COLLECTION CLAUSE OUT IN TAX DEAL

Mall plan changes after Naab objects

By Andrew Yurkovsky
and Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

A clause which could have lessened the likelihood that a majority of directors will approve a tax break for the developer of the proposed Mall at Buckland Hills has been removed, officials say.

The clause in the proposed tax abatement agreement between the town and the mall developer, Homart Development Co. of Chicago, would have required the town to collect $3 million for utility improvements from three adjacent developers. Trammel Crow Co. of Dallas, Texas, Robert Weinberg of Manchester and John Finguerra of New York had agreed to pay $3 million for part of the $15 million cost of infrastructure improvements necessary for development of the 380-acre mall site.

Homart is seeking a $9.5 million tax break as its share of the cost and has letters of intent to execute the agreement from the three developers.

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said Friday the clause was removed after Directors Ronald Osella and Geoffrey Naab said they wouldn't support the agreement with that clause in it. Osella has said right from the start that he opposed the abatement but Naab and Director Mary Ann Handley have said they were undecided.

Of the nine-member board, DiRosa, Deputy Mayor Stephen T. Cassano, Directors Kenneth N. Tedford and James F. "Dutch" Fogarty have said they are in favor of the tax-abatement agreement. Director Barbara B. Weinberg is still considering the latest version of the agreement — which would nullify the tax break if Homart sells the site before or while the seven-year tax abatement is in effect.

Director Theunis Werkhoven said Friday he was opposed to the agreement.

A "yes" vote from Naab, Handley or Weinberg could result in approval of the agreement Tuesday, when the directors are scheduled to make a final decision.

DiRosa confirmed that the paragraph requiring the town to collect the $3 million was deleted after Naab raised some objections.

"That paragraph on page 4 is gone; it's been taken out ... because there have been objec-

Soviets bump U.S. warships in waters claimed by Russia

By Norman Black
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two U.S. Navy warships, under orders to assert international navigation rights, were deliberately bumped by two Soviet warships on Friday after moving within 12 miles of Russia's Black Sea coastline, the Pentagon said.

No one was injured and damage to the two ships was described as light.

But the administration immediately lodged a strong protest with the Soviet ambassador here, saying the vessels had done nothing provocative and were operating in accord with international law.

"As Secretary of State (George P.) Shultz said just a week ago, we are prepared to deal with the best and worst of Soviet behavior," said Rudolf Boone, a State Department spokesman.

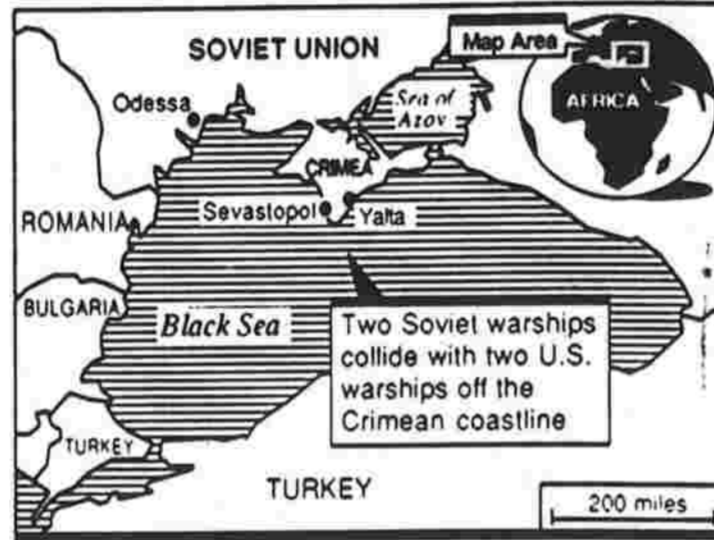

"We intend to continue exercising our rights under international law. The Soviets are obligated to comply with their international commitments."

Navy officials said during a Pentagon briefing there was no question that the cruiser USS Yorktown and destroyer USS Caron had been struck deliberately by a Soviet frigate and a smaller coastal patrol boat, respectively.

The Soviet warships broadcast a warning beforehand, saying they were authorized "to strike your ship with one of ours," said Capt. Gerry Flynn, a top aide to the chief of naval operations.

The two Soviet ships then closed almost simultaneously on the American vessels, "which were, as we would say in the Navy, shouldered out of the way," Flynn added.

The Yorktown and Caron maintained their course and speed despite the bumping, eventually steaming farther from the Soviet coast, Flynn said.

AP graphic

"The latest report I have now is that both ships are operating routinely in the Black Sea as planned," he said.

Flynn and other Pentagon officials said they could not recall a similar incident of deliberate bumping during operations in the Black Sea.

The Soviets strongly protested a similar deployment by the same two ships in March 1985, but did nothing at the time to physically interfere with their passage.

The Soviet Union claimed Friday the U.S. Navy ships violated its border, ignored warnings "and dangerously maneuvered in Soviet territorial waters."

"It was a routine passage and we were doing nothing provocative at all," Flynn countered. "We view (this) with considerable concern."

According to Cmdr. Richard

Schiff, a Navy lawyer who appeared with Flynn, the Yorktown and Caron were operating off the Crimean peninsula in what the Navy calls its "assertion of rights" program — an effort to periodically steam through contested waters to emphasize freedom of navigation on the high seas.

Unlike the United States, which claims a three-mile territorial limit, the Soviet Union claims a 12-mile limit along its coast, Schiff explained. The United States will accept such a claim, but any country claiming 12 miles "must allow for innocent passage by the ships of all nations," he said.

The Soviet Union tries to insist that foreign ships stick to specified sea lanes when making an innocent passage, something it has no right to do, the lawyer said. "So what our ships were doing there was exercising that right of innocent passage," Schiff said.

'Problem' mall clause fixed

tions to it and it's not a major issue," DiRosa said. "Naab indicated to me that it's an item that does not belong in there."

Naab said Friday he would not have voted for the agreement with that clause.

"I consider that a real problem with the agreement in that particular draft. That's a new provision that I know I could not live with," Naab said.

Naab also said he hasn't resolved the significance of a town referendum vote Nov. 3 against funding $13 million worth of the utility improvements through tax-increment bonding.

Cassano said Friday afternoon he hadn't received the new draft yet. He could not be reached for additional comment Friday evening.

Osella said Friday he especially objected to the clause requiring the town to collect the $3 million.

"It increases my 'no' vote," Osella said. "... If this stays the way it is, I'll definitely vote 'no.' They keep changing the agreement. How do I act on it if they keep on changing the agreement?"

Werkhoven said he was going to vote against the agreement.

"That's the way I feel right now," he said.

Like Osella, he said the new provision on the $3 million was a bad one.

"Well, I don't feel that's a requirement of the town. Why should the town be a collector for Homart for $3 million," he said.

Stephen T. Penny, an attorney representing the town in negotiations with Homart, said Thursday he had drafted a clause that would prevent Homart from transferring the abatement if the property is sold during the seven-year period. But the clause would allow the abatement to be transferred if the mall were to be sold to a member of the partnership that's developing the site or a subsidiary of one of the partners, he said.

That clause has been submitted to Homart. Homart officials could not be reached for comment Friday evening.

Weinberg, who said Friday morning she'd have to read the abatement transfer clause before making a decision, also could not be reached for additional comment.

DI Rosa said he doesn't know where the clause stands now.

"I don't know exactly what they're doing on that, but I think they're trying to accommodate the community as best as they can, so I don't think that's a dead issue yet," he said.

PURNELL POND — Linda Yockachonis of 50 Birch St. and her 3-year-old daughter, Carolyn, wade across Purnell Place Friday. Snow

Thursday night and early Friday morning changed to rain by mid-morning, creating sloppy conditions.

Storm results in 'mealy' roads

Heavy rain on the heels of a storm that had dumped 5 to 8 inches of snow gave area clean up crews a brief respite before snow began to fall again late Friday night.

"We semi-stopped at about 7 in the evening, but we're out sanding now," Cathy Patnode, spokesperson for the Manchester Highway Department said Friday night.

Some flurries were forecast for later Friday before tapering off by late evening, the National Weather Service said. But snow that began falling Friday night made roads "mealy" Friday night. Patnode said State police said Friday evening they had received no reports of major accidents due to the weather. Police in Manchester reported that 19 accidents, none of them serious, occurred between midnight Thursday and Friday night, a higher number than usual, police said. Coventry police reported three of four accidents since Friday morning, which they said was more than normal, but about average for the weather conditions.

At Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks, three runways were reopened after closing for two hours in the morning to give crews time to plow runways covered with 8 inches of snow.

Thirty-three flights were cancelled during the shutdown, said Pamela C. Kendrick, administrative assistant to airport director Robert Juliano. She said the closing of Logan International Airport in Boston complicated the problems at Bradley.

The snow changed to rain by mid-morning and temperatures rose, clearing roads of snow and preventing major tie-ups along the state's highways, said Irene F. Catania, alternate storm monitor at the Department of Transportation.

Patnode said Manchester had 31 trucks out Friday morning and afternoon. Northeast Utilities reported that 3,000 customers in the eastern Connecticut communities of Griswold, Voluntown, Preston and North Stonington lost electricity after lightning hit a telephone pole in Preston.

All were to be restored to power by late afternoon, said NU spokesman Jeff Kotkin.

Snow began falling during the early morning and picked up steam around daybreak. It changed to rain about mid-morning, when snow accumulations ranged from about an inch near the shore to 5 inches inland and 8 inches in northern sections of the state, the National Weather Service said. The National Weather Service estimated that about 5 inches fell in the Manchester area Friday.

Parking and snow don't mix in Connecticut cities

WATERBURY (AP) — Winter in Connecticut's cities can be cruel. There's the cold, the snow, and the parking space thief.

When the snow stops, the scramble starts for on-street parking in some cities.

In Waterbury, residents have taken to putting wooden benches and even furniture in on-street spaces after the plows have done their work and after motorists have shoveled out their spots.

Ismael Santiago is among those who use furniture to protect parking areas. Others use ropes, tent poles, benches and other barricades.

"I learned it from my neighbors," said the 35-year-old Santiago, who moved from Puerto Rico to Waterbury three years ago. "I saw the others doing it, and I took it from them."

After he moves his car a few feet, Santiago stops, gets out and puts a wooden chair in his parking space. When he returns home from work, he knows its likely that his space will be open.

Gilbert Irizarry, another Waterbury resident, uses an old work bench to hold his spot when he's gone from home. He believes that after he spends the time to clear a parking space, it belongs to him.

"If you have a spot and clear it, you're entitled to it, at least for a while," the 20-year-old Irizarry said.

Sgt. Paul Ferro of the New Haven police said Friday's that he's never heard of residents in his city using barricades to protect their parking spaces, but arguments between motorists seeking parking are common after a snow storm.

"One guy shovels it out, and other guy pulls in. It's on the street, and it's the first come first serve," Ferro said. "They call and complain, but there's nothing we can do about it."

Ferro said the only solution might be to follow West Haven's example and ban parking during winter months.

Danbury Officer Tom Gingy said the most frequent complaints in his city are about motorists who park in front of driveways and motorists who leave their cars out even when parking bans are in place.

In Hartford, Lt. Steve Harris said he's not aware of any special problems posed by the snow, while New Britain tries to defuse the issue by offering free parking in municipal garages during storms.

New Britain Sgt. James Chute said he's never heard of resident in his community doing anything similar to what occurs in Waterbury.

Storm blamed for 22 deaths

By The Associated Press

A winter storm Friday stretched across the Midwest through New England, dumping more than a foot of snow and unleashing strong wind as schools, offices and roads were closed. At least 22 traffic deaths were blamed on the storm.

As much as 13 inches of snow were measured at Woodstock, N.Y., with up to a foot reported across the Catskills. Brattleboro, Vt., had 9 inches and up to a foot fell across Berkshire County in Massachusetts. Up to a foot of snow fell on parts of Michigan and Indiana.

Wind gusting to 45 mph lashed Shaftsbury, Vt., piling up snow drifts of three to six feet. Several power outages were reported across Bennington County.

Concord, N.H., had 6 inches of new snow in six hours and 13 total inches on the ground. The snow forced several presidential candidates to cancel campaign appearances. New Hampshire had wind gusting to 60 mph.

Up to 2 feet of snow were expected overnight in Maine.

Snow and rain made conditions slushy in New York City on Friday. As much as 8 to 12 inches of snow fell over northwest New Jersey.

Rainshowers were scattered from the coasts of Virginia and Delaware into eastern North Carolina. Sleet and snow were reported at National Airport in Washington, D.C. Snow was reported as far south as central Mississippi and Alabama.

The weather was mild across much of the nation west of the Rockies. Temperatures were in the 40s and 50s across the Pacific Northwest with 20s and 30s in the higher elevations.

Temperatures rose into the 60s and 70s in Southern California and the desert southwest.

The nation's low Friday was 32 degrees below zero at Hibbing, Minn., and Duluth, Minn., the city's record low for the date. Other record lows included El Dorado, Ariz., with 11 degrees, Paducah, Ky., with 2 degrees and St. Cloud, Minn., with 27 degrees below zero.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. EST ranged from 0 degrees at Warroad, Minn., to 82 degrees at Santee near San Diego.

Johnson headlines speakers at GOP Lincoln Day dinner

By Alex Girilli
Manchester Herald

Nancy L. Johnson, U.S. Rep. from Connecticut's Sixth Congressional District, will be the speaker at the Lincoln Day Awards Dinner scheduled by the Republican Town Committee for March 11 at the Army and Navy Club on Main Street.

Former State Sen. Carl Zinsser and former State Rep. Elsie Swenson will be honored at the dinner.

Johnson is serving her third term in the United States House of Representatives where she is a member of the Committee on the Budget, serving with that committee's task forces on economic trade policy, human resources, and health. She is also a member of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, serving on its subcommittees on investment and oversight, economic development, and water resources. She is member of the Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families.

Johnson first ran for the State Senate in 1976 from the heavily Democratic Sixth Senatorial District and became the first Republican in 30 years to win election from that district. She was reelected in 1978 and 1980.

Tickets for the dinner dance will be available at $20 each and phoned reservations will be accepted by Donald Kuehl, Republican town chairman, at 646-4808.

A reception will be held beginning at 6 p.m. with dinner scheduled for 7 p.m. Johnson's talk and the presentation of awards will follow dinner. There will be dancing to the music of The Heritage Group until 1 a.m.

Zinsser served three consecutive terms in the State Senate and ran unsuccessfully for re-election in 1986, when he was defeated by Democrat Michael Meotti of Glastonbury.

He is considering a new run for the position in this year's election.

Before becoming a state senator, he served on the town's Board of Directors from 1971 to 1980, when he resigned to run for the senate.

Earlier, he had served on the Housing Authority and Human Relations Commission.

Swenson served three consecutive terms in the State House of Representatives from Manchester's 13th Assembly District. She was defeated by Democrat John Thompson when she sought a fourth term in 1986.

While in the Legislature, she concentrated on human services legislation and is now active in the Easter Seal Society, and in Child and Family Services.

She is historian for the Organization of Women Legislators.

She was recently appointed to the Regional Forum of the Capitol Region Council of Governments.

Commission says water plan may need more restrictions

The Conservation Commission will recommend stricter provisions be included in the town's proposed aquifer protection plan for development on or near New State Road.

At the suggestion of Chairman Arthur Glaeser, the commission voted to recommend at a public hearing on the protection plan, scheduled for March, that underground tanks and septic tanks be prohibited in the areas over New State Road wells.

The commission will also recommend that dry cleaning be prohibited there because toxic cleaning materials are often used.

The proposed regulation would prohibit "high-risk" businesses that use hazardous materials in Aquifer Protection Zones.

areas located over town water supplies. About 200 businesses that exist in the zones now would be classified as non-conforming uses and would be unable to expand, under the proposed regulation.

The Conservation Commission and other town organizations have been studying the plan since it was first presented by the Planning Department in December last year. While the Conservation Commission generally approves of the plan, other groups, such as the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, have voiced opposition to the plan, saying it is too strict.

Groups have been offering suggestions for revisions to the plan, and will make formal recommendations at a public hearing in March.

College praised for self-study

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges has accepted the fifth-year focused evaluation report for Manchester Community College.

The NEASC Commission on Institutions of Higher Education commended the college for the thoroughness of the self-study and for the "well-organized manner" in which the school is handling the transition to a new administration.

Mentally ill aided

The Inter-Community Mental Health Group of Glastonbury will open a community residence for adults with long-term mental illness in East Hartford this month.

The group has been awarded a $152,000 grant from the Department of Mental Health, which will enable it to provide a long-term residential program for eight people being discharged from a state psychiatric hospital because they no longer need hospitalization.

The group received a favorable mortgage from the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority to buy a duplex in East Hartford. Programs at the house will include 24-hour staffing and individual programs for each of the residents.

The house will be named Richards House in memory of Lois Richards, one of the Mental Health Group founders. The group is seeking donations of small tables, lamps, rugs and utensils.

Those interested in donating may call Richards House director Fran Mendor at the Inter-Community Mental Health Group, at 633-2832.

Safe Rides wants more students

A group which seeks to save students from the dangers of alcohol abuse is trying to get 2,000 of them to sign petitions promising they won't drink and drive.

Students from Manchester High School and East Catholic High School dressed up in their "best" summer clothes Thursday as part of a campaign titled, "Keep Summer Dreams Alive. Don't Drink and Drive."

Manchester Safe Rides, the group sponsoring the program, hopes to get a total of 2,000 signatures on petitions from students that promise they won't drink and drive, according to Kevin O'Donnell, guidance counselor at Manchester High School and adviser to the group.

Safe Rides will be giving out bumperstickers and pins donated by the state Department of Transportation to students who sign up.

Commercials have been running over intercoms at both schools on the event since Jan. 25. Heather Nelson, 17, a Manchester High School senior and president of the group, said the purpose of the campaign is to raise awareness.

"I don't know if it's going to change a lot of people's minds. There aren't going to be conversions. But I think it's going to be a strong influence on people."

Sentence pleases convicted cop

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Former New Haven police Cmdr. Richard Fiorillo got his request for a longer prison sentence he hopes will ultimately get him out of jail sooner.

Fiorillo, once the city's highest-ranking uniformed officer, was sentenced in December to one year in federal prison after pleading guilty to a felony drug charge.

To be eligible for parole, a convict's prison term must be in excess of one year. On Thursday, U.S. District Judge Ellen B. Burns granted a motion by Fiorillo's lawyer, Ira Grudberg, to increase the sentence to one year and one day.

Grudberg said Fiorillo now will be eligible for parole in late April after serving one-third of his sentence.

If parole is denied, Fiorillo likely will serve seven months to nine months of the sentence, receiving credit for the remainder, under complex U.S. Bureau of Prisons rules, Grudberg said.

Dying star hit us with 'neutrinos'

By Daniel G. Honey
The Associated Press

BOSTON — One day last year, every person on Earth was bombarded with 10,000 billion ghostly particles called neutrinos hurled into space by the explosion of a star, an astronomer said Friday.

However, neutrinos are so incredibly small and elusive that they passed through buildings, people and the Earth itself with barely a trace. Besides, said Boston University astronomer Larry Sulak: "We are recycled star dust."

The neutrinos are the remnants of a supernova, an exploding star, that suddenly appeared almost a year ago in the skies of the Southern Hemisphere.

Such explosions happen regularly, but this one was in the Large Magellanic Cloud, a galaxy 1 million trillion miles away, which is close by heavenly standards. It is the brightest, from an earthly perspective, in 383 years.

Scientists who have spent the past year studying the supernova discussed their findings at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

John Bahcall of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J., said that last Feb. 23, every human on Earth was showered with about 10,000 billion neutrinos from the exploding star.

However, people are constantly bombarded with neutrinos from our own sun, as well, and the added dose did no harm.

"Only 1 in 10,000 had as much as a single hydrogen atom changed by the neutrinos," Bahcall said.

The subatomic particles have almost zero mass and no charge.

He said the supernova explosion was the equivalent of about one million billion billion atomic bombs of the kind that destroyed Hiroshima. That's more energy than a hundred stars shining like the Earth's sun would give off in light over the lifetime of the universe.

Scientists at the conference said they were surprised and delighted that the supernova acted almost exactly like their theories said it would.

"It was expected to make neutrinos, and it did, right on schedule," said J. Craig Wheeler of the University of Texas in Austin. "The basic predictions have come to pass with this supernova."

The researchers said that when the star blew up, 99 percent of its exploding energy was released in the form of neutrinos, while most of the rest was light. The neutrinos reached Earth three hours before the light.

Health department plans program on AIDS

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminico
Activities Specialist

The Manchester Health Department will be sponsoring a program entitled "AIDS All You Want to Know and Have Been Afraid to Ask" on Monday, Feb. 29, at 10 a.m. at the senior center.

The program will discuss the myths and realities of this terrible disease that is putting fear in individuals worldwide. The fear, of course, stems from ignorance or lack of education. I strongly urge all individuals to attend this important discussion in hopes of allaying one's anxiety and fears.

Big thanks are in order to the national AARP, Irwin Lloyd, assistant state coordinator, and Harry Reinhorn, instructor, for all their efforts in regards to the "55 Alive Program" held at the Manchester senior center over the past four years. Their efforts have provided instruction and a cost savings to well over 500 individuals. The program recently received a presidential citation.

Congratulations and best wishes to Domenica Lombardi, who will be celebrating her 100th birthday on Valentine's Day with her son, Lawrence Lombardi, who is quite active at the center.

Individuals are reminded that the microwave class will be held this week on Wednesday and Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. The class will be conducted by Esther Shaub of the Cooperative Extension Service. Only individuals registered will be able to attend.

On Thursday, Feb. 25, at 12:30, the senior center will be offering a program entitled "A Walk in the Woods." The program is a slide show presented by the Connecticut Audubon Society. As a special feature, the Senior Center will be offering bluebird houses, free of charge, to individuals who meet the criteria. Special thanks are in order to Gene Enrico, Larry Lombardi, and Mike Reardon for their help in constructing the bird houses.

A Handyman/Handywoman Home Repair Series is planned for consecutive Mondays starting March 7, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. The course will make use of video cassettes followed by questions and discussion. Call the center to register. Topics include: March 7 — interior wallpaper and paint; March 14 — bathroom; March 21 — kitchens; March 28 — finished carpentry.

Men golfers are reminded that there will be an organizational meeting of the golf league on March 16 at the center beginning at 7 p.m. Items on the agenda will be a selection of officers, dues, banquet, etc. The meeting is obligatory because the roster will be developed from those attending.

The senior center is considering developing a Scherenschnitte (paper cutting) class. It's a century-old tradition using scissor or knife to shape designs from paper which later can be mounted for display. If interested, please let us know.

The senior center is in desperate need of volunteers to help call bingo on Monday and Friday mornings. If interested, please contact me at the center.

Just a reminder, the senior center will be closed Monday due to Washington's Birthday. In addition, there will be no meals next week due to school vacation.

Condolences to the family of Margaret Wright; she will be missed.

Best wishes for a speedy recovery to Mary Waickowski and Walter DeLisle, both in Manchester Hospital.

Best wishes to Adolph and Sylvia Yeske, for a speedy recovery.

REMEMBER: Transportation: To and from the senior center. Call for a ride at least a day in advance. Blood pressure: Wednesday, Feb. 17 (L-Z), 9 to 11 a.m.

O'Neill plays cause long lines

NEW HAVEN — Rock music fans are used to standing in long ticket lines for coveted concerts, but this week it's the late playwright Eugene O'Neill who's causing waits of an hour or more.

"It's pretty unusual," Yale Repertory Theatre Press Director Robert Wildman said Friday.

The Yale Rep is presenting two O'Neill plays, "Ah, Wilderness!" and "Long Day's Journey Into Night," both starring Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst, from late March through May 21.

The plays, presented in celebration of the 100th anniversary of O'Neill's birth, may go on to New York City and the Soviet Union.

Drug dealer jailed 10 years

BRIDGEPORT — A man authorities said was second in control of a flamboyant and well organized cocaine trafficking outfit was sentenced Friday to 10 years in prison.

U.S. District Judge T.F. Gilroy Daly sentenced Luis Robles, whose alias was Papo, 24, of Bridgeport to 10 years and a $150,000 fine on his conviction on a charge of conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Daly also sentenced Robles to a suspended four-year term with five years probation for using a telephone to facilitate a cocaine transaction.

The U.S. attorney's office said Robles was the No. 2 man in a drug operation called the Mariano Sanchez organization, also known as the No. 1 Family, which dealt drugs in the Bridgeport area.

L'Amblance had design errors

BRIDGEPORT — Dimensional errors in the staircase openings at L'Amblance Plaza violated state building code and point to a larger carelessness at the work site, according to a structural engineer.

The City of Bridgeport released dozens of documents this week that noted design errors at the ill-fated L'Amblance Plaza and questioned a financing arrangement by former state officials and lax security at the work site.

The partially completed apartment building collapsed April 23, 1987 killing 28 construction workers.

Among the errors revealed by the documents was one made in sizing the stairwells when concrete slabs were poured for the project.

Structural engineer James Rongue said carelessness with dimensions, may have contributed to the structure's lack of integrity prior to its collapse.

DiLieto sets spending record

NEW HAVEN — Mayor Biagio DiLieto's re-election campaign raised more than $311,000 last year, setting a state record for a mayoral race, but still ended up in the red.

The Committee to Re-elect Mayor DiLieto raised $311,340, but it finished 1987 with $4,093 in cash and a $10,000 loan outstanding from the Bank of New Haven, resulting in a deficit of almost $6,000.

The figures were released in a final report by campaign treasurer Michael V. Lynch.

Last week Lynch sent letters to DiLieto supporters who have not yet reached their $1,000 contribution limit, asking them to pitch in again.

State to lease office building

HARTFORD — The state has agreed to lease a Hartford office building for state agencies for a record $3.7 million a year in rent.

The State Properties Review Board approved the lease Thursday for the seven-story former Aetna Insurance Co. building at 55 Elm St., a four-story annex and parking facilities.

The board in December had rejected the lease, based largely on the fact that the state could have purchased the property for $28.5 million in 1986.

The building's owners include former state Sen. Michael J. Skelley, D-Tolland, now of Glastonbury.

The space will be used by the state attorney general, comptroller and treasurer's offices.

Family insists woman threatened on day before she was murdered

MERIDEN (AP) — Police reports say a woman who was slain by her boyfriend didn't tell them that he had confronted her with a gun a day before the murder, but the victim's mother and brother are disputing those reports.

Ella Dargan and Scott Dargan said Roslyn Dargan, 23, told officers that Norman Williams brandished a gun when he confronted her at the Independence Manor nursing home on Feb. 3.

Scott Dargan, a former member of the Police Explorers, a program in which youths work with police officers, said his sister told police that Williams had asked her to get back together with him. Roslyn Dargan and Williams, who had two children together, had separated shortly after Christmas.

Scott Dargan and his mother said they were present three hours after the incident when a scared and shaken Roslyn Dargan spoke to officers John Wesnfski and Timothy Murphy at her mother's home.

But a police report filed about Dargan's complaint does not mention a gun or threats.

"Roslyn stated that no physical violence had occurred during the incident," the report says.

The day after the confrontation at Independence Manor, Williams, 24, reappeared at the nursing home, where Dargan worked as a nutritional aide, and shot her twice before shooting himself in the head. Williams later died from the wound.

Police Chief Robert Kosienksi said Thursday he was satisfied with an internal investigation that concluded that officers followed proper procedure in handling Roslyn Dargan's complaint.

"I'm going on the value of that report and I am satisfied with the internal investigation. If the officers had enough probable cause, they would have made an arrest," Kosienksi said.

Under the Domestic Violence Act, which took effect Oct. 1, 1986, police are required to make an arrest if they have probable cause to believe that an act of domestic violence has occurred. The law says that police must make an arrest even if the victim doesn't want to press charges.

Scott Dargan said Wesnfski asked his sister on Feb. 3 if she wanted Williams arrested. Wesnfski told her that pressing charges probably would only make Williams angrier, according to the victim's brother.

Insurance industry ready for unisex battle

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut's insurance industry is preparing to do battle over a proposal to ban sex discrimination in insurance rates, but it may not get much of a fight.

Supporters of so-called unisex insurance, which has been heavily lobbied and hotly debated in the past, appear to have been caught off guard by a bill filed in the General Assembly this session.

Officials from the Connecticut chapter of the National Organization for Women, the Permanent Commission on the Status of Women and the Connecticut Women's Educational and Legal Fund were all unaware that the Judiciary Committee will hold a public hearing on the bill next Friday.

That's just fine with John Blair, president of the Insurance Association of Connecticut, which represents the state's insurance companies.

"It would be in the best interest of the women of the state if it died," Blair said this week. "This isn't an economic issue, and most women would lose if this were to pass."

The insurance industry claims that unisex insurance would actually hurt women by increasing rates for the types of insurance they are most likely to buy individually, as opposed to those they obtain through group policies.

An analysis prepared by a coalition of insurance groups several years ago indicated that the typical woman pays $5,245 less than a man for car insurance during her life.

For individual life insurance, women pay an average of $3,210 less, the study indicated. The study claimed that unisex insurance would cost women nationally $700 million a year in car insurance and $360 million a year for individual life insurance.

The argument is that women tend to be better drivers and live longer than men.

NOW argued, however, that the typical woman pays an average of $15,732 more for all types of insurance than a man over her lifetime.

Blair acknowledged that women pay more for individual health and disability policies, but he said 85 percent of coverage in those areas is taken out under group policies, which are unisex already.

Montana is the only state that now requires unisex insurance under a 1985 law. In Massachusetts, regulations requiring unisex insurance take effect in September.

The Massachusetts insurance industry last month filed suit challenging the regulations, contending they violate the equal protection rights of policyholders and are "arbitrary and capricious."

"Taking an applicant's gender into consideration when pricing insurance policies is an important and valid criterion," said William F. Carroll, president of the Life Insurance Association of Massachusetts.

"As a group, women are better risks than men. They live on average seven years longer than men and therefore enable insurers to offer them lower rates on policies."

Advocates of unisex insurance in Connecticut said they couldn't comment on this year's bill, but challenged insurance industry claims that women would suffer if unisex insurance were adopted.

"It's a myth," said Jacqueline Zachary, NOW's Connecticut coordinator.

Historians trying to save tollbooths

GREENWICH (AP) — Commuters who curse the bottlenecks caused by tollbooths on the Merritt Parkway may have a hard time swallowing pleas by historic preservationists to save the structures.

Tolls on the parkway will be abolished on July 1, but a campaign has started to save them as a reminder of the 1930s, when people were motoring instead of commuting.

"They are just wonderful little slices of an era when Sunday motoring was an important family activity," said David Carris, education director of the New Haven Preservation Trust.

The some 20,000 motorists who deposit 35 cents each at the nine wooden booths daily may think of them as more nuisance than treasure, but Carris said, "Their Adirondack rustic style is part of a whole tradition that goes back to Central Park."

Carris said his campaign "to make sure these buildings do not end up in the nearest landfill" is gathering support.

The Shoreline Trolley Museum in East Haven has expressed interest in adding some booths to its collection of 103 trolley cars. The Historical Society of Greenwich and a few legislators are also behind Carris.

But not everyone cares what happens to the booths.

Christopher Gallo, president of Connecticut Commuters Inc., a non-profit, 3-year-old organization with a goal of making commuting safer and more efficient, said the tollbooths are a safety hazard.

"If somebody wants to preserve them, I have no problem with that," he said. "Just get them off the darn highway."

The State Department of Transportation expects to seek bids in April for removing the booths in Greenwich a mile east of the New York State line; at the Housatonic River in Milford, where the Wilbur Cross Parkway merges with the Merritt; and on the Wilbur Cross at Wallingford.

Arthur F. Keating, the manager of tolls and concessions for the department, said the fate of the booths might be up to the demolition contractor.

"To my knowledge, if the wrecker won't get them, the termites will," Keating said. "They're very old and I'm not sure what value they would have."

The General Assembly authorized the removal of the tolls in 1986 after tolls had already been ended on Interstate 95, a somewhat parallel but more congested highway along the shore.

Commuters have long claimed the toll plazas were a nuisance and caused bottlenecks and accidents.

They also argued that the tolls were no longer needed because the $21 million cost of the Merritt, which was built between 1934 and 1940, had been paid.

U.S./World In Brief

Many foods can cause cancer

BOSTON — Many foods contain very high levels of natural cancer-causing agents, suggesting that intense efforts to control industrial carcinogens may be misplaced, a researcher said Friday.

Apples, for example, contain high levels of formaldehyde, which is considered to be a potent carcinogen, said Bruce Ames, chairman of the biochemistry department at the University of California, Berkeley.

Broccoli contains a substantial amount of a substance that is chemically similar to dioxin. Peanut butter is unavoidably contaminated with a fungus that is highly carcinogenic.

Candidates don't have a chance

ASUNCION, Paraguay — They have no campaign posters, no television ads, little money and a virtually no chance of beating Gen. Alfredo Stroessner in Sunday's presidential elections, but two opposition candidates refuse to step aside.

Luis Maria Vega of the Radical Liberal Party and Carlos Ferreira Ibarra of the Liberal Party are bucking calls to boycott the election and challenging Stroessner in his quest for an eighth straight term.

With the powerful infrastructure of the governing Colorado Party at his disposal and the full support of the military, the 75-year-old president who took power in a military coup is almost certain to be re-elected.

Brazilians have no worries

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — What about the huge foreign debt and corruption scandals? Will the new constitution ever get written? Brazilians will worry later — after Carnival, in the suitable bleakness of Lent.

The world's biggest party officially kicks off Saturday and runs until Ash Wednesday, Feb. 17. Carnival seems to have been made for Brazilians, and they began working up to it well in advance. So many people had their minds on Carnival this week that it was difficult to transact business with either private companies or the government.

Three convicted in terror attack

ROME — A court on Friday convicted fugitive guerrilla leader Abu Nidal and two of his Palestinian followers in the 1985 grenade and rifle attack that killed 16 people in a crowd of holiday travelers at Rome's airport.

Abu Nidal and another fugitive, Raghib el-Hamieda, were sentenced to life in prison. The only defendant in custody, Mahmoud Ibrahim Khaled, was given a 30-year term.

More than 80 people were injured in the Dec. 27, 1985 assault on the check-in counters of TWA and the Israeli carrier El Al at Leonardo da Vinci airport. Four Americans were killed, including an 11-year-old girl on a trip with her family to New York.

El-Hamieda, described as a top lieutenant in Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council, was accused along with Abu Nidal of organizing the attack. Neither he nor Abu Nidal took part in it.

Posner helps homeless, avoids jail

MIAMI — Industrialist Victor Posner, who had faced up to 40 years in prison in an income tax evasion case, was instead ordered Friday to pay more than $4 million in back taxes and fines and to give $3 million to help Florida's homeless.

The 69-year-old Miami Beach businessman, whose holdings include controlling interests in Royal Crown Cola and Arby's, also was sentenced to 5,000 hours in community service over five years.

U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman cautioned Posner in court: "Not one dollar of the funds of this project are tax-deductible!"

"I've been involved in charity works all my life, and I've given millions and millions to charity," Posner told reporters after the sentencing.

Posner pleaded no contest Sept. 29 to evading more than $1.2 million in federal taxes by inflating the value of land he donated to a Bible college as a tax exemption.

Shultz sets Mideast peace trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz will go to the Middle East in two weeks to try to promote two-stage negotiations between Israel and Jordan on Palestinian self-rule.

A brief State Department announcement Friday said Shultz would make the trip at the end of the month "for the purpose of advancing the Middle East peace process."

Other U.S. officials said he would set out for the Middle East about 24 hours after returning from Feb. 21-23 talks in Moscow and visit Egypt, Jordan, Israel and possibly Saudi Arabia.

Shultz plans to remain in the area until he joins President Reagan for a summit meeting with the leaders of the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries in Brussels beginning March 2.

The Soviets have been notified in advance that Shultz intends to sound out Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze about an international peace conference that would be a backdrop for Arab-Israeli negotiations.

Their Moscow talks will center mostly on prospects for a treaty to sharply reduce U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear missiles and for a withdrawal of the Red Army from Afghanistan after an occupation of more than eight years.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Shultz have registered their reluctance to having the Soviets play a prominent role in a Middle East settlement. But Jordan's King Hussein wants the participation of all the big powers, including Moscow.

According to U.S. and other sources who declined to be identified, Shultz will advance a two-step plan that would open negotiations in April between Israel and a mixed Jordanian-

Palestinian delegation and then resume in December to work on an overall Middle East settlement.

All options, including statehood for the Palestinians, would be open at that point.

Shultz reaffirmed Monday night in a meeting with American foreign policy experts that the U.S. approach to a final settlement is based on Israel trading territory for peace.

That could cause severe political problems for Shamir because many of his supporters are against relinquishing land the Arabs lost to Israel in the 1967 Six-Day War.

At the same time, the United States has not endorsed Palestinian statehood. President Reagan's formula, outlined in a 1982 speech and still U.S. policy, proposed linking the West Bank and Gaza to Jordan.

Reagan said flatly that the United States "will not support the establishment of an independent Palestinian state" in the territories and would also "not support annexation or permanent control by Israel."

Haig, first casualty of 1988, blasts Bush

By The Associated Press

Alexander M. Haig Jr. became the first casualty of the 1988 presidential campaign on Friday, departing with a final blast at Vice President George Bush and a bouquet for GOP hopeful Sen. Bob Dole. The survivors battled a New England blizzard that made campaigning virtually impossible.

Among the Democrats, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon attacked New Hampshire front-runner Michael Dukakis, and said Rep. Richard Gephardt's votes in Congress "helped cause the budget deficit and the trade deficit he's now running against."

Rep. Jack Kemp, battling with Robertson to achieve conservative supremacy in the race, demanded that his rival withdraw television commercials and printed fliers that contained "deliberate distortions."

"I can't insist that all candidates abide by Ronald Reagan's 11th commandment" not to speak ill of another Republican, Kemp said in an address to the Conservative Political Action Committee in Washington.

"But all of us should abide by the Ninth Commandment: Thou shalt not bear false witness," he said to prolonged cheers.

Forced by the weather to cancel many appearances, the candidates scrambled to get their campaign message out. Robertson holed up in a hotel in Merrimack and put out the word that he was available for interviews with any reporter who could make it through the snow.

Gephardt had another idea. He attended a dog sled race in Laconia. Haig was the first contender to exit the race, but New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary is likely to force others to the sidelines soon.

The former secretary of state did poorly in Iowa's caucuses last week and was at the bottom of the pack in surveys in New Hampshire. He opened his session with reporters by saying, "Al Haig will not be the 1988 Republican nominee."

With Dole at his side, he embraced the Kansas senator's candidacy, saying, "Bob Dole is head and shoulders above George Bush as a potential president."

Haig has fired barbs at Bush throughout the campaign, and he didn't stop as he was leaving. Asked to describe the vice president's involvement in the councils of the Reagan administration, the former secretary of state said, "I think he's been there, period."

Dole thanked Haig for his endorsement and said the former general had expressed no interest in a post in government.

Bush made a morning appearance in Nashua, where he renewed his attack on Dole in a bid to reverse the trend in the pre-primary polls.

Polls: Bush, Dole are neck and neck

NEW YORK (AP) — Network polls released Friday showed Vice President George Bush and Sen. Bob Dole neck and neck for New Hampshire's Republican primary, with one poll putting Dole ahead and the other giving Bush the edge.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll taken Thursday night showed Bush with 32 percent to Dole's 26 percent. That was an increase over the vice president's 33 percent to 29 percent edge in polling Tuesday, the network said.

But CBS News reported that its latest poll, taken Wednesday and Thursday, gave the Kansas senator 32 percent to Bush's 29 percent. The network said polling Tuesday and Wednesday had Bush on top, 35 percent to 27 percent.

In both polls, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis maintained a strong lead in the Democratic race. ABC reported he was the choice of 36 percent while Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri had 19 percent and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois 17 percent.

CBS had Dukakis at 39 percent, with Gephardt at 16 percent and Simon 14 percent. All other Democratic candidates received less than 10 percent.

Among the other Republican candidates, ABC put Rep. Jack Kemp and Pat Robertson at 12 percent each and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont at 10 percent. CBS had Kemp at 12 percent, Robertson at 10 percent and Dupont at 7 percent.

Foggybottom joins race

It's official! Mrs. Foggybottom, one of Washington's most well-known monologists, finally has announced her candidacy for president of the United States.

Foggybottom, who will run as a member of the cocktail party, made her announcement at the National Press Club, promising everything from a daily national happy hour and Godiva chocolates in the Oval Office instead of jelly beans, to cheese balls for the poor, hotel rooms for the homeless and free counseling for the drinking-impaired.

"My fellow Americans, ask not what your cocktail party can do for you, but what you can do for your cocktail party," Foggybottom said, noting if she were elected, she'd like to have Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., as her speechwriter.

Foggybottom, named after one of Washington's most well-known areas which houses the State Department and the famed Watergate complex, said she advocates "designated drivers who cannot drink, designated drinkers who cannot drive, and a designated president who will not drive us to drink in the first place."

She pledges "a balanced cocktail party budget, a no-nonsense foreign cocktail policy and a balanced cocktail trade philosophy advocating more American-made beverages, finger foods and party supplies by quadrupling the import tax."

If elected, Mrs. Foggybottom would like Oliver North to be her defense secretary, Ross Perot to be secretary of state and Jessica Lange (star of the movie "Country") to be secretary of agriculture. David Letterman would be her secretary of entertainment and Fawn Hall, an "experienced paper shredder," would be head of the Environmental Protection Agency.

What America needs is a four-year happy hour, she contends.

Nightmare of a day

Arizona Rep. Jim Kolbe's last trip back to his congressional district turned out to be the kind of day that happens only in nightmares.

The day began with Kolbe on his way to visit a factory with key staffers. A problem arose, though, when Kolbe locked his keys in a rented van. He and staff jumped in separate cars and caravanned down the highway.

On the return trip, Kolbe saw flashing red lights in his rear-view mirror. Leading the caravan, Kolbe was pulled over by a highway patrolman. In the car with the officer was a television reporter, doing a story on increased highway surveillance by the local cops.

No chance for a warning ticket... Kolbe is ticketed for doing 62 mph in a 45-mph zone.

That evening, the local TV station runs the story. The next morning, banner headlines in one of the state's largest newspapers scream about the ticket.

Kolbe, incidentally, is a member of the House Appropriations Committee, which recently approved a special federal grant to increase highway surveillance.

Kolbe pleaded guilty and paid his $65 fine.

Let Nicaragua be Nicaragua

By Chuck Stone

Woody Woodpecker, the stench of unwashed bodies, Sweet n' Low and polyester aren't the things of which revolutions are made, but they could set off a counterrevolution in Nicaragua.

Nicaraguans have not reached the first stage of a genuine people's revolution. They're still comfortable with the notion that all tyrannies look alike, despite the Jeanne Kirkpatrick idiocy that right-wing dictatorships are nicer than left-wing despots.

But Nicaraguans won't endure too long any government that allows electrical shortages so critical it is forced to black out all daytime television and cut off all water two days a week. Missing a Woody Woodpecker cartoon or being unable to bathe doesn't necessarily fuel revolutions. Discontent is only fanned into disobedience when denial becomes oppressive.

On a higher level, Nicaragua can only stand by helplessly as world prices of its main commodities, sugar and cotton, continue to plummet.

When changing tastes substitute Sweet n' Low for sugar and also replace cotton, a hemorrhaging economy could drive people to revolt. Left in the wake of such a revolutionary tidal wave will be the Contras whose well-financed incompetence prolongs the Central American version of the Vietnam War.

The only reason the Contras survive is that the Reagan administration seems hellbent on wallowing in historical amnesia. Fortunately, the Democrats' impassioned sanity has been able to straitjacket Ronald Reagan's Rambo-like insanity that seems to percolate when other people's blood is spilled.

When the Democrats recently rejected President Reagan's Contra aid package of $36.5 million, they won a stunning political victory.

But the historic repudiation of a Teflon-coated president also resurrected old ideological fissures. For the Democrat-Republican conservative alliance, the Contra vote was a political blood transfusion.

Of the 47 Democrats who sided with 164 Republicans to support the Reagan Contra aid proposal, 41 were from Southern states.

Conversely, the 12 Republicans who voted with the 207 Democrats were all from Northern states.

The book on the Civil War hasn't been closed yet. Still, the House vote doesn't tell us how Americans really feel about further Contra aid, although I doubt if the American goes to bed at night, worrying about 2 million people in a Central American country the size of New York state. Somehow, abortion, AIDS, the ailing farm economy, the neurotic stock market and the gargantuan budget deficit are better catalysts for political battle.

Yet, Republicans, Southern diehards and conservative commentators have been conditioned to ask, "how high?" whenever a Republican president yells, "jump!"

Democrats and liberals react just as reflexively. They don't budge.

Party politics doesn't always make for good foreign policy. But it sometimes makes good sense. Rejecting the Reagan Contra aid package won't stop the war because, according to one military expert, the Contras have a stockpile of "small arms and anti-aircraft missiles" that can last "for an interminable period."

But the anti-Contra vote proclaims with a firm loudness that this country is still committed to giving the Arias peace plan a chance. Unless the American people have a change of political heart, the anti-Contra vote will benefit the Democrats.

The other will card in this political slugfest in President Daniel Ortega. He's got a history of reverting to Marxist type by sandbagging peace efforts.

Whether he lives up to his word is irrelevant. Nicaragua is neither an American battleground nor a banana plantation. The era of surrogate wars is over. It's time to pull completely out of that country and let the contending Nicaraguan parties self-destruct. We've got enough to worry about at home.

Dole could be the winner of the Bush-Rather scrap

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush is still crowing over his television tussle with CBS anchorman Ran Rather. Bush and his supporters think it proved he is more tough guy than wimp.

But if they believe the display of bluster will put the curiosity over Bush's role in the Iran-Contra affair to rest, they are wrong. Democratic strategists believe that the long-term winner of the scrap will be Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan. If Dole stumbles, ultimately the Democratic candidate for president will be thanking Dan Rather.

However the nation may feel about the spectacle of two grown men spitting at each other on national TV, Rather boxed Bush into an "I don't remember" response. The nation still doesn't know if the vice president knew about crucial aspects of the Iranian arms-for-hostages deal.

The Democrats are counting on Bush's Republican opponents to show that Bush was exposed so vividly to the Iranian can of worms that for him not to have remembered was impossible.

If Bush beats back the Iran-Contra questions long enough to get the Republican nomination, one Democratic insider told us, "then about Labor Day the memos will start surfacing." In other words, the Democrats may have the goods on Bush and Iran. They will hold their evidence until September and then leak it.

"We should give Rather an award," the Democrat told our associate Les Whitten.

There is already Democratic talk of trying to demolish Bush's credibility in the campaign home stretch with replays of segments of the Rather interview in which Bush seems to be contradicting sworn evidence already in the public domain.

And what about the credibility of the other guy on the card? Some in the media have turned on Rather, and veteran reporters who have worked opposite him on stories wonder why. Rather was equally tough on Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and Jimmy Carter. In several cases, the White House complained to his bosses about him. It was to CBS's credit that the choice to succeed Walter Cronkite narrowed to Rather and another determined reporter, Roger Mudd.

Jack Anderson

Our staff has worked opposite both men. In the days of the Bobby Baker scandal, Roger Mudd was one of the few broadcast reporters we encountered digging in the files of the federal agencies for hard new facts.

Rather was equally zealous, yet was always willing to give younger reporters a hand. We remember in a political campaign Rather taking time out to help an insecure local neophyte who had joined the national press corps for a day. Rather was nearing deadline, but we watched him generously make sure the local reporter's broadcast was factual and interesting.

Yes, Rather went too far with Bush, and interjected his own opinions when the vice president got argumentative. When Rather curtly pulled the cord on Bush to end the interview, network officials blamed the abrupt gesture on the time demands of broadcast news. But there was no mistaking that Rather enjoyed having the last word.

What viewers don't know is that the verbal push and pull goes on behind the cameras all the time. Politicians dodge questions, reporters ask again, tempers flare. This one was different because it was played out live on the air, and the normally decorous atmosphere of broadcast news was violated. Viewers should know they can't have it both ways. Either they get happy news where no one is ruffled, or they get real people exchanging questions and answers about hard issues and occasionally making mistakes.

As one veteran reporter told us: "Why expect Dan to be anything but Dan? We never expect Nixon or Reagan to be anything but Nixon or Reagan. The news people jumping Dan now weren't fit to hold his microphone when he was street reporter, and aren't now either."

Drug growers grow bolder

Mexican drug growers are thriving and our attempts to eradicate their crops look weak by comparison. A General Accounting Office investigation shows that the United States has spent more than $75 million over the past four years on an aerial eradication program in Mexico, but that country still remains a main supplier of marijuana and heroin consumed here.

Some of our money went to pay for 70 of the 80 planes that the Mexican government uses to search for and destroy drug crops. The GAO says those planes spend only about 46 hours per month in the air, when they should be used about 80 hours a month.

The eradication program, which dates from the 1970s, has done little to deter drug growers. The farmers used to hide their plants on steep Mexican hillsides. Now they plant in full view on the plains. Drug crops have become a hedge against the miserable Mexican economy for the farm workers, who make twice the prevailing minimum wage when they work for a drug grower.

Budget, rules, officers on MACC agenda

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

MACC News

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

Delegates from 15 member churches to the MACC Annual Meeting Wednesday night will adopt a core budget for 1988, a by-law change and call our new officers to service.

The new officers are: president, Rev. Newell Curtis, Center Congregational Church, UCC; vice president-program, Rev. Anne Wriener, St. Mary's Episcopal; vice president of finance, Rev. James Meek, Community Baptist; board secretary Rev. Dr. Billy Scott, First Baptist Church; treasurer, Florence Noyes.

Our thanks to Anne Wriener and the good folks at St. Mary's Episcopal who are hosting the annual meeting.

Over the next weeks we will be sharing the annual program reports with you, as MACC programs are supported by your contributions (in goods, money, time and talent).

Samaritan Shelter

The Manchester emergency shelter is housed at 466 Main St. The feeding-sleeping area is open from 8 p.m. to 7 a.m., seven days a week. Paid staff includes Pat Burt, our interim administrator, Debbie Rutledge, case manager and Mark Melley, full-time night supervisor. Debiele covers the hours from 2 to 10 p.m., allowing time for day time referrals and advocacy, client contact in the evening and opening the shelter. Mark supervises the shelter from 9 p.m. to 7 a.m. Regular weekend supervisors are Charlie Cone and William Schultz. Charlie also fills in as our 8-hour-a-week maintenance troubleshooter (the rest of the hours he gives as a volunteer).

Cleaning is provided by "The Work Place," a pre-vocational program of Manchester Memorial Hospital. The Work Place Program has been of tremendous help in the MACC basic human needs programs. Daily maintenance crews work both in the shelter and the Shepherd's Place kitchen at Center Congregational and secretarial assistance is offered to both the shelter, the main office and Project Reentry. Another Work Place placement helps us in the Clothing Bank. We are most grateful to the hospital for this cooperative program and to Cindy Andisio, Mary Donovan, Scott Stalker, Work Place staff.

Although we only have three full-time and two part-time staff, we have several hundred volunteer staff who are the heart of the Manchester shelter program. We ask that each of our 16 participating churches staff the shelter from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. a week at a time. We were happy to welcome the Unitarian Universalist Society East to the shelter program this year.

The unsung heroes and heroines are the church coordinators who not only help staff the shelter but spend all those hours on the phone lining up and coordinating their volunteers. The churches also provide all the food for weekends since Shepherd's Place is only open Monday through Friday.

Church coordinators, we applaud you. They are: Assumption R.C. THE BIBLE SPEAKS
by Eugene Brewer

This morning I sat in a meeting of what were largely ministers. The speaker established his point well that we need to let God, who was there, tell us how all things began. He charged that most of our social ills grow out of adopting an alternative view that eliminates God and relegates man to a merely animal level.

As we prayed, I thought of our own diversity. God, the author, has revealed to us his plan for redeeming man — his role and ours. But men have devised alternative theories that are ever changing.

The speaker pointed out that we come to the same evidences for beginnings, but with different biases. It occurs to me that we who believe do the same regarding doctrinal matters. If we want the skeptical point of view to hear our case for God's story of creation, we had better listen to his story of redemption.

— no easy task with three budget years and many sources of income (Department of Human Resources, FEMA, Town of Manchester, Neighborhood Assistance Act, private donations and reimbursements).

Other volunteers serve on the Sheltering Ministries Advisory Committee. That's not as simple as it sounds as they continually struggle with how to provide the least restrictive, most supportive and yet safe setting possible. Chairman, Skip Johnson; secretary, Alice Shea; Barbara Baker; Ray Gelting; Nick LaPenta; Jim Meek; Joan O'Loughlin; Harry Reinhorn and Bill Rood. I should note that these are policy makers who do their field work. Every one of the committee members not only staff the shelter but fill in emergency situations and special occasions.

In 1987 the shelter operated 365 days and sheltered 359 unduplicated clients (291 males and 68 females). An average of 42 Manchester residents used the Emergency Shelter each month. They stayed an average of 9.4 days per month. We also sheltered an average of 19 non-residents each month who stayed an average of 4.7 days.

Although we are actually providing shelter to more men and women, the average stay in the shelter and the average number of clients in the shelter on any given night is down, thanks to excellent case management in finding jobs and housing or treatment on the part of Debbie. We have a great staff, paid and volunteer, cooperative and supportive relationship with town staff in all departments (that's very important indeed).

Bachelors define romanticism

By Anita Caldwell
Manchester Herald

For Tom Marvin, the perfect Valentine's Day fantasy would be a spontaneous trip somewhere. "I always equate travel with romanticism," Marvin said. "Just scoop somebody out of work and go someplace warm." While the romance of Valentine's Day may be a bright spot for Marvin, he also sees a dark side to the celebration. "It's terrible pressure," the 28-year-old said. "It's as if you have to prove something."

Marvin, the owner of Marvin's Art & Framing on Main Street, thinks people feel an obligation to observe the holiday, thus spoiling the surprise it was meant to generate in the first place. But the Manchester merchant, who was one of several area bachelors asked about their ideal Valentine's Day activity, still enjoys the occasion. "I usually have someone around at that time that I can focus my attention on, so it works out really well," Marvin said. For Joseph Fleming, focusing his attention on sports is his idea of romance. The principal of Bolton High School, who turned 50 just last week, said his romantic evening is "watching a basketball doubleheader, like Boston College against UConn and the (Boston) Celtics against L.A. with a couple

... paid her ticket"

JOHN CROWLEY
... men more romantic"

TOM MARVIN
... terrible pressure"

of Harp lager beers." But when the school administrator doesn't get a chance to see his dream games played, he does enjoy the more traditional ways of celebrating Valentine's Day. Fleming said going "out to dinner in my younger days," was a favorite pastime for the holiday. And though he doesn't do much of that now, he said, he's glad the tradition is continued. The tradition seems to be going strong. According to the town clerk's office in Manchester, out of 33 marriage licenses issued to Manchester residents in February 1987, 15 were for Valentine's Day. "It's very nice that the younger ones pick it up if the older ones let it go," he said. John Crowley also believes in continuing the tradition. "For me, it's just an exquisite dinner in an exquisite restaurant where the food is marvelous, the setting is splendid and there's music in the background," said the professor of sociology at Manchester Community College. "But I wouldn't consider that the only part of the evening," the 54-year-old said. Though the professor is romantic, he doesn't think the holiday lives up to all the hoopla. "In general, Valentine's Day has been singularly unimpressive for me," he said, adding that too much of what should be private expressions of love between two people are scattered in personal ads.

On a more positive note, however, Crowley said he has seen more women giving flowers to men in recent years.

"I certainly have received flowers on that day over the years," he said, adding that he finds the role reversal "not at all surprising."

What he does find surprising, however, is the myth that women are more romantic than men.

"There are plenty of studies to support that men are the more romantic of the two," he said.

If any of those reports indicate that flying your girlfriend in from Florida for Valentine's Day might be considered a romantic gesture, Charles Iadaresta fits the ticket.

A few years ago, Iadaresta did just that, but he also believes a romantic evening would be "to go over to a woman's house and have a dinner that she prepared," the fourth-grade Bolton elementary teacher said. "That's not so common, lately."

But the 37-year-old thinks romance shouldn't be limited to one day a year.

"If we need a day set aside to be kind and loving towards the opposite sex, I think it doesn't say very much about us," he said.

Iadaresta said what he believes is most important is "treating each other with respect everyday and not having Valentine's Day as an excuse to do so."

Panty sales show no sign of bottoming out

By Marianno Caprino
The Associated Press

From rhinestone-studded undies to briefs fitted with music boxes to a club that delivers perfumed, gift-wrapped panties, the lingerie industry is shedding its cotton drawer image for Valentine's Day.

Some insiders say that for this special category of women's clothing, Valentine's Day is second only to Christmas when it comes to racking up holiday sales.

The most compelling sales pitch is that no matter how scanty, lingerie lasts longer than roses and isn't fattening like chocolate. Lila Williams thinks her Panty-of-the-Month Club covers the territory when it comes to imaginative love tokens. This Brooklyn-based entrepreneur promises to put one pair of scented, gift-wrapped designer briefs in the mailbox for $16.50 each month.

She estimates 95 percent of the 1,000 subscribers to her panty club are men.

Williams makes sure the package and panty are "color-coded to the season." Last year's April Easter pair had a "furry, detachable bunny tail"; the July "fireworks special" was red, white and blue; and New Year's was silver silk.

Williams said she hand-dyed 600 pieces of lingerie to a minty green for last St. Patrick's Day, her third-biggest sales period. This year, however, she found emerald satin panties trimmed with champagne lace. And don't forget the optional "Erin Go Bra" bra.

Frederick's of Hollywood's $10 pair of musical panties is a tough competitor.

Cleverly hidden amid what little red-and-white lace makes up this undergarment is a tiny computer box that can chirp out "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" at the pull of a string.

Though long considered outside the realm of high-class lingerie, Frederick's has managed to spawn 150 stores nationwide and post annual sales in the $58 million range, said spokeswoman Ellen Appel.

For those who want to be a bit more extravagant, Blooming-dale's in New York is selling rhinestone-studded red silk panties for $100 a pair. The matching camisole carries a $250 price tag.

The past few years have seen a "coming out of lingerie as a real fashion item," said Kurt Barnard, a retail marketing consultant and publisher of the newsletter Retail Marketing Report.

Over a year ago, for example, Bloomingdale's flagship Manhattan store moved its lingerie department from the more pedestrian ground floor to upstairs, next to designer clothing, a spokeswoman said.

"The industry is growing rather fast," Barnard said, pointing to The Limited Inc. as one major retailer that has focused on lingerie with its 237-store Victoria's Secret chain. "It's likely we'll see more and more stores affiliated" with lingerie spinoffs, Barnard predicted.

The actual size of the industry is difficult to gauge, partly because many of the players are private companies and because the industry does not have a trade association.

But Ray McInerney, publisher of Intimate Fashion News, said his publication reported 1986 intimate apparel sales totaled $5.6 billion.

While trailing sleepwear, which posted 1986 sales of $1.42 billion, and bras, which totaled $1.34 billion, sales of panties reached $1.1 billion and ranked ahead of robes, slips and girdles.

Aluminum needs attention

By Andy Long
The Associated Press

Aluminum is a low-maintenance material, which is why it retains its popularity over the years. But if you want to preserve its "newish" appearance, it must be given some attention, which often involves nothing more than keeping it clean.

If the siding on your house is aluminum, an occasional washing with water or water with mild soap may be all that is required. One of those longhanded hollow brushes designed for automobiles makes a handy cleaning tool. Doing this as little as once a year will keep your siding sparkling and make any other cleaning jobs unnecessary.

Should you have neglected to clean the aluminum and there is a buildup of dirt and grime that has taken several years to accumulate, a cleaning agent stronger than soap and water will be needed. Never forget the saying that holds true for cleaning chores of all kinds: Use the mildest strong product that will do the job. Since there is a chance the selected abrasive might scratch the surface of the aluminum, test it first on some inconspicuous area. If the test shows it cleans but does not scratch, exercise the precaution of rubbing with the grain or texture if there is one.

In using any cleanser, never

change the recommended proportions. Too little water, for instance, might damage the aluminum; too much might fail to clean the aluminum properly.

When aluminum has been painted, either at the factory or after installation, it is especially important that strong cleaning agents not be used. First, try plain water, then add a mild soap. Contrary to what many people think, cleaning should be done from the bottom up. If you start at the top of a structure or anything else, the water that runs down will streak the bottom, still-dirty portion. If you begin at the bottom and water later runs down, it can be quickly wiped off without streaking.

Watch out for drips when cleaning aluminum, since cleaners which are harmless to aluminum may damage other materials on contact. In some cases, cleaners tolerated by some materials will discolor aluminum surfaces.

Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Long's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to the Manchester Herald at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

Weeders Guide

Our Arboretum guide, Shirley Mah Kooymann, was particularly proud of the hardy Northern Lights azaleas in six colors and of the dogwoods that have withstood 45-degree Fahrenheit cold.

She says river birch is a better choice than the more common paper white birch for severe climates.

Coordinator Harold Pellett says knowledge of the actual tolerance potential of plants is useful to gardeners and professional horticulturalists worldwide.

He says the diversity of the native setting on rolling topography makes the Arboretum perfect for interpreting the Northern woods, prairies, savannas, ponds, streams, fields and bogs.

In the Arboretum, there are six miles of trails, three miles of paved roads and 15 acres of colorful display gardens.

There is a peak-time staff of about 95, augmented by 300 volunteers who weed, conduct tours, or work at desks, in the library (with its 8,500 books on horticulture), or in the gift shop.

There is a new Japanese garden at Tortoise Island, a National Display Garden of the American Hosta Society. Herb gardens are tended by volunteers. (Visitors are invited to pinch off a leaf.)

Near the Arboretum entrance are handsome rosebud trees, developed from one winter-hardy specimen found nearby by university researchers.

There is a viewing tower near two towering elms that are given tender loving care against the blight that has destroyed so many elms. There is also a gazebo. Plantings of thornless hawthorns provide lots of food for birds.

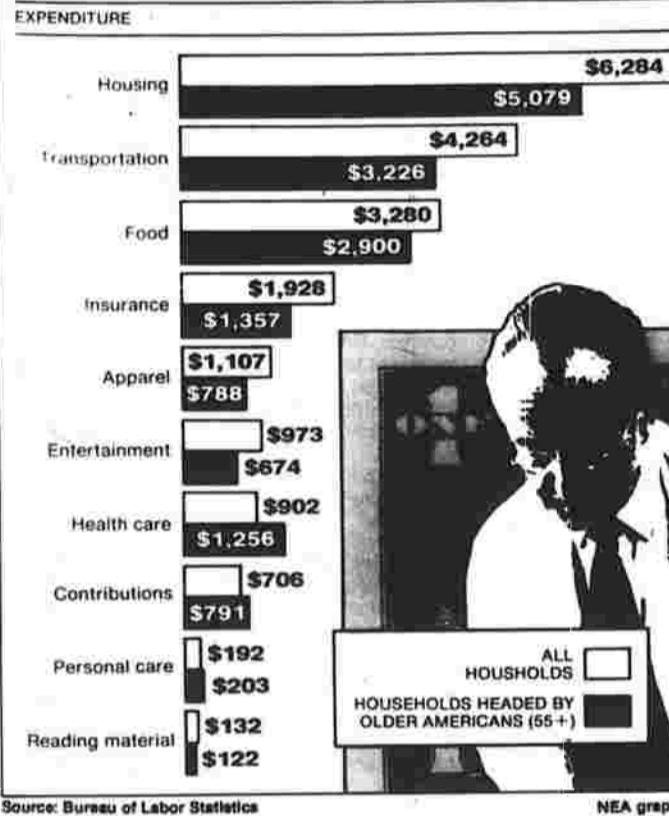

There are two natural ponds and several man-made ones used for irrigation. The grounds are not treated with chemicals that might harm birds, ducks and geese that frequent the ponds and waterfalls.

There are collections of Japanese tree lilacs, dwarf conifers, prickly pears, junipers of various forms and textures, weeping pines named "Uncle Fogey," Norway spruces, a dahlia trial garden, a rose garden, a cloister garden and a sensory garden. A dye garden is maintained by the Weaver's Guild. There are also gardens of annual flowers for cutting.

Classes are offered for adults, students and children for identification of plants.

Rulings by court, not just new law, affect your taxes

Most recent tax talk has been about the new laws that have been enacted. But this is far from the only important tax news for 1987. There has also been a steady stream of new cases and rulings in which taxpayers came out winners.

Here's a roundup of important tax winners for 1987. Keep it handy when filling out your 1987 returns.

Home sale exclusion: The law permits home sellers age 55 or over to escape tax on the first $125,000 of profit from the sale of a house. But a taxpayer can claim this break only once in a lifetime. And both spouses of a couple are ineligible for the exclusion if one of them had claimed it before they were married.

What happens if someone age 55 sold his home in January of 1987 and got married in June of 1987?

The IRS says he can claim the $125,000 exclusion on his 1987 return without his new spouse joining in. And should he die before her after 1987, she could claim the exclusion on the sale of their new home, since she had not joined his exclusion.

Deductions when mixing business with pleasure: You can deduct 80 percent of the cost of entertaining if the entertainment is "directly related" to your business. This means you actually conduct business during the entertainment. Goodwill entertainment doesn't count.

The Tax Court says a taxpayer can discuss business-related matters while fishing or golfing and deduct his out-of-pocket expense for the entertainment.

Dr. Detko, an anesthesiologist, bought a sport fishing boat as a way to spend more time with other doctors who were potential referral sources. In the first year, Detko entertained associates and their families on nine different occasions and deducted several thousand dollars in expenses for the trips.

The IRS knocked out the deduction on the ground that this was simply goodwill entertaining. It argued that the setting was too distracting for any meaningful business discussions.

Sylvia Porter

The Tax Court ruled that Detko's expenses were deductible as directly relating to business entertainment. He was doing more than trying to develop goodwill. The boat provided him with a way to talk to the doctors privately and to gain their confidence in his ability to meet their needs. He anticipated getting referrals and did, in fact, receive some.

Job-related moving expenses: You can take these as itemized deductions. The new job must be at least 35 miles further from your old home than your old home was from your old job. The deduction for the cost of making a job-related move is not subject to the 1986 law's floor for unreimbursed employee business expenses.

You are better off itemizing your moving expenses to get your deductions sooner, but if you can't itemize (because the sum of your deductions doesn't exceed the standard deduction), or you've reached the limit on your deductible moving expenses, add whatever expenses you can to the basis of your house or to the adjusted sales price. For example, increase the basis of your new home by a real-estate agent's commission you paid. You can write off, among other things, the full cost of moving household goods and "personal effects."

What does the term "personal effects" mean? A recent Tax Court case answered that question.

Mr. Fogg was transferred from Florida to South Carolina by his employer. He shipped his family's sailboat to his new residence and deducted $1,796 for the cost of shipping. The IRS disallowed the deduction, claiming the sailboat was not a "personal effect."

But the Tax Court upheld the deduction. Reason: Personal effects include any item "intimately associated" with the taxpayer. The Fogs used their boat so frequently that it qualified as a personal effect.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: We have painted kitchen cabinets. The finish is starting to look quite messy. I want to repaint them, but wonder whether the old finish has to be removed first. If I am able to repaint without taking off the old finish, will a single coat be sufficient to cover properly?

ANSWER: In most cases, the old finish does not have to be removed. But you will have to do a little sanding to take off any of the old gloss and you will have to be sure no grime or wax is still on the cabinets. You did not say whether the cabinets are wood, metal or what. In any case, you will have to be your own judge after the first coat has been applied. If it appears to have covered thoroughly, you probably do not need a second coat. One of the determining factors is whether you are putting on the same color paint or a darker one. If the same or darker, fine, but sometimes applying a light color over a dark one requires a second coat. When you say the cabinets are a bit "messy," that can mean almost anything. It might be that all they require is a good cleaning, in which case repainting might not be needed.

QUESTION: What are the differences between latex paints and alkyds?

ANSWER: Latex paint is popular for interiors because it applies easily and dries quickly. It also allows the brushes and rollers to be cleaned quickly and easily. Modern latexes of good quality are scrubable and odorless. Alkyd paints have fine adhesion and color retention. They are especially good for rooms with moisture or surface-marring problems. Unlike the latexes, they require overnight drying and a solvent for cleaning the equipment. Used over plaster, they should be applied after first putting on an alkali-resistant primer.

QUESTION: I intend to paint my house in the spring and have been reading up on how to handle the job. One thing that puzzles me is what is meant by "following the sun."

ANSWER: You should always paint the part of the house that is in the shade, otherwise the hot sun may cause the paint to dry too quickly. Therefore, you should paint where the sun has just been and then "follow" it around the house. In that way, you always will be painting in the shade and where the sun will not come again until the following day.

contracts. The corollary is that it is also harder to stop short of game. For example, South in today's deal was impelled to an eventual game contract, whether he liked it or not. If there had been a way for South to change his bid's methods so that the three-spade bid was a sign-off, he would have done so readily. Instead, North treated the bid as offering a choice for the final game contract and quickly raised to four spades with the Q-J for trump support.

In fact, play for game was not unreasonable, certainly better than in three no-trump. West led his singleton club jack, though he had no assurance that he could get his partner in to take a later club ruff. On this card East played the deuce, hoping that West would view that card as suit preference, showing an entry in the diamond suit. Declarer played a spade and West won the ace. West was now in a no-choice situation — unless East held the diamond ace, the contract was simply not going to be beaten. So he led a diamond. East took the ace and gave West his club ruff, and the king of diamonds was the setting trick.

By James Jacoby

Since bonuses in bridge are given for bidding and making games and slams, it should be no surprise that the aim of most partnership understandings is to make it easier to get to game.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

BACK IN LIMELIGHT — Kevin Bacon, who burst on the movie scene in "Footloose," sits in a Los Angeles hotel recently to talk about his latest effort in the John Hughes movie, "She's Having a Baby."

Kevin Bacon, once reluctant, now enjoys being a film star

By Bob Thomas The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A few years ago, Kevin Bacon burst on the movie scene as the lighthearted rebel in the hit movie, "Footloose." Just as suddenly, he withdrew.

"I went kicking and screaming into the limelight," he said in retrospect. "It was a teen-oriented film, and I fought so hard not to be a teen idol. I considered myself a serious New York actor, and I wanted to do Chekhov for the rest of my career."

"The film was the No. 1 pop hit, and every little girl would have me on her wall. That was the last thing in the world I wanted. I fought to stay off the magazines and out of the papers."

"I've sort of gained a perspective on that. I love being in magazines. I guess it's a kind of process of growing up, leveling off and getting used to having a movie career — as used to it as you will ever get."

The once-reluctant star has been happily making the public rounds on behalf of his new film, "She's Having a Baby."

Yes, another baby movie, though this one deals mostly with the events leading up to the birth. Bacon and Elizabeth McGovern star as a married couple facing the vicissitudes of their first years together. It's a John Hughes movie, aimed mostly for laughs.

Hughes ("The Breakfast Club," "Planes, Trains and Automobiles") wrote, directed and produced "She's Having a Baby," and you might expect him to be an autocrat on the set.

"If I have any criticism of John Hughes, it's that he should be a little less flexible," Bacon said. "He is incredibly unprotective of his work."

"I come from the old school of the theater, where you never ever change a lick of the play; it's sacrilege. The cinema being such an intimate medium, we want to be as comfortable and as real with the language as possible. ... John likes actors, and he likes the input they can give. Sometimes you take off and get so far from the material that it almost gets out of hand."

About his role as Jake Briggs, Bacon observed: "This is a character who takes a lot of plunges. He plunges into marriage, he plunges into a job, he plunges into a mortgage and ultimately at the end of the film plunges into fatherhood. He's worried and concerned about those things."

"Part of what the movies are saying is, 'It's OK fellows to be concerned and worried and have these kinds of emotions. Because if you find the right person, it will become clear to you that this is the most important thing that could happen to you. This is more important than jobs, in-laws, money. To find someone you can spend your life with: This is a great thing.'"

Bacon himself is getting ready to take the plunge at 29. He became engaged on Christmas Eve to Kyra Sedgwick, who appeared with him on the American Playhouse production of "Lemon Sky" on the Public Broadcasting Service this month. "I'm terrible on dates, so we did it on a day I could remember," said the actor about his engagement. Bacon's life has been far different from Jake Briggs of "She's Having a Baby." The youngest of six children of a Philadelphia city planner, he became independent at an early age. "I think by the time (parents) get to the sixth kid, they're less afraid and more willing to give their child independence."

He took his first acting class at 12 and moved to New York at 17 with his parents' blessing. "I was living alone in an apartment, roaches on the wall, working as a waiter, the whole bit," he said. "After a year at the Circle in the Square Theater, he landed a role in 'Animal House.' Unlike other actors in that landmark comedy, Bacon did not find quick stardom.

"It was a rude awakening," he said. "I spent the money in a week, and I had to start waiting tables again. I did that for about four years. I think I paid my dues. Have I struggled? I don't know. We all have different kinds of struggle."

"I was happy for every little bone that was thrown to me. Any tiny little part meant so much to me. Although in the back of my mind I was probably shooting for movie stardom, little things would really satisfy me."

"Footloose," of course, was a "tremendous step for me. I had done movies, but I wasn't considered as a leading man before. That's obviously a tough step to take."

Besides "Lemon Sky," Bacon has completed two other films: "End of the Line" for Orion Classics and "Criminal Law" for Hemdale.

Unusual screenplay doesn't quite work

FIVE CORNERS (R) In this "visual" era, it's not often that a movie can be identified by its screenwriter.

Filmeter

Robert DiMatteo

In most cases, there's no screenplay to speak of. Writer John Patrick Shanley is a notable exception. On the heels of Shanley's juicy script for "Moonstruck" comes his very different "Five Corners."

The title refers to a lower-middle-class Bronx neighborhood where the film's characters live out their crisscrossing fates. The time is 1964, when the civil rights movement and other forces rocked America.

Shanley gives us a motley, coming-of-age quartet. There's the 22-year-old Linda (Jodie Foster) and her sometime boyfriend, James (Todd Graff); there's the Martin Luther King-inspired idealist, Harry (Tim Robbins); and there's Heinz (John Turturro), a vengeful ex-con who served time for raping Linda.

Attempting to capture the tawdry poetry of the Bronx streets, "Five Corners" shows us confrontations that catalyze changes in the characters—all in the course of a 36-hour period.

Shanley's script is almost too ambitious — too literally and theatrical. He's trying for a combustible blend of tragicomic elements, but it doesn't work. Even so, one is inclined to blame Tony Bill's direction, which lacks the fire and dark passion needed to fully ignite the script.

Of the four able leads, only John Turturro gives a performance of effortless authenticity. Turturro starred off-Broadway in Shanley's intense play "Danny and the Deep Blue Sea," and the bond between actor and writer shows in the best (and most disturbing) scene, creepy, volatile Heinz has a fight with his mother (Rose Gregorio) — an all-smiles woman lost in a fantasy world. In a fit of rage, the psychotic Heinz throws her out the window. GRADE: **1/2

Walter's place in Syracuse gives auto literature new life

Back in 1960,

he got himself a full-fledged promotional brochure, and that did it.

Throughout the following decades of scrounging for additional brochures, and catalogs, repair manuals, postcards with auto pix, photographs, posters and auto showroom displays his hobby survived the misgivings of his parents and an M.B.A. degree from McGill University.

And now, in his jound 30s, he has earned the title of the "Auto Lit King" with a stock of a million items, a staff of eight employees, customers in 100 countries and personal contacts in 40 of them.

"Walter Miller's Antique Car Literature" business gets 1,000 inquiries a week. Back along, nobody in New England would go far without a Blue Book to help wend the way through villages and towns; "16.0. Turn left at white church." A 1916 edition is listed at $25.

Be sure and give Miller a buzz if you run across an early copy of "MoTor Directory of Motor Cars," or the 1904 "Hand Book of Gasoline Automobiles." These are gems of gems and he admits to being a fanatic about giving forgotten literature a new life.

Ice caps on Pluto

Each polar ice cap of Pluto, the farthest planet from the sun, forms during the winter and melts every spring, according to Discover magazine. That may seem like a lot of liquid flowing around twice a year, but because of its long orbit around the sun, a Pluto year is equivalent to nearly 250 Earth years.

Sheepskin volume is tribute to U.S.

By Sid Moody The Associated Press

Through the long night of war the boy wondered when the Americans would come.

Finally, one summer day, they did. It was as he had dreamed. Riding their tanks like chargers, "They were like gods. We all tried to get close to them."

Edouard Weiss has never forgotten that day in 1944 when the GIs he had long awaited reached Pau, France, freeing it from German occupation. Many years later that memory, and other emotional links to America, would prompt Weiss, by now a publisher, to offer Americans a book, a book like no other and more than a book in his eyes — a thank you. It was so costly to produce the price would be $25,000 a copy.

Weiss' grandmother was an American from New Orleans who had met his grandfather in France in World War I. Their son, Edouard's father, became a surgeon and studied for a time in America.

After the war, Edouard got a scholarship to Washington University in St. Louis where his father had studied. He returned to France in 1952 and didn't return to America for more than 30 years.

Edouard followed an artistic bent into acting. "As an actor I was not bad. And not great."

In time, he married and had three sons. The family moved into an old canal tugboat moored along the Seine in the Paris suburbs.

Weiss had a lifelong interest in art, literature and architecture. He would become a publisher of art books, a calling about which he knew nothing at all. His specialty was exquisitely done books aimed at a small, cultured and wealthy market. A collection of tastefully illustrated

Ibsen plays, for instance, beautifully done and expected, with reason, to be popular in the playwright's native Norway. Books on Matisse, Picasso, Chagall.

He had never forgotten his grandmother, his year in America. Nor the heroes on their tanks.

He wanted to settle some accounts. The bicentennial of the American Declaration of Independence had come and gone. But the Constitution's 200th birthday was coming up.

Weiss decided to make the loveliest book possible that would contain reproductions of the handwritten Declaration, Constitution and Bill of Rights. It would have an amplifying text, prints of the period and an abstract lithograph triptych by the American artist Paul Jenkins.

It would be printed on vellum — sheepskin — like the magisterial religious books of the Middle Ages. He spent $1 million acquiring meticulously selected sheepskin from all over the world and then processing it by ancient hand methods.

The type was set by hand, just as Ben Franklin would have done it. Francois Du Ros, who didn't speak or read a word of English, set the letters one by one, filling them down if they didn't fit. Then he printed the vellum pages individually on a press that had been in his family since it had printed currency for Napoleon.

The pages were huge, 22 by 30 inches, and the books were bound in a fiery red leather. Bronze medallions reproducing two coins of the period were inlaid in the covers. A week before deadline Weiss had a book, its spine bearing the gold leaf title: "We the People."

The printing ran to 250 copies. In the fall, Weiss toured the United States, looking for sponsors who would put his books on display or donate them to libraries.

Neil Diamond has another hot August night

By Richard De Atley
The Associated Press

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Neil Diamond, one of pop music's great iconoclasts, recently contemplated his current songwriting.

"I'm not trying to design any music," he said. "I'm not good at that." Diamond, an electrifying concert performer, has perhaps satisfied the millions who can't seem to get enough of his music with a two-record set, "Hot August Night II," a compilation of his most popular and intriguing work.

The album comes out 15 years after his "Hot August Night," the first to capture Diamond live at the same venue where "II" was recorded — Los Angeles' Greek Theater.

The new album features such favorites as "Song Sung Blue," "I Am I Said" and "Cracklin' Rosie," along with "America," "Brother Love's Traveling Salvation Show" and "Holly Holy." The LP also includes more recent tunes, such as "Heartlight" and "I Dreamed a Dream" from "Les Miserables."

The concerts in his 1986 world tour, his first in four years, drew 1.7 million fans and sell-out performances, including eight nights at New York's Madison Square Garden and 14 nights at the Greek.

Although he is currently writing material for an album of new songs, Diamond took time to reflect on the past one recent afternoon at his production offices.

It was a different music business in the late 1960s when Diamond, a hard-plugging songwriter with few successes, finally began to score with "Solitary Man" and "Cherry, Cherry." Radio stations have tightened up since then, responding more to demographics these days than artistic instincts. But even in the '60s, Diamond said, you were expected to fit into certain molds.

HOT AGAIN — Neil Diamond, one of pop music's great iconoclasts, stands outside his West Hollywood office, talking about his latest compilation of songs, "Hot August Night II."

If he had been good at bending tunes around what radio needed, he would have been more successful as a staff songwriter, instead of getting bounced from job to job in New York City.

try some direction that's your own and hope that somebody likes it," said the 47-year-old Diamond. "I really have to do my best work and hope that somebody likes it, as opposed to trying to fit it into any kind of format. Hardly any of my really good songs fit into any format.

"What is 'Brother Love'?" If you look at what the charts were then, it's totally ridiculous. 'America' (was done) before anybody was singing about America, when it was still embarrassing. 'I Am I Said' takes a look at what was happening in 1971-72.

"I know it was different. I felt it was different," he said. "I just knew that I loved it and it was the best kind of work I could do and that's why it went out and it hit." Diamond, a self-described "Brooklyn cowboy," has been riding the fences on the edge of music for a long time. He has twice backed off from concert appearances, going on hiatus to reflect and gather.

In 1972, he abruptly broke off concerts for a three-year period, even though he was the best-selling male recording artist in the country. At the time, he said he did not want to be swept along with success and wanted to take control of the reins.

In 1984, he went to court to force Columbia Records to release his "Primitive" LP, and finally reached a compromise by recording three new songs for the album.

But his trend for musical exploration was formed early in his career with "Taproot Manuscript," an exploration of African music released in 1970 that Diamond attributes partly to his association with South African trumpeter Hugh Masekela at Uni Records, his second label.

"I would definitely like to try that again. 'The African Trilogy' was like a musical experiment. I had never done anything on a scale that large. Although it was only one side of an album, it was really large scale for me — I was used to writing singles," he said.

He attributes "Taproot" to the beginning of a writing period that blended music and theme, continuing with the LPs "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" and "Beautiful Noise," a tribute to the Tin Pan Alley music that was dying when Diamond became a songwriter.

"Beautiful Noise" gave way to the movie score for "The Jazz Singer," in which he starred.

Diamond says he has taken to listening to early rock 'n' roll these days.

"There's something about getting down to basics that's refreshing," he said. "You get out as high as the moon and somehow you want to get back to Earth and stand on firm ground."

"I just did a duet of 'Heartbreak Hotel' with Kim Carnes, and we just did it for fun," he said. "We loved it, both of us."

"Heartbreak Hotel" is one of the bedrock rock songs. "It's from the era when I was a fan and I was a teen-ager."

Besides his songwriting, Diamond is preparing to work as executive producer for "Beautiful Noise," a semi-autobiographical movie in the early stages of development.

Diamond's life began in near poverty in tough, rundown neighborhoods of Brooklyn, where his father was a struggling dry goods salesman. At the age of 16, he composed his first song on a second-hand guitar his parents managed to buy for his birthday.

His father frequently moved the family to new parts of town and young Neil became a loner, interested primarily in the songs playing in his head.

Diamond entered New York University as a pre-med major on a fencing scholarship but dropped out shortly before graduation to accept an offer to write songs for $50 a week.

Seven years of failure followed. Then in 1967, a small record company released "Solitary Man" and "Cherry, Cherry."

These days Diamond does what he feels is right. "It's always been that way. I've always had that freedom," he said.

"What I do now different than what I did before, maybe I'm 20 years older and I know 20 years more of life. I try to reflect that in my music."

BUSINESS

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

■ Business inventories jumped 0.8 percent in December, the government reported.

■ The steepest climb in food prices in nearly 18 months, only partly offset by falling energy costs, pushed wholesale prices up at a brisk 0.4 percent in January.

■ Retail sales rose 0.5 percent in January, and some economists said the gain was evidence that consumer confidence has nearly recovered from the October stock market crash.

■ U.S. manufacturing executives see only a one-in-four chance of a recession this year and by a wide margin expect profits and exports to exceed 1987 levels, the National Association of Manufacturers said.

■ Consumer confidence continues to gain even though a quarter of adults polled in a recent survey thinks jobs are hard to come by, according to a Conference Board study.

■ The New York Stock Exchange and the Securities and Exchange Commission are investigating rumors that subversion of a key selling rule may have contributed to the October crash, NYSE Chairman John Phelan said.

■ A federal appeals court refused to review a Federal Reserve Board decision allowing bank holding company subsidiaries to underwrite and deal in securities.

■ A management-led group offered to buy J.P. Stevens & Co. for $666.5 million, sending the textile giant's stock soaring on speculation that higher bids would emerge.

■ The accounting profession announced regulatory changes aimed at increasing the responsibility and clarifying the role of auditors who review corporate financial statements.

■ Ten men were charged with fraudulent trading in commodity futures, including one scheme in which non-exchange members allegedly used wigs, makeup and phony credentials to gain access to the trading pits.

■ General Motors Corp. said fourth-quarter earnings more than doubled from the previous year, although much of the improvement was attributed to accounting changes and tax benefits.

■ The cost of providing health care benefits to employees jumped to an average of $1,985 per worker last year as employers hunted for new ways to control costs, according to a private survey.

■ Carl C. Icahn, single largest shareholder in Texaco Inc. and an ardent critic of the company's takeover defenses, nominated himself and four allies to the beleaguered oil giant's board of directors.

■ Black & Decker Corp. said it would attempt to gain control of American Standard Inc.'s board and remove a "poison pill" defense aimed at thwarting its $2.1 billion takeover bid.

■ A group led by Coniston Partners said it had accumulated a 6 percent stake in Gillette Co. and was seeking to meet with potential buyers of the company.

■ The board of directors of Stop & Shop Cos. unanimously rejected a $1.03 billion buyout offer from Dart Group Corp.

■ The influx of women into the working world is turning the work place into marriage hunting grounds and putting pressures on managers to deal with office romances, nepotism and sexual harassment, a private study said.

Trade deficit drops to yearly low, but 1987 still was the worst ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit narrowed to $12.2 billion in December as exports hit records, but the overall $171.2 billion shortfall for 1987 still measured the highest ever, the government said Friday.

December's merchandise trade deficit was down from $13.2 billion in November and from $17.6 billion in October, and was the smallest figure since a $11.9 billion trade gap in January 1987, the Commerce Department said.

The improvement was driven by a 4.2 percent rise in exports, which reached record levels for the second month in a row.

Both private and government analysts pointed toward the December report as strong evidence of the long-awaited reversal in the nation's trade performance.

"The tide has turned," declared Allen Sinal, chief economist for the Boston Company Economic Advisers Inc.

Exports in December were $24.8 billion, a record, up from $23.8 billion in November, the previous record. Imports, meanwhile, held steady at $37.0 billion, the same as the month before.

"We're beginning to see our economy driven by exports and that means economic vitality and increased jobs for Americans," Commerce Secretary C. William Verity said in a statement.

U.S. Trade Balance DECEMBER 1987

But he said the overall deficit for the year — up 9.6 percent from $156.2 billion in 1986 — was "unacceptable. We have a long way to go until we can be comfortable."

For all of 1987, Americans imported $424.1 billion in goods from other countries while exporting $252.9 billion, compared with 1986 imports of $383.0 billion and exports of $226.8 billion.

Analysts credited the slide in the dollar — now worth half of its 1985 value against the Japanese yen and key European currencies — as being the major factor in the recent export surge.

A devalued dollar makes American goods cheaper abroad.

And, while it will also eventually drive up the price of imports, this effect has not yet been fully realized as many foreign manufacturers take smaller profit margins to hang onto their share of lucrative U.S. markets, analysts said.

Still other economists suggested that the December figures be looked at cautiously, claiming that the monthly trade figures — although closely watched by financial markets — tend to be erratic.

For one thing, the figures are not adjusted to remove the impact of seasonal factors, such as increases in imports before Christmas and when new-model auto shipments come in early each summer.

On a seasonal basis, the trade gap traditionally improves in December and January, economists said.

To meet this concern, the Commerce Department announced on Friday that, beginning with the release of April trade figures, it would "seasonally adjust" the monthly data.

HEALTH vs FITNESS

Strenuous exercise may develop physical fitness, but not necessarily health. To be healthy requires a nutritious diet, moderate exercise, no smoking or street drugs, maintaining normal weight, avoiding stress, etc. Rippling muscles can mask a cholesterol problem, hypertension, arthritis, even heart disease. To be both fit and healthy is ideal and requires a wholesome lifestyle.

Foul weather will welcome Winter Olympians

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — The weather turned cranky on Calgary again. It was too windy for the downhill, too warm for cross-country and it may be too cold for spectators Saturday at the opening ceremonies of the Winter Olympics.

Winds that reached 90 mph forced cancellation of downhill training at Mount Allan Friday, and temperatures in the 50s made it impossible to train for the women's 10-kilometer race at the Canmore Nordic Centre.

Temperatures were supposed to drop back into the teens on Saturday for opening ceremonies at McMahon Stadium.

"I wouldn't want to be there," organizer Terry Steward said. "When that wind comes into the stadium from the north, it is cold."

America's teams already faced the prospect of a disappointing Olympics — one of their worst, in fact. Then, two U.S. Olympic teams, bobsled and the medal-hopeful speed skaters, were split by often angry disputes over the way they choose athletes, and American downhillers were flops in early training runs.

U.S. Olympic Committee President Robert Helmick said the USOC was reviewing the case of speed skater David Cruikshank, who lost his starting position in the 1,000 meters after qualifying at the Olympic trials.

U.S. skiers were flops in training for the downhill race, the most glamorous event of the Winter Games' glamour sport. The United States won a gold medal in the men's downhill four years ago at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, but the gold medal winner, Bill Johnson, didn't make the team this year.

There's no chance for gold this time. The final day of training for the men's downhill was cancelled Friday by winds gusting up to 90 mph at Mount Allan. Pirmin Zurbriggen, the top downhiller in the world, had the fastest times in each of the first two runs and is heavily favored to win the gold on Sunday.

"It was very unfair with the winds," Zurbriggen said, adding that winds made it very difficult to maintain balance.

The best American finish in the two days of training was 11th by 19-year-old A.J. Kitt, but he was more than two seconds off Zurbriggen's time.

The USOC on Friday also asked the state department to review procedures for allowing visas to foreign athletes for competition in Olympic-sanctioned events. Denial of visas to North Korean athletes last year may be hurting Alaska's bid for the 1994 Winter Games.

"Athletes should not be used as tools of foreign policy, plain and simple," Helmick said.

The relay of the Olympic torch — which included a 200-yard shuffling sojourn in Edmonton two days ago by 101-year-old Joe Chase — enters its 89th and final day Saturday. The torch is scheduled to arrive at McMahon Stadium in Calgary at 3:45 p.m. EST for opening ceremonies.

"I thought there wasn't going to be an end when we were in eastern Canada," said Sandy Hunter, a spokesman for the relay. "It seemed so long to go."

With the effects of a warm Chinook wind expected to diminish Saturday, organizers were warning spectators to watch out for frostbite. Temperatures, which reached the 50s on Thursday and Friday, were expected to drop to the teens.

With the flame burning at McMahon Stadium, the procession of athletes will begin. They will represent a record 57 nations, led by the eight-member team from Greece, historic homeland of the Olympics.

Near the end of the parade will come the U.S. team, 149 members strong and led by 39-year-old four-time Olympian Lyle Nelson of Essex, Vt., a biathlete. Not more than four or five of them are expected to win medals.

Some could come from the speed skating team, which includes Bonnie Blair, a former world record-holder at 500 meters; world sprint champion

U.S. SPEED SKATER — Bonnie Blair of the United States has a shot at medals in the 500, 1,000 and 1,500 meters at the Winter Olympics which were set to open today in Calgary.

Dan Jansen, and Nick Thometz. The United States expected speed skating medals in Sarajevo, too, but got shut out.

A few more medals could come in figure skating. Brian Boitano and Debi Thomas are former world champions and among the favorites in singles.

Josh Thompson, a silver medalist at last year's world championships, might win America's first biathlon medal.

Beyond that, it's anybody's guess. America's worst medal showings came in 1924 at Chamonix. France in the first Winter Games and again in 1936 at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany. Both times, the United States won four medals.

Back in those days, the United States used to win gold in bobsled. In the 1928 St. Moritz Games, the U.S. four-man team placed 1-2. They did it again in the 1932 Lake Placid Olympics. Bill Fiske, a glorious name from America's Olympic past, was driving both times.

America's top driver this year is Brent Rushlaw — not so glorious. He wasn't expected to any better than a top 10 finish, and now there is discord over the selection of football player Willie Gault as an alternate pusher.

Nelson is U.S. flag bearer

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — On Tuesday, biathlete Lyle Nelson celebrated his 39th birthday. On Friday, his Olympic teammates gave him a memorable gift.

Nelson, who is competing in his fourth and final Winter Games, was chosen by the U.S. team captains to act as their flagbearer at Saturday's opening ceremonies.

For Nelson, oldest member of the U.S. team, it is a rare opportunity to move into the Olympic spotlight. His esoteric sport, which combines cross-country skiing with target shooting, usually does not attract much attention.

Nelson has been trying since 1976.

At Sarajevo in 1984, he came off the windy, wet 10-kilometer course out of breath, his face caked with snow. But when he saw a hardy band of three American writers waiting for him, he walked directly to them and talked for 10 minutes about the gruelling race and his demanding sport.

"Instead of buying a house in 1976, they let us skate," Wayne said. "That kind of blows my mind. Here we are, at the age where we might change our minds two hours later, and they're saying they'll give all this up."

"It was hard for us to say straight out we want to skate, that would be pretty selfish. But they really got behind us, and in a good way. They're silent supporters, they stand in the background."

AMERICAN PAIR — Jill Watson and Peter Oppgaard are American hopefuls in the pairs skating competition at the Winter Olympics. They are the U.S. champs.

Hometown fully behind Seybolds

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — Kim and Wayne Seybold have about 35,000 thank you cards to write when they get back home to Marion.

The Seybolds, the No. 3-ranked figure skating pair in the United States, might not have gotten to the Olympics without the fund-raising help and moral support offered by the folks of the Indiana farming community.

"If we were from Indianapolis, Fort Wayne or Philadelphia, it probably wouldn't have happened," Wayne Seybold said Friday about the $38,000 raised to defray the pair's training costs. "This is from a small town where the big thing is high school basketball and where they're real supporters of the local athletes because they don't have a professional team to rally behind."

"We're the first Olympians from the area — they've had some athletes go to the Olympic Festival — and now they can say, 'We have two Olympians.' It's a very proud moment for the people."

Ironically, Kim and Wayne haven't lived in Marion for four years; they moved to Wilmington, Del., to train with Ron Ludington, the premier pairs coach in the United States, in 1984.

"We make sure we go back as often as we can every year," said Kim, who, at 22, is two years younger than her brother. "We love to go back to see our parents and we feel a real part of Marion."

The fund raising began two years ago. The Seybolds previously had gotten some sponsorship from an Indiana newspaper. The major portion of their expenses came from their parents, John and Jean.

"We have three goaltenders," said Peterson, who said he might decide after a squad meeting Friday night.

The goaltending situation could be a sensitive one for Peterson, since he has been having trouble since training camp and throughout the 60-game exhibition season

Leetch, Burke key figures in Olympic hockey picture

By Mike Nadel
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — Look for Brian Leetch and Sean Burke at the top of the action if not the top of their teams' seniority lists.

Leetch, the United States' 19-year-old defenseman, and Burke, Canada's 21-year-old goaltender, are the second-youngest players on their Olympic hockey teams.

But when the competition starts Saturday, none of their older and more experienced teammates will shoulder as much burden.

"Sometimes off the ice, I feel a little pressure. I have too much time to think," said Leetch, whose U.S. squad opens Saturday night against Austria. "A lot's been written about me and I tend to put pressure on myself after reading everything."

"But once I get on the ice, it's just a game."

Leetch, who has been named captain, is a dynamic, offensive-minded player, who often takes the puck behind his net and doesn't stop skating until he reaches the opposing net. During the U.S. team's 60-game pre-Olympic schedule, Leetch was the second-leading scorer, mostly on the basis of his 61 assists.

While the United States can't even dream of duplicating 1980's "Miracle On Ice" without a fantastic showing by Leetch, perhaps the most valuable player in the Olympics is Burke — who must be hotter than a Chinook if Canada is to win its first gold medal since 1952, the Olympiad before the Soviet Union began to participate in hockey.

"Sean Burke could be a difference in these Olympics," said Andy Moog, a former NHL goalie who split time with Burke during Canada's pre-Olympic schedule. "It's pretty rare that you see a big man (Burke is 6-foot-4, 200 pounds) who can move like he does. He's going to be a great one. No, I take that back, he already is a great one."

Like Leetch, Burke feels the pressure.

"I know what my job is," said Burke, who was 19-2 with a .912 save percentage and 2.81 goals-against average in exhibitions. "I have to keep the puck out of the net against some of the greatest players in the world or we can't win."

U.S. General Manager Art Berglund said the combination of Burke in goal and the home fans in the Saddledome stands makes Canada, which opens Sunday against Poland, a tourney favorite.

"Canada's got to be the favorite," he said. "They're playing at home. The last two times we won the gold medal (1960 and 1980, actually the only two U.S. golds), we were at home."

Canada Coach Dave King said no one should be favored over the Soviet Union, winners of six of the last eight gold medals.

"They're the most talented team here by a mile," King said. "Others do not share that view."

Sweden defeated the Soviets in the World Championships, last spring and is seeded first in the Olympics. The Soviets are seeded second, Czechoslovakia third, Canada fourth, Finland fifth and the United States seventh.

The top darkhorse candidate might be sixth-seeded West Germany, which meets the United States on Feb. 21 in a game that may decide the final berth in the six-team medal round.

Forty-two games will be played during a 16-day tournament that ends with the Feb. 23 gold medal contest.

Besides the U.S.-Austria game, the other matchups in that division on Saturday are Czechoslovakia vs. West Germany and Norway vs. the Soviet Union. In addition to Canada-Poland, the other division takes the ice Sunday, featuring Sweden vs. France and Switzerland vs. Finland.

U.S. goalie situation still hasn't cleared up

By Ken Rappoport
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — Less than 24 hours before the opening game, the goaltending situation for the U.S. Olympic hockey team was still up in the air.

Coach Dave Peterson said at a news conference late Friday afternoon that he still did not know who would be in goal against Austria.

"We have three goaltenders," said Peterson, who said he might decide after a squad meeting Friday night.

The goaltending situation could be a sensitive one for Peterson, since he has been having trouble since training camp and throughout the 60-game exhibition season finding one of the three to stand out.

Mike Richter and Chris Terreri have shared most of the work, finishing with a record of 17-7-2. Richter has a slight advantage in goals-against average, 3.31 to 3.39. John Blue, the third goaltender, figures to see action only in an emergency.

Describing his two main goaltenders, Peterson said.

"Mike Richter is more traditional, a standup goalie," he said. "Terreri is a reaction goalie, to use the term that writers and the NHL people like to use. Their style kind of matches their personalities. If you know Terreri, you know he's a little wired, Richter's more laid back — on the outside, anyway."

Whalers release Tiger Williams

HARTFORD — Dave "Tiger" Williams, the NHL's all-time penalty leader, today was placed on waivers by the Hartford Whalers. The Whalers signed Williams, 34, in October to fill openings caused by injuries. He previously had played for the Los Angeles Kings. Williams had six goals and no assists in 26 games with Hartford. He also had 87 penalty minutes, pushing his career total to 3,966 minutes. "We still have 23 players on the team, and with the possibility of adding another two from the Olympic teams, we felt it best if Dave had the chance to hook up with another NHL team rather than be sent down," General Manager Emile Francis said.

Yanks, Hudson agree on terms

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees and Charles Hudson agreed on a one-year contract Friday that will pay the pitcher $450,000 plus $25,000 in incentives. The Associated Press learned. Hudson, who made $305,000 in 1987, had been scheduled for a salary arbitration hearing Monday. He had asked for $520,000 while the Yankees had offered $400,000. Hudson was 11-7 last year, his first with the Yankees, with a 3.61 earned-run average. He began the season 6-0.

Warren, McGirt in title bout

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — Frankie Warren and James "Buddy" McGirt meet Sunday in a nationally televised 15-round bout for the International Boxing Federation junior welterweight championship.

Warren, 28, of Corpus Christi, has a 24-0 record with 17 knockouts, including a 10-round decision over McGirt here in July 1986. It was McGirt's only loss in a career in which he has scored 36 victories, 31 by knockouts.

McGirt, 24, of Brentwood, N.Y., fought one draw in the first bout of his pro career, a six-rounder in March 1982. Warren is ranked the No. 1 contender by the IBF, while McGirt is No. 2. The title was vacated last year when Terry Marsh of England retired for medical reasons.

ON TOP — Bob Charles had a 1-over-par 73 Friday and held his lead at the PGA Seniors Championship.

Charles in front

Golf Roundup

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Bob Charles, protecting the lead he built with an opening-round 64, settled for a 1-over-par 73 Friday that left him three shots ahead of Orville Moody and Al Geiberger midway through the 49th PGA Seniors Championship.

His two-day total of 137 left him 7-under par after 36 holes of the tournament for golfers 50 years of age and older. Moody and Geiberger both shot 71 to stand at 4-under-par 140.

Arnold Palmer, a two-time PGA Seniors Championship winner, moved into contention with a 69. He was alone at 3-under-par 141, one shot ahead of defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez, 1986 winner Gary Player and Tommy Aaron.

Palmer's 69 was the low score of the day. His round featured an eagle on the fourth hole, five birdies and four bogeys.

Roberts has the lead

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Loren Roberts compiled a bogey-free 66 and took a one-shot lead Friday in the second round of the $600,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

Roberts, who hasn't won in seven seasons of PGA Tour activity, reached the tournament halfway point in 134, 10 shots under par on the Waialae Country Club course.

Tom Sieckmann, another non-winner, got into contention for the second week in a row with a 67 that put him one shot back at 135.

John Inman, a former national collegiate champion, had another 68 in the hot, humid, windy weather and was at 136, two shots off the lead.

Three in LPGA lead

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Swirling, gusting winds plagued Swedish rookie Liselotte Neumann in Friday's second round of the $225,000 Sarasota Classic, while LPGA veterans Beth Daniel and Jody Rosenthal rallied to pull into a three-way tie for the lead.

Neumann, who opened with a 64 Thursday, ballooned to a 5-over-par 77, including six bogeys, on the 6,170-yard Bent Tree Country Club course. Her 3-under 141 total for 36 holes left her tied with Daniel, 68-73, and Rosenthal, 71-70.

Cathy Johnston was a stroke behind the leaders at 142.

Seven players were tied at 143, including Amy Alcott, who shot a 69 for Friday's low round. Also two strokes behind the leaders were Betsy King, Patty Sheehan, Muffin Spencer-Devlin, Sherri Turner, Dot Germain and Dotti Mochrie.

Coe tops star-studded field

By Bert Rosenthal
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Sebastian Coe's first race in nine months and the presence of seven Soviet athletes, including high jumper Igor Paklin, add touches of international class to a star-studded U.S. field for Saturday night's U.S. Olympic Invitational Track and Field Meet at the Meadowlands Arena.

Coe, the 1980 and 1984 Olympic gold medalist at 1,500 meters and the world record holder at 800 meters and 1,000 meters, is making his first indoor appearance in the United States. The Briton will be competing in the 3,000 meters, using the race as a gauge for his conditioning.

Coe last raced in May 1987, a month before suffering an injury to his right Achilles' tendon during training.

"It's important to give me an idea what kind of fitness level I'm at," said Coe, whose only previous appearance in the United States came in the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics. "You can only learn from racing, not training."

In the Meadowlands 3,000, Coe will face a field that includes 1987 world indoor champion Frank O'Mara of Ireland, American record holder Doug Padilla, NCAA cross-country champion Joe Falcon of Arkansas, and Jim Spivey, the bronze medalist in the 1,500 in the 1987 World Outdoor Championships.

Like Coe, the Soviets will be making their U.S. debuts this season.

In addition to Paklin, the former world record holder in the high jump, and Olga Bryzgina, the world champion in the women's 400 meters, the Soviet group includes men's sprinters Viktor Bryzgin and Vladimir Krylov, men's hurdler Igor Kazanov, pole vaulter Rodion Gataulin and women's sprinter Natalya Pomonoshnikova.

Paklin's opposition will include U.S. indoor and outdoor record holder Jimmy Howard, fellow Americans James Loti, Doug Nordquist and Leo Williams, and Canadian Milt Otley.

Bryzgina will have a tough test in the 400, against 1984 Olympic champion Valerie Brisco, American indoor record holder Diane Dixon and 1987 NCAA champion Lillie Leatherwood-King.

Bryzgin and Krylov compete in the 55-meter dash, against a host of swift Americans, including defending champion Lee McRae, Calvin Smith, Harvey Grace, Stanley Floyd, Brian Cooper and Mark Witherspoon, along with Chidi Imoh of Nigeria.

Kazanov, running in the 55-meter high hurdles, also will challenge a fast group of Americans, including two-time world outdoor champion Greg Foster, world outdoor record holder Renato Nehemiah and 1987 IAAF Grand Prix champion Tonie Campbell.

In the pole vault, Gataulin will meet five of the top eight Americans, including Olympic medalists Earl Bell and Mike Tully, and indoor record holder Billy Olson.

Canadian Milt Otley.

Red Wings clip the Devils

DETROIT (AP) — Gerard Gallant scored two of his three goals in the third period Friday night and the Detroit Red Wings won their fourth straight game, 4-3 over the New Jersey Devils.

The victory extended Detroit's unbeaten streak to six.

Bruce Driver's career-high 10th goal of the season in the second period had given the Devils a 3-2 lead, but Gallant tied the score 2:05 into the third, taking a pass from Adam Oates and beating New Jersey goaltender Bob Sauve with a backhander from close range.

The Red Wings went ahead with 8:19 remaining when Gallant scored his 25th goal on a sharp-angle shot from the faceoff circle. The three-goal performance was the second of Gallant's career and second of the season. Gallant, a 38-goal scorer last season, tallied three times against Minnesota Dec. 18.

Special teams played a key role in the first period as the clubs scored two goals each. New Jersey's Doug Sullivan opened the scoring with a short-handed goal at 2:04, but the lead lasted just 1:36 before Detroit's Joe Kocur jammed a rebound past Sauve.

The Devils regained the lead midway through the period when Pat Conacher, playing just his sixth game for New Jersey, got his first goal. Gallant pulled the Red Wings even with 5:05 remaining, scoring on a rebound while Detroit held a man advantage. New Jersey has lost four of its last five games.

Caps 6, Islanders 2

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Dave Christian scored two goals and Michel Pivonka added a goal and two assists to lead the Washington Capitals past the New York Islanders 6-2 Friday night.

The Capitals overcame a 2-0 deficit to record their first victory over the Islanders at the Capital Centre after five consecutive losses, including the final three Patrick Division semifinal playoff games last year, and snap a six-game overall losing streak to the Islanders.

Christian tied the game at 2-2 with his 28th goal of the season at 13:17 of the first period. Mike Ridley put the Caps ahead 26 seconds later when he came out of the corner and stuffed the puck past Billy Smith.

Christian added a power-play goal at 5:14 of the third period that gave the Capitals a 5-2 advantage. Pivonka assisted on both of Christian's goals.

The Islanders took a 2-0 lead in the opening eight minutes on goals by Derek King and Randy Wood. But the Caps scored three times in less than five minutes to go ahead 3-2 and send goaltender Billy Smith to the bench.

Flames 3, Flyers 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Nieuwendyk's goal broke a second-period tie and the Calgary Flames went on to beat the Philadelphia Flyers 3-2 Friday night in a game between division leaders.

Nieuwendyk, who leads NHL rookies with 41 goals, scored his league-leading 28th power-play goal when he poked a rebound of Brett Hull's shot past Flyers goalie Ron Hextall with 4:04 remaining in the second period.

Calgary, which leads the Smythe Division, added an insurance goal when Mike Bullard deflected the puck from Flyers defenseman Brad Marsh and lifted the puck over Hextall at 10:35 of the third period.

Philadelphia, leading the Patrick Division, closed to 3-2 when Peter Zezel scored a power-play goal, beating Flames goalie Mike Vernon between the pads at 16:31. Brian Propp got his 400th career assist on the goal.

Calgary opened the scoring when a loose puck bounced off the skate of Flyers defenseman Mark Howe and into the net.

Dawson seeking $2 million salary

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Andre Dawson went before an arbitrator Friday in the first $2 million salary arbitration hearing while Juan Samuel settled for $1,060,000 and Joe Carter agreed to $840,000, a 236 percent increase.

Dawson and his agent, Dick Moss, went before arbitrator Stephen Goldberg in Chicago seeking a $2 million salary. The highest arbitration salary ever awarded is the $1,975,000 given to Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees last year.

"I'm not frustrated; I'm just tired," Dawson said after a four-hour hearing. "It's been a long two weeks."

Late in the day, Kevin Bass agreed to a two-year contract with the Houston Astros and Pat Sheridan agreed to a one-year contract with the Detroit Tigers.

In late deals Thursday, Mark Davis and Larry Sheets settled on two-year contracts.

Davis and the San Diego Padres agreed to $1,120,000. He will get $520,000 this year and $600,000 next year. He made $415,000 last year.

Sheets and the Baltimore Orioles settled at $1.2 million. He will get $540,000 in 1988, a 272 percent increase, and $660,000 in 1989. Sheets, who made $145,000 last year, can earn an additional $150,000 in incentives bonuses.

No announcement was made Friday in the case of Gary Redus, who appeared before arbitrator John Simpkins Thursday. There are 22 players remaining in arbitration.

The Cubs submitted $1,850,000 for Dawson in arbitration and Thursday offered a two-year $3.7 million contract, although the second year would not be guaranteed unless Dawson was healthy for most of this season.

"I have never experienced anything like this before in my career," Dawson said. "It's over, and the guy (Goldberg) will have to make a decision. I couldn't be more pleased with our presentation."

Dan Grenesko, a Cubs vice president, represented the team.

BIRD GUNS DOWN MAVS

NBA Roundup

DALLAS (AP) — Larry Bird scored 39 points, including a 3-pointer with four seconds left, rallying the Boston Celtics to a 105-104 NBA victory Friday night over the Dallas Mavericks.

Dallas' Derek Harper missed a 3-pointer with a second left and Kevin McHale grabbed the rebound to secure Boston's 14th all-time victory in 15 tries against the Mavs.

McHale had 20 points before a sellout crowd of 17,007 in Reunion Arena, while Mark Aguirre scored a season-high 38 points and Rolando Blackman added 20 for Dallas.

The Mavs went on a 14-0 run after the score was tied 66-all and eventually led Boston 85-78 at the end of the third period as Aguirre had 17 points in the quarter.

Dallas led 104-102 after Sam Perkins made one of two free throws with 10 seconds to go. The Celtics hurriedly inbounded the ball and found Bird at the top of the key. Bird hit the 25-footer cleanly.

Dallas outscored Boston 18-4 at the end of the second period to seize a 58-54 halftime lead. Bird scored 14 points in the first period as Boston led by as many as 12 points.

He went into the game averaging 29.4 points against the Mavs, who won 116-115 here last year.

Pistons 108, Hawks 92

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Isiah Thomas, wearing a support for his sore back, scored 17 of his 25 points in the first quarter Friday night, leading the Detroit Pistons to a 108-92 NBA victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

The Pistons, vying with the Hawks for home-court advantage in the NBA playoffs, now trails Atlanta by 1½ games in the Central Division.

The Pistons, who had failed to reach 100 points while going 3-2 in their previous five games, came out running in the first quarter.

Playing without Adrian Dantley, who missed his second straight game with a sprained right ankle, the Pistons got six points each from Thomas and Joe Dumars as they took a 15-6 lead in the first 4:24 of the game. They led the rest of the way.

Dominique Wilkins had 31 points for Atlanta and Cliff Levingston had 18. Dumars finished with 18 points for Detroit.

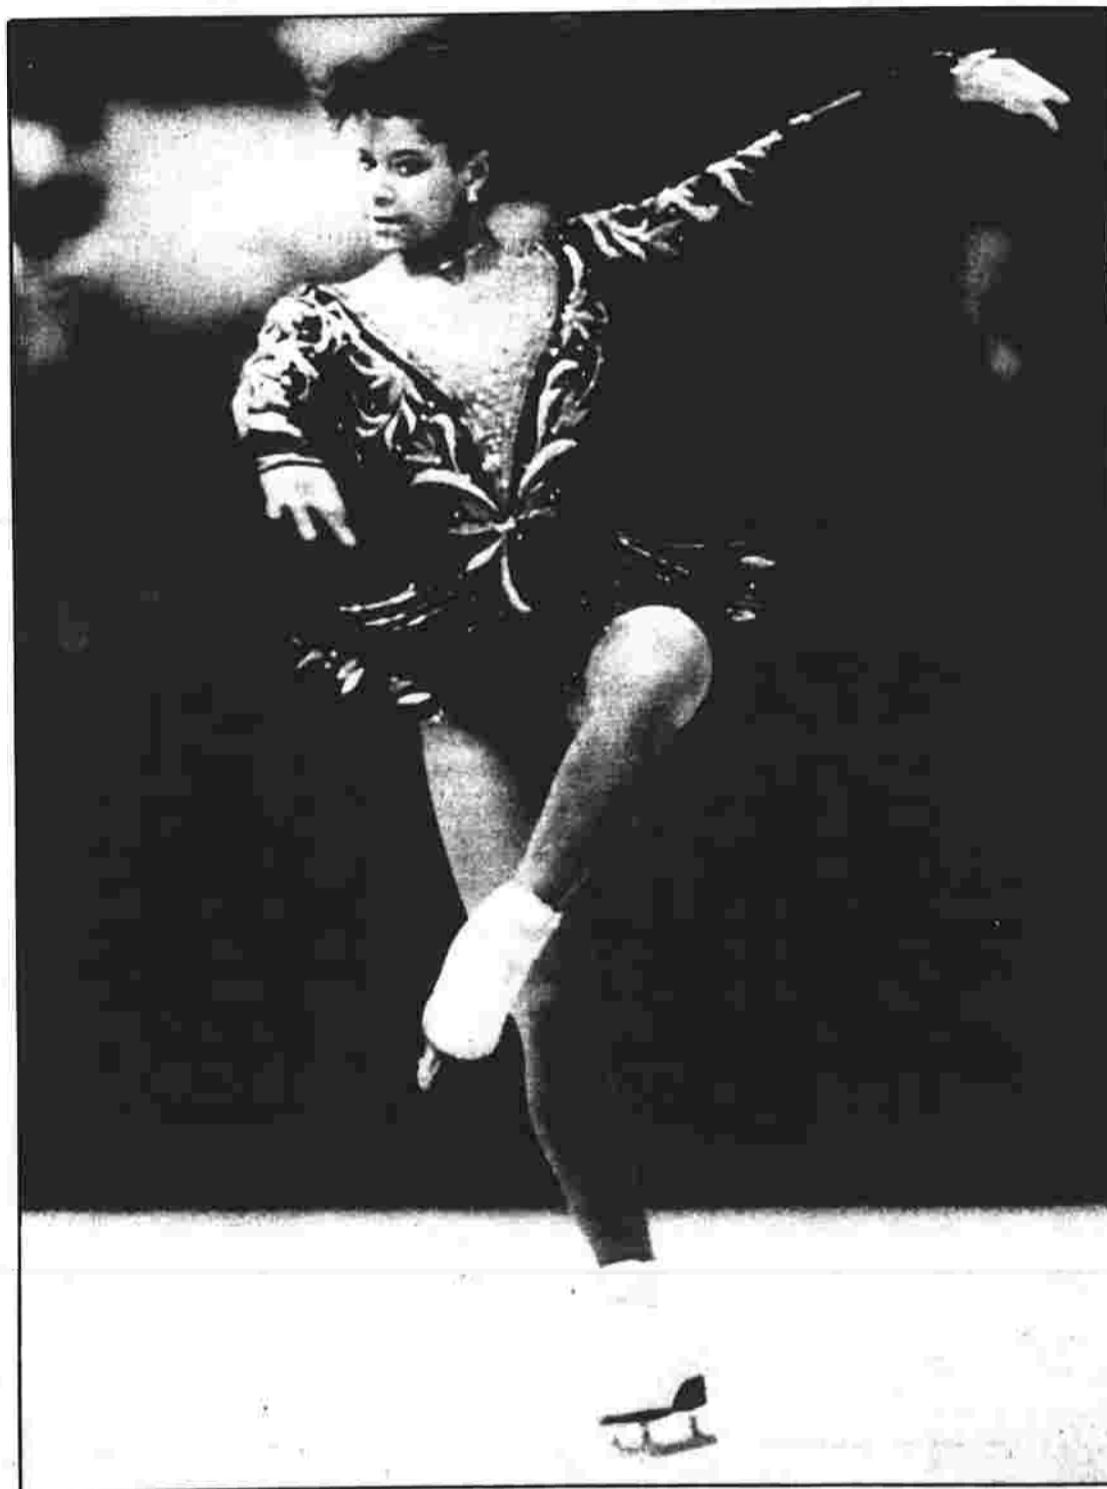

The Pistons, with Thomas connecting from all over the court — inside and outside — had a 30-19 lead with 30 seconds remaining in the first period.

The Hawks, with Wilkins hitting seven of his 20 first-half points, closed it to 40-34 with 5:49 remaining in the second quarter, but never got closer than six. Detroit led 52-43 at halftime.

Cavaliers 98, Nets 96

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Ron Harper scored 28 points and the Cleveland Cavaliers outscored New Jersey 35-6 from the free-throw line to defeat the Nets 98-96 Friday night.

The Cavaliers, winning for the seventh time in their last nine games, made only 30 percent of their field-goal attempts in the second half. But they attempted 47 free throws in the game compared to 13 for the Nets.
