British bombing convictions upheld

LONDON (AP) — An appellate court declared "safe and satisfactory" the 1974 convictions of six Irishmen for bombings that killed 21 people, and rejected claims that police misconduct and faulty evidence led to the verdicts.

The Irish government said it was disappointed and concerned, and a Roman Catholic leader sobbed in anger after the Court of Appeal turned down an appeal by the so-called Birmingham Six. Two bombs exploded two minutes apart at two taverns in Birmingham, in central England, on Nov. 21, 1974. Twenty-one people died and 162 were wounded.

The Irish Republican Army, which is fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland, claimed responsibility for the blasts but said none of the six men arrested was involved. In a statement Thursday night, the Irish government said the British court ruling had not removed the concern expressed by Dublin that there may have been a miscarriage of justice.

OPINION

State help needed for lake

The Coventry official who thinks the State of Connecticut should pay some of the cost the town incurs for keeping order on Coventry Lake has a point.

Harvey Barrett, a member of the town's Park and Recreation Commission, feels the cost of manpower and the boat used to patrol the lake should fall entirely on the town of Coventry because the lake is a regional recreation site with a state boat launching area open to all. Barrett told members of the Coventry Town Council recently that when he studied registrations on the boats using the lake this summer, he found half of them belonged to non-residents.

Police Chief Frank Trzaskos, who is acting town manager, quite correctly pointed out that safety and not cost should be the chief concern and that the town must provide protection for townspeople zBut there is no reason why the state should not bear a proportionate part of the cost of patrolling. The council has decided to ask the town's representatives in the General Assembly to see what can be done. There must be some way to devise a system of shared costs that reflects the relative

Technology can be wasteful

Margaret Magnus, the editor of Personnel Journal, says paper work costs American businesses more than $100 billion a year, but she sees some hope for relief on the technological horizon — or is what she sees really relief?

Magnus says that a survey done by her journal showed that for every dollar companies spend to print forms, it costs $20 to $80 to process, copy, distribute and destroy

She does not say so, but there is an added hidden cost in destroying the paper, because unless it's recycled, it takes up room in

Magnus says that while it does some good to cut down on office memos and the like, the real solution "crops up without planning, She's talking about electronic bulletin boards, voice mail, video conferencing, bar code readers, and computer terminals. So we are to be freed from the weight of tons of paper only to be enslaved to the caprices of that unfaithful gadgetry.

And how much space is taken up in landfills by discarded computer terminals that blipped one time too many?

Nudists on TV mark a new low To the Editor:

A new low in programming will be achieved by Channel 8 on Feb. 5 when five people wearing nothing but watches and bracelets will appear on the Sally Jessy Raphael Show. Television viewers will be buttocks and other unglamorous parts of the human anatomy. In previews of the show, we have been told that the nudists are not exhibitionists. At a nudist camp this may be true, but in front of television cameras these people are exhibitionists spared the sight of breasts.

Usually, people are interviewed on television because they have special talents or accomplish ments. The nudists will be on simply because they like to run around in the buff. It's hardly an accomplishment to inspire others to greatness.

How can this foolishness be considered entertainment? How can such a tacky, tasteless program be worth watching? Are the nudist doing it just to advocate proposal. I fail to see where there a "healthy and natural" way of life? Are the producers, director and host of the showing airing this silly spectacle out of the goodness of their hearts to improve the quality of life for all the television viewers burdened by the bother of garments? Showing a program like this is just going one step further than the countless other shows where semi-nudity is considered acceppromote with public money table. It contributes to the moral decay which is prevalent in our society. It is an insult to viewers.

Nudists in a nudist camp may exemplify a healthy way of life. On television, their nakedness exemplifies a lack of dignity, a lack of

Some Jews in Israel take the definition of Jew very seriously, and there is little agreement on the subject. A secret State Department report says the official process of deciding who meets the legal definition of Jew is bogged down in bickering between orthodox and non-orthodox Jews. Orthodox Jews insist that religious law rule Israel civil life. The various orthodox political parties get pressure from the smaller, ultra-orthodox parties. The ultra-orthodox Jews berate orthodox politicians for sacrificing religious principles to stay in power in the government

Defectors stalked

KGB agents who defect to the West have a grim fate awaiting them if they are ever caught by the Soviets. The threatened sentence of a KGB defector is to be shot in the back of the heud in front of his former comrades. Fortunately, it is only a threat. Our sources tell us that the Soviets, in spite of their hit list, have never been able to assassinate one of Directors. It is a request by the their turncoat KGB agents. In fact, for at least the past 20 years, they have been unable to lay a finger on defectors. That hasn't stopped KGB officials from circulating false reports among the ranks benefits (all slanted in favor of the that many past defectors to the West have been

Is cheaper better?

When it comes to satellites, the military is used to the ultra-sophisticated variety — expensive, but reliable. A group inside the Pentagon, however, is secretly trying to wean the military away from heavy satellites over to what they call cheap-sats, or light-sats or frugal-sats. The group pushing the cheaper models is part of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

The military, in particular the Air Force, isn't about to roll over on this argument. Air Force officials are quietly mounting a campaign to defeat the notion of cheap-sats. They fear that the less isticated satellites may not do the job. They worry that if the launch program is delayed, they could be stuck with an inventory of cheap-sats ting earth and no way to launch better satellites. That fear has been fuled by the explosion of the Challenger and three other launch vehicles. It costs $200 million to launch a satellite into space. The Air Force thinks that if that much money is spent on the launch alone, the satellite better be worth the expenses. But DARPA says the bargain models can be launched in greater pers and at less financial risk if one fails.

The much-abused taxpayers of America will be paying $8 million next year to build schools for Jewish refugees who left North Africa and settled in Paris. Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, had that little provision put in the appropriations bill recently signed by the president. No well-known Jewish group pushed it, but one of the senator's campaign contributors was interested in the matter, so we will be paying for it. At first we were thered by one little question: Why should the United States build parochial schools in one of the world's most advanced nations? But then we read that Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of a House subcommittee that was involved in the decision, went along with Inouye in the spirit of compromise. "It was a lousy $18 million," Obey said. That made almost every Christian denomination, and for that matter within the recognized subdivisions of the Jewish faith, too. Broadly speaking, the battle was between those who wanted to "update" their religion to make it more relevant to such modern concerns as sexism, poverty, etc., and those who believed profoundly that religion becomes "relevant' precisely to the extent that it seeks to transform mankind rather than society.

Episcopalians in America: the spirit divided The decade of the 1970s witnessed ruptures in

I had noted the dispute in my columns, and in April 1977 I received a phone call from Pete Hannaford, a California PR man whom I had met when he was a member of Ronald Reagan's staff some years earlier. Hannaford explained that he was now representing a group of Episcopalian priests who were heading for a collision with the ultra-liberal national hierarchy of their church, and wondered if I would be interested in interviewing one of them.

I would, and subsequently I did - a rubicund, white-haired Californian named Father Robert Morse, who impressed me deeply with his quiet determination and vigorous faith. Altogether I wrote three columns on the dispute among Episcopalians during the next 11 months. The third reported that four bishops (Robert Morse among them) would be consecrated in Denver on Jan. 28, 1978, to launch "The Anglican Church in North America." This body conceived itself as simply the continuation of the Episcopalian faith as known heretofore: without revisions in the 1928 Book of Common Prayer.

liberal baggage that was by then weighing down

Morse's, I shortly thereafter decided to join his diocese myself, and I have remained a member of it ever since. (Thank you, Pete Hannaford!) I wish, though, that there were better news about

Rather to my surprise, and certainly to Bishop on what they regard as essentials. The four bishops created yet another new denomination, resolutely second responded by founding one explicity "low."

A third, despairing of finding peace elsewhere, joined the Roman Catholic Church as a layman.

Meanwhile PECUSA - The Protestant Episcopal Church, U.S.A. — continues on the paths that provoked the schism in the first place. Priestesses have been ordained in the great majority of its parishes, and proposals to remove remaining shreds of "sexism" from its liturgy have evoked dry remarks about the need for a Society for the Preservation of the 1979 Prayer Book (that being the revision that earlier preservationists had resisted). In Britain, too, the battle rages hot and heavy. No riestesses have been ordained there yet (though female deacons are permitted), but the liberal pressures for them are severe. The ancient bark of Anglicanism may well split apart on this jagged theological rock. One must not lose perspective. The struggle within American Episcopalianism is small potatoes compared to the battles still raging within the far larger Baptist and Lutheran denomination But all of them are simply separate aspects of a great struggle that will one day be seen as an important part of the history of the late 20th century: the battle over the role of the churches in the spiritual development of mankind.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Guy Snowden doesn't play the numbers, but he's reaping record lottery

Snowden, a horse lover from upstate New York, is the leader of an unlikely parlay that includes Victor Markowicz, a Russian emigre known as the mad scientist, and retiring Robert Stern, a Brooklyn native with a penchant for rescuing struggling computer companies.

They have hit it big, using lottery, computer and business savvy to take the company they founded six years ago from a tiny upstart to the world's largest supplier of computerized lottery

The company is GTECH Corp., the Providence-based operation whose lottery machines adorn store countertops on five continents, supplying more than 60 percent of lottery "I'm prohibited by law in many jurisdictions tickets but usually just for souvenirs and I never look at whether I've won or not. I've probably won a million dollars." GTECH is the luckiest of lottery players - it doesn't have to pick the right numbers to make money. The company earned $7.7 million in 1986 on sales of $131 million. It ended last year with some big wins and is expected to make more money this year. A GLOBAL CHART hangs in the company's executive reception area, with lights flashing in the countries and states where GTECH has lottery contracts. More bulbs are on order. Snowden, GTECH's affable chief executive officer and board chairman, as well as its driving force, describes the company in the simplest o

"We issue the little bits of paper that could be worth $40 million," says Snowden, who is moving his company's headquarters from downtown Providence to rural West Greenwich. He says GTECH's success is attributable to its focus on lotteries, outperforming larger rivals governments running these games. Credibility is everything. Winning is everything. In explaining GTECH's growth from a tiny company with 100 employees to a lottery giant with a growing work force of 1,200, Snowden first gives a lesson in lottery history, a subject which brings a twinkle to his eye and lottery tickets the world. signed by George Washington and John Hancock

"Lotteries were very important in this country in colonial times," says Snowden. "Lotteries were very prominent and a very respected form of raising money for public benefit projects. states looking to increase revenues without raising taxes began to follow suit.

Snowden and Markowicz were there to help. They worked separately as private consultants to states considering lotteries and together for a company that sold some lottery equipment. In 1976, they founded their own company in Rhode Island, only to sell it to Datatrol, a Massachusetts computer company with a lottery division. was at Datatrol that Snowden and Markowicz hooked up with Stern, who Snowden refers to as GTECH's "financial genius." Datatrol was the latest stop for Stern on a 30-year trek that has seen the Brooklyn native help salvage a handful of electronics companies.

Snowden and Markowicz bought the gaming division back from Datatrol in 1981 and founded GTECH. Stern went with them. Power, and

"When nobody else believed in it, we were creating a company that was going to become the only company that was totally dedicated to the lottery business

"When the world needed technology, when it needed a company with the focus that could do everything from designing a game to delivering the electronics that were necessary to run it GTECH was there. And that's still the case. We're still winning a very, very high percentage of jobs around the world."

Surgery for Harmon

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actor Mark Harmon will have to be idle for two months while recovering from surgery to correct a shoulder injury that failed to heal properly, a spokeswoman said. Harmon, 36, was in good health following the operation Thursday, said Heldi Schaefer, okeswoman for the actor. She would not specify the hospital. She said Harmon injured the shoulder last year in a fall from a horse while filming a commercial for Coors beer, and it just never healed properly.

Harmon starred for three years as womanizing Dr. Robert Caldwell on NBC's "St. Elsewhere" until 1986 and appeared in the movie "Summer School." He is married to actress Pam Dawber, star of the

Belafonte in concert

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Entertainer Harry Belafonte says he'll join top performers from Africa and other parts of the world for a concert in Harare, Zimbabwe, to draw attention to the plight of children in southern Africa

"In order to have a healthy Africa, you must have healthy Africans," Belafonte, a UNICEF goodwill ambassador, said Thursday at a news conference. A March 1987 report for UNICEF said the nine "front-line" countries near South Africa expend much of their resources fighting and resisting their powerful neighbor and its apartheid policies. UNICEF says the concert is part of a program to use artists, intellectuals and writers to increase awareness of the resulting suffering of children. Other performers slated for the "One Love Africa" concert March 5 are Sade, the Bhundu Boys, Princess, Manou Dibangu, King Sunny Ade,

Youssou N'Dour, Miriam Makeba, Hugh Masekela, Ladysmith Black Mambazo, Orchestra Marabenta and Bonga, according to Djibril Diallo of UNICEF, coordinator of the symposium

Ocean Spray charged with pollution

BOSTON (AP) - Ocean Spray officials facing a 78-count federal indictment on pollution charges say the alleged violations amount to releasing cranberry juice into a sewage system and other minor dumping.

A grand jury on Thursday charged the giant fruit juice Cooperative in the first felony charges filed under the Clean Water Act since the law was toughened by Congress last year, said U.S. Attorney Frank McNamara. The indictment, which includes six felony counts, could result in fines up to $2.1 million. The indictment cited 78 counts of alleged violations between February 1983 and last October, charging Ocean Spray with illegally discharging wastewater and other pollutants from its Middleborough plant in southeastern Massachusetts. In a statement, the Plymouth-based Fortune 500 company insisted that it has not threatened public health or the environment and predicted it would be found innocent. Ocean Spray said the charges amounted to "releasing small amounts of cranberries and cranberry skins" into the Nemasket River and releasing "cranberry juice" into the Middleborough sewage

Pope receives Daniel Ortega

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope John Paul II received President Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua today, stressing the need for peac in war-torn Central America and the rights of people to live "unde the principles of a real democracy."

The pope, who heard Ortega sharply criticize U.S. "imperialism" at their last meeting five years ago, greeted the president of the leftist government with the usual diplomatic honors, but in a cool manner.

At the end of their 30-minute private talks and a 10-minute exchange of gifts before photographers, the pope wished "peace for all Nicaraguans" and Ortega replied: "I believe we must make peace." The pope and Ortega spoke in Spanish without

There was no mention in a brief Vatican report on the talks of reports Ortega planned to announce the resignations of three priests who serve in his Cabinet. One of the priests, Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto, accompanied Ortega to Rome, but not to the papal meeting.

The pope has called on any priests serving in the government to give up their jobs, and the three Nicaraguan clergymen have been suspended from their priestly duties. The Vatican communique said

Ortega explained to the pope the prospects for peace according to the Central American peace plan and "asked that the Holy See encourage this process." Vatican spokesman Joaquin

Navarro declined to say whether Ortega specifically asked the pope to put pressure on Washington to stop aiding the Contra rebels who are battling his leftist Sandinista government

Redskins play to keep ball from Elway

By Barry Wilner The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - Stop John kins hope to do it by never stopping themselves. Stopping Elway in Sunday's Super Bowl will not take lots of ase, but lots of offense

Sunday. The fact that Denver's once-heralded 'Orange Crush' defense now resembles an 'Orange Sieve' bears further and clearer testament to Elway's offensive wizardry.

As fine a defense as Washington may have, Elway is the most elusive and creative quarterback on this planet and will turn a negative circumstance into a positive outcome. Chase him out of the pocket. Redskins, if you dare, and Elway will gain 100 rushing yards.

The past three Super Bowl MVP's (Phil Simms-1987, Jim McMahon-1986, Joe Montana-1985) have all been quarterbacks and Elway will continue that trend. Washington has a sputtering offense and, if it doesn't get on track early, Elway and Co. may jump out to a big lead.

ALTHOUGH THE 'THREE AMIGOS' have caught much of the pre-Super Bowl spotlight, it is Elway - 'The Head Honcho' and 'El Jefe' - who will be the decisive factor.

records for the Cheney Tech wrestling

Quality, not quantity, word for Tech matmen

Quality, not quantity, is the primary word when talking about the Cheney Tech wrestling team this campaign.

The Techmen, under 13-year Coach Al Skinner, began the season under the gun with not enough wrestlers to fill all the weight classifications. And it has caught up with them as far as wins and losses go. The Beavers were 3-19 after Wednesday's loss to Rocky Hill High.

deceptive. Nine of the losses have occurred with the Techmen having won more than they lost on the mat. Cheney at the beginning of the year was forfeiting four of the 13 weight classes, handing opponents 24 points (each forfeit is worth six points) before the first combatants took to the "Last year I had three kids from Enfield wrestling. This year there are two kids who we have from Enfield but they can't get a ride (and don't wrestle)." Skinner said of any area that is known for producing fine wrestlers. "I don't blame the parents. Wrestling just hasn't caught on this year.

"Why? I don't know. I know I'm not alone. Valley Regional had less than us. All small schools, except for Terryville which is loaded, is having trouble. Wrestling is a tremendous commitment and kids are not really willing to put in the time." Skinner added. Skinner also cited the state law allowing 15 year olds to work as a detriment to not only his sport, but all

What Cheney lacks in quantity, it more than makes up for in quality with the likes of Jim Classon, Ron Pirtel and Paul Hunter dotting its roster. All three are seniors and each is having a superior campaign. Classon, defending state unbeaten at 22-0 wrestling in the 130-pound class. Classon has 18 pins among his 22 victories.

Pirtel, who fills the bill in the 140-pound division, sports a 20-2 mark with 13 pins and Hunter, who missed a quadrangular meet las Saturday with a bout of the flu, was 18-1 with 14 pins wrestling in the 160-pound class. All three, according to Skinner, have good shots at Class M state championships when those championship come around the end of February. "I don't see anyone who has beat them in the M class." Skinner said, looking back at the Techmen's schedule.

Hunter "is very intense, very strong and knows where to use his strength," Skinner said, Classon is the classic tactician. "He's always in the right position," Skinner said of Classon, one of two state champions he's produced. Todd Watkins in 1982 won a state Class M crown, also at 132 pounds. "He (Classon) never panics and has a move from everything. He's better than he was a year ago."

Pirtel has come a long way this campaign. "He's improved tremendously. He's strong and uses all the wrestling moves. He'll go through the book. He practices the moves and then uses them in a match. He has the most takedowns of any wrestler I've ever had at Cheney Tech.'

One other Beaver has a winning mark and two others are close to the .500 level. Junior Chris Rouelle has an 11-5 mark wrestling in the 171-pound class while sophomore Steve Classon Jim's younger brother, is 9-11-1 wrestling in the 103-pound class and junior Todd Rose is 8-14 at the 189-pound class. Rose, who is a first-year wrestler, lost his first seven matches before

"We have good individuals but we haven't been winning (as a team) because we don't have enough," Skinner said.

How sweet it is!

Think chocolate is heavenly? Then visit a patch of paradise on Sunday, when the Sheraton Hotel at Bradley International Airport will host the Chocolate Expo. Gourmet chocolate, truffles, chocolate cakes and pastries, ice cream, chocolate cheesecake and more will be available for sampling or purchasing for Valentine's Day presents.

There will also be a Valentine fashion show and the feature film, "Willie Wonka and the Chocolate Factory."

At 3 p.m., food critics including Nancy Pappas of The Manchester Herald will judge the Ultimate Dessert Taste-Off, a competition for bakeries and restaurants throughout the area. Proceeds from the expo benefit the United Cerebral Palsy Association, Tickets are $3.75 for adults and $2 for children 12 and under. Parking is free. The show is open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Where's the beef?

If you're looking for beef, you'll find it at the Saturday evening roast beef dinner, at the First Congregational Church, 837 Main St., East Hartford. Two seatings will be held, at 5 and 6:30 p.m. Adults will be charged $6, and children $3. Those under 6 may eat free. Call 528-4545 or 528-5293 for reservations.

Wonderful Girl Scouting

You can learn to slim down at a jazzercise demonstration, or add a few pounds munching Girl Scout cookies, at Bentley School from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday. Twenty five Girl Scout and Brownie troops from Manchester have put together a day of entertainment, health tips, bike safety lessons and more. There will be a puppet show at 11 a.m., noon and 1 p.m. Admission is free, but lunch, beverages and Girl Scout cookies will be sold.

Don't slumber Saturday

The rest of your family sleeps in on Saturday morning, and you've got nothing to do. So, join the members of Little Theatre of Manchester, who are busy each Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon, building sets, sewing costumes and more. Volunteers are welcome, and training will be offered in make-up, props, construction, costuming and more. The group, which is preparing for a production of "Crimes of the Heart." will meet at 71 Hilliard St. each Saturday through Feb. 20. For more information, call 646-7584.

Paleolithic paintings

More than 1,200 students across the state submitted pieces to the Dinosaur Art Contest in the fall. This weekend, the exhibit of the winning works of art will open at the Dinosaur State Park, on West Street in Rocky Hill. Entries were judged both on creativity and skillful use of materials. Admission to the park is $1 for adults, 50 cents for students 6 to 17, and free for children 5 and under. The museum is open 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

A square deal

The Manchester Square Dance Club will hold a dance on Saturday at the Bentley School. A round dance workshop will be offered at 7:30 p.m., followed by square dancing from 8 to 11 p.m. Cliff Brodeur will call the squares, and Joan and Armand Daviau will cue the rounds. Refreshments will be served. The donation is $6 per couple.

Theater succeeds despite location

By Linda Stowell The Associated Press

BRIDGEFORT - In a former YMCA building in the middle of the city's dilapidated downtown sits the Cabaret, a tiny 10-year-old theater that lures nearly 80,000 people

despite its location in a city that's struggling to rise from the ranks of the nation's poorest and only 60 miles from New York's theater Executive producer and acting artistic director Richard Hallinan calls the Cabaret

"a very persuasive argument for those who "Business," he says. "is quite Hallinan says this is so even though the image that Bridgeport is crime ridden is changing "painfully slowly." "That's why it is so important that we are here," he says. "Ninety percent of the (negative) image is unjustified, but people throw some mud and it sticks."

The non-profit theater, which is open year-round, has shows every Friday and aturday and some on Thursday and Sunday. t also has shows for children. The theater, with 50 administrative and theater personnel, opened in 1978 as an outgrowth of a student entertaining group from a local university. Hallinan said The audience sits at round tables in the heater and brings their own beverages and "People sort of brown-bag it in," Hallinan says. "They come in here with coolers, brown pags and bags with everything from cheese and crackers to a full meal.

He says Cabaret's location near New York City doesn't hurt. "Our tiny theater with 294 seats and four shows a week could hardly be a threat to any

New York theater," Hallinan says. Plus, he says, Cabaret's prices don't match those of the theaters in New York. Its most expensive tickets are $13.50. Last week, the theater reached one of its 'milestones," Hallinan says, when it held the

"quite remarkable" for the tiny company. Hallinan says it is the first time for Cabaret to handle the U.S. premier of a musical that hasn't been written by Cabaret's artists. "We're constantly trying to do different shows," Hallinan says, "That helps us stretch and the audience stretch." Looking to the future, he says, "I would hope it will continue to grow in the way it has But I want it to keep its flavor, too.'

Four months later, she had seafood creole for 200 and bathtubs of hollandaise sauce stored

Under lights he'd erected in the basement, my dad was growing huge begonia plants, which my parents planned to use as centerpieces on each dinner table.

For my part, I was up in Albany, N.Y., whipping up a wedding outfit, helping hem the fern-printed tablecloths which my father had cut from queensized sheets, and working with my "staff" of friends who were generously helping us out: one was doing our invitations in calligraphy, another was taking all the photographs, a trio of singers had agreed to sing Mozart selections during the ceremony, an extremely pregnant friend was coming early to help set the tables, and so on.

What remained was the plan-ning and writing of the wedding ceremony itself. We hoped to work closely with two ministers - one a longtime friend of my husband-to-be, the other an individual we had asked to participate, to please some members of my family.

My fiance's minister couldn't have been more helpful, working with us in every way possible.

For the better part of a warm. July day, 10 of us labored to set up tables, set out flowers, and do whatever else my mother — the quintessential hostess - had on her list of "things to do"

In the late afternoon, we adjourned to the elegant upstairs bedrooms to change our clothes. An abrupt knock on the door startled me, and I asked a friend to answer.

It was the "carbon copy" pastor, who wanted to have the wedding papers signed, and the That way, he said, he could make a "quick get-away," and get on to his next engagement. Sounds strange? A bit. But the best was yet to come

After my husband's friend gave an invocation, the other pastor looked just over our heads at the rows of assembled friends and relatives, took a deep breath and said. "Let me give you some advice. Never marry a journalist to a law student. They will dictate exactly what you should say, and leave you no choices."

He waved the carbon copies in his hand, to illustrate his point. Members of the audience rustled and coughed, obviously uncomfortable. But the gentleman did not stop there.

And the Rev. Norman Swenson, pastor of the Trinity Covenant Church, heard about a couple who wanted their vows to read, "I'll love you as long as I love you."

Today, however, ministers are seeing the pendulum swing in the other direction. Area pastors said they have seen a return to candles and flowers, classical music and traditional vows.

"It's been several years since I've been asked even to do a wedding in a home or in a garden." Smith said earlier this week. "The assumption that people make when they come in to be married is that they will be married in a church. This is something that they are

Marrying in a church, rather than at home, in a park, or on a mountain top seems to symbolize lifetime commitment, said

"Even among the seemingly untraditional Unitarians, there is a recognition of the importance of the traditional aspects of the marriage ceremony," she said.

However, along with bringing back something old, couples are putting in something new, said the Rev. Newell Curtis, senior pastor of Center Congregational Church.

For example, these days the father of the bride will rarely give her away, said Curtis. That is discouraged, because it makes the woman seem like a piece of property, he said.

"What we're doing now, instead, is called parental affirmations," he said. "I ask both

More women on the move

WILTON (AP) - Women, half of whom are married, now ecount for 10 percent of corporate transfers.

Homequity Inc., which has handled the moves of some 32,000 corporate transferees a year, says more and more women are involved in corporate career moves. This has led to the growing practice of a male giving up his job to follow his wife.

Human resources executives need to be aware of this factor in planning employee relocation, says the firm.

Many outfit options available

Is there a wedding in your future? Whether you're a brideparty, you'll want to know about the many options available in finding the perfect outfit for that

Before you decide what to wear, the experts at Simplicity Pattern Company suggest that you shop around. Peruse the bridal magazines and stores, try things on, get an idea of what you want your dress to look like.

Instead of buying off the rack, many women are opting to sew their own dresses, or they have their dresses made for them by a qualified seamstress. You'll find several new bridal designs this Spring in pattern catalogs from Simplicity and Style.

Some women who sew their own gowns actually create the look they want by making sleeves, skirts or necklines from two to four different patterns. The average cost of making your own Bridal gown is at least one-third the price of what it would cost to buy it ready made.

Kimberley Lynch has unique wares

By Barbara Richmond Manchester Herald

"I think brides today are looking for something unique they want something totally different for their weddings — it's a special day and they want everything to be perfect.'

This is the philosophy of Kimberley Lynch, owner of Kimberlev Bridal Collections, 20 Bissell St., and she helps to make it come

A very special wedding she is working on is her own. It's coming up in May.

While she is buying a new gown. she will be making her own headpiece from antiques she has in her shop.

Headpieces for brides, bridesmaids, maids of honor and flower girls are her specialty and she has customers who come from all over Connecticut and from other states too, to have her design something special for them.

What will she design for her own headpiece when she marries Dr. David May of Massachusetts on May 29?

"It's going to be sparkly, with lots of crystals and pearl cascades," she said.

She said some prospective brides come in months in advance and some come in the last minute because they have changed their wedding dates.

"I handle emergencies when they change their plans," she

"We live in an age where everything is mass-produced. I think brides don't want their weddings to be mass-produced. One way they can avoid this is by purchasing vintage or antique accessories," she commented.

She noted, as an example, "If a bride wants gloves, instead of buying new lace gloves she can purchase antique lace gloves that someone's grandmother may have worn in the 1800s."

Lynch has such items in her

Here are some suggestions to help you select the right photographer:

 Begin early — particularly if you are getting married in the popular months of June, July. August or December, the busiest choice of photographers.

• "Interview" a variety of photographers. Look at samples grapher whose style suits the images you'd like to capture.

· Arrange for a formal bride portrait for the newspaper at the time of your final gown fitting.

· Enlist a friend or relative to identify special friends and relatiyes for the photographer.

antique business called the Metal

She also said that many brides are choosing to carry fans now, and one way to be different is to carry an antique fan and have a

There's definitely a trend toward traditionalism in weddings now. Lynch emphasized, noting that the Victorian look is especially popular. She said many brides opt to wear their mother's or their grandmother's gown but frequently veiling doesn't hold up. It rots or vellows and it's difficult to buy a new headpiece to match the color of the gown and the old laces.

Lynch has the answer to that. She has dozens of boxes of old lace and pearls and beads and can put together an antique headpiece to go with the gown.

"In the modern bridal world there's just one shade of pearls stark white," she added.

Lynch also enjoys making modern headpieces. She said looked at headpieces in other shops and have gone through all of the latest issues of bridal magazines to get a good dea or mental picture of what they would like to wear.

"I believe if a girl is going to pay that kind of money for a headpiece, she should get exactly what she wants." Lynch explained.

She said the cost of a headpiece

One bridal wreath Lynch had partially finished consisted of satin flowers, irridescent ribbon roses, antique crystals, and sprays and loops of pearls. She said the crystals, which are full cut lead, came from Austria, and although they were 40 years old they had never been used. The veiling hadn't been att-

Second rite tips offered

Second marriages are a common occurrence these days and many of the past traditions are changing. Still, it helps to know some of the more acceptable styles of second marriages according to experts in the field.

If it is the bride's first marriage and the groom's second. the ceremony can be traditional. The wedding can be as elegant and formal as the bride desires. Of course, depending upon the couple's religious beliefs, they may wish to consult with their clergy regarding any restrictions for divorced persons.

If it is the bride's second marriage, the ceremony usually is less formal and includes only the family's close relatives and

When both the bride and groom have been previously married. the ceremony is informal, perhaps taking place in a simple chapel, a family member's home. hotel or club. There can be a maid of honor and best man, but no bridesmaids.

How can I get my wedding published?

Here is a list of the most commonly asked questions about the Manchester Herald's bridal coverage.

QUESTION: How do I get my wedding or engagement announcement in the Herald?

ANSWER: That's an easy one. There's a form to fill out which you can get by either sending us a self-addressed stamped envelope or by picking up a wedding or engagement form at the Manchester Herald's office, 16 Brainard Place. The office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

QUESTION: May I submit my own write-up?

ANSWER: Yes, you may, as long as you include all the standard information. Be sure to put a phone number the Herald can call during the day, in case there are any questions.

QUESTION: Do the forms have to be typed?

ANSWER: No. they don't, but if you can't use a typewriter. print as plainly as possible, to avoid errors.

QUESTION: What about pictures?

ANSWER: If you have a wedding photographer, request a black-and-white glossy. As for size, 5 by 7 inches is suggested. In both the engagement and wedding photos, you can have either the woman alone or the couple.

QUESTION: What if I don't have a wedding photographer?

ANSWER: We'll accept your own photos, as long as they are black and white, of good quality and contrast, and suitable for newspaper reproduction. If you're not sure, bring the photo to the Manchester Herald and let someone in the Focus staff look it over.

QUESTION: How long does it take before my write-up is published?

ANSWER: The Herald prints its bridal write-ups on Saturdays. Figure on about 10 days from the time you submit the write-up until it appears. Wedding write-ups should be submitted before the wedding, to appear the Saturday after your wedding.

QUESTION: What kind of details are needed?

ANSWER: Full addresses of both sets of parents, locations of employment, colleges, wedding trips and churches; relationship of members of the bridal party to the bride and bridegroom.
