believe GE Auto Auction and Ron Watts, who has auto shops in Billings and Columbus, Mont., said he has been buying "all kinds of pickups, Fords and Chevies" for years at the auction. He especially likes to snap up the largest in the nation with 88 acres and six lanes for simultaneous auctions.

Special events and holidays have produced up-and-down volume so far, she said, but "we want to get to running 2,500 on average consigned and selling at least 50 percent of those units (weekly)."

Auctions in Chicago and San Bernardino, Calif., offer 11 and 12 auction lanes, with the California facility handling about 3,000 vehicles weekly. Fowler said there are others that will push San Bernardino to keep its No. 1 volume ranking.

GE purchased the old Denver Auto Auction, a regional facility selling some 350 cars weekly. In 1985, it was one of GE's early acquisitions. By the end of 1988, there could be 22 or 23 GE auction centers, said Fowler.

Corporate fleet vehicles, factory vehicles that cannot be sold as new, rental units and lease return cars all go on the sale block at the Denver Auto Auction. Many have only a few thousand miles, and some factory test vehicles have only a few hundred miles.

The cost of auctioning a car, in addition to repairs or cleaning, follows a sliding scale based on the car's price. For example, a $6,500 car costs $140 to auction.

Denver's 66,000-square-foot facility recently offered vehicles ranging from 1987 Corvettes to 1959 Thunderbirds to dump trucks.

"Anything that makes money" is what Sidney, Mont., auto dealer Dick Taddini comes to the Denver Auto Auction to track down. He purchased three right away at a recent sale, and was hoping to end up with four or five.

The used car manager at Suss Pontiac in the Denver area, Paul Melberg, said his lot gets plenty of top-of-the-line trade-ins, but he also needs lower-end models that can retail in the $3,500-$4,000 range. He usually buys five or six.

Ron Watts, who has auto shops in Billings and Columbus, Mont., said he has been buying "all kinds of pickups, Fords and Chevies" for years at the auction. He especially likes to snap up the largest in the nation with 88 acres and six lanes for simultaneous auctions.

From there, if the car is ready to be sold, it lines up for a quick drive through, usually taking less than a minute, to be auctioned. If it needs cleaning or repairs, a 27,000-square-foot building and staff are ready.

"They can put a car together," Tawater said, with full mechanical, body and paint operations. The seller is charged for the services, but as the auction advertises, "Remember - nice clean cars get a lot more attention."

Hot new stars emerging from smash movies

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — With the nation's movie box office roaring toward a record, a major outfall of the bullish film market has been little noticed: the emergence of hot new stars.

Whether producers like it or not, stars are the lifeblood of movies and always have been. But with the decline of the studio system, star power diminished in the 1970s and early '80s.

Only a handful of performers were considered stars, including Robert Redford, Burt Reynolds, Dustin Hoffman and Al Pacino, and because they were in such great demand, the actors commanded multimillion-dollar salaries.

The ultimate was reached with Sylvester Stallone's $16 million for "Rambo: First Blood III," though he has since modified his contract in return for a larger share of the returns.

Now, the hits of 1987 have created a number of "bankable" names (those who can inspire financing for film projects) from actors who were either unknown or lesser known a year ago.

"Fatal Attraction," one of the year's smash hits, has established Glenn Close as a dramatic star of first rank after a series of distinguished but less showy roles. The thriller also has catapulted Anne Archer to the forefront of the industry after years in supporting roles.

Kevin Costner, whose role in "The Big Chill" was reduced to playing a corpse, came alive in 1987 with two hits, "The Untouchables" ($75 million gross) and "No Way Out" ($33 million).

Dennis Quaid, who has been appearing in movies for a decade, surged into leading-man status with three films: "Innerspace," "The Big Easy," and "Suspect."

"Innerspace" also provided star status for "SCTV" and "Saturday Night Live" comic Martin Short, soon to be seen opposite Annette O'Toole in "Cross My Heart."

The Academy Award-winning "Platoon" brought stardom for at least two of its actors: Tom Berenger, currently in "Someone to Watch Over Me," and Charlie Sheen, soon in "No Man's Land."

The surprise hit of "Dirty Dancing" has brought impetus to the careers of Jennifer Grey and Patrick Swayze, and "RoboCop" has drawn new attention to Peter Weller. Robert

Downey Jr. seems capable of joining the ranks of the younger stars on the basis of "The Pickup Artist" and the upcoming "Less Than Zero."

Although the reception to "The Living Daylights" was mixed, the $50 million domestic gross seemed to indicate that Timothy Dalton was accepted as the new James Bond and could prove useful in other leading roles. With "Stakeout," Emilio Estevez showed he could handle grown-up roles. In "Summer School," Mark Harmon demonstrated his ability to transfer from television to the big screen.

The trend is excellent for directors, said Peter Yates ("Bullseye"), who directed Quaid and Cher in "Suspect." "You can now ask for good, trained actors and get the answer of, 'Yes,' instead of, 'Well, I don't know if I can sell that to exhibitors.'"

"I never know who wants major stars," he said. "All I know is that the first two weeks' business much easier, much better. I think basically the public likes the idea of stars. I think it's very healthy when there are more stars to choose from. It's no longer a question of (Robert) Redford, (Paul) Newman and (Dustin) Hoffman."

"With much wider selection of actors today, (the film business) has become more like a company of actors, personalities."

Veteran producer Ray Stark ("Funny Girl," "The Way We Were") observed: "I think there has been an upsurge in stars who are good actors and personalities as well."

Stark has hired Costner for "Beverage" to be filmed early next year. "He has a tremendous truth within himself, and that is true of all the great stars."

He also has a brilliant story sense, and I am making him executive producer on the picture."

A healthy trend in today's film world has been the emergence of new female stars, with Close and Archer joining other recent arrivals: Kim Basinger, Shelley Long, Molly Ringwald, Whoopi Goldberg and Kathleen Turner.

"The situation is much better," Archer said. "But I wish there were dozens of fabulous female roles. I wish there were films in which most of the characters were women instead of men. Almost every film you look at has five male characters to every one female. It's all out of proportion, an inequity in the business."

Richard Attenborough relaxes during filming of the $20 million epic, "Cry Freedom," a Universal Pictures feature documentary about the struggle against Apartheid in South Africa.

Apartheid reaches Hollywood

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In 1983, Richard Attenborough won the Academy Award for "Gandhi," the result of his 20-year effort to film the life story of India's martyred leader.

This month Universal Pictures is releasing "Cry Freedom," a $20 million epic about the struggle against apartheid in South Africa. It stars Kevin Kline as crusading editor Donald Woods and Denzel Washington as the black leader Stephen Biko.

Attenborough, 64, made his film debut as a sailor in Noel Coward's 1942 film "In Which We Serve." He continued as an actor after his wartime service, then turned directing in the 1960s with "Oh! What a Lovely War." His other films as a director include "Young Winston," "A Bridge Too Far," "Magic" and "A Chorus Line."

In Hollywood for the opening of "Cry Freedom," Attenborough talked about his latest project in an interview with The Associated Press.

Q. What was your purpose in making "Cry Freedom"?
A. I wanted to reach people who are unknowing, indifferent, or actively antagonistic, to persuade them that they can no longer ignore what goes on in South Africa.
Q. How do you balance drama with the obvious message?
A. It's very difficult. The problem always is that if you make an essentially documentary film which is going to play in the art houses and thus "preach to the choir," that's fine. But I think it's a waste of time. The people I want to reach are those who have never even considered the whole question of South Africa. In order to do that, you have to make a film that is fundamentally entertaining. I'm in the entertainment business; I'm not a politician. ... I make movies for millions of people all over the world.

Q. Was "Cry Freedom" a long project for you?
A. It was a long project in the cooking. In that I tried to make a film on apartheid in South Africa in the late 1960s. I bought a number of subjects and commissioned screenplays, but I never found one that was sufficiently entertaining.

After the showing of "Gandhi," this remarkable man, Donald Woods, sent me his biography of Steve Biko and Woods' autobiography, "Asking for Trouble." For the first time, I thought there was a story that was encapsulated in its own time — and it also had the entertainment qualities. It had the triumph of the human spirit; it didn't end in total disaster.

Q. Was the film as difficult to finance as "Gandhi"?
A. Oddly enough, I don't think I've ever made a film where the money came more easily. I went to see Frank Price, who had moved from Columbia to Universal. After the usual pleasantries, he asked me what I wanted to do. I said I wanted to do the Donald Woods stories. He said he knew the stories, which had been at Columbia, and he asked who I wanted to write the script. I said Jack Briley, who wrote "Gandhi."

He asked, "How much will it cost?" I said, "I don't know, maybe $20 million." He said, "If you get the right script and it's $20 million, you have the money." (Laughing) I was never so amazed in my life.

Q. Did you face any problems in shooting?
A. Nothing significant. The only real concern was security. We filmed in Zimbabwe, which is one of the front-line states facing South Africa. Consequently, my wife and I had armed guards all the time. When we went out to supper in the evening, we had someone sitting at the next table. Armed guards were on all the sets.

We learned from the government at the end of the picture that there had been four incursions from South Africa in an attempt to destroy sets and that sort of thing, but we were not aware of that.

Q. Have you visited South Africa?
A. Only once. I agreed to go for the premiere of "Gandhi," only if the audience was not segregated. I think the government tried to cheat me. They said the audience would not be segregated, but that was only in the theaters where the premiers were. So I didn't go.

But I went with my wife in 1984 to see as many people as I could, because I hadn't decided about making the film. I felt it essential to see Steve's widow. If she didn't want the film made, I wouldn't do it. Fortunately, she was enthusiastic and said she would like the story to be based on the books of Donald Woods, one of Steve's closest friends.

Eventually, (the government) did a sort of character assassination on television.

Market lives in blazing colors

By Carl Manning
The Associated Press

CUERNAVACA, Mexico — Dangling in a giant net high above the fruit and vegetable vendors, the artist in his paint-spattered coveralls carefully adds a few strokes to what he hopes will become the world's largest mural.

The images are bold and bright. Splashes of reds, yellows and greens in a primitive style reflect the daily life below in the city's Municipal Market, a collection of 4,000 vendors under a huge, arched concrete roof.

For the artist, Jose Silverio Saiz Zorrilla, it is a dream that has been with him since he first walked through the market with a group of friends in 1979, looked up and saw the ceiling. To him, it was a canvas waiting for a brush.

"My dream is to tell the story of the people for the people. But it can not be done without the help of the people," Zorrilla said as he dabbed paint to the latest of six panels lining one side of the market near downtown Cuernavaca, a fast-growing city 45 miles southwest of Mexico City.

One of the first problems he had to overcome was the simple mechanics of how to paint a ceiling without disrupting the market below with scaffolding. His solution was to erect a giant net to hang like a hammock, fasten it to the ceiling with hooks and then lie in it while painting. "It took me five years to come up with the idea, which I got by watching them," said Zorrilla, pointing to spiders weaving a web 100 feet above the shoppers.

The work draws praise from his most constant watchers, the vendors. "It's very beautiful and gives the market prestige. People come to look and of course to buy. That's good for us," said Emiliano Medina, who has been selling onions and peppers in the market for 20 years.

Zorrilla started work in 1984 on the planned 38,000-square-foot mural, and hopes to have it completed by the year 2000. The design for each panel first is drawn on paper, then divided into squares and painted on the ceiling.

So far, however, he has only been able to complete about 7,200 square feet, working only when he has money to buy paint. The rest of the time, he spends on his smaller paintings or refining his ideas about the giant mural.

"When we have the paint, we can work. It is that simple," he said with a shrug of his broad shoulders.

Zorrilla first planned to paint a giant border around a centerpiece that would pay homage to the history of Mexico and Morelos state, whose capital is Cuernavaca. But a time, he realized it was too big a project, even for a man with grand visions.

Now, he said, he plans to complete what will be a border of connecting panels around the outer edge, with each panel measuring about 45 feet by 15 feet. Then, he hopes, artists from throughout the Western Hemisphere will come and each paint a section of the center.

"They would paint their impressions of their world, a collection of the politics and social structure of the Americas, by people of different countries. Truly, it would be international," he said.

The latest panel is nearly finished after four months of work by Zorrilla and his assistant, Humberto Lopez, 40.

He is as important as me," the artist said. "It is my creation, but he helps make it a reality."

Like the other panels, it shows an aspect of the market life below. In this case, it is the fish vendors, with a giant scale weighing a fish and rows of soft drink bottles in the background.

Each panel stands as a separate work of art, but together there is a sense of continuity representative of the market. Among the images are a giant serpent's head and corn — both intricate parts of Mexico's ancient Indian heritage, fruit vendors, a woman buying vegetables, soft drink and tortilla vendors and meat sellers.

Mexican artist Jose Silverio Saiz Zorrilla works on what he says will be the world's largest mural, high above the municipal market in Cuernavaca.

Little people get a leg up on life

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I saw a letter in your column advertising Tall Clubs International. I hope you will do as much for short people. Our club, the Billy Barty Foundation for Little People, is a non-profit organization founded by Billy Barty in 1957 for anyone 4 foot 10 and under. The foundation fights for little people's rights. It also acts as a resource center, giving information about available jobs, special clothing, shoes, health care, independent living and emotional support as well as social interaction. We welcome people of all ages, races and religions. For information about the club nearest you, write to: Billy Barty Foundation for Little People, 10554 Moorpark St., North Hollywood, Calif. 91602. Please enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope, and be patient because we rely on volunteers to staff our office.

DEAR SHARON: Here's hoping the gift gives "Little People" a big boost.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the safety of our four young children (three girls ages 7, 6 and 4, and a son almost 4). The other day we were shopping in one part of the store, my wife took the four children to another area of the store. When I went to join her, I found the children alone in the toy section. She had left them there while she went to the catalog department, which was in another section of the building - out of sight and sound of the toy area.

DEAR ABBY: I was very upset and don't feel that they should be left alone yet. She says that they can take care of themselves. Abby, the two younger ones are a handful for us, and I can't see how they can be controlled by their own will. Kidnapping, although very unlikely, is a fear of mine. Also they could get hurt, or damage something. Am I wrong? Also, at what age can the eldest be left alone at home to babysit the others?

DEAR FATHER: "Overprotective" is not in my book. Three children 7 and under should not be left in the care of an 8-year-old. If you are a parent, you should not be left unsupervised in a toy department - or any other department, for that matter. Untended children have been known to "disappear" from shopping malls and other public places.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 9-year-old girl. I read comics every morning and night. I feel tired and I should be checked out. My big sister and mom have a tired feeling, but when it happens to me, I shake and tremble and can barely walk. Should I be checked out?

DEAR READER: Yes. Symptoms of fatigue associated with shaking and trembling should be brought to your pediatrician's attention. Because loss of energy can have many causes, I think that you need an examination and, possibly, blood tests to check out the situation. It's important to investigate any symptoms - either in youngsters or adults - that deviate from normal.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My grandson said that if you take two aspirin at bedtime, you can lose three pounds overnight. What do you think?

DEAR READER: Unless your grandson is a research scientist discovering new, unpublished information about aspirin, I would have to disagree with him. In people who retain excess amounts of salt, the use of aspirin (and similar drugs) can cause poor blood flow through the kidneys, with a resulting buildup of urea in the system. Therefore, although aspirin can affect the kidneys, it does not act as a diuretic (stimulant to urinate flow). An overnight three-pound weight loss would be a highly unlikely consequence of taking two aspirin tablets.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My skin problems have been making life miserable for 16 years, since puberty. Accutane has helped somewhat, but my acne is cystic. It flares up around my period. Recently there's been a noticeable increase in hair around my nipples, below my navel and on my chin. Could this indicate that a hormonal imbalance is the cause of my acne?

DEAR READER: Yes, it could. Some forms of cystic acne appear to be dependent on male hormone levels. All women normally have small amounts of this hormone in their bodies. However, if the female/male hormone ratio is disrupted, acne and inappropriate hair growth can become more noticeable. Ask your dermatologist if he or she would be willing to refer you to an endocrinologist, a specialist who could assess your hormone imbalance.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 35, and all my back teeth have fillings. I brush twice a day, and at night I rinse with an anti-plaque liquid brush with a tartar-control paste and use a fluoride rinse. Is this helping or am I wasting my money?

DEAR READER: The use of fluoride rinse is probably sufficient; using both may be redundant. Nonetheless, if your dental attention is particularly prone to damage and decay, you may need to attend more scrupulously to oral hygiene than does the average person. Ask your dentist to give you specific advice. Dentists are usually more concerned about gums than cavities for your age group, so you'll probably get advice about flossing, instead.

On the way to work several weeks ago I saw a raccoon, "Big Deal," in downtown, suburban Manchester. I found myself feeling sorry for this raccoon. Where did he live? Was he safe there? Wouldn't he get parasites from eating garbage? I found myself feeling sorry for him not just because of the peril he faced in the foreign world in which he has chosen to live but because of all he is forfeiting by not living in the element for which he was created. Unless he forages for easily accessible trash and heads for the hills he will never know of quiet woods, clear streams, fish, fresh water mussels and crayfish. Raccoons were not created for downtown street corners and trash cans no matter how healthy his current outward appearance seems.

Doesn't that make you think just a little bit about the lifestyles many of us have chosen? Are we perhaps out of our element? What are we forfeiting by settling for the trash of this world rather than God's intended purposes for us.

Waylon Jennings reflects on life

By Joe Edwards
The Associated Press

WAYLON JENNINGS
... releases 55th album

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Reclusive rebel Waylon Jennings, a country music star who has guarded his privacy as fiercely as he fought for his independence, is baring his life with an autobiographical album. The new album, "A Man Called Boss," is Jennings' 55th LP. It traces his youthful days in West Texas to his cocaine habit at the height of his career in the mid-1970s when he and Willie Nelson teamed up. The record seems ironic from a performer who has rarely discussed his drug use in public and who has kept one of the lowest profiles in country music during his 24-year career.

"I'm taking a chance because this is so personal. I don't think anything like this has ever been done before," said Jennings, who is doing a Broadway-style, one-man show to perform songs on the LP.

The album cut, "I'm Living Free (There's Life After You)" is about his 21 years of drug abuse. "Drugs is a love affair just like it would be with another person. It's like a woman can become the most important thing in your life," he said.

"I had a bad habit, 21 years solid, as bad as anyone. It was $1,500-a-day for cocaine. I thought I could handle it. I was down to 170 pounds and having dizzy spells. I was on the edge."

He leased a home in Arizona in 1984 where he went and kicked the habit. "You go through pain and it messes up your sleeping," he said about the recovery. "I'd wake up at 2 or 3 in the morning. When my mind cleared, I saw the effect it was having on Jessi (Colter, his wife). You don't have the right to destroy others, and I was dying before her eyes. My boy's attention span (he was 4 then) was longer than mine."

His one-man show began with a four-day run at Duke University in North Carolina in September. It is co-produced by former "M.A.S.H." star Wayne Rogers. "Some people may not care, but I think some people will relate to it," Jennings said about the songs on the album which he performs during the show. "People like to be 'on the inside.' A few years ago, 4 million people wanted to hear me sing."

For the 50-year-old Jennings, 1987 has become a year to reflect on a career that includes 16 No. 1 country records and his years as a narrator on the hit TV series, "The Dukes of Hazzard."

His "Greatest Hits" album in 1979 sold 4 million copies after he cultivated a well-defined "outlaw" image through an LP of that name.

Jennings also was involved in well-publicized disputes with record producers and record companies over his insistence to do songs his way rather than heeding advice from others.

He lists the high point in his career as "selling all the records - 'Music Man' and 'Ol' Waylon' - and when Willie (Nelson) and I were hot."

He talked about two of his best known hits, both duets with Nelson, in a recent interview: "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys." "All of us are cowboys at heart; they are the lasting American hero. He signifies the Marlboro Man and the ladies man. He's got it all."

"Lucky Number 31" will be honest, I never liked it but I knew it was a hit song. It was about back to the basics. I've never been to Luckenbach (a small town in Texas)."

He and Nelson have always been close. "He's my brother of the road," Jennings said. However, further duets are unlikely because they record for competing labels and in the past, their sessions were always spur of the moment.

His recording of the theme song from "The Dukes of Hazzard" was a million seller, and misses doing the show. "It was a lot of fun and it gave me a whole different thing to do," he said. "I aimed the narration at children and it made it work. The show would have been the flop of the century if it had been aimed at adults."

His career could have been cut short by tragedy in 1959. He was scheduled to be on the light plane that crashed and killed Buddy Holly, Ritchie Valens and J.P. "The Big Bopper" Richardson.

Los Angeles band gets into the swim of things

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The band's sound was a little muffled and the usual gyrations a bit sluggish, but when it came time to play the Los Angeles Swim Stadium, Jim Mouth and his four musician friends jumped right in.

The group, named Atlantis, hauled drums, keyboards, guitar and microphones into the pool adjacent to the Los Angeles Coliseum Thursday, tuned up and let things rock — 10 feet under water.

"We could hear ourselves singing and everything down there," said headliner Mouth afterward. "It sounded so great I couldn't believe it."

The musicians, using water-proofed instruments plugged into low-voltage electrical equipment and breathing air pumped into swim masks, ran through 1950s tunes like "Sea Cruise" as well as their own composition "Wet Rap."

Mouth, a 35-year-old musician and entertainer, said the performance capped a dream he has had to put a full rock band in a pool since he played the drums under water about 10 years ago.

Political films highlight London's 31st film fest

LONDON (AP) — Two politically loaded British films will open and close next month's 31st London Film Festival, which this year features over 140 movies from 40 countries. "A Prayer for the Dying," Mike Hodges' film starring Mickey Rourke as a disillusioned Irish Republican Army gunman and Alan Bates as the gangster who hires him, opens the 18-day event on Nov. 11. The festival closes Nov. 29 with a love story set against racial strife in London, "Sammy and Rosie Get Laid," which is the much-anticipated new film from Stephen Frears and Hans Kureishi, the director-screenwriter team behind "My Beautiful Laundrette." Film festival director Sheila Whitaker defended her choice of "A Prayer for the Dying," which director Hodges publicly disowned prior to its poorly received American release in September from the Samuel Goldwyn Co. She said it was a good film. "It's a black comedy, highly ironic... We just look at the film as a film." Hodges charged that the film had been re-edited in such a way as to alter his sense of the material. Other British films to be screened include Richard Attenborough's highly acclaimed "Cry Freedom," with Denzel Washington as the late South African activist Steve Biko; Bruce Robinson's "Withnail and I," set in London in the late 1960s; and David Leland's "Wish You Were Here," with 16-year-old Emily Lloyd in a stunning film debut. Among the 34 American films being shown at the festival, which Whitaker calls "the major non-competitive festival in the world," are David Mamet's thriller "House of Games," which closed the New York Film Festival and won praise from critics and audiences. Paul Newman's "The Glass Menagerie," adapted from the Tennessee Williams play will also be shown, as well as one of the summer's blockbusters, "Stakeout," directed by John Badham and starring Richard Dreyfuss. As a how to "glaanost," the new openness associated with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the festival will show six films from the Soviet Union.
