HOSPITAL GETS RATE REPRIEVE

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Manchester Memorial Hospital will get a temporary reprieve from a state order to reduce inpatient rates by as much as 45 percent, a hospital spokesman said.

Andrew A. Beck, director of public relations for MMH, said that hospital officials met with members of the state Commission on Hospitals and Health Care on Friday in an effort to delay the rate decrease. The agreement reached between the hospital and the commission calls for the hospital to reduce its inpatient charges, which are issued in yearly rate orders, by 5 percent until a final rate order can be completed, Beck said.

The rate orders are set by the commission each year to determine hospitals' charges to patients for various services during the following year. The rate orders, which were originally scheduled to be released in October, were delayed because of difficulties in resolving legislation aimed at reducing health care cost increases.

According to figures released by the commission, the average patient was charged $3,711.52 during the hospital fiscal year that ended Sept. 30. The commission, which originally requested a $1,652.21 cut in MMH's rates, will now allow the hospital rates to be cut $185.57 until a final agreement is reached.

It will be six to eight weeks before such an agreement may be reached, Beck said. The hospital, though, still must file an official appeal with the commission over the rate orders. The appeal will be filed before Dec. 10, he said.

The rate orders controversy comes less than a month after the commission mandated the hospital cut its compliance orders by 8 percent. Compliance orders, on which rate orders are based, adjust projected budget numbers to actual numbers after the end of each fiscal year. The hospital has filed an appeal over the compliance orders as well.

While hospital officials are relieved that they will not have to reduce their rates by more than 44 percent, this may be just the beginning of a long battle with the commission, Beck said. Interim hospital President George J. Roy and Richard Werkowski, MMH controller, met with the commission.

"It's comfortable," Beck said of the 5 percent reduction. "But we still want to work with them."

Beck said he was unsure how the commission could issue rate orders that mandated that the hospital make such deep cuts. Rate orders are tabulated by the commission from figures provided by the hospital.

Sue E. Stanley, director of operations for the commission, said Friday that since the commission was under pressure to come out with the rate orders by Dec. 1, it had to base the rate orders on incomplete information. She said the MMH and other affected hospitals provided the commission with incomplete information.

'80s activism

Some college students welcome CIA

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) — Students at a tiny liberal arts school are battling for the chance to interview with CIA recruiters on campus, something faculty members and college students across the country are trying to ban.

The debate at the 1,700-student Colby College has been called a reversal of 1960s activism, with liberal professors reliving their days as anti-war activists and conservative students taking the establishment role. And since it erupted, the issue has elicited comment from many of the state's newspapers, drawn national attention and polarized the campus.

At issue is a faculty motion passed Nov. 11 by a 5-2 margin to ban CIA recruitment on campus "as a result of its illegal incursions into Nicaragua, its role in illegal arms sales... until it obeys the U.S. Constitution." To become effective, it needs the approval of college President William R. Cotter and the board of trustees, who will consider it at their April meeting. But the outcry to the faculty's position was immediate and vocal.

"It's a very pedantic of the professors to try and decide for us, to become our conscience as it were," said John Whitacre, a senior government major and chairman of the Colby Republicans.

"It's a very dangerous precedent," added Whitacre, who was one of about a dozen students who interviewed with CIA recruiters on campus Oct. 21. "There's no telling where it would go after this."

The students say they also believe the motion denies them the right to free speech and freedom of choice, which they note that many of the professors at Colby fought for while college students in the 1960s and early 1970s.

"I think it's everybody's right to come here and open opportunities to other people," said Norman Hugo, a senior English major who also interviewed for a job with the Central Intelligence Agency. "It's our choice as Americans to take them up on it or not, especially at a school like this."

But the professors who passed the motion insist they are not limiting the CIA's right to speak on the campus. In fact, they say they support a CIA representative's planned appearance on campus for an informational talk Wednesday night.

"It's not a matter of freedom of information or speech," said Ira Sadhoff, an associate professor of English and sponsor of the faculty motion. "But Colby College isn't required to allow anyone and everyone to sell their wares on campus. I don't think we'd have any problem not allowing the IRA (Irish Republican Army) or government of South Africa to recruit."

Not all faculty members agree, calling the motion repressive, paternalistic and out-of-bounds.

Kid at the wheel

Cops nab 5-year-old in station wagon

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — It seems that 5-year-old Rocco Morabito was just following family tradition when he took his baby sister for a 1 1/2-mile ride in the family station wagon during Friday morning's rush hour.

Rocco's grandfather and great-uncle were both driving when they were 6 or 7, a family member said.

Police Officer Robert Vogel said he was having coffee at a deli on a busy four-lane road when bus driver David Cassera ran in shortly after 7 a.m. to announce there was a child driving a car.

Vogel spotted the tan car "weaving ever so slightly" at about 20 mph and flipped on his lights and siren.

"The car immediately pulled over to the curb and didn't even hit the curb. It was a beautiful job of pulling the car over," he said.

The child, who could barely see over the dashboard, had the automatic seat pulled all the way up and the steering wheel down, he said.

However, as the 3-foot-tall driver started to get out on the passenger's side, Vogel realized the transmission wasn't in park and he reached in to stop the rolling car. Rocco and his 2-year-old sister, Brandy, began crying and calling for their mother, Vogel said.

"I calmed them down and told them their mommy would have to come down," Vogel said. "The kid said, 'Mommy doesn't have a way to get here. I've got the only car.' Then he says, 'I can drive. I'll go get her.'"

Rocco, clad in pajamas and sneakers, and his sister, who was wearing only a pajama top, were taken to the stationhouse in this New York City suburb where their grandfather was waiting.

The unidentified grandfather, who had heard the incident over a police scanner, "gave him a stern talking to," Vogel said.

"We advised him that perhaps he shouldn't be too hard on such a small youth. We were lucky, though. Nothing happened. It's amazing that they didn't get hurt."

As police put it together, Rocco got the keys from his mother's pocketbook, which was atop the family's refrigerator, then opened a locked garage door and backed the station wagon down a narrow 80-foot driveway bounded by a house and a fence.

Brandy followed Rocco and was only taken for the ride after an argument, Vogel said.

A neighbor, Shawna Montalvan, said she had seen Rocco on his grandfather's lap as the grandfather drove.

Ban on water use in Putnam nearly over

PUTNAM (AP) — Residents using municipal water for washing and bathing Friday after health officials said preliminary tests showed water contaminated as a result of efforts to put out a fire in a factory complex was free of bacteria.

Officials said the people in the 2,500 homes and 180 businesses that are hooked into the municipal water system could drink the water after boiling it for five minutes to eliminate any organic chemicals that might be in it.

Winston Helmer, a spokesman for the state Department of Health Services, said further tests on the water were scheduled and residents may get permission to drink it by Saturday.

After the fire Wednesday consumed a complex housing five small industrial companies, the majority of Putnam residents were forced to use bottled water that was distributed for free by some stores and by the town government. A minority of residents wasn't affected because they have private wells.

The lack of water also forced businesses and schools to close in the northeastern Connecticut town of about 8,800 near the Rhode Island and Massachusetts borders.

Mayor Samuel Roberts, who has declared a state of emergency in the wake of the fire, said the total loss to the town could reach $50 million.

Nearly 200 people were left unemployed by the fire and many businesses were forced to close because of the water contamination. About $4 million in damage was done to the buildings.

The mayor said the state of emergency would make the community eligible to apply for state funds to ease the losses. Any aid would come from a $5 million local disaster aid fund and would have to be approved by the state Office of Policy and Management.

"Whatever we can do for Putnam, certainly we shall do," Gov. William A. O'Neill said.

Steve Hitchcock, director of the state Department of Environmental Protection hazardous materials unit, said federal Superfund money would be used to clean up any hazardous materials remaining in the gutted buildings. He had no estimate of cleanup costs.

Meanwhile, investigators continued to look for the cause of the fire, which started shortly before 9 a.m. Wednesday and raged out of control for about 10 hours. Firefighters remained on the scene, dousing hot spots with water, on Friday.

No one was killed but officials said seven people received minor injuries and nearly 40 more sought treatment for symptoms resulting from inhaling the noxious smoke emitted by burning chemicals in the buildings.

Car hits man crossing street

By Andrew Davis
Manchester Herald

A 79-year-old Manchester man was listed in critical condition at Manchester Memorial Hospital Friday night after he was struck by a car and thrown about 25 feet at the intersection of Main and North Main streets, police said.

George Bingham, of 44 North St., was hit shortly after 7 p.m. by a 1983 Chevrolet Camaro driven east on North Main Street by Tina M. Parlato, 19, of 60 Henry St., police Sgt. John Marvin said.

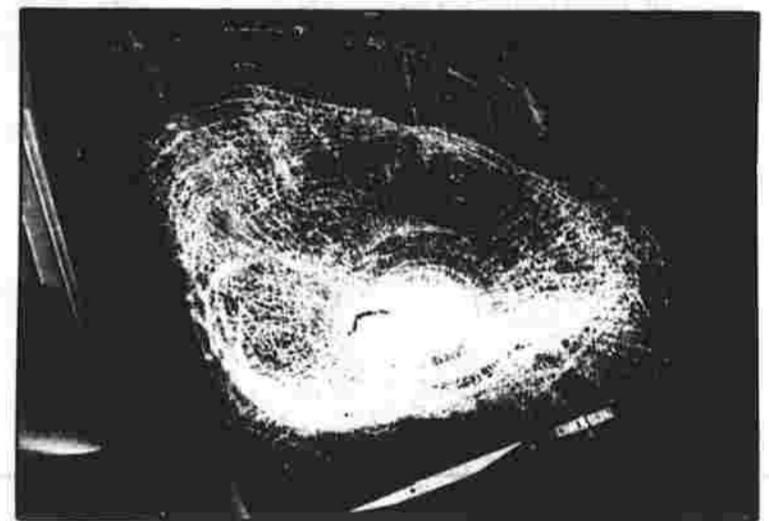

Parlato was shaken but not injured, Marvin said.

The accident is still under investigation and no charges have been filed against Parlato, Marvin said.

A Manchester Memorial Hospital spokesman said last night said that Bingham had fractures to the lower part of his body as well as multiple facial injuries and would be admitted to the critical care unit.

The Eighth District Fire Department, town paramedics and police responded to the scene. Marvin said that the impact threw Bingham about 25 feet. The impact knocked Bingham's shoes off, Marvin said.

Marvin said that police determined that Parlato was traveling within the 25 mile an hour speed limit when Bingham walked into the street in front of her vehicle.

"There's no indication of excessive speed," Marvin said.

Marvin is heading the investigation.

The accident was witnessed by Sandy Moan and Joyce Forget, both of Glastonbury. Moan said the man hit the automobile's windshield and flipped over the roof.

"He was thrown over the roof of the car," she said. "He was thrown far. We ran to see if he was breathing."

New York suspends decoy cops

NEW YORK (AP) — The police division responsible for patrolling the city's subways is reeling from allegations that some officers collared innocent bystanders or encouraged crimes in order to boost their arrest totals.

The second blow in two weeks to the Transit Authority Police Department came Wednesday, when authorities revealed they had suspended an elite decoy unit, made up of officers who ride the rails in plainclothes, waiting for attacks on themselves or others.

Last week, it was disclosed that four other plainclothes transit officers were suspected of making false arrests in 1983 and 1984. Investigators are examining an alleged cover-up by transit brass.

"I have sandbags in front of my door. We've literally been besieged," said Al O'Leary, a spokesman for the transit police.

The 3,800-member department is an arm of the Transit Authority, charged with maintaining order in subway stations and on the city trains and buses. While it is under the jurisdiction of Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward, it is resistant to pressure to merge with the city Police Department.

The reports of misdeeds by the decoy unit came as a shock.

The squad has been the subject of numerous reports in the media since it was established in 1985. O'Leary said owing to cooperation with prosecutors, the decoy squad has become "the most formidable adversary in the country" for criminals, with a 90 percent conviction rate. Most defendants just plead guilty, he said.

It is alleged that in about 20 cases decoy officers either swore to crimes that were not committed or actually prompted crimes.

Such "aggressive enticement," said Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, could involve one undercover officer pointing out a decoy to a bystander and saying, "You see that gold chain over there? Why don't you grab it?"

Civil libertarians had warned that the unit was courting charges of entrapment.

"The officers are supposed to sit back and let it happen. They are not supposed to initiate a crime," said Murray Singer, a Legal Aid lawyer for a 23-year-old man whose case is one of those being investigated by Morgenthau.

According to Singer, his client, who has no criminal record, was approached in a station by a man who pointed to another man wearing a long gold chain.

"That guy looks like a vic (a victim)," the man allegedly told the client.

The man with the gold chain stumbled, and when Singer's client went to help, the chain fell to the ground and he was arrested, according to Singer.

East Hartford pulls paramedics from 3-town plan

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

East Hartford has solved problems with its paramedic service and might not be interested in joining a regional service with Manchester and South Windsor, an East Hartford official said Friday.

Henry Genga, chairman of East Hartford's Emergency Medical Council, told a regional meeting of paramedics in South Windsor Friday that the town is no longer in need of backup service. If East Hartford chooses not to be involved in the regional service, it also will not provide backup in South Windsor along Route 5, he said.

A shared two-unit paramedic system between Manchester and South Windsor was one proposal made in a draft report prepared last month by officials from all three towns. Under that proposal, East Hartford would have provided paramedic coverage in South Windsor along Route 5 in exchange for backup service from Manchester and South Windsor.

East Hartford's lack of participation, however, would probably have little effect on a regional plan between Manchester and South Windsor, Ronald Kraatz, Manchester's health director, said after the meeting. East Hartford would still provide paramedic assistance in case of disasters and massive casualties.

The town now receives backup from the private Manchester Ambulance Service.

GENGA SAID East Hartford has implemented a priority dispatch system that has cut back on demand for the paramedics. In addition, he said, the town is planning to almost double its paramedic staff by the beginning of next year.

Manchester, which has had a paramedic service for four years, is considering adding a second paramedic unit in order to meet an expected increase in emergency medical calls in the next 10 years. A shared service with South Windsor is being considered because of the high cost of adding that unit.

At present, South Windsor has no paramedic service of its own and is served by Emergency Medical Technicians through its fire department. EMTs have less medical training than paramedics.

Like Manchester, East Hartford has a one-unit paramedic service.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS from all three towns worked out the details of a final draft during their Friday morning meeting.

Genga said the report will still mention the possibility of backup service from East Hartford; however, a new summary at the end of the report will recommend that East Hartford not be a part of the shared service. He said that East Hartford will be evaluating its service again within a year and might change its position.

Kraatz said a final report will be completed within about 10 days. It will then be sent to the top administrators in each of the three towns for review. In order to have a regional system set up between Manchester and South Windsor by 1989, town officials would have to begin implementing one in the next fiscal year, Kraatz said.

A combined Manchester-South Windsor paramedic system is only one of six proposals included in the study committee's report. While that proposal was endorsed in the draft report, committee members on Friday agreed to make the language less strong in the final report.

THE REPORT will now say that if elected officials from the three towns agree that a regional system should be adopted, the Manchester-South Windsor plan is the most viable one.

An alternative way of providing regional service would be to create three districts served by three units, all funded by the three participating towns. Regional service could also be provided by a non-profit foundation, the report says.

If the towns choose not to have a regional service, according to the report, a commercial service could be contracted for by South Windsor. Such a service would provide backup for Manchester and East Hartford.

In lieu of these proposals, the towns could decide to improve their paramedic programs on their own.

announcing she is going out of business because she can't find adequate help.

Mari-Mad's joins Quinn's: a victim of 'lack of help'

By Nancy Conzelman
Manchester Herald

The state's low unemployment rate may seem like a blessing, but not to two Manchester business owners, whose stores have become casualties of the labor shortage.

Mari-Mad's of 757 Main St., a store that's clothed children in Manchester for 33 years, is going out of business because owner Madeline Matheny can't find help.

In September, Quinn's Pharmacy, formerly of 373 Main St., closed its doors after 85 years in business for the same reason. When former owner Acle F. "John" Johnson closed Quinn's, he said he was tired of working 50 to 70 hours a week.

A letter in the window of the former Quinn's store from Johnson to his customers reads: "The help situation today is such, that I can't get enough help at wages I can afford to pay..."

MATHENY SAID she spends "day and night" at the store to compensate for lack of help. "There just aren't that many people out there that can work," she said. She wasn't sure exactly when the store will close, but plans to lease the building after Mari-Mad's has moved out.

Dick Ficks, spokesman for the state Department of Labor, sees the low unemployment as positive. "There is hope that we'll continue to maintain our position," Ficks said.

Ficks doesn't feel that the state unemployment rate of 2.8 percent, the lowest in 21 years, is harder on independently owned businesses than on any other type of business. Labor shortage problems are "across the board," he said.

Anne Flint, president of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, agreed. "They're not having any more trouble than anyone else because they're small businessmen," she said.

But Kathleen Wimer, director of the State Job Training Coordinating Council, said smaller businesses are definitely hit harder by what she describes as a combination of a labor shortage and a "mismatch" of employees' skills and the skills that employers require.

"Smaller employers often cannot offer as competitive a wage and benefits package," Wimer said.

THE LABOR shortage has forced state and local agencies and employers in all areas of business to seek alternative labor markets.

"We're going to have to be very creative in terms of where we go to find employees," Flint said.

The Chamber of Commerce sponsored a job fair in May that was geared toward any type of business. Manchester has also been working with six other chambers from east of the river on the employment problem for a while.

"It's such an incredibly complicated issue," Flint said.

"We're hoping that the 15-year-old labor law will help the situation," Ficks said. The law, which took effect Oct. 1, allows 15-year-olds to work limited hours in mercantile establishments as cashiers and stock clerks.

But many local independent merchants say that 15-year-olds, because of their age and the limited hours and types of jobs they can work, aren't practical to hire.

"I'M NOT sure that the 15-year-olds can solve the problem," said Bernard Apter, owner of Regal's Men's Shops at 903 Main St.

Minors would be limited to working in the stockroom at Regal's. Apter said, but he looks for salesmen to work out on the floor.

"I need experienced help," he said. The law does not allow 15-year-olds to work in restaurants. Luisa Parreira, owner of Johnnie's Brass Key restaurant at 829 Main St., said she's often at the restaurant from 4:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., five hours after closing time. She's currently looking for a waitress.

"I just think that people nowadays just aren't willing to work anymore."

When young people come into the Jan Marie Boutique at 847 Main St. to apply for a job, "they tell me what hours they can work," said owner Jan Bovino. "Younger people want higher salaries and fewer hours," Bovino said.

She works about 50 hours a week, but is reluctant to hire 15-year-olds. "Senior citizens are more reliable. I do have a more mature clientele," she said.

ENCOURAGED BY State Labor Commissioner P. Joseph Peraro, businesses are successfully bringing senior citizens back into the labor market, especially for the Christmas season, Ficks said. "He believes that the older worker is a whole new resource."

Adding to the labor market may help, but businesses would be better off cutting hours, according to George Marlow, owner of Marlow's Department Store at 867 Main St.

"Sooner or later, if this shortage of help continues, in order to survive, retailers will have to cut their hours," he said.

Water rates due to increase

After a four-year freeze, Manchester's water rates are due to increase at the start of the next fiscal year on July 1.

On Tuesday, Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. named Director Barbara B. Weinberg to work with the town administration in developing a new rate schedule.

The current base residential fee is $31.30 per quarter, with an additional charge of $2.18 for each 100 cubic feet beyond 1,200 cubic feet, said Rob Huestis, the town's budget director.

Sewer fees are also set to increase in July. Huestis said. The current base residential fee is $11.64 per quarter, with an additional charge of 97 cents for every 100 cubic feet above 1,200 cubic feet.

Thompson backs higher benefit

State Rep. John W. Thompson, D-Manchester, has come out in support of increasing workers' compensation benefits for burial expenses.

At a hearing last month of the Labor and Public Employees' Committee at the state Capitol, Thompson said that the $3,000 now provided is inadequate. A labor committee bill would increase the burial benefit to $5,000.

Rec Department move on agenda

A recreation subcommittee will discuss the possible needs to relocate the town's Recreation Department and expand the Park Department when it convenes on Dec. 15.

The subcommittee met for the first time on Thursday night to discuss general strategy, town Director Stephen T. Cassano said Friday. Cassano was the main force behind forming the subcommittee, which includes members of the town Board of Directors, the administration and the Advisory Park and Recreation Department.

Cassano said that the subcommittee will be looking into relocating the town's Recreation Department, which is now located in the former Highland Park School. Because of the possibility that the school will be reopened, Cassano said the subcommittee may recommend that the Recreation Department be moved to the former Hollister Street School.

Also at the Dec. 15 meeting, Town

Planning Director Mark Pellegrini is expected to provide a detailed inventory of park facilities and fields and where they are located.

"He can help give the committee some direction," Cassano said.

The subcommittee was appointed by the Board of Directors last month in order to look into short- and long-term park and recreation needs throughout the town. A major impetus behind the subcommittee was the poor condition of the town's playing fields.

Charles Enes, was clerk in S. Windsor many years

Charles N. Enes, 68, South Windsor's town clerk for nearly four decades, died Friday at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Enes was born in East Hartford and moved to South Windsor many years ago. He was the town clerk for South Windsor for 38 years, retiring in 1984. Enes was a member of the International Institute of Municipal Clerks, serving as president from 1981 to 1984.

South Windsor Town Clerk Marilyn W. Burger said Friday that Enes will be missed. She said the news was a shock to her and town office workers.

"He was a fine person and a wonderful person to work with," she said. "He certainly enjoyed people."

Enes served during World War II as a pilot for the Army Air Corps 4977 Bomb Squadron of the 92nd Bomb Group. While in the military, Enes received the Air Medal, the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart. He served during the European Theater campaigns and the Northern and Southern France campaigns.

He was shot down over Germany during the war and was held as a prisoner of war for one year before being released.

Enes was a retired member and assistant chief for the South Windsor Volunteer Fire Department.

He was a member of the Abe E. Miller Post 133 of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 10251. Enes also served in the Connecticut Air National Guard, where he was a member of the Flying Tigers.

He was a communicant of St. Francis of Assisi Church of South Windsor.

He is survived by his wife of 43 years, Virginia (Thompson) Enes; two sons, Charles F. Enes of Phoenix, Ariz., and Michael N. Two-year-old rescued from elevator

A 2-year-old girl was rescued from an elevator in the Watkins Building on Main Street after being trapped between floors for about 15 minutes Friday afternoon.

The girl, Theresa Raytor of Huntington, was on the third floor of the building with her mother when she went to the elevator, apparently in the hope of returning to her father on the first floor, said the girl's aunt, Gene Young.

The girl did not receive any injuries.

Office workers gathered around the elevator on the second floor as town rescue personnel worked to get the door open. The girl had been crying uncontrollably from the elevator, but she calmed down immediately after she was rescued.

When her father, Gary Raytor, took her into his arms, the girl's first words were, "I'm sorry."

The elevator had been stopped between the first and second floors.

Raytor thanked police officers and firefighters after the rescue. "Say, 'Thank you,' Theresa," he told his daughter.

Before the girl was rescued, Raytor, his wife Chun-hua, and Young called to Theresa from the elevator door in an effort to calm her down.

Manchester police officer Sandy Ficarra, who was at the scene, said he was told by fire officials that the girl probably pushed the elevator's emergency button, which caused the elevator doors to close. He said he didn't know why the elevator stopped between floors.

State police nab minors at five UConn-area bars

STORRS (AP) — Sixteen people age 20 and younger, including at least six college students, have been charged with liquor code violations after state police responded to complaints by making spot checks at five area bars.

State police said about 20 troopers from the Stafford barracks worked with eight agents from the Department of Liquor Control to make the arrests between 10:30 p.m. Thursday and 1 a.m. Friday.

Keith Busque, owner of Ted's Restaurant in Storrs, blamed the youths for the violations. He said he has four men at the front door checking all identifications, adding that each customer must present two IDs.

"It's been an ongoing thing for us," he said. "The kids are getting more sophisticated. We're going to have to be a little sharper, that's all you can do."

State police spokeswoman Marcy Stamm said her department had received complaints that bars in the UConn area were serving minors. She also said that several auto accidents in recent months involving young drivers who had been drinking "was enough for us to make an investigation."

The youths were all released on written promises to appear in Superior Court in Vernon at various dates later this month. Five of those arrested gave addresses at the University of Connecticut and one other said she was a student at Eastern Connecticut State University.

Charges against the youths, who ranged in age from 17 to 20, include loitering, procuring liquor as a minor and using another person's identification to procure liquor. One man also was charged with possession of cocaine.

The establishments raided by police were Huskies Fine Food and Drink, Ted's Restaurant, and Thumpers Night Club, all in the Storrs section of Mansfield; Oscar's Pizza and Restaurant in Mansfield; and Wizard's Cafe in Tolland.

No more floor tickets for arena rap concerts

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The Veterans Memorial Coliseum will stop selling floor tickets that allow about 2,000 people to mill in front of the stage during rap concerts, officials said.

The decision comes after a Nov. 24 fight at a rap concert at the coliseum that resulted in one stabbing death and several injuries.

Police Chief William Farrell has said police may be close to making arrests in connection with the incident, but police spokesman Sgt. James Sorrentino said Friday no arrests had been made.

In a special meeting in Mayor Biagio DiIetto's office, Coliseum Authority members agreed the arena will not stop booking rap concerts. But 2,400 seats will be installed in front of the stage where people used to stand.

"We will use the chairs in effect as a deterrent," said Coliseum Director James E. Perillo.

"If I were to have 15 more policemen, I don't think I could have prevented that incident from occurring," Perillo said. "I don't think we should ban concerts."

Rap music involves verses chanted over heavily syncopated repetitive rhythms. Perillo said rap promoters favor the open floor because the audiences enjoy dancing.

New rail cars on the way

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Metro-North commuters accustomed to standing-room-only are getting some relief this month as 54 new railway cars go into service.

The new cars, costing $1.43 million apiece, were prompted in part by surveys that said the railroad's ridership was growing at 2 percent annually, said Dan Brucker, a spokesman for Metro-North.

He said 45,000 passengers daily use the service that provides commuter service in and out of New York from Connecticut.

Benjamin Lenda, assistant director of rail operations for the Connecticut Department of Transportation, said the state paid 63 percent, or $48.5 million, of the cost of the new cars and Metro-North paid the rest.

He said half the cars are in service and the rest will be on track by Dec. 21.

Lenda said the cars would be added to Metro-North's existing fleet of 244 cars, which are about 15 years old.

The cars were built by Tokyu Car Inc., a Japanese company that was low bidder for the project. No American firms bid, Lenda said.

Wizard's Cafe in Tolland.

Ed Jadovich, chief inspector for the state Liquor Control Department, said it would take his inspectors three to six weeks to investigate the five bars before deciding which cases to present to the liquor control commission. He said it was possible the three-member commission might be given a brief description of the spot checks during Tuesday's or Thursday's meeting.

Jadovich said the stiffest penalty possible for an establishment found guilty of serving minors is revocation of the state liquor permit.

State police said they closed down Ted's because there was no liquor permit posted as required by law, but Busque said that wasn't true. He said he voluntarily closed his business because there were "too many dogs, too many kids, too many cops."

Oscar's Pizza also was cited for being 100 percent over occupancy as set by the Mansfield fire marshal's office.

O'Neill: It's 'ludicrous' to count aliens in census

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill, concerned that Connecticut may lose a congressional seat if illegal aliens are counted in the next census, said Friday the count should also include servicemen and women serving outside their native states.

"When you talk about counting illegal aliens and giving them representation in Congress when you've got servicemen that are defending this nation and aren't counted as part of the state's overall population ... I think that's ludicrous," O'Neill said.

The Congressional Research Service, using 1983 population projections for the census, has predicted Connecticut would lose one of its six House seats if illegal aliens are again included in the next population count.

Officials have said states such as Texas and California with high numbers of illegal aliens could gain seats in the House. Connecticut has a considerably smaller number of illegal residents from other countries.

Two recent population projections — one by the government, one by private industry — predicted, however, that Connecticut would not be a loser as a result.

Connecticut's six congressmen are pushing a measure in the House that would block Census Bureau funding unless it excludes illegal aliens and includes military personnel.

In a letter to the House Rules Committee, the Connecticut delegation said: "We are strongly opposed to the inclusion of illegal aliens in the census for apportionment purposes. To do so dilutes the vote and representation of every citizen.

"Should those who reside in this country illegally be given representation in the House of Representatives? We strongly believe that our military personnel serving abroad should receive the representation they deserve as American citizens," the letter states.

U.S. Rep. John G. Rowland, R-5th District, said this week that he may be the one who loses out if one Connecticut seat is eliminated. He suspects his district would be merged with the 6th District, where Republican Nancy Johnson is the incumbent.

Responsibility for redistricting the state would be given to the General Assembly, currently controlled by Democrats, which would assemble a nine member, bipartisan committee. Both houses would then have to approve a plan with a two-thirds majority.

"I've heard it from enough people: The rationale is, 'The Democrats draw the lines,'" Rowland said. "To protect the Democratic members, the logical move would be to put Nancy's district and mine together to kill two birds with one stone."

The third Republican in the state's delegation, Rep. Christopher Shays, probably would not be affected dramatically in a redistricting plan because of the shape of his Fairfield County district, members of the delegation said.

Newtown jail plans will go forward

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill on Friday released a report by his legal counsel that concludes that the proposed 400-bed, $40 million jail in Newtown should be built as planned.

The report by Jay W. Jackson found that the process that resulted in the selection of Newtown was "objective, consistent and applied in a fair and even manner."

Officials in Newtown were angry when their community was chosen as the site of the facility and asked O'Neill to review the process that led to the selection by the Justice Planning Division of the state Office of Policy and Management.

"I have said all along that the state must depend on the experts it hires to make the best decisions in specialized fields such as this," O'Neill said. "Mr. Jackson found the consultant's report to be objective and consistent and, therefore, I concur with his recommendation that this project move forward."

Jackson had come to a similar conclusion earlier this week in the case of the proposed 800-bed, $86 million prison in Suffield.

Both sites were selected earlier this year.

A spokeswoman for Newtown First Selectman Jack Rosenthal said Rosenthal had not been notified of the report by O'Neill's office and would have no comment until he had read it.

Sandy Campbell, a lawyer working for Newtown, said he would meet next week with local officials to discuss the report.

He said he had asked Jackson for information as Jackson was compiling the report because "we wanted a chance to rebut any comments that may have been received." He said Jackson did not respond.

Campbell said he may take the matter to the Freedom of Information Commission.

Prison officials anticipate lengthy surrender process

ATLANTA (AP) — Cuban inmates who took control of a federal penitentiary 12 days ago put down their weapons one by one Friday and boarded buses for new cells elsewhere as their 89 hostages savored their first full day of freedom.

Despite an agreement reached late Thursday to end one of the longest prison standoffs in U.S. history, the 25-year-old prison remained in control of the detainees, some of whom were armed with machetes 4 feet long, authorities said.

It may be 24 hours before all the inmates have been removed, U.S. Justice Department spokesman Patrick Kortzen said.

"When the surrenders stop, we'll go in and take back the place by force if necessary," said Bureau of Prisons spokesman John Vanyur. "There is no indication that certain individuals have refused to come out but it is a good possibility."

Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III was to tour the prison later Friday with officials, including FBI Director William Sessions, Bureau of Prisons Director Michael Quinlan and Immigration and Naturalization Commissioner Alan Nelson.

The first of the 1,104 Cubans left the stone prison at noon after being strip-searched, X-rayed for weapons and handcuffed. They were taken to Dobbins Air Force Base, where they were placed on planes to one of 47 prisons nationwide.

Kortzen refused to specify the prisoners' destinations but said the Cubans would be spread out. Federal institutions are so crowded that some inmates will be paroled or sent to halfway houses to make room, he said.

"It's going to be a tight fit," he said. "Meanwhile, some of the freed hostages said they planned to catch up on sleep, go out to eat big meals and discuss the ordeal with their families."

"I feel very good, very relieved," said Carl Gates, chief psychologist at the prison.

"They treated me like a brother, a member of the family," said Gene Dixon, a freed legal technician who said he would have dinner out Friday night with his family to celebrate his release and the Thanksgiving dinner he missed at home.

The eight-day siege at the detention center in Oakdale, La., ended Sunday when 1,000 inmates released their 26 hostages. A Cuban-born Roman Catholic priest, Auxiliary Bishop Agustin Roman of Miami, was considered instrumental in bringing that standoff to an end.

Bishops in Haiti link army, death

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops said Friday the army was involved in the killing spree that destroyed a free election, and they urged Haitians to keep the military-run junta from making its own election rules.

Opposition groups called a general strike beginning Monday to oust the junta, which has ruled since President Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country Feb. 7, 1986, ending nearly 30 years of family dictatorship.

The city was quiet Friday. The body of a man with the top of his head blown off lay in the sun most of the morning in front of the national cathedral.

In Washington, the Senate condemned the breakdown of the democratic process in Haiti and held the junta responsible for the violence.

On election day last Sunday, gangs of men armed with machine guns and machetes roamed Port-au-Prince, killing people at random in the streets and slaughtering others at voting stations while military patrols did nothing. The civilian Electoral Council was forced to cancel the election within hours.

When voting stopped the violence abated, but at the end of the day 34 people were dead, 75 were wounded and the first real election since Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, Jean-Claude's father, was like another corpse in the streets.

"The bishops of Haiti express their absolute indignation against these acts of violence, undignified for a country which calls itself civilized," said a statement signed by the 10 bishops, read over Radio Metropole and the church station Radio Soleil.

After condemning the military's "arbitrary arrests of youths in Port-au-Prince and the countryside, the bishops declared: "Our country is experiencing the agony of well-organized terror."

"It is the first time we see in Haiti armed civilians burning election ballots in public places, even in polling stations, with the complicity of the armed forces," they said.

On a tape provided to both stations, several bishops read separate parts of the statement without identifying themselves.

They rejected a junta election decree, which dissolved the autonomous Electoral Council and asked churches and other civic organizations to name a new one.

In remarks on Radio Metropole earlier Friday, Bishop Willie Romelus of Jeremie said: "Those who govern the country believe they have reached the point where they can block democracy ... but all the people must now join hands to block their maneuvers. Everybody in the country and in the world understands that the junta is of bad faith."

Reagan comes under fire as the summit approaches

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Washington prepared on Friday to receive Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the Reagan administration reported Soviet progress on human rights and President Reagan came under fire for saying his arms control critics accept "the inevitability of war."

A semi-annual State Department report on the Soviet record came out four days before Reagan is to meet with Gorbachev, sign an arms accord and discuss Soviet treatment of Jews and dissidents and other issues with his Soviet counterpart.

The report found the Soviet performance under Gorbachev's regime "improved dramatically in some cases" but "violations continued and the structural and legal apparatus that makes official repression possible remained in place."

Reagan ran into flak at home, from friends. The president briefed congressional leaders on his summit preparations and engaged in what one called "a good strong colloquy" with Senate Republican leader, Bob Dole of Kansas.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said Dole asked Reagan to explain his comment in a television interview Thursday that opponents of the treaty "down in their deepest thoughts have accepted that war is inevitable." Reagan also said critics — most of them conservatives — were "ignorant of the advances that have been made in verification" to guard against Soviet cheating.

"I don't think that anyone sitting around that table was ready to admit being ignorant,"

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said later.

Dole refused to discuss what he told Reagan, but he made public a letter to the president saying it was only prudent for senators to withhold judgment on the treaty until a text is available. Dole wrote: "Mr. President, this issue is not a test of loyalty to our party or to you, as some have tried to portray it."

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., said he was "appalled" by Reagan's remark. Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Who., said, "What an appalling charge for the president of the United States to make. ... This senator does not see the inevitability of war and that is why I dare question what might be in this treaty."

But the treaty won praise from some Republicans and some Democrats. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said he was "cautiously optimistic that it will fit for Senate approval."

Reagan brushed aside reporters. "I am not going to take any questions," he said. "We have only a limited time here this morning and a busy schedule today."

"It is our belief in the avoidability of war that makes us take these issues so seriously," Frank Gaffney Jr., ousted two weeks ago as the Pentagon's top arms control specialist, told reporters, in response to Reagan's comment.

"It is our conviction that nuclear weapons, in particular, have been absolutely essential over the past 40 years to preventing war, of any kind," Gaffney said.

Cease-fire talks end in stalemate

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The first cease-fire talks between Nicaragua's government and U.S.-backed rebels ended in a stalemate Friday and the mediator said a Christmas truce was unlikely.

Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the Roman Catholic primate of Nicaragua, said the Sandinistas had rejected his proposal for a two-part Christmas truce that called on the government to lift a state of emergency and declare a general amnesty.

Obando said the Sandinista response stalemated the talks and that on his return to Nicaragua he would ask President Daniel Ortega to authorize face to face meetings between the warring parties.

"I'm going to suggest that the two parties sit down together to accelerate the negotiations so that so many people don't continue to die," Obando told reporters. "Every day, 50 more young Nicaraguans die."

Obando's proposal closely paralleled the cease-fire plan the Contra rebels have put forth as a step toward ending Nicaragua's 6-year-old civil war.

The cardinal reported the Sandinistas said they would accept his truce conditions only if the United States halted all aid to the Contras and Honduras quit offering the rebels a sanctuary along Nicaragua's northern border.

That reflected the Nicaraguan government's long-held position that its adversaries and neighboring countries must act with it to halt the conflict that has claimed more than 40,000 lives.

At a news conference following almost seven hours of separate talks with the two sides over two days, the cardinal said he had proposed a 36-hour truce on Dec. 7-8 for the celebration of the Immaculate Conception Catholic holiday and a cease-fire between Dec. 22 and Jan. 6 for the Christmas and New Year holidays.

At the same time, Obando said, he had called for continuing negotiations between Dec. 9 and Jan. 7 to seek agreement on the broader cease-fire called for in a peace accord signed on Aug. 7 by the presidents of Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala and Costa Rica.

Measures in that accord require the Sandinistas to broaden press freedom, grant amnesty to political prisoners and lift the country's 5-year-old state of emergency.

BUSINESS

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

- The nation's civilian jobless rate returned to a decade-low 5.9 percent in November as 315,000 more Americans found work. The 0.1 percentage point drop from October brought the rate back to the September level.
- The government's main economic forecasting gauge edged down 0.2 percent in October, the first setback in nine months. The drop in the index of leading economic indicators was blamed on the stock market's plunge.
- Construction spending dropped 0.5 percent during October, the first decline since March. Sales of new homes edged down 1.5 percent.
- Higher prices for fresh fruits and vegetables in November helped fuel a 3.1 percent increase in commodity prices.
- Orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods climbed 1.1 percent in October, reflecting healthy demand in the transportation sector.
- The nation's non-farm businesses increased their efficiency in producing goods and services by 3.6 percent from July through September, the best performance since the first quarter of 1986.
- Sales of domestic cars and light trucks rose 9.9 percent during late November from the same period a year ago.
- The Senate Finance Committee gave final approval to a two-year, $23 billion tax increase to help reduce the budget deficit. The next move is up to the full Senate, which is expected to consider the tax increase and other parts of the deficit-reduction plan in the coming week.
- Big-name brokerage firms announced deals to shore up foundations shaken by the market collapse. Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. said it would buy E. F. Hutton Group Inc. in a deal worth nearly $1 billion. PaineWebber Inc. agreed to sell an 18 percent stake to Japan's Yasuda Mutual Life Insurance Co. for $300 million. Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. said it invested in Carl H. Pforzheimer & Co., a specialist on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.
- NASA named four companies as winners of billions of dollars in contracts for construction of a space station. The contracts may eventually be valued at $6.5 billion and could provide about 12,000 jobs.
- A federal bankruptcy judge gave Texaco Inc. more time to offer a plan to reorganize its finances following a report of progress in its negotiations with Pennzoil Co. over a $10.3 billion judgment.
- Pilots for Pan American World Airways said they had reached a tentative agreement with the airline on a three-year contract that would exchange wage cuts for profit sharing and protection against takeovers.
- The Indian government filed criminal charges against Union Carbide Corp. two days before the third anniversary of the gas leak in Bhopal.
- Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan endorsed a proposal to mix the banking and securities industries but warned that overly rapid deregulation could be dangerous.
- Nine commercial banks failed on Thursday, setting a record for the most bank closings in a single day in the 53-year history of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Market feels October sting

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — From the viewpoint of many investors, the stock market crash may have wreaked its worst havoc in the historic days of October.

But countless people who work in the investment industry itself are just beginning to feel the sting of its tail.

Whatever the securities markets do from here on out, the brokers, traders and deal makers collectively known as "Wall Street" face a wrenching period of unsettlement in the months, possibly years, ahead.

Layoffs and cutbacks already have started in many parts of the business, and more are sure to come. And for the survivors, visions of future triumphs have been dimmed or wiped out.

That somber picture was plain to see as industry officials gathered in Boca Raton this past week for their early December rite of palaver and partying, known formally as the annual meeting of the Securities Industry Association.

True to their diehard optimism, they thought to put the situation in its instructive light. After all, they said, any veteran of the game has seen tough times before.

"It's a cyclical business — it always has been, it always will be," said John Bachmann, managing principal of Edward D. Jones & Co. who is beginning his second year as chairman of the association.

In the "Saint Louis Room," a popular midnight gathering spot in the hotel, a broker from that city serving up hot dogs and beer cheerily waved off a suggestion that the crowd seemed smaller and quieter than in years gone by.

"The private parties are just running a little late," he said. "Everybody will be here."

In fact, however, "everybody" wasn't even in town. Top executives of many big-name firms did not come to the convention, but were back home minding the store.

Two of those firms were preoccupied with negotiations in New York mapping plans for Shearson Lehman Brothers to take over E. F. Hutton.

The stock market itself, meanwhile, endured another rocky week. At the close on Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average stood at 1,768.44, down 143.74 points from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite fell 1.10 to 125.91, the American Stock Market value index slipped 4.65 to 231.90, and the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market fell 5.83 to 292.92.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 191 million shares a day, up from 114 million the previous week. For those who did make it to Boca Raton, there were some somber messages to absorb.

David Ruder, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, warned the industry that it had a big job to do to restore public confidence in the markets.

Deposits poured into insured S&Ls in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deposits poured into insured accounts at savings and loan institutions in October as investors sought to get off the stock market roller coaster, a government report indicated Friday.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said new over-the-counter deposits shot up $6.1 billion at federally insured thrift institutions, a record for October and the biggest monthly increase in more than three years.

"We're seeing an increase in deposits as a result of nervousness about the stock market," said James Barth, the bank board's chief economist. "This dramatizes the confidence people have in federally insured institutions," he said.

The large one-month gain contrasted sharply with the general pattern for most of this year. Deposits had steadily dwindled at S&Ls as investors sought other places to put their funds.

Deposits slipped in 10 of the 12 months prior to October, falling $1.6 billion in September and $541 million in August.

For the first 10 months of this year, net new deposits dropped by $7.7 billion, but they would have been down by almost twice that amount if it had not been for the big increase in October.

Some of the gain can be attributed to expected seasonal factors, Barth said.

Customers, after withdrawing money in late summer and September for vacations and tuition bills, usually begin replenishing savings accounts in October.

However, about three-quarters of the October jump came from deposits placed by brokers on behalf of investors, a strong indication that the stock market volatility was the chief cause, he said.

Mark Obrinsky, an economist with the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, the industry's largest trade group, said the new deposits "won't drain away in a short period."

"Sooner or later (investors) will look to do other things with their money, but only if they think there are good alternatives," he said.

However, Paul Getman, an economist with The Wafa Group, a forecasting firm based in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said the increase in deposits will be "very limited and very temporary."

Depending on how long it takes for the markets to settle, the flow in funds to S&Ls should reverse by the end of the year, certainly not much later than the end of March, he said.

"There's a certain amount of irony in this because if the stock market can be considered sick, a lot of S&Ls can be considered dead," Getman said.

Jobless rate dips to 5.9%

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's job market ignored the stock market crash as a manufacturing boom helped put 315,000 more Americans to work last month and drop unemployment to a decade-low 5.9 percent.

The November jobless rate, reported Friday by the government, was a one-tenth point decline from October's civilian unemployment of 6 percent and matched September's 5.9 percent. The last time it was lower was in July 1979 at 5.7 percent.

"The surge in new jobs shows American business is still high on the economy," said Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The Reagan administration also rejoiced over the numbers.

"This is especially encouraging in the view of the recent stock market declines," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "The economic expansion continues into its 60th month and signs indicate that it will continue much longer."

Over the past two months, both before and after the Oct. 19 stock market fall, private businesses have added 612,000 jobs to their payrolls, 145,000 of them in manufacturing alone.

Federal, state and local governments have increased their payrolls by another 198,000 people, according to the figures Friday from the Labor Department.

"Even with the crash, the U.S. job-creating machine remains incredible," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, a Wall Street brokerage house.

SNET reviews structure

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Southern New England Telecommunications Corp. is reviewing its organization after an early retirement plan the company offered drew more takers than expected, a spokeswoman said Friday.

The spokeswoman, Elissa Jenny, said SNET may have to hire people to replace some of the 570 managers who accepted the early retirement option. She said SNET expected that between 300 people and 500 people would accept the offer.

She said there were no plans at present to rehire any of the people who chose early retirement.

Jenny said the company is looking at its entire staffing structure as it decides which people now working in planning and organization ends of the company will be "redeployed" to field offices.

Brokerage to lay off 1,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Kidder Peabody & Co., a prestigious Wall Street firm hurt by the insider-trading scandal and the October stock market crash, said Friday that it would lay off 1,000 people and cut expenses by 20 percent to save $100 million annually.

The announcement marked the latest move by a major Wall Street firm to restructure, consolidate and reduce costs since the market collapse. It came one day after E. F. Hutton Group Inc. agreed to merge with Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., a move expected to result in as many as 5,000 layoffs.

Kidder said it also planned to reduce year-end bonuses by 20 percent, merge about 10 percent of its regional offices with larger branches and take other steps to streamline and emphasize strengths.

"Quite simply, our goal is to structure and implement a better way of doing our businesses," Silas S. Cathcart, chief executive officer, said in a statement.

Cathcart said the plan "was based on a thorough strategic review of both the changing environment for investment banking and of Kidder Peabody's strengths and the requirements of its client base."

The statement did not specify when the layoffs would start or who would be affected but said the reduction would bring the total staff back to early 1986 levels, when the firm employed 6,000.

Once the oldest privately held firm on Wall Street, Kidder sold an 80 percent-owned stake in itself to General Electric Co. in April 1986, which substantially boosted Kidder's capital base.

Use of 'cop' disrespectful

To the Editor:

Why must you refer to our police officers as "Cops" in your headlines?

I am a citizen and in no way affiliated with the police department and I must tell you that I get a negative reaction every time I read the Herald and see the word "Cop" blaring out at me.

We are trying to teach our children to have respect for our police officers (and others) and, somehow, "Cops" does not sound respectful.

I am a defense counsel and usually on the other side from our police officers; however, they always treat me with respect and I always treat them with respect.

I noticed that the Journal Inquirer does the same thing; somehow I expect more from the Manchester Herald.

Would you consider using "Police Officer" in place of "Cop"? I'll bet that even the police officers would be pleased.

Thanks to crowd, bands

To the Editor:

My most sincere thanks to each resident who lined the streets of the 1987 Manchester Road Race course and to each band or family who played music for all to hear. You made the race a "happening."

This year the number of bands and their placement along the route outdid the last 11 years I've run. I was especially impressed and pushed up the hill by the musical groups spread along Hartford Road. As a runner, I train for the race, but the music and the enthusiasm of Manchester maximize the effect of that training. Thank you all — from the couple in their old car on Porter Street who honked the horn, to the woman with her cow-bell and the band leader on Center Street whose hand is stretched out for the runners to hit as they pass.

A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE'S WORST FEAR THIS HOLIDAY SEASON

Potomac Potpourri

Stocking-stuffer idea

Whether you're doing your Christmas shopping or searching for a few last-minute stocking-stuffers, there's a new cassette on the market that could fill the void in your holiday gift list.

Capitol Steps, a musical political satire troupe of current and former congressional staff members, has released its latest cassette, "Ronald the Red-Faced Reagan," just in time for Christmas.

The 19-song cassette contains musical parodies of various highly publicized topics. Appropriately printed in red and trimmed in green, the cassette includes: "It Came Upon A Maniac Fear," "Here Come Democrats," "God Tested Rev. Robinson," "O Little Town of Washington," "Hark When Gerald Ford Was King," "Twas the Night Before Recess," "Busts of Ollie," and many more.

Sung to the tune of well-known Christmas songs, each selection highlights major news events of 1987, and features such subjects as Sens. Joseph Biden and Gary Hart who were forced to withdraw their names from the list of possible Democratic presidential nominees, the National Football League strike, and the federal budget.

"O Little Town of Washington," sung to the tune of "O Little Town of Bethlehem," is one of the Capitol Steps' classics. According to the song sheet which accompanies each cassette, the lyrics say:

"O Little Town of Washington
How come your people lie?
The papers say
The CIA
is first to falsify.
They claimed the late Bill Casey
When they were naming names.
The deity
Will never see
The things Bob Woodward claims."

According to the song sheet, Capitol Steps is celebrating the holidays "thanks to lots of material from Democratic candidates and Republican Supreme Court nominees."

The song sheet also contains an order form, which says: "If you don't use it, just run it through a shredder and throw it on your Christmas tree" for added decoration.

Capitol Steps has been performing in Washington ever since 1981, when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee threw a Christmas party. They have four previous albums, including: "Thank God I'm A Contra Boy," "Workin' Nine To Ten," "We Arm The World," and "Live at the Shoreham." The group's songs are heard regularly on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered."

Targeting the deadbeats

Uncle Sam is serious about finding deadbeats who are delinquent in paying consumer and business loans, fines, penalties and other debts to the government.

Six private companies have been awarded two-year contracts from the General Services Administration to put the arm on delinquents. Companies will be paid on a contingency fee basis for their collections, ranging from almost 8 percent to 40 percent, depending on the type of debt and the effort exerted to get the money.

The cost of the collection will be added to the debt, so collections can be made at no cost to the government or taxpayers.

Russians are coming

When Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev arrives in Washington for the summit with President Reagan, he'll no doubt see and hear signs of one of the freedoms Americans enjoy — the freedom of expression.

The conservative International Freedom Foundation is one of many groups preparing to express its opinion of the U.S.-Soviet arms talks.

The IFF opposes the intermediate-range nuclear forces treaty Reagan and Gorbachev are expected to sign, and its members want to make sure their point of view is well known.

Thousands of black and white posters with a large photograph of Soviet military forces parading in Moscow's Red Square will be hung up around Washington, especially along the route on which Gorbachev is expected to be driven through the city. The caption reads: "The Soviet Union needs you! Support the INF treaty."

Are we up to another supreme effort?

WASHINGTON — Arguments and recriminations over the past are the red meat that excites the political appetite of Washington. The future is usually described in vague but optimistic terms — such as Ronald Reagan's "shining city on a hill." Unfortunately, the politicians' rosy view of America's future, while it invariably gets votes, is as far removed from reality as some of the twisted interpretations given to past history. The future is going to be challenging and tough: to compete in the high-technology revolution that is dictating the course of world events, the United States will have to pull its socks up and get to work.

This is the theme emphasized repeatedly by "futurists" — those multi-faceted experts who make their living advising business people and government officials what they should be doing to make sure America isn't caught short in 20 or 30 years. Without exception, these futurists tell us that the United States is already in the grip of a "trans-industrial revolution" — a volatile period of transition from smokestacks to communications, from manufacturing to information. And they warn that we (or, to be accurate, our grandchildren) are in for rough times if we don't produce the leadership to meet the threat — and the opportunity — of this economic and social revolution head-on.

To meet this formidable challenge, the experts say, will require a concerted national effort even greater than the massive mobilization in World War II — an industrial and sociological miracle that is awe-inspiring even 45 years later.

But where are the leaders who can galvanize a nation to make such a supreme effort, particularly when the goal is as dry and uninspiring as economic progress, rather than the blood-stirring hope of military victory? It will be a remarkable president indeed who can strike responsive chords of patriotism and cooperation by placing the theme of economic survival. Persuading Americans to work together in wartime is easier than creating a united effort for prosperity. The business world has never been known for the buddy system that fuels and enables military achievement.

Even the wisest of policies won't protect everyone from hard times. Difficulties are inevitable for many institutions and individuals as the dislocation of our economy intensifies.

The hardest hit will be our cities and the people who live in them, the selection process, as the candidates wheel and deal to win the support that will put them over the top in the later ballots. One portent of such a scenario is the National Education Association's failure to agree on a single candidate to support. The powerful teachers' group will probably endorse three, or even four, candidates, and other Democratic pressure groups are likely to do the same.

Tremendous new capital investment will be needed for the plants, equipment, research, development and worker retraining that can assure America's survival in the high-tech age. But the cold reality is that both business and government will have less discretionary funds available. One big reason for this is the enormous and still-growing debt, which drains away billions of dollars in debt service that could be better spent on productive investment.

One certainty in the flight from the cities is a housing boom in rural areas. But the experts predict that this one will be different from earlier housing booms. They foresee most of these homes being built with flexible modular components. Japan and Western Europe are already producing sophisticated modular housing units, and if U.S. industry doesn't wake up, the next century could see a flood of imported housing much like the foreign car boom in recent years.

Bring on the brokers

Democratic presidential contenders are fast coming to the realization that the Atlanta convention is very likely to be deadlocked, with no candidate controlling enough delegates to assure nomination on the first ballot.

That could mean a "brokered"

selection process, as the candidates wheel and deal to win the support that will put them over the top in the later ballots. One portent of such a scenario is the National Education Association's failure to agree on a single candidate to support. The powerful teachers' group will probably endorse three, or even four, candidates, and other Democratic pressure groups are likely to do the same.

Rev. Jesse Jackson is in the catbird seat by all the experts' reckoning. Though they are convinced he won't get the nomination, he is certain to control a major role bloc of delegates. So he can pretty well name his price to the successful suitor.

In another contender, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, for example, winds up with a plurality on the first ballot, a "stop Dukakis" move could develop — again with Jackson playing a crucial role. A third possibility: deadlock resulting in a draft of New York Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Selling off coming?

The White House is tossing and turning with a new economic nightmare: the prospective massive liquidation of assets as corporations and investors raise the cash they need by selling their stocks. Nearly a trillion dollars of net worth evaporated in the stock market's plunge from the end of August to late October. Any massive selloff to raise cash would, of course, send stock prices skidding again. Bankruptcies would mushroom, as the plummeting value of assets used as collateral would force banks to call in their loans.

Deck the halls with glasnost

By Chuck Stone

"If the parents become too violent, please stop the game, OK?"

consolidate his power to a position where he can't be displaced. The public fallout over his miscalculation in dumping his protégé, Boris Yeltsin, and his colleagues' grumblings about delays in glasnost attest to a vulnerability at home.

But glasnost does not operate in a vacuum. There are two areas in which brutal Soviet tyranny subverts the spirit of glasnost — the Soviet's unrelenting repression of Soviet Jews who wish to emigrate and the Soviet imperialistic adventure in Afghanistan.

Recently, 123 members of the United Nations demanded that the Soviet Union withdraw from Afghanistan. That's an increase of one over the previous year.

Closer to home, American Jews are planning a massive demonstration on Sunday in Washington — nine days before the first day of Hanukkah — to repeat the message to Gorbachev that Moses sent to the pharaoh: "Let my people go."

Widespread participation in Summit Sunday will strike a blow for moral consistency. A Reagan-Gorbachev summit is meaningless unless some movement is made to free Soviet refuseniks from their captivity.

"This is a crucial moment in Jewish history," said a spokesman for Summit Sunday. "We, as Jews, have a responsibility to be in Washington to support our brothers and sisters."

So do the rest of us as non-Jews. Those who believe all people should be free can help make a powerful statement for Washington to be part of the Soviet Jewry Freedom March, which will begin at 1 p.m.

Later, when Reagan and Gorbachev sit down to negotiate, both will recognize that such a great outpouring of American concern cannot be dismissed.

That summit underscores the irony that one of the most irrational anti-Communist presidents may be able to move this nation to a closer walk with peaceful co-existence.

But Reagan's inconsistency is consonant with the quirks of American diplomatic history. It took a career anti-Communist, Republican President Richard M. Nixon, to establish diplomatic relations with Communist China.

Between Monday and Thursday, we could witness a turning point in world history. The banning of nuclear weaponry affirms humankind's capability for avoiding reciprocal annihilation.

Next week, Reagan will have everything going for him. "Deck the halls" with glasnost and hope both men are infected by America's unique holiday spirit.

Soviet releases aren't solution, say emigres planning protests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet emigres, among them Natan Sharansky, on Friday said the Soviets' pre-summit release of as many as 73 people was a cynical gesture that made little change in the Kremlin's overall emigration policy.

"These are presents to the Americans on the eve of the summit. They are not the real solution," said Mikhail Kholmiansky, a Hebrew teacher whose brother is one of the people told this week they may emigrate.

Kholmiansky, Sharansky and other activists called a news conference in Washington to detail plans for a massive demonstration on behalf of Soviet Jews on Sunday, the day before Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's arrival for a summit with President Reagan.

But their discussion soon turned to this week's announcements in Moscow that some Soviets who had been waiting years to emigrate had finally been given permission to leave. It still was not clear Friday how many emigration cases had been cleared.

A diplomatic source in Moscow said 73 emigration cases had been cleared by a special commission in the Soviet Union. A second source said the Soviets had supplied the United States with 15 names, including those of "refuseniks" and several separated spouses. But the source said the 15 names supplied to the Americans likely were what are regarded by the Soviets as "cases," or the names of a senior family member representing all the other family members.

Sharansky, a former prisoner in Soviet labor camps who was permitted to emigrate to Israel in 1986, linked the action in Moscow to the release of other high-profile "prisoners of conscience" prior to meetings between Soviet and American officials.

"How upsetting the cynicism of this," Sharansky said. "We cannot have meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze every week."
 "This is important to the individuals, of course, but for our movement, it's important what kind of policy (there is) on the question of Jewish emigration," he said.

American Jewish leaders echoed Sharansky's comments, saying they remained disappointed in the exit visas.
 "All people welcome the idea of glasnost. But it has not yet applied to Soviet Jewry," said Morris Abram, chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, organizers of Sunday's rally. There has been "no change whatsoever" in the status of Jews under Gorbachev, he said.

 "On the question of emigration, it is very clear his position is stuck in concrete," Abram said.

Abram said he and rally organizers were not calling for an arms agreement to be directly linked to progress on human rights issues, but said "it would redound to the disadvantage of the credibility of the Soviet Union" if issues such as Jewish emigration are not dealt with.

The rally organizers said the demonstration was not aimed at disrupting or protesting the summit, but as a positive gesture of support for human rights issues they expect Reagan to raise.

"We want to emphasize that we do want peace, but it would matter what kind of peace there would be and what kind of life there would be in that peace," Kholmiansky said.

Vice President George Bush, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Nobel Laureate Elie Wiesel are among the people scheduled to address the rally, expected to be the largest ever in the nation's capital for a Jewish cause.

StAMFORD (AP) — A severe shortage of volunteers has forced the Stamford Salvation Army to suspend its hot meals program on the weekends, leaving the homeless here with few options for food.

Stopping a program — especially three weeks before Christmas — is rare for the Salvation Army, says a spokesman for the Southern New England Headquarters in Hartford.

"Most of these people aren't at financially zero, but they're so close to the edge," Capt. William Bentley of the Stamford Salvation Army, said Friday. "This puts a greater strain on them — it means two meals a day they're not going to get."

The weekend meals program was started six months ago on a trial basis, Bentley said, but was temporarily closed three weeks ago when the Salvation Army ran out of volunteers to supervise it.

Those who need food on the weekends can get a lunch from the New Covenant House, a soup kitchen. Barbara McKeivey, executive director of the Stamford Homeless Shelter, said Friday she is working with Meals on Wheels to try to provide more weekend meals here. She said she would know about a definite plan next week.

"This doesn't happen very often," she said. "But it's a cold out and they don't have food. It's an unfortunate situation, but we hope to get something worked out."

Bentley said a special kind of volunteer is needed to monitor the program.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Hope for home lies in the mess

DEAR ABBY: Divorces and annulments are granted for a spouse's refusal to perform sexually, but is it possible to get an annulment or divorce if a spouse fails to perform housekeeping duties?

"Susie" lived with her mother for the two years I dated her. That home was neat as a pin. I figured "like mother — like daughter." During our engagement, Sue talked about cooking my favorite foods, and caring for "our" home, so I assumed she was the domestic type. Boy, was I ever fooled!

After a hard day's work, I come home to dirty dishes, unmade beds, clothes littering the bathroom and her two cats prowling the kitchen counters. She tells me I am able to get my own breakfast. Then she spills some dry cereal into a bowl for our daughter's breakfast, slaps two pieces of bread together, glued with peanut butter, for the child's school lunch. If I have time, I boil an egg for the sweet little kid, and add an apple and a Thermos of milk.

I try to mop the sticky floors, vacuum and do some grocery shopping. When I ask her to please take my shirts out of the dryer and hang them up, she tells me I have been "spoiled rotten" by my mother. (How does she figure I learned to do all these jobs?)

How do I get this lady to assume some responsibility for making a comfortable home for all of us? Kindness hasn't worked.

SEETHING IN WASHINGTON

DEAR SEETHING: You can't "get" anybody to do anything. But your wife's sloppy housekeeping is the least of your problems. She appears to be a very uncaring mother as well. (And if you don't "have time" to prepare a decent lunch for the child — then what?)

This domestic situation isn't going to get better unless you both want to improve it. Get thee to a family counselor now before it becomes totally hopeless.

DEAR ABBY: Every year for many years, my husband and I have a New Year's Day luncheon, inviting the same group of married couples. They all act so happy to come and seem to have a wonderful time.

They say it's become a "tradition" now, and yet for several years, none of the couples — with the exception of one — has ever invited us to their homes. We hear through the grapevine about parties they have had and we feel hurt.

Abby, do you think they are trying to tell us something? We are considering canceling our next party — or maybe inviting a whole new set of friends.

HURT HOSTS

DEAR HURT: You invite people because you want their company. If they didn't want yours, they would find some excuse to decline. However, when your enjoyment ceases — it's time to break the tradition.

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't help but chuckle over the letter from the lady whose husband gets a headache during sex. I laughed because that's been my problem for several years now and I'm female!

I read somewhere that this was not unusual, especially if the person has problems with vascular headaches such as migraines. (I do.)

By the way, my husband always gets a stuffy nose from sex. It's become our little private joke that if his nose stops up and I have a headache, we must have had a real good time.

Louisville man gets artificial heart

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A 60-year-old man received an emergency artificial heart implant Friday, the first by artificial heart pioneer William DeVries in more than two years and his first temporary implant ever.

Walton Jones Jr. of Louisville went into surgery at 7:30 a.m. at Humana Hospital Audubon, said hospital spokeswoman Donna Hazle. The operation ended more than 10 hours later, and Jones was listed in critical condition, she said.

DeVries performed open-heart surgery on Jones on Thursday, but the operation was not successful. Ms. Hazle said. She said DeVries determined Jones would die without the emergency implant.

PREGNANCY

Pregnant women should be very hesitant and selective about taking drugs, stated Dr. M.L. Soentgen to the AMA Convention. Drugs may pass thru the placenta and stay in the bloodstream of the unborn baby longer than in the mother's blood stream. Toxic substances resulting from breakdown of the drug may also reach the fetus. The placenta is not always an effective barrier against transfer of drugs from mother to fetus.

The story behind the story

By Josie

Q. I love Rick Moranis. What has he been in, what will he be in next and will he and Dave Thomas team for any other Mackenzie Brothers movies? L.L. Frederickson, N.B., Canada

A. He's been in "Ghostbusters," "Little Shop of Horrors," "Club Paradise," "Streets of Fire," "The Breakfast Club," "The Wild Life" and "Head Office," among others. Next up could be any number of films currently offered, with one possibility being "The Flintstones." (He would play Barney to Jim Belushi's Fred.)

Regarding the Mackenzie Brothers, anything's possible, according to his agent, but a sequel to the Brothers' first, "Strange Brew," is, at this point, unlikely. "Strange Brew" was a box-office dud.

Anything you'd like to know about prominent personalities? Write to Josie, King Features Syndicate, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Rosanna Arquette

Q. Please tell me about Rosanna Arquette. J. N., Cape May, N.J.

A. She's 28 (born August 10, 1959), the granddaughter of comedian Cliff Arquette ("Charley Weaver") and daughter of director/performer Lewis Arquette and poet/political activist Mardi Arquette. She was born in New York and moved with her family to Chicago when she was 4 so that her father could take over the famed Second City improvisational troupe. When she was 9, the family moved briefly to L.A., before settling into an artists' commune in Front Royal, Va.

When she was 14, she decided that she'd rather be in New Jersey so she moved in with friends of her parents in Maplewood, N.J., and a year later, hitchhiked across the country with friends. By 17, she was living on her own in L.A., with her parents' consent, and trying to break into acting — which she did, effectively. A casting agent saw her in a local play, "Metamorphosis," and directed her toward TV.

She debuted in pretty lofty company: opposite Bette Davis in "The Secret of Harvest Home" in 1978, followed by her film debut in the less-lofty "Gorp." These roles led to steady work, however, in the TV series "Shirley" and "Class of '65," and the TV movies "Having Babies; Part Two," "Get Patty Hearst" and "Zuma Beach."

Gradually, the projects got better: the TV movies "The Wall," "The Long Way Home," "The Parade" and "Johnny Belinda." The project that really broke her career wide open, though, was "The Executioner's Song," in which she played the sexy, waif-like girlfriend of convicted murderer Gary Gilmore.

Her movie roles also started out forgettably and picked up speed: in "S.O.B." (as a topless hitchhiker), "More American Graffiti," "Baby, It's You," "Desperately Seeking Susan," "Silverado," "After Hours," "8 Million Ways to Die" and "Nobody's Fool."

Currently, she's in Italy filming the movie "The Big Blue"; she also co-stars in "Amazon Women on the Moon" which should be in release by the time you read this.

She married composer James Newton Howard last year and was briefly married while in her teens. Another romance, with Toto's Steve Porcaro, was the inspiration for the band's hit song of a few years back, "Rosanna."

Edward Woodward

Q. Would you tell me about Edward Woodward of "The Equalizer"? He plays very interesting roles. Mildred Scioscia, Moscow, Pa.

A. "Teddy" Woodward, as his friends call him, is 57, from Croyden, England, and as a child, wanted to become a journalist. He changed his mind when the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art offered him a scholarship to study acting when he was 16.

Despite his obvious talent, he was advised that unless he changed his name, he would never become a star so he obliged, changing it to Oliver Ward (his father's name plus Woodward, minus the Wood). That didn't seem to make ultimate sense, though, so he changed it back and after a year at RADA, left to enter the repertory system to try his luck as an actor under his real name.

He did very well, ultimately winding up at the famed Royal Shakespeare Company and National Theater. He also appeared on Broadway about 20 years ago in the play "Rattle of a Simple Man" and the musical "High Spirits," and upon his return to England became the star of a long-running and financially lucrative (for him) series "Callan," in which he played a former agent not far from "The Equalizer."

He also appeared in a variety of films: "Becket," "Young Winston," "The Wicker Man," the Australian "Breaker Morant" (his first break on a major international level) and the more recent disaster "King David," and TV productions: "Winston Churchill: The Wilderness Years" and "A Christmas Carol" with George C. Scott. Also, interestingly, he's a musical-variety star in England, the host of a number of TV variety specials and a performer with 17 albums to his credit.

Recently, while back in England filming a mystery for TV, "Codename: Kyril" (to be seen on Showtime sometime this season) he suffered a heart attack that sidelined him for several months. As we go to press, though, he's expected back in New York within a few weeks to continue "Equalizer" filming for this season.

He and second wife Michelle (Dotrice, an actress) have a daughter Emily, 4. He also has three grown children, all actors, from his first marriage.

"Yuppie Flu" may not be a myth

By Sandra Gurvis

Charlene, a 35-year-old married mother of two, wept with relief when she learned she had chronic Epstein-Barr virus (CEBV). "I'd been sick off and on for over two years and no one could tell me what was wrong. One doctor thought I had hepatitis, another sent me for an eye test, still another prescribed tranquilizers and suggested counseling. At last what had been plaguing me had a name. Yet her diagnosis, like that of thousands who claim to suffer from CEBV, has generated a tremendous amount of controversy within the medical community. Some doctors believe CEBV is a genuine ailment, while others regard it as a buzz word for hypochondria. Still others consider it a catch-all diagnosis for symptoms that can't be explained, as had been the case with low blood sugar, iron-poor blood, and thyroid disorders in the past.

According to medical definitions, Epstein-Barr is a herpes virus, similar to chicken pox, genital lesions and cold sores. It is closely related to infectious mononucleosis in the United States and Western Europe. Burkitt's lymphoma (a tumor of the jaw) in Africa, and cancer of the nose and mouth in Asia.

"The Epstein-Barr virus is present in the white blood cells in over 90 percent of the American population," explains Dr. Ronald Glaser, chairman of the Ohio State University Department of Medical Microbiology and Immunology in Columbus. The virus is believed to be transmitted by saliva. "Usually it remains dormant until the immune system weakens, causing it to proliferate."

And unlike mono, which strikes during adolescence and college years, CEBV affects adults. "During the first three to six weeks of incubation, patients show few or no symptoms," states Dr. James Jones of the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine in Denver. "The illness takes hold, may worsen, then reaches a plateau, waxing and waning at seemingly unpredictable intervals."

Victims of the disease, dubbed the "yuppie flu," are primarily women, health professionals and high-level executives in their 30s and 40s. The symptoms, they say, range from partially to completely disabling, cutting them off from their jobs, recreational activities and loved ones.

"The disease took over my life," Charlene asserts. "I ran a counseling program for 13 years and had to quit. Whenever I have bad spells, I'm forced to hire a babysitter to help care for my kids. I love my career and my family, but I'm too sick to handle them full-time."

Also nicknamed the "Raggedy Ann Syndrome" because sufferers feel as if they've had the stuffing knocked out of them, CEBV first received national attention in 1985 after an outbreak of a mysterious illness in Incline Village, near Lake Tahoe.

According to an account in Hippocrates magazine, two local doctors, Paul Cheney and Dan Peterson, began seeing an uncommonly large number of patients with persistent, flu-like symptoms.

The patients tested negatively for mono, so Cheney and Peterson did some research, coming upon articles on CEBV in a medical journal. They then ordered a recently developed diagnostic test from a commercial laboratory. The results showed high levels of antibodies to the virus in sufferers. Thus, a syndrome was born — or perhaps reborn.

Because of the outbreak appeared to be clustered in the Lake Tahoe area, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) sent two researchers to investigate. Their highly publicized report in May 1986 questioned not only the validity of the lab test but pointed out that healthy people also had high antibody counts.

The findings led many physicians to assume that CEBV was a fraud, even though more and more cases kept surfacing. "There's a large element of 'me, too' in this," says Ohio State's Glaser. "Once news of a disease reaches the media, people start thinking they have it if they're tired or depressed."

However, "not everyone who is sick is imagining this," he insists. "Many are truly ill. They have clinical symptoms to prove it. And well-adjusted people who lead vigorous, active lives don't suddenly become too ill to lift their heads. Something is out there. We just don't know exactly what."

The CDC is currently compiling a standard clinical diagnosis for Chronic Fatigue Syndrome for use by all doctors. "We've had similar outbreaks since the 1930s," explains Carlos Lopez, chief of the Herpes-Virus Division there.

"The scientific literature has described something like it for the past 50 years." It has also been known as Royal Free disease, epidemic neuromyasthenia and myalgia encephalitis. Lopez hopes the definition will serve as an unifying force in identifying the syndrome. "Our investigators were looking at one specific virus, Epstein-Barr (in Incline Village). What we're now dealing with is a series of symptoms, possibly resulting from a number of viruses."

Other causes might be infectious agents, or the body's inability to respond to infection, toxic materials, stress or other psychological reactions, or a combination of these factors.

And research is beginning to uncover a few things. Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Institutes of Health, who also first identified the AIDS virus, recently discovered a new herpes virus (HBLV) which may be involved in Chronic Fatigue. Researchers are currently trying to isolate HBLV in patients who already have the syndrome.

Preliminary results of a study by David Purtilo of the University of Nebraska Medical Center link Chronic Fatigue with viruses known to cause sore throats (adenoviruses). And Ohio State's Glaser is studying diagnostic "markers" associated with the Epstein-Barr virus and nasopharyngeal (nasal) carcinoma. He hopes to find an antibody that will serve as a common denominator in diagnosing some cases of the syndrome.

Other literature has revealed a positive relationship between emotional upheavals and lowered immune responses. "So a stressful event may reactivate or make symptoms worse for Chronic Fatigue patients since their immune systems are already down," observes Jones of the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine.

Tonya, a former neonatal nurse, was not only forced to give up driving because of perceptual problems and headaches, but she also struggles with depression. "Sometimes I tell my husband to forget about me and marry someone healthy," she comments. "Fortunately, he doesn't listen."

Both women had considered suicide at an earlier point in their illness.

Like research, diagnosis and treatment for Chronic Fatigue are still in the embryonic stages. A few virus-specific laboratory and tissue sample procedures are available, but no single, conclusive test.

"Many symptoms are shared with other diseases, so a diagnosis of Chronic Fatigue can be overlooked," states the CDC's Lopez. Conversely, the syndrome can mask more serious ailments, such as AIDS, Hodgkin's disease, rheumatoid arthritis and lymphoma. "It can get tricky," adds Lopez.

But even though Chronic Fatigue Syndrome affects the immune system, "it is neither spread like nor related to AIDS," emphasizes Abdou. "People with AIDS can contract the syndrome only because their immune systems are lowered."

A number of experimental treatments are also being attempted. These include small doses of antidepressant medications, injections of intravenous gamma globulin and antiviral drugs, such as acyclovir. "Results range from nothing at all (acyclovir) to some improvement," explains Abdou. "It's too early to tell."

Other remedies — mass doses of vitamins, massage therapy, acupuncture, Zen meditation and yoga, to name a few — are met with varying amounts of skepticism from the medical community. "But people are desperate," says Rose. "They'll try anything to alleviate their pain."

"JUST THE FACTS" ABOUT CHRONIC FATIGUE SYNDROME

"People with Chronic Fatigue Syndrome can usually give you the exact date it entered their lives," states Mike Rose, spokesperson for the 8,000-member National CEBV Syndrome Association which links over 250 support groups nationwide. "They wake up feeling terrible one morning and it doesn't go away." Specifically, this may mean one or more of the following:

- fatigue persistent to the point of becoming completely disabling
- low-grade fever
- night sweats
- aches and pains in muscles and joints
- swollen lymph glands
- depression
- lack of memory and concentration
- recurrent sore throat
- allergy-like reactions
- headaches

"The syndrome is a major nuisance but it's not fatal," observes Jones. "And it stops getting worse after a point, especially if sufferers learn to listen to their body's responses, and curtail their activities accordingly."

Boxleitner is home on the ranch

By Linda-Marie Singer

Bruce Boxleitner can smile now recalling his four years with CBS's "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," "but when we reached our final season, the series didn't hold joy for me anymore. Instead of leaving Stetson in the trailer that son of a gun was always on my back, leading eventually to the break-up of my marriage. It's not my imagination, but it sure seems that very few actors starring in successful TV shows remain married."

Taking time off and enjoying his freedom, Boxleitner rambles around his sprawling three-acre ranch. It's here that the delectably clean-cut actor has so often found that moment of tranquility.

Stopping at the barn, popping open a beer, Boxleitner casts a lingering look around his spread hidden away in the hills of southern California.

"Lee Stetson, in case you're wondering, would never approve of this lifestyle," he comments, taking a seat on one of the chairs made entirely from tree branches. "For one thing, my television character wasn't a family man. (The actor and the former Kathryn "Kitty" Holcomb have two sons: Sam, age 7, and Lee, 1½, who live with their mother.) For another, that guy would never get his shoes soiled like this," he says, kicking up a low cloud of dust around his saddle-colored cowboy boots.

"So the show was wonderful while it lasted, and I held myself together pretty well while all these personal things... But the chemistry wasn't there anymore between us (Kate Jackson), and it's come to an end. As they say, it's time to catch up on life. You know, put work on the 'B' side, and concentrate on the 'A' side."

Obviously Mr. Slicks and Socks (his two quarter horses) agree, as they neigh in response. Their owner rises, stuffs his royal blue T-shirt into his jeans, and strides over to his friends. After some quiet conversation, he turns away. But their eyes follow and they begin, once more, to neigh.

"I'll tell you what's really funny about this business. When 'Bring 'Em Back Alive' (his first series) folded, my name was put on the bottom of the list. Once a show's gone down, the executives aren't too anxious to grab you, especially when it wasn't a hit.

"Of course everyone thought I would click since it resembled 'Raiders of the Lost Ark,' but — our luck! We were put opposite 'Happy Days,' and I think they were in their 10th season and going strong. That just killed us.

"Disillusioned? You bet. I worked so hard and they canceled us. I pleaded with Bud Grant from CBS for another four episodes, but he wouldn't do it. 'Don't worry,' he said, 'we'll find something even better.' Boy, was he right!"

At the same time "Scarecrow" came along, Boxleitner also received an offer to star in "The Yellow Rose" with another beautiful woman, Cybill Shepherd.

"After reading the script, I can't tell you how it so appealed to me. I remember feeling, 'Oh, man, this is what I really want. A series with a modern western setting. It's so much more me than playing an undercover agent.' Yet deep down I just knew the one with Jackson would last, and that's the one I chose." The pilot did not make it.

The rancher looks away and for a while there's no sound in the valley except for him popping open the lid of another beer. "I've been here for 10 years — actually, the exact time of my marriage to Kitty. The boys are down the block and I see them whenever I want. Because they don't live with me, it's wrong to say I don't have a family anymore. We're living a different lifestyle." He smiles.

"Call it the contemporary American lifestyle if you like. Truthfully, I could have left. Moved into town. Boarded the horses. Or I could have gone to bars like some people. After all, I did lose a series and a wife."

"Right now I'm trying to figure out who the heck I am. I'm content in many ways and confused in others. I feel kind of lost, and don't really know what I'm going to do."

If prodded about another series, he shifts gears and gets somewhat giddy. "And what would you have me play? Comedy? No, I leave that up to John Ritter. Anyway, it's not a good career move to go flying into another program while 'Scarecrow and Mrs. King' is not even cold in the ground."

"Of course, speak to me in another 10 months and I'll be ready to do just about anything! But please no cops or doctors. You'll think I'm just lazy but I don't want to learn all those stupid medical terms and say things like, 'You've got a hemoglobin in your fronzan.' However, I wouldn't rule out a good western."

For Boxleitner, westerns are his lucky horseshoe. Back up to the early '70s and you might remember him as James Arness' nephew in the TV movie, "The Macabans," which landed a role in "How the West Was Won." "My goal was always to be a leading man. Thankfully, 'Bring 'Em Back Alive' did that for me. Finally, I became the guy who gets the girl in the end. He stops in embarrassment. "Or anywhere else I could get her!" He laughs. "Well, we are down in the barn..."

Boxleitner reflects on his series and plans to keep marching on.

From one aroma to another. Recently, Estee Lauder thought enough of the appealing star to sign him to a long-term contract. "It's that tuxedo image they liked," he adds with a glowing smile. "Tom Selleck and Ted Danson did those types of endorsements years ago, so I suppose now it's my turn. I'm not knocking it, because I get to meet the fans in incredible numbers and stay in touch with reality."

"What I mean is, I'm not like that big star sitting in Benedict Canyon or Beverly Hills somewhere and never once seeing who in the hell they're doing this for. What's amazing is that in one hour of publicity, I manage to sign between 200 and 300 autographs. One time, though, I traveled to three stores in one day. I think they nearly carried me out! But I feel very good about doing this and giving everyone — even if it's two seconds — a little of me."

Gidget Thompson, his ranch manager and friend, reminds him of two obstreperous admirers who wanted more than a "little of me" from the popular entertainer. "He had just come back from New Mexico (filming "Gambler 3" with Kenny Rogers) and decided to saddle up one of the horses when out of nowhere these girls appeared."

"Weren't they from Sweden?" he asks. "Wherever," Gidget replies offhandedly. "What they did was pay off the guards and then waited around until he showed."

"Imagine my surprise. They talked to me as if we knew each other intimately and just wouldn't leave. I had to get a little gruff, and even afterwards, they continued walking up and down the cul-de-sac. So you never know. Maybe they were dangerous. Don't misunderstand. I love the fans, but sometimes I'm afraid for my two boys."

Gidget eyes her friend. "I still remember when I came to work for 'Mr. Boxleitner' 10 years ago. He was tanned and had long hair and the whitest teeth I'd ever seen."

Her boss laughs at the image, alluding to being voted as "One of TV's Top Hunks," and "One of the most watchable men in America." Even Beverly Garland, who portrayed Kate

Jackson's mother on the series, remarked that Lee Stetson, "on a scale of 1 to 10, was an 11." "I never know what all that means," he says, "especially when I look at myself. It's a little like Marilyn Monroe once claimed: 'I see all the flaws.' Take a good look. I don't have a Nautilus machine body, and I'm not about to pose nude in some magazine layout."

"Still, I don't comprehend all the actors who tell you later on, 'I had to do it. I was starving.' Come on. Go work in a grocery store! You don't have to take your clothes off. Guess I'm old-fashioned. I won't even pose in a bathing suit. I'm not ashamed. I just don't feel it's necessary."

The only necessity in Bruce Boxleitner's youth was finding himself through acting. (Of his three sisters, one has pursued drama, another radio, while the third is a housewife.) He graduated six weeks later than his classmates from Prospect High school in Chicago, "due to my wild and free spirit. School never appealed to me from Day One. It was more like prison camp, until my drama teacher, Mrs. Lewkiewicz, encouraged me and kicked my butt until I accomplished something."

The conversation inevitably drifts to love, but there's no interest in remarrying right away. The wounds from the tabloids still haunt him — headlines that he and Kate were having an affair.

"The media painted me as some gadabout. But I'm a real homebody. Just ask Gidget. It's hard getting me away from here. But I'll tell you what really hurt. It was some reporter, disguised as an extra, showing a microphone in my face asking whether I was getting divorced. I called the guard and had her thrown out. I'm sorry. I was in so much pain. How can people do that?"

As the day gives way to a restful sunset, he becomes philosophical about the future.

"I'm just going to march on," he says. "Well, that's what I did through four years on 'Scarecrow.' During all that turmoil, I slugged it out. Like the good soldier, I'm the one you can depend upon. So when I set my mind to something, I just keep on going until they knock me down. But I'm a pretty stubborn cuss and always manage to keep getting up."

Changes after giving birth linger

By Dr. June Reinisch

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have had some problems since the birth of my second child five months ago. When I first came home from the hospital, I suffered from very strong anxiety and insomnia, which have pretty much disappeared. I never had anxiety before and was therefore very frightened by it, which made it harder to get rid of.

I still feel a sense of lightheadedness (this is not dizziness). Also, my eyesight doesn't seem as good as it was and I have frequent headaches. My doctor said it was from lack of sleep and too much worrying, but I do sleep better now and don't think I'm worrying about anything.

What could be causing this? I just don't feel as though I'm back to myself yet.

DEAR READER: It's not unusual for various physical and emotional symptoms to occur after pregnancy, and anxiety is among the most common. These problems can appear right after delivery or several weeks, or even several months, after the baby is born.

Anxiety can produce real physical symptoms, even though a person is not aware of specific worries. Experts disagree about the causes involved. Some feel that it is related to the demands of childcare and the stresses of new worries, such as financial concerns or the need to alter lifestyles. Others point to the hormonal changes involved at the end of pregnancy or during breastfeeding. The cause or combination of causes varies from one new mother to the next.

It's worth asking your physician about having blood tests done to see whether your thyroid level is involved and if your hormone levels (including estrogen, progesterone and prolactin) have returned to normal non-pregnancy ranges. If no medical explanation for your symptoms can be found, ask about being referred to a psychotherapist, psychologist or counselor who can assess whether emotional factors are involved.

Some hospitals and obstetric clinics routinely offer postpartum (after-birth) counseling services to their patients: if yours does, call for an appointment.

Researchers have also found that about half of natural fathers and some adoptive parents report symptoms similar to those found among postpartum women. Although most gradually begin to feel better, a few become more seriously anxious or depressed and require counseling and/or medication.

Woman concerned

DEAR DR. REINISCH: In a recent column, you said that most sexual sensation occurs near the vaginal opening in women. I always thought the clitoris was most important, since it is comparable to the male penis. Is there no sexual sensation at all in the clitoris?

DEAR READER: The earlier column discussed only the vagina and stated that the inner two-thirds of the vagina has few nerve endings and so is less involved in receiving sexual stimulation than is the outer one-third.

However, the entire area of the female external genitals is richly endowed with nerve endings that can contribute to sexual arousal when touched. This includes the mons (the fatty area in front covering the pubic bone), the labia (the inner and outer lips surrounding the opening to the vagina) and the anus.

The clitoris, located beneath where the tops of the inner labia meet, is the most sensitive part of this area for most women. It is so sensitive, in fact, that many women prefer that it not be touched directly, preferring touching or pressure on nearby surfaces instead.

Both the male penis and the female clitoris are formed from the same fetal tissue. Both boy and girl babies are exactly alike until the seventh week of fetal development and it is the difference in hormones that develops the male and female genitals from originally identical structures. However, the female clitoris retains, as its sole function, the focusing of sexual sensations, while the function of the male penis includes passing urine and semen.

Pimples embarrass

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm a 35-year-old woman and get more pimples now than I did as a teenager. It gets pretty bad and is embarrassing for me.

I seem to get them a couple of days before my period and a few days later. They last for a week. I try to let them go away on their own, but they stick out so far that sometimes I pop them.

I haven't changed my makeup or my soap. Why is this happening even though I'm not a teenager?

DEAR READER: Your pimples may be acne, and you may be having trouble now for the same reason teenagers do—hormonal changes.

Even though most people associate acne only with puberty, acne can be a symptom of hormonal changes at any point in life. For women, this can include each menstrual cycle (many women report acne the week before menstrual flow), pregnancy, when taking hormonal contraceptive pills, and the years before menopause (the last menstrual cycle, which occurs, on average, at age 50).

Have you mentioned this to your gynecologist during your annual pelvic examination and Pap test? You should, because it may be time to monitor the level of estrogen you are producing, because this may gradually begin to drop many years before menopause. Discuss whether the acne may be related to oral-contraceptive pills (some women have trouble with acne when they stop taking the pill).

Other, non-hormonal conditions can also increase acne problems. These include oil-based cosmetics and cleansing creams, irritating soaps, stress and a diet high in fats.

A dermatologist can advise you about effective acne treatments, such as low levels of the antibiotic tetracycline, that require a prescription. In the meantime, resist the temptation to squeeze pimples, because of the risk that skin bacteria can cause an infection that makes the pimple last longer or lead to scarring.

Ask the dermatologist whether your acne is related to changes in hormone levels. Some dermatologists are quite knowledgeable about endocrinology and will arrange the appropriate testing. If you are then advised to consider hormonal treatment, make certain that your gynecologist is notified about

“ In addition to the chemicals in perfumes and the products you mentioned, chemicals used to add color to products have been known to cause allergic reactions. Therefore, women who have trouble with genital irritation should also avoid using colored toilet paper. ”

Maybe non-medical

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Recently, in a column about an 80-year-old woman complaining of smarting vaginal lips, you answered by describing medical causes of her problem. I'd like to suggest a possible non-medical cause of genital irritation.

My daughter and I had a similar problem that disappeared after discontinuing the use of scented toilet paper and fabric softener. Many companies are adding fabric softeners to laundry detergent as "improvements." The perfumes in paper products and fabric softeners are as irritating as bubble bath, a product long recognized as a source of feminine irritation.

I'm worried about infection and my wife complains that I don't get an erection anymore. My doctor says that nothing can be done about it.

They can do so many things these days, can't someone help me?

DEAR READER: Yes; locate a urologist. This is a physician who specializes in treating problems of the urinary and reproductive organs.

Several conditions can make it difficult for an uncircumcised man to retract the foreskin. The most common is phimosis (having a foreskin too tight to pull back from the penis.) Often this involves an infection under the foreskin.

It is important that the physician determine what is going on and treat it because irritation of many years duration may be related to later cancerous changes in the area. Treatment usually involves antibiotics and sometimes minor surgery to permanently enlarge the opening in the foreskin.

A urologist can also determine whether your difficulty with erection is related to this condition and suggest options for correcting it once an infection is cleared up.

Help is indeed available, but, unfortunately, it's often necessary for a patient to persist in looking for the right person to help. Not all physicians have received training in sexual dysfunctions or are comfortable about treating them, especially in older patients.

Not circumcised

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am over 60. I was not circumcised, because they didn't always do that when I was a child, and now my problem is that the skin has grown over the head of my penis. The head is unable to come out anymore and it can start itching anytime of the day. Scratching just makes it worse.

I'm worried about infection and my wife complains that I don't get an erection anymore. My doctor says that nothing can be done about it.

They can do so many things these days, can't someone help me?

DEAR READER: Thank you for writing. Your letter is an opportunity for me to remind women once again that allergic reactions to chemicals in their environment can cause genital irritation that mimics vaginal infections and the vaginal atrophy (thinning of tissues) that can follow menopause.

In addition to the chemicals in perfumes and the products you mentioned, chemicals used to add color to products have been known to cause allergic reactions. Therefore, women who have trouble with genital irritation should also avoid using colored toilet paper. Other women have written to say that using unscented, plain white soap and taking showers instead of tub baths solved the problem for them.

Any woman who has recurrent genital irritation, and whose physician has not been successful at finding a medical cause in spite of thorough testing, should avoid use of these various products to see whether her condition can be improved.

Send questions to Dr. Reinisch in care of The Kinsey Report, P.O. Box 48, Bloomington, IN 47402. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest may be discussed in future columns.

Cooking contest creates a stir

By Lillian S. Murphy

Some people are never happy unless their fingers are busily knitting garments for individuals small and large. Others might like to concentrate on sewing, or even crocheting. Almost everyone likes to do his or her own thing. I just happen to enjoy cooking and writing.

When a local newspaper recently advertised a cooking contest — bingo! My adrenalin soared to its full potential. I had never considered myself brave enough before to enter one, but this occasion just happened to coincide with a recent decision to use up some cranberries which, in their dormant state, were occupying precious space in my already overcrowded freezer.

Almost instantly my dependable subconscious furnished me with an appropriate recipe: my Cranberry, Almond and Walnut Loaf. It was subsequently submitted, and to my great surprise I became a finalist overnight.

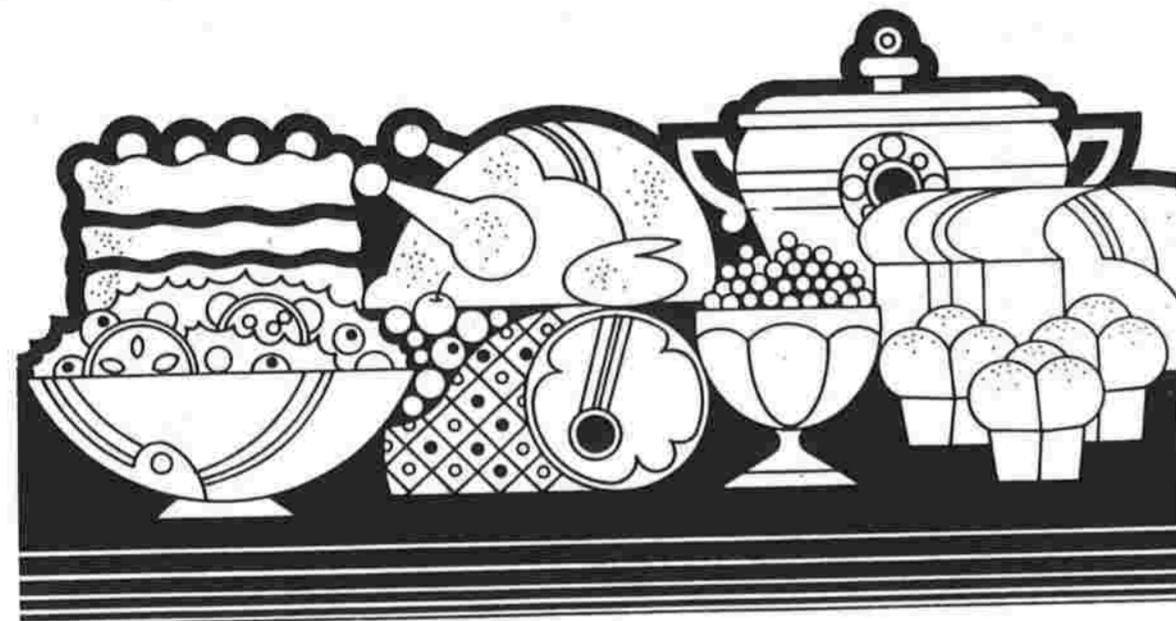

I was so excited at this golden opportunity that I didn't stop to think of the possibility that any negative forces could be lying in wait for this unwary novice.

Now, as any first-time contestant will admit, it's different going through the motions of cooking for no particular occasion at home, compared with the prospect of rubbing shoulders with a swarming mass of hungry prize-seeking contestants.

I'd been a bit hasty in submitting this plain-looking recipe, but it was now too late to enter something more ornamental. This gourmet loaf of bread, while undeniably luscious at the time it's served, doesn't exactly boast the most breathtaking appearance when competing with eager would-be chefs.

So, in a flash of brilliance, I considered consulting a local baker. I soon found one who voluntarily coasted along on my wave of enthusiasm. Together we worked on little leaves and berries. I joyfully returned home armed with fat little tubes of red and green icing.

Everything had worked out fine while I was supervised in the store. Unfortunately, once on my own, my work of art refused to cooperate. To my utter dismay, my cranberry loaf became a shambles. The once-dainty leaves originally sporting bright berries now proved too fragile to hold their shape for long. No sooner was my back turned than they collapsed completely, resembling ugly snails with horrendous red markings on their backs.

So much for my art work. My happy cooking contest prospect was turning into a television epic: Tales of the Unexpected.

Should I still go through with it?

I decided to sleep on it, but deep down I knew I wouldn't miss this opportunity.

Rising next morning with deep-seated optimism, I rushed to survey my entry. One glance told me my planned production was only a subconscious pipe dream, and not fully realistic. At this point, yesterday's visualization of an attractive, colorful loaf being proudly displayed alongside other semi-professional contestants began to evaporate.

It suddenly dawned on me that I was spending so much time staring at my object of pity that I was beginning to run late. What on earth could I do at this stage to resurrect the loaf to at least its original concept?

Desperate beads of perspiration were starting to take the makeup on my forehead. Frantically groping for yesterday's crumbled icing tubes, more disaster assailed me. Believing its work to be done, the green substance was solidified in death. The red container proved no better. It wouldn't yield the slightest show of color.

Now, what was my next move?

In a last-ditch effort, I methodically ripped the sides of the tubes open, as if I were filleting a fish. Brandishing a sharp knife, I proceeded to scrape the residue from each one, and managed to plant a neat arrangement in the center of my cranberry creation. This final stab at decoration, although somewhat weak, undeniably added an appearance of plausible recognition.

I packaged my product, rounded up a large colorful oval plate and gathered the specially purchased dollies. I breezed joyfully toward the bus stop. To say I guarded my exhibit carefully on my lap during the bus ride is, perhaps, an understatement. By now I truthfully would have liked to have flung the whole thing out of the window and gone home.

I pacified myself with mental pep talks. While I was deep in thought, it almost seemed as if the baked effort was somehow aware of my apprehension, and decided to take the law into its own hands for, as I arose to alight from the bus, it fell heavily to the floor, as if pushed by unseen hands, and almost rolled out onto the street as the bus doors opened.

If I had known what lay ahead I might have helped it!

As long as I live, I don't think I will ever forget what it is like to spend hours in a full-blown kitchen on a hot day. A veritable Dante's Inferno greeted me. In the five fully equipped kitchen spaces, ovens were roaring full blast, like a steel foundry. It was a bustling hive of industry. Perspiring individuals were either chopping, slicing, mincing, decorating or stirring their respective entries.

But my education was only just beginning. Lesson No. 1 was indelibly engraved on my mind for future reference. When entering a cooking contest, if you're not going to make your entry from scratch on the appointed premises, at least bring the minimal basic item completely unadorned. It will look far more tempting if it is dressed as shortly before the judging time as is feasibly possible.

Relaxed at last, with a sigh of relief I began to enjoy the other contestants at work. While I imagined I was finished, they were just starting. I thoughtfully observed the original decorations being deftly arranged on all manner of categories. There were glowing fresh flowers, leis, ornaments. Each person seemed to have a magical touch. Just my luck, one cursory glance and I could tell they were all regulars, down to the last one.

Conversely, it didn't take much calculation for their sideward glances to recognize me as the only greenhorn.

Bracing myself, I clutched my entry to me and cautiously shuffled to the nearest available corner, in an effort to keep my puny entry as significantly concealed as possible. If only some miracle would take place and turn my ugly duckling into a swan.

The food editor was now appearing and disappearing like the white rabbit in Alice in Wonderland. We were given numbers to classify our entries. We were reminded again to try to keep them fresh looking.

I was gently hushed away as I tried vainly to peep into the adjoining room and watch the judges as they thoughtfully sampled their selections. I learned later that they were very thorough, faithfully sipping sodas between mouthfuls, and crunching soda crackers constantly, to revive their confused tastebuds.

By now the judging was well underway. The Easter Lily lady gave her witting cakes a withering look as they again succumbed to a final squirt of whipped cream from the now almost empty aerosol can. She rearranged the glaze lemon peel slices in a somewhat futile attempt to perk them up a bit.

She had taken such great care with them, like babies polished until they shone for a beauty contest. She had traveled so far and when she didn't come anywhere at all in the judging, I felt more sorry for her than I did for myself, as I saw her flounce out in abject disgust.

Like a raucous battle cry, finally my category was announced. Time to file in. I had a job suppressing a titter as I watched a young girl, whom I hadn't noticed earlier, try to conceal her entry. She was secretive and kept it so well hidden in a cardboard box, that when someone from the panel tried to view the contents, in order to direct her where to place that particular category, she got her fingers slapped.

We were firmly secured outside while our efforts were undergoing consideration. Eventually the results were posted. We all pressed hopefully around the bulletin board. There were mixed expressions of joy and sadness.

We were then allowed to retrieve any leftovers of our own contributions. We brought our remains back into the kitchen, and had fun sampling each others' entries. I was quite excited to see a big lump had actually been cut out of my cranberry loaf — at least it had been sampled. I'd love to know what they thought of it. Or would I?

As we all escaped into the burning sun — from one form of heat to another, everyone seemed to disappear like the swallows leaving Capistrano, only to flock back here next year. Though I, too, shall be like the swallows, but this time it will not be as a fledgling.

Dining In

Humble pie moves into the spotlight

By Shirley E. Sump

Humble pie originally was called "umble pie." It was made of the umbles (liver, heart and kidneys) of a deer or wild boar. To eat umble pie was to occupy a modest position. Somehow the term got changed to humble, hence the phrase "to eat humble pie" came into our language.

To eat humble pie can also mean dining on a savory meat pie. Pies made with a meat filling have been around for centuries. The rich made them super exotic, using such ingredients as birds' tongues, minced snakes, peacocks and seals, while the peasants gave us such homey dishes as beef and kidney pie and Cornish pasties.

Our ancestors brought their love for meat pies with them when they came to America. Not only did they taste wonderful, but it was a great way to stretch the food.

For a delightful mealtime entree, serve a slice of humble pie. Following are some easy-to-prepare recipes which use canned biscuits, stuffing mix, macaroni, meat and even mashed potatoes as crusts.

The pie crust is seasoned ground pork and the filling is corn in this tasty pie. Serve with hot rolls, cabbage salad and chocolate cake with ice cream.

PRIDE OF IOWA
3 eggs
1 1/2 pounds ground pork
1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/2 cup ketchup
1/2 teaspoon ground marjoram
2 1/2 cups frozen corn, thawed
3 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs

Beat 1 egg. Combine with pork, 1/2 cup bread crumbs, ketchup and marjoram. Mix thoroughly. Pat mixture evenly over sides and bottom of 10" pie plate.

Beat remaining 2 eggs with corn and 3 tablespoons bread crumbs in bowl. Pour into center of pork-lined pie plate. Bake in 350F oven about 40 minutes or until corn filling is set. Spoon off excess fat. Let set 5 minutes. Cut in wedges to serve. Makes 6 servings.

The Cajuns in Louisiana like down-to-earth spicy food. Serve with buttered lima beans, tossed salad, butter pecan ice cream and sugar cookies.

CAJUN PIE
1 (9-inch) frozen pie shell, thawed
1 pound ground beef
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
1 (4-ounce) can mushrooms, stems and pieces, drained

1 teaspoon instant minced onion
1 teaspoon dried green pepper flakes
1/4 teaspoon celery seeds
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon chili powder
salt to taste
1 1/2 cups shredded process American cheese

Preheat oven to 375F. Prick bottom and sides of crust with fork. Bake for 7 minutes. Remove from oven. Lower heat to 350F.

Meanwhile, cook ground beef in 10" skillet until browned. Drain off excess fat. Stir in tomato sauce, mushrooms, onion, pepper flakes, celery seeds, garlic, mustard, chili powder and salt. Heat until mixture is hot and bubbly.

Turn mixture into baked pie crust. Bake for 10 minutes. Cover top with cheese; bake for 10 minutes longer. Let stand 5 minutes before serving. Makes 4 servings.

Macaroni and cheese take on a new role in this delicious dish. It's the pie crust with a spicy sausage filling.

CHEESY MACARONI-SAUSAGE PIE
2 eggs
1 tablespoon margarine, softened
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 cups cooked small elbow macaroni
1 1/2 pounds bulk pork sausage
1 (4-ounce) can mushrooms, stems and pieces
3 cups shredded process American cheese
2 tablespoons flour

Preheat oven to 350F. Beat together eggs, margarine and Parmesan in large bowl. Stir in macaroni. Mix thoroughly. Turn into a greased 10" pie plate. Spread into an even layer to line bottom and the sides.

Cook sausage in 10" skillet until browned. Drain off excess fat. Add undrained mushrooms and 2 cups American cheese. Heat on low until cheese melts. Stir in flour and salt. Cook until slightly thickened. Spoon carefully into pie crust. Bake for 20 minutes. Sprinkle meat with remaining 1 cup American cheese; bake for 10 minutes longer. Makes 6 servings.

The stuffing makes the crust and ground pork makes the filling in this super-easy dish. Serve with green beans, cranberry sauce and apple pie.

PORK STUFFING PIE
1 (6-ounce) package mushroom-onion stuffing mix
1 1/4 cups hot water
1 1/2 pounds lean ground pork
1/2 cup minced celery
1 small onion, minced
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons dried parsley leaves

Combine stuffing mix and hot water in bowl. Mix lightly, but well. Reserve 1 cup stuffing. Press remaining mixture into bottom and up sides of a deep-dish 10" pie plate.

Combine reserved stuffing with ground pork, celery, onion, egg, salt and parsley. Mix lightly, but thoroughly. Turn mixture into stuffing crust. Pat evenly. Bake in 350F oven 60 to 65 minutes or until meat tests done. Blot excess fat from surface with paper towels. Let pie stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

This is easy, quick and popular with youngsters and adults. Serve with buttered corn, tossed salad and ice-cream sundaes.

CONEY ISLAND PIE
1 1/4 pounds ground beef
4 hot dogs, cut in 1/2-inch rounds
1 cup chopped dill pickles, drained
1 teaspoon instant minced onion
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1/2 cup ketchup
3 tablespoons water
1 (12-ounce) can refrigerated biscuits (10)

Preheat oven to 350F. Brown ground beef in 10" skillet. Drain off excess fat. Stir in hot dogs, pickles, onions, mustard, ketchup and water. Heat mixture until it starts to boil. Lower heat. Simmer for about 5 minutes, stirring frequently.

Separate biscuits. Arrange in 10" deep-dish pie plate; press over bottom and sides to form crust. Spoon meat mixture into crust. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes or until crust is deep golden brown. Makes 6 servings.

Combine leftover turkey with mixed vegetables, mushrooms and bouillon gravy; then bake in a biscuit crust. It makes a filling, tasty dish. Serve with tossed salad and molded fruit dessert.

COUNTRY TURKEY PIE
1 1/2 cups water

2 tablespoons margarine
1 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon
1 (10-ounce) package frozen mixed vegetables
1 (4-ounce) can mushrooms, stems and pieces
1/2 teaspoon celery seed
1/2 teaspoon instant minced onion
2 cups chopped cooked turkey
1/4 cup flour
1/2 cup water
1 (12-ounce) can refrigerated biscuits

Preheat oven to 350F. Combine 1 1/2 cups water, margarine and bouillon in a 2-quart saucepan. Heat to boiling. Add frozen vegetables, undrained mushrooms, celery seed and onions. Bring back to a boil. Lower heat. Simmer for 5 minutes. Stir in turkey. Simmer for 5 more minutes.

Combine flour with 1/2 cup water; stir until smooth. Add to vegetable mixture. Heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and smooth. Remove from heat.

Separate biscuits. Arrange in a 10" lightly greased deep-dish pie plate; press over bottom and side to form crust. Turn turkey mixture into crust. Bake for 30 minutes or until crust is deep golden brown. Cool for 5 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

A great way to use those leftover mashed potatoes is to just make them a crust for a corn-beef-egg pie. Serve with green bean salad and gingerbread with whipped topping.

CORNY BEEF-EGG PIE
2 1/4 cups mashed potatoes
1/2 cup flour
1 egg
salt to taste
2 tablespoons margarine
1 1/2 cups diced cooked beef
1 (16-ounce) can creamed corn
1 teaspoon dried chives
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
4 eggs
salt to taste
1 medium tomato, chopped, drained
1 cup grated process American cheese

Preheat oven to 425F. Grease a 10" pie plate. Combine potatoes, flour, egg and salt. Mix together thoroughly. Press potato mixture against bottom and sides of pie plate with spatula. Prick bottom and sides with fork.

Bake for 20 to 25 minutes or until firm and golden. Remove from oven. Lower heat to 375F. Let crust cool for 10 minutes. Melt margarine in 10" skillet. Add beef, corn, chives and nutmeg. Cook over medium heat until bubbly. Stir in eggs. Cook, stirring occasionally, until eggs are set. Turn into prepared crust. Top with chopped tomatoes; sprinkle cheese over all. Bake for 10 minutes. Movie trades on baby boom

Three Men and a Baby (PG) This Americanization of a French movie shrewdly trades on the much-chronicled current baby boom. It offers three well-heeled roommates/bachelors (Tom Selleck, Steve Guttenberg and Ted Danson) who bumble their way through caring for an adorable little baby girl. Directed by Leonard Nimoy (taking a break from playing a Vulcan), it's a slight, amiable commercial comedy that is probably going to be a big hit. Two of the three lead actors (Selleck and Danson) have built-in TV-star hunk appeal, and one suspects that a lot of people are in the mood for a synthetic, throwaway farce about three cute guys learning to change dirty diapers.

Almost everything about the movie is innocuous and filmmy, including the central plot mechanism that has a girlfriend of ladies' man Danson dropping off a baby at his absurdly spacious and well-appointed Upper West Side Manhattan apartment. Equally silly is a standard drug-smuggling subplot. But somehow, one guesses that none of this will matter to holiday crowds who just want to sit back, relax and take in a few hours of sit-com breeziness. Grade: ****

Barfly (R) Cult figure/poet Charles Bukowski penned this barely fictionalized self-portrait about a drunken wreck of a literary genius who haunts the L.A. bar scene. Directed by underrated French director Barbet Schroeder, "Barfly" is the bracing and, yes, charming study of a scroungy alcoholic writer (Mickey Rourke) who takes up with a long-legged lush (Faye Dunaway, in a fresh, unvarnished performance).

Roaring drunk and luxuriantly unkempt, Mickey Rourke is at his imaginative best in this film: He seems to be doing a sly impersonation of Popeye, with a bit of W.C. Fields thrown in. The movie becomes surprisingly entertaining romanticization of the linkage of booze and creativity in a certain kind of writer's consciousness. Grade: *****

New home video

The Whistle Blower (PG) Nelson, $79.95. This intricate and ambitiously ideological British espionage thriller features another fine performance by Michael Caine, playing a decent, ordinary man investigating the mysterious death of his son (Nigel Havers) a translator for the government intelligence service who got in over his head.

Directed by Simon Langton, who directed TV's better shades-of-gray spy drama "Smiley's People," this thriller poses an important question: "What should be the role of the British in a world run by two superpowers?" But the script by Julian Bond ("The Shooting Party") ultimately supplies a heavy-handed convoluted, and talky answer. Grade: ½

Challengers don't see Heisman Trophy a lock

NEW YORK (AP) — There may yet be hope for Don McPherson, Craig Heyward, Lorenzo White and Gordie Lockbaum.

According to them, Tim Brown does not have a lock on the Heisman Trophy. The winner of the trophy, awarded annually by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York to the player selected best in college football, will be named Saturday.

Brown, the flanker-kick return specialist from Notre Dame, originally was considered a heavy favorite to win the award. Although still favored, he opened the door to his competition with two straight sub-par performances to end the season.

"I've been playing well enough that I've attracted some attention," said McPherson, Syracuse quarterback. "I've got some people talking."

During the season, Brown averaged 167.55 all-purpose yards per game, and 21.7 yards per catch as a receiver. Brown caught just seven passes and had 207 total yards in the consecutive losses to Penn State and Miami, Fla., as the 12th-ranked Irish fell to 8-3.

Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz, however, revealed on Thursday that Brown had played more than a month with a separated shoulder.

"I don't want it to sound like Tim is no good, but he didn't have a Heisman year," said Heyward, second in the nation in rushing with 1,655 yards for Pittsburgh. "Somebody has an opportunity to win other than Tim Brown."

McPherson led fourth-ranked Syracuse to an 11-0 record, passing for 2,341 yards and 22 touchdowns. He averaged nearly 213 yards per game.

Lorenzo White, Michigan State tailback, had 1,469 yards on the ground for an average of 132.6 yards per game. Lockbaum, the two-way player from Holy Cross, averaged more than seven catches per game and had 1,152 receiving yards on offense, and had 13 tackles, 12 for losses, two sacks and two interceptions on defense.

All five players were invited to the award announcement.

"I don't feel he has a lock on it," White said of Brown. "It's discouraging to hear that.... He hasn't done anything so outstanding this year to say he'll win it hands-down."

The Heisman winner will be formally announced at about 5:50 p.m. EST. CBS will televise the ceremony live beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Balloting is done nationwide by a panel of sports writers and broadcasters selected by the Downtown Athletic Club. Each voter picks three candidates, with three points given for a first-place vote, two for second and one for third.

Two of the last three Heisman winners have been quarterbacks. Vinny Testaverde of Miami won the award last year, and Doug Flutie won the award in 1984 with Boston College. The 1985 winner was Bo Jackson of Auburn.

Notre Dame's Tim Brown is still the favorite to win the Heisman Trophy but his challengers say there's some room for hope after two straight sub-par performances by the Irish standout. The winner will be announced today.

Miami looking to complete a perfect season

By Herschel Nissenon
The Associated Press

MIAMI — Second-ranked Miami hopes to end the regular college football season the way it started and finished the last one — with a victory over South Carolina and a shot at the national championship.

A triumph over eighth-ranked South Carolina on Saturday night would conclude a second straight 11-0 campaign for the Hurricanes and set up another national championship showdown, this time against No. 1-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

When Miami defeated South Carolina 34-14 in the 1986 opener, the Gamecocks were an unknown commodity with freshman quarterback Todd Ellis directing a brand-new pass-happy run-and-shoot offense. The 1987 Gamecocks have matured to an 8-2 record, six consecutive victories during which they have outscored the opposition 236-39 while surrendering 178.8 yards a game and a Gator Bowl berth against LSU. "I think South Carolina will be better than Notre Dame," Miami wide receiver Michael Irvin says, referring to last week's 24-0 victory that ended Notre Dame's national championship hopes. "And since they're not national champions, they want to stop somebody else from being. It's just the American way, I guess."

But not the South Carolina way. The Gamecocks couldn't care less who winds up No. 1.

"Everybody's flirting with the idea that if we beat Miami, we are going to foul up the bowl situation," says offensive tackle David Poinsett. "But basically what we're looking at is that they came up here (Columbia) last year and embarrassed us."

The regular season comes to an end this weekend with three other games — Army-Navy in Philadelphia, Arkansas at Hawaii and Brigham Young vs Colorado State in Melbourne, Australia.

South Carolina's impressive numbers since losing early-season road games to Georgia 13-6 and Nebraska 30-21 — the Cornhuskers are the only team to score more than one touchdown against the Gamecocks all season — have Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson saying that "we may very well be playing the best team on our schedule Saturday night. The only team that compares with South Carolina is Florida State."

NCAA Football

Both teams are among the national leaders in several categories. Miami ranks fourth in scoring with an average of 37.2 points a game and South Carolina is 13th at 31.2. In total offense, Carolina is 14th at 427.1 yards a game, Miami 23rd at 394.3. In passing, the Gamecocks are 12th at 279 yards, the Hurricanes 25th at 224.6.

South Carolina is second in scoring defense, holding opposition to 9.1 points, Miami third at 9.5. In total defense, Carolina's blitz-crazy "Black Death" unit is second at 213 yards, Miami sixth at 243.8. Against the rush, Miami is fifth with 96.1 yards, Carolina sixth at 97.5. And in pass defense, the Gamecocks are fourth at 115.5 yards, the 'Cones 14th at 147.7.

"A year ago, we were fortunate to catch South Carolina in the opening ballgame," Johnson says. "They're playing better defense (through 10 games in 1986, Carolina yielded 369.8 yards and 26.5 points a game) and they're a more experienced team, so they're making fewer mistakes."

"They're a very explosive team. And this is the first time we've faced a defense like this. It's a man-to-man defense and they commit five, six, seven, eight people to the blitz almost every time. Some teams have run into a complete disaster against them."

Miami held Notre Dame's Tim Brown to 95 total yards last week. And although South Carolina's Sterling Sharpe is averaging 121.90 all-purpose yards a game to Brown's 167.55, Johnson says that "Sharpe's a lot more dangerous because they throw the ball to him so much." He has 52 receptions for 793 yards.

"He touches the football. We have got to be prepared for Sharpe much more than we were for Tim Brown for the simple reason that Sharpe's going to have a lot more opportunities."

South Carolina Coach Joe Morrison calls Miami "as fine a football team as we're going to see all year long. Miami certainly is one of the finest, if not the finest, team in the country."

Army, 4-6, and Navy, 2-8, will be trying to salvage something from otherwise forgettable seasons in the 88th edition of their service rivalry at Philadelphia's sold-out Veterans Stadium. Both teams run the wishbone and Army's Tory Crawford, who led Division I-A quarterbacks in rushing a year ago, has recovered from a knee injury.

Liberty Bowl-bound Arkansas, 8-3, another wishbone team, features halfback James Rouse, who has run for 908 yards after missing most of 1986. Hawaii, 5-6, has lost four of its last five games by a total of 17 points.

Brigham Young, 8-3, has prior international experience, having played in Japan in 1977 and 1978. The Cougars' next trip is to Birmingham, Ala., for a meeting with Virginia in the All American Bowl. Colorado State, which cost BYU a share of the Western Athletic Conference title last season, is 1-10.

In the quarterfinal round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs, Weber State is at Marshall, Georgia Southern at Appalachian State, Eastern Kentucky at Northeast Louisiana and Arkansas State at Northern Iowa.

The Division II semifinals have Troy State at Central Florida and Northern Michigan at Portland State. In Division III, Central Iowa is at Dayton and Wagner visits Emory & Henry.

The NAIA Division I schedule finds Gardner-Webb at Carson-Newman, Southern Oregon at Mesa, Presbyterian at Pittsburg State and Central Arkansas at Cameron. In Division II, Geneva is at Wisconsin-Stevens Point and Baker at Pacific Lutheran.

Colt's ground game concerns Schottenheimer

By The Associated Press

The Indianapolis Colts are without quarterback Gary Hogeboom as they enter crunch time in the NFL, but Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer doesn't think it really makes much of a difference.

"They're going to feature the running game," Schottenheimer said. "Eric Dickerson is the running back you know about. Albert Bentley is the running back you may not know as much about."

The Colts and Browns, both division leaders, meet Sunday as the NFL playoff hopefuls begin jockeying for position with just four games left in the season.

The Colts, tied with Buffalo and the New York Jets atop the AFC East, lost Hogeboom to a dislocated shoulder in last Sunday's 31-27 victory over Houston. He will be replaced by Jack Trudeau, who filled in when Hogeboom was injured earlier in the season.

Houston's loss last Sunday dropped them into a tie at 6-5 with Pittsburgh, one game behind Cleveland in the AFC Central.

Heading into the final month of the season, only one division has become a runaway — the NFC East where the Washington Redskins, 8-3, have a three-game lead over Dallas, Philadelphia and St. Louis. The Redskins are in St. Louis and could clinch the division with a victory.

To help settle the AFC East, Buffalo travels to Los Angeles to play the Raiders, and the Jets are in the Monday night game at Miami.

The AFC West-leading San Diego Chargers, 8-3, are at Houston, while Denver, a half game back at 7-3-1, plays host to New England, and Seattle, 7-4 in the division, is at Pittsburgh.

San Francisco leads the NFC West with a 9-2 record but can't shake New Orleans, a game back at 8-3. San Francisco's at Green Bay, and New Orleans is at home against Tampa Bay.

The Chicago Bears are the only team in the NFL to clinch a playoff berth. At 9-2, they hold a two-game lead over the Vikings and play in Minnesota in the Sunday night game.

The rest of the NFL schedule has

NFL Roundup

Atlanta at Dallas, Kansas City at Cincinnati, the Los Angeles Rams at Detroit and Philadelphia at the New York Giants.

Colts at Browns: The last time Dickerson played in Cleveland, he was with the Rams. He was traded later in that week, on Oct. 31, and will be making his fifth start for Indianapolis. He has 860 yards rushing this season, while Bentley, the man whom he replaced, has 581.

Redskins at Cardinals: If the Redskins win, they'll clinch their fourth NFC East title in seven years. Coach Joe Gibbs says he will start Jay Schroeder at quarterback even though Doug Williams is healthy again. Schroeder was benched two weeks ago in favor of Williams, but Williams hurt his back. Given a chance to play again, Schroeder threw three touchdown passes to rally the Redskins to a 23-19 victory over the Giants.

Jets at Dolphins: The shutout loss to Buffalo was the first since 1982 for the Dolphins, and quarterback Dan Marino saw a streak of 30 straight games with at least one touchdown pass broken.

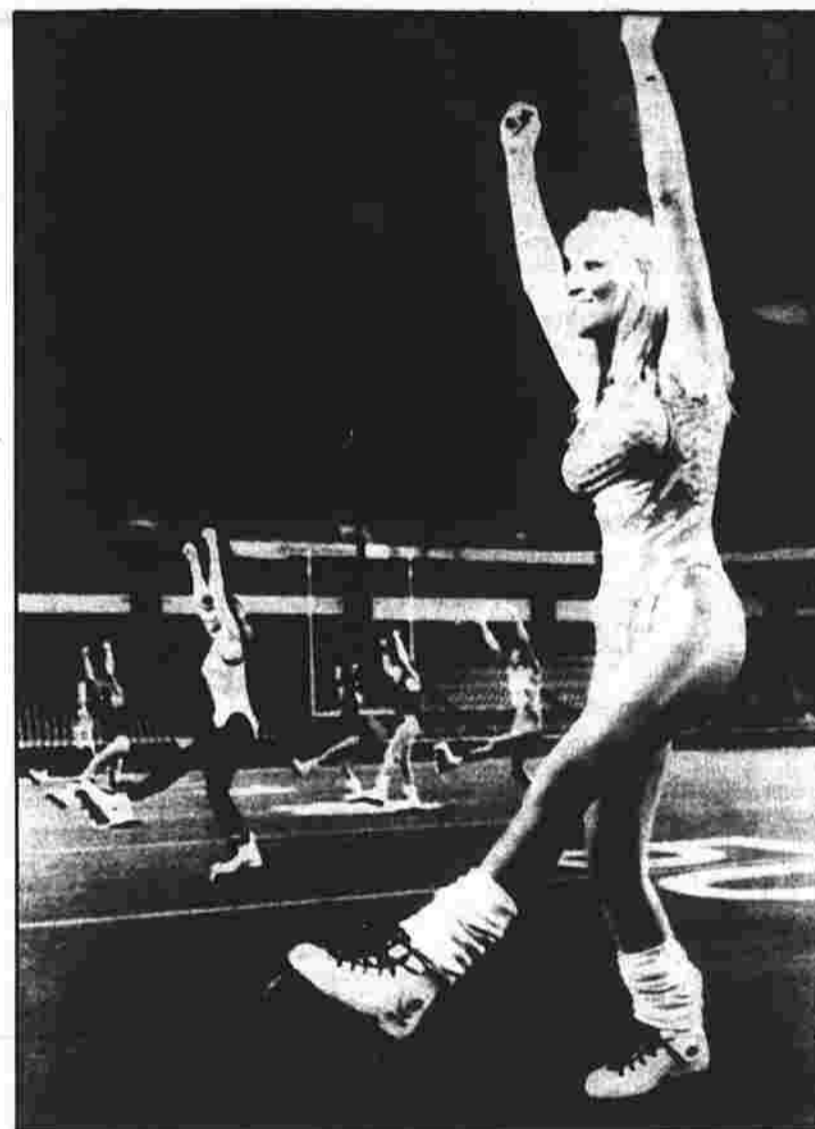

The last time the two teams met, the Jets beat Miami 37-31 in overtime on Oct. 18, and they have not swept the Dolphins since 1980. New York beat Cincinnati 27-20 last week.

Patriots at Broncos: Denver has won three in a row, and the Patriots haven't won at Mile High Stadium since 1968. New England, 9-6, lost 34-31 in overtime to Philadelphia last week.

In their victory over the Chargers last week, the Broncos gained an NFL season-high 822 total yards, with John Elway passing for 347.

Eagles at Giants: The Giants have beaten Philadelphia five in a row, including a 20-17 victory on Nov. 15 in which Raul Allegre kicked field goals of 53 and 52 yards.

A loss this week would mathematically eliminate the defending Super Bowl champion Giants, 3-8, from the playoffs. Philadelphia is 5-6.

NFLPA on the defensive since strike's end

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

When the 24-day NFL strike ended in October, the league continued to enforce the provisions of the 1982 contract with one notable exception — no longer would union dues be subtracted by the teams from players' paychecks and forwarded to the NFL Players Association.

Instead, player reps would have to collect the substantial collections — $2,400 a year for veterans, $2,900 for rookies.

From all indications, that's causing some trouble for the NFLPA.

While Gene Upshaw, the NFLPA's executive director, said this week that dues were coming in, he refused to say how many teams or how many players were still paying.

Moreover, a seven-page pamphlet sent by the union to the 1,600 players contains several exhortations for money. "THE MESSAGE? PAY YOUR NFLPA DUES!" it concludes.

"You can go it alone against the club and league office or you can stick together with your NFLPA teammates across the league," it says. "The choice is yours, but the only way to make the choice for solidarity is to pay NFLPA dues. Without voluntary financial support from all players, the NFLPA will disappear and the owners will make all your choices for you."

In fact, the NFLPA is indeed on the defensive since the strike.

Players on several teams, including the Cleveland Browns and those on the West Coast, are grumbling about striking and gaining nothing. They talk about replacing Upshaw with a labor professional, along the lines of Marvin Miller, who ran the baseball players union and aided the NFLPA with strategy at the end of the strike.

Other complaints include the size of the union budget and staff: 40 people, more than twice as many as the baseball player's union and 10 times as large as the NBA union's.

Moreover, agent Art Wilkinson is trying to start a rival union — "You don't need someone from the outside making decisions for you, offering a pre-set package of policies and staff," the NFLPA says in its pamphlet.

HOW ABOUT ROOKIES OF the year who missed training camp and only started playing midway through the season. Can anybody argue against Bo Jackson as offensive rookie and Cornelius Bennett on defense?

It would seem improbable, but this is an improbable season.

Joe Dudek, Lee Morris, Paul Tripoli, Sean McInerney, Kevin Walker, Eugene Seale. All have been named either AFC or NFC players of the week this season. None is still in the league.

Charles White of the Los Angeles Rams, who replaced Eric Dickerson when Dickerson was traded to the Colts, leads the league with 952 yards rushing. Dickerson is second with 860.

An asterisk: White played in the three strike games.

THE NEW YORK GIANTS, despite their 3-8 record, remain one of the NFL's solid teams in personnel. Moreover, their dismal 1987 season could help vault them right back to the Super Bowl next year.

Here's why. For one thing, they'll get a draft pick higher than they should, somewhere in the top ten, where the chips are blue.

But more important, they now have a good chance of finishing last in the NFC East — they're two games behind Dallas, Philadelphia and St. Louis with four games to go.

That means they'll get a fifth-place schedule next year, filled with legitimate patsies like Detroit twice, Atlanta and Kansas City. No Chicago, no Minnesota, although San Francisco and New Orleans would be there, but in any case a lot easier than the rest of their division will have.

Dayett to play in Japan

LOS ANGELES — The Chicago Cubs have sold the contract of outfielder Brian Dayett to the Nippon Ham Fighters of Japan's Pacific League. Dayett's agent said Friday.

Dayett, a native of Deep River, Conn., signed a four-year guaranteed contract for $3.75 million with the Ham Fighters, according to Professional Sports Management Inc., President Alan Meersand, who represents Dayett.

Dayett, who turns 31 next month, hit .277 with five home runs and 25 RBI while playing in 97 games for the Cubs this past season.

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox placed outfielder LaSchelle Tarver on waivers Friday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Tarver, 28, was limited to 13 games for the Pawtucket Red Sox of the Class AAA International League because of a knee injury.

Kentucky has extra incentive against Indiana

By Steve Hermon
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Kentucky has extra incentive in its game Saturday against Indiana in the inaugural Big Four Classic doubleheader at the Hoosier Dome. The Wildcats don't particularly like Indiana Coach Bob Knight.

"This is Indiana, and a lot of feuds are settled in this game every year," said Rob Lock, Kentucky's 6-foot-11 senior, who leads the team in scoring with an 18-point average after two games.

"I'd like to beat him, sure," Lock said of Knight. "A lot of people here in Kentucky don't like him too much. I don't approve of some of his actions, but it's not so much the man as the team that we need to beat."

The second-ranked Wildcats play No. 3 Indiana in the second game of the doubleheader. In the first game, No. 14 Louisville meets Notre Dame, which lost to Indiana at Bloomington on Tuesday.

Knight added fuel to the rivalry between the teams two years ago after the Lexington Herald-Leader broke a Pulitzer prize-winning series exposing alleged irregularities in the Kentucky basketball program.

Knight was particularly upset when his star player, Steve Alford, was suspended for a game at Kentucky, which Indiana lost, while the NCAA was never able to prove allegations against Kentucky. Alford had broken an NCAA rule by posing for a charity calendar.

Although there are differences between the two teams, Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton says there still are a lot of similarities. He says he and Knight "have parallel programs in a number of ways. We both play man-to-man defense. ... We believe in team play, motion offense and a high level of intensity."

Other similarities include five national championships each, topped only by UCLA's 10 NCAA titles. Each team also brings a 2-0 record into the game.

"If there are no freakish events Saturday, it should be a very close contest," said Sutton, whose Wildcats lost to the Hoosiers 71-66 last year at Bloomington.

Indiana has a 16-14 lead in the series, although Kentucky has won eight of the last 12.

Notre Dame comes in at 6-1 after losing its opener 76-59 to the Hoosiers. Louisville will be opening its season Saturday. Both games will be nationally televised (ABC, starting 2 p.m. EST).

"I really like that carnival-type atmosphere we'll see at Indianapolis," Sutton said. "Although the basketball year has already started, I feel like these four teams are going to usher in the 1987-88 season. It's four of the premier programs in the country."

Knight would have rather had the four teams play a tournament.

"Our original thinking was to make a tournament out of it," Knight said. "I think it's an excellent doubleheader. There'll be a lot of good players and hopefully four good teams playing, and yet I think the tournament concept is the thing that would make it great. Play it every year right after Christmas."

"If we could play that tournament after Christmas, we would play that in lieu of the tournament we play in Indianapolis now. I would really like to see that. It would be a hell of a competitive thing."

Louisville, which plays at Kentucky the following week, is ready to get started, Coach Denny Crum says.

"We're at the stage of the practice season where we need to play a game," Crum said. "We're tired of beating each other around. It's hard to judge where you are, so you need to play to find out what you can and can't do." The Cardinals finished 18-14 last season and did not get into the NCAA tournament.

Froese loses spot in record books

By John Kretzer
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — New York Rangers goaltender Bob Froese lost his spot in the NHL record book Friday when, after a videotape review of the play, the league took away a freak goal awarded him in a game Sunday night.

Froese originally was credited with only the second goal ever scored by a goaltender in the NHL's 71-year history during the second period of a 3-1 victory over the New York Islanders. But after a review of the play Friday by official scorer Ed Hertensten, the goal was credited to defenseman David Shaw, who was judged to have been the last Ranger to touch the puck.

The Rangers said the inquiry was initiated when General Manager Phil Esposito asked the league to review tapes of the play.

The NHL said in a statement that the review came "after Froese acknowledged publicly that he had not made contact with the puck on a shot by New York Islanders defenseman Denis Potvin."

The goal, the final one of the game, came when Islanders forward Brent Sutter attempted to backpass the puck from the corner to the right of Froese to defenseman Gerald DiDuck at the left point. Instead, the puck missed DiDuck and went the length of the ice into the empty Islanders' net. Goaltender Billy Smith had left the ice after a delayed penalty call on Rangers' forward Marcel Dionne.

Froese was originally credited with the goal when Hertensten said he got a piece of Potvin's shot, deflecting the puck to the corner where Sutter picked it up. But a review of the play showed that the puck hit the outside of the post, not Froese's pad.

Holyfield, Breland back in the ring

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Evander Holyfield will defend the cruiserweight championship Saturday night while his Olympic teammate, Mark Breland, will take what he hopes will be a step toward becoming a champion again.

Holyfield will make a mandatory defense of the International Boxing Federation title in a 15-round bout against Dwight Muhammad Qawi at Convention Hall.

Breland will fight Javier Suazo in a scheduled 10-round bout that will be his first action since he lost the World Boxing Association welterweight title to Marlon Starling on an 11th-round knockout last Aug. 22.

Both fights will be televised by HBO, beginning with Breland's bout about 10 p.m. EST.

"As Mark begins a comeback on Evander's card, Evander can start his comeback on Mark's card next time," the 34-year-old Qawi said. Both Holyfield and Qawi hope to use a victory as a step toward a challenge to Mike Tyson, the undisputed heavyweight champion.

The 25-year-old Holyfield is a solid favorite to win the rematch. "If I hit him half as much I hit him last time, it won't go 15 rounds," Holyfield said.

Holyfield won the WBA junior heavyweight (cruiserweight) title on a 15-round split decision over Qawi July 26, 1986, in Holyfield's hometown of Atlanta. He added the IBF title with a third-round knockout of Rickey Parkey last May 15.

The WBA did not give championship sanction to Saturday night's fight, which means that title will be declared vacant if Qawi wins.

Holyfield has a 16-0 record, with 12 knockouts. He turned pro after settling for a bronze medal at the 1984 Olympics because of a controversial disqualification in the light heavyweight semifinals. Qawi, also a former World Boxing Council light heavyweight champion, has a 28-4-1 record, with 17 knockouts.

Breland's loss was the second of his life. The 25-year-old Olympic welterweight champion posted a 110-1 amateur record, then won his first 18 pro fights, 12 by knockout.

"In the amateurs I was dominating," Breland said. "Then in the pros, it was basically the same thing. Then I had a bad day and everybody played up that bad day."

"Believe me, it hurts. I know what the title means now. Believe me, I will get it back."

Breland said he fought Starling with torn rib cartilage. "I fought with injuries before and come out on top," he said. "I don't know why I did it (fought Starling). It was just stupidity on my part."

Suazo has an 18-3-1 record, with eight knockouts. His last knockout was scored in 27 seconds in his last fight.

Black, Coe lead mixed golf event

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Ronnie Black and Dawn Coe overcame windy conditions to shoot a 6-under-par 66 Friday for the second-round lead in the JC Penney Mixed Team Golf Classic.

Black and Coe, both graduates of Lamar University, had a 35-hole score of 12-under-par 132 for a two-stroke lead over Robert Wrenn and Rosie Jones, who shot a 67 Friday; Steve Jones and Jane Crafter; and Mark McCumber and Debbie Mansey.

"There is a different strategy going on in this kind of wind," Black said. "We don't apologize for bad shots. We've had a good time."

First-round leaders Kenny Perry and Sally Little shot a 73 and were in a pack of six teams at 135.

"I really felt the heat more today," said Perry, a tour rookie. "There's more pressure in being a leader because you want to come through for your partner."

Wilander reaches semifinals

By Rick Warner
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Third-seeded Mats Wilander clinched a semifinal berth at the Masters tennis championship Friday night with a 7-6 (7-3), 6-3 victory over No. 7 Pat Cash.

The victory also guaranteed a semifinal spot for Wilander's Swedish countryman, No. 2 Stefan Edberg, and eliminated Cash from title contention in the round-robin tournament.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl won the second match of the night when No. 4 Jimmy Connors retired after falling behind 4-3 in the first set.

Chair umpire Gerald Armstrong said Connors had to stop after 35 minutes because of a "respiratory illness."

Connors, who has been suffering from a cold and ear infection, had already lost his first two matches in the $500,000 tournament and had virtually no chance of making the semifinals.

"It's tough to play when you can't breathe," he said after the match.

"I was talking to the trainers and doctors and they said after three days, your resistance is virtually non-existent."

"I'm sick. I want to go home and get well. It's enough." Wilander and Edberg are both 2-0 in the eight-man tournament. They play each other in the final round-robin session Saturday, but both will advance to Sunday's semifinals regardless of the outcome.

However, under the complicated Masters format, the winner of the Wilander-Edberg match probably won't have to play four-time champion Lendl in the semifinals.

"I guess if you're going to win this tournament, you must probably have to play Lendl anyway," Wilander said. "So I'd rather play him in the finals."

Cash entered the Masters with a 4-2 record against Wilander, including a quarterfinal victory en route to the 1987 Wimbledon championship.

"I think he's a better player now than before Wimbledon," Wilander said of the 22-year-old Australian.

Funds missing add to SMU scandal

By Jeff Awalt
The Associated Press

DALLAS — At least $10,000 may have been stolen from Southern Methodist University's athletic department by a former employee amid the school's football scandal, an assistant attorney general said Friday.

John Vasquez said he plans to submit evidence to a Dallas County grand jury within two weeks against a former athletic department employee for what Vasquez termed misapplication or theft of the funds.

The revelation of missing money came exactly one year after the resignations of SMU's top athletic department officials in the wake of the scandal which prompted the NCAA to ban SMU from football this year.

Vasquez would not give the exact amount of the missing money, except to say it was at least $10,000, nor would he say over what period of time it had been taken.

After presenting his findings Friday to the SMU board and university President A. Kenneth Pye, Vasquez suggested that others may have been involved. He refused to elaborate, but stressed that no current or former board members were involved.

Pye said the university will continue cooperating with the attorney general's investigation, but admitted he is growing weary of the case.

"There is considerable frustration because it diverts interest from the mainstream of what this university is about, which is teaching and research," Pye said after a closed-door meeting with the board and Vasquez.

"We're dealing with matters of some importance here, but, the major importance is the quality of the research product, the quality of teaching and the quality of student life," Pye said.

"And each time we release a

"Just because you win Wimbledon doesn't mean that you're automatically in the top five."

Cash saved three set points in the 10th game of the first set and went on to break Wilander to even the set at 5-5.

"I seemed to lose my concentration at 5-4," said Wilander, who was runner-up to Lendl at the 1987 French and U.S. Opens. "That seems to happen to me quite often at 40-love. I guess it just feels like the game should be over."

The set nearly ended in Cash's favor in the 12th game, but Wilander saved a set point by running down a half-volley and turning it into a cross-court winner.

The 23-year-old Swede then hit a forehand winner and an ace to force the tiebreaker, where he won five of the points on Cash errors.

After falling behind 3-1 in the second set, Cash broke Wilander to make it 3-2. But his comeback ended in the next game when he lost his serve at love.

In the final match of the night, No. 5 Boris Becker met No. 8 Brad Gilbert.

Syracuse wins behind Douglas

NCAA Hoop

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Junior guard Sherman Douglas scored 20 points and keyed a ball-hawking defense that staked No. 3 Syracuse to a 26-5 lead seven minutes into the game and the Orangemen rolled to a 111-65 victory Friday night over South Florida in the opening round of the Carrier Classic.

Rony Selkaly and Keith Hughes each added 14 points as six Orangemen scored in double figures. The victory improved Syracuse's record to 3-2 and moved the Orangemen into Saturday's championship game against the winner of Friday's second game between Fordham and Texas Christian.

Syracuse used a pressure defense to force 12 first-half turnovers as the Orangemen, using a 13-0 run, jumped to a 26-5 lead with 13:01 to play in the half. The Orangemen, scoring repeatedly on breakaway lay-ins and dunks, later used a 16-0 run to build their biggest lead of the first half, 52-16, with 2:17 to play.

Syracuse came out in the second half with a 12-2 spurt, including six from Stephen Thompson, to push its lead from 56-23 to 68-25 with 16:53 remaining. After that, the Orangemen went to their reserves.

Herman Harried put Syracuse over the century mark with a pair of free throws with 4:15 to play. Syracuse's biggest advantage was 47 points, which came inside the final two minutes.

South Florida, winless in three games, was led by Darrell Coleman with 16 points and Hakim Shahid with 13.

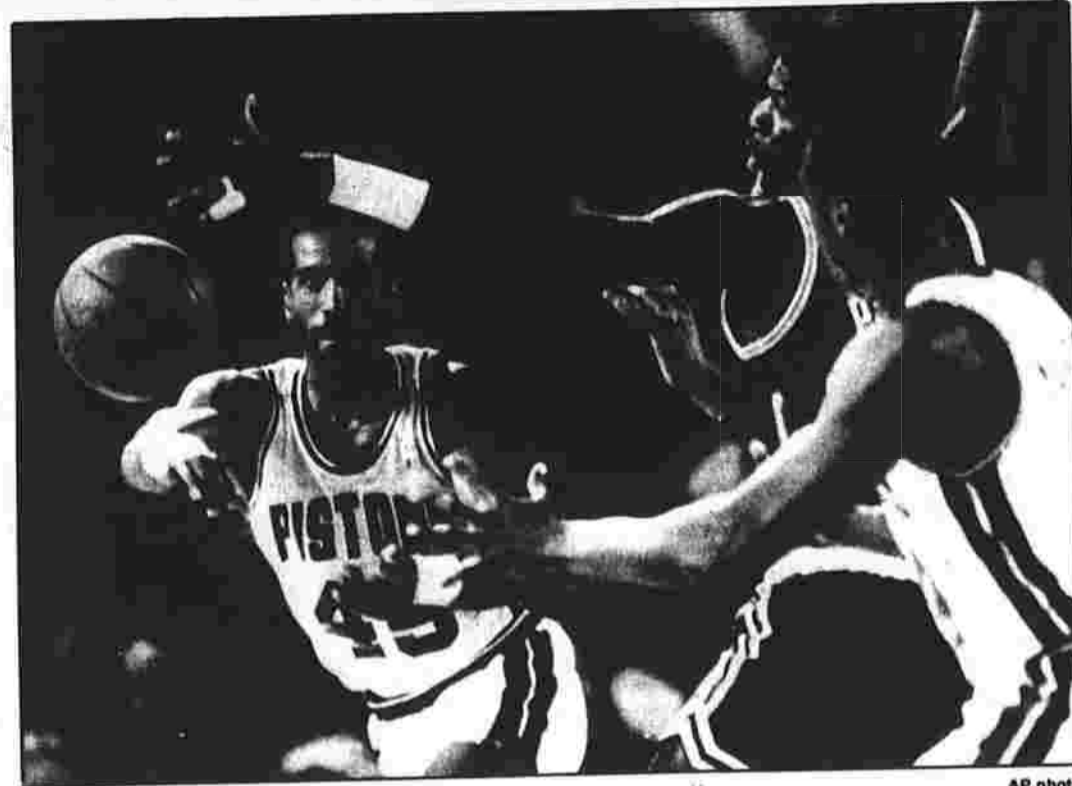

Fairfield 63, Hartford 57

HARTFORD (AP) — Junior guard Troy Bradford scored 27 points, including 18 in the second half, to lead Fairfield University to a 63-57 victory over the University of Hartford in college basketball Friday.

Bradford's shooting helped Fairfield, 1-1, overcome a 31-23 halftime deficit. He hit a 3-point basket to give the Stags their first lead of the second half, 49-47, with 5:55 left in the game.

Fairfield took the lead for good, 54-53, on Tom Squeri's corner jumper with 2:04 left. The 6-7 Squeri finished with 16 points and 17 rebounds.

Anthony Moye scored 13 points for Hartford, 0-4.

Seattle led by as many as 18 points twice in the second quarter and held a 57-42 advantage with 2:31 left in the half.

But Philadelphia scored the last four points of the quarter and went on a 14-3 spurt to open the second half. A layup by Cheeks gave the 76ers their first lead of the game, 60-59, with 8:28 left in the third quarter.

Barkley shot 13 of 16 from the field and had 13 rebounds. David Wingate added 13 points for Philadelphia. Tom Chambers had 24 points and Dale Ellis 20 for Seattle.

Bucks 85, Lakers 83

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 10-year streak of double-figure games was snapped and Craig Hodges scored 22 points Friday night as the Milwaukee Bucks held off a late rally to beat the Los Angeles Lakers 85-83.

The Lakers' Mychal Thompson missed a 12-foot shot with two seconds left as Los Angeles lost to the Bucks for the second time this season, giving Milwaukee a sweep of the teams' only two meetings.

Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer, was held to seven points, ending his consecutive string of double-figure scoring games at 787. He had four games with 10 points in 1986-87 and two this season, including an overtime game against the Bucks on Nov. 22 when he extended the streak with a basket with a minute left in the extra period.

Jack Sikma had 21 points and Randy Breuer 15 for the Bucks while Magic Johnson, who led the fourth-quarter rally, paced Los Angeles with 22 points.

Sikma had 12 points in the third quarter and Hodges hit a 3-pointer and a driving layup in the final 1:10 of the period as the Bucks took a 71-63 lead.

Los Angeles got close at 76-71 with 7:49 left, but the Bucks responded with six straight points. Paul Pressey's steal and three-point play on a dunk and a driving basket by Hodges made it 81-71 with 7:04 to play.

But Johnson had six points in a 10-2 Laker run that cut Milwaukee's lead to 83-81 with 1:57 to go.

Cavaliers 108, Pacers 90

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Brad Daugherty scored 16 of his 28 points in the third quarter Friday night, sparking the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 108-90 NBA victory over the Indiana Pacers.

The Cavaliers trailed by 12 points after Steve Stipanovich and Vern Fleming scored for Indiana to open the second half. The Cavaliers, who were down by as many as 14 points in the first half, took the lead for the first time at 62-60 on a layup by Phil Hubbard and were never caught.

Chuck Person topped Indiana with 19 points and John Long had 16. Mark Price had 17 points and 10 assists and Dell Curry had 16 points in a reserve role for Indiana.

Mavs 116, Warriors 95

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Aguirre scored six of his game-high 28 points in a 12-0 third-quarter run as the Dallas Mavericks coasted to a 116-95 NBA victory over the Golden State Warriors Friday night.

The victory was the most one-sided for the Mavericks this season. Dallas won for the sixth time in its last eight games. Golden State slipped to 2-12, the worst record in the NBA, and is winless on the road in eight tries.

Dallas led 78-71 with 5:30 left in the third quarter. Aguirre hit a pair of inside shots and a 20-foot jumper and Roy Tarpley added five points during the 1½-minute spurt, expanding the Mavericks lead to 90-71.

Mavericks coach John MacLeod emptied his bench in the fourth quarter as Dallas opened leads as large as 24 points. Aguirre did not play in the fourth quarter.

Joe Barry Carroll led the Warriors with 25 points.

Dallas, which held a 53-33 rebounding edge, led by as many as 14 in the second quarter before Golden State went on a 10-0 run. Chris Mullin scored three straight baskets and the Warriors narrowed the deficit to 47-43 with 5:08 to play before halftime.

Dallas held a 62-53 halftime advantage.

Hawks 139, Nets 102

ATLANTA (AP) — Reserve guard John Battle scored 27 points, 16 of them in the second quarter, as the Atlanta Hawks won their fourth straight NBA game Friday night, 139-102 over the New Jersey Nets.

Nine Hawks scored in double figures although the team's leading scorer, Dominique Wilkins, missed his second straight game with a foot injury. The loss left New Jersey with an 0-7 road record for the season.

The Hawks led only 34-30 after one quarter, but Kevin Willis scored four of his 18 points during a 10-2 run late in the second period as Atlanta took a 66-47 lead.

Glenn Rivers scored six points on a 10-0 run in the third quarter as Atlanta's lead grew to 82-55.

Dwayne Washington led the Nets with 19 points, Dennis Hopson had 17 and Buck Williams 16.

Mike McGee scored 18 points for Atlanta and Antoine Carr had 17, while Spud Webb had 15 assists.

Nordiques fire Andre Savard

QUEBEC (AP) — Saying he had no alternative, Quebec Nordiques general manager Maurice Filion fired rookie coach Andre Savard Friday and replaced him with Ron Lapointe, coach of the team's top minor-league affiliate.

"I was worried about Savard's health," Filion said at a news conference that Savard did not attend. "He gave himself completely to the team, but it did not work out. We had no choice but to make changes."

Filion hired the Savard, 34, last June 19 to replace Michel Bergeron, who left to become coach of the New York Rangers. Savard's tenure lasted just 24 games, during which the Nordiques went 10-13-1.

Savard's last game was a 6-3 loss to the Sabres in Buffalo on Thursday that left Quebec in fourth place in the Adams Division, one point out of the cellar — and in poor spirits.

"I hope to put more fun back in the game for players," said Lapointe, who was elevated from Quebec's top farm team, the Fredericton Express of the American Hockey League.

Lapointe, who was an assistant with the Washington Capitals for two seasons before taking over as coach and general manager at Fredericton, said he believes his style of coaching should help create a better atmosphere.

"My style is to stay close to the players, to talk to them a lot," said Lapointe, who also coached for six seasons in the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League and was an assistant to Terry Simpson, now coach of the New York Islanders, with Canada's 1985 world champion junior team.

"A coach can be a friend to players as long as the players realize that he's the boss and the one in charge," Lapointe said.

Lapointe took over the Express, a team shared by Quebec and Vancouver, when Savard joined the Nordiques and had Fredericton in first place in its division with a 14-6-3 record.

Isles blast Caps

NHL Roundup

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Mikko Makela scored two of his three goals in the third period Friday night to lead the New York Islanders to a 6-4 NHL victory over the Washington Capitals.

The Capitals rallied to tie the game 3-3 before Pat Flatley scored on a rebound shot 4:03 into the third period for what proved to be the game-winner in the first meeting between the two teams at the Capital Center since last year's memorable quadruple-overtime Stanley Cup playoff game.

Makela then scored twice in a period of 2:10, giving him six goals in his last four games and 14 for the season.

The Islanders had taken a 3-1 lead on goals 24 seconds apart by Makela and Gerald DiDuck. The Capitals got power-play goals by Bengt Gustafsson later in the first period and another by Dale Hunter in the opening minute of the third period.

The victory gave the Patrick Division-leading Islanders an 8-4-1 record on the road this season, the best in the NHL.

Washington has scored two power-play goals in each of its last seven games. Michal Pivonka scored the game's first goal and Greg Adams added an unassisted goal in the waning moments for the Capitals.

Wings 12, Blackhawks 0

DETROIT (AP) — Tim Higgins scored three goals as the Detroit Red Wings extended their NHL winning streak to five games with a 12-0 victory Friday night over Chicago, the worst margin of defeat in Blackhawks' history.

The loss, which tied the Blackhawks record for most goals allowed in a game, extended their current winless road string to 13 — 0-12-1.

Steve Yzerman added a pair of goals and Brent Ashton had one and two assists as the Red Wings, 13-9-2, handed Chicago, 10-14-2, its fifth straight defeat.

Sixth annual Rotary Club Classic coming up

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

As the college and high school basketball seasons are upon us, a local hoop tournament will be renewed for the sixth time.

The annual Manchester Rotary Club Classic will be held on Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 28-29, at East Catholic High School. The eight-team tourney will feature three local teams — the Manchester Community College men's team, and the boys' squads from East Catholic and Manchester High School. There will be a junior college division and a high school division.

Pat Castagna, president of the Rotary club presented the three local contingents with financial support for the tournament at a luncheon at MCC on Friday.

"We at Rotary are delighted to be affiliated with this tournament," Castagna said. "We look for years of continuous support."

The schedule of games is as follows: Monday, Dec. 28: 2 p.m. — Mitchell College vs. County College of Morris (N.J.); 4 p.m. — Windsor High School vs. Suffield High School; 6 p.m. — Manchester Community College vs. Southern Connecticut State junior varsity; 8 p.m. — East Catholic High School vs. Manchester High School.

Tuesday, Dec. 29: 2 p.m. — College consolation; 4 p.m. — High school consolation; 6 p.m. — High school championship; 8 p.m. — College championship.

MCC is the defending champs in the college division while Middletown High won the high school division a year ago. Pat Mistretta, MCC athletic director, knows the Cougars will have their hands full in their attempt to repeat in the college division.

"I think the college division is going to be exciting," Mistretta said. "We'll have a difficult time repeating." Currently, MCC is 3-1. Mitchell College is 3-3 while County College of Morris was 19-8 a year ago. Mitchell features two of the finest JUCO players in New England in Mike Cronin and Andre Washington.

The only new face in the scholastic division is Suffield High, a Class S semifinalist the last three years. Middletown, the two-time defending champs, won't be on hand this year. "We asked them (Middletown) to leave politely," Tom Malin, the athletic director at East Catholic, kidded.

Manchester High, a Class L quarterfinalist a year ago, finished last in the tourney last year and looks to improve on that.

"We haven't done too well in this tournament," third-year Indian Coach Frank Kinell said. "The East Catholic game always seems to come down to the last few minutes of the game. This is the most talented team I've had in the three years I've been here." The Indians will be led by senior co-captains Matt Vaughn and Troy Peters.

Windsor, which finished third last year, returns its entire roster from a year ago. Suffield Coach Fran Aniello is happy to have been invited to this tournament.

"It's an opportunity to play better teams which makes you a better team," Aniello said. Suffield will be led by Jeff Strole and Dan Gloria. East Catholic, runners-up a year ago and 2-18 a year ago, will have a tough task getting by Manchester in the first round.

Awards will be presented to the champion and runners-up in each division. A most valuable player and all-tournament team will be selected for both divisions.

Matt Vaughn (30) is a co-captain with the Manchester High basketball team this season. He and his Indian teammates will face crosstown East Catholic in the sixth annual Manchester Rotary Club Classic.

Coventry girls looking forward to hoop season

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

There's no pressure from within to do well. Nevertheless, the expectations for the Coventry High girls' basketball team in 1987-88 are quite high.

That's only natural inasmuch as the Patriots are coming off a 19-3 season in which they won the Charter Oak Conference title and were a state Class S quarterfinalist. Three starters from that crew are among the returnees.

"There's no pressure in my mind (to do well)," said fourth-year Patriot Coach Ray Dimmock. "We're looking forward to the year because we think we're going to do well but we're not going in thinking we have something to accomplish."

The Patriots, who launch their campaign next Saturday night at home against non-conference foe

E.O. Smith, have two big weapons back in 5-foot-10 senior point guard Leslie Danehy and 5-foot-10 senior center Kim Mizeko. Danehy averaged 14.5 points and Mizeko 10.0 along with a bushel of rebounds in Coventry's successful '86-87 campaign.

Anna Werfel, a 5-foot-4 senior, will start at the small forward or guard slot with the fifth starting position up for grabs between 5-foot-2 junior Mollie Jacogson, 5-foot-8 junior Brenda Thalacker, 5-foot-5 junior Nektaria Gitsis and 5-foot-8 junior Corine Caginello. Dimmock plans on carrying four sophomores on the varsity roster. They are 6-foot Michelle Dixon, who has had a fine preseason, 5-foot-8 Stacie Renfro, 5-foot-5 Chrissy Gagnon and 5-foot-5 Johanna VanKruiningen.

The probability of having a good year is there. "I expect us to be one of the top teams in the COC. I think it's between us, Cromwell and Portland," Dimmock said. But he tempered his remarks later, talking of injuries. "I know what to expect. And we have a comfortable feeling about the other teams."

"I like our chances but in a small school if you lose one key person you can go from 19-1 to 13-7 real quick." Dimmock remembers his first year when the Patriots faced perennial Class S champion Westbrook in a first-round postseason game. Westbrook won that won handily. "We said then we knew what we had to do to be competitive (with Westbrook). I'm not sure we're there but it would be nice to get into the finals and play them and see how far we've come. But there's no pressure to be there."

Schedule: Dec. 12 E.O. Smith H, 12 East Granby H 1 p.m., 14 Rocky Hill A, 21 Coventry H, 23 Cromwell H 6 p.m., Jan. 4 Bacon Academy A, 7 East Hampton H, 14 RHAM H, 19 Portland A 3:30 p.m., 21 Rocky Hill H 3:30 p.m., 28 Coventry A, Feb. 1 Cromwell A, Bacon Academy H, 8 East Hampton A, 17 East Granby A, 18 RHAM A. Bolton girls have only one direction to travel

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — There's only one way to go after you start a program and, in the first season of varsity operation, the team doesn't win a game.

That's the situation for the Bolton High girls' basketball team which went 0-18 in its first varsity season in 1986-87.

Second-year Bolton Coach Jennifer Kohut, a senior majoring in physical education at the University of Connecticut, faces a twofold dilemma with the Bulldogs. The program jumped from a club basis, which it operated on for three to four years, to a scholastic varsity level in '86-87.

The junior varsity level was skipped. Doing so is workable, but trying to get a program rolling with eight players makes it very difficult.

That's eight players out of a female enrollment of 172 at the school.

"The numbers is the biggest thing," Kohut said, getting ready for the '87-88 campaign that begins Thursday at home against Portland High. "My assistant (Catherine Zizlavsky) and I both have to be involved in five on five scrimmages. I'm trying to get some friends in so we can watch instead of being actively involved."

Five of the eight players saw action a year ago. Kohut does see some hope. "We scrimmaged Stafford Springs today (Thursday) and we did very well. The team has improved 100 percent and I can see things going up," she said.

Four definite starters for Bolton are 5-foot-7 Wendy Nell at center, 5-foot-5 sophomore Michelle Hardee in the backcourt and 5-foot-7 senior Ann Lewis and 5-foot-5 sophomore Amy Stoudt at the forward slots. Junior Sara Lewis and freshman Danielle Curlyo, a pair of 5-foot-5 performers, are vying for the other backcourt starting slot. Sophomores Jill Sappel and Teresa McMahon round out the Bulldog roster.

"Our big obstacle is youth," Kohut said, adding the team has done well against opposing junior varsity squads. "(But) they thought if they should have a program they should go all the way," she said, referring to her superiors.

Kohut was looking forward to two meets with Cheney Tech, who beat the Bulldogs twice last year. But the Cheney program folded after only six girls went out for the team. "If we do get a win, it'll give us a big push and I think we can upset some other teams," Kohut said.

Schedule: Dec. 12 E.O. Smith H, 14 Bacon Academy A, 17 Rocky Hill A, 21 Bolton A 7 p.m., 23 Portland A, 28 Windham Tech A 7 p.m., 30 Putnam A 6 p.m., Jan. 4 RHAM A, 7 Cromwell H, 11 East Hampton A, 19 Tolland A, 21 Bacon Academy H 4:30 p.m., 25 Rocky Hill H, 28 Bolton H 7 p.m., Feb. 1 Portland H, 4 RHAM H, 8 Cromwell A, 11 East Hampton H, 22-24 COC Tournament TBA. NBA Roundup

By The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Isiah Thomas scored 15 of his 17 points in the second quarter Friday night to lead the Detroit Pistons to a 126-105 NBA victory over the Boston Celtics in the first meeting since their seven-game duel in the Eastern Division finals last season.

And, just as in the playoffs which Boston won, the home team was the winner.

The Celtics, behind Larry Bird's 12 points, led 33-31 after one quarter.

But Thomas scored 12 points and Dennis Rodman had eight in a 21-12 run that saw the Pistons pull away to a 66-47 lead with 2:11 remaining in the second quarter.

Detroit led 71-55 at the half and the closest the Celtics got the rest of the way was 13 points on the first basket of the fourth quarter, by Brad Lohaus, that cut the lead to 95-82.

Adrian Dantley was high for Detroit with 21 points. Vinnie Johnson and Joe Dumars each added 18.

Bird had 27 points for Boston. Kevin McHale, playing his third game since surgery on his right foot, had 20 and Dennis Johnson 19.

McHale played 38 minutes and Bird, still recovering from two strained Achilles' tendons, played 33 minutes. The Celtics were without Danny Ainge, who was sent back to Boston with an injured left rotator cuff.

76ers 118, Sonics 105

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley scored 36 points as the Philadelphia 76ers rallied to defeat the Seattle SuperSonics 118-105 Friday night.

Maurice Cheeks added 23 points and rookie Chris Welp scored 18, including 15 in the fourth quarter.

After Kevin Williams' two free throws gave Seattle an 83-81 lead with 11:48 to play, the 76ers went on a 19-2 tear for a 100-85 advantage.
