LYNDONVILLE, Vt. (AP) — For 22 years, L. Le Desjardins and his wife, Rosemary, ran the Lyndonville Police Department in a renovated wood shed off their kitchen.

Until they retired Monday, Desjardins was the chief and Mrs. Desjardins the dispatcher. They ran the department with the help of a part-time officer.

"I've enjoyed meeting people, but I would like to have my home to myself," said Mrs. Desjardins, 67.

She said her husband, who has been in law enforcement for 46 years, wasn't so excited about stepping down.

"I'm tired and I'm glad I'm retiring, but the chief isn't," she said. "He liked what he was doing, he did. He's going to miss it."

Desjardins, 70, said he will miss providing protection to the 1700 residents of Lyndonville, but he admitted that having the department in his home presented some problems.

"It had its disadvantages, like having a holiday dinner and having some drunk wander in. That's happened once," he said.

He said several times a week he would be awakened in the middle of the night to answer calls.

"We are the last of a dying breed," the chief said. "The new ones coming in, they don't want to be bothered with having the department in your home. I don't think there's the dedication anymore."

Asked where the new department will be in town, she said, "They don't have any idea."

Woods at work

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emmy Award-winning actor James Woods returned to work on his latest film after being sidelined for two weeks with pneumonia, a spokeswoman says.

"He probably could have used another week, but he had to get back to work," Andrea Jaffe said Monday as production of "The Boost" resumed.

Woods, 46, was hospitalized for a week with pneumonia.

"The Boost," co-starring Sean Young in "No Way Out" as Woods' wife, has been described as a dark love story. Woods plays a New York hustler and tax-shelter salesman who burns out in the fast lane and turns to drugs.

The film is being produced by Hemdale Film Corp., the independent company whose hits include "Platoon," "Hoosiers" and "The Terminator." Hemdale also produced "Salvador," which earned Woods an Academy Award nomination for Best Actor.

Woods won an Emmy this year for portraying a mentally ill man in the television special "Promise."

BETTY FORD ... recovers at home

Betty Ford home

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford is home from the hospital after quadruple coronary bypass surgery.

"She's doing very well," Penny Circle, chief of staff for former President Gerald Ford, said Monday. "The president is with her."

Mrs. Ford, 69, underwent surgery Monday to remove 90 percent of his prostate gland at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Tissue removed from the enlarged gland appeared benign, but tests were to be conducted this week to confirm that diagnosis, doctors said.

"The speaker is doing beautifully," Dr. Jerome P. Richie, who performed the surgery, said after the 90-minute operation on the Massachusetts Democrat.

O'Neill is expected to be hospitalized another week to 10 days, Richie said.

"I didn't really sing it until this year," he said. "I stopped doing that in 1972, but I brought it back briefly when (President) Carter started that registration deal," he said, referring to selective service registration.

The popular 1967 song chronicled the 1965 arrest that kept Guthrie out of the draft because of his conviction for littering. But it became outdated, its author said.

"The war was over, the draft was over, there was no purpose in singing it," Guthrie said. "Besides, I was practically took up a half-hour each night. That's fine when you've got a 2 1/2-hour concert, but I've been doing shows with other people and I only get an hour or so to play."

'Tip' recuperating

BOSTON (AP) — Former House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr. was recuperating in good condition after his second operation in two weeks, and expected to go home in about a week, his surgeon says.

O'Neill, 74, underwent surgery Monday to remove 90 percent of his prostate gland at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

No more 'Alice'

WASHINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Folk singer Arlo Guthrie observed the 20th anniversary of "Alice's Restaurant," the anti-war ballad of his Thanksgiving Day arrest for littering, by pledging not to sing the song for another decade.

Guthrie sang the song Saturday before a full house at Carnegie Hall in New York.

He has no intention of singing it for at least another 10 years, the 46-year-old singer said Monday in an interview from his home in this small western Massachusetts town.

"I didn't really sing it until this year," he said. "I stopped doing that in 1972, but I brought it back briefly when (President) Carter started that registration deal," he said, referring to selective service registration.

Morning TV wars

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran anchorwoman Kathleen Sullivan and newcomer Harry Smith led CBS' newest team in the breakfast television wars into battle as "CBS This Morning" aired its debut.

"It seems like we've been doing this for years," Smith said Monday, and he could have been talking about himself.

Sullivan, CBS' prize recruit from ABC, who has filled out ABC's "Good Morning America," seemed ill at ease, fuffing segues at some points. But by the end of the hour, she seemed to have relaxed a bit.

Sports correspondent Jim Lampley didn't make it into the studio in time for his first-hour report. Otherwise, first-day glitches were mostly technical.

The new show retained the format of anchorman Mark McEwen from its predecessor, "The Morning Program." Rounding out the team were Dr.

Everything taken

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burglars snatched a food charity's distribution center and other Thanksgiving weekend, and stole 50 tons of food as well as computers and office equipment, says actor Dennis Weaver, who helped found the group.

"Everything was taken that wasn't bolted down," Weaver said Monday.

Weaver said he learned of the theft at the Love is Peeding Everyone, or LIFE, distribution center shortly before he was to announce plans for the sixth annual Operation Santa Claus

Explosions rip mills in Putnam

PUTNAM (AP) — Explosions set off a raging blaze in a mill complex today as at least 10 fire companies hampered by dense smoke fought to contain flames that shot 60 feet into the air.

All explosions worked in the building were accounted for and only two minor injuries were reported, hospital officials said.

"The fire in this depressed eastern Connecticut mill town near the Massachusetts and Rhode Island borders sent flames 60 feet into the air and blanketed the sky with smoke so dense it blocked the sunlight."

"The explosions were one after another ... just boom, boom, boom, boom," said David Boylan, a reporter and photographer for the local newspaper, the Observer Patriot.

Officials were not able to say immediately where the fire started but Bud Shippee, owner of Shippee Pools, located 150 feet from the mill, said a firefighter told him that "a chemical barrel blew up near the furnace in the boiler room of Priority Finishing."

Priority Finishing Co. and Dimension Sash Cloth Inc., a firm that supplied salt cloth for the Americas Cup race, are located in a three-story, 100,000-square-foot section of the old brick complex that was engulfed in flames.

Three other businesses were evacuated but were not immediately caught fire, authorities said.

"We heard a blast and everybody came outside then there were about four more blasts," said Scott Burton, an employee of the 241 W. Main St. mill.

Fire and rescue squads from 10 surrounding communities converged on the complex where flames shot 60 feet into the air. A flammable liquid sent flames 60 feet into the air and blanketed the area and the roadway was closed to traffic.

The initial blast around 8:50 a.m. was followed by smaller explosions, observers said.

"It's unusual. It went so fast," Town Clerk Lillian Newth said from town hall a few blocks away.

Flames and smoke were visible from at least five miles away, observers said. "Billowing black clouds of smoke are filling the sky, and we can see flames flickering in the distance," said Pat Hebenberger, a secretary at Day Kimball Hospital.

Hospital spokesman Roger Leduc said that a worker in the burning complex was treated for smoke inhalation and another man was injured when he was struck in the chest by a cable.

The incident occurred near the industrial city's downtown section, where several other businesses reportedly were evacuated.

Town Hall switched to emergency power after the fire shut down an electric company substation, Newth said.

"There's a small substation right next to this building that they had to shut down," Newth said.

"My gosh, there's a lot of white smoke," she said. "Oh, the flames are terrible again. Oh, my word. It just doesn't seem possible anything can burn that long."

Easton of Grubb Camera Shop downtown said she was closing early because of the loss of power.

DiRosa backs reopening of Highland Park School

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The reopening of the Highland Park School in 1989 moved another step closer today when Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. supported the proposal.

The long-range planning committee of the Board of Education voted Monday to recommend that the school be reopened in the wake of a predicted school crunch in elementary schools.

Funding for the project would require the approval of the Board of Directors.

"We as a board have been made aware of the process," DiRosa said. "Whatever (Superintendent James P.) Kennedy recommends should be acceptable to the board."

"I have heard no opposition from either board members," DiRosa said. "I personally support the reopening of Highland Park. I was one who opposed the closing initially."

The proposal to reopen the school should be heard by the Board of Directors by March, DiRosa said. The Board of Directors is in the process of forming a subcommittee to look into the space needs of the schools and other government entities, he said.

Despite the protests of parents, the school was closed in 1984 because of declining enrollment.

However, school officials predict as many as 400 new students in elementary schools within the next five years. Current enrollment is 3,478 students.

The school board will discuss the school's reopening at its Monday night meeting, said Kennedy. The board will meet at 7:30 p.m. at 45 N. School St.

Initial start-up costs for Highland Park and renovations to the town-owned former Bentley School to house the Day Treatment Program range from $726,400 to $851,400, Kennedy said. The Day Treatment Program, now housed in Highland Park School, would be moved to Bentley under the proposal.

Also, refurbishing Highland Park could cost up to $25,000 plus an additional $716,000 for staffing, if all the school's grades are opened at once, he said.

The board also will discuss Monday whether to open the school all at once or to open in stages, Kennedy said today. Currently, he said he favors a proposal to open the school in stages through grade 1 in 1989, with plans to add successive grades over consecutive years.

"By adding (grades), you hold the line," he said. "That's the initial plan, but you may have to speed up the timetable. That's your plan today. They may change it."

Mall talk brief and unofficial
By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. met Monday in Hartford with the developer of the proposed mall at Buckland Hills, but the meeting was not to discuss the future of the project, according to DiRosa.

The meeting came a month after voters here rejected a $13 million tax-increment bonding plan that would have benefited the mall plans.

DiRosa said today he met with Joseph LeDuc, Hornart senior development director, to introduce himself as Manchester's new mayor and "exchange pleasantries."

The meeting, held at the law offices of Uptake, Kelly & Spellacy, which represents Hornart, was brief, DiRosa said.

"I had a very brief, unofficial meeting with Mr. LeDuc. There was no exchange of ideas," DiRosa said.

The town hasn't made any plans to meet with Hornart yet, DiRosa said Tuesday. "LeDuc is exploring his options," he added.

After the Nov. 3 defeat of the bonding plan to support utility improvements in the area, LeDuc said that Hornart would either scale down the mall project or move it to

Directors pushing fire-service study

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

The Board of Directors could consider as early as next month whether a proposal to study possible changes in the operation of the Town Fire Department should be approved.

At the same time, directors also heard a fire department equipment repair and replacement plan for next year that could cost as much as $500,000. The money could come either from the capital reserve fund or from past surpluses within the department's budget.

During a workshop before its meeting Tuesday night, the Board of Directors agreed by consensus to have Town Manager Robert B. Weiss draft a request for proposal for the study work, including a cost estimate. Weiss said he would have a draft of the request ready for consideration by the directors in January.

The Democratic directors promised during their campaign before the November election to look into the equipment needs of the fire department and to consider possible changes in the service area for each fire station.

Director Kenneth N. Tedford, who is the Board of Director's liaison to the fire department, reiterated Tuesday night his desire to look into refurbishing the School Street firehouse and possibly moving it farther southward to handle a growing population in the south end of town.

Tedford also said he believes the fire department ought to purchase a new, lighter paramedic vehicle to replace the present vehicle. Though Fire Chief John C. Rivosa said Tuesday a new vehicle will be unnecessary unless the town adds a second paramedic unit, "I'd said said after the workshop he remains convinced that a new vehicle is a good idea."

A report presented by Rivosa to the board outlined the department's plans for repair and replacement of its major equipment. According to the report, the town should spend $188,000 next year for a new pumper to replace a 1966 model, which would be kept as a spare. Also in 1988, a new aerial pumper should be purchased at a cost of $226,000 to replace a 1959 model.

The report recommends that a 1971 pumper be refurbished at a cost of $50,000 to make it serviceable.

Suffield jail plans OK

HARTFORD (AP) — A review by the governor's office of a plan to build an 800-bed, medium-security prison in Suffield has ruled that the project should go forward.

The review, by Gov. William A. O'Neill's legal counsel, Jay W. Jackson, was requested by Suffield officials who were angry when the state chose their town for the $88 million facility.

Jackson concluded in his report, released on Tuesday, that the selection had been made "in an objective, consistent and fair manner."

Suffield First Selectman Paul A. Kulas said the report would not end Suffield's fight against the facility.

"We're not giving up," he said, adding that no option, including court action against the state, had been ruled out.

Kulas said he had not seen the report, but planned to review it with lawyers hired by the town to fight the project.

O'Neill said he supported Jackson's conclusions and that the only way the choice of Suffield could have been changed would have been if mistakes had been found in the way it was selected.

He said no such mistakes were found and that the methods used by the Justice Planning Division's Office of Policy and Management were proper.

Manchester In Brief

Zoning board approves decks

The Zoning Board of Appeals Monday approved a variance allowing developer Frank J. Strano to add 11 decks on top of condominium units currently under construction at 201 New State Road.

The complex, called River Mill Estates, consists of 17 units. To build the decks, which would be 11 feet high, the rear yard had to be reduced from the required 30 feet to 22 feet, requiring a variance. But Strano and East Catholic High School, which owns the soccer field behind the condominiums, agreed to establish a 20-foot easement at the rear yard, increasing the yard to nearly 50 feet.

Getty station to open snack shop

Getty Petroleum was granted a special exception permit by the Zoning Board of Appeals Monday to open a snack shop at a gasoline station at 176 Tolland Turnpike.

Space would be added on to the existing attendance area for the snack shop, which will have a cooler area for juices and soft drinks, said Ronald Fortune, who represented Getty at the ZBA hearing. The hearing was held in the Lincoln Center hearing room.

Getty hasn't decided on hours for the shop, but Fortune said they would probably be 7 a.m. to 1 a.m. or something similar. The shop is an accessory use for gas customers.

Hartford police probing death

Hartford police are investigating the death of a Manchester man who died Monday, a day after police found him lying on the pavement at the intersection of Maple and Franklin avenues.

L. Ronald Clark of the Hartford Police Department's evidentiary services division said today that an autopsy was scheduled to be performed today on Christopher Brian Daly, 22, of 360 Oakland St., who died Monday at Hartford Hospital. He had been placed on life support systems after being rushed from the scene of the incident.

Clark said he could not provide any details of the circumstances surrounding the death.

"We don't know how it happened," said Clark. "It could have been an accidental fall, he could have been hit by a car, we don't know."

Hartford Police Sgt. Richard Grocki said that it has not yet been determined if the incident was a motor vehicle accident. Daly had attended Manchester schools and was employed by Brand-Rex Co. of Manchester. The funeral is scheduled for Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Church of the Assumption. Burial will be in St. James Cemetery. The John F. Tierney Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Children and adults look at toys and equipment at the Manchester Area Conference of Churches. Toys may be left at the department, next to Town Hall, or at the Eighth District station, ComFed offices or at Manchester Mall on Main Street.

Peter Saries, a firefighter with the Town Fire Department, accepts toys Tuesday from Kimberly Nielsen, 6, of Vernon and Matt Gustafson, 12, of Manchester, for the Toys for Joy Program to aid needy families sponsored by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

'Radio Free Manchester' planned

Plans to bring a radio station to Manchester Community College continue to move forward.

Harold Dorsbug, a retired engineer for the Channel 3 television station WFSB and radio station WTIC, has been hired as a consultant by the Student Senate Radio Station Subcommittee. Dorsbug was introduced to the nine-member subcommittee at its meeting Tuesday.

Dorsbug told the subcommittee members that it is up to them to make sure the plans for the station are not put on the backburner.

"If there's one thing I want to emphasize...if you're serious about this thing, you'll push it along," he said.

He said his last similar project took two years to complete because of a plethora of planning problems. The first order of business for Dorsbug will be to conduct a feasibility study, said Rory Bruce, Student Senate president. The study must be done first since the college administration has not approved the formation of a radio station, he said.

"We have to convince our administration that this is feasible," Bruce said. "They have a lot of concerns."

If administration approval can be gained within the next few weeks, the subcommittee would like to have the station operating by next semester, said subcommittee member Kenneth Kudra.

"We were hoping to have the station operating next semester, but that's a bit unrealistic. A year would be our outside framework," he said.

The station would begin as a low-frequency station around campus by using a radio carrier system, but plans would be for it to eventually acquire its own AM frequency. The station could range between $8,000 to $14,000, plus costs of building a new studio, Dorsbug said.

Costs for the studio have not been determined because a location has not been selected.

"We're hoping to have the station operating next semester, but that's a bit unrealistic. A year would be our outside framework," he said.

Board OKs reorganization of engineering department

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

A reorganization of the town engineering department that will eliminate the position of town engineer and make the department's design unit permanent was approved Tuesday night by the town Board of Directors.

In place of the town engineer, a new position of director of engineering services will be created. The intent is to hire someone without a professional license who will be able to take over the essential duties of town engineer.

For more than a year, the town has failed in four attempts to fill the position of town engineer. One successful applicant quit the job after only three days to return to private consulting.

The design unit was created in 1984 for a three-year trial period in order to cut down on the cost of an outside design work. Public Works Director George A. Kandra recommended to the Board of Directors that the unit be made permanent because of continued demand for design work and because of expected turnover of greater job security is not provided.

The move to make the design unit permanent was approved unanimously by the board after brief discussion during its meeting in the Lincoln Center hearing room. But the proposal for the new position of director of engineering services created extended debate by board members about the need for the new position and about when a person hired to fill it would be expected to gain his license.

The new post was eventually approved 7-2, with Republican Directors Geoffrey Naab and Ronald Oella the only board members voting against it.

Naab argued that a limit of two to three years for the person to gain his license, as suggested by Kandra, was too long. The position approved carries no specific limit, but it does say that the person hired must obtain professional licensing "within a reasonable period."

"I simply think that's too long," Naab said after Director Stephen T. Cassano suggested a two-year deadline. "If we're going to have any requirements at all, we should have a requirement that's going to mean something."

Director Mary Ann Handley said the board should leave it up to Kandra to decide if the director of engineering services is taking too long to get his license. She said that the director's workload could take away time needed to prepare for testing for the license.

Several alternatives were rejected by the board before the position was ultimately approved without a specific licensing deadline. The first, which would have set a three-year deadline, was defeated 5-4, with Naab and three Democratic directors — Cassano, Kenneth N. Tedford and Barbara B. Weinberg — voting for it.

A second proposal for a one-year limit was defeated 6-3 along party lines, with the Republican minority outnumbered by the Democrats. The last proposal, which would have eliminated the requirement for licensing, was defeated 7-1.

Naab, who proposed that the requirement be eliminated, was the only member of the board to vote in favor of his proposal. Oella did not cast a vote on the question.

Naab said that the previous two votes indicated that the directors were not serious about setting a reasonable deadline for licensing.

Earlier in the meeting, Naab questioned why it was necessary to create a new position rather than revising the requirements of town engineer. Kandra said that one reason for his proposal is that developers expect someone with the title of engineer to have a professional license.

Kandra also said that, due to the tight market for town engineers, the town would be in a better position to hire a less experienced engineer and allow him to gain his license later.

Under the approved change, the position of town engineer would remain vacant. It could be filled in the future if the amount of work available for the work planned has been drastically reduced.

The low base bid Nov. 4 was $288,800. The Cheney Hall Foundation, which controls the town-owned hall, has about $70,000 available now for interior renovation.

Work, mostly demolition to make way for later renovation, will be confined to the basement of the hall. It will include removing a concrete slab, excavating about a foot beneath the slab, and pouring a new slab. The lowest section of a stairway in the southeast corner of the hall will be removed in connection with that work.

If the cost is low enough an old boiler and a wood floor in one section of the basement will be removed.

A small addition may also be built at the rear of the building. If it is built, contractors will be able to use the hole they have cut in the foundation as a means of getting excavation equipment into the basement. That would reduce the amount of hand digging that will be needed.

Some demolition work has already been done by people required to do public service as part of court-imposed sentences.

Directors disband youth commission

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

After years of dwindling interest, the Manchester Commission on Children and Youth has been dissolved.

The town Board of Directors voted unanimously during its Tuesday meeting to disband the nine-year old commission after determining that the commission is no longer active.

While the Board of Directors voted to disband the commission, some members on Tuesday suggested that some other outlet be established to tap the talent of town's young people.

Director Barbara B. Weinberg said this morning she will propose at next week's board meeting that the board establish a youth forum made up of several representatives from each of the town's high schools. Though she could not say what specific issues the forum would look into, she said it could act as an advisory group to the board.

Weinberg said that the forum would differ from the now-defunct commission in that it would be made up entirely of young people. Commission members had included adults and youths.

"The proposal is similar to one made by former commission member Gregory Kane earlier this year. Under that plan, representatives of each of the town's high schools and high schools would meet at a different school periodically to discuss matters of interest to the youth."

Weinberg said she had received the written proposal from Kane but had determined that it would not be feasible because of a lack of interest on the part of the Board of Education. Her proposal would likely not be approved by the Board of Education since the student representatives would not meet at the school.

The youth forum proposed by Weinberg, which would have three or four representatives from each high school, would meet once or twice a year. The forum might take up issues of particular concern to the youth, such as the relationship between the town government and the Eighth Utilities District, Weinberg said.

The Commission on Children and Youth was formed in 1978 as a means for teenagers to discuss their concerns and as a way to get teen-agers involved in the community as a whole. Turnover on the commission had been high in recent years, and attendance at meetings had been very low.

New Cheney bids Dec. 15

New bids will be opened for the first phase of interior renovation to historic Cheney Hall at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 15, in the hearing room of Lincoln Center.

Bids submitted Nov. 4 have been rejected by the Cheney Hall Foundation because they were far in excess of the amount of money available for the work. Since then the amount of work planned has been drastically reduced.

The low base bid Nov. 4 was $288,800. The Cheney Hall Foundation, which controls the town-owned hall, has about $70,000 available now for interior renovation.

Work, mostly demolition to make way for later renovation, will be confined to the basement of the hall. It will include removing a concrete slab, excavating about a foot beneath the slab, and pouring a new slab. The lowest section of a stairway in the southeast corner of the hall will be removed in connection with that work.

If the cost is low enough an old boiler and a wood floor in one section of the basement will be removed.

A small addition may also be built at the rear of the building. If it is built, contractors will be able to use the hole they have cut in the foundation as a means of getting excavation equipment into the basement. That would reduce the amount of hand digging that will be needed.

More study due on comment rules

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Barbara B. Weinberg, another director, has supported Cassano's proposal, but she recommends that board meetings begin at 7:30 a.m. rather than the customary 8 p.m.

The Board of Directors debated for several minutes Tuesday on how to proceed before agreeing to table action on the procedures. When one board member said that the Democrats should hold a caucus to refine the proposals before continuing discussion with the full board, Democratic Director James F. "Dutch" Fogarty suggested that members of both parties should caucus.

That proposal prompted Director Naab, a Republican, to argue that the procedures were not a party issue.

Naab suggested a subcommittee be formed to look at the various proposals and report back to the other directors, but Cassano argued that any decision should be made by the full board.

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr., in the compromise that was approved by the board, suggested that four board members examine the proposals on a less formal basis. Those members will be Cassano, Naab, Weinberg and Mary Ann Handley.

There was little talk on the actual merits of any of the proposed changes, but Director Kenneth N. Tedford did raise an objection to Cassano's proposal. He said the board has sometimes acted on information in the reports, even though they weren't on the agenda. In light of that, Tedford said, the board should allow comment from the public on all reports.

Big storm off Alaska generates snow, rain

By The Associated Press

A powerful low pressure off southeast Alaska sent snow and rain across the Northwest today, after rain in northern California eased fears of drought while causing a minor landslide.

Rain continued today across northern California and western Washington and Oregon. Rain was scattered across the northern Rockies and snow was falling at higher elevations of the Northwest.

Elsewhere, snowshowers were scattered across the Great Lakes region, the Ohio Valley and the Appalachians.

A winter storm warning said up to 8 inches of snow was possible in the Oregon Cascades. Snow advisories were issued for the Washington Cascades, Idaho mountains, northeast California, the northern Sierra Nevada, the Lake Tahoe region and the northern and central mountains of Colorado.

Gale warnings were issued for the northern Pacific Coast and a high wind warning was posted for the upper Yellowstone Valley of Montana, Livingston, Mont., had gusts of 40 mph Tuesday evening. Meanwhile, lakes and reservoirs in some parched Northern California communities began rising for the first time in months because of heavy rain this week, officials said.

Marin and Sonoma counties reported reservoirs hit a turning point when they began taking in more water than was being drawn by residents. But officials in other Northern California counties said more rainy weather will be needed before fears of a drought are eased.

Top court grants new trial to Coventry man

A Coventry resident, who was convicted of sexually assaulting a woman three years ago, had one of the charges thrown out by the state Supreme Court Monday and a new trial ordered on a second charge, according to the decision.

Steven H. Hufford, 22, was convicted three years ago of sexually assaulting a woman while he was an attendant for the Ambulance Service of Manchester. In a unanimous ruling, the state Supreme Court dismissed the third-degree sexual assault conviction against Hufford because it said the prosecution failed to prove that Hufford used force in assaulting the patient, who was restrained while being transported by ambulance from her East Hartford home to Hartford Hospital.

The court ruled that there was no evidence that force was used. While the case was heard in October, the decision was not released until Monday.

"No rational trier could have found the defendant (Hufford) guilty of that crime," the decision reads on the third-degree sexual assault charge.

A new trial was ordered on a fourth-degree sexual assault charge. The court ruled that the prosecution did not prove that the woman was totally helpless during the act. It is not incident.

The woman said Hufford assaulted her while being strapped down in the ambulance. However, a second attendant, who was driving the ambulance, supported his testimony.

Hufford was convicted by a jury last year on both charges. He was given an effective sentence of three months, but has not served the sentence because of the appeal.

School aid for Bolton in jeopardy

BOLTON — Reimbursement from the state for the new Bolton High School library media center may be in jeopardy if code violations in school buildings are not remedied. On Tuesday, School Superintendent Richard E. Packman and Board of Education Chairman James H. Marshall gave the Board of Selectmen a recent letter from the state Department of Education that said if progress in correcting code violations is not continued, the state will probably deny aid for the library media center. First Selectwoman Sandra W. Pierog said this morning that a Hartford architectural firm that examined the violations estimated that correcting them would cost from $385,000 to $400,000. The code violations were cited by the Department of Education during an inspection made last year in relation to Bolton's grant application for money to finance the construction of the media center. Pierog said the violations include wiring and piping on laboratory tables, equipment used to render fumes from the industrial arts lab, and a refrigerator motor that is not explosion-proof. A school official said the violations are not significant enough to present serious problems if they were left unattended for a period of time. Marshall and Packman could not be reached this morning for comment. The letter presented by Packman and Marshall said that if the Bolton Board of Education should stop making progress in correcting the violations, "the state would probably exercise its right to deny state aid for the library media center in the grant process." Bolton is eligible for about 60 percent reimbursement of the $400,000 cost of the library media center.

File says murder plot under way for a year

HARTFORD (AP) — A plot to murder a Glastonbury woman was noted in the diary of the victim's daughter at least a year before the slaying, according to court documents that said she planned to make her co-defendant boyfriend her legal guardian. Two other people also face charges in the case. Kara Lintner, 17, and Christopher Wheatley, 20, both of Glastonbury, followed Coleman in a car to Massachusetts and toward an acclaimed violinist from whose father Karin Aparo took violin lessons. Lintner has been charged with conspiracy to commit murder while Wheatley has been charged with being an accessory to murder and conspiracy to commit murder. Authorities said in an affidavit that Wheatley agreed to help Coleman in exchange for money Coleman expected to get from the victim's life insurance policy. "In Coleman's arrest warrant, police said a motive for the slaying may have been that Joyce Aparo was trying to steer her daughter's affections away from Coleman and toward an acclaimed violinist from whose father Karin Aparo took violin lessons.

State educators review rule to admit children with AIDS

HARTFORD — Local school boards would be "put on notice" if the state Board of Education adopts a recommended policy of admitting children with AIDS to regular classrooms, a state official says. "It is putting districts on notice that this is what we believe and this is the position we will take," Mark A. Stapleton, chief of legal affairs for the Department of Education, said Tuesday. The department has operated by a set of guidelines for the last three years urging local school districts to allow AIDS children to be taught in regular classrooms. Adopting the guidelines as policy would give them a legal status in case a parent or guardian ever challenges local school district methods of instructing children with AIDS. The request is up for discussion before the board at its December meeting today and will likely be voted upon in January, Deputy Commissioner Lorraine M. Aronson said. Although Aronson said the policy request is not aimed at any particular situation, the New Haven school system currently does not allow children with acquired immune deficiency syndrome to be taught in regular classrooms. "It would have an effect — and this is very important — provided there is a case in controversy. A parent or guardian of any child affected by New Haven's instructional policy interested in challenging that policy." While lacking force of statute or regulation, a policy carries more weight than a guideline in court, Aronson said. Several AIDS children in New Haven are being educated elsewhere in school. New Haven school Superintendent John Dow says his following state regulations on admitting children with AIDS — not AIDS education guidelines — in establishing the instructional policy. She said there is "very little controversy in the medical community about this issue."

Fading surplus shifts focus from tax cuts to spend limits

HARTFORD — With the expected budget surplus almost gone now, Republican legislative leaders say they may shift focus from tax cuts to spending limits. The policy is being challenged by a parent or guardian, but the city's Department of Health is on record opposing it. The Connecticut Civil Liberties Union has also warned New Haven that it may challenge in court the city's handling of students with AIDS. State AIDS education guidelines "have been very forthright for over three years in how to deal with this issue," Aronson said. "Students (with AIDS) should be educated in regular classrooms, barring special circumstances." Special treatment could be warranted for children with open sores, specific behavioral problems or special medical conditions, according to the guidelines. AIDS, which destroys the body's ability to ward off diseases and infections, is transmitted through intimate sexual contact and contaminated blood and blood products. Aronson said the educational guidelines were established after careful consultation with the state Department of Health Services and the state's medical community. She said there is "very little controversy in the medical community about this issue."

Yale union reduces list of demands

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Yale University's unionized workers have substantially reduced their demands for wages, child care and health benefits in hopes of reaching a contract agreement with the Ivy League school, union officials said. "Despite the latest union proposal, the university let pass an informal deadline of Tuesday for reaching agreement on new contracts for clerical and blue-collar workers," said Steve Fortes, vice president of Local 34 of the Federation of University Employees. Local 34 represents the university's clerical workers. Local 35 represents the service and maintenance workers. The latest proposal represents a $12.4 million reduction from the package the workers were originally seeking, Fortes said. University negotiators were pleased with proposal, but many issues must still be discussed, said Yale Secretary Sheila Wellington. "We think some progress has been made and we're pleased about it," she said. "It would have been extremely helpful to the process if this had happened earlier." Employees in both bargaining units will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Payne-Whitney Gymnasium at Yale to plan actions in response to a Tuesday deadline, union officials said. University officials have said they did not agree to the informal deadline. The current three-year contracts don't expire until Jan. 16, but the union had hoped to reach agreement well before then. More than 5,700 Yale students, faculty and other community members, plus 100 city business leaders, had signed cards supporting the Tuesday deadline for a settlement, said Lucille Dickess, president of Local 34. "The university seems to be by themselves in not taking the Dec. 1 deadline seriously," she said. The unions also plan a demonstration Friday outside Woodbridge Hall, where the Yale Corporation — the university's board of trustees — is scheduled to meet. Fifteen negotiating sessions have been held so far, Dickess said. Local 34 had been seeking wages increases of more than 21 percent over three years. The new proposal calls for wage increases of 7 percent in the first year and 3 percent in the second and third year. Local 35's request remains at 7.5 percent each year. Both unions are now proposing that workers pay $50 per child per week for day care, rather than have the university fully pay for child-care costs. The unions are also dropping demands that employee health insurance cover prescriptions, eyeglasses, hearing aids and chiropractors. "We're trying to make a sincere effort," said Michael Schoen, a member of Local 35 and an employee at the Yale Dining Hall.

Scholars surprised to discover prof wrote for pro-Nazi paper

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Humanities scholars were surprised to learn that a respected Yale University professor now dead wrote for a pro-Nazi, anti-Semitic Belgian newspaper in 1941-42, a Johns Hopkins University professor says. Yale Sterling Humanities Professor Paul de Man, who died at the age of 64 in 1983, wrote at least 100 articles for the newspaper Le Soir, research in Belgium has shown. "The articles" make a biographical puzzle, said Neil Hertz, professor of humanities at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., said Tuesday. "I wonder why he did this." Hertz, who is Jewish, said he knew de Man as a teacher and colleague for 25 years and that de Man never exhibited any anti-Semitic behavior in his presence. At least one of the de Man newspaper articles is labeled anti-Semitic by scholars. Appearing in the spring of 1941, it is titled "The Jews and Contemporary Literature." Next to it is a caricature of Jews who are wearing prayer shawls and praying that "Jehovah will confound the gentiles." Hertz said the article "accepts the premise that the Jews have a 'degenerating effect' on literature but then argues with it." De Man quit the Belgian newspaper in 1942. Some scholars told The New York Times that he may have been influenced by his uncle, Henri de Man, who was a minister in the collaborationist Belgian government trying to protect Belgian autonomy against Nazi domination. De Man took a publishing job in 1946 in Belgium and came to the United States in 1947. The newspaper articles were found by a Belgian graduate student, Orwin de Graet, who was researching a thesis on de Man. Hertz said in a telephone interview. The student brought the articles to the attention of his colleagues, Hertz said. They will be published in a special issue of the Oxford Literary Review next year along with comments from about 50 scholars who both support and oppose de Man's work, he said. Hertz, who is among de Man's supporters, said he believes the articles "will be unpleasant in the short run and people will wonder what it means."

Feds remain lax on bridge checks

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board says federal reviews of state bridge inspection programs must be improved to avoid disasters like the 1983 collapse of the Mianus River Bridge in Connecticut. James Burnett told a House subcommittee Tuesday that reviews by the Federal Highway Administration are "paper audits" that rarely include on-site observations of state inspectors. "Reviews by the Federal Highway Administration do little more than verify that state bridge inspection reports... are completed and that all the boxes are checked," Burnett said. The federal government, in its oversight role of state bridge inspections, "promises the public a whole lot more than it's delivering and more than it's doing," Burnett said. Burnett said lax state inspections and failure of the Federal Highway Administration to oversee those local programs led to the Mianus collapse that killed three motorists and the 1985 Chickasawogue Bridge collapse in Alabama. He said the problem also may have played a role in the April collapse of a bridge over the Schoharie Creek in upstate New York that killed 10. The agency, the engineer and the inspector must know the bridge, its history and its environment, and understand in detail what to look for in an inspection. Has this been the situation, the Mianus and Chickasawogue Bridges may well have collapsed," he said. Burnett said the House Public Works and Transportation subcommittee on investigations and oversight that the Federal Highway Administration has incorporated some safety board recommendations, but excluded others that he feels are critical to prevent bridge collapses. Rep. James L. Oberstar, D-Minn., chairman of the subcommittee, said he was "very surprised" that the administration did not include other board safety recommendations in its proposed rules changes. Oberstar said he organized the hearings to review bridge safety standards as the 20th anniversary of a milestone bridge accident approached. On Dec. 15, 1967, a bridge that carried motorists over the Ohio River between West Virginia and Ohio collapsed, killing nine and injuring 46. That accident triggered the establishment of a special committee to examine bridge safety nationwide. That resulted in the National Bridge Inspection Standards, the basis of today's bridge safety regulations. Burnett warned that without action, it is likely the number of major collapses will increase as bridges built during the boom of the 1950s and 1960s continue to decay. "The safety board is concerned about the collapse of three major bridges in less than four years," Burnett said. "We believe that these collapses suggest that the current bridge inspection program... needs improvement." Burnett said an administration proposal specifying certain inspection changes focuses on the number of inspections instead of their quality. "The quality, that is, the extent and detail of the inspections are of more concern to the safety board than their frequency," Burnett said. The chairman said the Mianus collapse occurred nine months after an inspection, and the Chickasawogue Bridge event down just three weeks after a survey. A cornerstone of the administration's proposal is to stretch from two years to four years the inspection interval for certain bridges. Burnett said while that may be acceptable for newer bridges and quantity than once every two years, depending on their age, design and environment. Burnett praised the Federal Highway Administration for setting a five-year minimum for underwater bridge inspections, but said the proposal lacks the safety board's recommendation for establishing inspection criteria.

ZBA should have sought noise advice

The Zoning Board of Appeals seems to have gotten itself into an acoustical bind Monday night, and some independent expert advice could have helped the members make a decision.

Developers of the Arbors at Hop Brook, a retirement complex on West Center Street, wanted to put air conditioners on the complex on the ground, which would require a variance, instead of on the roof, which would not.

The developers feel the air conditioners would not look good on the top of the building and would make noise that will disturb tenants on the top floor.

Three members of the ZBA voted to grant the variance, but two others voted against it. Because four favorable votes were needed for passage, the variance was denied.

Opposing members argued that the air conditioners at ground level would create noise that would disturb tenants of housing for the elderly at nearby Westhill Gardens, a reasonable complaint if the devices really are noisier on the ground than they are on the roof.

But ZBA Chairman Edward Hachadorian took the opposite view, saying the roof is a noisier location than the ground. And one member wondered if the developer should be required to use plantings to make some other provisions to deaden the sound from the machines.

It seems as though the answer the problem the ZBA was trying to solve lies not in the field of zoning regulation, but in the science of acoustics. It would be a shame if the two members of the ZBA who were concerned about the Westhill tenants made the wrong decision in their behalf. The matter could have been postponed until the ZBA had more technical advice.

Women legislators do well in Connecticut

Fifteen women legislators from Connecticut have found, after comparing notes with those from other states at a conference in California, there's no place like home.

The four-day session in a San Diego suburb was designed to prod elected legislators into climbing the leadership ladder, going for higher office, and helping to bring more women into the process.

It dawned on the Connecticut women before the conference was very old that their state could be a role model in those efforts.

Right there in their midst, for example, were two who had gone from state-level offices to that political mecca in Washington — U.S. Reps. Barbara Kennelly of Hartford and Nancy Johnson of New Britain.

"It's important that women go for leadership positions," said Johnson, supporting the message of the San Diego pow-wow. And, after three terms in Washington, she said "We need more women in Congress."

Rep. Janet Polinsky of Waterford, who prefers to talk simply about doing a job well rather than making it a gender thing, concedes however that working their way into ranking positions is one way women can gain power in the legislature. She should know. Now in her sixth term, Polinsky co-chairs the budget-writing Appropriations Committee, one of the most powerful bases at the State Capitol.

Connecticut ties Washington state for the high number of committee chairmanships held by women: 10 each.

That is three more than this legislature had 10 years ago. In 1977, the Senate had one assistant

Standouts in the debate

By Evans Witt

WASHINGTON — The longest of shots, Bruce Babbitt stood up, stood out and stood alone in the Democratic field amid the barbs and volleys of a mix-and-match presidential debate. Then, when the cast on the Kennedy Center stage rotated, George Bush still held the role of Republican leading man for 1988. For two hours Tuesday night, the NBC News debate flip-flopped back and forth between each party's six-pack of White House hopefuls and between domestic and foreign policy.

When prime time elapsed, the Democratic race was a closer and more confused contest. But the lines in the Republican battle were still clearly drawn.

As Babbitt shined, the erstwhile leaders of the Democratic pack might have wished to be somewhere else, instead of on that stage in front of millions of American voters.

Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois was savaged on his economic plans; they were called "Reaganomics with a bow-tie" and "promise as you go" policies.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis merely repeated parts of his campaign speeches, seeming to take part only barely in the back-and-forth among his opponents that was reshaping the direction of the race for the Democratic nomination.

Jesse Jackson, taking a break from the bloody succession battle for the Chicago mayor's chair, got off a few sharp lines, but broke no new ground.

Simon and Dukakis are on top in Iowa polls, where the first caucuses will be held, while Dukakis is far ahead in New Hampshire, home of the first 1988 primary. Jackson leads in the national polls.

For Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, who had seemed to be building some momentum, the distinctions he had tried to draw with his opponents on defense matters seemed to blur.

But it was Babbitt who made his mark most clearly.

And he did on the issue that most Democrats consider political death — raising taxes.

"I just heard a lot of flim-flam from Senator Simon and Representative (Richard) Gephardt. We've been through 11 or 12 debates and that's what we've heard. It's time to step up to this budget deficit and to say straight what the American people know. ... It's time to acknowledge that we must raise taxes.

"And I'm going to stand up and say —

And he stood, towering over the five other hopefuls who remained seated in their leather chairs.

When it's time to face the truth about these issues, to say we can balance the budget only by cutting and means-testing expenditures and entitlements and by raising taxes," Babbitt continued. "I challenge these candidates to stand up and acknowledge the truth of that."

No one stood.

"You see, I kind of expected that. There aren't a lot of profiles in courage here tonight," he added.

Then Gephardt of Missouri jumped up, to equal Babbitt at least in posture. But the Arizona politician wouldn't budge.

"He's standing up for an oil import fee," Babbitt said, nailing Gephardt on a position that is unpopular in New Hampshire.

Babbitt has been pushing a 5 percent national sales tax to help slash the deficit, a proposal that draws nothing but criticism from other party hopefuls. They remember 1984 nominee Walter Mondale's tax-raising pledge as helping push the doomed candidacy to a landslide defeat.

Babbitt's performance in all the more impressive in light of his poor showing in the first televised debate in 1987, a "Firing Line" confrontation in July broadcast by the Public Broadcasting Service. But this December night's work was seen by perhaps 25 million Americans, far more than the PBS show.

If anyone did get a share of the spotlight, it was Gephardt, whose campaign had been stalled in

CIA has tips about sex and the single spy

WASHINGTON — Pillow talk can be expensive: It can cost you your life, the CIA has warned its secret agents around the world. The danger, of course, is AIDS.

The problem is that, unlike officials of other, less devious agencies, the CIA brass hats can't take the straight-arrow approach and urge their spies: "Just say no." The CIA is well aware that an undercover agent is sometimes exactly that, extracting information from susceptible, seducible targets who get carried away in the passion of the moment.

Even the KGB's notorious Delihans must be growing a little nervous these days as the AIDS epidemic spreads inexorably throughout areas of East-West confrontation. They are surely aware that their next conquest in the service of the Kremlin could turn out to be a suicidal dalliance.

Faced with this mission-vs.-miele dilemma, the CIA's Office of Medical Services has come down on the side of protection — but without coming right out and saying so.

"AIDS is 100 percent preventable," secret agents and other employees were assured in a bulletin issued in June. "Scientists who study the transmission of disease point out that the pattern of HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus, the current name for the virus) dissemination has been well investigated, and the virus relies entirely on sexual contact, parenteral infusion or perinatal circumstances. Were it otherwise, the types of patients seen would be different."

So, the CIA medical bulletin explained, "while an AIDS vaccine or a disease cure is not yet a reality, preventive measures are very effective."

The bulletin then proceeded to offer seven specific precautions that agents can take to protect themselves from the deadly virus. How the suggested measures will complicate any particular espionage caper is a problem that the medics don't go into.

The first rule: "Do not participate in unprotected vaginal intercourse unless it is within a stable relationship; otherwise use condoms and spermicide." But this could easily rob the bouddic opportunity of the very spontaneity that has disarmed the quarry.

Second: "Avoid any intercourse with high-risk individuals or individuals from high-risk areas of the world." Following this sensible precaution would place Africa and most of Europe off limits, as well as rule out gay men and intravenous drug users, historically among those deemed susceptible to romantic overtures and/or blackmail.

Third: "Do not accept any transfusion of blood or any blood product that has not been screened for AIDS." That's a fine if the agent needs a pint of blood in Switzerland, but not if he's in a primitive Third World clinic where the doctors have neither the equipment nor the know-how to test for AIDS antibodies in the blood.

Fourth: "Do not accept any treatment involving a needle or injection unless you are certain the facility uses sterile disposable needles." Again, this is a bit unrealistic in many parts of the world — including Eastern Europe — where CIA agents operate.

Fifth: "Avoid unprotected sexual intercourse" and sixth: "Be aware that oral-genital contact carries a risk of transmission" offer no special obstacles to the clever spy, while Rule No. 7 is merely common sense:

"In a situation where a potential sex partner may be infected, assume they are. A test for HIV antibody may be negative because the partner has not yet developed the antibody. In fact, there are rare infested individuals who are incapable of making the antibody at any time."

In short, the CIA bulletin warns: "Know your partner."

Well, of course, in the espionage game the whole idea is to get to know your target well. But asking a potential paramour to take a test for the AIDS virus may not be a secret agent's most productive follow-up to "What's your sign?"

Mini-editorial

The White House science adviser, of all people, offered the jocular suggestion that American kids be taught about nothing but law until they finish high school. This, he explained, would make them so sick of legal studies that they'd turn to science and math in college, and there would be fewer lawyers to make trouble. This is less significant as a demonstration of engineers' sense of humor — we already knew about that — than as a measure of how low the status of lawyers has fallen in Washington, when an engineer, even one with White House connections, dares to poke fun at them.

Rep. Mary Fritz of Wallingford says a legislator from one of those states told Rep. Nancy Wyman of Tolland, "You are eight years ahead on education-related programs which Connecticut has put in place."

"We're ahead of many states," said Rep. Barbara Ireland of Ridgefield in a post-San Diego comment that could cover the political status of women here as well as the performance of the legislature.

Women are advancing, too, at town and city level in Connecticut. After local elections last month, women held the office of mayor or first selectman in 30 towns — more than double the number of 10 years ago.

Three who were in office that far back are still on the job. They are First Selectwoman Barbara Maynard of Old Saybrook, Mary Ann Guller of Redding and Charlotte Ruff of Salisbury.

The San Diego conference, sponsored by the Eagleton Institute at Rutgers University, drew mixed reaction to its emphasis on so-called "women's issues." Fritz said it should have been a conference addressing important issues minus the gender tag. She said the women had no such hang-up in their informal conversations between sessions or at meals.

But one thing was sure out there: Connecticut's legislators were on top of whatever subject was on the floor of its many workshops. "Janet (Polinsky) could have led the one on budgets," said Ireland.

And the crew from this state came home satisfied that women here are doing as well as or better than their counterparts anywhere in the nation.

U.S./World In Brief

U.S. gets Soviet missile data today

WASHINGTON — The United States now expects that the Soviet Union will turn over by day's end data required to close a nuclear-missile agreement at next week's summit meeting, the chief U.S. arms negotiator said today.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday that the Soviet Union has failed to turn over all the information required to wrap up the agreement.

Seeking to defuse the dispute, the negotiator, Max M. Kampelman, said in a U.S. Information Agency telecast to Europe, "We now understand we will get it today."

Kampelman said, "I don't look at it as a major problem." In fact, he said, "there is no controversy."

Contra-aid fight may be delayed

WASHINGTON — A GOP congressman who supports U.S. aid to the Contras said today that the House fight for more assistance may be postponed, while a Democratic opponent said backers of the aid are short on votes.

"We think it would be tragic if we abandon support for the Contras..." said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill. "But tactically and politically, we're not sure that the House is the place to make this fight tomorrow."

Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., interviewed along with Hyde on CBS-TV's "This Morning" program, said "the only reason they're not asking for aid is that they haven't got the votes."

Coelho said it was a time when Central American cease-fire talks are under way.

Quick vote pledged on tax hikes

WASHINGTON — The Democratic chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee today pledged swift action as the panel drafts tax increases to help achieve $76 billion in deficit cuts over two years.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, is urging the committee to drop more than a third of the tax increases in its deficit-reduction package, including a boost in the payroll tax on $ million workers.

Both Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the chairman, and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the ranking minority member, said they wished White House and congressional negotiators had requested bigger reductions in the federal budget's red ink.

Union demands Haiti leader resign

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The nation's largest labor union and a leading presidential candidate demanded today that Jean-Claude Duvalier step down immediately, vowing to boycott any elections organized by the ruling junta.

The candidate, Sylvio Claude, said he would call for "total civil disobedience" if Gen. Henri Namphy, who heads the three-man provisional government, does not cede power.

Namphy dissolved the Electoral Council after fierce voter-targeted violence Sunday forced the independent body to cancel what would have been Haiti's first free elections in 30 years.

He said he intends to hold the elections and turn over power on Feb. 7, 1988, the second anniversary of the flight of dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier.

Soviet TV censors Gorbachev

MOSCOW — Soviet television altered a question asked of Mikhail S. Gorbachev about his wife, Raisa, and censored one of his replies, but broadcast in full his statements in the NBC News interview on touchy topics such as Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

The exchange between the Soviet leader and NBC anchorman Tom Brokaw about Mrs. Gorbachev took just a brief part of the private, hour-long interview taped Saturday at the Kremlin and broadcast in full in the United States.

The fact that one question on Mrs. Gorbachev was altered and a second question and answer on her were deleted when the interview was broadcast Tuesday night in the Soviet Union indicates how sensitive her role is in Soviet society.

Progress reported in ending siege

ATLANTA — Federal officials and a private attorney worked today to clarify terms of an emerging agreement with 108 Cuban detainees held at a federal prison, but they refused to speculate how long it might take to end the siege.

The release of one hostage Tuesday night did not signal an imminent resolution, negotiators said.

"The tone of our contacts with the detainee representatives continues to be very positive and constructive," said Patrick Korten, deputy director of public affairs for the Justice Department.

"It appears there is a sincere desire inside to move toward a settlement of this incident, although it is important to understand that such a settlement is not imminent and there is no way to predict how long it will take," he said.

Lasers watch chemical creation

PASADENA, Calif. — Scientists say they have used laser beams to watch chemical molecules the instant they were created, an unprecedented step in understanding how chemicals react and produce other substances.

"For the first time, we can actually observe the birth of new molecules," which contain atoms of chemical elements, said chemist Richard Bernstein of the University of California, Los Angeles.

"We can observe the formation of a new chemical bond as it is actually being formed on a time scale of one-millionth of a ten-millionth of a second," he added. "We've never been able to observe it before. It's a milestone."

Amerasian girl overcomes stigma

PHILADELPHIA — A 7-year-old Korean girl fathered by a black American soldier bore the stigma of being a "mixed blood" in her native land.

Abandoned by her father, ridiculed in school, beaten by her relatives and suffering from malnutrition, Jennifer Marie Yoo was sent by her mother last year to live with a foster family in suburban Philadelphia.

Now the dark-skinned, curly-haired girl from Go-Chain, South Korea, is learning English, meeting new friends, corresponding with her mother and pressing for change in the way the U.S. government treats Amerasians.

Jennifer is the representative of a letter-writing campaign directed by the Pearl S. Buck Foundation to liberalize immigration policies to allow more of an estimated 75,000 to 100,000 Amerasian children to enter the United States.

Seoul blames North for jet loss

SEOUL, South Korea — President Chun Doo-hwan said today indications are growing that communist North Korea may have sabotaged a missing South Korean airliner to disrupt elections and the 1988 Olympics here.

The jet with 116 people aboard disappeared Sunday over Burma and officials in Seoul say there are strong suspicions a bomb destroyed the aircraft.

"It is a plain fact that North Korea has intensified its provocative moves to obstruct the upcoming presidential election and the Seoul Olympics," Chun told a special Cabinet meeting in Seoul.

On Tuesday, a mysterious Asian couple took poison pills just before being questioned in Bahrain about the jetliner, which they had left shortly before it disappeared. The man died and the woman was in critical condition.

Veteran alderman to lead Chicago

A tired Eugene Sawyer addresses Chicago's City Council after being sworn in early today to succeed the late Mayor Harold Washington. He is flanked by his brothers John, left, and Ernest.

CHICAGO (AP) — Eugene Sawyer, Chicago's longest serving black alderman, was elected acting mayor early today after a night of City Council wrangling and with the help of white aldermen who once had vigorously opposed his predecessor, Harold Washington, the city's first black mayor.

The vote — 28-19 — came at 4 a.m. Sawyer, who has ties to the regular Democratic organization, sat quietly in the council chamber as aldermen wrangled throughout the night over whether he or Tim Evans, another black alderman and Washington's former floor leader should be elected to lead the nation's third-largest city until there is a special election, expected in 1989.

Sawyer and Evans shook hands afterward. But motions to make it unanimous drew shouts of "No!" from Evans supporters.

The meeting, which began 9:30 p.m., Tuesday, became bogged down by procedural arguments, courtroom maneuvering, and an angry but peaceful demonstration by thousands outside City Hall.

After rejecting repeated motions to adjourn about midnight, the aldermen began a marathon debate of the qualifications of Sawyer and Evans.

Sawyer, 54, was scorned by most of the estimated 5,000 people who jammed City Hall corridors and the streets of LaSalle Street during rush-hour Tuesday.

The council didn't begin seriously moving toward electing a successor until about 1:30 a.m. when suddenly a heart attack took Sawyer away at age 55, until after the crowd had dwindled to about 1,000.

Evans used one procedural move after another as they tried until Friday, giving their candidate more time to gather support.

With his family and interim mayor David Orr standing near, Sawyer took the oath of office in the council chambers, and then promised to carry on Washington's policies.

He defended himself against charges that he was tied to old-line machine politics.

"You have heard questions about Bush said, 'I happen to have read the treaty... I've read it and I believe it's good.'"

"I've never let the president down yet," responded Dole. "But I have a right to read and study."

Former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Rep. Jack Kemp and other House members also spoke in support of the treaty.

The final two segments were devoted to domestic issues and causing despair in others.

Those selected were Boeing Aerospace of Huntsville, Ala.; McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Co. of Huntington Beach, Calif.; General Electric Co. of Rockville, Md.; and East Windsor, N.J., and Rocketdyne Division of Rockwell International of Canoga Park, Calif.

At stake in the competition were NASA contracts that eventually could be valued at $5 billion.

The work is expected to create at least 12,000 jobs directly and thousands more indirectly.

The contracts will last 10 years and cover the entire next generation of NASA's space efforts.

They will give the winning company valuable experience for U.S. space projects in the next century.

"NASA Administrator James Fletcher said the orbiting station, expected to be completed in the mid-1990s, is essential for any future U.S. attempt to mount a manned expedition to Mars."

Hamilton Standard also hopes to participate in another phase of the space station known as Work Package 1.

Boeing Aerospace of Huntsville, Ala., won the main contract for Work Package 1, and Hamilton Standard supported that company's proposal.

Work Package 1 requires the design and construction of three pressurized modules for laboratories, living quarters and supplies. UTC said Hamilton Standard will compete for Work Package 2.

Hamilton Standard said it will supply life support systems and environmental control systems.

Tobacco man admits smoke, disease links

BOSTON (AP) — A federal health official said today that a representative of a major tobacco company admitted to him that smoking is related to cancer, lung and heart disease, then asked not to be quoted.

The admission could substantially improve the chances of lawsuits against tobacco manufacturers, said an anti-smoking group, the Tobacco Products Liability Project at Northeastern University Law School.

Dr. Ronald M. Davis, director of the Office of Smoking and Health of the national Centers for Disease Control, wrote in a memo that Peter Hutt, an attorney for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., "surprised" him when he acknowledged that the "three major health problems related to smoking were cancer, chronic lung disease and heart disease."

Hutt, the former Food and Drug Administration general counsel, "is effect asked not to be quoted as saying that smoking was hazardous to health and that there is no scientific proof linking smoking to heart disease, lung disease or cancer."

The tobacco industry has long denied the link between smoking and health problems, but that he was not expressing the opinion of the tobacco company.

Hutt said that when he mentioned the link between smoking and health problems, he prefaced his remarks by stating that "critics of cigarettes" associated smoking with health problems, but that he was not expressing the opinion of the tobacco company.

Four firms have major role in America's space program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four companies that won the competition for building parts of the U.S. space station are virtually assured of major roles in America's space program for the next decade, and perhaps far beyond.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced the four winners Tuesday, setting off celebrations in some cities and causing despair in others.

Those selected were Boeing Aerospace of Huntsville, Ala.; McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Co. of Huntington Beach, Calif.; General Electric Co. of Rockville, Md.; and East Windsor, N.J., and Rocketdyne Division of Rockwell International of Canoga Park, Calif.

Nest egg of CDs good for retirees

QUESTION: My daughter just reached 62 and started receiving Social Security checks of about $250 a month. Her husband is also retired and they have no need for the Social Security checks. She is thinking about putting that money in a joint savings account with her husband and obtaining a $500 certificate of deposit every two months to provide a nice nest egg for their later years.

ANSWER: It's a good one, showing common sense. Everyone who has income not presently needed should tuck it away. Getting with CDs is a logical move, because that nest egg will be safe. Unless they have extra wealth you didn't mention in your letter, your daughter and her husband are in no condition to take on any financial risks.

As I write this, it's possible to get yields approaching 8.5 percent on 30-month CDs and better than 8 percent on five-year CDs at some federally insured banks and savings and loan associations.

By sticking to the plan of obtaining CDs on a steady basis, your daughter and her spouse will have a bundle for their golden years. Assuming an 8 percent yield, $500 invested every two months will grow to approximately $46,400 in 10 years.

QUESTION: A stock I own was previously traded on the New York Stock Exchange but has been "delisted." Is there any way I can sell this stock and have the proceeds from the sale — if that stock is traded in any market.

ANSWER: You can sell the stock and establish your capital loss — the difference between your cost and the proceeds from the sale — if that stock is traded in any market.

Most likely, your stock is traded in the over-the-counter market, as is usually the case with stocks delisted from the New York and other exchanges.

Check with your broker, to find out if there is a market for it, and if so, put in a sell order.

ANSWER: There is no overall safety rating system for all IRAs, for the simple reason there are so many different types of IRAs — at banks, S&Ls, credit unions, brokerages, mutual funds and insurance companies.

Fortunate folks such as your husband who receive huge lump sum distributions from retirement plans often split the money among more than one IRA. That can be done with a rollover IRA.

If you choose banks, S&Ls and/or credit unions for what clearly is the tremendously large amount your husband is going to receive and want absolute safety, put less than $100,000 into each federally insured

South Windsor Town Manager Richard J. Sartor said today that he also wasn't aware that LeDuc was in the area, and no meetings were scheduled between Homart and South Windsor officials.

She said that Homart has also been meeting with other developers of the mall site, including Metwin Simon Associates of Indianapolis and Bronson & Hutensky of Hartford.

LARRY FLYNT created ad parody

JERRY FALWELL he isn't laughing

Evangelist, sex publisher face each other in court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two men from differing worlds — the Rev. Jerry Falwell and sex magazine publisher Larry Flynt — face each other in the Supreme Court as it studies a key free-press controversy they sparked.

Court sources said both Falwell and Flynt had indicated they would attend today's arguments in the case.

The last time Flynt attended such a session, in 1983, he was forcibly removed from the justices' presence and arrested for shouting obscenities.

The court's decision, expected sometime by July, could yield important new guidelines on the legal protection afforded satire and parody. The case is being watched closely by many in the news business, especially editorial cartoonists and commentators.

Falwell's lawsuit arose out of a full-page "ad parody" that appeared in the November 1983 and March 1984 issues of Hustler.

The advertisement, with a photograph of Falwell, purportedly quotes him discussing a sexual encounter with his mother and describing himself as a habitual drunkard.

At the bottom of the page in small print readers are told that the ad is a parody "not to be taken seriously."

Finding the bogus ad no laughing matter, Falwell sued Flynt and Hustler for $45 million. He accused them of libel, invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

A federal jury in Roanoke, Va., in late 1984 ruled that the ad did not libel Falwell, and the presiding judge threw out the invasion-of-privacy allegation.

But the jury ruled for Falwell on his allegation of emotional distress.

Board pushes for fire study

ble until the year 2000. The cost of refurbishment includes replacing the body with a stainless steel one.

Funding for purchases and repairs could come from either the capital reserve fund for the fire department or from past surpluses in the department's budget. Money set aside over the past four or five years in the reserve fund now totals about $180,000, while the surplus is just over $500,000.

The report recommends that a 1959 and a 1964 pumper should be traded in or sold.

Rivosa said the fire department is increasingly spending money to update old equipment because of the high cost of replacement.

"You're going to be looking at $200,000 vehicles, and that's what we're looking at today," he said.

Unless the town decides to adopt a second paramedic unit, there is no need to purchase a new paramedic vehicle, Rivosa said. He said that the vehicle now in service is large enough to carry the "Jaws of Life" extrication tool, while a smaller vehicle proposed by Tedford would be too small.

The smaller unit, however, would presumably be faster and more maneuverable. The establishment of a second paramedic unit is recommended in a draft report of the Regional Paramedic Study Committee for Manchester, South Windsor and East Hartford.

The report, prepared by town Health Director Ronald Kraatz, says that the town should start a shared paramedic service with the town of South Windsor while providing backup service to East Hartford. That unit would be located in the Buckland area.

Kraatz told the Board of Directors Tuesday that the cost of shared service would be about $215,000 per year, while a second unit paid for by Manchester alone would cost $20,000. A third alternative, having a second unit staffed by four current firefighters, would cost $270,000.

Kraatz told the board that it has not been determined yet whether South Windsor would be willing to go ahead with a shared paramedic unit.

Rivosa spoke against the idea of staffing the second unit with current firefighters, arguing that such a move would hurt the town's fire protection capabilities.

Kraatz presented additional information Tuesday night showing that the number of paramedic runs would grow from the 2,000 estimated for this year to 3,161 in 1997. At present, the town's one unit is not available to respond to a call 7.5 percent of peak demand time. That figure would grow to more than 25 percent by 1997, Kraatz said.

Director Ronald Osella questioned the accuracy of Kraatz's projections, noting that the population in Manchester is expected to grow by only 4 percent in 10 years.

Kraatz said that his projections for demand are based on increased commercial development in the north end of town. Osella said the town should consider a second unit to serve the south end because of increased residential growth in that part of town.

have to change when you get into reality."

School board Chairman Richard W. Dyer said today he, too, supported reopening the school.

"I'm definitely in favor, at this juncture, of reopening Highland Park," Dyer said. "I feel it's the most logical choice."

Among the other possibilities discussed by the committee are adding a wing to the Martin School at a cost of about $1 million, and purchasing modular classrooms. The classrooms, which could hold up to 25 students, cost about $75,000 each, Kennedy has stated.

Both Kennedy and Anne J. Gavin, committee chairman, said the possibility of adding modular classrooms at other schools was still alive. Kennedy said the recommendation will be not to add a wing to Martin School.

The possibility of adding modular classrooms at other schools is still alive because Highland Park may not address all elementary school space needs, Gavin said. Because the school is in the eastern section of town, the reopening may not address the space needs of the southern and western portions of town, she said.

The committee will meet on Dec. 14 to discuss the addition of modular classrooms in addition to the proposed reopening of Highland Park, Dyer said.

Many said they weren't fearful of a crash.

Li, director of the Laboratory of Molecular Endocrinology at UCSF since 1983, was among the first to isolate and purify eight of the nine hormones produced by the pituitary gland. He also isolated and uncovered the structure of a protein he named beta-endorphin, a natural pain killer found in the brain.

BAKE AHEAD

For A Less Hectic Holiday Season

The days are getting shorter, the air crisper and winter is fast approaching. In no time at all, the holiday season will be upon us, bringing with it the fast-paced flurry that comes with the excitement of holiday shopping and entertaining.

Before you become "undone" by your "to do" list, set aside an afternoon now for holiday baking. Even the busiest people can enjoy the tastes of a traditional holiday season by preparing ahead of time. There's no time like the present to begin baking the mouth-watering treats that family and friends associate with holiday tradition.

Make extra-productive use of baking time, too, by updating your holiday card lists, stamping envelopes and wrapping gifts while your cakes are in the oven.

The following recipes can be prepared months in advance and, with proper wrapping for storage, can be refrigerated or frozen until you're ready to serve them. Several of the recipes yield two delicious cakes: one for your family, the other, wrapped in pretty foil and a festive ribbon, is perfect for a homemade holiday gift.

All the recipes are variations of traditional holiday cakes—the time-honored baked bonanza of fresh nuts, flavors and spices and glaze (also known as candied) fruit—but with a new and exciting twist for contemporary appeal.

Remember, the best fruitcakes are made well ahead of the holiday season and allowed to mellow with age. Be sure to get yours baked soon, so you can enjoy these traditional homemade tastes from Thanksgiving through the New Year!

Overnight guests will be impressed with the Confetti Cake set before them on the brunch or breakfast table. Red and green glaze cherries and orange peel are a sweet surprise in this light cake recipe. It's delicious, warmed or toasted and slathered with butter, on a blustery morning. Or, it's an appropriate "anytime" snack cake throughout the season.

Chocolate lovers will delight in the delicious Cherry Brownie Cake. Sweetened with cocoa and chocolate chips, this holiday treat is a favorite with "kids from one to ninety-two."

For real tradition, live things up with the Irish Holiday Fruitcake—baked in a bundt pan and filled to the brim with a wonderful combination of flavor-filled ingredients and homemade care.

With a little advance planning, the baking tradition can be a part of everyone's holiday. Start preparing ahead of time. And when the holidays roll around—sit back and enjoy!

Ease into a hassle-free holiday season by preparing ahead of time. Treat your holiday guests to this delicious Mosaic Cake of dried fruit, walnuts and glaze cherries and pineapple.

Mosaic Cake

1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
1 cup (8 ounces) glaze diced fruit and peel
1/2 cup (4 ounces) glaze whole red cherries, cut into halves
1 cup (8 ounces) glaze whole green cherries
1/2 cup (4 ounces) glaze whole orange peel
1/2 cup (4 ounces) glaze colored pineapple, diced or wedges
1 cup coarsely chopped pecans
3/4 to 1 cup orange marmalade, heated (optional)

Cream butter, sugar and vanilla in large mixer bowl. Beat in eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix in combined flour, baking powder and salt. Mix in glaze fruit and pecans. Spread mixture in greased 12-cup or two greased 6-cup fluted cake pans, or 2 greased 8 1/2 x 4 1/2 x 2 1/2-inch loaf pans.

Bake in preheated oven at 350 degrees until toothpick inserted in center of cake comes out clean, 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 hours; cover cake loosely with aluminum foil during last 30 minutes of baking to prevent overbrowning. Cool in pan on wire rack 20 to 30 minutes; invert onto wire rack and cool completely. Optional: Brush cake with warm marmalade before serving. Serve cake warm or at room temperature.

If desired, cooled unglazed cake can be wrapped in plastic wrap and aluminum foil and refrigerated or frozen up to 2 months. Makes 1 large or 2 small cakes.

Cherry Brownie Cake

1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
3/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
1-2/3 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
1 cup (8 ounces) glaze colored pineapple, diced or wedges
1/2 cup (4 ounces) glaze whole red cherries
1/2 cup (4 ounces) glaze whole green cherries
3/4 cup semi-sweet chocolate morsels
3/4 cup coarsely chopped pecans
Powdered sugar (optional)

Line bottom and long sides of 9 x 5 x 3-inch loaf pan with three 2-inch wide strips of aluminum foil, allowing foil to extend about 1 inch above ends of pan; grease foil and sides of pan.

Cream butter, sugar and vanilla in medium mixer bowl. Beat in eggs, one at a time (mixture will look curdled). Mix in combined flour, cocoa, baking powder and salt alternately with milk, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Stir in glaze fruits, chocolate morsels and pecans. Spread batter evenly in prepared pan.

Place shallow pan of hot water on bottom rack of oven. Place loaf pan on rack in center of oven; cover top of pan loosely with piece of tented aluminum foil. Bake in preheated oven at 300 degrees until toothpick inserted in center of cake comes out clean and cake begins to draw away from sides of pan, about 2 1/4 hours. Cool cake in pan on wire rack. Loosen cake from sides of pan; invert onto wire rack and cool completely. Slide cake onto serving platter and decorate with powdered sugar or glaze, if desired. Or wrap cake in plastic wrap and aluminum foil and refrigerate or freeze up to 2 months. Makes 1 cake.

Irish Holiday Fruitcake

1/3 cup bourbon or orange juice
1-1/2 cups (12 ounces) glaze diced fruit and peel
1-1/2 cups (12 ounces) glaze colored pineapple, diced or wedges
1 cup (8 ounces) glaze whole red cherries
1 cup (8 ounces) glaze whole green cherries
1 cup (8 ounces) pitted dates, coarsely chopped
1 cup (8 ounces) dried apples, coarsely chopped
2 cups dark raisins or currants
1 cup slivered almonds
1 cup walnut halves
1-3/4 cups all-purpose flour
3/4 cup granulated sugar
3/4 cup packed light brown sugar
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
5 eggs
2 tablespoons dark molasses
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon baking soda

Pour bourbon or orange juice over combined fruits and nuts in large bowl; let stand 2 to 3 hours, stirring occasionally. Measure remaining ingredients into a large mixer bowl. Beat at low speed until blended; beat at high speed 3 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in fruit mixture. Spread mixture evenly in greased 12-cup fluted or angel cake pan, or 2 greased 6-cup fluted cake pans. Press mixture firmly into pan.

Bake in preheated oven at 275 degrees until toothpick inserted in center of cake comes out clean, 3 to 3 1/2 hours. Cool in pan on wire rack 20 minutes; invert onto wire rack and cool completely. Slide cake onto serving platter, or wrap in plastic wrap and aluminum foil, and refrigerate or freeze up to 3 months. Makes 1 large or 2 small cakes.

Supermarket Shopper

She's too late for double offer

By Martin Stone
United Feature Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: Best Foods added a $5 refund offer to its company said it would double if a consumer mailed it in by Feb. 28. I sent my refund request before the last mail pickup on the 28th, but several weeks later I received a check for only $5.

I sent a letter of complaint to Best Foods' consumer-satisfaction department and asked for the additional $5. But the company did not reply. So I wrote to the president of Best Foods to explain my problem. A few weeks later, the consumer-satisfaction department sent me a copy of my original envelope and it showed a postmark of March 2. I don't understand how this happened. The people at my local post office had no explanation.

DEAR MARTIN: I know you feel you are entitled to the additional $5, but the company did not reply. So I wrote to the president of Best Foods to explain my problem. A few weeks later, the consumer-satisfaction department sent me a copy of my original envelope and it showed a postmark of March 2. I don't understand how this happened. The people at my local post office had no explanation.

DEAR MARTIN: I just had an eye-opening experience which alerted me to the fact that, now more than ever, the weight on packages must be checked and weighed.

It started when I cut a 50-cent coupon for Oxydol out of the newspaper. The coupon was good for several different product sizes, and it noted the weight of each size.

When I got to the supermarket to redeem it, I carried a calculator. But the packages didn't match — they were lower than those listed on the coupon.

For example, the king-size Oxydol that used to weigh more than 5 pounds, now weighs a little more than 4 pounds.

When I carry a calculator, I notice that manufacturers are reducing the weights or sizes of their products without lowering the price!

I am an alert shopper, and I wonder how many others have noticed this. Now when I go shopping I carry a calculator. But the packages didn't match — they were lower than those listed on the coupon.

Microwave stuffed peppers

3 large green peppers
1 medium onion, chopped (1/2 cup)
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 cup onion tomatoes, cut up
1/2 cup sliced pitted ripe olives

Arrange peppers lengthwise. Discard seeds and membranes. Arrange peppers, cut side up, in a 12-by-7-by-2-inch microwave-safe dish. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Micro-cook on 100 percent power (high) 4 to 5 minutes or until just crisp-tender. Drain. Season with salt. Set aside.

In a 2-quart microwave-safe casserole cook beef, onion and garlic, uncovered, on high 4 to 5 minutes or until done, stirring twice to break up meat. Drain. Stir in undrained tomatoes, olives, tomato paste, chili powder, sugar and salt. Stir in rice cereal. Spoon meat mixture into pepper halves.

Wrap pepper halves singly in moisture- and vapor-proof wrap. Seal, label and freeze for up to 2 months. To heat, unwrap a pepper half and place in microwave-safe individual casserole. Cover with vented microwave-safe plastic wrap. Cook on 70 percent power (medium-high) 4 minutes. Uncover. Cook on 50 percent power (medium) 5 to 7 minutes or until heated through, giving dish a half-turn once. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon shredded cheese. Cook on medium 30 to 60 seconds. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes. Serves 6.

Plugging up the holes
 By James Jacoby

Here's a deal where there are so many holes in your side-outs that you might think you're cutting a slice of Swiss cheese when you try to play the hand. So how do you slice it? It's simple: Look first for a way to make the contract if you can catch a key card in the right place.

So win the first trump in dummy and immediately lead a low heart up to your queen. If the heart king is with East, you will immediately set up a discard for your losing club, and it will not matter if you have to lose two diamonds. But East plays low and West captures your queen with the king. West should now return a heart. Don't think of putting in the 10. That will only place you in the position of need.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Alibrio and Talbot lethal East weapons

Jason Talbot has the ball tucked under his arm while teammate Aaron Alibrio (20) applies a clearing block in their game against Notre Dame. The good friends are a lethal combination in the East Catholic wishbone. Talbot has scored 12 TDs and Alibrio 13. The pair will lead East against Darien High in their state Class M championship game Friday night in Waterbury.

By Jim Tierney
 Manchester Herald

Much of the success incurred by the East Catholic High football team, the No. 1 ranked team in Connecticut, this year has centered on its two synchronized halfback workhorses — senior co-captains Aaron Alibrio and senior Jason Talbot.

The lethal combination of Alibrio and Talbot has been the guiding force behind the Eagles' perfect 10-0 season and will lead them into the Class M state championship game against Darien High School (10-1) Friday night at 7:30 at Municipal Stadium in Waterbury.

The dynamic duo was heard from in last year's Class MM state championship game when East whipped Masuk High, 42-3. Alibrio rushed for 150 yards on 16 carries, including a 77-yard touchdown. Talbot gained 77 yards on 15 carries with one TD.

This year, the 5-foot-9, 175-pound Alibrio has rushed for 854 yards on 105 carries (8.5 average) and has scored 13 TDs and five two-point conversions. His other half, Talbot, has gained 967 yards on 105 carries and has scored 12 TDs and 10 two-point conversions.

Originally at odds when they each entered East as freshmen, Alibrio and Talbot have become good friends during the past three years. Eagle Coach Jude Kelly attributes that fact to their effectiveness as a tandem.

"I think the most special thing about the duo of them is the camaraderie they have developed on and off the field," Kelly said. "I think they work together well. They push each other in practice. They're just good friends. They're unselfish."

"I think probably their greatest asset is the block for each other so well. In our offense, our backs know that the No. 1 criterion that they're being evaluated on is their blocking. We put a major emphasis on that with our backs. Both of those fellows take a great deal of pride in blocking to make up for lack of size."

Kelly continued by relating a story from a key game this season in a critical fourth-and-one situation in which he went out to the huddle with his club. "As it turned out the ball was going to go to Alibrio with Talbot blocking. When I said the number for the play, all I could hear was Talbot saying 'Yeah, that's it. All right, let's go Aaron.'"

"Just that confidence and pride that he (Talbot) was going to do the blocking for his friend to make the critical first down. It was a tremendous feeling for a coach."

What has been the key to the great success shared by Talbot and Alibrio? "Probably just knowing what I'm supposed to do," Talbot said. "If you have no doubts about what you're supposed to do then you're going to do your job. I think a lot of it (his success) is due to the line and my lead blocker. Aaron and I are always in competition blocking. The line, they just blow people off."

Talbot reflected on the camaraderie factor between the two. "That's funny because my freshman and sophomore years we never got along," he said. "The beginning of my junior year we became close on and off the field. We lifted and ran together. I'm out there on the field with one of my best friends. That says it all."

Alibrio, who may have the edge in natural ability which Kelly refers to as 'instinct,' feels fortunate to have been paired with Talbot. "We really do work well together. We're the end of last year," Alibrio said. "We knew we had the talent and that they (other teams) would have to respect both of us."

Kelly's closing comments. On Alibrio: "He's a tremendous competitor. He makes the big play when he has to do it. He has a tremendous feel for the game both offensively and defensively. We're certainly going to miss Aaron because he's a coach on the field. He's so in tune to what everyone is doing."

On Talbot: "I was asked to pick the back that had the best balance of all backfield attributes (blocking, speed, balance, power). I think he's probably the best of all those categories. I think Jason was a driven athlete. He worked extremely hard at his goal. He made himself a player."

Hartford cagers still winless as Marquette rolls

By Rick Gono
 The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Marquette Coach Bob Dukiet was late meeting the press after the Warriors opened their basketball season with a 70-61 victory over Hartford.

"There are so many new kids, I wanted to talk to them more," he said Tuesday night when his team that includes seven freshmen got career-high scoring performances from senior forwards Pat Foley and Tony Reeder.

Dukiet wasn't satisfied, even though the Warriors led by 20 points with just more than four minutes to play.

"I was disappointed with our defensive intensity. Maybe part of it was that it was our first game for real. We were tight. We weren't sweating and getting after it," he said.

"Maybe it was a little bit of nerves. There were periods when we played smart... We're glad to get this one under our belts. We've got a lot of work ahead. We've been going at it long and hard since the beginning of school and it's nice to start with a win."

Shaking off a painful hip injury, Foley scored all 15 of his points in the first half, including 14 straight to spur a 17-3 Warrior run.

Reeder scored 10 points in the second half and his dunk with 4:17 gave the Warriors a 66-46 lead. He finished with 17 points.

"You don't think about the hip when you make your shots," said

Foley. "It makes it a lot easier to run back on defense."

Reeder said the Warriors were able to settle down after opening-night jitters and his points "were a matter of me getting scoring opportunities." He shot 8-for-12 in surpassing his previous point high of 14. Foley was 6-for-11 from the field.

"I can't say enough about Pat Foley," said Dukiet. "In the first half we would have had our hands full without him. He has the experience and the leadership and he came back from an injury when a lot of guys wouldn't have played."

Freshman Trevor Powell added 11 points and Michael Sims and Tony Smith scored 10 pieces for the Warriors. Sims, the Warriors senior guard, left the game with 6:22 to go when he pulled a leg muscle.

Ron Moyo and Mark Powell led Hartford, 6-3, with 13 points apiece. The Hawks shot only 39 percent (22-of-57). Marquette was 56-of-80, or 45 percent on field goals.

UConn, Whalers in action

In-state rivals University of Connecticut and Yale clash at the Field House in Storrs tonight at 8 in collegiate basketball action. About 25 miles down I-84, the Hartford Whalers will host Adams Division rival Boston Bruins tonight at 7:30 at the Civic Center.

UConn opened its season last Saturday night with a 102-63 win over overmatched Maryland Eastern Shore. The Elis, meanwhile, come in at 0-1 after falling in their opener to George Washington, 77-65. The Huskies will be looking for a measure of revenge against Yale as the Elis were a 77-75 winner in overtime a year ago.

Paul Malesy, who tossed in 32 points in that upset win, will lead the Elis. Cliff Robinson and Phil Gamble, who had 23 and 22 points to lead four scorers in double figures in the opener, lead the Huskies. UConn leads the series, 31-22.

The Huskies, following the in-state contest, make their first visit to the Hartford Civic Center Sunday afternoon at 3 when they host the University of Virginia of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Whalers come into tonight's game riding a two-game winning streak, both road triumphs. They still are in last place in the Adams Division at 8-18-4 but trail the fourth-place Nordiques by one point and third-place Buffalo Sabres by two points. Boston is in second place in the Adams Division at 14-12-2 for 30 points.

This is the fourth meeting of the season between the New England rivals with the Bruins holding a 2-0-1 edge. Bruins' goalie Rejean Lemelin has a bruised right thumb so Doug Keane (8-5, 3.35 goals against average) will draw the nod against Hartford. Mike Liut (4-6-2, 3.12) will be in goal for the Whalers.

The Whalers quickly head for Philadelphia to meet the Flyers Thursday night before returning home to host the Buffalo Sabres Saturday night at 7:30.

McHale's return can't prevent Celtic setback

By Bill Schulz
 The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Wayne "Tree" Rollins figured he ought to be charged with theft.

"The baskets I had stole" from guard Raul Williams, said Rollins, who doubled his season scoring total with 20 points Tuesday night in the Atlanta Hawks' 120-106 NBA victory over the Boston Celtics.

His scoring, plus 22 by Dominique Wilkins, offset a 22-point debut by Boston's Kevin McHale, who returned after off-season ankle surgery and played 22 minutes.

"We run screens to get Wittman, both our guards, open," said Rollins, who had 19 points in eight games this season. "Each time we run that play, their two guys stayed with Wittman and I was open."

Wittman said the Celtics' confusion was caused by some tough defense by Atlanta that led to several blocked shots.

"Then they got into some switching and there was some misad communication. On three or four baskets there was nobody on our big guys," Wittman said. "It always creates trouble when you block shots."

"Tonight was our best 48 minutes of the season," he said.

Rollins said McHale, who came in early in the first quarter, replacing Larry Bird but later teaming with him, was not his usual self.

"Life needs game time. A little more game time and he'll be there," Rollins said.

"I'm ready to play basketball," McHale said. "I've still got to work on my timing. You've got to walk before you run. I forgot about my foot. I was just concentrating on the game. It's a different foot from what I had before, but it's all I have now."

"The bottom line is we didn't crash particularly well. We didn't crash the boards," McHale said.

"Just getting to play was a lot of fun. I didn't realize how much I missed it," McHale said. "It was like an exhibition game for me. I wish it had been an exhibition game. Now, I've got to find my role."

"There were lots of shots I missed that I normally don't miss. In order to get to B, you must start at A. Every team has rhythm and I'm not a part of this team's rhythm."

Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said, "Kevin looked good, but rusty."

"He'll get a lot of playing time. I want him to play 20 to 25 minutes a game."

"How important is he? He's an all-star pushover. He's been a key to our team. There was a lot of rust. It looked like he had been out 20 years."

Jones agreed with Rollins: "We had a breakdown on the defensive end."

Atlanta broke to a 19-point lead with a 15-0 scoring strike that began late in the first period. After the Celtics cut the lead to 10, the Hawks ran it to 24 points with a rally late in the third period and early in the fourth.

"In the second quarter, we started to get some kind of offense and within striking distance," Jones said.

"Injuries were not the story, they had nothing to do with tonight. They (the Hawks) played outstandingly well, they did what you call hustle. Their game plan of run and hit the boards worked great," Jones said.

Kevin Willis scored 18 points, Wittman added 17 and Glenn Rivers had 10 for Atlanta. Bird scored 10 points, and Darryl Daye, Robert Parrish and Jerry Sichting each scored 12 for the Celtics.

Holmes isn't fighting Mike Tyson for the money

By Hol Brock
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — For those worried about Larry Holmes' financial condition — the thinking being that if he's fighting at age 38, he must need the money — an unexpected heavyweight champion has a prospectus for Riverside Plaza.

It is modestly described as "the most dramatic business opportunity in the Lehigh Valley... Easton, Pa."

It includes Larry Holmes Commodore Inn, Larry Holmes Parking Authority, Larry Holmes Training Center, a restaurant and lounge, a night club and a professional promotion company.

Holmes is the squire of Easton, a successful businessman and entrepreneur who says: "I keep looking forward, looking for something different, something new and more challenging."

You want something new? Say hello to Mike Tyson. He is also something different.

Tyson, who holds the title Holmes owned for 7 1/2 years, was asked why he had refused to shake the ex-champ's hand.

"Because I didn't want to."

There is the matter of why

Holmes is fighting again after being away for 1 1/2 years but Spinks later was stripped of the crown when he was dropped out to fight Gerry Cooney. Tyson-Spinks looms as the next big-money fight but until the parties can agree to terms, Holmes will do for a marquee bout.

Tyson and his people seem to feel that the former champion will be no pushover.

"We feel Larry Holmes is the best contender out there," trainer Kevin Rooney said. "He hasn't fought for two years. He's renewed his body."

Tickets may be purchased from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. in Room 118. The prices are $4 for adults, and $3 for students and senior citizens. All tickets are $4 at the gate.

Romanowski on all-East squad

BOSTON — Boston College linebacker Bill Romanowski was one of three former Connecticut high school athletes to be named Tuesday to the Associated Press All-East first team. Romanowski, out of Rockville High School, was joined by Syracuse linebacker Terry Woodson and Farmington and Boston College offensive tackle David Widell from South Catholic in Hartford on the first team.

Mike Heath signs with Tigers

DETROIT — The Detroit Tigers have signed catcher Mike Heath to a one-year contract next season, Tigers Vice President Bill Lajoie said today. Last season, Heath batted .281, and had eight home runs and 31 RBI. Heath, 32, is a 10-year veteran. He has spent the last 1 1/2 years with Detroit since coming to the Tigers from St. Louis in 1986 in a trade that sent Mike Laga and Ken Hill to the Cardinals.

Arizona tries to lure Cardinals

TEMPE, Ariz. — Representatives of Arizona State University and the cities of Phoenix and Tempe plan to present their joint formal proposal Wednesday to St. Louis Cardinals owner William W. Bidwill in hopes of luring his NFL team here next season. ASU Vice President Brent Brown will make the presentation in Chicago to a representative of Bidwill, who is analyzing proposals from four cities hoping to land his team — Phoenix, Baltimore, Memphis, Tenn., and Jacksonville, Fla. ASU's Sun Devil Stadium, which currently seats 70,491 with plans for expansion next year, is being offered to Bidwill as a temporary home field for his Cardinals with the option of either remaining at the campus facility or moving to a proposed downtown Phoenix stadium. Bidwill reportedly wants to move his team because $4,392-seat Sun Devil Stadium in St. Louis is one of the smallest facilities in the NFL and attendance is lagging.

Curry signs three-fight series

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Donald Curry, former world welterweight champion, has signed for a series of three fights, with the long-range plan a shot at the World Boxing Council super welterweight title, promoter Bob Arum of Top Rank Inc., announced Tuesday. Curry, of Fort Worth, Texas, will begin the series Dec. 8 against Rigoberto Lopez of El Cajon, Calif., in a scheduled 10-rounder at the Chuck Landis Country Club in Reseda, Calif. Curry, who last fought July 18, when he was stopped by Mike McCullum in six rounds for the vacant World Boxing Association junior middleweight title, has a 27-2 record, with 20 knockouts. Lopez is 19-5, with eight knockouts.

The fight will be promoted by Al Gossen Promotions. After that, Curry will meet former world super welterweight champion Lugo Lopez in a 12-round elimination bout at Genoa, Italy, Aquino is 31-1 with 22 knockouts.

Worthy misses second straight game

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Forward James Worthy of the Los Angeles Lakers will miss his second straight NBA game because of patellar tendinitis in his left knee when the Lakers play at Sacramento Tuesday night. Worthy, who also sat out last Friday night's game against Denver, will remain in Los Angeles, the Lakers said. He will be re-examined at the Forum prior to Wednesday night's game against Portland, and a decision on his status for that game will be made at that time. Worthy, a two-time All-Star, has not played since being held scoreless in a 17-minute stint in the Lakers' 108-85 loss at Seattle last Tuesday night. He sat out the final quarter and a half of that game because of the tendinitis.

Gretzky named player of the month

MONTREAL — Edmonton Oilers center Wayne Gretzky, who scored a league-high 11 goals while picking up 23 assists in 13 games, was named Tuesday the National Hockey League Player of the Month for November. Gretzky edged center Denis Savard of the Chicago Blackhawks and goalie Kelly Hrudey of the New York Islanders for the award, while helping the Oilers post an 8-3-2 record. It was the 24th time Gretzky has captured the monthly honor during his eight-year career. During the month, Gretzky scored at least one point in every game his club played, while opening the lead he has in the NHL scoring race to 10 points over Savard.

Jackson named NBA rookie of month

NEW YORK — Guard Mark Jackson, who took over as the New York Knicks' floor leader in the third game of the season, has been named the NBA's Rookie of the Month for November. Jackson, the Knicks' first-round draft pick from St. John's, averaged 10.3 points, 8.1 assists and 3.8 steals per game in his first month as a pro. His steals average ranked him ninth in the league and he was third in steals. Jackson led the Knicks in assists in each of the Knicks' 12 games, joining Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers as the only players to lead their teams in assists in every game. Others considered for the honor were Reggie Miller of Indiana, Kenny Smith of Sacramento, Greg Anderson of San Antonio, Derrick McKey of Seattle, Scottie Pippen of Chicago and Reggie Williams and Joe Wolf of the Los Angeles Clippers.

Hagler, Hearn close to rematch

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Marvelous Marvin Hagler's approval is the only thing standing in the way of a rematch between the former middleweight champion and current World Boxing Council champion Thomas Hearns, promoter Bob Arum said today. "The terms are not a problem, they've all been agreed upon," Arum said. "The only thing we're waiting for is Marvin's answer. Is he going to fight or retire?" Arum said he thinks Hagler will agree to a rematch of the April 15, 1985 fight in which he stopped Hearns in the third round of a wild bout. "I'm definitely optimistic about it," the promoter said. "I think he'll fight." Arum said Hagler plans to meet with his managers this week to make a decision on the possible rematch, which tentatively is set for May 16 if the former champion agrees to fight. He said the fight would either be held in Las Vegas or Atlantic City, N.J.

Hagler retained his undisputed middleweight championship in his fight with Hearns which some consider the most action-packed three rounds of boxing ever seen in a title fight.

Bellows gives North Stars big lift

NHL Roundup

By The Associated Press

The Minnesota North Stars spent most of the game chasing the Toronto Maple Leafs. Then they let Brian Bellows lift them even and beyond. Bellows scored with 19 seconds remaining and goalie Don Beaupre replaced by an extra attacker. That tied the NHL game 2-2 and Bellows won it 30 seconds into overtime Tuesday night.

Just before his tying goal, Bellows missed a wide-open net on a pass from Dino Ciccarelli. Instead of moaning about it, he headed back to the net and didn't miss when given another chance.

"As soon as you miss an opportunity like that, it makes you start talking to yourself," Bellows said. "I had a golden opportunity when Dino threaded a great pass and I just lost sight of it and fanned on it. I thought I blew the game right there. I don't think I would have got much sleep tonight."

Bellows, off to the fastest start of his career, didn't need to worry about a sleepless night. Neal Broten chased down Bellows' rebound and fed Bob Brodeur at the point. Brodeur flipped the puck toward the net and Bellows deflected it over Maple Leafs goalie Ken Wregget. "I never saw the shot from the point to start with," Wregget said. "Then (Bellows) put it in on a pretty tough angle."

In overtime, Brian Lawton's pass off the boards went to Bellows at center ice, and the right wing put a 35-footer between Wregget's pads for his 18th goal of the season. "You got to stop those if you want to win games," Wregget said after Toronto lost for the first time in nine games in which it led after two periods. Minnesota is 16-2 in its last 19 games with the Leafs.

Capitals 4, Oilers 2
At the Capital Centre, Washington blanked Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky and got two goals and an assist from Bengt Gustafsson in a four-goal second period. Gustafsson in his first game since being slashed in the face led the Capitals to their sixth victory in the last seven games against the Stanley Cup champs. "We just played them hard and put pressure on their defensemen," Gustafsson said. "We know they're going to give us a lot of chances and you're going to take advantage of periods. Minnesota is 16-2 in its last 19 games with the Leafs." Gretzky couldn't take advantage of anything and was held pointless for only the second time this season. Peter Stastny had Quebec's goal as the Nordiques led to win for the seventh time in eight games. Jets 7, Kings 6

At Los Angeles, the host Kings rallied from a 5-2 deficit to take a 6-5 lead on Luc Robitaille's second goal of the game. Laurie Boschman scored a power-play goal with 56 seconds remaining in regulation to tie the game. Boschman scored while the Jets had a 6-on-4 advantage after Los Angeles rookie defenseman Wayne McBean was penalized and the Jets pulled goalie Peck Ray Reddick for the extra attacker. Doug Small then took a pass from Thomas Steen, broke in alone on goalie Glenn Healy and connected on a 15-foot wrist shot. "When you're open like that, you've got to score," Small said. "I saw Thomas (Steen) get it and yelled at him and he fired it to me."

Hockey legend 'Punch' Imlach dies

TORONTO (AP) — Jean Beliveau and Gilbert Perreault, coached by Hockey Hall-of-Famer George "Punch" Imlach as the Toronto Maple Leafs' head coach, credited their late boss with playing a key role in their development. "It's a very sad day for me," Beliveau said after learning Tuesday of the death of Imlach. "I'm losing a good friend. Hockey was very fortunate to have a guy like him."

Imlach became an NHL superstar in a 20-year career with the Montreal Canadiens after playing senior hockey for Imlach in Quebec City in the late 1940s. He credits Imlach with helping him develop his skating ability. "He could see that the game was speeding up, so after practice he had a guy chasing me to make me skate faster," Beliveau said. "I was a tall, lean guy and at that time tall fellows were often a little slow. Later on in my career I realized how right he was. He had the ability to foresee changes in the game. The 65-year-old Imlach, who coached Tuesday's game, got his first NHL job in 1958 in Toronto and coached the Leafs to four Stanley Cup championships in 11 years before being fired in 1969. He was hired as general manager and head coach by the Buffalo Sabres when that franchise entered the NHL in 1970, and he made Perreault the No. 1 pick in the draft. "He was a great hockey man and I was very proud to have a chance to be part of his team and part of his life," said Perreault, who was named rookie of the year and went on to star for 17 seasons in Buffalo. "He gave me a great push to start my career."

"You had to work very hard on the ice to please him but he was unbelievable for the franchise in Buffalo. I had a chance to talk with him two weeks ago. He called me at home and we exchanged a few letters. It was very nice to hear from him. I always had a great respect for him." Imlach was admitted to a hospital late Sunday and died Tuesday morning. A heart attack in 1972 forced him to quit coaching the Sabres and he managed the team until being fired in 1978. Maple Leafs owner Harold Ballard brought him back to Toronto in 1979 as general manager. Imlach had heart problems in 1981 and underwent bypass surgery. Ballard would not have him back. Imlach had heart problems again in 1985 while vacationing in Las Vegas. "He was a great guy and the sport of hockey, especially hockey,

Brett Butler glad to go with a winner

BRETT BUTLER signs with Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Newly acquired San Francisco Giants center fielder Brett Butler says he's glad to go with a winner. "It's just everything well," Rosen said. "He's also an excellent outfielder with speed. Our defense up the middle was already second to none. Now it will be even stronger." The acquisition gives the National League West champions an anchor at leadoff, where they used a dozen players in 1987. It came just hours after the California Angels announced they had signed free agent Davis to a one-year contract. The signing means of Butler the Indians will receive the Giants' Type A free agent San Francisco will receive California's first-round selection for the signing of Davis. The Indians issued a statement saying they were "extremely disappointed" with Butler's decision not to accept an offer they described as "competitive in every way" with San Francisco's. It was the first signing in more than two years of a free agent whose club had tried actively to keep him.

Born in Los Angeles, Butler lived in Fremont on the east side of San Francisco Bay for most of his childhood and he followed the Giants before his family moved to Chicago in 1970. Butler, who bats and throws left-handed, hit .295 last season with a career-high nine home runs along with 41 runs batted in. He stole 21 bases, scored 91 runs, drew a career-high 91 walks and led the Indians with a .399 on-base percentage. He also was caught stealing 10 times, often on pickoffs, which has been a problem throughout his career.

Angels back in market, sign Chili Davis

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — With the signing of outfielder Chili Davis, the California Angels are back in a free agent market they virtually abandoned after their free-agent approach failed to buy them a World Series. The Angels, who in the past had signed a long list of free agents to high-priced contracts, had mostly stayed out of the bidding since 1983. The club had said only special circumstances would cause it to actively pursue another free agent and the Davis situation apparently was to its liking.

The switch-hitting Davis, who hit .286 with a career-high 24 home runs and 76 runs batted in for the San Francisco Giants last season, signed with the Angels on Tuesday. The Angels signed Davis, who turned 28 next month, to a one-year deal worth a reported $850,000, up some $35,000 what he earned with the Angels last season. "Playing in Southern California was something I wanted. Playing there will enhance my abilities as a ballplayer, especially as a hitter. The Giants realized I wouldn't be content to play in Candlestick Park any longer."

Davis played five full seasons and parts of two others with the Giants. He was a member of the NL All-Star team in 1984 and 1986. He played all three outfield positions with the Giants. He said he prefers right field. Davis graduated from Dorsey High in Los Angeles in 1977. Originally selected by the Giants in the 11th round of the June 1979 draft, he made his major league debut in 1981, when he played in eight games for San Francisco. In 1982, Davis played in 154 games for the Giants and hit .281 with 19 homers and 76 RBI. In 1983, he played in 137 games, hitting .283 with 11 homers and 59 RBI. Davis hit .315 with 21 homers and 81 RBI in 1984. The next season, he hit .270 with 13 homers and 56 RBI. In 1986, he hit .317 with 13 homers and 70 RBI. He set an NL record last Sept. 15 with his third career switch-hitting homer game. It was his second such game of the 1987 season, tying the major league record held by Mickey Vernon (1985 and 1986), Eddie Murray (1982 and 1986) and Kevin Bass (1987).
