Contras criticize peace plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega on Friday laid out a detailed plan for reaching a cease-fire in three weeks with the Contras fighting his leftist government and a mediator agreed to carry the proposal to the U.S.-backed rebels.

Ortega, indicating flexibility, called his plan "a proposal, not an ultimatum." Contra leaders, reacting to news reports in Miami, criticized the plan and termed it "a proposal for an orderly surrender."

Ortega's 11-point plan was received by Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, who agreed to act as a mediator between the two sides. The prelate planned to convey Ortega's offer to the Contras and seek a response, opening cease-fire negotiations.

The plan calls for a cease-fire to begin on Dec. 5 and for rebel troops inside Nicaragua to move to one of three cease-fire zones. The rebels would lay down their arms on Jan. 5 before independent observers, and then be granted amnesty.

The plan specifies that Contras in the field are not to get any military supplies during the cease-fire, but would allow food, clothing and medical care to be provided them by a neutral international agency.

In Miami, the six members of the Nicaraguan Resistance directorate issued a statement calling the Sandinista proposal "a unilateral measure that sidesteps the existence of an armed conflict."

Adolfo Calero, the senior member of the directorate, specifically rejected the plan for the Contras to disarm and gather in cease-fire zones, saying, "We do not see ourselves moving into gulags as the Sandinistas propose."

"This is the first step," Ortega said after a two-hour meeting with Obando y Bravo at the Vatican Embassy. The session also was attended by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, who has angered some in the Reagan administration by making himself a central figure in the Central American peace process.

"It is a proposal, not an ultimatum," said Ortega, who appeared in the sunshine on the embassy steps to smile and shake hands with the cardinal, long one of his harshest critics.

"The important thing is that as soon as possible we are able to begin this process of arranging the cease-fire," Ortega said, distributing copies of an 11-point plan he had delivered to Obando y Bravo.

The cardinal, who was returning to Nicaragua via Miami on Friday, said he would relay the Sandinista government proposal to Contra leaders in the next day or so, either in Miami or in Central America.

"I am here because I want peace for my country," Obando y Bravo said. "And when I talk about peace, it has to be based on truth, and based on love."

Ortega said steps also were being taken to create a "support team" to aid the cease-fire negotiations, to include Paul Warnke, a Washington attorney who was head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency under President Carter. Warnke also attended the meeting.

The Nicaraguan president said he regarded as "constructive" a proposal by Honduras for dismantling Contra base camps inside its border in exchange for certain actions by Nicaragua, including a halt to incursions by Sandinista troops and an end to mining of border areas.

The goal, Ortega said, is to bring about the "national reconciliation" called for in the Aug. 7 five-nation Central American peace accord and to bring the Contras back into the political life of Nicaragua. The United States, whose official policy has opposed his government, must now show more trust, Ortega added.

"The United States should trust Nicaragua," he said. "Nicaragua has offered enough proof, and this is more proof of our willingness to obtain peace."

Wright, who has been deeply involved in the peace process since he and President Reagan advanced their own peace proposal in August, said that while Ortega's proposal showed "elements of good faith," he also saw "some rough areas that are going to need to be smoothed out."

"I believe the process is moving in the direction of peace," Wright told reporters on Capitol Hill. "Peace is not yet attained, but the movement is in the right direction."

Wright's role was coming under fire from the White House, however. Presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Friday that Reagan "is concerned" about Wright's activities and, "We don't know what he's up to."

"We simply don't believe it's in the best interests of peace in Nicaragua or in the other countries in the region to have the United States negotiating directly with the Sandinistas," Fitzwater said.

"We don't really know what's in this Ortega-Wright plan and we just have to wait and see what they're talking about," the spokesman added.

Wright, whose involvement has sharply contrasted with the administration's aloofness from the Sandinistas, said he was not pretending to be a diplomat and had participated only at the invitation of the principals in the talks.

"I do not aspire to any role except as a friend and someone who wants the peace proposal to work," he said. Wright said he had briefed Secretary of State George Shultz on his activities. Shultz's response was, "Fine, good, I hope it works. I hope things go well," Wright said. "I like to hope that we're on the same team."

Armed men steal three Picassos

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Two armed men stole three Picasso prints and 26 other art works valued at $1 million from a gallery Friday, police said.

Jairo Quintero, owner of the Quintero Gallery, and two assistants were tied up and gagged, but not hurt, when the robbery took place Friday morning, police Sgt. Dennis Koronkiewicz said.

"They just told them 'Don't move,'" he said.

A well-dressed man armed with an automatic gun and another man in blue jeans took 29 art works from a single portfolio in a storage closet, Koronkiewicz said. Many other paintings in the gallery were not stolen, he said.

"They specifically went and took this one portfolio," Koronkiewicz said.

Besides the Picassos, four Lam prints, and 20 graphs and two originals by Luis Caballero were stolen, Koronkiewicz said.

The thieves fled to a running car in the alley behind the gallery where a driver was waiting. Quintero ran out of the store with his hands tied and alerted the beauty parlor next door, Koronkiewicz said.

Quintero told police he had never seen the men before. He also said he owned some of the pieces and some were on consignment to his gallery.

"It doesn't appear that all of them were insured," said Koronkiewicz.

Quintero, called at the gallery for comment, hung up.

Explosion of transformer cuts power in North End

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

A transformer explosion left 1,701 homes and businesses in Manchester's North End without power for at least an hour Friday afternoon.

A Northeast Utilities spokesman said Friday night that a "short circuit" caused "a malfunction" of the transformer. The cause of the incident wasn't expected to be determined until Monday, according to James Wells of Northeast Utilities.

The incident occurred in front of 188 Hilliard St. at about 2:30 p.m. It resulted in a small ground fire, left the 1,701 customers without power and shut down traffic lights on Middle Turnpike and Broad Street.

Agnes Saries of 178 Hilliard St. said she heard an explosion outside her house at about 2:30 and called 911. "There were blue, green, all colors of sparks on top of the pole," Saries said.

There were wires burning on the lawn next door. I called 911 and the Eighth District came right away," Saries said. Firemen told Hilliard Street residents to shut off main power in their homes and stay inside. "I'm still shook up," she said.

Power was restored to 1,397 customers within an hour, according to Wells, second shift supervisor at Northeast Utilities Information Center in Hartford. Power to the other 304 customers was restored at 7:02 p.m.

Northeast Utilities repairmen arrived at Hilliard Street at around 3 p.m. to begin repairs.

Frank Zuraw, a repairman for Northeast Utilities, said three wires were down when crews arrived at the site. Four trucks and six repairmen worked on Hilliard Street to reroute power lines and install a new transformer.

A portion of Hilliard Street, between Regent and Cumberland streets, was blocked off and a policeman directed traffic around the area. Because traffic lights were not working, police had stop signs installed on Middle Turnpike and Broad Street to control traffic. No accidents or injuries caused by the outage were reported.

The Eighth District Fire Department got a call at 2:30 about the explosion and the ground fire, said spokesman Thomas O'Marra. By 2:44, firefighters had the fire under control. O'Marra said. The Eighth District Fire Department ran on generator power until 7 p.m.

Purchase of Conrail land before directors

The Board of Directors is scheduled to vote Tuesday on whether the town should purchase the land under almost 2 miles of industrial train track that runs from the Cheney Historic District north of Forest Street to Hilliard Street.

Conrail, which owns the track, has federal approval to abandon the 1.9 miles of track and sell the land underneath it. Conrail estimates its value at $200,000, and residents of the Hawthorne, Essex and Homestead street areas have submitted an offer to Conrail.

In a memo to the Board of Directors dated Nov. 6, Planning Director Mark Pellegrini recommended that the town purchase the 1.9-mile right of way, which could potentially be used as a walkway or bike trail, a north-south street or as a corridor for public utilities.

Recreation use provides the easiest option for the town, according to Pellegrini's memo, but this use has also concerned area residents the most. In May, 15 residents attended the Advisory Park and Recreation Commission meeting, and petitions both for and against the recreational use of the right of way were presented. Those opposing the walkway-bikeway were concerned about lack of privacy and noise on the strip, which is within a few feet of some residents' property lines. Some of the property owners near the tracks were interested in buying areas of the strip to add to their existing properties.

Though benefits of recreational use of the land would be realized almost immediately after its conversion, highway use for the land would take priority because of cost and planning concerns. Making the strip into a north-south

Documents detail plot to kill mom

By Dean Golembeski

HARTFORD — A series of conversations, including a telephone call to the alleged killer overheard by a police secretary, provided authorities with evidence needed to charge a 16-year-old Glastonbury girl with conspiracy in her mother's strangulation, a court document indicates.

The state's evidence against Karin Aparo was made public Friday after a Superior Court judge rejected defense arguments to keep the document sealed.

Miss Aparo was arrested on Aug. 28 and charged with conspiracy to commit murder and accessory to murder in the slaying of her 47-year-old mother, Joyce Aparo of Glastonbury.

Miss Aparo's 19-year-old boyfriend, Dennis Coleman of Glastonbury, has been charged with murder. Police say he killed the woman at her home and then dumped her body in Massachusetts.

The affidavit released Friday indicates that Coleman and Miss Aparo plotted the murder for months, set five dates for the slaying and initially hoped to use chloroform to kill Joyce Aparo. Coleman was to do the actual killing, while Miss Aparo was to clean up after, the affidavit says.

Two other Glastonbury youths also have been charged in the case.

Christopher Wheatley, 20, has been charged with hindering prosecution and his 17-year-old girlfriend, Kira Lintner, has been charged with hindering prosecution and conspiracy to commit murder. They are accused of driving Coleman back to Connecticut after the body was dumped.

The affidavit for Karin Aparo was sealed after her arrest while defense attorneys argued for her to be tried as a juvenile. But Judge John Byrne ruled Tuesday that the girl be tried as an adult.

He said Friday that since Miss Aparo would be tried as an adult there was no reason to keep the affidavit sealed.

The defense has appealed the ruling that Miss Aparo be tried as an adult to the state Supreme Court. Defense Attorney Hubert Santos contends the crimes with which Miss Aparo is charged occurred while she was 15.

Defendants age 15 and under are tried in juvenile court, where the proceedings are secret and the penalties are less severe.

The affidavit says that bruises on Joyce Aparo's body indicated that she had put up a fierce struggle before succumbing. The body was found Aug. 5 near the victim's abandoned car in Bernardston, Mass. A paper towel was stuffed in the woman's mouth and her stocking was wrapped around her neck, the affidavit says.

Hours after the body was found, Miss Aparo was at Glastonbury Police Department to answer questions. It was there a telephone call she made to Coleman was overheard by secretary Beverly Warga, the affidavit says.

"Where did you do it?," the affidavit quotes Karin Aparo as asking during the telephone conversation. "Did you hurt your head? ... That's OK, you were over the house the night before we left ... Don't worry about it ... Think about something else, I'll be there soon to take care of you."

One day later, Miss Aparo told a friend, Shannon L. Dubois of Glastonbury, that Coleman had killed her mother, the affidavit says. The conversation took place at the Coleman home, Dubois told state police, according to the affidavit.

Miss Aparo also took Dubois to Coleman's room, where she took her mother's pocketbook and wallet from a duffel bag, the affidavit says. Dubois recognized the pocketbook as Joyce Aparo's and saw the victim's driver's license, the affidavit says.

Miss Aparo also told Dubois that she and Coleman had discussed the murder. "In the past couple of months" and had set five dates on which to do it, the affidavit says. They had discussed using chloroform, but were unable to obtain any, Miss Aparo told Dubois, according to the affidavit.

Miss Aparo told her friend that she knew her mother had been killed when she learned her mother was missing, the court document says. Miss Aparo called Coleman immediately and asked, "Dennie, did you do it?" the affidavit says. It was then she learned her mother had been strangled, Dubois told state police, according to the affidavit.

The affidavit also contains damaging confessions to police by Wheatley and Lintner. They told state police about the conversation they allegedly had with Coleman during their ride home from Massachusetts.

road would improve traffic circulation, but would cost an estimated $2.5 million for construction. The conversion of the strip into a north-south road would have to be a long-term project, according to Pellegrini, but acquiring the right of way now would reserve an option for the town in the future.

The right of way also provides a ready-made utility corridor, which would allow the town to control the use of the property for utilities and collect revenues from selling rights for the use of the corridor.

Local News in Brief

Traffic will be tied up

Traffic on Interstate 91 in East Windsor will be restricted to one lane Monday and again on Wednesday as the result of paving work to be done near Exit 45, according to the state's Department of Transportation.

On Monday, southbound traffic near the exit will be limited to one lane between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. while paving work goes south of the exit. On Wednesday, northbound traffic will be limited to one lane between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. while paving is done north of the exit.

Testing of lines may dirty water

Water flow tests will be conducted by the town's water division Monday and Tuesday to determine future capabilities of the lines to meet peak and high flow needs for fire protection. The testing may bring dirty water into the homes of some customers.

According to town officials the tests help identify the condition of water mains throughout town.

The testing may result in reduced water pressure and discolored water, particularly in the areas around Bolton Street, Durant Street, and McKee and High streets.

The tests will begin about 8 a.m. and should be completed by 4:30 p.m. each day. In both the high and the low elevation zones, the tests will begin in the north in the morning and move southward through the day.

Water division officials suggest that if customers have dirty or discolored water they refrain from using the water, especially hot water, until it clears. Officials also suggest putting some bottled water in the refrigerator for drinking on Monday and Tuesday.

Running cold water for awhile will clear the discoloration in most cases, but if it continues for two or three hours, customers are asked to phone the Water and Sewer Division at 647-3115 or 647-3201 up to 4 p.m.

The tests will be made at fire hydrants, and homes near the hydrants are the most likely to be affected.

$520,000 'face lift' under way

Fuss & O'Neill Inc. of 146 Hartford Road and Fuss & O'Neill Consulting Engineers of 210 Main St. will move all employees and operations to its Hartford Road location after renovations are complete, the company's president said Friday.

An application for a building permit was filed with the town Building Department last month. President William O'Neill said restoration and renovation of the building, previously owned by Manchester Community College, should be complete by late spring. Fuss & O'Neill has occupied the building for about a year.

Employees at the Main Street site, which has housed Fuss & O'Neill for about 18 years, should move into the Hartford Road building in February or March. The firm will probably add to its current staff of 100, O'Neill said.

The Hartford Road building, built in 1910 as the main office for the Cheney Bros. mills, will get a "general face lift," he said. Renovations are estimated at $520,000 and will include restoring the main stairway, landscaping and removing partitions for classrooms built when Manchester Community College occupied the site. "We researched the building's history and are making improvements that reach back to the original features," O'Neill said.

The firm is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year. It was founded in Manchester by Hayden Griswold, who was an engineer for the Cheney Bros. and began doing part-time survey work from his home.

The firm started as a surveying company and expanded to include general civil engineering operations. Fuss & O'Neill now handles environmental engineering, including roadway, bridge and landscaping design.

New MCC course

A new option to the accounting and business administration transfer program, "Management Information Science," is now being offered at Manchester Community College.

The program is designed for students who intend to transfer to a four-year institution to earn a bachelor's degree in management information science. The new option requires the same courses as the present accounting and business administration transfer program except for four courses in data processing.

For more information, call 647-6111, 647-6125 or 647-6062.

Trip to Mexico

The Manchester Community College Department of Humanities is sponsoring a 10-day trip to Mexico, March 19-19. It is open to the public, but two academic credits may be earned by those who go on the trip.

The ticket price of $1,029 per person includes double occupancy hotels, airfare, buses, ballet tickets, taxes and gratuities.

Speakers laud Diana for work

About 150 people, many of them political leaders who have been associated with William J. Diana during some of the 20 years he served Manchester, honored him Friday night at a dinner at the Army and Navy Club.

Guests included many Democrats as well as fellow Republicans of the outgoing town director, who decided not to seek re-election after seven terms on the board.

A recurring theme in the speeches of praise was Diana's sense of loyalty to friends and willingness to fulfill any commitment to service after he had made it. "If the whole world was made up of Bill Dianases there would be no problems in the world," said Nathan Agostinelli, a close friend of Diana's who was master of ceremonies for the event.

In his response to the praise from a parade of speakers, Diana said, "I've served with some of the finest people in Manchester."

He said he was always concerned with public safety and when the police department had any proposal for improvements, police officials would consult him, despite the fact that he was in the minority on the Board of Directors.

"They only needed five votes," but they always consulted with me," Diana said.

Former Democratic Mayor Stephen T. Penny was among several people who said Diana made a major contribution to the annual task of preparing the town budget.

"He always mastered the information despite the Democrats' efforts to keep it from him," Penny quipped.

Democratic Town Director Stephen T. Cassano said of Diana that he "always dissented with class."

Former Mayor James Farr, a Republican, recalled that as director Diana "always did his homework" and would "go into the field" to get information on which to base his decisions.

Diana was presented with a plaque and with a resolution from the state House of Representatives as well as a letter from Gov. William O'Neill lauding him for his service.

Deputy chief job back on agenda

A proposal to name Garry T. Albert, an Eighth District firefighter, as deputy chief in the fire department, tabled at the last meeting of the district directors, will be taken up again when the directors meet Monday.

District Director Lorraine Boutin, who moved to table the matter, said Friday that reservations she had about the appointment have been satisfied.

When she voted to postpone the vote at the Oct. 19 meeting, Boutin said Albert was well qualified, but she was not clear on whether bylaws of the fire department provide for the position.

The directors, scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. in the district firehouse at Main and Hilliard streets, also will discuss the rates the district charges for sewer service and the location of a sewer line across property of Barney Peterman on North Main Street.

Director Samuel Longest, the district's public works commissioner, said Friday that he put the sewer rate question on the agenda in order to clarify some provisions of the rates that other directors have found unclear.

In the Nov. 3 election, district voters soundly rejected a proposal under which the district would have surrendered its sewer jurisdiction to the town.

That vote means the district will go forward with plans for a major trunk sewer to serve expected commercial development in the Buckland area.

Longest said Friday he will wait a month before proposing action on that sewer.

Escapee shoots himself to death

HARTFORD (AP) — A 23-year-old Hartford jail escapee shot himself to death in a North End apartment Friday after exchanging gunfire with police, officials said.

Jose Cardona's body was found inside the apartment where authorities learned he was staying, city police said. Cardona escaped Oct. 15 from a Department of Correction work detail, police said.

Lou Breslow

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lou Breslow, a screenwriter who worked on classic Marx Brothers comedies and co-wrote Ronald Reagan's hit "Bedtime for Bonzo," died Tuesday of pneumonia at age 87.

Breslow came to Los Angeles in 1908. In the 1920s he was an extra, cameraman and consultant on silent films. Later, Breslow became a contract screenwriter for Paramount Pictures and 20th Century-Fox.

Breslow wrote or assisted on nearly 100 screenplays during his 50-year career, including the Marx Brothers films "Duck Soup" and "Horse Feathers." He also worked with Val Burton on the 1951 comedy, "Bedtime for Bonzo."

Gas leak forces evacuation

NORTH BRANFORD — Fifty to 60 people were evacuated from the center of North Branford Friday after a construction company doing excavation ruptured a natural gas pipe, police said.

North Branford Police Sgt. John Delfino said the White Oak Construction Co. was working on a small bridge on Route 80 when equipment ruptured the pipe at about 11:30 a.m.

The gas escaped with a hissing sound, and police evacuated some residents, including about eight children from a day care center and people in businesses in about a square-block area, Delfino said.

People were allowed to return at about 2 p.m., he said.

Delfino said he didn't know where the construction company was based.

Man admits shipping drug money

NEW HAVEN — A key figure in a major international cocaine and money laundering ring entered a guilty plea admitting he coordinated illegal shipment of drug money from the United States to Panama and elsewhere, the Justice Department said Friday.

Rodolfo Ariano Jr., 27, a Colombian national from Miami, entered his plea late Thursday in federal court in Los Angeles, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said in a statement released in New Haven.

In return for Ariano's plea and cooperation including trial testimony, the government will seek a dismissal of related money laundering charges against Ariano in Connecticut and elsewhere, Twardy said.

The deal was arranged through discussions among U.S. attorneys in Connecticut, Los Angeles, Miami, San Francisco and Detroit, he said.

Feds claim Bridgeport stalling

BRIDGEPORT — A federal official has threatened the city with the loss of $22.5 million earmarked for renovating the dilapidated Father Panik Village housing project.

Ronald Black of the Department of Housing and Urban Development said Thursday that the city has been lagging on plans for Father Panik Village and that the funds could be taken back if HUD does not see "progression toward future construction."

Black, director of housing development for the Hartford HUD office, met with city officials Thursday to get a progress report on the housing project.

"We want the city to show some progress on Father Panik. The money has been sitting there for over a year without anything happening," Black said.

Federal authorities have called Father Panik Village one of the worst housing projects in the nation.

State sues over hazardous waste

HARTFORD — The state has filed suit against a Shelton packaging company alleging an array of hazardous waste violations, including illegal burying of industrial sludge, Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said Friday.

Lieberman said the state is seeking fines of up to $25,000 a day for each violation.

The suit, filed in Hartford Superior Court against International Mailing Systems, claims that state inspectors found unmarked drums of paint thinner, corrosives and acid being improperly stored at the site, a waste sludge tank and a pit where sludge was illegally buried.

Lieberman said the company did not have the permits required for on-site disposal of the wastes, failed to maintain records and failed to inspect its waste tanks.

Welfare error rate too high

HARTFORD — The state was notified by the federal government Friday that its error rate in distributing welfare benefits was higher than permitted and could mean a penalty of about $440,000.

However, Claudette Beaulieu, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Income Maintenance, said that the sanction cannot be collected because Congress has imposed a moratorium on such penalties until June while a study is conducted of the accuracy of controls over welfare programs.

The error rate permitted by the federal Department of Health and Human Services was 3 percent. Connecticut rate was 3.39 percent, Beaulieu said, adding that it covered the year ending Sept. 30, 1984.

She said 45 states had exceeded the target and that the national average for that year was 5.9 percent.

Work diseases affect thousands

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Workers in perhaps half of the manufacturing facilities in Connecticut may have developed illnesses related to their work, a Yale University occupational medicine specialist said Friday.

The Electric Boat shipyard in Groton is "an extraordinarily dangerous work place in Connecticut," while workers in the building trades are also vulnerable to disease, said Dr. Mark R. Cullen, director of the Yale School of Medicine's Occupational Medicine Program.

Cullen said his clinic has seen since 1979 more than 2,000 people with work-related illnesses and screened between 6,000 and 10,000 more at their work places.

The workers have been from virtually all the building trades, as well as from about 500 of the 3,500 manufacturing facilities in the state, he said.

Doctors do not always recognize an illness as being occupation-related, while the Yale clinic probably sees only a percentage of occupational diseases in the state, Cullen said.

Cullen addressed about 30 physicians Friday at a conference on occupational medicine for the primary care physician. The session was to continue through Saturday.

The most commonly diagnosed occupational diseases in the state were asbestos-related, Cullen said. He estimated that between 200,000 and 300,000 people in Connecticut alone have had heavy exposure to the once commonly used insulating material that has been linked with lung disease and several types of cancers.

Asbestos-related cases will continue to be diagnosed for at least the next 20 to 30 years because the diseases manifest themselves long after exposure, Cullen said. His clinic has seen about 1,000 people whose problems can be traced to the material, he said.

In Connecticut, between 70,000 and 80,000 people at Electric Boat were exposed to the material, between 30,000 and 50,000 in the building trades and between 10,000 and 20,000 during World War II, Cullen estimated.

Legislators' move delayed again

HARTFORD (AP) — The move into the new Legislative Office Building across from the state Capitol will be delayed once again, this time because of problems getting panels that will divide work stations.

Although the new schedule calls for some staff to be moved in by the end of January, House Speaker Irving J. Stolberg said it was "entirely possible" that the move won't be accomplished until after the 1988 legislative session ends in May, to minimize disruption of staff and legislators.

The 1988 session convenes on Feb. 5.

Legislative leaders got the word Friday from Rep. Paul D. Abercrombie, R-North Haven, who is chairman of the subcommittee overseeing the project.

He said fabric covering the panels did not meet fire standards and will have to be replaced. The $600,000 order was to have arrived this week. Abercrombie estimated the fabric problem will force at least a month's delay in delivery.

Because the delay will mean a change in the schedule for moving legislative staffers into the new building, the leaders were forced to approve a two-month extension in the lease of the two temporary office buildings on the Capitol lawn. That will cost state taxpayers another $80,000.

At the earliest, it will be the end of January before anyone is moved into the building. The most recent schedule had called for some staff to be moved in this month, and more moved in on a staggered schedule as sections of the building are completed.

Originally, the building was to have been ready for the 1987 legislative session, which convened in January.

"It's frustrating and disappointing," said Stolberg, D-New Haven, co-chairman of the Legislative Management Committee, which oversees state Capitol operations and the $53 million Legislative Office Building construction.

The problem with the panels was typical of delays that have plagued the new building. Other delays have been blamed on everything from late shipments of steel and granite to changes in office layout to meet the individual preferences of lawmakers.

Rep. Janet Polinsky, D-Waterford, another committee member, said she was worried that other problems will surface and prevent a smooth transition.

Police offer automobile tattoos

NEWINGTON — The Newington police are offering to give residents' automobiles tattoos and decrease the odds that the cars will be stolen.

The police Saturday will use a light acid and a stencil to mark car windows with identification numbers. The cost to motorists will be $10.

Kentucky state police started a free, statewide marking program in 1981. Officials said only two of 150,000 cars marked have been stolen, and one of those was recovered.

A Louisville, Ky., company has patented the stenciling system.

Thieves have to replace the windows before selling the stolen cars, officials said. The etched numbers can be defaced, but that also marks the car as stolen, said Newington police Detective Wayne G. Haley.

"You can grind this out with an abrasive wheel, but it's going to leave a mark," Haley said. "Then you know you've got something stolen."

Artist claims pens poisoned her

NEW LONDON — A commercial artist who claims she was poisoned by toxic fumes from felt-tipped markers has filed suit against the manufacturer of the pens, her lawyer said Friday.

Delores van Bommel of Stonington claims in her suit that the "Design Art Markers" she used for nine months in 1985 caused permanent damage to the membranes in her nose, said attorney Robert I. Reardon.

The pens, manufactured by Eberhard-Faber Inc. of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., contain the hazardous chemical xylene, according to the suit filed last week in Superior Court in New London.

Van Bommel claims her use of the markers has caused chronic nasal congestion and inflammation, headaches, insomnia, difficulty breathing, frequent nosebleeds, sneezing and dizziness.

Infant's death being investigated

NEW BRITAIN — The cause of death of a 5-month-old boy who perished after spending a cold night in a car with his homeless parents probably won't be determined for several weeks, according to the state medical examiner's office.

A spokeswoman for the medical examiner said the autopsy performed Thursday on Peter Martinez was inconclusive and further tests must be done.

The child died Thursday after spending the night in 20-degree weather and a snow storm in his parents' 1981 Ford LTD.

Meanwhile, the parents — Pedro Martinez, 26, and Wanda Ortiz, 21 — were arraigned Friday in Superior Court on charges of risk of injury to a minor.

"They were all fighting for their lives, as all homeless people do," Kenneth Simon, a public defender, who represented the couple, said of the family.

'Only saints will be elected'

MYSTIC — Gov. William A. O'Neill Friday struck out at the news media's coverage of public figures' personal lives, saying the day is coming when only saints will be elected to public office.

O'Neill, who said he was offended when asked twice by reporters last weekend whether he had ever used marijuana, told newspaper editors at a meeting here that the current presidential campaign has created "a crisis between the press and public figures."

The nation appears headed toward the day when "only saints will be able to pass safely through the gauntlet of media scrutiny," O'Neill told members of the New England Society of Newspaper Editors.

"Now, a saint may be good and flawless through and through, but I doubt that a saint knows how to get a highway built," O'Neill said.

Police probe abuse allegations

HARTFORD — A state police officer worked undercover at the Seaside Center to investigate allegations that mentally retarded clients were physically abused and workers used illegal drugs, state police said Friday.

Six employees at the state-run facility in Waterford were suspended with pay Monday when the Department of Mental Retardation began an investigation into allegations that three mentally retarded men had been physically abused.

Cable television industry knocks state regulations

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — A new state law regulating cable television franchises in Connecticut was criticized Friday by industry officials who said it would discourage innovation and hurt the quality of service.

"I find it more difficult to approve dollars to upgrade our system in Hartford," said James O. Robbins, president of Atlanta-based Cox Cable Communications.

The state's cable industry brought in Robbins and economist Alfred E. Kahn, a former advisor to President Jimmy Carter, to criticize the law in a hearing before the Department of Public Utility Control.

Under the law that takes effect in June 1988, terms of new and renewed cable television franchises will be reduced from 15 years to five or 10 years. The aim of the bill is to increase competition and keep basic cable affordable.

The law also requires the DPUC to study the effect of federal cable TV rate deregulation on Connecticut rates and services. The DPUC must also recommend ways to foster cable competition.

Under the law, a 10-year franchise would be granted if a cable company promises to keep at least half of its total channels as part of its basic service package and agrees with the DPUC on a schedule of basic rates and a procedure for adjusting those rates during the 10-year term.

If a company does not agree to those conditions, its franchise term would be five years.

"A five-year renewal would make it financially difficult to do business in the state of Connecticut," Robbins said. "Cable operators would repair rather than replace the equipment needed to bring a signal into the home."

He explained that it can take years to plan, implement and recover the cost of changes in a cable system, which is why the industry favors a 15-year license. He said five-year licenses also would make it difficult for a cable company to obtain bank loans or other financing to make improvements.

Retailers scramble to find help

STAMFORD (AP) — All the signs that the holidays are coming are in stores around Connecticut — decorations, Christmas trees, and posters that say "Help Wanted."

Facing a severe worker shortage, retailers have launched aggressive and early recruiting campaigns to lure prospective employees. They've raised employee discounts and pay, are giving employees who recruit new workers bonuses, and are allowing flexible hours.

"I think this is about the most severe worker shortage in my memory and I've been here 16 years," said Richard Ficks, a spokesman for the Connecticut Department of Labor in Wethersfield. "It just means the public is going to have to be more patient."

At Saks Fifth Avenue in Stamford, workers are asked to sign a contract and if they fulfill it by staying on the job until after Christmas, they receive an extra 75 cents an hour for every hour they worked, said Harry W. Berkowitz, general manager.

A spokesman for Massachusetts-based Marshall's, which has several stores in Connecticut, including one in Bridgeport scheduled to open next month, said the worker shortage is a year-round problem.

Fred Postelle, Marshall's vice president of human resources in Wakefield, Mass., said the company has recruited in the high schools, remained competitive with other retailers in the area of pay, and offered bonuses to current employees who bring in new ones.

"It's going to be an early recruiting campaign this year," said Diana Supersano, personnel manager at the Jordan Marsh department store in Southbury.

Kasparov leads chess tourney

SEVILLE, Spain — The 13th game of the World Chess Championship between Garry Kasparov and challenger Anatoly Karpov ended in a draw Friday after a 36-move struggle.

The score now stands 7-6 in Kasparov's favor. A win is worth one point and a draw, a half-point.

"For most of the game, it was Kasparov who pressed hard for victory, despite playing black. After a shaky start in the earlier games, he's regained his confidence," said a Spanish chess expert, Fernando Urias.

The winner of the 24-game series between the two Soviet grandmasters requires 12.5 points, but in the event of a 12-12 tie Kasparov will remain champion.

Kasparov has won three games and lost two, with eight drawn.

Forty die in Mexico bus crash

MEXICO CITY — A speeding city bus packed with schoolchildren and workers skidded off a dirt road in heavy fog Friday and flipped onto its roof in a shallow lake, killing 40 people and injuring five, authorities said.

A 10-year-old boy who escaped injury said he swam out through a window.

He said he heard a bang, then the driver "applied the brakes hard and the bus skidded. ... All the passengers started falling and they piled up onto the driver." The frightened youngster would not give his name.

The government-owned Route 100 Authority, which owns the bus, issued a statement saying it blew a tire on a front wheel.

A police spokeswoman, Carmen Gutierrez Zamora, said 18 passengers were unhurt in the accident at 6:30 a.m. Friday in the Tiahua district on the city's southern edge.

Sanctions imposed against Brazil

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Friday he is imposing trade sanctions against Brazil because the Brazilian government is engaging in practices that bar U.S. companies from that country's computer software market.

Reagan said he will raise tariffs on some Brazilian exports to the United States and will prohibit imports from Brazil of certain computer products.

The White House said all of the Brazilian products against which the action is being taken are available from domestic producers or companies in other countries.

It said the higher tariffs will be removed when it is determined that the unfair practices have been eliminated.

The action stems from a trade investigation begun by U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter in 1985.

Youths held at Mandela's home

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police searched for stolen property and arrested 10 youths on Friday in raiding the home of black activist Winnie Mandela, who called the operation "the usual provocative action."

Authorities said the raid was part of an investigation into an alleged robbery and assault last month they said was witnessed by Mrs. Mandela and her daughter, Zindzi.

Mrs. Mandela, wife of the imprisoned African National Congress leader, Nelson Mandela, said the detained people were members of a youth soccer team she sponsors.

Referring to speculation the government might soon free her husband, viewed by many blacks as their pre-eminent leader, she said: "These certainly are not the actions of men who intend releasing anybody."

Deaver doing well after surgery

WASHINGTON — Former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver was listed in good condition Friday following successful removal of a kidney stone in an operation that forced a one-week suspension of his perjury trial.

Deaver underwent the surgery at Georgetown University Hospital, where he is expected to remain at least until Monday, said spokeswoman Nancy Saenger.

Deaver was listed in good condition after the operation, which she said "went very well."

Heart drug, approved by FDA, could save lives of thousands

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new emergency drug expected to save the lives of thousands of heart attack victims by eating away clots blocking the flow of blood to their hearts was approved Friday by the Food and Drug Administration.

FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young called approval of the genetically engineered drug widely known as TPA "a major advance in the management of coronary heart disease."

Dr. Howard Morgan, president of the American Heart Association, said, "This drug has the potential to greatly improve the outcome of many heart attacks."

He said studies have demonstrated that TPA "can reduce the amount of damage to the heart muscle as well as the number of deaths due to heart attacks if it is administered soon — within a few hours — after symptoms begin."

While offering new hope to the 800,000 Americans who suffered initial heart attacks each year, approval of the drug also holds the promise of financial bonanza for Genetech, Inc., the 11-year-old South San Francisco, Calif., company that developed it.

Company officials said the drug should be available in emergency rooms nationwide within two or three weeks. They declined to say how much it will cost in the United States, but indicated it probably will be in line with the $2,000-per-treatment charge in other countries where it already is on the market.

TPA — or tissue plasminogen activator — is a clot-dissolving protein that occurs naturally in the human body, but not in the concentrated doses that will be administered to heart attack victims. It becomes the sixth FDA-approved drug developed through biotechnology — all but one of them by Genetech — and the one likely to have the broadest, most dramatic application.

TPA is not the first clot-dissolving product on the market, but physicians participating in clinical trials involving some 4,000 heart attack victims hail it as a breakthrough development.

Dr. Charles Abbottsmith, director of cardiology at Christ Hospital in Cincinnati, has called TPA the "penicillin of heart attacks."

An emergency treatment most effective when administered within the first minutes or hours after a patient has suffered a heart attack, the official labeling will call for its use "as soon as possible after the onset of symptoms."

While not discounting its life-saving potential, Young said its longer-range benefit is at least as significant.

Noting that 250,000 people who suffer a first heart attack in the United States each year die within the first month, Young said, "Early treatment may help reduce these deaths, but it may be even more important to many of us that early treatment can improve the quality of the years remaining."

"Today, only one-third of the survivors of initial heart attacks completely recover," he continued. "Many of the rest live limited, circumscribed lives as a result of heart damage. By limiting damage to the heart, early use of TPA can reduce heart damage and thus help ensure the continued enjoyment of the vigor and pleasures of life."

'Superbabies' may turn into burn-outs

CHICAGO (AP) — Parents trying to rear "superbabies" may instead create a generation of early burn-outs, a panel of experts said Friday, warning that force-feeding academics to pre-schoolers may retard their intellectual, social and physical development.

"Twenty years ago, people thought that precocity was bad ... the feeling was 'early ripe, early rot,'" said child psychologist David Elkind, president of the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

"Now the motto is 'early ripe, early rich,'" and it's backfiring, said Elkind at a news conference during the annual convention of the group, the nation's largest professional association of early childhood educators.

The trend is most noticeable among upwardly mobile young professionals who use such devices as books, flashcards and piano lessons "to try and get them (children) on the fast track," said panelist Dr. George Sterne.

"Increasingly we see children whose schedules at age 3 and 4 would boggle the mind of adults ... they have 60-hour weeks," said Sterne, chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics' Committee on Early Childhood, Adoption and Dependent Care.

"They're tired, they're irritable, they have bel-lies. ... It's obvious they're on overload," he said.

In an estimated 28 states, programs are pending that would have children enter public school at age 4, said panelist Samuel Sava, executive director of the National Association for Elementary School Principals.

But Elkind noted that in Scandinavian countries, "where children don't begin forced education until age 7," illiteracy is virtually non-existent.

"We have to recognize that education is not a race, child-rearing is not a race. In our desire to believe we can give children a leg up, we are really handicapping them," he said.

"If you try to hard to force them to learn things ... you do run the risk of, first, burn-out, and second, suppressing creativity," Sterne said. Parents who push their children may only want the best for them.

Teen parties in Boston suburb reminiscent of 'Animal House'

BOSTON (AP) — It's been party time the past 10 months for teen-agers in the affluent suburb of Westwood, and police blame parents for the rash of rowdy bashes that have ended with a stereo thrown through a window or an attempt to set a dog on fire.

"The parents leave and the booze comes in," said Westwood Police Chief Francis Abbate on Friday. "Everything that goes up comes down. That's pretty obvious looking at some of these houses."

Abbate said damage to trashed homes ranges from hundreds to thousands of dollars. Many houses have been left beer-spattered. At one party a telephone was baked in a microwave oven; at another, parties tried to set a golden retriever ablaze.

Westwood police have broken up 18 unsupervised parties involving teen-agers and young adults in 10 months, including one last month in which three officers were injured halting a party by more than 150 youths.

"This is a bedroom town that usually closes up at 9 o'clock," he said. "But the kids are kicking up their heels."

Abbate said he blames parents more than teen-agers.

"Teen drinking has been with us since the beginning of time and will be with us to the end of time," Abbate said. "This is more often than not the result of irresponsible parents, out all night or until the late morning hours or away for the weekend at old Cape Cod when all hell is taking place at the old homestead."

Thirteen Westwood youngsters face charges stemming from incidents at parties in the last month alone; three of them are "repeaters" who hosted previous rowdy parties. Abbate has had to call for help from state police and police in a nearby community.

Westwood High sophomore Mike Collins was host for one of the parties about two months ago. He said he invited 10 friends, but about 200 people showed up. The family's phone was ruined in the microwave and someone ate their pet tropical fish.

"I think the cops overemphasize it a little but there is definitely a problem," the 15-year-old said Friday. Collins said he has occasionally gone to other parties. "As far as I know, mine was the worst."

"The damage is astronomical," Abbate said. He said teen-agers not used to drinking will bring in "25-30 cases of beer, gallons and gallons of the hard stuff."

"The police department is taking every step available to prevent, detect and to suppress house parties," Abbate said. He said he called high school officials and contacted local newspapers to publicize the problem.

Westwood High School Principal Phillip Flaherty said trying to explain the rash of rowdiness would be like "trying to sum up the 20th century in 20 words or less."

He said the town's students were known for good behavior at proms and other functions and blamed problems on a tiny minority. He said the high school has adequate alcohol and drug education programs and parents have not complained.

"My jurisdiction does not extend to Saturday night in someone else's house," Flaherty said.

Abbate, a 37-year veteran of the state and Westwood police, refused to release the addresses of homes damaged during unsupervised parties. He said the town has been lucky no one has been killed or seriously injured.

The party where officers were injured cost more than $10,000 for medical treatment, overtime and court costs, he said.

Linda Rooney of Braintree says she knows what Westwood parents feel like when they returned home to a trashed house. Her family underwent therapy after finding about 75 teen-agers had caused $14,000 in damage during a February party while they were away.

The Rooneys say that the partygoers did not have permission to be in the house, but police say one of their daughters gave a friend a key.

"I'm shaking all over just talking about it," Mrs. Rooney said. "There really ought to be a precedent set because otherwise there will be no end to these trashings. These kids feel so powerful, they don't understand the word responsibility."

Peace talks elusive in Angola

JAMBA, Angola — From their remote headquarters here in the bush, commanders of the UNITA rebel movement direct a guerrilla war that for 12 years has frustrated Angola's Marxist leaders and their Soviet backers.

UNITA, short for the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, has proved to be among the most effective recipients of covert U.S. military aid. The rebels now claim to have won their biggest victory yet by repulsing an 18,000-man assault force.

UNITA's leader, Jonas Savimbi, said Thursday he hoped the battlefield achievements would force Angola's government and its Cuban and Soviet allies to the bargaining table, but there has been no sign this will happen.

Jackson broadens campaign base

CHICAGO — Jesse Jackson moved Friday to broaden his Democratic presidential campaign base, turning to California for a powerful black politician to be his chairman and to Ohio for a Jewish political consultant to manage operations.

Gerald Austin, a former Democratic National Committee consultant with campaign experience in Ohio, will be campaign manager, and California Assembly Speaker Willie Brown Jr. will be the chairman, Jackson announced at a news conference.

"The base of our political infrastructure has been strengthened and expanded," Jackson said, formalizing choices revealed Thursday by Austin. "Now we head into the next phase of the campaign," Jackson added.

Yeltsin had 'big-boss syndrome'

MOSCOW — Boris N. Yeltsin, tapped by Mikhail S. Gorbachev to head the Moscow party almost two years ago, developed a "big-boss syndrome," thought himself infallible and flouted orders from the top, an official report said Friday.

One Moscow Communist accused his former chief of "treason to the cause of perestroika," the report issued by Soviet news media said. Perestroika is the Kremlin's program to overhaul the economy and society.

Rumors meanwhile swept Moscow that the 56-year-old Yeltsin, who was fired Wednesday after Gorbachev condemned his "personal ambitions," was hospitalized with heart trouble.

Committee approves Carlucci

WASHINGTON — The Senate Armed Services Committee unanimously recommended Friday that Frank C. Carlucci become secretary of defense, while congressional negotiators virtually completed work on a Pentagon budget reducing military spending for the third consecutive year.

By 20-0, the committee approved President Reagan's choice of Carlucci to succeed Caspar W. Weinberger as defense secretary. The nomination was sent to the full Senate which is expected to confirm Carlucci early next week.

Weinberger is retiring after seven years of presiding over the biggest peacetime military build-up in U.S. history. Pentagon spending doubled during his tenure.

Cool reception to envoy request

WASHINGTON — Administration officials reacted coolly Friday to a proposal by the sister of American hostage Terry Anderson that President Reagan appoint a special envoy to lead efforts to free her brother and other captives.

"For a year, the United States has been frozen in its approach to the plight of the Americans held hostage in Lebanon," Peggy Say of Batavia, N.Y., wrote in an op-ed column in The New York Times.

"President Reagan should now appoint a special envoy — a man or woman of achievement and stature — to work toward freedom for the hostages," she said. Her brother, the 40-year-old chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, has been held prisoner by pro-Iranian elements in Lebanon.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said of Mrs. Say's recommendation: "We think there are some problems with it. We'll consider it, but we have a lot of people working on this right now, in a lot of agencies."

Christmas must be close

Two skaters on New York's Rockefeller Plaza skating rink glide along Friday while workers raise the center's 75-foot-tall Norway spruce, one of the sure signs that Christmas is getting close. The annual tree-lighting ceremony, New York's official welcome to Christmas, will be Dec. 1.

Unpaid liver transplant worries other patients

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A woman's refusal to pay for her son's liver transplants after she collected $450,000 in donations from sympathetic Americans is slowing fund-raising efforts for some dying children and frightening the parents of others, families and officials said Friday.

"It's a shame that this woman is going to make us suffer for something she did, and she will. She really will," said Sue Bevan, 31, of Lehigh Acres, Fla., whose 4 1/2-month-old son, Billy Bob, needs a new liver.

Maria DeSillers' refusal to pay Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh has caused concern among families of transplant patients, said Mary Ann Engbreitsen, chairman of the National Organ Transplant Education Foundation in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Mrs. Engbreitsen, whose daughter, Trine, now 6, underwent a liver transplant in 1984, said she's received calls from distraught parents since Children's Hospital filed suit Monday against Ms. DeSillers.

"Their fund-raising efforts are at a standstill at the moment," Mrs. Engbreitsen said. "It's a chain reaction."

Ms. DeSillers' 7-year-old son, Ronnie, died April 29 while awaiting a fourth liver transplant. His bill totaled $424,302, of which $163,113 was paid.

Ms. DeSillers, of Miami, said she is withholding the balance because she questions the accuracy of the bill and the quality of the last organ her son received.

Children's Hospital denied Friday that Ronnie's third liver was rejected by other hospitals or that his bill was inflated to take advantage of the $450,000 that was donated.

The lawsuit was a last resort on behalf of the contributors, including President Reagan, who chipped in for Ronnie's care, said hospital President Edwin K. Zechman Jr.

Ms. DeSillers did not return a message left on her answering machine Friday morning seeking comment.

Iraq claims 'massacre' of 5 ships

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq's air force reported attacks on five vessels during a "massacre" of ships in Iranian waters, and sank a salvage tug Friday while apparently trying to hit a supertanker for third time in two days.

Persian Gulf shipping executives said two crewmen were reported killed and four wounded when a radar-guided Exocet missile hit the tug Friday morning.

Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Service, based in London, said the tug "subsequently sank." It was owned by the Semco company of Singapore, but was not identified by name.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Secretary-general Javier Perez de Cuellar said Iran chose Mohammad Larjani, a deputy foreign minister, as its emissary for U.N. talks aimed at ending the 7-year-old war. He said he would meet this month with Larjani and with Iraq's envoy, Foreign Minister Tarik Aziz.

The tug was the latest reported victim of an aerial blitz in which Iraq has claimed 11 attacks on ships in Iranian waters since Monday, including five in a 20-hour period through midday Friday. Three raids were confirmed independently.

Shipping agents said the tug apparently was near the 264,081-ton Fortuneship L, a Greek tanker chartered by Iran that was disabled by an Iraqi missile Wednesday night and hit a second time about 24 hours later.

Iraq regularly attacks tankers and oil installations in an attempt to destroy the exports with which Iran pays the cost of the war.

Baghdad radio quoted a military spokesman as saying the air raids were "within the framework of our pursuit of the enemy's targets in the gulf waters ... and our planes have achieved the widest massacre of the enemy's targets." It said the attacks were on five "large maritime targets," the term it uses for ships.

The attacks coincided with reports from Tehran indicating Iran is preparing for a major new land offensive in the southern sector of the 730-mile border war front.

Sources in gulf shipping circles, all speaking on condition of anonymity, said they had few details of the tugboat sinking just south of Kharg Island in the northern gulf, Iran's main oil export terminal. An official at Semco's Singapore office was reached by telephone but would give no information.

The Fortuneship L was carrying a load of crude oil south when hit Wednesday night and was being towed to port for unloading and repairs when the second attack occurred Tuesday.

Iran uses its own and chartered supertankers to move crude from Kharg Island, a frequent target of air raids, to makeshift terminals about 450 miles down the gulf that are harder for Iraqi planes to reach.

Salvage executives said the Friendship L caught fire Thursday night after one or two of its sea-skimming Exocets hit its cargo holds.

Fad inventors hope wild and wacky bring riches

By Larry McShane
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The telephone? The lightbulb? Old news.

Now, these are inventions: the Landshark Hat, the Dobermask, the Eyeball Nightlight. And their inventors harbor no illusions of illuminating the world or creating transcontinental conversation. Their goals: finding the next Hula-Hoop and a couple million bucks in the process.

"Logic doesn't make it," inventor Bob Pagni, the man behind the Dobermask, said in summing up Friday's "Fad Fair III." "In America, logic doesn't sell."

Pagni and the other 90-plus exhibitors fervently follow that credo. The group, brought together by the legendary creator of the Wacky Wallwalker, Ken "Dr. Fad" Hakuta, offered the discerning shopper:

■ The Fruck. A geneticist's nightmare: half-duck, half-frog, all cash when you place an order.

■ The Elefun Horn. A long piece of tube with a device attached to the top, allowing it to emit the most obnoxious sound in a room rife with annoying noises.

■ The Dobermask. The head of a Doberman pinscher, made for attachment to the noggin of any household pet to create the illusion of a deadly beast guarding the home.

"You call yourself a reporter? And you've never heard of the Dobermask?" Pagni, a Pennsylvania disc jockey, asked incredulously.

Well, no. Or, for that matter, any of the other weird and wacky displays scattered about the ballroom.

Take Gene Hrycyk of Akron, Ohio. "The Eyeball Nightlight is to plastic what the Venus de Milo is to marble," promised Hrycyk, creator of the glow-in-the-dark orb with giant eyelashes, available in three shades of irises.

Hrycyk's business partner, Jim Whited, said the inspiration for the electric eye derived more from current events than ancient art.

"Tammy Faye Bakker was a major influence on the inventor," Whited confided.

A large selection of new products spurred by the nation's safe sex obsession was also available: everything from a board game titled "The Sexual Intellectual" to key chains with condoms.

"This is going to go. I don't know if it'll be the next Hula-Hoop, but it's going to be big," said Larry Butler of Denver, who has sunk $20,000 into promoting "The Sexual Intellectual," where contestants move around a snake-shaped game board.

"Absolutely, this is a family game. I want every family in America to own one," said Butler. "It's educational — I don't want people to think it's sleazy."

Butler offered particular praise for "Dr. Fad," whose Wacky Wallwalker — an octopus-shaped piece of rubber which flops down any wall it's thrown at — has earned him $20 million since 1982. Hakuta, 38, wore a sweater covered with Wallwalkers as he mingled with the inventors.

Although "Dr. Fad" may be the prince of self-promotion and the rajah of retail, he offered a sobering message for those desperate to follow in his footsteps.

"There's 100 people out there," he said, gesturing at the fair. "By next year, 50 of 'em will be gone. Maybe 20 will be doing so-so; another 25 will do a little bit better. That leaves just five people who will sell millions," advised the doctor.

"Realistically, there's only one big fad a year," he said sadly. "If there were more, I'd still be making a lot of stuff."

$2, week's work earns a degree

WILBURTON, Okla. (AP) — For $2 and about a week's time, you can get a college degree from a new school in southeastern Oklahoma.

But you better not work too hard. The Wilburton Institute of Pespiscacious Mendacity, just 1 month old, has already graduated 200 relaxation specialists, says Stoney Hardcastle, manager of the Wilburton Chamber of Commerce.

Hardcastle admits the "college" was his scheme to create interest in the small town and raise funds.

Losers must pay $2 apiece for bachelor's degrees from the institute, named after a lofty term for shrewd lying. It is also known as the College of Loafing.

Hardcastle said he expects the college to develop advanced degree programs, which would sell for $3 each.

"The main thing we want to get across is we are not selling degrees, such as some of our major institutions in our state," he said.

Students must attend classes, which meet at a local restaurant and doughnut shop. And there are standards:

"The College of Loafing student must learn how to exaggerate a good fish story," Hardcastle said.

The college administration is considering establishing a sports program, with a probable emphasis on dominoes, Hardcastle said.

"We've got a sports director, but we haven't gotten him awake long enough yet to organize any sports."

Nureyev to return

PARIS (AP) — Ballet dancer Rudolf Nureyev will return to the Soviet Union to visit his mother for the first time since he defected to the West in 1961, the Paris Opera said Friday.

Nureyev, 49, now an Austrian citizen, is dance director of the Paris Opera Ballet.

"After 26 years far from my country, I have obtained authorization to go to the Soviet Union to see my family, my mother being very old and ill," he said in a statement. "I am very touched."

The Opera, citing the private nature of the visit, refused to provide the dates of the trip.

Nureyev thanked the Soviet and French authorities who had made the trip possible.

The dancer will be accompanied by an assistant in the office of French Culture Minister Francois Leotard, who has been working on a project for the Paris Opera Ballet to perform in the Soviet Union.

Mayor not pleased

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — U2 lead singer Bono may have picked the wrong city to spray-paint graffiti during a free concert before 20,000 fans.

Mayor Dianne Feinstein was not pleased. "I am disappointed that a rock star who is supposed to be a role model for young people chose to vandalize the work of another artist," she said.

Bono had climbed up the Vallancourt Fountain at Justin Herman Plaza and spray-painted in red: "Stop the Traffic, Rock 'n' Roll."

"The unfortunate incident marred an otherwise wonderful rock concert," Feinstein said in a statement Thursday.

The band, for its part, issued a statement through promoter Bill Graham Presents.

"Oops! U2 would like to apologize for any upset they caused," said the Irish rock band. "We got carried away by what was a great day and a great gig."

Hats off to Crowe

Ninety of the 787 hats in Crowe's collection are on display at the museum.

Crowe, an Oklahoma City native who is chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has collected a London bobby's helmet, a temple dancer's spiked headdress, even a hat once owned by Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The center threw a party earlier this week when Crowe came to see his hats on display, and he declared: "They never looked so good."

There's no hostility

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Beatle George Harrison feels no hostility toward Eric Clapton for marrying his ex-wife, Patti Boyd, and considers the rocker "one of my best mates."

"There was always this idea we hated each other. Never ever. It was over for Patti and I anyway. I still like the ex-wife, she's great," Harrison says in the Nov. 30 issue of Us magazine.

"As for divorce, we should have gotten divorced four years before. That didn't bother me. It bothered Eric at the time. Now Eric is getting divorced from her, too. But we all still love each other."

Harrison, who produced the movie "Shanghai Surprise" with Sean Penn and Madonna, was asked if he would work with the couple again.

"It's not worth the trouble," he said. "They have good qualities. But whenever that element in him is set off, he comes unglued. That's his problem — that side of him nobody wants to know about."

Home sales fall in peak season, trade group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes, hurt by rising mortgage rates, fell in 28 states during the peak summer sales season, a real estate trade group reported Friday.

The National Association of Realtors said 14 states, concentrated in depressed energy and farm regions, suffered sales declines of 10 percent or more from July through September compared with the same period a year ago.

The biggest setbacks were in Colorado, where sales were down 28.3 percent, and Wyoming, where sales fell 25.8 percent. Both states were hurt by a slump in oil and gas exploration caused by falling energy prices.

Overall, the seasonally adjusted annual rate of sales of existing single-family homes dropped to 3.8 million units during the summer, down 3.3 percent from the same period a year ago.

While sales were falling, home prices were rising. The median sales price climbed to $85,400, 5.8 percent higher than a year ago when the midpoint price was $80,700.

New York City and Boston held onto their spots as the costliest housing areas in the country with median sales prices of $183,000 and $181,600 respectively.

Over the past two years, those two cities have ranked either first or second in the association's quarterly price survey, which covers 53 metropolitan areas.

Providence, R.I., had the largest jump in home prices during the past year, a giant 37.8 percent increase which left the median price of an existing home at $126,600.

Two other metropolitan areas in the Northeast were close behind in terms of price increases. Hartford, Conn., saw home prices jump 25.3 percent to a median of $165,400 followed by the Albany, N.Y., area where prices shot up 19.1 percent to $98,600.

The Northeast has seen prices climb much faster than other regions of the country as heavy demand has outstripped supplies.

However, John Tuccillo, chief economist for the Realtors association, said price advances in this part of the country are likely to moderate in coming months.

"Although we are still seeing a boom cycle in the Northeast, that market has softened and likely will soften more during the fourth quarter," he said, basing this forecast in part on the slump in the stock market.

"The losses incurred by those in the New York financial community will have a rippling effect, curbing home buying in that area," he said.

Home sales were up 70.7 percent in Delaware, the biggest increase of any state, followed by a 50 percent gain in Alaska, and a 34 percent increase in Nevada.

But the few bright spots in sales were outweighed by a general slump in activity with declines in 28 states and the District of Columbia. The declines ranged from a modest 0.5 percent dip in Florida to double-digit tumbles in 14 states.

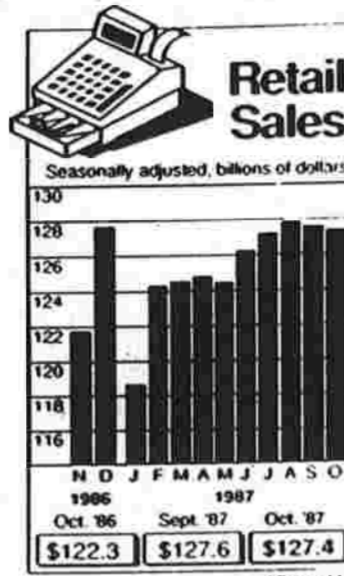

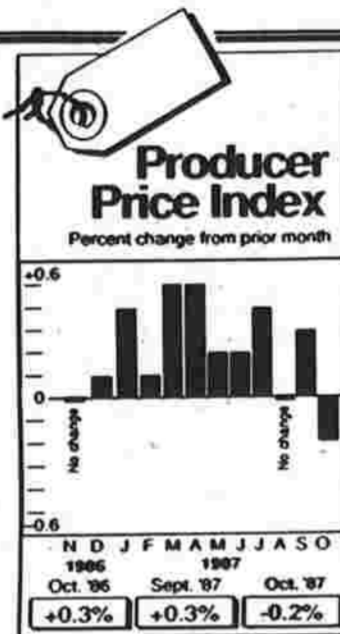

In addition to Colorado and Wyoming, other states with big declines in sales during the summer were Idaho, down 24.4 percent; Nebraska, down 23.4 percent; Arkansas, down 22.7 percent; and Montana, with a 20.1 percent sales decline. Other areas with double-digit declines were Illinois, Missouri, Mississippi, Washington, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Utah and the District of Columbia.

Tuccillo blamed the sales weakness on a loss of borderline home buyers, who have found themselves priced out of the market by the advances in mortgage rates this year. After falling to a nine-year low of 9 percent, fixed-rate mortgages climbed steadily, hitting a high this year of 11.56 percent in mid-October.

Since the crash of the stock market, interest rates have been falling and the nationwide average for fixed-rate mortgages has again dipped below 11 percent.

Tuccillo said this rate decline may spur sales in the final three months of the year, but he predicted sales would again falter next year as interest rates resume rising.

While most cities had price increases compared to a year ago, 10 of the 53 areas surveyed saw price declines.

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

■ Congressional and White House negotiators continued negotiations on how to shrink the federal deficit.

■ The Labor Department said wholesale prices edged down 0.2 percent last month, posting their first drop since July 1986.

■ Retail sales slipped 0.1 percent in October, but discounting the expected drop in new-car purchases sales increased at their speediest clip since February, the Commerce Department said.

■ Eastern Airlines announced it was laying off around 3,500 employees, after the financially ailing carrier reported a $67.4 million loss for the third quarter.

■ Pan Am Corp. rejected a proposal by California investor Kirk Kerkorian to take over its troubled airline, Pan American World Airways.

■ Southland Corp. said it would try to complete a $4 billion leveraged buyout, despite having postponed a $1.5 billion offering of high-risk junk bonds aimed at financing the transaction.

■ Singer Co.'s board urged shareholders to reject an unsolicited $1.06 billion tender offer led by Florida investor Paul Bilzerian.

■ General Motors Corp. announced plans to boost its sales effort in Japan, with the new venture centering on three of its U.S.-made models that will be marketed in a joint venture with Suzuki Motor Co.

■ Honeywell Bull Inc. said it will eliminate nearly 8 percent of its work force under a restructuring aimed at improving the company's competitiveness.

■ IC Industries Inc. and PepsiCo Inc. agreed to form a $1.3 billion joint venture to bottle Pepsi-Cola.

■ The chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Danny Wall, endorsed the idea of combining several troubled savings and loan institutions into single packages to attract more investors.

■ Foreign steel's share of the U.S. market declined to 19.4 percent in September and was little changed at 22.7 percent for the first nine months of the year, steel importers and producers said.

■ A federal bankruptcy judge ordered the merger of two committees representing creditors of oil giant Texaco Inc., ruling it was too costly and no longer reasonable to have separate creditor panels.

■ Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, pledged to maintain the price of oil at around $18 a barrel for another year.

■ In a separate report relating to auto sales, the Labor Department said 1988 model cars sold in October cost an average $399.01 more at the retail level than similarly equipped 1987 models sold a year ago.

Of this price increase, $245.56 went into improvements or new features, the report said.

The price increase in 1988 models compares with a $776.38 increase between the 1986 and 1987 models.

Consumer buying brisk except for automobiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans spent freely on all goods except automobiles in October, the government said Friday in a report indicating no immediate blow to consumer confidence from the stock market crash.

The Commerce Department said retail sales edged down 0.1 percent as a sharp, 3.1 percent dip in auto sales more than offset gains elsewhere. Excluding autos, sales were up 0.7 percent, the strongest jump since February.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department provided dramatic evidence that inflation remains tame. Wholesale prices fell 0.2 percent in October as cheaper food and energy combined to produce the first drop since July 1986.

For the first 10 months of the year, the Producer Price Index for finished goods, which measures price activity one step short of the retail level, advanced at an annual rate of 3.0 percent.

Retail establishments sold $127.4 billion worth of goods in October, down $137 million from September. The Commerce Department adjusts the figures for seasonal variations, but not for inflation.

"We got good news today. ... Consumers thus far have not made any necessary connection between the stock market, the prospects for the economy and their own future in terms of job security and salary," said Sandra Shaber, an economist for the Futures Group, a Washington-based consulting firm to consumer products manufacturers.

"Until and if they make that connection, the impact on consumer spending is going to remain small," she said.

The October report reflects activity throughout the month and includes sales during the 12 days after Oct. 19, when the stock market's historic plunge wiped out an estimated $500 billion in wealth.

However, Lawrence Chimerine, president of Wharton Econometrics, a Philadelphia-based forecasting firm, said it was too soon to gauge the stock market's effect on consumers.

"Most people don't react that quickly. If there's going to be any reaction, it's going to take several months. ... The key will be November and December," he said.

Last month's small overall decline followed a 1.1 percent drop in September — a figure revised downward from the earlier estimate of minus 0.4 percent — and increases from June through August.

For the first 10 months of the year, sales were up 4.2 percent over the same period last year.

"After allowing for inflation, you have a growth that is probably not keeping pace with the growth in employment," said Jay Levy of Levy Economic Forecasts in Chappaqua, N.Y. "It would appear that most consumers are not able or barely able at best to maintain their standard of living."

Nearly all of the weakness in October came from the 3.1 percent drop auto sales, which was anticipated as dealers struggled without the end-of-the-model-year incentives that had boosted summer business. Auto sales had slipped 3.8 percent in September.

"They were down less than expected," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Bros., a New York investment firm. "The bulk of the weakness in auto sales occurred in the first 20 days. The last 10 days were stronger, so auto sales did not show any sign of the crash. They would have been down in any case."

In a separate report relating to auto sales, the Labor Department said 1988 model cars sold in October cost an average $399.01 more at the retail level than similarly equipped 1987 models sold a year ago.

Of this price increase, $245.56 went into improvements or new features, the report said.

The price increase in 1988 models compares with a $776.38 increase between the 1986 and 1987 models.

Fund managers don't hide losses

QUESTION: Many mutual fund organizations offer a variety of funds to the public, each based on a different investment objective. When the economy changes radically from its present course, some mutual funds will boom and others will bust. Do sufficient safeguards exist within the mutual fund industry to prevent flinching by fund managements to minimize reported losses by the bummers?

ANSWER: Although almost anything can be done in this world, an attempt by a mutual fund's management to prop up the price of the fund's shares above actual value would be virtually impossible.

The people who manage a mutual fund do not have possession of the fund's assets — cash and stocks or other securities the fund holds as investments. Those assets are held by the fund's custodian bank — as required by the Investment Company Act of 1940, the principal federal law covering mutual funds.

A mutual fund's share price — its asset value per share — is determined by adding up those assets, subtracting any liabilities and dividing by the number of shares "outstanding" and owned by investors.

Most mutual funds "price" their shares once every business day. Some do it more frequently. Any difference between true asset value per share and a price reported by a fund would be spotted in a hurry. Don't fret. It's not going to happen.

If the opportunity existed to report inflated per share asset values, mutual fund managements would have been sorely tempted from Monday, Oct. 19, when the stock market "crashed" through Oct. 23.

During that five-day period, the per share asset values of all mutual funds holding stocks plunged. There were no indications of management attempts to report higher than true prices.

QUESTION: When shares of a "load" mutual fund are purchased, the sales charge is not shown on the confirmation statement sent by the broker. For tax purposes, how is this sales charge accounted for when the shares are sold?

ANSWER: The sales charge is part of the purchase price — your "basis" for tax purposes. When you sell — "redeem" mutual fund shares by turning them back to the fund — the difference between your basis and the redemption amount you receive is your profit or loss, which you report as a capital gain or capital loss on your income tax return.

Let's say you put $1,000 into XYZ Mutual Fund, which has an 8.5 percent sales commission. That sales load is expressed as a percentage of the total amount you pay. As a result, you pay a $85 commission and buy $915 worth of fund shares.

Yes, sharp-pencil readers, $85 is just shy of 9.3 percent of $915, but Securities and Exchange Commission rules permit it to be called 8.5 percent of the $1,000.

In this example, if you bought 100 shares at $10 each, your per share basis is $10, even though the per share asset value at the time of your purchase was $9.15.

QUESTION: Are there any money market mutual funds that mail monthly dividends home to you?

ANSWER: Sure. Virtually all money market mutual funds declare dividends daily and distribute them monthly. You have your choice of either reinvesting those dividends or receiving them by check through the mail.

Wall Streeters talk rebound

By Chef Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Less than a month after the worst stock market decline in modern times, many Wall Streeters are putting on remarkably upbeat faces.

There is much talk these days that a recession in the producing and consuming economy can be avoided, despite the severity of the market drop.

And though memories of Black Monday on Oct. 19 remain fresh, more and more forecasters are talking up the chances for a significant rebound in stock prices.

Cameron Associates, a New York investor relations firm that surveyed 453 analysts, brokers and money managers in late October and early November, reports that more than 75 percent of the respondents expect the Dow Jones industrial average to be back up in the 2,400-3,000 range by next June, assuming progress on the federal budget deficit.

"The overwhelming majority were upbeat and optimistic," said William Borchert, the firm's president. "We anticipated dismay and pessimism, and for the most part it just wasn't there."

To be sure, this kind of positive thinking doesn't sit well with everyone. In the eyes of some critics, it has an element of whistling past the graveyard of trying to wish the whole experience away.

Raymond F. DeVoe Jr., an analyst at Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., contends that some of his colleagues practiced "denial of responsibility" by attributing the market slide to a loss of confidence in government leaders.

"It's not Washington or economic policy that caused the stock market correction and the Oct. 19 debacle," he declared. "In our view it is the financial community that is predominantly responsible for what has taken place." For "all those who allowed greed to color their judgment," DeVoe said, "it is much easier to try to hide their own errors and look for some other scapegoat."

Whatever the causes of the crash, the market has shown distinct signs of stabilizing lately. In the past week, it rallied from some early losses with the help of better-than-expected figures on the nation's trade deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed Friday at 1,935.01, down 24.04 from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index dropped 2.44 to 137.80, the American Stock Exchange market value index 3.79 to 251.44, and the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market 3.43 to 322.97.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 174.81 million shares a day, against "212.15" million the week before.

Without minimizing the financial pain it caused, a good many observers make the case that the crash may ultimately yield some significant benefits.

"The knee-jerk reaction in the wake of the market crash has been that it would cause a recession. The actuality may be that it prevented one," said Greg Smith at Prudential-Bache Securities.

Police union thanks voters

To the Editor:

The Manchester Police Union wishes to express its appreciation to the voters of Manchester for supporting its endorsed candidates for the Board of Directors. We feel that these people were the best qualified candidates to lead Manchester for the next two years. We feel the leadership will be responsive, informed and concerned about the people and issues that affect Manchester. The union's leadership looks forward to working with all nine elected Democrats to make Manchester a safer and better community. Again, thank you for your support.

Mixed emotions on leaving

To the Editor:

It is with mixed emotions that I am resigning as the town of Manchester's highway superintendent/fleet manager, after what seems to have been a very short four-year period. The experiences and knowledge gained during my employment has been tremendous and certainly contributed greatly to my moving on to the town of Newington as assistant town manager. I wish to extend my thanks to all of the citizens of Manchester, the entire town staff, the board of directors and the local media for their support and understanding.

The crews of the Equipment and Supplies, Highway and Sanitation divisions have shown not only their abilities and knowledge, but more importantly their dedication and loyalty as evidenced during Hurricane Gloria; the difficult winter early in 1987; the success of the centralized repair garage; the 42 miles of road improvements; and the implementation of the landfill weighing operation. In a very short time these accomplishments were made and will benefit the town for many years to come.

I take pride in knowing I played a role in the activities and feel confident that the town will continue to prosper and progress under the leadership of Robert Weiss and George Kandra. Once again, I would like to extend my thanks to all who have supported my efforts during the past four years.

Sprucing up the Senate

Who says lawmakers never listen to complaints from folks back home?

The Senate recently approved an $8,024 expenditure to buy a new textured backdrop for an area in the chamber where members often stand to deliver speeches.

It seems folks back home who were tuning in their television sets to view Senate proceedings reportedly complained the drab chamber walls gave lawmakers a greenish facial glow.

But it's all been corrected now, though, with the recent installation of the new backdrop. Citizens for a Sound Economy, a public policy organization, publishes a quarterly report, in which the Senate prop expenditure was noted. In each report, CSE awards "roses" for actions which lend support to a competitive and free economy and "raspberries" for actions which undermine such work.

Needless to say, CSE awarded a "raspberry" to senators who supported the $8,024 expense.

Stealing the bacon

"(Re)actions speak louder than words," according to the November issue of Citizens for America, the official newsletter of the president's grass-roots lobby.

When CFA compiled its latest pork book, rating lawmakers on their spending habits, it generated "a wide array of responses" from Capitol Hill.

"CFA hand-delivered a copy of the pork book to the Washington office of every 'pork barrel hall of shame member,'" the newsletter says. "Yet in response to numerous press inquiries, many of these same offices have maintained they are 'unaware' of the pork book."

Besides the denial, the newsletter says some members responded with "cowardice and rage," but at least one lawmaker showed some "maturity."

"Rep. Dan Glickman of Kansas set the standard for reasoned response by threatening to summon the capitol police when presented his copy of the book by Pork E. Pig," according to the newsletter, which even has accompanying photographs. "Glickman did file an official complaint with the House Sergeant at Arms."

The newsletter goes on to explain while CFA "disagrees" with Rep. Nick Rahall's voting record, "the West Virginian did react to the book in the spirit intended. He candidly admits to seeking federal dollars for his district, but with a touch of humor."

'Withdraw my name'

Rep. George Gekas, R-Penn., wants his name "withdrawn as a possibility for nomination to the Supreme Court."

In a recent tongue-in-cheek speech on the House floor, Gekas revealed "in seventh grade one day with a colleague of mine, I played hooky for a full half a day. Later on, I became increasingly guilty of overdue library books and have paid many fines in the local public library," he confessed.

"Moreover, traffic tickets have been part of my background, and I want the Congressional Record to reveal that in full," Gekas continued.

"I believe fully that these indiscretions of mine disqualify me from becoming a Supreme Court justice, only because the Senate will be the final arbiter; but these indiscretions do not prevent me from running for president of the United States, because only the public, my constituents, will decide whether or not I can be successful on that venture."

'Pass the Law' Day

When it comes to calling attention to worthy causes, the imagination of most members of Congress knows no bounds.

The latest records show the 100th Congress and President Reagan have teamed up to create 146 new laws — a number inflated by dozens and dozens of commemoratives and congratulatory measures that contain no legislative substance.

Seventy-seven of the new laws, or 53 percent, deal with weighty issues like designating "National Know Your Cholesterol Week," which will be celebrated the week of April 5.

Other laws new to the book create: "Snow White Week," "National Dairy Goat Awareness Week," and "National Fishing Week."

Child-custody battle reaches Saudi Arabia

WASHINGTON — Kristine Uhlman took the State Department's advice and wound up in a Saudi Arabian jail. And she may never see the two children she had by her first husband, a Saudi citizen.

Uhlman had taken the two small children with her when she fled Saudi Arabia — and her husband — in June 1981. She had met her spouse, a geologist, at Ohio State University.

Three months after she fled, 4-year-old Maiseon and 2-year-old Hani were kidnapped outside Uhlman's Denver apartment. Within three days, the children were back in Saudi Arabia. Her husband then divorced her and was given custody of the children by a Saudi court.

Frightened and confused, Uhlman asked the State Department for help. Officials gave her a list of Saudi attorneys and recommended that she pursue the matter in the Saudi courts. They neglected to tell her that her chances of recovering the children were remote if not non-existent.

Uhlman had been awarded custody of the children by a Colorado judge, but the Saudi government doesn't recognize U.S. court decisions. Under Islamic law, children of divorced parents are awarded to the father so that a daughter won't have to live with a "strange man" if the mother remarries.

When Uhlman returned to Saudi Arabia to press her case, she lost both her case and, for a while, her freedom. She was arrested for no stated reason and spent five days in a Saudi jail. To stay in Saudi Arabia and be near her children, she married a Canadian working in the country. She stayed for a year. Although she married her new husband for a specific reason, they later fell in love. They have since returned to the United States and have their own son.

The State Department insists that Uhlman's case is being pursued "at the highest level in Saudi Arabia." Meanwhile, Uhlman tries to keep in touch with her children by telephone, hoping that they will choose to live with her when they reach the legal age of 14. They are now 10 and 8.

It is a forlorn hope. When she first returned to Saudi Arabia, she said, the children recognized her. Now they are cold and distant on the phone. "Now they doubt that I'm their mother," she told our reporter Tanya Isch. "They say, 'I don't have blue eyes. I have brown eyes.'"

As an American and a practicing Christian, Uhlman was doomed from the start in her Saudi court fight. Photos showing her and the children leaving a church service in Denver were produced as evidence that she was corrupting their religious heritage. "They don't like the idea of a child being raised as a non-Moslem," explained Holly Planells, who founded American Children Held Hostage after her son was abducted by her husband and taken to Jordan. "They really believe that if you're not Moslem, you're going to hell."

Planells doesn't know if she'll ever get her son back, but at least she is able to visit him in Jordan. She doesn't plan to press the case in Jordanian courts, for fear she would be barred even from seeing her son.

"I see Kristine's case and there's no way I'd want to go through that," Planells said. "She just wants visitation rights and she can't even get that."

Planells said there are about 2,500 known cases of international kidnaping of children from this country, and it has been estimated that the number may be as high as 10,000. Forty-seven of the known cases involve Saudi Arabians.

Planells said the odds against getting abducted children back are about 25 to 1.

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., has introduced legislation that would make international kidnaping a felony, which would give the U.S. government solid legal standing — and thus clout to negotiate — in countries with which we share extradition agreements. The possibility of felony charge might also act as a deterrent, Dixon aide Sarah Pang explained.

Confidential file

The publicly proclaimed goal of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars) is to protect the United States from incoming missiles. But sources in the Pentagon point out that there's another purpose of equal importance: to shoot down Soviet communications and espionage satellites in constant orbit around the earth.

These spy-in-the-sky satellites, loaded with sophisticated electronic gear, act as the Soviet military's eyes and ears. They would provide early warning of a U.S. missile attack and coordinate communications between the Kremlin and its ships at sea, airborne bombers and ground forces. Obviously, if these satellites could be knocked out of commission, the Soviet military would be effectively deaf and blind.

There's one big problem with the spy satellites. They orbit the earth 22,000 miles out in space — far beyond the reach of any existing U.S. weapons. Our satellites are safely out there, too, of course, so both sides are frantically working on super-long-range satellite killers.

Coordinated coverage

Gunboat diplomacy isn't as easy as it used to be in Teddy Roosevelt's day. In order to brandish a big stick in the Persian Gulf, the U.S. Navy must maintain a complex logistical operation. For example, the air cover for the Navy's escort service is provided by fighter planes from carriers stationed outside the Strait of Hormuz in the Indian Ocean. The fighters are refueled by airborne tankers coming from bases in Saudi Arabia and Oman, while P-3 Navy reconnaissance planes operating from airfields in Oman provide surveillance.

Breaking the poverty cycle

By Chuck Stone

God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform.

"Hey, C'MON MAN! If you have to ASK about the cost, you can't afford it."

Which is pretty hip, considering how God persuaded the Rev. Jerry Falwell to quit politics. God didn't have to move too hard. Falwell's political empire is no longer a money-making hustle, so Falwell lost interest.

More interesting than the exit of the Moral Majority Mikado is the man who succeeds him as president of both the Moral Majority and the Liberty Federation. "We believe ... that in some ways we've ignored the plight of the oppressed, the poor, the downtrodden in this country," said Jerry Nims, an Atlanta businessman.

We haven't heard such heresy since Galileo told the pope that the earth revolved around the sun!

Nims' surprising concern for the oppressed, the poor and downtrodden recants Moral Majority orthodoxy. It also belatedly recognizes that conservatives can no longer isolate themselves from the national need to break the cycle of poverty.

A few days ago in New Orleans, the six Democratic presidential contenders offered their solutions in a debate on the economics of social-welfare policy. Of the six, only one candidate, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, dared to reaffirm the job-producing legacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson by proposing an $8 billion job program. "We can pay people for doing nothing or we can pay them for doing something," said Simon, who advocated using "the tools of government" to solve social problems.

Conservatives would agree with him that the eradication of poverty is a mandatory social goal. But they reject the federal government's largesse. In a new book, "Out of the Poverty Trap," the current conservative agenda for welfare reform and job creation is spelled out by Stuart Butler and Anna Kondratas, who paradoxically embrace the goals of Johnson's Great Society (more heresy). Butler, a conservative guru at the Heritage Foundation, and Kondratas, a Department of Agriculture administrator, would even retain some parts of the existing system of welfare. They would:

- Shift the administration of services (Aid to Families with Dependent Children, food stamps) to the states;
- Eliminate the bureaucratic octopus that impedes "poor families that try to stand on their feet";
- Require mothers and fathers, "whether married or not," to provide for their children.

But the fundamental thrust of Butler and Kondratas is philosophical. They urge the "empowerment of the poor" through such devices as community-based "coalitions for reform," a voucher system for education and goods and services, and land reform in poor neighborhoods. Conservatives will be amazed to learn that black nationalists have been advocating these programs for decades.

Stuart and Kondratas argue, as do most conservatives, that the Great Society programs, while nobly intended, resulted in a systematic breakdown of poor families, especially in minority communities. Herb Berkowitz, vice president of the Heritage Foundation, calls this "the law of unintended results."

If there is such a law — and I don't believe there is — it also has worked against conservatives. Witness the Reagan administration's responsibility for the stock-market panic.

As a catechism of conservative populism, "Out of the Poverty Trap" focuses on getting the poor off welfare and into productive jobs. Conservatives might even find its philosophy useful for reducing the awesome Reagan-created deficits and stabilizing a roller-coaster stock market.

Hotel rooms go to the dogs

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago we stopped at a motel near Charleston, S.C., and before registering, my husband asked if we could keep our three dogs in our room with us overnight.

The motel owner said "Certainly," and handed us a card that read something like this: "We never had a dog that smoked in bed, got drunk, stole our towels, nor did we ever have to call the police to break up a dogfight."

The above is not exactly quoted, but it is the general idea. I lost the card. Will you please ask your readers if any of them know the actual wording, as we would like to have some cards made up to

Whirlpool temperature may be out of whack

DEAR DR. GOTT: At my health club, the whirlpool is supposedly set at between 90 and 100 degrees, but it is so hot that I can't stand to get in. Is my temperature out of whack or is this too hot?

DEAR READER: Some people tend to be heat-sensitive. They are intolerant of saunas and whirlpools. Listen to what your body is telling you; if the whirlpool is uncomfortable, stay out of it — or enjoy one that isn't as hot. In addition, you might want to check the water temperature of the unit in your health club. Perhaps the whirlpool is too hot, and you might be the first sensible person to voice a complaint about improperly functioning equipment.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Who can keep up with these food fads? Now, believe it or not, my father, 63, has started drinking a daily glass of 15 drops of hydrogen peroxide mixed with water. He claims it will keep his system clean. Is there any harm in this practice?

DEAR READER: The amount of hydrogen peroxide your father consumes each day will not harm him. It won't help him, either. I agree that the claims and counterclaims about nutrition are confusing to people who aren't specialists in the topic. That's why I've found the following resource material to be so helpful: "Popular Nutritional Practices: A Scientific Appraisal," by Jack Yetiv, M.D., Ph.D. (Popular Medical Press, Box 4031-G, Menlo Park, CA 94026). The book costs $1.295 (including postage and handling) and can be ordered directly.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 18 and can sweat through three shirts, a sweater and a winter jacket. My parents say it's normal, but if that's CLARITA M. MOESER, HUMANE SOCIETY, BRUNSWICK, GA.

DEAR CLARITA: I published that message several years ago. It was sent to me by a dog lover who had seen it framed, above the registration desk, in a small hotel. And here it is: "Dogs are welcome in this hotel."

true, why aren't any of my friends walking around with huge sweat stains on their clothes? This has been going on for five years and is driving me crazy.

DEAR READER: You seem to be describing hyperhidrosis — too much sweating. Although this condition can be normal for many individuals, in others it may reflect an underlying disease, such as hidden infection or thyrotoxicosis (overactive thyroid). I think that you should be checked by a doctor to make sure that you aren't suffering from an undiagnosed disease.

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog who stole our towels, played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So if your dog can vouch for you, you're welcome, too."

DEAR ABBY: It has happened again! One of the people I baby-sit for "forgot" his checkbook again, and can't pay me until Monday. That means I am unable to take care of an obligation I planned on this weekend.

This has happened several times before with him, and some of my other customers.

I often wonder what they would say if their paycheck wasn't in their hands at the proper time.

Several of the people I baby-sit for on a weekly basis drive expensive cars and take lovely weekend trips. But it is a different matter when it comes to paying their baby-sitter. They never hesitate to ask me for special favors.

Please tell me how to deal with these people with "poor memories." I am a very reliable sitter. NOT "MRS. GOT-ROCKS."

DEAR NOT: Inform these "amnesia" that payment is due at the time the services are rendered, because their "forgetfulness" puts you in a financial bind. Then rearrange your client priority list, with the slow payers at the bottom. A reliable sitter is hard to find. And if you become a little harder to get, it may improve their memories.

Between the Lines

The story behind the story

By Josie

George Strait

Q. Please tell me what George Strait is currently doing. Jan, New Plymouth, Ida.

A. He should be in the process of recording a new album that he began at the end of September. Then, as is his custom, he should be back out on the road performing.

Q. Please tell me where Belinda Bauer is from and what she's been in. Juan Suarez, Modesto, Calif.

A. She's from Australia and began her acting career doing classical parts, such as Ophelia in "Hamlet," while at the same time studying classical ballet. She decided to leave Australia and travel, landing and settling in New York where she became a top model.

You've seen her face in ads for Revlon, Coty and Elizabeth Arden.

Her acting career here began when she was spotted at a New York publishing party; she was cast in "Winter Kills" opposite Jeff Bridges, teamed with him again in "The American Success Company" and cast in "The Secret of Dorian Gray" and "Sampson and Delilah," among others, on TV. Currently she has a film, "The Rosary Murders," in release and is shooting "Act of Piracy" with Gary Busey in Mauritius.

Q. I would like to know what Erin Moran has been doing lately. We haven't seen her in quite a while. W. Kelleher, Oak Lawn, Ill.

A. According to her agent, enjoying married life. She was married earlier this year to a film technician named Rocky and took a couple of months off to hide out in California's Mammoth Mountains area, be a newlywed and cook. Her next appearance should be in a syndicated series called "Sports Styles," which is described as a sports-oriented "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

Q. I would like to know everything about Mikhail Baryshnikov, like how old he is and if he's been married. J., Tunkhannock, Pa.; Carol Ann Wholen, St. John's, Nfld.; Jessie Wunder, Longport, N.J.

A. He's 39 (born January 27, 1948) from Riga, Latvia, the son of an engineer and his wife. His mother was a devotee of ballet; he, as a child, was much more interested in sports but when he was 12, she enrolled him in the School of the Theater Opera Ballet in Riga.

He, obviously, had natural talent and he excelled there, prompting him to change his mind about his intended career. He had once wanted to become a concert pianist, now he wanted to become a dancer.

While visiting Leningrad with a group of young dancers in 1963, he applied for admission to the Vaganova school, the training ground for the famed Kirov Ballet. He got in and was placed under the tutelage of ballet master Alexander Pushkin. Three years later, without serving the customary apprenticeship in the corps de ballet, he joined the Kirov and at 18 became a soloist. Over the next four years he became a Kirov star.

In 1970, he made his debut in the West, on the Kirov's tour of Europe, and drew raves. Back in the Soviet Union, he began to become discontented — with the direction in which the Kirov was going and his own artistic limitations within the Kirov.

While on a tour of Canada with dancers from the Bolshoi in 1974, he defected. His first performance on his own was with the National Ballet of Canada, followed by a string of performances with the American Ballet Theater, arranged by his friend and fellow defector Natalia Makarova, with whom he'd danced at the Kirov prior to her departure for the West in 1970.

More recently, as you probably know, he was made artistic director of the American Ballet Theater in 1982 while continuing as one of its principal dancers (with the exception of

Q. Please tell me about Esia Morales. I think he's a wonderful actor. D.V., Ontario, Ore.

A. He's 24, was born in Brooklyn and raised in the Bronx under less-than-ideal circumstances. His parents separated when he was 2 and the times that followed were economically tough. He left home frequently and finally, at 14, voluntarily became a ward of the state and was placed in the reform school Marolla Place. At the same time, though, he attended the High School for Performing Arts and was determined to succeed as an actor, which he did, helped along by mentors at the school.

His film debut was in "Bad Boys" opposite Sean Penn, and he's followed it pretty steadily with others — the TV special "On Wings of Eagles," the movie "Rainy Day Friends," "La Bamba" and "The Principal."

Mikhail Baryshnikov

several months off for knee surgery last year). His TV specials, "Baryshnikov on Broadway" and "Baryshnikov in Hollywood," and choreographed classics, "The Nutcracker" and "Don Quixote," were major successes, as was his film debut in "The Turning Point." He was nominated for an Academy Award for his performance as an amorous Russian dancer, a role, most agree, not too far from real life.

His second film, "White Nights," wasn't a major critical success, but he was. His third film, "Dancers," is a due out this month. Also watch for several dance specials he's recently taped for PBS to air sometime this season.

He hasn't been married but he has been deeply and lengthily involved. One of those involvements, with actress Jessica Lange, led to a daughter, Aleksandra, nicknamed Shura, now 6.

Judith Light thinks about her life

By Jane Ardmore

What a smashing lady — Judith Light — moving swiftly, light and free as a dancer in her beige silk duster and graceful freeform straw hat. You know her, of course, as Angela Bower, successful career woman of ABC's hit comedy series "Who's the Boss?"; but wait until you see her as Cathy Proctor, "a real no-nonsense and vulnerable girl, owning herself," as Light puts it, in "Hit and Run," the comedy-drama-mystery-thriller on NBC.

"I'm so excited to talk for the first time about this picture," she says, "because with it I feel I'm owning my self and my success — something it hasn't been easy for me to do. 'Who's the Boss?' has been such an experience, such an unexpected (for me) triumph, not in the least the way I expected to find what I suppose you'd call 'stardom,' that it's not easy to take it all in, appreciate and believe. But 'Hit and Run' is the absolute next step in terms of the extraordinary experiences of my career."

"Every character I've played — from the call girl/housewife Karen Wolek on 'One Life to Live' — has reflected what is happening to women in today's world. It's been one of my favorite things about my career, and now I get to play this girl, who has such spunk and verve and tenacity — married, with a small boy and a husband who leaves her eight and a half months pregnant, who then gets involved in a freak accident which involves her in a maze of repercussions that actually threaten her life. En route to womanhood, this girl is a victim of circumstances who doesn't regard herself as a victim in any way. She just plows through."

Judith Light had to have strength to follow the dream that started when she was exactly 3 years old and recited "Twas the Night Before Christmas" for her father. "I remember thinking, 'This is what I will do.'"

An only child, she grew up in Trenton, N.J. Her dad worked for an institutional food business (he's now an accountant), her mother was a women's wear buyer for a department store. "They liked my dream. They thought it was terrific." Her father would drive her to rehearsals in local theater productions.

She went to school and acted in plays. There wasn't really the usual child playtime. "I was so interested in drama. I was so determined to become a theater star, I didn't have time for friends, and I had strong feelings, anger, at not having friends. Acting became the great escape. I had this huge emotional life inside of me and no other place to let it out."

She studied classical piano, performed in oratorical contests in junior high, and was one of six Jewish girls to attend an Episcopalian girls high school. She would come home, eat dinner, and her father would drive her 45 minutes away to the Burlington County Footlighters where she performed in plays such as "Take Her She's Mine" and "The Diary of Anne Frank."

As it was, she sailed off in triumph after high school. She'd been accepted at Carnegie-Mellon University, where she obtained her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree, but there "they really want you to come crashing into reality, which was very difficult for a person like myself who was living on a summit of creativity."

"You have to come to grips with life inclusive of reality, and reality is tough. I was finally doing what I had most wanted to do in the world, but at Carnegie, you study acting, and they don't put you on a stage for two years. That almost killed me. They break you down and teach you a new way of talking and walking and looking at life."

"Everything came to me as I began to discover and feel different inside. And those discoveries came during the periods when I wasn't working, wasn't successful, and began to investigate why not. How was I stopping myself from the good that I dreamed? The time finally came when I was no longer going to blame the director or the producer or the scripts."

She had always said she'd never do a soap. She'd always said she'd never marry an actor. But when Light left "One Life to Live," the script had Karen running off with her lover who in real life was Judith's husband, Robert Desiderio. She'd met him on that soap!

"Robert has been an extraordinary support for me," she says. "If I find myself getting too far into the future, he will pull me back on track. He says, 'Just stay in the present. Go with what your heart tells you — your experience, your gut.' He understands, of course, because he has faced the same challenges, the same highs and lows. He was starring on the series 'Heart of the City.' It was canceled. And make no mistake, that was difficult. It is difficult when one partner is working and the other isn't. You just have to keep talking, telling each other your feelings. Now he's doing the lead in Gordon Miller's play 'Room Service' at the Pasadena Playhouse. It's great!

"We love each other very much and are totally committed to making our lives work individually and together. He is a constant source of joy to me. He's — I don't know how to put it without making it sound soppy — so willing to be himself."

In person, she looks much younger than Angela Bower, and when you say so, she explains that for Angela she wears "a lot more makeup and much more sophisticated clothes. She's uptight and more controlled, more conservative than I. Those traits have a tendency to make one look older, and in life I'm not like that. Really, ever since Robert and I came to California in late '82, I've been on what you might call an energy flow. I began to notice that I was doing something differently."

She did one movie, "The Intimate Agony," and had two parts in TV after coming west on "St. Elsewhere" and on "Family Ties," and then nothing until the summer of '83 when she was called in to read for the pilot of "Who's the Boss?" ABC was building this comedy series around "Taxi" star Tony Danza.

"I used to say I'd never do a sitcom, but by now I was concerned with only one thing: with what energy am I walking in to this audition? I had decided that it was too easy to put the blame on scripts or executives. No blaming the script. If they were looking for a girl with a mole on the left cheek of her derriere, I wasn't their girl; but I certainly could feel good about the way I read and the way I felt. So it worked.

"Oh, and Tony Danza. I love him, I love him. I don't know anyone in the world like him. He's smart, he's fast, he's funny, he teaches. A really powerful man. He's taught me a lot about comedy. So has Katherine Helmond. I'd been doing drama for so long, and you couldn't ask for better people to teach you about comedy."

All the moments add up, and you have your life. Right at this moment, mine has come around full circle. ■

Travel

Travelers who steal from hotels

By Phyllis Zauner

The guest from room 210 was ready to check out. He called the desk clerk to have his bill tallied, then asked for a bellhop and luggage carrier to carry a heavy carton to his station wagon in the underground garage. Generous to a fault, the guest gave the bellhop a surprisingly large tip.

It wasn't until the maid came to clean the room that the hotel's loss was discovered. The refrigerated mini-bar was gone. "This isn't the first time they've packed out bottles without paying," moaned the manager, "but this is the first time we've helped a guest steal the entire bar."

The fact that travelers are inclined to be light-fingered in hotels is scarcely hot news. Anyone with a "Stolen From Molokai" ashtray knows it's true — people tend to, well, borrow things from hotel rooms and not return them.

But what they're taking these days might raise some eyebrows. Ramada Inn is still trying to figure out how a 300-pound ice machine escaped notice as it left one of the chain's hotels.

What travelers leave behind can be equally astonishing. The San Francisco International Airport is still waiting for someone to pick up a Volkswagen bumper that was turned in at the lost-and-found office, where 2,500 pieces of lost property were logged in last year.

But to get back to the hotels, there's a very good reason most television sets are bolted to the dresser, and why headboards, paintings, lamps and even soap dishes are fastened tight.

"People will steal just about anything not secured," says one hotel manager. "And I mean anything."

He's right. Would you believe hotel telephones, room carpets, bathroom fixtures and marble fireplaces? These are just some of the items that have been lifted by guests.

Take the Inter-Continental in London. When it opened, management fully expected certain items to vanish. Indeed, dozens of ashtrays, towels and bathrobes checked out of the hotel. "But we were clearly surprised," said a spokeswoman, "when we discovered that a guest had checked out not only with his luggage, but had also taken the bathroom door."

There must be something about bathrooms that brings out the kleptomaniac in people. In Cairo, the Hilton was baffled as to why anyone would take the bidet faucets. It turned out the guest thief was a Japanese bathroom accessory manufacturer.

A Sacramento, Calif., hotel, the Sierra Inn, lost an entire pastel toilet.

Leading the disappearance list for bathrooms, of course, is bath towels. When the New York Inter-Continental added giant bath sheets to guest bathrooms, the hotel prepared for a mass exodus of the large towels. It never happened. The towels were so big that people couldn't get them into their suitcases. "But we did lose a lot of expensive washcloths," a spokesman admits.

At the Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Los Angeles, guests have stopped short of taking the bathroom sink. But what's worse is what became of the Oriental scatter rugs in guest rooms. When it became clear they were being packed out faster than they could be replaced, management had them sewn to the floor. But they still disappear.

Sometimes the hotel unwittingly helps in a theft. When a Beverly Wilshire bellhop arrived at a suite to help a guest check out, the man was waiting with his suitcases — and the room's marble fireplace that he had just cut and chiseled out of the wall. "Just taking it to get it repaired," said the guest nonchalantly. The bellhop helped him take the fireplace out of the hotel. It was never seen again.

One of the silliest heists on record came off in Woodlake Inn, a small hotel in northern California. As the guest drove off in his car, the bellhop was surprised to see a couple of ducks peeking out of the rear window of the departing car. The ducks had formerly been residents of a duck pond on the hotel grounds.

In some cases, the hotel's best intentions are flouted. The housekeeper of a Holiday Inn in Sacramento kept a wheelchair on hand for emergencies. The service is no longer available. "Someone just rolled off with it," the housekeeper says.

In the same city, the Sierra Inn is wondering how someone got away with the lobby cash register. And the Executive Lodge can't find its microwave.

Equally puzzling are the missing door peepholes and room numbers from a Best Western hotel in California, and the missing door signs from the Sheraton St. Louis. These items are bolted to the door — but they keep disappearing. They may indeed be interesting souvenirs, but hotel managers wonder how the guests manage to get them loose. "We can only assume they travel with tool boxes."

It's an international problem. The Savoy Hotel in London lost so many of its bathrobes, monogrammed with the Savoy logo, that something had to be done. Charging 35 pounds for the robes didn't stem the outgoing tide, but when they offered to add the guest's initials for an additional five pounds, guests were glad to leave with a personalized memento of their visit.

London's Mayfair Hotel annually loses 5,000 of its special Wedgwood ashtrays, but takes the loss stoically. They have a standing order with the manufacturer.

In West Germany, the Hotel & Guesthouse Association claims that something like $30 million is lost each year in items packed out in suitcases — everything from oyster forks to antique vases. It's a crime wave that's difficult to stem, says criminology professor Dr. Erich Hupe. "The thief doesn't have to break in, he's already in the room."

Why do they do it? "Travelers aren't necessarily kleptomaniacs," says one hotel executive. "It's just that they're paying such high prices for their accommodations, they feel they ought to get a little something back, one way or another."

cameras, but dentures and tur coats, baby strollers and TV sets, straw hats and jogging shoes, diamond jewelry and wallets stuffed with thousands of dollars in crisp new bills.

Judy James, consumer affairs manager for Pacific Southwest Airlines, says, "I'm talking about things you'd think they could never get along without. Like the old lady who left her walker on a flight. People are always leaving dental plates and bridges. In the case of kids, a lot of them leave their retainers behind, on purpose."

James's favorite, though, was the passenger who dawdled two weeks before asking PSA if anybody had found a book on overcoming procrastination. Says Jerry Trop, manager of consumer affairs for United Airlines, "Recently someone left behind an artificial leg. If people call us and identify the item, we'll return it."

Most airlines have their own lost-and-found department, and try to find the rightful owner of carry-on items lost. But at San Francisco International Airport most lost items end up in custody of the Police Department. Stored in a basement room are such items as a video camera, not claimed after five months, and an electric typewriter found in the airport garage and never claimed.

If there's a clue to ownership, a form letter is sent out notifying owners that articles have been found. Many of these letters go unanswered, though. A passenger who lives in Osaka, Japan, for example, probably would not want to fly back to San Francisco to collect a garment bag.

Police officer Nick Panasic estimates that 95 percent of lost items are picked up within a day or two.

But he has given up hope of hearing from a person who left a bull fiddle behind more than a year ago, or the smuggler who recently walked away from three suitcases full of high-grade marijuana.

But if hotels worry that the traveler seems remarkably casual in distinguishing what's his and what belongs in the room, they have also learned that he is occasionally equally loose in keeping track of what is rightfully his to take home. People leave some strange things behind.

At a Ramada Inn: contact lenses, a holster and bullets, leather straps tied to the bed, the top to a Maytag washer.

At a Best Western: diamond rings, adult magazines, whips and chains.

At another inn the housekeeping staff found loaded guns, used hypodermic needles, illegal drugs and a stolen VCR.

Staff at Los Robles Lodge in Sacramento didn't quite know what to do with the dog left behind under the bed in one guest room. Fortunately, its owner noticed after traveling 200 miles that something seemed to be missing.

The lost-and-found departments at airports reveal a strange collection of strewn possessions, too. Not just routine stuff like eyeglasses and

Ask Dick Kleiner
 Dear Dick: I have a steak dinner riding on this. My kid sister and I were talking about "Moonlighting." She said that Bruce and Cybill do not get along. I asked them why when this show came up. Cybill wanted Bruce to play David. Who is right? - R., Humble, Texas.
 Dear R.: Actually, you both are. Cybill Shepherd was cast first and tested with several actors who were auditioning to play David. She liked Bruce's approach to the part - still does, as a matter of fact. They don't get along too well, but that has nothing to do with acting. It's just a personality conflict.
 Dear Dick: My future mother-in-law had been trying to find out the name of the movie Lucille Ball and Ricky Ricardo starred in together. They were newlyweds, on their honeymoon, traveling in a mobile home. Do you know the title? - E.K., Morgantown, W.Va.
 Dear E.K.: It was "The Long Long Trailer," filmed in 1954, and, incidentally, Ricky Ricardo wasn't the name of the actor, but the character Desi Arnaz played.
 Dear Dick: Can you tell me if "Crime Story" was a miniseries, or will it be back next season? - K.D., Spring, Texas.
 Dear K.D.: It wasn't a miniseries complete message is on the line. -- L.M. Killean, Texas.

 Dear L.M.: Loosen up your fingers and start rubbing. You are extremely wrong. In the first place, it's a Coke commercial, not a Pepsi commercial. (Ad agencies hate people like you, who can't keep the products straight). In the second place, "Max Headroom" began in England, first as a dramatic show, then a talk show. Then it was brought here, and Coke bought the rights to use the character in its ads.
 Dear Dick: Will CBS air the conclusion to the final episode of last season's "Magnum, P.I." and, if so, when? Also, I've heard rumors that Tom Selleck either goes fishing or owns a salmon fishing camp here in New Brunswick. Is this true? If so, where is it? -- B.D.A., Moncton, New Brunswick.
 Dear B.D.A.: Like so many shows, "Magnum" ended last season with a cliff-hanger. It is all resolved in the first episode of the new season. On your second question: Not only does he not go fishing in New Brunswick, Tom Selleck says he's never even been to New Brunswick. Rumors about stars owning property are common. They are usually started by real estate agents, to stir up interest in properties.

Astrograph

Nov. 15, 1987
Be alert in the year ahead so that you can distinguish between real opportunities and those that are merely wishful thinking. If your choices are wise, the results will be extremely gratifying.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Involvements that have strong elements of risk should be avoided today, because your fear of losing might take precedence over your will to win. Major changes are ahead for Scorpio in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) As resistance to your aims stiffens today, there is a possibility that you'll slow down instead of pushing harder. Be tenacious and consistent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful today that you don't create unnecessary problems for yourself. Think before you act, and be your own wisest adviser, not your worst enemy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Assess your finances realistically today, and spend accordingly. This is not a time to be extravagant or to borrow from others.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Keep important objectives in focus today, or else you might drift off on tangents. Something that could have been opportunity may go unachieved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It will prove wise today to temper your grandiose conceptions with a healthy sprinkling of realism. For best results, maintain a sensible perspective.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A proposal presented to you today by someone you don't know too well could have strings attached. Examine the package from every angle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The collective resources of you and your mate could be in for a pull-and-tug session today. Strive for mutual agreement on how funds should be allocated.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) People performing work or a service for you today might not act in compliance with your wishes. Be on the spot to check what is being done.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard not only against your own extravagances today, but also those of a friend. This person may try to involve you in something costly. Both conditions bear watching.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's best to do one thing today and to do it properly, than to attempt several things in which you can't give adequate attention to any of them.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're not apt to be too successful today in talking others into doing something for you which you should attend to yourself. Don't be a shirker.

Sexuality

Cartoonist created Sadie Hawkins

By Dr. June Reinisch

The Kinsey Report

DEAR DR. REINISCH: My teenage daughter has recently had her first "Sadie Hawkins" dance (where the girls must invite the boys, instead of the usual pattern of waiting for the boys to do the asking). I fondly remember several of these events from my youth, so was pleased about encouraging her participation. But the whole thing made me wonder how such events got started and who Sadie Hawkins was.

DEAR READER: Even though some library reference books confidently assign a specific date to Sadie Hawkins Day (in one example, it's said to be the first Saturday after Nov. 11), the holiday doesn't really have an official date.

Sadie Hawkins Day was an invention of Al Capp in his "Li'l Abner" cartoon strip. The first time this holiday appeared in the comic strip was Nov. 13, 1937. Capp never set a specific date, but rather picked a day in November each year, depending on what fit the story line in the cartoon.

In the "Li'l Abner" cast of characters, Sadie was 35 and unmarried. Her father (at gunpoint) rounded up all the unmarried men in town and organized a race in which those men were chased by the unmarried women. Any woman who could catch a man (in earlier years) or drag him over a "finish line" (in the later years of the comic strip) would be immediately married to him.

Sadie Hawkins Day is a good example of how a fictional event or character can have a wide and lasting effect on our culture. Obviously, Al Capp touched a common need for at least an annual one-day reversal of traditional sex roles, because hundreds of Sadie Hawkins events are held each year.

can remember, I'm ashamed to say that I am very much attached to these things. Do many adults have this kind of attachment to childhood things?

DEAR READER: Yes, but scientists are not sure how many adults do this. When a person's sexual arousal and satisfaction are derived from the items you mentioned, or from being diapered or treated like a baby, the term used is "infantilism." If dependence on specific items for sexual arousal and satisfaction impairs a person's ability to develop a loving relationship with a human partner, psychotherapy or counseling may be helpful.

Psychotherapists who have treated such clients have speculated that such behavior may occur when a person feels that they were only truly loved when they were babies. Other researchers suggest the explanation is that, for some people, their earliest awareness of sexual feelings occurred while wearing rubber pants or diapers. Regardless of how such items become a part of a person's sexual life, this behavior is frequently concealed from family, friends and often even from spouses when it does not intrude on the ability to lead an otherwise normal life.

Send questions to Dr. Reinisch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, IN 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

Childhood habits

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm a 44-year-old woman, and I've slept on a rubber sheet and in rubber baby pants for as long as I

Afraid of tampons

DEAR DR. REINISCH: This may sound ridiculous, but I am scared to use a tampon. Several years ago, when toxic shock syndrome came to light, a close friend had it. This came at a point when most girls start using tampons. In addition, I am a virgin and very shy about my private body areas.

Please don't recommend that I consult a doctor or talk to a friend, because it won't solve the problem. Please comment on this, because I am scared to death.

DEAR READER: There's nothing wrong with a young woman making an informed decision not to use tampons because she wants to avoid even the slight risk of TSS. Many other women have made that decision and manage their menstrual flow quite well using other products, such as external napkins.

There's also nothing wrong about being shy or modest about your body, unless this feeling is so strong that it jeopardizes your physical or mental health.

Perhaps I have misinterpreted your letter, but I am concerned that the strength of your feelings goes beyond the issue of whether or not to use tampons. Each woman must assume responsibility for her basic health care, and this includes monitoring her own body closely enough to notice any changes. Do you thoroughly examine your breasts each month after your menstrual period? This includes carefully feeling each breast and looking at the shape of the breasts while standing in front of a mirror.

Do you also look at your genitals regularly? This involves using a hand mirror to look closely at all the external surfaces and spreading the lips open so that you can see any irritated areas or skin changes.

Have you ever had a gynecological examination and Pap test? Doing this regularly is the best way to spot problems with internal organs, such as enlargement of an ovary or changes in the cells of cervix (the opening between the vagina and the uterus).

Every woman must do these things, whether or not she is sexually active. For example, vaginal infection can occur in girls and women who have never had sex, have not yet reached puberty or are past menopause. Being a virgin does not protect a woman against breast cancer or serious diseases of the reproductive organs.

If you cannot bring yourself to follow these necessary and simple health routines, you need to talk with someone who can help you gain a more healthy relationship with your own body. Perhaps you'd feel most comfortable talking with a female physician or counselor. If you don't know of someone, consider calling a family-planning clinic. Many offer basic health care and information to women in a most sensitive and caring way.

"Each woman must assume responsibility for her basic health care, and this includes monitoring her own body closely enough to notice any changes."

Some women have such negative feelings about their bodies that they cannot bring themselves to touch or look at their breasts or genitals. When these thoughts dominate, some women develop vaginismus, an involuntary spasm that closes the muscles of the lower vagina. In severe cases, it is not possible to use tampons, or to have pelvic examinations or intercourse.

Often, women with vaginismus are found to lack basic information about their own bodies and sexual functioning and have experienced stern warnings against touching the genitals or having sexual feelings. Vaginismus is successfully treated in nearly 100 percent of cases.

If you suspect that your feelings about your own body are negative enough to jeopardize necessary health care, intrude on your psychosexual development or interfere with expressing physical love when the appropriate time comes, ask to be referred to a physician, therapist or counselor experienced in treating vaginismus. That person can determine whether your concerns about tampons and shyness about your body are healthy or may be having a negative effect on your life.

Get second opinion

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Has a uterus transplant ever been done to reverse a hysterectomy? If not, is there a promise that such a procedure will be developed? It seems they can transplant every other organ, so the potential for uterus transplant ought to exist.

Please advise women considering hysterectomy to get a second opinion, to discuss its consequences with their husbands and to ask their physicians about other options for treatment.

DEAR READER: To the best of my knowledge, no one has yet experimented with transplanting a uterus into any woman, including one who has had her uterus surgically removed by a hysterectomy.

Inflatable man is driving companion

Texas woman helps drivers feel safe

By Herm Nathan

"Fifteen years ago I was driving alone at night, when it occurred to me that I would feel safer and be more comfortable if it just appeared that someone was sitting beside me," comments Jane Graves of Fort Worth, Texas.

So the 54-year-old designer created an inflatable man for women drivers to put on the passenger's seat to give that impression. He has wavy brown hair with gray streaks, a full brown beard and blue eyes. He has no arms or legs. "He's not what one would call 'good looking,' as he's a little pin-headed and his nose is little wide, but he's all right," notes Graves. The 30-inch-high Silent Partner is effective in that split second of recognition. He provides a quick visual image that says there is someone else in the car.

She designed the original Silent Partner and found a manufacturer in Japan and has received a lot of publicity from her design. "I and my Silent Partner were even on the Johnny Carson Show," says Graves.

Then, the balloon literally burst. When her second order from the manufacturer arrived, all 5,000 of them were defective. She took a big loss on those 5,000 items and got out of the business. "After that, a lot of copies showed up," notes Graves.

Recently, Roger Horchow of the Horchow Collection called to tell her he thought it was the time to bring out another Silent Partner. Jane Graves found an inflatable plastic toy company in New York and went back to work.

In her office Graves puts her imagination to work five days a week for regular customers like the Horchow Collection and Neiman-Marcus and for mail-order customers who buy her hand-painted doll furniture.

Ideas come naturally to her — she grew up in a creative atmosphere. "My mother was the chief designer for the display windows of some of New York City's finest shops. Later she had her own gift shop," says Graves.

Encouraged to use her hands and never to be afraid to try anything new, Graves followed her mother's footsteps and studied art — at Bennington

Janet Graves of Fort Worth, Texas, drives through the streets of her town with her inflatable companion seated next to her.

College in Vermont and Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh, Pa. — before going home to New York City to work as a florist, a costume designer, a packaging designer for a perfume company and a researcher for a fabric designer. She and her mother ran a gift shop for some time before Graves was asked by Stanley Marcus to come to Dallas and work as an in-house designer for Neiman's.

Three years later she left Neiman-Marcus to marry author John Graves and to have children Helen and Sally. Then, Roger Horchow called to ask her to think about designing some gift items for his new catalog. It might be a one-of-a-kind package for candy, a new toy, a fancy satchet, a special doll bed or candles in flowerpots.

But Silent Partner may be the most successful of Graves' designs because it really works. Many of those who buy the Silent Partner are women. Widows who live alone buy one and park him in front of a television set; he's excellent for the woman who goes alone on late-night drives; he will watch your apartment while you are out of town. He'll even play dummy for your bridge club. Graves recommends dressing up the Silent Partner with hats, sunglasses, fake beards or other accessories to give him more dimension and a more realistic look. He is perfect for the feminist — when he is not needed, he can be deflated and placed inside the glove compartment. "You can deflate your man any time you want," giggles Graves. ■

Remember the warmth of her embrace?
Or how she calmly reassured you that no one was lurking in the closet?
Or that time she let you crawl in bed with her after that horrible nightmare?
We'll restore your pictures of her while suggesting a frame that's as special as she is.
You only have one "Mom".

Dining In

Pasta dresses up the dinner salad

By Janet Lorimer

Do you want something different to vary your meals? Something quick and easy that gets you in and out of the kitchen in record time? Something nutritious, delicious, colorful and calorie-conscious? You can have the best of all possible salads. Just say, "Please pass the pasta — salad, that is."

Let's start by selecting our pasta. There are so many kinds to choose from that mixing and matching is half the fun. Try an emerald-green spinach pasta or a ruby-red tomato pasta as well as a cream-colored wheat pasta. Choose from a variety of shapes, too. Sea shells, large, medium and small. Spirals and ribbons, both curly and straight. Let your imagination be your guide. You are, after all, creating an art form.

Cook the pasta according to the package directions. Remember, it doesn't take long for a package of dried pasta to cook. Don't overcook it, and when it is cooked, drain it into a colander and rinse with cold water to prevent the pasta from sticking to itself. Set the colander aside to drain the pasta thoroughly.

Next you'll want to consider which veggies to use. Choose crisp ones like cauliflower, broccoli, red and green bell peppers, celery, carrots and onions, especially lovely purple Bermuda onions that can be diced, sliced or made into rings for a garnish. Consider raw peas and crisp raw green beans, too. The colors and crisp textures will add to your meal to make a rich jewel of a salad.

Want to turn your salad into a main course instead of a side dish? Add chunks of cooked chicken, turkey or fish. Add cooked crab or shrimp. Want a meatless main dish? Substitute hard-boiled eggs or grated cheese.

For a special delight, add something tangy like pitted black olives or marinated artichoke hearts. Here are a few extra tips to consider before you start.

• Make your pasta salad the night before or early in the morning. This gives the flavors in the dressing a chance to soak into the pasta and other ingredients. The pasta will soak up the dressing so you don't end up with a lot of wasted dressing in the bottom of your salad bowl.

• You can garnish your salad with slices of tomato or line the salad bowl with cool, crisp lettuce leaves. The reason I prefer crisp vegetables is that they maintain their crispness over the hours that the salad should stand in the refrigerator before being served. Remember, you will dress the salad after you make it but long before you serve it to allow the flavors to blend.

• Lemon juice in the dressing replaces salt very nicely. So you can have a salt-free salad and you'll still love the wonderful tangy flavors.

EASY PASTA DRESSING

- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- juice from 1 lemon
- 1/2 clove garlic, finely minced
- 1 bay leaf, slightly crumbled

Mix oil and vinegar in small jar. Add lemon juice and minced garlic. Crumble bay leaf to help release the flavor. Allow dressing to stand in covered container overnight or for several hours before using. Before dressing the salad, remove the bay leaf.

Makes about 3/4 cup dressing.

EASY HERBED DRESSING

- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- juice of 1/2 lemon
- 1 tablespoon mixed herbs (dill weed, oregano and sweet basil)

Mix all ingredients together several hours before dressing is to be used. Let stand in covered container to allow flavors to blend.

Makes about 3/4 cup dressing.

CREAMY PASTA SALAD DRESSING

- 1 cup plain yogurt
- 1 teaspoon dill weed
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon minced chives

Mix all ingredients together thoroughly and let stand in covered container in refrigerator for about half an hour before using.

Makes about 1 cup dressing.

If you aren't quite up to experimenting, here are a few recipes for pasta salad to get you started. They range from super quick and easy to slightly more complex. None of them will keep you in the kitchen very long, nor will they require intricate steps.

EASY PASTA SALAD

- 4-5 cups cooked pasta
- 1/2 cup raw broccoli florets
- 1/4 cup carrot curls
- 2 hard-boiled eggs, sliced
- 1/2 cup whole pitted

- black olives
- 1/2-1 1/2 cup dressing (your favorite)

Cook pasta according to package directions. Drain, rinse and set aside. Thoroughly mix vegetables, egg slices and olives together. Add pasta and stir well again. Pour dressing over salad and mix thoroughly. Cover bowl and place in refrigerator for several hours before serving. Serves about 4-6.

PASTA SALAD AGAIN, PLEASE

- 4 cups white and green spiral pasta, cooked
- 1 medium carrot, cleaned and chopped
- 1 cup fresh mushrooms, cleaned and sliced
- 1 jar marinated artichoke hearts, drained
- 1/2-1 cup dressing
- parsley to garnish

Cook pasta according to package directions. Drain, rinse and set aside. Mix together carrot, mushroom slices and artichoke hearts. Add pasta and mix everything thoroughly.

Add your favorite dressing and mix it thoroughly through other ingredients. Garnish with sprigs of crisp parsley. Refrigerate for several hours before serving. Serves about 4-5.

MEATY MAIN-DISH PASTA SALAD

- 4 cups cooked pasta sea shells and spinach spirals
- 1 cup cooked chicken, cut into bite-size chunks
- 1/2 cup red or green (or both) bell pepper, sliced
- 1/2 cup carrot curls
- 1 cup cauliflower florets
- 1 cup broccoli florets
- 1 jar marinated artichoke hearts, drained, optional

Mix together dressing ingredients and set aside. Cook pasta according to package directions, rinse with cold water, drain and set aside.

To serve salad cold, mix pasta, shrimp and veggies in large bowl. Add olives and mix again. Add dressing and mix thoroughly through salad. Garnish with egg slices and a dash of paprika. Cover bowl and

- 1 1/2 cups dressing
- 1/2 cup grated Monterey Jack cheese

Cook pasta according to package directions. Drain, rinse with cold water and set aside. In large bowl, mix together cooked chicken, vegetables and artichoke hearts. Stir in cooked pasta and add your favorite dressing. Refrigerate for several hours. Before serving, garnish with grated cheese. Serves about 6-8.

Now I'm going to let you in on a little secret of mine: hot pasta salad. That's right, folks. This wonderful dish can be served cold or heated in the microwave oven to be turned into a hot main dish. Talk about versatile!

HOT PASTA SALAD

- 1 12-ounce package small shell macaroni
- 2 cups cooked shrimp
- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 1 medium carrot, cleaned, thinly sliced
- 1 stalk celery, cleaned, thinly sliced (include the leaves)
- 1 cup pitted black olives
- 2 hard-boiled eggs, sliced
- dash paprika

- Dressing
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1/2 cup wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 clove garlic, finely minced

Mix together dressing ingredients and set aside. Cook pasta according to package directions, rinse with cold water, drain and set aside.

To serve salad cold, mix pasta, shrimp and veggies in large bowl. Add olives and mix again. Add dressing and mix thoroughly through salad. Garnish with egg slices and a dash of paprika. Cover bowl and

In movie theaters

Less than Zero (R) Bret Easton Ellis wrote the best-selling novel on which this movie is based while a student at Bennington, and it's precocious all right — precocious trash. Ellis deals with the spiritual emptiness of drugs, cocaine-snorting kids from Beverly Hills, attempting to wrest tragedy from shallow characters.

The movie, directed by Marek Kaniwka, is howlingly faithful to Ellis' adolescent angst. Dazzlingly shot by Ed Lachman, "Zero" wants to be "The Graduate" for the mid-'80s. A worthy goal, except the film has less than zero to say.

Andrew McCarthy plays a young man back in LA during college break, who's appalled by the materialism of his peers and their parents. McCarthy, a brat-packer who registered seriousness by letting his eyes go glassy, finds his two best friends (Robert Downey Jr. and Jami Gertz) heavily into coke and a nasty party scene. In fact, everywhere McCarthy goes, someone is spooning illegal substances up his or her nostrils.

The tortured relationship between the McCarthy, Downey and Gertz characters is meant to be touching and erotic. But this movie's alienated trio are merely three spoiled brats who strike sick poses. Only Downey, playing a self-destructive rebel without a cause who's turned to freebasing (to find the love he can't get from his parents) has any depth.

As the film grows more violent and serious, the audience starts to hoot at the decorator-style decadence and the still dialogue. Half moralistic, half sensationalistic, the movie cries out to be taken as a statement about its characters need is a tightened allowance and a good spanking. Grade: ***

Weeds (R) Nick Nolte is one of our best movie actors, a fact he proves again in this uneven but compelling picture based on the true story of ex-con Rick Cluchey. Without succumbing to sentimentality, Nolte stars as uneducated San Quentin convict stimulated by the books he gets from the prison library and by a performance of "Waiting for Godot."

Soon he has written a musical and mounted a production within the prison. A cry of protest against prison conditions, the play galvanizes the inmates and excites a San Francisco theater critic (Rita Taggart). Released from San Quentin, Nolte reunites the cons who performed in the play, touring the country with the musical and eventually opening in New York.

Directed by John Hancock, "Weeds" studies the efforts of Nolte and the other ex-cons as they try to stay clean, while channeling their often hostile feelings into theater. It's also a study of the obstacle-course romance that develops between Nolte and the well-bred theater critic. Some of the scenes come off considerably better than others, and the script, while ambitious, seems a bit unshaped. But Nolte gives a flinty, uncompromising performance, and the cons are a colorful, nicely differentiated bunch. It's a lively, moving film. Grade: *****

New home video

Tin Men (R) Touchstone Video, $89.95. Writer-director Barry Levinson returns to the Baltimore of 30 years ago — a milieu he memorialized in the film "Diner" — in this quirky comedy about two aluminum-sliding salesman (Richard Dreyfuss and Danny DeVito) who become mortal enemies when their Cadillacs are mangled in a fender-bender.

The revenge games between the two men involve DeVito's neglected wife (Barbara Hershey). Alas, Hershey's character is less well-defined than the others, and the movie loses momentum toward the end. But the scenes of the salesmen sitting around schmoozing in the diner are terrific. Dreyfuss and DeVito are in top form, and the picture has a distinctive comic brashness. Grade: ½

Woody Allen wants a girl

LONDON (AP) — Woody Allen, the actor and director who is about to become a first-time father, discussed his films and hopes for a baby girl in a TV interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. that appeared on Friday.

"I hope it's a she... that would be very important to me," Allen, 51, said of the child he and actress Mia Farrow, his longtime companion, are expecting. No due date has been announced.

The normally reclusive Allen, whose honors include a double win of Academy Awards in 1978 for writing and directing "Annie Hall," appeared on what the BBC called his first British television interview in seven years. The network is screening nine Allen films between now and Christmas.

The hourlong show, "Woody Allen: Love, Death, Sex, and Matters Arising," was taped one afternoon in June at Allen's East Side apartment in Manhattan.

Professor Christopher Frayingling, the interviewer, is head of the Department of Cultural History at London's Royal College of Art.

"I don't feel I've made a great film yet in my life," Allen said, describing his standard as classics like Vittorio de Sica's "The Bicycle Thief" and Jean Renoir's "La Grande Illusion."

"I'd like to be remembered as someone who made at least one, if not one or two, really great films," he said.

Throughout the interview, Allen was his own harshest critic, saving his sharpest swipes for his earliest films.

He said the swinging 1965 sex comedy "What's New, Pussycat?" was an "undeserved" financial success. His 1969 "Take the Money and Run," with Allen as the bumbling criminal Virgil Starkwell, suffered from "gags of any sort, of any kind."

WOODY ALLEN
... in BBC interview

His 1971 "Bananas," in which Allen played a hypochondriac ensnared in a Latin American uprising, was marred by "an infantile type of funniness."

"What carries you through 'Manhattan' for me is more the style than anything else," he said. "I would do 'Manhattan' differently now. It's not a film I wouldn't do today, but I would do it differently."

Allen emphasized his love for wealthy material and his desire to be taken seriously, despite his fans' insistence — satirized in his 1980 film "Stardust Memories" — that he make funnier movies.

He said "Hannah and Her Sisters," his 1986 critical and financial success, was "more 'up' and optimistic than I had intended, and consequently was very popular."

But the optimism exacted a price: "It's only optimistic in the sections (where) I failed," he said.

He said his favorite film was "The Purple Rose of Cairo," in which Ms. Farrow plays a Milquetoast-type woman seduced by a screen actor who steps out of a movie to woo her.

"The object of the movie was very simply to show that we all have to choose between reality and fantasy, and we're of course forced to choose reality; the other way lies madness," Allen said.

BBC producer Margaret Sharp said Allen agreed to the interview on condition it not be sold to America.

"I think he thinks Europe generally understands his films and appreciates them," Ms. Sharp told The Associated Press.

Allen, for his part, took a dim view of American culture.

"We have, you know, a pretty junky culture. You see what most of our movies are — almost all of them; what our television shows are, for the most part; our politics. It's not really living up to what we should be living up to," he said.

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

Winter-proof your wheels

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

It seems that cars are like bears or groundhogs; they would rather hibernate in a warm place — like a den or garage — than face the winter's chill. However, if you make a few preparations before the snow falls and the temperature drops, you can keep your sweet-running machine from turning into a sluggish, cantankerous beast.

Let's start with the battery (pun intended). Rousing an engine from a deep winter's sleep can be quite a challenge for a battery. To see if the one in your car is up to the task, have your mechanic run a load test to check the battery's reserve capacity. If there are any doubts and you live in a particularly frigid climate, replace it with a battery that has 20 percent more cold-cranking power than the minimum required for your car. It's good winter-driving insurance.

Batteries have a tough time in winter because motor oil tends to congeal in the crankcase like a glob of yesterday's oatmeal, especially if the oil is of the wrong viscosity. The engine's starter must then drag the pistons and other components through the mush, which can quickly drain the battery's energy.

You'll also want to treat your car to an oil change. Replace the old summer-weight oil with one that stays thin — a 5W/30 oil is good for most areas in the northern or eastern United States. A thicker oil, like a 10W/30 or 10W/40, is fine for milder climates. The "W," by the way, stands for "winter," and means that the oil will stay at the indicated viscosity in subfreezing temperatures.

Winters tend to be wet as well as cold, and moisture can also dampen an enthusiastic response from your car's engine. Moisture combined with worn points in the distributor, corroded battery terminals, frayed spark-plug wires or a cracked distributor cap is guaranteed to make your car hard to start. Have your mechanic check all these electrical components.

On the subject of moisture, it's obviously important to keep the water in your car's cooling system from turning to ice. That's the job of antifreeze. Antifreeze doesn't last forever, so drain the radiator and add a fresh solution at least every couple of years. A 50-50 mixture of antifreeze and tap water is fine the whole year round in most areas.

If you live in a truly inhospitable climate, make it a 70-30 mix. Just be certain to drain the radiator in the spring and refill with a 50-50 mixture.

When the concentration of antifreeze reaches 65 percent or more, it will actually decrease the cooling system's boiling point. That might cause your car to run too hot in the summer.

Don't forget the windshield-washer container — the water can freeze there, too. Washers are especially useful in cleaning off the mud and slush of winter roads. So add a combination antifreeze detergent to the washer container.

Brake fluid is "hygroscopic." That word — it means the fluid soaks up moisture like a sponge. Of course, if the fluid in your car's brake system is old and watery, you may as well add frozen brakes to your list of winter woes. Have the system flushed and refilled with fresh fluid every year or two.

If you frequently run on empty, I advise that the practice encourage water to condense in your car's gas tank, which in turn contaminates the fuel. My car's mechanic, Tom Shank of Riverside, Calif., says that engine with fuel injection are especially fussy about having a diet of clean gas. He suggests topping off the gas tank when the gauge reads half empty. It also recommends pouring a water-dissipating fuel additive in your car's gas tank every couple of months during the winter.

One final — if crazy-sounding tip: Turn on your car's air conditioner and exercise it for a few minutes each month. That will have the compressor and other components of the system lubricated and in good shape when the weather turns warm again.

KEEPING YOUR CAR ALIVE

Peter Bohr

A letter-perfect auto guide

By Peter Bohr
Contributing Editor, Road & Track

Ten words or less probably don't do justice to a complex and costly creation like an automobile. But if you want a quick review of the new-car market, the following comments may help.

The comments come from the "Road Test Summary" that appears in each issue of Road & Track. Here are the staff's thoughts on cars in the second half of the alphabet; for Acura through Lincoln, pick up any issue of the magazine.

Mazda RX-7 GXL ($17,954) Redesigned with more power and grip.

Mazda 323 1.6i ($7,024) Good power in its class; affordable fun.

Mazda 626 GT ($14,494) Power, handling vs. harsh engine; low head room.

Mercedes-Benz 190E 2.3 ($25,615) Vault-solid; excellent ride, modest power.

Mercedes-Benz 300E ($35,375) Superb new six-cylinder engine. Best performing MB?

Mercedes-Benz 420SEL ($57,500) Ample quick and amply expensive.

Mercedes-Benz 560SEC ($64,030) Fast, solid, secure and costly.

Mercedes-Benz 560SL ($55,020) Increased power in an old chassis.

Mercury Tracer ($9,174) Face-lifted Mazda 323 built in Mexico.

Mitsubishi Cordia ($12,305) Average handling, but excellent turbo power.

Mitsubishi Mirage ($6,909) Crisp looks, modest power, poor interior design.

Mitsubishi Starion ES1-R ($17,300) Powerful but gimmicky.

Nissan Pulsar NX SE ($13,050) Novel hatchback; excellent handling, engine.

Nissan 300ZX 2+2 ($23,089) Comfortable but aging; unsettling handling.

Pegugeot 505 STX ($23,750) Good handling, strong-pulling engine, dated styling.

Plymouth Horizon ($6,662) Cost-cutting model with four doors and peppy engine.

Pontiac Bonneville SE ($18,215) Gutsy engine, quick steering, dated body.

Pontiac Fiero GT ($13,689) Neat V-6 but slow steering and shifting.

Pontiac Firebird Trans Am GTA ($18,358) Big V-8 — big fun. Zippy looks.

Pontiac LeMans ($8,250) Opel-designed, Daewoo-built; poor handling and brakes.

Porsche 911 Turbo ($49,142) Awesome power, but tricky handling limits.

Porsche 924S ($21,287) Economical with 944 engine.

Porsche 928S ($50,702) Older model. Nearly perfect, nearly boring?

Porsche 944 ($26,682) Average power in its class, but outstanding handling.

Renault Alliance GTA ($14,537) Feisty handling; an attractive package.

Sterling 825SL ($24,195) English-built Acura Legend with a firmer ride.

Toyota Celica GT-S ($16,403) Good handling, willing engine, but pricey.

Toyota Corolla FX16 GT-S ($13,378) Revvy engine, boy-racer styling.

Toyota MR2 ($13,174) Limited space; unlimited fun.

Toyota Tercel DX ($8,248) Poor grip, but solid and reliable.

Volkswagen Fox GL ($7,730) Inexpensive, dated looks, Brazilian-built.

Volkswagen Golf 16V ($14,235) Great handling and great engine, but pricey.

Volkswagen Jetta GLI ($12,190) A Golf with a trunk and a jiggly ride.

Volkswagen Quantum Syncro ($17,280) Four-wheel drive, good power and handling.

Volkswagen Scirocco 16V ($13,565) Plenty of power, but dated chassis.

Volvo 740 Turbo Wagon ($21,340) Solid, roomy, pricey and only four cylinders.

Yugo GV ($4,853) Very inexpensive, but poor handling and quality.

Prepare for winter, pick up shoveling list

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminco Activities Director

Winter has finally arrived. "Big Ben" took Connecticut by surprise by depositing up to 10 inches of snow. Were you prepared? If not, please stop by the senior center and pick up a leaf removal/snow shoveling list and make the proper arrangements. You also may obtain a free energy kit, compliments of Northeast Utilities. The kit will prove to be a big cost-saver through the winter months.

Just a reminder about bad weather: The senior center is closed for scheduled activities on the days that public schools are closed. If in doubt, please listen to WTC or WTRC. The center will only be open for business purposes.

Big thanks are in order to our volunteers patrons, and talented individuals who donated many hours to help make this year's Holiday Fair a big success. The proceeds from the fair will go into our meals program to help defray costs.

Seniors are invited to attend our Thanksgiving Day party next Thursday. Mary-Ann Lawler, our chef, will be preparing a delicious turkey dinner with all the fixings. Also, the Illing Junior High School Student Council will be donating "homemade" pumpkin pies. After lunch, the Illing Jazz Band will perform for your listening pleasure. Tickets for the affair can be picked up at the front office no later than Wednesday at noon. Individuals with meals for Nov. 12 may exchange them or use them for Nov. 19. Remember, you must notify the center of your intention by the above deadline.

Seniors are encouraged to register for the upcoming classes: Scheduling - Nov. 28, Dec. 11, Dec. 18 - 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Classes will be taught by the Black Sheep Three. Items to be made include: 1) medium sized sled, 2) half-moon with heart cut-out, 3) rectangular plaque.

Plumbing class - Instructor, master plumber Robert Worden - Nov. 24, Dec. 1, Dec. 8 - 9 to 10 a.m. Classes will cover faucet and toilet repair, soldering, tile, and preventative maintenance (class limit 15)

Driver education - Instructor, Harry Reinhorn - Nov. 17 and 18. Fee, $7 (by check payable to AARP) - Individuals completing class will receive 5 percent reduction in insurance premiums as mandated by state law.

Microwave cooking classes - to be offered after the new year. Please stay in tune with this column for details.

Individuals desiring to obtain a Claxton fruit cake for the holidays may purchase one at the center for $2.75. All proceeds will go to Civitan.

Center Congregational Church will be sponsoring a trip to Israel from March 10 to 21, 1988. The price of the affair is $1,429. The trip will be escorted by the Rev. Newell Curtis, senior minister of the church. For further details you may contact Curtis at 647-9981.

Please make note of the following trip schedule: Nov. 16 - Registration for "Atlantic City" - $72.50 - including transportation, one night at Trump Castle Casino Hotel - evening show and rebates. Date of trip: Jan. 25 and 26. Dec. 7 - Ingleside Mall - $6 -

Senior Citizens

Includes transportation. Dec. 9 - Conchlight "Guys & Dolls" - taking a waiting list for a second bus; call the senior center.

Lastly, our condolences to the family of Mac Hollowell; he will be missed.

Brown odds-on choice to win the Heisman

By Herschel Nissenson
The Associated Press

Pick a color.
— Brown, as in Tim, wide receiver-running back-kick returner. Notre Dame.
— Green, as in Gaston, running back. UCLA.
— White, as in Lorenzo, running back. Michigan State.
Pick a letter.
"H" for Heisman, as in Bobby Humphrey, running back. Alabama. As in Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, running back. Pitt.
The surnames of five of the 51 Heisman Trophy winners begin with the letter "H" — Tom Harmon of Michigan in 1940, Les Horvath of Ohio State in 1944 and three Notre Dames: Leon Hart in 1949, Paul Hornung in 1956 and John Harty in 1964.
Harty was the last of Notre Dame's record six Heisman winners and No. 7 could become a reality when the 1987 voting is announced on Dec. 5.
"Unless the votes are counted in Central America, Tim Brown wins it," said Beano Cook, an ESPN commentator, former publicity man for ABC and one-time sports information director at the University of Pittsburgh.

At the start of the season, Brown was considered the favorite over Florida quarterback Kerwin Bell and tailbacks Green of UCLA, Jamie Morris of Michigan, Thurman Thomas of Oklahoma State and Lorenzo White of Michigan State. Tailback-defensive back Gordie Lockbaum of Division I-AA Holy Cross, a two-way performer, was a sentimental favorite.

You won't find Brown among the nation's leaders in receiving (28 catches for 615 yards and three touchdowns), rushing (27-126, one TD) or kickoff returns (17-351, no touchdowns). But he did rank 16th in punt returns (25-323, a 12.5-yard average, and three touchdowns, one short of the major-college single-season record), and opponents consistently try to kick away from him.
All his statistics, going into this weekend's games, added up to a No. 2 ranking in all-purpose yardage with 176.88 per game.

"Week after week, Tim Brown does things that just amaze me, with and without the football," Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz said. "The attention defenses pay to him dictates so much of what we do offensively."
Purdue Coach Fred Akers says stopping Brown "is like trying to grab hold of a piece of electricity."

Brown tied an NCAA record by returning punts 71 and 66 yards for touchdowns against Michigan State in September and Coach George Perles of the Spartans said: "He's a dangerous guy if he breaks one tackle because he's got blazing speed. I don't know how fast he is, but whatever it is, he doesn't slow down one iota with that uniform on."

Only one player who was primarily a wide receiver and kick returner like Brown has won the Heisman Trophy: Nebraska slotback Johnny Rodgers in 1977.

"Brown reminds me of a big Johnny Rodgers," says Gil Brandt, Dallas Cowboys' personnel chief. "He'll probably be the first or second guy taken in the (NFL) draft."

Brown had a career-high 294 all-purpose yards against Boston College last week — five receptions for 128 yards, three rushes for 15 yards, five kickoff returns for 132 yards, four punt returns for 21 yards.

Of the preseason favorites:
— Bell fell early when Florida was trounced by Miami 31-4 in its opening game. He is 29th nationally in passing efficiency.

Green was held to 46 yards on 19 carries by Nebraska in UCLA's second game of the season, then came on strong with 745 yards in his next five games, including 220 against California. He sustained a pinched nerve against Arizona State two weeks ago after carrying six times for minus-5 yards and didn't play against Oregon State last weekend. His average of 102.3 yards a game was 23rd in Division I-A.

— Morris became Michigan's career rushing leader last weekend with 149 yards against Minnesota and ranks second nationally with 133.6 yards a game, but Michigan hasn't been the dominant team it used to be.

— Thomas is sixth with 124.2 yards a game going into this weekend, but his chances were ruined by a nine-carry, 7-yard outing against Nebraska on national television.

— White is 12th with 119.4 yards a game but hasn't attracted the attention he did as a sophomore two years when he led the nation with 1,908 yards and 173.5 a game.

— Lockbaum is having a fine year but hasn't received the publicity he did last season when his two-way efforts captivated many of the voters.

Meanwhile, Heyward, Pitt's 275-pound tailback, led the nation with 137.3 yards a game, and Humphrey was 11th at 119.7, fifth in all-purpose yards (162.76) and has become Alabama's career rushing leader as a junior.

The Gannett News Service polled 147 Heisman voters in press boxes around the country last weekend and the 1-2-3 finishers were Brown, (317 points, 80 first-place votes), Florida freshman tailback Emmitt Smith (9-85) and Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson (11-82). Smith was held to 72 yards by Auburn two weeks ago and managed only 46 against Georgia, but he still ranked fourth nationally with 125.4 a game.

With Bell a virtual secret this season, the top contender among quarterbacks appears to be McPherson, who has smashed all the Syracuse passing marks while leading the Orangemen to a 9-6 record and a No. 6 ranking in the Associated Press poll. McPherson is third nationally in passing efficiency, San Diego State's Todd Santos, who became major-college football's all-time passing king last weekend, suffers by playing in the underrated and overlooked Western Athletic Conference.

UCLA conducted the year's biggest campaign on behalf of Green, sending out a postcard with his statistics every week — until the last two weeks.

The Heisman campaigning seems to have cooled this year, although it is still well ahead of 1986 when Notre Dame publicist Charley Callahan summoned Horning from a class, handed him the telephone and ordered: "Here, tell your mother you just won the Heisman Trophy."

Notre Dame still keeps things low-key. It doesn't have to promote because of the school's magic name. Notre Dame includes a page or two called the "Tim Brown Bulletin" in each of its weekly releases, along with an occasional newspaper article extolling his exploits.

Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson (9) has put himself in contention for the Heisman Trophy, emblematic of the top college football player in the country, but Notre Dame's Tim Brown remains the heavy favorite.

"We're in a unique position," associate sports information director John Heisler said. "Going into the season, Brown wasn't an obscure player at an obscure school."

Notre Dame was on national television four times in the first eight games, and CBS planned to televise the remaining regular-season games against Alabama, Penn State and Miami.

SEC football title is at stake

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — The Southeastern Conference championship will be at stake in the 91st renewal of Dixie's oldest college football rivalry Saturday when eighth-ranked Georgia plays No. 12 Auburn.

Georgia could clinch at least a tie for the SEC crown by beating the Tigers, who hold a precarious half-game lead over three teams in a down-to-the-wire battle for the host spot in the Sugar Bowl Bear Bryant never had a Heisman winner at Alabama, but he was coaching at Texas A&M when running back John David Crow won it in 1957.

"One day, we were talking about the Heisman Trophy," says Jones Ramsey, then A&M's sports publicist. "I told Coach Bryant, 'He doesn't have the stats. He's only fourth in the conference (in rushing).'"

"Coach Bryant thought for a minute and then said, 'Well, he leads the nation in people-run-over,' so we started talking about that."

game on New Year's Day.

Auburn can be eliminated from the race on Saturday, but the Tigers can't clinch a thing. They also would have to whip archrival Alabama in Birmingham on Nov. 27, completing what would be a two-game sweep that would produce an outright title.

"It's no secret how each team will try to win."

Oklahoma to unveil its replacement Sooners

By Herschel Nissenson
The Associated Press

Top-ranked Oklahoma will unveil its version of the replacement Sooners on Saturday.

Oklahoma's top two rushers, quarterback Jamelle Holloway and fullback Lydell Carr, suffered knee injuries against Oklahoma State last week and will be on the sidelines when the Sooners host Missouri, their final tuneup before next week's showdown against No. 2 Nebraska, which is idle.

"We have good, young, talented players to replace Jamelle and Lydell, but they are not experienced," Coach Barry Switzer says of redshirt freshman quarterback Charles Thompson and junior fullback Rotnei Anderson.

"We believe in them. If they believe in themselves, they will be a key factor in our season."

You gotta believe, and halfback Patrick Collins does.

"It hurts to lose two great players," he says. "But at Oklahoma, you can replace great players with great players."

Elsewhere, the muddled bowl picture will become much clearer, as it always does the week before the official invitations go out.

As usual, a team from Michigan is involved in the Big Ten's day of decision. But that team is Michigan State, not Michigan, and the party of the second part is Indiana, not Ohio State.

"This state is used to having show-downs for the championship at the end of the year. This year, it comes a week early," Michigan State Coach George Perles says. "This year, instead of it being in Ann Arbor, it's in East Lansing."

The 13th-ranked Spartans can clinch the Big Ten championship and a trip to the Rose Bowl by defeating No. 16 Indiana.

Fifth-ranked UCLA, trying to become the first Pac-10 team since 1976 to go through the conference season unbeaten and untied, entertains Washington. A UCLA victory and a Southern Cal loss to Arizona, sends the Bruins to the Rose Bowl.

Third-ranked Miami, the Oklahoma-Nebraska winner's likely opponent in the Orange Bowl, plays host to Virginia Tech under the lights.

The Southeastern Conference race, which was LSU's to win until the Tigers lost to Alabama last week is now up for grabs. Twelfth-ranked Auburn, the leader at 3-6-1, visits No. 8 Georgia, which is tied with No. 10 LSU and No. 11 Alabama at 4-1. LSU is at home Saturday night against Mississippi State while Alabama visits No. 7 Notre Dame.

Arkansas, ranked No. 20, leads the Southwest Conference at 5-1 and can clinch a tie if it wins at No. 19 Texas A&M. The Aggies and Texas — which entertains Texas Christian — are 3-1 and still in the Cotton Bowl picture.

Elsewhere, fourth-ranked Florida State, hoping to somehow get a shot at the national championship, meets Division I-AA Furman under the lights in Tallahassee; No. 6 Syracuse, one of only four teams with perfect records, entertains Boston College and No. 9 Clemson is at home against Maryland, needing only a tie to wrap up the Atlantic Coast Conference crown.

In the Associated Press Second Ten, No. 14 South Carolina is at Wake Forest, No. 15 Penn State at Pitt for a night game. No. 17 Oklahoma State at Kansas and Mississippi at No. 18 Tennessee.

Oklahoma's Thompson is faster than Holloway and has seen enough action — most of it in mop-up roles — to rank as the Sooners' third leading rusher with 514 yards on 63 carries, an 8.3 average.

"I can't predict how I'll feel when the game begins," Thompson says. "I'll just do the things I can and hope that things happen for the best."

Anderson, who rushed for 191 yards against Oklahoma State after Carr was hurt, says he "knew it was my turn to prove to myself and to the coaches that I could play as well as he does. Me and Lydell are similar, although he is bigger and stronger. But I'm just as tough."

Switzer says the Sooners "believe in ourselves" and thinks they "will respond positively. We think we're a good football team."

So does Missouri Coach Woody Widenhofer.

"I know Oklahoma was hit by some injuries, but they're probably the most talented team in the country," he says.

UCLA hopes to have star tailback Gaston Green against Washington. Green suffered a pinched nerve in his neck two weeks ago and missed last week's game with Oregon State.

The Bruins' injury list was a lengthy one but Coach Terry Donahue says that "anybody who's able to play, and play successfully, will play."

"The Washington game is a crucial encounter for us. This could be the most important game of the year for us, depending on what happens with USC and Arizona. And yet, it may not impact the conference race."

"For us, a lot's at stake. Washington has a bowl bid at stake. I'm sure. They're going to get a bowl bid if they beat UCLA; they might get one if they don't."

Washington quarterback Chris Chandler suffered a hip pointer last week and sophomore Cary Conklin may get the start. The Huskies lead the Pac-10 in pass defense and UCLA's Troy Aikman is the national leader in passing efficiency — 131-of-194 for 87.5 percent, with 1,936 yards, 15 touchdowns and only three interceptions, two of them on deflections.

Michigan State has a six-game unbeaten streak thanks to a defense that leads the nation against the run, yielding only 60 yards a game — and only 27.5 in six Big Ten games (two and Purdue were held to minus yardage). The conference record is 34.6 by Michigan State's 1965 team.

Indiana Coach Bill Mallory rates Michigan State's defense "in the same category as Michigan's a couple of years ago. Their front seven players are all very good and they have a linebacker in (Percy) Snow who's all over the field and a safety in (Todd) Krumm who's as good as there is in the league."

LSU and Georgia can clinch a tie for the SEC title by winning this weekend, which would eliminate Auburn. But since LSU beat Georgia and Alabama beat LSU, the Sugar Bowl probably would wait to see how Alabama does against Auburn on Nov. 27.

Envious Alabama may be looking past Irish

By Herschel Nissenson
The Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Alabama football fans have a long-standing grudge against Notre Dame. Some may call it envy.

Bear Bryant won 232 of his 323 victories during a quarter-century as Alabama's coach, but none of them came against Notre Dame, which beat him four times and cost him national championships in the 1973 Sugar Bowl and 1974 Orange Bowl.

So even though Bill Curry is in his first season as Alabama's coach, it is surprising to hear him say that Saturday's game may not find the Crimson Tide as high as they were in upsetting LSU 22-10 last week or as they expect to be for arch-rival Auburn on Nov. 27.

"It's probably the only time in history an Alabama coach needed to think about it (looking past Notre Dame)," Curry said, when the question was put to him. "We're a Southeastern Conference team that has been hammering at our players to think about the SEC, and we've got to go into their stadium on national TV with a freshman quarterback and we're beat to smithereens from Saturday night."

"I do think that we've got to make the team realize what we're fixing to get ourselves into. The challenge will be the toughest we've had yet. We've got a heck of a job to do to get ready for them, and that's being realistic."

"I don't believe you win on emotion. You win on enthusiasm, and that's generated by your performance. There have been times when we've been lethargic — maybe when I've worked them too hard — and other times we've been lively. When we're lively and concentrating we can beat anyone."

Alabama, 7-2, is No. 10 in the Associated Press poll. Seventh-ranked Notre Dame is 7-1.

UConn football at Rhode Island

KINGSTON, R.I. — The University of Connecticut will be trying to gain its second consecutive winning season today 1 p.m. when it does battle with the University of Rhode Island in a Yankee Conference matchup. The Huskies, 3-2 in YanCon play and 5-4 overall, will clinch a winning season with a victory today. The home-standing Rams are 1-5 in the conference and 1-8 overall. UConn was 8-3 a year and was one of three teams to share the Yankee Conference title.

Whalers at Boston tonight

BOSTON — The struggling Hartford Whalers (5-7-3) will travel to the Boston tonight at 7 (Channel 18, WTIC) for a game with the Bruins (8-7-2). The Whalers are coming off a 0-0 overtime tie with Montreal Wednesday night, the first scoreless tie in their NHL existence. The Whalers occupy last place in the Adams Division while Boston is in third place, five points ahead of Hartford.

UConn soccer to host Harvard

STORRS — The University of Connecticut (13-6-3) men's soccer team will host Harvard University (12-0-2) in a second round game of the 24-team NCAA Tournament Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium. The game will be for the New England championship and the winner will play the victor of the New York regional matchup between Hartwick and Adelphi. UConn is ranked No. 2 in New England and No. 16 in the country, while Harvard is No. 1 in New England and No. 4 in the country.

Knight doesn't want Soviets here

SEYMOUR, Ind. — Indiana Coach Bob Knight, whose team opens the season Nov. 21 against the Soviet national team, says he doesn't think the Soviets should be training in the United States. "Which boggles my mind," Knight said Thursday night after a scrimmage. "I don't know why ... we're letting them over here to play. I'd let them go play the Czechs, because we're going to play them in the Olympics in Seoul (in 1988) and we don't need to be letting them train over here."

Pacers' Williams on disabled list

INDIANAPOLIS — Veteran forward Herb Williams of the Indiana Pacers was placed on the NBA team's injured list Friday with a severe contusion of the lower left leg. He was injured in the first quarter of Tuesday night's game against Detroit and will miss at least five games. Williams averaged 9.3 points and 6.7 rebounds in the Pacers' first three games. Rookie forward Brian Rowsum, a second-round draft pick from North Carolina-Wilmington, will replace Williams on the club's roster Sunday.

Lindbergh estate files suit

CAMDEN, N.J. — The estate of Pelle Lindbergh, who was legally drunk when he died in a fatal car accident in 1985, has filed suit against the two bars where the Philadelphia Flyers' goalie had been drinking the night he was killed. The suit was filed Nov. 6 in Superior Court in Camden, four days before the two-year statute of limitations for civil suits expired. The bars caused Lindbergh's death because they served him alcohol when he already was visibly intoxicated, according to the suit. Lindbergh's fiancée, Kirsten Pietzsch of Los Angeles, and his parents, Sigurd and Anna Lisa Lindbergh of Sweden, filed the suit, along with Frank Milne of Ontario, administrator of Lindbergh's estate.

Twins increase ticket prices

MINNEAPOLIS — The World Series champion Minnesota Twins announced Friday that the price of reserved seat tickets will be raised $1 for the 1988 season. A lower deck reserved seat ticket will cost $10 next season, up from $9 in 1987, and an upper deck reserved seat will cost $8 in 1988, up from $7 last season. Lower left-field seats will remain at $5 and upper deck outfield seats will remain at $3, the Twins said. But the price increase will not take effect until Dec. 12, so season tickets can be purchased before that date at 1987 prices, the American League club said.

NHL suspends Devils' pair

MONTREAL — The National Hockey League on Friday suspended forwards John MacLean and Brendan Shanahan of the New Jersey Devils for one game as the result of a confrontation with fans in Pittsburgh during a game with the Penguins on Oct. 21. MacLean, Shanahan and defenseman Craig Wolanin each were fined $500 for the confrontation, which occurred at the penalty box area during the third period.

Phi Bowl has teams in mind

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The Fiesta Bowl plans to match fourth-ranked Florida State against the loser of next week's showdown between top-ranked Oklahoma and No. 2 Nebraska, a Phoenix newspaper reported Friday. The Arizona Republic, in a copyright story, said Oklahoma quickly voted in favor of the Fiesta Bowl, while Nebraska took four hours to decide they preferred the Citrus Bowl. Both bowl games are on Jan. 1 with the Fiesta at Sun Devil Stadium in Tempe, Ariz., and the Citrus at Orlando, Fla. However, the Fiesta's payoff for competing teams is $2.1 million compared to the Citrus' $1.1 million.

AFC East logjam should give a little Sunday

NFL Roundup

By The Associated Press

Playing .500 ball is nothing to get excited about, except in the AFC East.

Thinking optimistically, Indianapolis, Miami, New England, Buffalo and the New York Jets can boast about being in first place. Realistically, they're all in last place, too, with 4-4 records.

Something should give when the Indianapolis Colts visit the Miami Dolphins Sunday. Meanwhile, New England is at home against Dallas, Buffalo visits Cleveland and the Jets journey to Kansas City.

"We're in first place and that's the way we have to look at it," defensive back Jerry Holmes of the Jets said. "Sure, we're tied with four other teams, but we're right in there. The team that gets hot will win it and that means we have to get hot."

In other Sunday games, Detroit is at Washington, Houston at Pittsburgh, Los Angeles Rams at St. Louis, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, Cincinnati at Atlanta, Green Bay at Seattle, New Orleans at San Francisco, New York Giants at Philadelphia and Los Angeles Raiders at San Diego at night.

Chicago visits Denver Monday night. Miami already has one victory over Indianapolis this season, but that came by replacements during the strike.

Gary Hogeboom, who played during the strike but then suffered a rib injury, is back at quarterback for the Colts, who lost 16-13 to the red-hot Chargers last Sunday.

"The only reason I'm going to go with Gary is that I feel he's physically able to go, because he was the starter before he was injured — and because I feel he's the best quarterback we have," Colts Coach Ron Meyer said.

Eric Dickerson will be making his second start for the Colts after being acquired from the Rams. He ran for 138 yards on 35 carries last Sunday but committed a key fumble in the loss to San Diego.

The Colts will try to stop Dan Marino, the NFL's top-rated passer, who has thrown TD passes in 28 straight games.

With Tony Eason sidelined, Steve Grogan remains at quarterback for the Patriots, who have never beaten the 4-4 Cowboys in five meetings. Dallas Coach Tom Landry is talking about starting Steve Pelluer at quarterback in place of Danny White.

The Buffalo-Cleveland contest shapes up as a passing duel between the former University of Miami teammates Jim Kelly of the Bills and Bernie Kosar of the Browns. Bills' running back Rob Riddick is out with a broken collarbone.

Rookie linebacker Cornelius Bennett, who was impressive in his first game last Sunday, strengthens the Bills' defense.

The Jets are buoyed after a solid 30-14 win over Seattle Monday night, but have lost tight end Mickey Shuler and wide receiver Wenley Walker because of injuries. Kansas City, 1-7, will rely on QB Bill Kenney and rookie running back Christian Okoye in trying to break a seven-game losing streak.

The Jets' Johnny Hector (34) is surrounded by Seattle defenders in their game last Monday night at Giants' Stadium.

The Jets, 4-4 and tied with everyone else in the AFC East, play the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday.

Washington was a loser last week to Philadelphia, but still leads the NFC East at 6-2. The Redskins are heavily favored to beat Detroit, 2-6, which defeated Dallas last week. The Lions have lost all 13 meetings in the nation's capital.

Both Houston and Pittsburgh are 5-3. Oilers' QB Warren Moon can be dangerous if on target to receivers Drew Hill and Ernest Givins. Mark Malone of the Steelers is the lowest rated NFL quarterback.

St. Louis, 3-5, will be playing after a great comeback win against Tampa Bay. The Rams have lost four in a row and stand 1-7.

Tampa Bay beat Minnesota in a replacement game. Back at quarterback for the Vikings is Wade Wilson, who took over for Tommy Kramer at quarterback in the second half and tossed two touchdowns.

Both Atlanta and Cincinnati are struggling with three-game losing streaks and 2-6 records.

Green Bay, 3-4-1, came close against Chicago Sunday, while Seattle, 5-3, was routed by the Jets. The Seahawks could use a good game from QB Dave Krieg. Joe Montana's status for San Francisco is questionable for the New Orleans game because of a swollen knuckle on his throwing hand. If he is out, Steve Young will start. The 49ers are 7-1, leading the NFC West, but the Saints, 5-3, are off to a good start and have the NFL's No. 1 rated defense.

Randall Cunningham's passing and scrambling could present trouble for the Giants, 2-6, who have to go without injured QB Phil Simms for the second straight week. The Eagles, 4-4, have won three in a row.

San Diego, 7-1, hasn't lost since the opener, and now have a good running game and solid defense to go along with QB Dan Fouts' passing. The Raiders, 3-5, have lost five in a row and made another quarterback switch, reverting to Marc Wilson.

Bidwill not ruling out Baltimore as a possible site

By Tim Liotto
The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — St. Louis football Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill, after touring the city and meeting with local officials Friday, said he saw nothing to rule out Baltimore as a possible site should he decide to move his NFL team.

Bidwill met separately with Gov. William Donald Schafer and Mayor-elect Kurt L. Schmoke, and looked over the football facilities in suburban Baltimore as well as a proposed stadium site downtown.

When asked at a news conference whether he has definitely decided to move the NFL team from St. Louis, he replied, "No, I can't comment on that." He did say, however, that he had received indications from other NFL owners that there would be little opposition should he decide to relocate the franchise.

"There have been conversations not initiated by myself that would indicate that it would be favorable," he said. Baltimore lost its NFL team when the Colts moved to Indianapolis in 1984.

For Bidwill to move his team, he must receive 21 of 27 votes from his fellow club owners.

"If a decision is made, it will be made through an application for transfer before Jan. 15, as required in league bylaws," he said.

Bidwill reportedly has been considering Baltimore, Jacksonville, Phoenix and Memphis as possible new homes for the Cardinals.

The Maryland Legislature has approved funding for a $235 million project to build baseball and football stadiums at Camden Yards, an industrial site downtown.

Bidwill said the possibility of having some input into the design of the football stadium would be a "big factor" in his decision to move.

"The architects they're dealing with are capable of building a first-rate football stadium. If we can have some input, that's great. ... That's a big factor."

The Cardinals owner said he was not interested in owning a share of a stadium.

"Our primary interest is as a tenant," he said. "There are a combination of factors if we decide (to move) and the financial aspect could be important."

When told that local residents were already pulling for the Cardinals to move to Baltimore, he replied, "It would be premature if they were to get excited."

Bidwill, who toured through residential areas of Jacksonville earlier this week, declined to do so during this visit.

"I did that in Jacksonville because I'd never seen the residential areas there," he said. "I've seen the residential areas of Baltimore over the years."

Bidwill said he began considering leaving St. Louis three years ago, when he decided that Busch Stadium had become inadequate.

Chargers benefactors of scheduling format

Quarterback Dan Fouts and his Charger teammates may slip into the NFL playoffs this year thanks to their weak schedule.

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

Tex Schramm, who has always seen the loophole in the NFL's scheduling format, is afraid the San Diego Chargers may slip through it this year.

It's happened before — as recently as last year, when the Kansas City Chiefs made it. This year, they're demonstrating that making the playoffs with a much softer schedule than anyone else is no guarantee of continued strength.

"It's always been an uneven situation. It's the way the world is and you have to live with it," says Schramm, who among the many hats he wears is chairman of the rule-making competition committee, which a decade ago came up with the format that gives a team that finishes fifth in its division a much easier schedule than one, two, three or four.

So here is San Diego, 7-1 and two games ahead of Seattle in the AFC West with a schedule that includes Indianapolis twice, St. Louis and Tampa Bay while the Seahawks must face, among others, the Bears and the Vikings.

On the other hand, Tampa Bay has made the playoffs in the past with a fifth-place finish and the Chiefs did it last year, facing the likes of the Cardinals, Bills twice and Bucs rather than the Giants, Redskins and Cowboys like the rest of the AFC West. This year, with help from an 0-3 strike team, the Chiefs are 1-7.

Despite rumors to the contrary, there will be no change in the tiebreaker system, which also could affect the Chargers and Seahawks.

NFL Notes

As it turns out, the biggest casualty of Week Three, the one canceled by the strike, was a Seahawks-Chargers game in San Diego. They meet again next week in Seattle and if they finish in a tie, the winner of that game will win the division. There had been reports that in cases like that, the head-to-head matchup would be dropped as the first tiebreaker.

But Schramm says no. "You can't just start changing after the fact," she says. "You're better off letting nature take its course."

Time is finally catching up with some post-30 superstars — running backs and corner backs, who have taken one too many hits or made one too many cut.

Take 33-year-old Walter Payton, who until this year had done a remarkable job of beating the clock as he piled yards on to his record as the league's all-time leading rusher.

Payton is averaging just 2.7 yards a carry for the Bears, is being superceded by Neal Anderson and will probably retire gracefully after the season, particularly if Mike Ditka lets him score a touchdown in the Super Bowl instead of William Perry.

It's also likely that Tony Dorsett, 33, will be phased out in Dallas so Herschel Walker can get his hands on the ball 30 times a game, about three times more than he does now.

Ivan Lendl makes a return in his match against Paul Annacone at the Benson and Hedges indoor tennis championships in Wembley, England, Friday.

Lendl won in three sets, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Jarryd, Lendl gain semifinals

By Andrew Warshaw
The Associated Press

WEMBLEY, England — Sweden's Anders Jarryd ousted Wimbledon champion Pat Cash 3-6, 7-6, 6-2 Friday in a controversy-filled quarterfinal match at the $375,000 Benson and Hedges indoor tennis championships.

Earlier, Ivan Lendl, the world's top-ranked player and the tournament's No. 1 seed, outlasted American Paul Annacone 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 to advance to the semifinals along with France's Henri Leconte, a 6-7, 7-6, 6-3 winner over sixth-seeded Amos Mansdorf of Israel.

Jarryd's semifinal opponent will be Switzerland's Jacob Hlasek, who upset the second-seeded Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia, 6-3, 6-3. Hlasek played a brilliant all-round game, never letting Mecir settle into his inventive artistry. He only wobbled when he got to match point, missing four chances before reaching the semis on the fifth attempt.

Cash had a semifinal place in his grasp but let his concentration lapse after one vital point at the end of the second set.

On the 11th point of the tiebreaker, Jarryd's service return appeared to land well beyond the baseline, giving Cash match point.

But no call came from the line judge, and, in his anger at umpire Richard Kaufmann's refusal to overrule, Cash was warned for uttering an expletive.

The Australian won the next point of the tiebreaker but his spirit was effectively broken and Jarryd won the tie-breaker and took the final set easily.

"In my opinion, I won the match, unofficially at least," a furious Cash said. "I can't play much better than that. This could cost me an awful lot. It won't cost the umpire anything."

Cash was referring to his chances for marking the season-ending Masters Tournament in New York, in which the world's top eight players in the points standings take part.

Georgia Tech star ruled ineligible

ATLANTA (AP) — Riccardo Ingram's football and baseball career at Georgia Tech ended Friday after the star senior admitted taking money from sports agents and signing a representation contract in violation of NCAA rules.

Athletic Director Homer Rice said the violations were reported to the NCAA and Ingram was declared ineligible for the remaining football games against Wake Forest and Georgia, as well as for the 1988 baseball season.

A contrite Ingram issued a statement of apology.

"I'm very sorry for what I did," said the defensive back, the leading tackler for the Yellow Jackets this fall. "I know I've caused a great deal of embarrassment to Georgia Tech."

"I tried to say 'no' but they kept telling me that it would be good for me and good for them. When I gave in, I knew I was doing something that wasn't right. I felt guilty and scared," he said.

"I admitted to taking the money because I felt that the only way to resolve this was to get it out in the open."

The school did not reveal the names of the sports agents or the amount of money involved, but The Atlanta Constitution reported in a

"It's a very disappointing way to go out of a tournament — and this was not just any tournament," said Cash, who was appearing in Britain for the first time since Wimbledon.

Jarryd, who was seeded No. 5, two places below Cash, said he was lucky to square the match but had never played better than in the final set.

Lendl had to battle hard against Annacone to earn his semifinal meeting with Leconte.

Jarryd, seeking his third Benson and Hedges title in four years, was out of sync in the opening set against Annacone, who played solidly and gave nothing away.

Lendl questioned several line calls, argued with umpire Gerry Armstrong and had a heated exchange with the Wembley Arena fans.

copyright story that Ingram received at least $4,000 from Jim Abernethy and Gary Wilson of Atlanta and signed a representation contract with them.

A representation contract gives an agent the right to represent the athlete when he turns professional.

Rice said the school will not appeal to the NCAA to restore Ingram's eligibility.

Ingram, a native of Douglas, Ga., had 79 tackles in eight games this season. He batted 426 with 17 home runs and 99 runs batted in last spring for Tech's Atlantic Coast Conference champion baseball team.

Yankees deal for Dotson

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees acquired former 20-game winner Richard Dotson from the Chicago White Sox on Friday to help stabilize a situation that forced the Yankees to use 15 different pitchers as starters in 1987.

The trade was the fifth between the two clubs in less than two years and involved the fourth player — pitcher Scott Nielsen — to be dealt from one of the teams to the other, then back again.

The Yankees obtained Dotson and Nielsen by sending outfielder Dan Pasqua, catcher Mark Salas and left-handed minor league pitcher Steve Rosenberg to Chicago.

Besides Nielsen, the two clubs have re-exchanged catcher Ron Hassey and minor leaguers Mike Soper and Glen Braxton. Hassey, in fact, has gone from the Yankees to the White Sox to the Yankees to the White Sox.

"I did mention to somebody today that I could be back to the White Sox next week," Dotson said tongue-in-cheek from Reno, Nev. "I've played with a few of the guys who went back-and-forth."

Lou Piniella, the Yankees manager last season who was moved into the general manager's spot on Oct. 19, called the right-hander Dotson a quality pitcher and said he would "make a significant contribution to our starting rotation in 1988."

"He's a proven winner and, with his addition, I think we have greatly improved our staff," Piniella said in a statement.

Dotson, 28, had an 11-12 record with a 4.17 earned run average this year in 31 starts. His best year was 1983 with the White Sox when he had a 22-7 record. He fell to 14-15 in 1984 and was only 3-4 in 1985 when he underwent shoulder surgery in July. He was 10-17 in 1986, leading the American League in losses.

He missed four starts last season with a sore shoulder.

"I pulled a muscle in the back of my shoulder," Dotson said. "It was unrelated to the surgery. I made a start before the season was over. There was no pain. I felt great."

The White Sox considered Pasqua the key to the deal. The 26-year-old, left-handed hitting outfielder had 17 homers and 42 RBI in 113 games last season, although he hit only .233. Pasqua was the Class AAA International League's Rookie of the Year and Most Valuable Player with Columbus in 1985, when he hit .321 with 15 homers and 69 RBI.

"We talked to different clubs about Richard Dotson," White Sox General Manager Larry Himes said in a statement. "We finally decided it was extremely important for our club's present and future plans to obtain a young, left-handed power hitter like Dan Pasqua."

The Yankees only two consistent starters in 1987 were Rick Rhoden, 16-10 with a 3.86 ERA, and 44-year-old Tommy John, 13-6 and 4.63. The Yankees team ERA was 4.36, sixth in the American League.

Nielsen, 23, rejoins the Yankees after spending the 1987 season with the White Sox organization. He had a 3-5 record and a 6.24 ERA in 19 games with Chicago and was 3-4 and 3.97 with Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League. Nielsen went to the White Sox last Jan. 5 along with Soper for pitcher Pete Filson and infielder-outfielder Randy Velarde.

The rapid-fire trades between the two clubs began in December 1985 when the Yankees sent Hassey and pitcher Joe Cowley to the White Sox for pitcher Britt Burns, Soper and Braxton. Hassey originally came to New York from the White Sox's crosstown rivals, the Cubs.

Burns retired without ever throwing a pitch for the Yankees. He had a degenerative hip condition.

Two months later, the Yankees reacquired Hassey and three other players for pitcher Neil Allen, Braxton, Scott Brantley and cash. Then, in July 1986, the Yankees sent Hassey, Carlos Martinez and a player to be named later back to the White Sox for Ron Kittle, Wayne Tolleson and Joel Skinner.

"There are six or seven guys on the Yankees now that I played with," Dotson said, "so I'll feel pretty much at home."

Salas, 26, who came to New York from Minnesota June 6 in the Joe Niekro trade, had a combined .250 average, six homers and 21 RBI with the two clubs. For New York, he hit .200 with three homers and 12 RBI.

East appoints hockey coach

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

East Catholic High School has an ice hockey coach this morning.

Joe Hubbuck, from Grosse Pointe, Mich., was named Friday as the Eagles' new coach. It was announced by Director of Athletics Tom Malin.

The 25-year-old Hubbuck succeeds Dr. Vic Russo, who stepped down in the fall after serving as head coach for three years. Russo's last team in 1986-87 posted a 6-11 mark.

"He is going to bring to us a very youthful, energetic coach," Malin said of Hubbuck. Hubbuck, who moved into the area only three weeks ago, heard about the opening and was one of 10 applicants for the position. "I see it as a good challenge for me. What I do best is rebuilding hockey programs," Hubbuck said.

East in Bill Mannix' final year. In 1983-84, won the state Division II championship. East, in Russo's first two years, were near the break-even point at 8-9-1 and 10-10-1, qualifying for state tournament action, before last year's losing campaign.

How does Hubbuck describe his style? "Very aggressive, hard hitting and defensive minded," he answered, "and very disciplined. I plan to carry that on here with the type of competition we'll face."

Hubbuck, according to Malin, coached various hockey teams in the Michigan area since 1983. Hubbuck said that his team two years ago won the Michigan National Hockey League crown; that's the elite travel league in Michigan. He coached at University Liggett School, a prep school, last season. Hubbuck said he had his choice of taking the East Catholic position, or returning to Michigan. "The interest of Mr. Malin and the school swung me," he said. "I'm more of a career minded coach and I feel this is a step up as far as location."

"This could be a good area to output players with the right attitude. I'm not a recreational coach. I'm out there to do one thing and that's to win hockey games," Hubbuck said.

Hockey practice starts on Nov. 23. Hubbuck is residing in Andover.

Closing In

Manchester High linebacker Chris Rossitto (61) starts to close the distance between himself and Enfield ball carrier Ed Saunders in their game last weekend at Memorial Field. The Indians' game with East Hartford High has been rescheduled Monday at 3 p.m. at Ted Knurek Memorial Field in East Hartford

Games rescheduled Monday

If the weather that followed the mid-week snowstorm holds, and the fields are clear, there will be plenty of scholastic action on Monday with two high school football games and two state girls' soccer games on tap.

The Manchester High and East Catholic High football teams will be in action Monday with the Indians, 3-4-1, visiting CCC East Division leading East Hartford High School, 5-0 in the CCC East and 7-1 overall at Ted Knurek Memorial Field in a 3 p.m. start. Unbeaten East Catholic, 4-0, 8-0 and the No. 1 team in the unofficial coaches poll, will host All Connecticut Conference rival St. Bernard's, 0-3, 3-5, at Mount Nebo at 3:30 p.m.

Both games were originally scheduled Friday night.

The two girls' soccer games on tap Monday were originally scheduled last Wednesday. Manchester High, the No. 3 seed in the Class S

Division will host No. 14 seeded Staples High of Westport at Memorial Field at 2 p.m. while Coventry High will host Charter Oak Conference rival East Hampton High in a Class S Division clash at 2 p.m.

The Coventry High boys' soccer team, which won its tournament opener last Tuesday against Terryville, will play the winner of the Shepaug Valley-Cromwell game that was scheduled to be played today. The date of that game is still to be announced.

Bean retains golf lead in Hawaii

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Defending champion Andy Bean shot a 3-under-par 69 Friday for a one-stroke lead over Sandy Lyle after three rounds of the $600,000 Kapalua International Golf Tournament.

Bean was three shots clear of the field starting the third round of this unofficial but coordinated event on the PGA Tour. But Lyle, a former British Open champion from Scotland and the 1984 winner of this title, made up two strokes over the last three holes and finished with a 5-under-par 67. Lyle made a birdie on the final hole. Bean completed three rounds in 200, 16 shots under par and a tournament record. Lyle takes a 201 total into Saturday's final round of the chase for a $150,000 first prize.

Lanny Wadkins, who played with Lyle and Bean in the final group, was the only other man who appeared to be in title contention.

Wadkins had a 69 despite a balky putter, and was at 203, only three shots off the pace.

Potter an upset winner

CHICAGO (AP) — Barbara Potter, showing no ill affects from two herniated discs, used her strong serve to beat fourth-seeded Zina Garrison, 6-3, 6-4, Friday, and advance to the semifinals of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Chicago tennis tournament.

Also advancing was teen-ager Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union, who outlasted Kate Gompert in a three-set match.

Garrison, ranked ninth in the world, thus became the fifth-seeded player to be knocked out of the week-long event being held at the University of Illinois-Chicago Pavilion.

In a battle of unseeded players, the 16-year-old Zvereva rallied from a first-set loss to beat Gompert, of Rancho Mirage, Calif.

CELTICS STILL UNBEATEN

NBA Roundup

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird scored 34 points, Danny Ainge 28 and Dennis Johnson 23 Friday night as the unbeaten Boston Celtics rallied for their fifth NBA victory, 128-114 over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Jolted by a 22-6 Cleveland run at the end of the first period and at the outset of the second period, the Celtics fought back to beat the Cavaliers for the 23rd consecutive time since 1978 in Boston Garden.

Boston narrowed an 11-point deficit to 64-58 at halftime, survived another burst that boosted the Cavaliers' lead to 74-64 in the third period and then took charge.

Johnson, held to six points in the first half, scored 11 points and Bird nine in leading the comeback. Boston outscored Cleveland 34-26 for a 92-90 lead after three quarters.

Helped by rookie Mark Acres, who scored eight points in the final period, the Celtics pulled away from a 104-104 tie on Johnson's 16-foot shot with just under seven minutes remaining.

Acres scored after a pass from Ainge. Johnson drove for a layup and Robert Parish stole the ball and ran half the court for another layup, completing a decisive eight-point run. Johnson finished with 13 assists.

Cleveland, 1-3, was led by Dell Curry with 25 points, Phil Hubbard with 23 and Brad Daugherty with 22.

Pistons 113, 76ers 94

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vinnie Johnson came off the bench to score 27 points, including 23 in the first half, and Bill Laimbeer sparked a third-quarter surge as the Detroit Pistons defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 113-94 in an NBA game Friday night.

Johnson's 16 second-quarter points helped the Pistons to a 55-53 halftime lead.

After Maurice Cheeks cut the Detroit lead to 57-56, the Pistons went on a 23-8 run early in the third quarter to take an 80-64 lead. Laimbeer had 10 points, mostly on long-range jump shots, during the run. He had 12 points for the quarter and finished with 22 for the game.

Trailing 87-65 at the start of the fourth quarter, Philadelphia outscored the Pistons 12-2, but Detroit then scored six straight points and a layup by Rick Mahorn gave the Pistons a 95-77 lead with 6:49 to play.
