Jersey premiere

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP) — Actor Danny DeVito has come home to tout his new movie, which will have its world premiere in this New Jersey shore community tonight.

"It just seemed to be the right thing to do for my first directorial effort," DeVito said Monday of his choice of Asbury Park for the premiere of "Throw Momma From the Train."

DeVito directed the comedy-drama and co-stars with Billy Crystal.

He said he saw the movie as a way to "take chances and different avenues to grow as an actor."

Celebrities expected to attend tonight's premiere at the Paramount Theater at Convention Hall include actor Christopher Reeve, singer Cyndi Lauper, comedians Joe Piscopo and Robin Williams, and talk-show host David Letterman.

A dinner for 400 will be held before the screening and 1,200 people are to attend a party afterward.

About 1,350 tickets at $15 each had been sold for the movie. Tickets for all three events went for $150, and DeVito said the proceeds will go to local charities.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles attended the gala opening of the opera season at the Milan's famed La Scala theater, but his wife, Princess Diana, wasn't in the royal box with him for Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

NEW YORK (AP) — The fictional Frank Bartles and Ed Jaymes are in little danger of losing their jobs as folksy wine cooler pitchmen even though the agency that created them has quit making ads for the E. & J. Gallo Winery.

The Modesto, Calif.-based winemaker plans no major changes in its campaign for Bartles & Jaymes wine cooler, Gallo spokesman Dan Soloman said Monday.

Fears that Frank, who talks, and Ed, who stays silent but nods occasionally, could be consigned to the ad archives were triggered last week when Hal Riney & Partners Inc. announced it had resigned all Gallo accounts.

However, Soloman noted that Gallo owns the rights to the ad campaign, and said it was likely another agency would be hired to create more commercials featuring Frank and Ed.

Going to Hartford? Try the new I-384 connector

The new I-384 connector to I-84 west opened today, making it easier to get to Hartford.

With a snip of the scissors, the long-awaited westbound link between Interstate 84 and Interstate 84 was opened at 11:15 a.m. today. The new connector feeds traffic onto both I-84 east and west, but it's the westbound link that residents in southern Manchester and eastern Connecticut have long awaited because it eliminates the need to travel down Silver Lane, Forbes Street and Roberts Street in East Hartford to reach an alternate ramp for I-84 and Hartford.

Gov. William A. O'Neill spoke at the opening of the connector, held near the Spencer Street overpass. With the opening, the $80 million project that has been in planning and construction stages for more than 20 years is nearly complete.

A link from Spencer Street via Cemetery Road to I-84 eastbound was opened Nov. 11.

State Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns, Mayor Peter P. DiStasio Jr., East Hartford Mayor Robert D. McNulty and area state legislators joined the governor today at the ceremony.

The new ramp is expected to lessen the amount of traffic along Silver Lane in East Hartford and Spencer Street in Manchester but several merchants said today they expect both business and personal advantages to the new link.

"It's going to bring a lot of people past us," said Mike LaFontaine, who owns the Spencer Street overpass. With the opening, the $80 million project that has been in planning

OSHA orders $1,200 fine in wall collapse

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

A Hartford construction company has been cited for safety violations and fined $1,200 by a federal agency in connection with the collapse of most of a 16-foot by 106-foot wall at Spencer Street Plaza last month.

The company, Royeton Corp., was cited by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration for improperly shoring the wall and for failure to have its workers wear hardhats when they were placing supports along the remaining part of the wall. The collapse, Royeton's vice president, Peter Lidstone, said today.

The wall, which was part of a building under construction at the shopping plaza, collapsed on Nov. 6 as a result of winds reported as high as 31 miles per hour that day. There were no injuries and the three other walls were left intact.

None of the walls had any bracing at the time of the collapse, but Royeton officials had said that installation of steel framing for that purpose had been scheduled for the following week.

Gorbachev lobbies Congress

By Barry Schwid

WASHINGTON — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev resumed summit talks with President Reagan today after appearing before Senate ratification of the newly signed medium-range missile treaty. "They welcome the treaty," he said following a meeting with congressional leaders.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said lawmakers pressed Gorbachev on human rights, and told him that ratification prospects for the arms treaty could be enhanced if the Soviets provided a firm timetable for ending the Red Army occupation of Afghanistan in December 1979.

Byrd and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas both said today they had been in personal meetings with Gorbachev. They expected the treaty would be ratified without any amendments that might force a renegotiation.

That pleased Gorbachev, who said later at the White House, in Reagan's presence, he was convinced. They are sure that it will be ratified, and they welcome the treaty."

After the embassy meeting, Byrd said he told Gorbachev that "it would be very useful to us if he could make a statement for withdrawal from Afghanistan. I did say very clearly that this was a matter of concern and continuing debate."

Byrd recalled that the SALT II arms control treaty was removed from the Senate floor without being ratified in the months immediately following the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan in December 1979.

Later, sitting in the Oval Office with Reagan, Gorbachev broadly indicated he would have more to say about a Soviet timetable for withdrawal.

"The fact that we are ready to withdraw from Afghanistan is something that I have said some time ago," he told reporters.

"What we have to discuss is more specific," he said.

Asked if the missile ban treaty would be followed by agreements with Reagan on Afghanistan and the Persian Gulf, the Soviet leader replied:

"This is precisely the portion of our program, the issues we will discuss with the president right now. I do believe those are important questions that deserve very careful consideration."

Gorbachev's private session with House and Senate leaders in an ornate salon at the embassy, where he will entertain President Reagan and his wife at dinner this evening, amounted to an unusual personal campaign for ratification of the treaty that he and the president signed on Tuesday.

"The Soviet leader spoke of the costly burden of the arms race on both countries, which he said 'causes harm to the vital interests of our peoples and prevents us from developing our economies in the interests of the peoples of our two countries and the interests of progress.'"

"I would invite you all to cooperate in making that document become part of our lives. We would be, I feel, doing the correct thing if we took that stand, since the American side and surely the European side have been very diligent in scrutinizing our approach to this treaty."

Mix-up sparks new procedure for 911

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Though the mix-up resulted in the emergency response delay, Edward Wadhams said Tuesday he could not attribute his wife's death to that and he believes the mix-up, similar to those in other towns after a Bolton resident mistakenly called 911 and paramedics arrived at a Manchester address.

Police spokesman Gary J. Wood said Tuesday that the new policy would be implemented after Manchester paramedics on Friday were mistakenly dispatched to Linwood Drive in Manchester when receiving an emergency call from Lynnwood Drive in Bolton. The call was apparently placed by the grandson of 86-year-old Mary Wadhams, of 32 Lynnwood Drive, Bolton, who later that night died at Manchester Memorial Hospital after suffering a stroke.

dispatcher at Tolland County Mutual Aid Fire Service, which handles dispatching for Bolton's fire and emergency service.

Bolton does not have 911 service, but some telephone lines in the town are hooked into Manchester's 911 system. The correct fire and medical emergency number for Bolton residents to call is 872-7333.

Friday's mix-up apparently resulted in a 16-minute delay between the time the call was received in Manchester and the time the mutual aid service dispatched Bolton firefighters to 32 Lynnwood Drive.

Wadhams said Tuesday that his grandson placed the call for medical service for his wife. Although he could not recall the number of minutes that passed between the time of the call and the arrival of the firefighters, he said that an emergency team was at the scene within a few minutes.

Wadhams said he didn't know whether a direct call to Bolton would have made a difference.

Wood said that dispatchers have in the past phoned callers in order to check an address before dispatching police or firefighters. There has been no formal system for them to follow, however, he said.

The Lynnwood Drive in Manchester is located near the Glastonbury border, while Lynnwood Drive in Bolton is located in that town's northeast corner, near the Vernon border.

Wood said the call from Lynnwood Drive was received by Manchester 911 at 9:28 p.m. A paramedic unit dispatched to Lynnwood Drive in Bolton arrived there at 9:33. Within a minute, the paramedics

Wheelchair gardening aids recovery

CRASH VICTIM DELYNN JONES ... develops horticultural therapy

CHICAGO (AP) — A 17-year-old boy who suffered massive head injuries in an auto accident 14 1/2 months ago was honored this week for devising a wheelchair therapy program he credits for his speedy recovery — growing plants.

"Sixty-eight days in the hospital watching TV all the time got boring," said Delynn Jones, who had to learn to walk and talk again because of brain damage he suffered in the accident.

Jones, a high school senior from Harrodsburg, Ky., is attending a 4-H conference here this week as a reward for winning the state's horticulture competition for his wheelchair garden.

The garden at the hospital where Jones was treated in a 30-by-20 foot area with aisles between the rows of corn, tomatoes and bush beans for the wheelchairs. Patients use special equipment to dig weeds, plant seeds and fertilize their crops.

In the first year, 37 patients participated in the program, said Jones, who spends four hours a day working with at garden even though he is back at school and fully recovered. Most of the participants are in their 40s and 50s, he said.

"Since I went through all this, I know what people are going through when they are recovering," Jones said Tuesday. "This gives them something to do to have a better attitude. They are extremely grateful."

"The individual who has had brain injury or retardation needs something in the way of encouragement," said Bill Fountain, a professor at the University of Kentucky who helped Jones develop his wheelchair garden.

"They can enjoy watching the plants grow and develop. And plants are very tough, durable and are always there," Fountain said.

On Sept. 13, 1986, Jones was on his way to play basketball with friends when he was thrown from the back of a slow-moving car. He suffered severe head injuries and a collapsed lung.

When he finally awoke from a coma weeks later in Cardinal Hill Hospital in Lexington, he felt like "an infant learning to discover the faces and to gently squeeze the hands of his parents," Jones said.

17-lot subdivision approved

The Planning and Zoning Commission Monday approved a 17-lot subdivision, erosion control plan and inland wetlands permit for a 16.5-acre parcel north of the Tonica Springs Trail and Lookout Mountain Drive intersection.

Developers Andrew Anasidi Sr. and Andrew Anasidi Jr. propose single-family units for the site, located in a Residence AA zone.

The plans call for the extension of a town road to create a through road and the construction of a 1,150-foot long temporary cul de sac. The cul de sac will end 60 feet before the property line to accommodate future design of a proposed roadway and access road.

33-acre industrial complex on hold

The Planning and Zoning Commission will wait for modifications to plans for a 33-acre industrial complex proposed for Chapel Road and Burnham Street before voting on the proposal.

The PZC was scheduled to vote on the application for a special exception permit and erosion control plan from developer Darrell Chalouit at a Monday hearing, but postponed the vote until concerns of the town staff were addressed and drainage computations received.

Chalouit proposes six industrial buildings ranging in size from 5,000 to 11,700 square feet, for a total of 48,700 square feet. Also proposed is 137 parking spaces on the site, and access to the complex off Chapel Road.

Chalouit's offices will occupy the 5,000 square-foot building. The other smaller buildings will act as a sort of buffer between the residential area and industrial areas surrounding the proposed complex, said Jay Giles of Fuss & O'Neill Inc.

Giles said he will address staff and engineering concerns on the plans next week.

Apartment fire quickly doused

An apartment fire at West Hill Gardens for the elderly was quickly extinguished Tuesday. No one was injured.

The Town Fire Department responded to an 8:37 a.m. call about a fire in apartment 42-J, occupied by Clarina Duff. The fire, which apparently started in a trash can, was confined to the kitchen of Duff's apartment, said Deputy Fire Chief Robert Bycholski.

Duff was not at home when the fire started, but upstairs neighbor Dorothy Springer of 42-M Bluefield Drive heard a smoke alarm in Duff's apartment and called the Manchester Housing Authority. The authority called the fire department, Bycholski said.

The fire apparently started in the trash can where used matches had been thrown, Bycholski said.

Post office site unconfirmed

A parcel of land near the intersection of Oakland Street and Sheldon Road may be the site of a new post office in Manchester.

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said during the Board of Directors' meeting Tuesday that he had heard rumors that the site, which is owned by Manchester attorney Wesley Gryk, was under consideration for the post office site.

Gryk, asked today to confirm that he is negotiating to sell the parcel off Oakland Street, would not comment.

Postal officials said in September that they had narrowed their search to one site and were negotiating with the owners, but they would not name the site. Linda Crabb, a spokeswoman for the service, said today that no information would be released until after negotiations are done.

DiRosa expressed concern Tuesday night that the post office will not be centrally located if it is located on the Oakland Street property. But Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said the postal service is looking for a site zoned industrial that would be able to accommodate a large number of trucks.

Election ruling hearing unlikely

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

A hearing will likely not be required on a complaint over a local ruling preventing vehicles adorned with political signs from parking outside of polling places for long time periods, a state official says.

Jeffrey Garfield, executive director of the state Elections Enforcement Commission, said state law does not require that a hearing be held on the disputed decision of Joseph Sweeney, chief moderator in Manchester's Nov. 3 election.

Garfield said he will make a recommendation which the commission will act on about Dec. 23.

SOS, a Manchester political committee, had lodged a complaint with the commission against Sweeney's ruling that trucks on which there were large political signs could not be parked for long periods in the parking lots of polling places even if they were beyond a 75-foot limit from the entrance to the polls.

Garfield said the commission ruling also was not of the kind that would impose a penalty. It would determine whether Sweeney's order was valid and what future conduct at polling places should be.

Attorney Ellen Burns filed a complaint against Sweeney's ruling on behalf of SOS, the committee that successfully urged voters to reject a proposed agreement between the town and the Eighth Utilities District which would have resulted in an exchange of fire and sewer jurisdictions and assets.

In a response to the complaint Tuesday, Sweeney, who is a lawyer, contended that the large signs on the trucks were, in effect, free

Water plan approved

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Despite the misgivings of some members, the town Board of Directors voted unanimously Tuesday night to approve a tentative proposal that would allow the Manchester Water Department to serve an area of Glastonbury in the future.

The Glastonbury area that could be served under the proposal is smaller than the area that would have been served under a proposal approved by the directors in September. Under the plan approved by the directors during their meeting in the Lincoln Center, the town would take over water service in Glastonbury in the area bounded by Howe, Kesney and Bell streets if service in that area were ever needed.

Robert Young, the superintendent of the town water division, had originally recommended a much larger area extending down through the center of Glastonbury in the proposal previously approved by the directors. He recommended a reduced area Tuesday because much of the area was also claimed by the Metropolitan District Commission in recent negotiations with the Water Utility Coordinating Committee.

Under a 1985 state law intended to systematize the supply of water throughout Connecticut, water services are required to declare areas they might want to serve in the future to a regional Water Utility Coordinating Council. The proposal approved Tuesday is tentative and subject to the approval of the WUCC.

In exchange for the extended area it would acquire, Manchester would sell some of its existing water lines in Glastonbury to the MDC.

Young has said that expanding service into Glastonbury will permit the town to recoup a portion of the money it spent when it was required to continue serving customers in Glastonbury who had been getting their water from an old line from Manchester's Buckingham Reservoir.

Serving the area in Glastonbury would also permit the town to provide water service in the future to Santina Drive and Bush Hill Road in Manchester, Young has said.

Objections to expanding service into Glastonbury were again raised by Republican Director Geoffrey Naab, who voted against the proposal for the larger service area in September. "I still see no reason for the town of Manchester to get in the business of selling water to Glastonbury," he said.

Ronald Osella, another Republican director, said the town should not be considering expanded water service when it may be facing a water shortage in the next 10 years.

Young said that serving Glastonbury will not require additional staff and should not cause any water supply problems.

Naab said after Tuesday's meeting that he deferred to the expertise of Young and Town Manager Robert B. Weiss in voting for the expanded service area.

Besides the service area in Glastonbury, the town has staked a claim to the area in Redwood Farms served by the L & M Water Co. and an area in South Windsor served by the Avery Heights Water Co. If those companies cease providing water.

The town's proposal to take over those service areas was not challenged by any other water companies.

New rules give public more time to comment

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Changes in meeting rules that will allow for greater public comment and will establish an earlier starting time were adopted by the town Board of Directors on Tuesday night after a relatively brief discussion.

With only minor amendments, the board voted 7-2 to approve the changes that had been worked out earlier by Directors Stephen T. Cassano, Mary Ann Handley and Geoffrey Naab. Those changes included proposals made at previous meetings by Cassano, Naab and Director Barbara B. Weinberg. Directors James F. "Dutch" Fogarty and Kenneth N. Tedford voted against the changes.

The new rules formalize the practice recently adopted by the board of meeting twice every month instead of the past custom of once a month. The meetings will now be on the first and second Tuesdays of each month and will begin a half-hour earlier, at 7:30 p.m. instead of 8 p.m.

Members of the public will have the opportunity to comment three times, instead of twice, under the new rules. As in the past, the first comment period will come on the agenda after reports have been made.

The new rules specify that reports from the administration will be given only on agenda items and that the comment during the first period will be restricted to agenda items.

That change was a cause of concern for Tedford, who questioned whether the intent of the new rules was to restrict public comment. He said that the board might sometime decide to suspend its rules and take action on a report not on the agenda. In such a case, the public might not be allowed to offer its opinions, he said.

But Naab said that he was sure that board members would agree to hear comment from the public in such a case.

Fogarty seemed skeptical that the changes would result in more efficient meetings, as they are intended to do. "I think instead of spending one night at the table until 1 o'clock, we're going to spend two nights," he said.

Under the new rules, a single agenda will be prepared for both meetings. During the first meeting, members of the public will have two opportunities to speak, once after the reports and again before the meeting is adjourned. The second comment period would be open to any subject within the jurisdiction of the board.

The first meeting would adjourn after action on the consent calendar. The calendar is made up of items the administration expects will be approved without comment. The board chairman, however, would have the right to adjourn the first meeting at any point in the agenda if he chose to do so. In case of a short agenda, the board could hold only one meeting during a given month.

Members of the public would have a third opportunity to comment during the second monthly meeting. That comment period, open to any subject, would come at the end of the meeting.

Comment during any of the comment periods would be restricted to five minutes. However, if an individual spoke during the closing comment period of the first meeting, he or she would be able to comment for only two minutes at the end of the second meeting.

Renovation bids set for review tonight

By Nancy Connelman
Manchester Herald

The Building Committee tonight will review bids received for renovations to Verplanck and Nathan Hale elementary schools and decide which alternate renovations can be done. Chairman Paul Phillips said.

Bids for renovations, which involve correcting building code violations, were opened Oct. 26 and closed Nov. 24. They will be discussed at tonight's meeting, at 7:30 in the Town Hall coffee room, and later reviewed by the Board of Education and Town Manager Robert B. Weiss.

Bids came well within the range of construction cost estimates, said Phillips. Construction costs were estimated at $808,700 for Nathan Hale and $1,781,600 for Verplanck.

The low base bid for Nathan Hale work was $736,030 from DMC Construction Co. of Manchester. The low base bid for Verplanck was $1,583,000 from Charles Jewett Corp. of Glastonbury. The committee sought bids for each school separately and in pairs to give the committee a wider price range, Phillips said.

The committee received a total of 14 bids from six companies. They ranged from the base bids of $736,030 to $224,500 for Nathan Hale and from $1,583,000 to $1,971,000 for Verplanck.

Bids for alternative renovations, to be done if funds are available, will also be reviewed tonight. Phillips said he thought that all alternatives could be done.

Alternate renovations to Nathan Hale include blacktop paving, the addition of a chain link fence and the addition of some water mains. Alternates for Verplanck include blacktop paving to the rear and the addition of some water mains, brickwork and replacing the gymnasium floor.

Bids for the renovation of Bowers and Wadell will be opened Dec. 14.

Rainy Midwest; second Pacific storm brewing

By The Associated Press

A Pacific storm took aim at the Northwest today on the heels of an earlier blast this week, while rain was widespread across the Midwest.

Snow fell in eastern Minnesota, and snow advisories were posted for southern Minnesota and west-central Wisconsin.

The storm blowing in from the Pacific prompted storm and gale warnings for northern and central sections of the Pacific Coast. Rain spread along the northern and central Pacific Coast, changing to snow in the mountains. Snow extended from eastern Idaho into western Wyoming.

Snow advisories also were issued for the northern Sierra Nevada of California and northwestern California.

Rain was scattered across the upper Great Lakes region, lower Ohio Valley, Illinois and eastern Iowa.

Rain also ranged along the central Gulf Coast and across southern Florida.

Today's forecast called for rain across the Great Lakes region; and rain, with snow in the mountains, in the Northwest.

Highs were expected to be in the 30s to 40s in northern New England, the upper Great Lakes region, northern Mississippi Valley, northern Plains, Rockies and northern Pacific Coast; 70s in southern Georgia, the central Gulf Coast and the Texas Gulf Coast; 80s in southern Texas and southern Florida; and 50s to 60s across most of the rest of the nation.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 14 degrees at Yellowstone, Wyo., to 73 at Vero Beach, Fla.

Today's weather picture was drawn by Becky Falcoetta, who lives on Lucian Street and attends Verplanck School.

Current Quotations

"We can only hope that this history-making agreement will not be an end in itself, but a beginning." - President Reagan, on the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

"May December 8th, 1987, become a date that will be inscribed in the history books—a date that will mark the watershed between the era of a mounting risk of nuclear war from the era of a demilitarization of human life." - Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, on the signing of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

"It's awfully hard to hide something when the number is zero." - U.S. arms negotiator Maynard Gilman, noting that the new U.S.-Soviet treaty bans, rather than reduces in number, certain types of missiles.

Judy Moriarty, program director for the Gateway Community Center in Stamford, and Tony Griffin, co-director of the soup kitchen, are working to get some gifts before Thursday's party for the homeless. The party plans were threatened because the Christmas gifts were stolen.

Thieves take Christmas gifts

STAMFORD (AP) — City social service officials have less than a day to replace $400 worth of stolen presents before a soup kitchen's first Christmas party for homeless people. Gifts, including toys and food baskets, that were donated and collected during the past four months for the party were stolen last week. The party is Thursday at a soup kitchen. This is the second blow in a month to the homeless in the city. Recently, the Salvation Army was forced to suspend its weekend meals program because of a lack of volunteers. "When we told our people about the theft, they said, 'Don't feel bad for us. Feel bad for the kids,'" Judy Moriarty, program director of shelter support for the Gateway Community Center, a non-profit mental health agency, said Tuesday. Moriarty had loaded the gifts, which she and others had been gathering since September, into her car on Friday to take to the New Coventry Hospital House, a soup kitchen. When she went back to her car, everything had been stolen. Thieves got about 150 packages of personal hygiene items, clothes and food baskets, plus about 25 gift-wrapped toys. Moriarty estimated the value of the gifts at $400. The soup kitchen is the site for the Christmas party, which is still scheduled for Thursday. Although it took four months to gather the gifts and the party is just a day away, Moriarty and other shelter workers are counting on the community to come through with gifts. "I was dismayed, but it's not a loss. It's a stumble," said Tony Griffin, co-director of the New Coventry House of Hospitality. "That party is going to go on." Moriarty said the gifts for the children were

Top inspector tells task force building safety can be better

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — The state's building inspector says more can be done to improve building safety in the state. Building Inspector Leo P. Beval told a task force that their 25 preliminary recommendations made public in November go "a long way toward making the changes we need." Among the recommendations of the governor's Building Construction Advisory Committee is that lift-slab construction be banned in the state. Lift-slab construction was being used when L'Ambiance Plaza collapsed in Bridgeport on April 23, killing 28 workers. In the lift-slab method, concrete floors are poured on the ground and then jacked into position along steel columns. Beval took issue with several recommendations, including one that the top local official take charge of a construction site in the event of a construction disaster. He supported the task force recommendation that the top local elected official be placed in charge. Task force Chairman Richard Schaeffer, a former state senator, said the construction industry is an unsafe hazardous business. "There is a crying need for everyone in the construction industry to work as a team to eliminate safety risks," he said. He called the L'Ambiance Plaza collapse "a tragic example of over emphasis on economic incentives and too little emphasis on safety." Safety is often discarded for the sake of profit in construction buildings, he said. The task force will hold a second hearing on this recommendation tonight in Hartford.

Colt and union both confident

HARTFORD (AP) — A top Colt Industries official says the company is confident it will prevail over its striking union in proceedings before the National Labor Relations Board. He outlined what happened in the months before the strike began, including the union's rejection of the company's final contract offer in March 1985. Despite the rejection, workers stayed on the job because "what we wanted to do was get the thing settled without a strike," Wheeler said. "We feel good about it," he said. "We're finally here and we will prevail. There's no doubt in my mind." He said morale on the picket line was "great" and that workers were "happy their day has finally come." Richard S. Reibling, Colt vice president for personnel, said before the hearing opened that the company was equally optimistic.

Report calls for jail closing

HARTFORD (AP) — Conditions at Hartford's Morgan Street Jail are so bad it should be closed as soon as possible, according to a report from a group of doctors hired by the state correction department to study the facility. Until the facility is closed, major changes should be made, including a significant reduction in inmates and a revamping of the medical department, according to members of the Connecticut Peer Review Organization Inc., hired by the correction department to study the jail after the death of an inmate in October. The report, released Tuesday, also concludes that the death of the inmate, Nathaniel Grissette, 30, could have been avoided if his pneumonia had been detected and he had gotten appropriate treatment. In a correction department report, also released Tuesday, a department investigator does not recommend disciplinary action against the personnel involved in the jail when Grissette died. Calling the correction department report a "whitewash," John Brittain, a law professor at the University of Connecticut Law School who represents Grissette's family, called for "a more piercing and probing and more aggressive investigation." Brittain said Grissette's mother and five brothers and sisters will sue the department in early January, saying the medical care amounted to cruel and unusual punishment by pneumonia. The 19-page doctors' report finds flaws in almost every aspect of operations at the jail and recommends it be replaced as soon as possible. Within a year, the inmate population should be significantly reduced, said Marcia Petrillo, executive director of the peer review group. The jail was designed to hold 100 inmates and expanded to house 160, but now houses more than 200 on average. Among the immediate goals, the panel said correction officials should enlarge the medical area, improve its lighting and replace and improve equipment and keep licensed medical personnel on duty 24 hours a day.

Republicans want summit on budget

HARTFORD (AP) — State House Republicans are calling for a "budget summit meeting" in January that would include Republican and Democratic legislative leaders, the governor and members of his budget staff. House Minority Leader Robert G. Jeakle, R-Stratford, said Tuesday that the meeting would explore ways to keep spending increases to a minimum, hold the line on or possibly trim some state taxes and find better ways to predict revenues from state taxes. Gov. William A. O'Neill, a Democrat, will present his 1988-89 budget to the Democratic-controlled General Assembly when it convenes its 1988 session on Feb. 3. The House GOP proposal, endorsed during a Tuesday afternoon meeting of those legislators, follows a report by the legislature's budget office that predicted a $23 million budget deficit in 1988-89. That office is also predicting a $2.5 million surplus in the current year. O'Neill's budget office is estimating a $3 million surplus. Through his spokesman, O'Neill said the budget was still being drafted and said the idea of a meeting of the type proposed by the GOP is premature.

OPINION

Confusion arises in emergency

For the second time in less than a month there has been a delay in responding to an emergency call because of confusion over the location of the emergency.

The delay illustrates again that no matter how careful dispatchers at the police station are about pinning down the site of the emergency, confusion can arise. Less than a month ago, a car in a carport was destroyed by fire. It probably would have been sent to the right location immediately. Two things combined to cause the delay in that case. One was that the victim dialed the telephone operator instead of dialing 911. The other was that even when the caller was directed to the police dispatcher in Manchester, the dispatcher misunderstood the name of the street, possibly because the speaker has a slight accent.

On Friday, a caller from Lynnwood Drive in Bolton dialed 911 to report a medical emergency. But the dispatcher understood the location to be Linwood Drive in Manchester and sent emergency medical personnel there.

It was not until they arrived at the wrong place that the error was discovered, resulting in a 10-minute delay in dispatching people to the right place.

In this case the caller should not have dialed 911, but another emergency number that would have gotten him to the right dispatcher who could have gotten help to the right place sooner.

The Manchester police dispatcher took pains to ask the caller if the Linwood Drive in question was off Keeney Street, but even that check did no good because the caller said it was.

It seems as though no precaution built into the emergency dispatch procedures can overcome the confusion that takes hold of people in an emergency.

Now, the Police Department has wisely decided to determine what streets in Bolton have names that sound like the names of streets in Manchester and routinely verify which town is involved when a call comes in.

Every refinement in the communications procedure will help. But the real key is the future Enhanced 911 system under which the call will automatically go to the right place and the dispatcher will automatically know the location from which the call comes, no matter how unclear the caller may be. It can't happen too soon.

Full-time pay for part-time legislators?

State legislators are a little like that sexy model in the TV commercial when she is hawking expensive goods and they are reacting to a proposal for a big pay raise.

"Frankly, I'm worth it," she purrs. And that's what lawmakers say about a better salary for their services, though they don't agree on what is appropriate. Some of them also say that, oh no, this doesn't mean Connecticut is creeping closer to having a full-time Legislature.

But as the work load and the pay continue to increase, the public begins to wonder.

A commission headed by former Rep. George Ritter of Hartford recommended a 25 percent hike for representatives and 19 percent for senators. The new base advocated by this group would be $22,500, compared with the $18,200 legislators receive now.

The higher figure would include $4,000 for expenses as part of salary to improve retirement benefits. Currently, representatives get $3,500 for expenses and senators draw $4,500.

Any change obtained by the 1988 General Assembly could not take effect until the next term. Rep. Janet Polinsky of Waterford, co-chair of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee, predicts that the Ritter proposal will be studied and emerge with pared-down figures. She says legislators will be nervous about handing a pay raise bill in an election year, anyway.

"I'll be surprised if it gets to us," says Rep. Moira Lyons, a four-term Democrat from Stamford.

But even if the commission's proposal is scaled down, it will surely touch off another debate over whether the Legislature should stay part time or go

Hopes for another treaty

By Bryan Brumley

WASHINGTON — Even before the ink was dry on the signatures of Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev to the treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear weapons, the leaders were talking of another, more sweeping pact. "We can only hope that this history-making agreement will not be an end in itself, but a beginning," the president said Tuesday after signing the treaty eliminating superpower weapons with ranges of 540 to 3,000 miles.

"We can be proud of planting this sapling which may one day grow into a great oak of peace," intoned the Kremlin leader. "The mighty oak" would be the proposed Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) to slash by up to half the number of longer-range U.S. and Soviet weapons. But a long winter stands between the deal and the goal of mid-summer 1988 set by Reagan and Gorbachev.

"We have apparently made progress," reported White House chief of staff Howard Baker after day one of the third summit between the two leaders. Another official, demanding anonymity, reported "no surprises or new proposals." But no one was giving out details.

Up on Capitol Hill, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sam Nunn, D-Ga., raised the odds for a long-range treaty to 55-45, up from the 50-50 chance he gave it before the start of the summit.

Others were less confident, citing disagreements over Reagan's Star Wars plans for space-based missile defenses and likely confusion over ratifying and verifying the INF pact as obstacles in the way of reducing strategic arsenals.

"I am doubtful that we could get a START treaty in the near future that dealt adequately with both issues of substance and verification," said arms control hardliner Richard Perle, the former assistant secretary of defense. Although the treaty signed Tuesday establishes unprecedented verification standards under which Soviet and U.S. experts will for the first time visit weapons sites and factories, the procedures required for a larger treaty would be many times as complicated.

"And they have hardly begun to talk about verification," said Perle. At the opposite end of the political spectrum sat another pessimist, John D. Steinbruner of the liberal Brookings Institution. "To have a completed treaty by the end of this administration is demanding to the point of unfeasibility," said Steinbruner.

The key issue is whether the Soviets will insist, as they have for two years, that Reagan agree to adhere to a decade to the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, which they say restricts testing of tests contemplated for Star Wars, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Reagan says he is willing to adhere to the treaty for several years, but wants to invoke the so-called "broad interpretation" of the ABM pact which would allow more extensive testing of space-based components.

So far, Gorbachev has avoided repeating his stern stand against Star Wars of his previous two meetings with Reagan, in Iceland last year and in Geneva in 1985. Congress has voted to prevent the Pentagon from spending money on any tests which violate the narrow ABM interpretation but Gorbachev may not want to

Flush twice; it's a long way out to Langley

WASHINGTON — Mikhail Gorbachev's decision to bunk at the Soviet Embassy in Washington this week has put a crimp in the CIA's plans to collect a bit of intelligence on the state of his health.

Putting it as delicately as we can, if Gorbachev doesn't want to pass any state secrets, he would do well to heed the advice of everybody's mom: "Go before you leave home."

The state of the Soviet leader's health is considered vital information by the CIA. If he has a terminal disease, or even a debilitating one, will affect his ability to control his own country and make decisions about super-power relations.

At the Soviet Embassy, it would be almost impossible for the CIA to isolate a Gorbachev stool sample from the sewage. At the White House, where the summit talks are being held, the odds might be a little better of rigging the guest potty with a trap.

The CIA has a host of medical experts under contract as well as its own medical analysts. They scrutinize every bit of available medical information that could help discern Gorbachev's health.

Members of the Communist Party leader have been blown up and studied by these medical snobs — is that wine-colored birthmark on his forehead changing hue? Could it be advancing melanoma? Videos of him are analyzed closely. Is he walking more slowly? Could his right knee be bothering him? Even copies of medical reports could be acquired by the CIA, if the Soviet leader should see a Western physician.

But short of a physical examination, there is only one way to obtain good medical data on Gorbachev — a way that has had the CIA's doctors scurrying into action. So, while Reagan and his arms control experts are finishing up the medium-range missile agreement, the CIA is trying to figure out how to catch Gorbachev's personal fallout.

A Gorbachev stool would be a real prize. The British spy agency MI6 tried to get one while the CIA was on a friendly visit to London some time ago. The wily Gorbachev stayed at a hostelry with toilets that fed into a common collection tank, and his personal contribution couldn't be isolated.

If this sounds like a spy novel to you, consider the historical precedent. One of the CIA's greatest triumphs was the diversion of the late Nikita Khrushchev's excrement before it was flushed down the toilet. This great coup was executed during Khrushchev's 1959 visit to the United States. The flushed feces were eagerly analyzed by CIA medics, who concluded that Khrushchev was then in excellent health for a man of his age and kind.

A similar exercise was directed at Egyptian King Farouk during his last years of exile in Monte Carlo. Just how does the CIA do it? Recurring rumors among intelligence sources claim that at least one toilet at Blair House, the official residence for visiting dignitaries, has a special collection facility in the basement. But Blair House is closed for repairs and the Soviet leader has had to find living quarters elsewhere.

Van Cliburn then played and sang in Russian the plaintive song, "Moscow Nights." "So, the Gorbachevs and the entire Soviet delegation sang along softly.

"We'll get you some bookings," Reagan quipped to the Gorbachevs and Van Cliburn afterward. Appearing in a very upbeat mood after seeing his guests off, Reagan told reporters there had been no surprises in the first day of talks. Asked if there was more work ahead, he said, "I figure you work right down to the last day."

While it all may sound like scatological stuff and nonsense, the CIA is dead serious about it. They have to be. The security of our country and allies often rests on the results of such examinations.

Not good enough. Even if Congress passes the most generous of the proposed Medicare catastrophic health care bills currently under consideration, the chronically ill elderly will still face financial ruin.

A permanent Accounting Office report says that the proposed legislation would be a big step toward increasing medical coverage, particularly for the poor, but significant gaps would remain. Those gaps could be closed by buying private insurance such as Medigap, which may be too expensive for some.

The proposed legislation would put an upper limit on the amount a beneficiary has to pay on certain deductibles. It would also limit doctor and hospital costs for the chronically ill.

Unlikely bedfellows. The Federal Reserve Board tries to keep its head above partisan politics, but sources say the Fed is considering an unprecedented agreement with the administration to cut interest rates substantially if the administration implements significant cuts in the $150 billion budget deficit. Government economists know that budget cuts could hurt an already-fragile economy, while lower interest rates would stimulate consumer spending and business investment.

Political notes. The main political message at Peter Kelly's massive holiday party in Hartford last week (actually given by his law firm — Uplike, Kelly and Spillace) — was that Tennessee Sen. Al Gore's presidential campaign is right on its charted course. Kelly says that after Iowa, which he concedes, the race will be between his man Gore and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, with Gore's best shot coming in Southern "Super Tuesday" on March 8.

With all of this attention lately on the anniversary of the old television favorite, the Howdy Doody show, it's probably timely to recall that the puppet was the creation of a one-time Republican state legislator from Waterford, the late Rufus Bone.

State Rep. Frank Exposito of Norwalk, wearing his new hat as mayor there, says he'll resign from his seat in the Legislature on Jan. 1.

Exposito, a Republican, won with an astounding 65 percent of the vote. "That told me something," he said. "I figure I had a mandate." So he promptly put a freeze on hiring by the city, saying it will save "at least a mill" on the tax rate.

President and Mrs. Reagan greet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, outside the White House Tuesday night for a state dinner. Earlier Tuesday, Reagan and Gorbachev signed a treaty to eliminate intermediate-range missiles.

Reagan says state dinner was a night to remember

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communists and capitalists alike kicked up their heels at a glittering state dinner at the White House, as Mikhail and Raisa Gorbachev joined an impromptu sing-along of the soulful ballad "Moscow Nights."

It was a night, President Reagan said, "I'll remember for a long time." The U.S. and Soviet delegations returned Tuesday evening to the elegant, chandeliered East Room, where only hours before the two leaders had signed the first-ever pact to do away with an entire class of nuclear weapons.

For the 125 guests attending the festive dinner, it was an evening in which the strains of both the "International" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" filled the room, courtesy of concert pianist Van Cliburn.

"Music is the universal language of mankind," Reagan reminded his guests in announcing the pianist, who had not played in public for nine years. He is renowned in the Soviet Union, being the first American to win the coveted Tchaikovsky competition.

At the end of his performance of Schubert, Rachmaninoff, Brahms and Debussy, Gorbachev leapt from his seat to give the pianist a bear-hug and kisses on the cheeks. Mrs. Gorbachev followed suit, asking him to play again.

Van Cliburn then played and sang in Russian the plaintive song, "Moscow Nights." "So, the Gorbachevs and the entire Soviet delegation sang along softly.

"We'll get you some bookings," Reagan quipped to the Gorbachevs and Van Cliburn afterward. Appearing in a very upbeat mood after seeing his guests off, Reagan told reporters there had been no surprises in the first day of talks. Asked if there was more work ahead, he said, "I figure you work right down to the last day."

Raisa strikes out on her own

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raisa Gorbachev, showing an independent style and a wardrobe to fit any occasion, is striking out on her own to view America's artistic treasures in a gallery built by a famous capitalist, Andrew Mellon.

During her first full day in the United States, the wife of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev had little chance to play tourist or meet average folk.

She spent most of her time attending to official duties at the elaborate White House welcoming ceremonies and the state dinner, sipping coffee with Nancy Reagan and listening to her husband hold forth before a group of prominent non-governmental Americans at the Soviet Embassy.

But today she tours the National Gallery of Art, the 1941 gift to the American people by Andrew Mellon, the U.S. financier and collector of European masterworks. Later, Mrs. Gorbachev will get a lesson in U.S. history while touring the national treasures of the White House with the first lady.

J. Carter Brown, the director of the gallery, said at Tuesday's state dinner that he had "a lovely first worked out," for the Soviet first lady.

Mrs. Gorbachev, who toured a U.S. art show in Moscow last month, had "asked to see American art," and has "a great interest" in 19th-century painters, Brown said. At the Moscow showing last month of "New Horizons: American Painting 1840-1910," Mrs. Gorbachev exclaimed over the works of Whistler and Sargent.

On their first day together, the two first ladies took the opportunity to change clothes at least three times. On Tuesday morning, Mrs. Re-

American to win the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow. "He played a beautiful concert. We have the record," she told reporters. Earlier in the day, she left her husband behind at the White House and led an eight-limousine motorcade that screamed about town as she attempted to get a quick glimpse of Washington's sights.

"Too little time," she called out to reporters gathered at the Jefferson Memorial, when asked if she would speak with them. One reporter, shouting in Russian, asked for her impressions of America. "Lovely," Mrs. Gorbachev responded.

Cutting an elegant figure in a full-length Persian lamb fur coat, Mrs. Gorbachev was immediately surrounded by dozens of Soviet and U.S. security men as she stepped from her black Zil limousine.

Town objects to 'Grapes of Wrath' image

VIVALIA, La. (AP) — Local officials are complaining that a national television commercial for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. makes their town look like a backward hamlet straight out of a John Steinbeck novel. "We are a progressive little city. We have no dirt roads in the city. We have modern buildings," Mayor Sam Randazzo said Tuesday. "We're a relatively new town. We moved about 40 years ago when they pushed the levee back." The town that appears in the commercial isn't even Vidalia, officials say. It's Fort Smith, Ark., 300 miles to the northeast. The commercial, created by Chiat-Day Inc. of Los Angeles, is intended to boost Drexel's image by showing the benefits from the money it helps raise through high-yield, high-risk "junk" bonds. Vidalia, population 5,000, is building the state's first hydroelectric plant in a joint venture with Catalyst Energy Corp. with the help of financing from junk bonds underwritten by Drexel. Vidalia is depicted as a rundown Southern hamlet with a pool room, a decaying town hall and an aging picture show, all smugged in rolling hills surrounded by dusty roads, said the spokesman. "We don't have hills, we don't have a picture show, we don't have a pool room," he said. "We don't have dirt roads barefoot with their sons go fishing," said Jean Waisworth, director of the Chamber of Commerce. Waisworth said the spots bring to mind "Tobacco Road," while Randazzo mentioned "The Grapes of Wrath" — both Depression-era novels about poor rural people struggling to survive. "It's not a good portrayal of our area," Waisworth said. "If we're going to be in the limelight, let's do it right." Residents are angry because the advertisement "does sort of portray us as being in the hills of West Virginia," said Gay Guercio of the Louisiana Office of Tourism. "It looks like the Kentucky hills 50 or 60 years ago," said Edith Spurlock, town clerk. Not one to be pictured as a rube, City Attorney Jack McLemore picked up the telephone last week, called Drexel executive Tom Cauchois and demanded a written apology. A response has yet to be received, and Drexel spokesman Steven Auerer said he had not heard anything about the calls nor could he contact Cauchois. "We would like that the ad be withdrawn," McLemore said. But he will take his cue from Randazzo and the board of aldermen as to the next step, he said. Former Mayor Sidney Murray Jr., now the general manager of the power plant, said the choice of Fort Smith, rather than Vidalia, was unfortunate. "As far as the Drexel people go, they're our friends. They wanted to help us," he said. "Just because your friends make a little mistake you don't throw them away." The hydroelectric project was begun in late 1985 and should be finished in 1990, said Michael Best, Catalyst Energy executive vice president. Best said in hindsight, it would have been a good thing if everyone had had a chance to review the video footage before the ads ran. "Drexel's ad agency was a little callous," Best said.

DeVito goes home

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP) — Actor Danny DeVito brought a bit of Hollywood to his seaside hometown with the world premiere of his movie, "Throw Momma from the Train." The movie's first showing was Tuesday night at the Paramount Theater in this faded resort, in the neighborhood where DeVito's mother and sisters still live. As DeVito, 43, arrived at the theater, a cheering crowd descended on his limousine. "Oh my God, he's so short," a woman screamed as he was literally carried in by several police officers. Under the glare of spotlights and television cameras, other celebrities showed up, including actors Christopher Reeve and John Shea and actress Carol Kane, who appeared with DeVito in the TV show "Taxi." Rock star and local resident Jon Bon Jovi arrived amid screams from fans. DeVito directed "Throw Momma from the Train" and co-stars in it with Billy Crystal. The comedy-drama portrays two novelists through a series of misconstrued messages got involved in a bizarre murder plot and crisis-cross their intended victims.

ANSWER: My favorite book on this subject, "Sam Stalsky on Investing," by the late, great columnist and published by the New York Institute of Finance, is out of print. But you might locate it at some public libraries. At all libraries, however, you will see shelves loaded with books about investments. In content, they range from good to awful. Check out a couple that stress basics and caution against trying to make a killing in the market. Don't even bother with any tome promising a sure road to riches. Some brokerage firms distribute investment books and other literature. But those items usually tell one-sided stories in favor of the brokerage business.

Even for toddler phone can be aid

DEAR ABBY: A short time ago, my niece, Mrs. Donald Palmbo, had an accident at home. She was helpless and couldn't reach the phone. Fortunately, she had taught her 3-year-old daughter, how to make a few phone calls, so that child called the operator and told her to send the police and an ambulance!

The police came right out, this child let them in, and from that point on everything was taken care of. So you see, it pays to teach them young.

DEAR MRS. BIRIETELA: Hooray for Mrs. Palmbo! She taught little Gina well. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a radio dispatcher for the local police department. I answer all the calls and dispatch the police, paramedics, firefighters, etc. There are all emergency calls.

Lately our department has been having a serious problem that I am sure we share with other departments. We receive at least 25 calls a day from children who are "playing" on the phone. I can understand that parents want their children to know how to contact the police or fire department in case of an emergency, but these children should be taught to call us only when there's a real emergency because it ties up our lines.

I hope you think this is important enough for your column.

BUSY DISPATCHER

DEAR DISPATCHER: It is and I did. Parents! Let the little ones practice on a toy phone, and leave the dispatcher's line free. One day it could be you calling for help.

Individual needs for sleep vary

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a 45-year-old woman living with me and she complains that she cannot sleep. She says she's tired. Isay she's lazy. Do you have any professional advice on how much time people need to sleep?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Normal adults appear to require six to eight hours of sleep on the average. This amount can be broken down into a split up, depending on circumstances.

Perhaps your friend really isn't sleeping enough. Sleep deprivation can certainly make people feel and act lazy. I think that she should see a doctor. Insomnia is a common complaint. It may be due to external factors (noise or snoring), to depression and worry, or to physical factors, such as hormone imbalance and nerve diseases. The place to resolve your disagreement, it seems to me, is in the doctor's office.

I'm sending you a copy of my Sleep Health Report, which may give you some helpful suggestions. Other readers who want this report should send $1 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3569. Be sure to ask for the Health Report on Sleep.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter, 14, has just been put on birth-control pills for a painful, disabling ovarian cyst. Is this appropriate?

DEAR READER: Yes, it is. By forcing the body into thinking it's pregnant, oral contraceptive pills inhibit ovulation. There, such medicine can play an important role in relieving the discomfort caused by ovarian cysts. If the pills are ineffective, your daughter might have to consider surgery to drain or remove the cyst that is causing her so much pain.

Dr. Gott's new Health Report, Weight Control Through Calorie Control, contains healthy tips on weight loss, diet and exercise. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Symphony offers skillful program

Music director Michael Lankester first soothed listeners with the variety of emotional experiences in a well-chosen program. Such an illusion was created for the Hartford Symphony audience last Wednesday at Bushnell Memorial Hall.

The most fascinating work of the evening was J.A. Lennon's "Symphonic Rhapsody for Alto Saxophone and Orchestra." It featured Kenneth Radnofsky, a guest lecturer at the Hart School of Music, on soprano saxophone. Radnofsky expertly controlled the pitch instability of an instrument most suited to jazz and rock music.

On a canvas washed by the shimmering consonance of strings, Radnofsky blended blues style into a potent pattern of eccentric rhapsodies, accents, pops and squeaks. This was created by brass, reeds, harp, xylophone and chimes. The audience was spellbound through three movements of this Hartford premiere. They rewarded Radnofsky and the composer who joined him onstage with their warmest approval.

Perhaps some of the general appeal of this work was its eerie mood, similar to that of the theme

Answer to Previous Puzzle

NEW YORK - When Malcolm-Jamal Warner started acting, he had trouble landing roles because he didn't look "street" enough for most black children in their midst.

"Then came 'The Cosby Show' and stardom for Warner as 'Son Theo' Huxtable.

In 'The Faber Clements Story,' Sunday on NBC, Warner hopes to break out of the clean-cut Theo image a bit with his role as Joey, the homeless street kid adopted by Father George Clements, a black Roman Catholic priest who wanted to set an example for his parishioners and encourage them to also adopt the homeless black children in their midst.

"I'm trying to break the stereotypical role now of the Theo-type character, because in a most 'Cosby' like, as I call it, I don't want to be known as just the kind of guy who can play a Theo Huxtable-type character," Warner said in a telephone interview from his home in Brooklyn.

"I want to be known as being able to do more things, being able to stretch. For me that was the most important thing."

Louis Gossett Jr. plays Clements. Warner responded with typical teen-age enthusiasm when asked what it was like working with the Oscar-winning actor. "It was cool."

Warner makes anti-drug speeches at schools and even contemplates measuring success. "I already have an interest in directing and hope to emulate the career of Ron Howard, who started as a child actor on 'The Andy Griffith Show' and became a successful director of such movies as 'Splash' and 'Cocoon.'"

"Directing just seemed to appeal to me more than anything right now," Warner said. "Because I know acting may be there. I may or may not, after 'The Cosby Show.' Even if it is, I still want to get into directing."

Warner makes anti-drug speeches at schools and helps raise money for good causes like children's hospitals. But he takes his image as a teen role model in stride, too.

2 men arrested on drug charges

Two men were to face narcotics charges in Manchester Superior Court today in connection with an incident that occurred Friday night at the Manchester Parkade, police said. Kenneth M. Brown, 24, of Hartford, and Steven Witham, 28, of 201 Center St., Manchester, were charged with possession of cocaine, possession of cocaine with intent to sell and possession of drug paraphernalia, police said. Police said the two men were arrested after police searched a parked car in which they were sitting. Inside the car, police said they found a baggie with powder residue, two packets of suspected cocaine and a scale. Brown and Witham were both released on $500 surety bonds.

Accident results in date in court

A Manchester man will face drunken driving charges Dec. 21 in Manchester Superior Court in connection with a one-car accident on Charter Oak Street early Saturday morning that resulted in injuries, police said. The driver, Ronald J. Coles, 23, of 14 Fairfield St., was listed in satisfactory condition at Manchester Memorial Hospital on Tuesday, a hospital spokeswoman said. He was charged with driving while intoxicated, operating an uninsured motor vehicle, and operating an unregistered motor vehicle. His passenger, Frederick Albers, 24, of 51 Oval Lane, was treated for a hip injury and released. A third, unidentified passenger walked away from the accident, police said. Police said Coles was traveling west on Charter Oak Street at about 2:30 a.m. when the car he was driving went off the right side of the road, collided with a utility pole and spun around.

Lufthansa hijacking was a false alarm

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — What was initially thought to be the hijacking of a Lufthansa jetliner over Turkey today was a false alarm apparently caused when the pilot pushed "the wrong button," officials said. "Lufthansa has told us it was a false alarm," Transport Ministry spokesman Hans Christian Maas told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. He added, "We are still trying to determine exactly what happened." Earlier, Lufthansa had reported that the Boeing 777 Flight

Thoughts

Advent is a time for reflection. The recording by Luke of the announcement by God's messenger, the angel Gabriel, that Mary would one day deliver to the world one who "will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High..." provides ample grist for the reflective mill. Imagine being visited by God in that manner AND with such a message! God's power is beyond comprehension, beyond imagination! "Impossible," you and I would respond. Yet is not history replete with instances of God's saving acts? On the surface of events we may not see the handiwork of God until we are given those precious moments between what was and what, is between living and almost dying, between those long, lonely

Gorbachev lobbies for treaty

Continued from page 1 presidential campaign. Dole, a contender for the Republican nomination to succeed Reagan, made a point of telling a reporter that he had a brief, private session with Gorbachev after the other lawmakers had left. Secretary of State George Shultz said he expected the Gorbachev-Reagan talks today to focus on efforts to negotiate a reduction in long-range ballistic missiles, but that Afghanistan and other issues also would arise. Meanwhile, Gorbachev's wife, Raisa, toured the National Gallery of Art and told reporters she enjoyed seeing an exhibit of work by the late Georgia O'Keeffe. Mrs. Gorbachev called her "a great American painter — and most important — she was a woman." In his session with congressional leaders, Gorbachev said people at the "grassroots level" of both countries favor improved relations

I-384 connector finally open

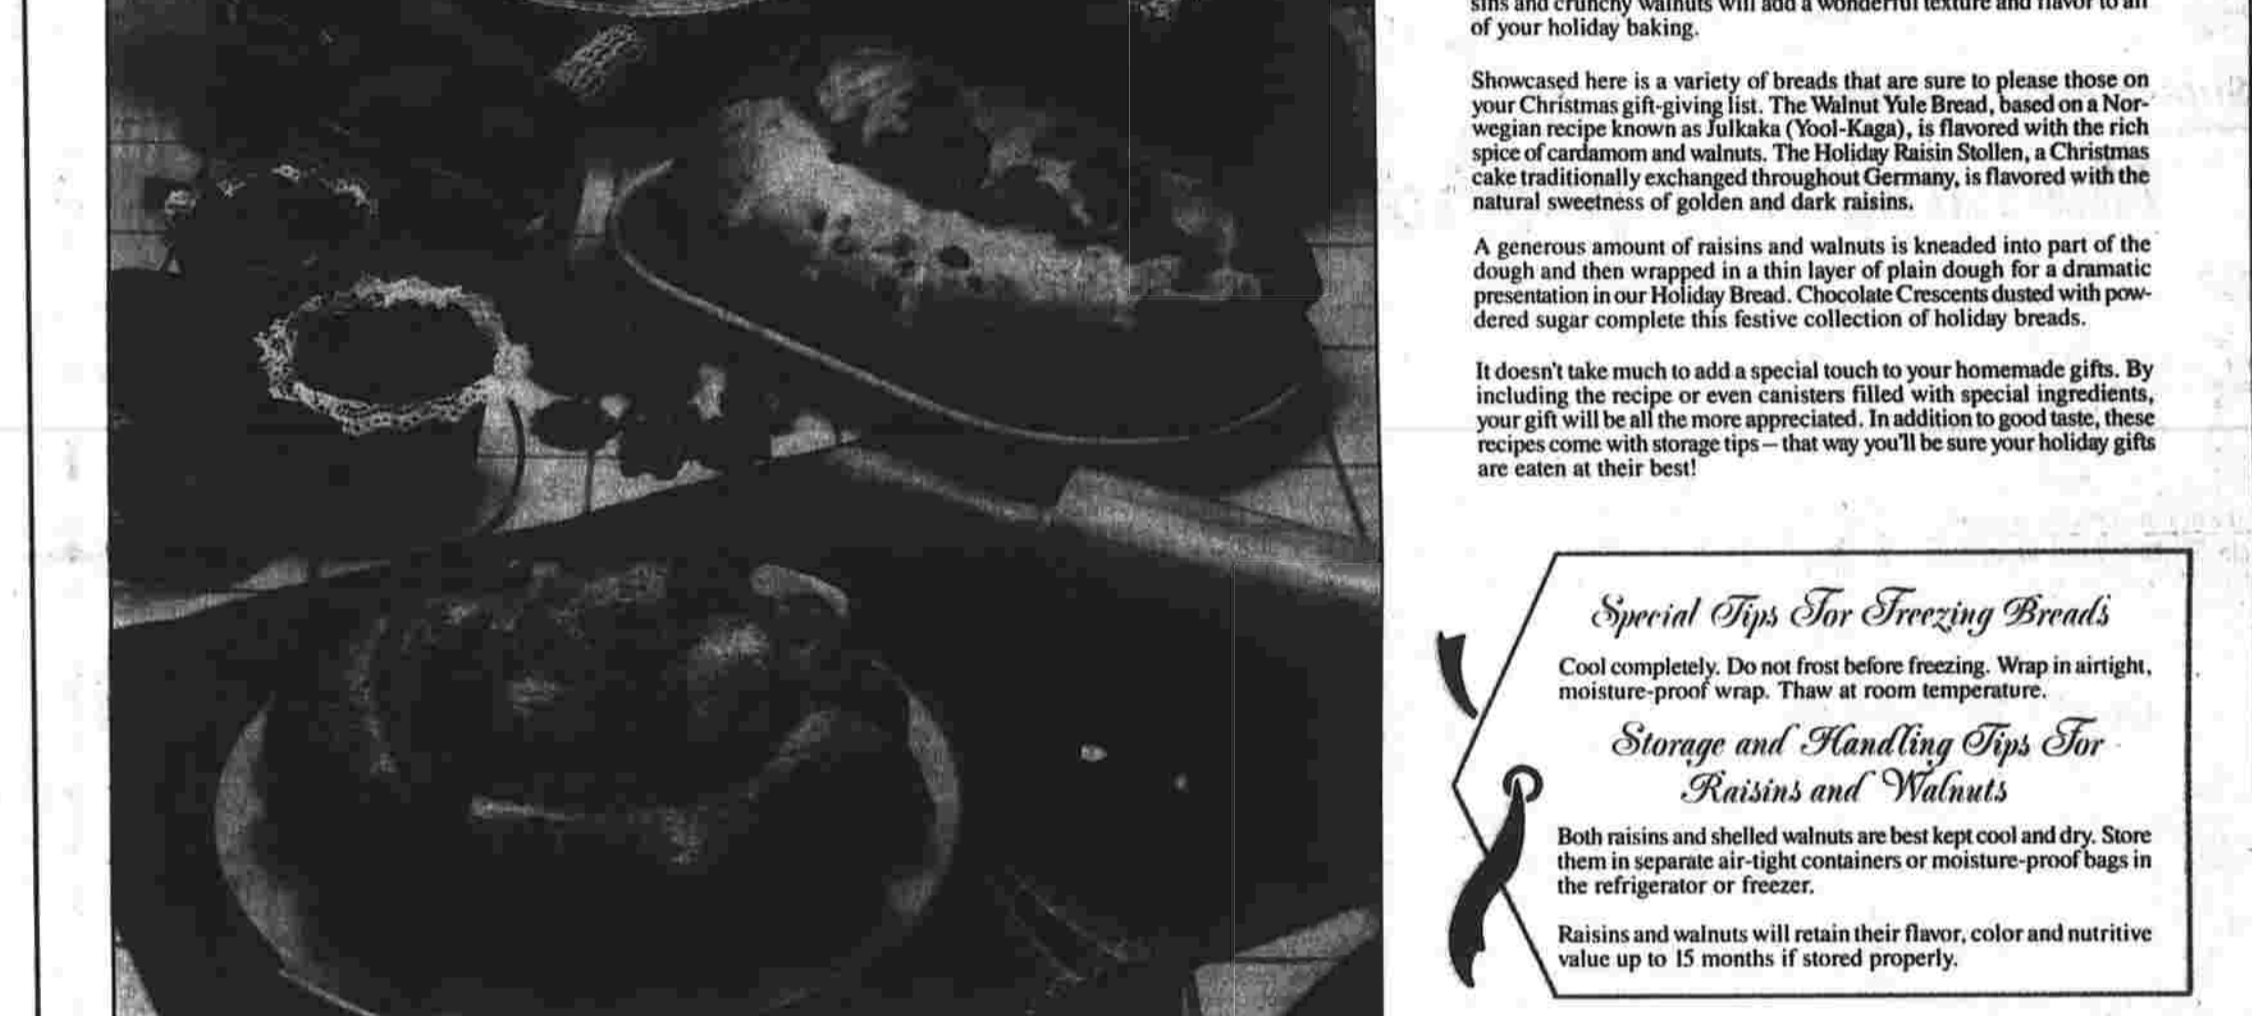

Continued from page 1 manager of the K mart Automotive Center at 239 Spencer St. "It'll make it a lot easier to get here," LaFontaine expected an increase in maintenance business, such as oil changes, from people traveling to and from work in Hartford. Meanwhile, Leo Marquis, manager of the K mart store, said, "I can get home faster." Marquis, who lives in South Windsor, said he felt the link would help the store's business once people got used to using it. Silver Lane traffic would have too much of an adverse effect on the restaurant's business because it's the only Red Lobster restaurant in the area. "It will be easier for people to get here. We have a lot of people who like to come here from anywhere," Goulette said. "I don't think the decrease in traffic will affect that business." The incomplete section of the interchange will eventually link the westbound lanes of I-84 to the eastbound I-384 and the Spencer Street exit.

Farnos hope patience pays off for MHS hockey

By Paul Orrio
Manchester Herald

High school hockey programs are not rebuilt overnight. And Manchester High is no exception. Coming off a successful 1986-87 campaign in which the Indians survived to the last minute of the Division II semifinal game, Coaches Eric and Clay Farnos were left with a skeleton of a team to work with last fall. The team relied on freshmen and sophomores and paid the price, winning just one game out of 23. But patience can reward. The Farnos, refusing to give up, have used the nightmare season as a building block, and hope to start cashing in on the experience right away.

"They are still young," Clay Farnos said. "Our nucleus is forming around the sophomore class, they were thrown into the fire last year playing as freshmen and going 1-18, that makes you grow up in a hurry." Eric Farnos, entering his third year behind the Manchester bench, cites age as a big difference over last year. "Everyone is a year older. Last year we had five freshmen and this year we don't have any." Another big difference will be in the nets where Junior Rod Cantrell returns after a year layoff. Cantrell guided the Indians to a 10-1 record as a freshman two years ago and could be a determining factor in the Indians quest to go from riches to rags to respectability.

The defense will be anchored by sophomore Andy Gagnon, who led the team in scoring as a freshman (9 goals, 10 assists, 19 points), splitting time between forward and defense. Gagnon is a key player, and the Indians need him healthy and out of penalty trouble to succeed. "We only have four games in December this year and are facing teams we can compete with early on," Eric Farnos said.

Minor and sophomore Chip Ad-dabbo will do the bulk of the defensive work while Junior Nate Luc LaRose adds depth as the fifth defenseman. The Farnos have set a state tournament berth as their goal — an accomplishment that would require a 500 record or better — and hope that an earlier December schedule will work in their favor. A third line consisting of Juniors Larry Briggs and Kevin Hurly with sophomore Jason Pellagato will see spot duty. Glen MacLachlan, who earned the team's only victory of '86-87 will back up Cantrell in the nets. The rebuilding process is under way, just how far it has progressed will be determined in time. Clay Farnos thinks last year's experience will have a positive influence on this year's club. "Their basic desire to never want to go through that again will help," the younger Farnos said. "That was the most difficult thing I've ever been through."

Smart a contributor to Indiana win over Vandy

By The Associated Press

Keith Smart finished Indiana's national championship season last April with a tough jumper that gave the Hoosiers a one-point victory. He didn't even start the fourth game of the 1987-88 season. The sixth-ranked Hoosiers beat Vanderbilt 63-41 Tuesday in double overtime. Smart was on the bench for 29:30 before he was called upon by Coach Bob Knight. "My job for most of the night was to cheer the team on and to stay in the flow," Smart said. "That way I was able to come in and contribute right away."

His basket with 7:51 to play gave Indiana a 58-53 lead but more importantly it ended a Hoosier scoring lapse that lasted nearly five minutes. Smart's only other shot was a 16-foot jumper that gave Indiana a 60-49 lead with 2:47 to play. "I was only taking what was given to me," Smart said. "I didn't play that much of a defensive game against Kentucky, so the first place to start off is the defensive end. I think I went out to do that."

Smart's last game was against Kentucky on Saturday in the inaugural Big Four Classic and the senior guard scored 8 from the field and Knight was openly critical of Smart and fellow junior college transfer Dean Garrett after the 65-78 overtime loss. "Coach Knight didn't put me on the bench. I put myself there the way that I played in the last game, and perhaps in this," Smart said. In other games involving ranked teams Tuesday night, No. 4 Arizona beat Northern Arizona 77-59, No. 9 Missouri defeated Drake 76-74, No.

17 Nevada-Las Vegas downed Nevada-Reno 96-86 in double overtime, and No. 10 Notre Dame beat Boston University 74-48. The loss was visiting Vanderbilt's first in four games this season and was the Commodores' first since beating then-No. 1 North Carolina on Saturday. "Indiana's defense is very tough," Vanderbilt Coach C.M. Newton said. "It's very hard to play against that kind of pressure. You can't even practice the amount of pressure you will see in the actual game."

Vanderbilt committed 18 turnovers, double that of Indiana, but had fought back from a 16-point deficit in the first half to take its only lead of the game at 59-58 with 4:46 to play. That lead was wiped out by Smart's second field goal. "We just didn't let our lead get away from us, we let our play get away from us," Knight said. "We enabled them to come back and play well and then just keep on playing well, so it became a tough game."

Newton was proud of the Commodores' comeback. "I've coached a lot of years and I've had a lot of teams and seen a lot of teams that would come into a place like this against a quality of player as Indiana with all that pressure and the crowd into the game and get 16 down and just play the game out," Newton said. Rick Calloway led Indiana, 3-1, with 19 points, while Magnus Pelkowski added a career-high 15 points, all in the first half. "We had a great effort by Pelkowski, not just in the first half but throughout the course of the game. That's the first time that he's made a significant contribution in a game," Knight said of the junior from Colombia. "He has scored well on occasion in practice. I think he was the whole difference for us in the game."

Arizona's balanced scoring attack was led by Sean Elliott with 14 and Steve Kerr with 13 as the Wildcats remained unbeaten in six games. Arizona went on an 11-0 run for a 24-7 lead midway through the first half and the visiting Lumberjacks, 0-5, never got closer than eight points the rest of the way as the Wildcats enjoyed a 42-20 rebounding advantage with Elliott grabbing eight. Mark Anderson finished with 20 points with 17 points in the second half and two on 3-pointers. Arizona's next game is Saturday night at No. 3 Iowa in the first trip back to Iowa City for Coach Lee Olson since he left the Hawkeyes program in 1983. No. 8 Missouri 78, Drake 74; Missouri had to rally, then hold on for its second straight two-point victory. Derrick Chievous scored 24 points to lead four double-figure scorers for the visiting Tigers, who outscored the smaller Bulldogs 42-28. Drake, 1-3, led 56-53 with 9:41 left, but Chievous and Greg Churk converted successive three-point plays to bring Missouri, 3-0, back. Missouri led 75-48 with 22 seconds left.

Sports In Brief

Bosley key to Central victory
NEW BRITAIN — Scott Bosley came off the bench to score 10 first-half points Tuesday night as Central Connecticut made up a 16-point deficit en route to a 75-68 win over Bryant in a non-conference game. Bryant's Division II team led 27-11 with 10:47 remaining in the first half before Bosley's insertion ignited a 23-7 run by the Blue Devils. Trailing by one 33-34 at intermission, Central scored the first 11 points of the second half and never trailed again. The win evaded Central Connecticut's record at 2-2. Bryant fell to 1-4. Tyrone Canino led Central with 16 points and nine rebounds while Bosley and Allan Jennings each scored 14 and Andre Alexander added 11.

NHL agrees to bend waiver rules
PALM BEACH, Fla. — The NHL Board of Governors agreed Tuesday to bend its waiver rules to make some players available to the American and Canadian Olympic teams for the 1988 Games in Calgary. NHL President John Ziegler said the Canadian-based teams have been asked to submit a list of five or six players who would be available to Team Canada. But stars like Wayne Gretzky will not be available. Ziegler said the players chosen by the Olympic team must be ranked in the bottom half of each NHL team's roster and that each NHL team and player must give their consent. The U.S. Olympic team has the option to borrow up to two U.S. players from American-based NHL teams in the event of injuries to regular Olympic team members. But the U.S. team was not asked for any players, nor is it expected to.

Rangers sign Craig McMurry
DALLAS — The Texas Rangers signed free agent pitcher Craig McMurry to a contract with Class AAA Oklahoma City on Tuesday. McMurry, 28, was the National League rookie pitcher of the year in 1983 with Atlanta, with a 15-9 record and a 3.68 earned run average. McMurry fell to 9-17 the next season, was sent to the minors and traded to Toronto prior to last season. He was on the disabled list from March 30 to May 28 and pitched the entire year in the minors, going a combined 9-5 for Class AAA Knoxville and Class AAA Syracuse. The Rangers said McMurry will be invited to spring training as a non-roster player.

Parker to A's in busy day of dealing

By Alon Robinson
The Associated Press
DALLAS — Those attending the winter baseball meetings apparently do not realize they are supposed to do little wheeling and dealing because of increased free agent signings and no interleague trading deadline. Perhaps all that was needed to spur the trading juices of baseball's general managers, however, was to come to Dallas, where million-dollar land and oil deals are cooked up every day. On an unexpectedly busy day of dealing, three big name veterans, Dave Parker, Len Smith and Rafael Ramirez — changed uniforms Tuesday. And there were rumblings they might soon be joined by Lloyd Moseby, Mookie Wilson, Bob Welch, Mike Marshall, Steve Balboni, Leon Durham, Dave Winfield and Kirk Gibson. "This is fun. Maybe we'll see you again tomorrow," Oakland

Manager Tony LaRussa said after the Athletics dealt prospects Jose Rijo and Tim Lincecum to Cincinnati for Parker, the six-time All-Star outfielder. Parker and Smith not only switched teams, they switched leagues. In a surprise deal, the Cubs sent the right-handed Smith, the only reliever in National League history with 10 or more saves in four consecutive seasons, to the Boston Red Sox for pitchers Al Nipper and Calvin Schiraldi. The Reds got rid of the old, 36-year-old Parker, to make way for the new, promising young outfielders Park, O'Neill and Tracy Jones. Reds Manager Pete Rose said "you never replace a player like Dave Parker, but I think Tracy Jones can be a star for us for many years. He's got to play."

A former NL Most Valuable Player with the Pirates, Parker hit a full-season career-low 235 despite respectable numbers of 26 homers and 97 runs batted in.

The Atlanta Braves traded one of baseball's highest-priced utilitymen Rafael Ramirez to the Houston Astros for Class A prospect Mike Whited and Mike Stoker. Ramirez is a good hitter and erratic fielder — he led or tied for the NL lead in errors for four straight seasons — who is expected to fill the Astros' hole at short. Meanwhile, the New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers reportedly were huddling over the idea of trading sluggers, with the Yankees sending right-handed-hitting Winfield to the Tigers for left-handed Gibson.
