PEACE TALKS HALTED

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Peace talks between the leftist Nicaraguan government and Contra rebels broke down Friday, with their mediator indirectly blaming the Sandinistas for not accepting a new cease-fire proposal.

Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the head of the Roman Catholic Church in Nicaragua, abruptly suspended the talks in mid-afternoon, expressing disappointment that his proposal had not been accepted "in principle" by both sides.

Victor Hugo Tinoco, Nicaragua's deputy foreign minister, said the cardinal called off the talks before he could deliver a formal, written response that would have accepted the mediator's five-point plan.

The plan, offered by Obando y Bravo on Thursday, called on the Contras to accept a cease-fire in exchange for four major concessions by the Sandinistas, including a total amnesty for all political prisoners and full freedom of the press.

Contra negotiators told a news conference Thursday night that they accepted the cardinal's proposal "in principle," while Tinoco called it "interesting and constructive," but said it needed clarification.

Paul Reichler, a Washington, D.C., attorney advising the Sandinistas, said earlier Friday that President Daniel Ortega had initially instructed his negotiators not to discuss Obando y Bravo's proposal at the bargaining table with the Contras.

Reichler said Ortega's instructions came by telephone Thursday night, shortly after Obando y Bravo offered his plan to break what he called an impasse in a discussion on defining the objectives of a cease-fire.

The attorney said Ortega suggested that Roger Fisher, a Harvard professor who heads the Institute for Conflict Resolution in Boston, draw up a new cease-fire proposal, drawing on proposals of the government and the Contras.

SUPPORTS POLICE — George Hughes of Dallas shows his support for the city's police department during a Friday afternoon rally. For the second time in 30 hours, Dallas police shot and killed an alleged assailant.

Rally backs Dallas cops after two suspects killed

DALLAS (AP) — A crowd of 75 people waved signs and released blue balloons Friday in support of Dallas police, after officers killed two men who threatened them with weapons in separate incidents.

Minority leaders and the City Council have berated the department for the past two years for being too trigger-happy when confronting suspects, especially blacks and Hispanics, but others have rallied around police.

There have been police casualties, too, including two officers slain last month.

Police credited new two-person patrols, begun after the second officer's death, with averting officers' death or serious injury in the latest incidents.

Early Friday, police shot and killed a white man who used a hunting knife to cut an officer who had chased the man's car during a robbery investigation.

Wednesday night, police fatally shot a black man they said pointed a loaded semiautomatic pistol at an officer who had slipped and fallen on a dark residential street and was unable to draw his gun.

The department placed the officers on routine administrative leave while it conducts an internal investigation. Tension flared last month when Police Chief Billy Prince accused council members of fostering anti-police sentiment that led to the Jan. 23 death of Officer John Chase, who was gunned down by a deranged, homeless man. Some witnesses said a few youths egged on the gunman, though others said they heard nothing of the kind.

Since then, however, the city has seen repeated shows of support for the department.

At Friday's noon rally at the John F. Kennedy Memorial, the mostly white crowd held signs and released balloons in support of the double-patrol system police say may have saved the life of one officer Wednesday and prevented further injury to the other officer Friday.

"We are here today to thank each and every peace officer across this nation for doing the job that no one else is brave enough to do," said Terri Kleinmeier, president of Citizens Offering Police Support.

Dorothy Johnson, one of the few blacks to attend the downtown rally, said there has been racial tension in the city. "But I don't take sides. A tragedy can happen to either side."

Teen held in murders went punk

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — A teen-ager was charged Friday with the ax slaying of his parents, a brother and a sister as authorities and friends puzzled for a key to the sudden change in the studious, church-going youth.

David Brom, 16, who shaved the sides of his head and fashioned his hair into spiked punk style the day of the slayings, was arrested after an all-night manhunt.

"There's a lot of tears here," said Mike Leahy, principal at Lourdes High School, where Brom was a sophomore. "There is surprise, shock and disbelief.... It may subside for a short while, but it will return."

Brom appeared calm during a 15-minute arraignment in which he was charged with four counts of first-degree murder and eight counts of second-degree murder. The charges allege different degrees of premeditation or intent. He did not enter a plea.

According to the complaint, "One person indicated that on Feb. 17, David Brom said he was going to kill his parents that night, and another person indicated that she had a telephone conversation with David Brom on Feb. 18 during which he told her he had killed his parents."

"No one knew except the friends he told, and they didn't tell anyone," said Charles Von Wald, Olmsted County sheriff. A rumor about the killings finally reached teachers at Brom's school, and they notified authorities.

The bodies of Bernard Brom, 41, his wife, Paulette, about 40, and children Diane, 14, and Rick, 9, were found in their nightclothes Thursday evening at their home in suburban Cascade Township, Von Wald said.

The four were believed to have been slain early Thursday morning, he said. A bloody, 28-inch ax was found in the basement.

Another 16-year-old who spoke with Brom hours before the bodies were found told authorities there had been a dispute between the boy and his father.

"He indicated he was having some trouble with his parents," Von Wald said. "One student said he was having trouble with his dad because of a tape he had bought, and he didn't want him listening to it."

Von Wald and police officials declined to say what the tape contained or whether it had been seized by authorities.

Classmates wept at a Mass at the Roman Catholic school, and neighbors said they had no reason to believe the family was anything but close-knit and loving.

"There's no indication there was any difficulty in the family," said the Rev. Syl Brown of the Pax Christi Roman Catholic Church.

Pictures show ships bumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon on Friday released videotape and still photographs of last week's incident in which two Navy warships were deliberately bumped by Soviet vessels in the Black Sea.

The photographs document the Pentagon's assertion the destroyer USS Caron and cruiser USS Yorktown were hit on purpose by the Soviet ships.

Indeed, the videotape shows the Yorktown was bumped not once as originally reported, but twice as it steamed on a straight course.

The Feb. 12 confrontation occurred off the Soviet Union's Crimea peninsula after the two Navy vessels were ordered to assert their international navigation rights by sailing within 12 miles of the Soviet coast.

Unlike the United States, which claims a three-mile territorial limit, the Soviet Union claims a 12-mile limit along its coast. The United States insists that any country claiming 12 miles must still allow for "innocent passage" by foreign ships through waters beyond three miles.

The Soviets have charged the Navy warships provoked the incident by ignoring warnings to move beyond 12 miles and by maneuvering dangerously around their ships. The videotape does not show the American vessels maneuvering at all, but rather the two Soviet ships approaching them on an angle and then moving in for the collision.

In the footage shot aboard the Yorktown, American sailors can be heard in the background swearing and yelling.

While only minor damage was caused, the first collision between the Yorktown and a Soviet frigate was sufficiently strong that the cameraman lost control of his camera.

Pro-Iranian group has Marine's ID cards

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — A pro-Iranian group Friday claimed responsibility for kidnapping a U.S. Marine colonel serving with U.N. peacekeeping forces and released identity cards bearing his photograph.

It alleged that Lt. Col. William R. Higgins was a spy for the "Satanic CIA." U.S. and U.N. officials denied the charges.

In a rescue attempt, Shiite Muslim militiamen spent a second day searching rain-swept citrus groves and cave-lined valleys for Higgins, who disappeared Wednesday.

The searchers, who belong to the Amal militia headed by Justice Minister Nabih Berri, also seized six activists of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah in pre-dawn house raids in Tyre and accused them of involvement in the plot.

Higgins, 43, of Danville, Ky., was head of a 76-man United Nations observer force in south Lebanon. About 15 of the observers assigned to the force are Americans.

Observers from the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization work alongside the 5,800-strong United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, deployed in 1978 at the Lebanon-Israel border.

Gunmen abducted the colonel south of Tyre as he drove to UNIFIL headquarters in the border town of Naqoura. U.N. officials initially said that Higgins was violating U.N. rules for travel by Americans.

But a U.N. spokesman in New York said Friday that Higgins did not violate travel restrictions.

"As all his predecessors, he travelled freely in the area without escort," said Mario Zamorano, a spokesman for the U.N. secretary-general.

In Washington, President Reagan said the United States will not withdraw Americans from the U.N. observer group in Lebanon despite the abduction. Earlier in the day, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci had said U.S. officials were studying a withdrawal plan.

The responsibility claim came in a typewritten Arabic statement from the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth. It called Higgins "one of the biggest spies planting daily terror in our land."

It alleged that Higgins used his observer role as a cover for espionage work.

U.S. officials have denied that Higgins has links with the CIA, and

Mediator suspends peace talk

Obando y Bravo issued a communique rejecting the government's suggestion that Fisher draft a new truce proposal. The cardinal said he felt that was the proper task of technical advisers on each side.

No new date was set for further negotiations, although both sides expressed their willingness to continue the talks. They said it would be up to the cardinal to suggest a time and place for further discussions.

The cardinal's communique said that "after all the meetings that they have had, the mediators believe that the acceptance, in principle, of its proposal would favor the rapid advance of the cease-fire negotiations."

The communique also said the government and the Contras should give their negotiators "enough decision-making ability to resolve problems that present themselves in the negotiations."

In a news conference after the talks ended, Jaime Morales, the chief Contra negotiator, said his team had the ability to make decisions on the spot, noting that the rebels had accepted Obando y Bravo's proposal Thursday night.

"We took a position and the press is witness to the fact," Morales said. "We accepted the proposal in principle, and the other side did not."

Tinoco, on the other hand, blamed the Contras for the breakdown in the negotiations.

"It was our impression that the Contras were systematically rejecting all discussion of a cease-fire," he told reporters. "The Contras continue to be advised by people in the (Reagan) administration who want to continue the war."

During a break in the talks Friday morning, Reichler told reporters that Ortega felt the Guatemala City talks should be confined solely to the mechanics of establishing a cease-fire and not become a forum for political discussions.

U.N. Undersecretary-General Mar rack Goulding echoed that denial Friday in a news conference at Naqoura.

"We do not recruit spies. Everyone here works for the United Nations," he said.

The Oppressed of the Earth said it would release Higgins following a complete Israeli withdrawal from its security zone in south Lebanon. It also demanded the release of an estimated 300 Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners held in the Israeli-supervised Kham detention camp in south Lebanon and the immediate cessation of U.S. activity in Lebanon.

The communique was delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut along with photocopies of two identity cards, one in English and one in Hebrew.

Making money in the summer season

College workshops help students find employment early

By Anita M. Caldwell
Manchester Herald

For students looking for summer jobs, now's the time to begin the search.

Just ask Gail Grabowski, the assistant director of Career Services and Placement at Manchester Community College said that too many students wait until the spring to begin looking for a job.

"This is the time they should be looking," she said, adding that the students don't realize how long a job search takes.

Grabowski said the Career Services department offers three summer job workshops between February and May to help students prepare for lining up summer jobs, whether it's for career-related work experience or general work experience.

"Community College students aren't aware of their options as much as the students in four-year schools," Grabowski said.

The workshop helps students with job choices and how to find information about the job they're interested in.

Grabowski said she tells students to be professional in their job search and to approach a summer job choice in the same manner as they would a permanent job. She emphasizes sending a cover letter and resume.

Students should also set priorities regarding salary, location of the job and whether the job is going to be a career-related work experience, she said.

Consider "what you have to offer and what is out there to do, and making the match between the two," Grabowski said.

Though she would like to see students take a more active role using the services offered at the school for job searches, Grabowski said most students at least start thinking about their chosen fields early.

"It's actually at the end of their first year that they think about career experiences," Grabowski said.

To help students learn about jobs outside the workshops, the school offers a job bank.

The job bank is a listing of a variety of jobs and descriptions on computer which any student can use to investigate salary, location and specific skill requirements.

"It gives you a lot of suggestions and job opportunities," said 18-year-old Terry Mancino, a student at MCC. "It helped because it told me (the job required) an elementary ed major

FINDING WORK — Gail Grabowski, assistant director of career services at Manchester Community College, prepares for a job workshop with students. She says students should start looking early for summer employment.

For example, Grabowski encourages students to look into summer camps.

"They're wonderful," she said. "They're an excellent opportunity for students to get a meaningful summer experience; to live someplace else."

"I used it for a job last summer," said Bontempo, who is studying criminal justice.

Bontempo said it made it easy for him to find out about salary and hours.

Not all summer jobs need to be career-related work experience, Grabowski pointed out.

Depending on the student's major, she said, students may want to find work that is lighter and save the career-related experience for during the year.

build interpersonal skills. Grabowski said she hopes the workshops help students get an early jump on job hunting.

"That's exactly what Mancino says the program does."

"What the computer didn't give you, they (workshops) gave extra information," said Terry Mancino.

Other workshops planned at MCC will be held on Tuesday, March 1 from 5 to 6 p.m. and Wednesday, April 13 from 5 to 6 p.m. assistance. Ather and Mears performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation until an ambulance arrived. The heart-attack victim later died at the hospital, but at the ceremony this month, United Technologies Chairman Robert F. Daniell praised Ather and Mears for their efforts and their knowledge of CPR.

"We all would like to hope that someone will be there for us, at a critical moment, to bring us back from the edge of death," Daniell said.

The award, which has been presented to nearly 12,000 people since 1928, recognizes those who use Red Cross training to save or sustain human life. It was approved in Washington, D.C. and signed by President Reagan and National American Red Cross Chairman George F. Moody.

Hospital sues town over bills

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

Manchester Memorial Hospital is suing the town for more than $40,000 in general assistance funds for eight low-income patients whose bills have not been paid.

But attorneys for both the town and the hospital said the lawsuit is a common one and will probably be settled out of court.

Town Attorney David Wichman said patients who apply for general assistance funds for medical care through the town Social Services Department must meet strict income requirements outlined in the state statutes and the Department of Income Maintenance policy. If the patients don't qualify, the town won't pay the bills.

The suit filed this week lists costs for eight patients, treated between 1983 and 1986. The amounts requested from the town are between $630 and $10,796.

Ellen Jones, Social Services Director for the town, said the town and state first must verify that the patient is or was at the time of his treatment a resident of the town. The person must meet the state standard for income, which means that he cannot make more than $358 per month, the cost of living for one person.

The patient cannot have any real property, Jones said. The patient cannot have transferred any assets within the past two years with the intent of qualifying for general assistance funds or have any claims, inheritance, or insurance, Jones said.

When patients apply for assistance, Wichman said, representatives from the Department of Income Maintenance and the Manchester Department of Social Services review the applications and determine which patients the town can cover under the state regulations.

The town is reluctant to pay the bills for those patients that don't qualify because it will lose the 90 percent reimbursement the state gives to the town for patients who do qualify, Wichman said. As a result, hospitals are often forced to sue the towns for the money.

"We're in a Catch 22 situation," Wichman said. Wichman and Jones agreed that the courts tend to favor the hospitals in most of these cases.

"The courts have not been kind to DIM regulations," Wichman said. Rather than use the DIM policy, Jones said, "the judge goes by the state statute and gives it a more liberal interpretation."

Attorney Robert D. Tobin of Dupont, Tobin, Levin, Carberry & O'Malley of New London, the firm handling Manchester Memorial Hospital's case, said most of these cases are settled out of court. Tobin's firm, which handles most of these cases throughout the state, is considered an expert in this type of litigation, Jones said.

"The largest percentage gets resolved in favor of the hospital," Tobin said.

But, he added, "in the vast majority of cases, the towns get reimbursed the full 90 percent."

Tobin said that although there are legitimate cases when patients don't qualify for the funds, many times the town simply doesn't know what the state expects for information on these cases. But, Tobin said, communication between the state and towns has gotten better over the past few years, and towns have a better idea how to get reimbursement.

"A few years ago, there was a lot more uncertainty about the regulations," he said. "Now, the path toward reimbursement is clearer."

CHILDHOOD CANCER
Research substantiates that pregnant women who smoke usually have babies who are smaller at birth and have an increased risk of dying during the first few days of life. The data for children of women who smoked 10 or more cigarettes daily during pregnancy, shows the incidence of cancer and leukemia in their children is essentially twice as high as "normal". The cancer-prone effect persists to some extent even after they become adults.

Meals resume on Monday

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Jeanette Cave
Senior Center Director

The Senior Citizens' Center will resume its meals program on Monday, Feb. 22. Don't forget to make your reservations for the Thursday meal no later than noon on Tuesday. Thursday's program will be conducted by the Audubon Society and will feature a slide presentation, "A Walk in the Woods." The program will also focus on bringing more bluebirds into the area. With this in mind, bluebird houses will be distributed to people who meet specified criteria.

The center's golf leagues are raring to get started for another season of fun. The men's league will meet March 16 at 7 p.m. at the center. The ladies' league will meet March 30 at 1:30 p.m. This year the ladies' league will also play at the Manchester Country Club and will begin play on May 2. These meetings are mandatory. Congratulations to Vic Coleman, who defeated Wen Johnson in the best-of-seven series of an eight-ball tournament.

A workshop in Pysanky (Ukrainian Easter eggs) will be offered twice: March 24 and March 31 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Each class will be limited to 10 persons, and will cost $1 to cover the cost of materials. Call the office to register.

We have been experiencing a large amount of no-shows from people who don't bother to call and cancel an activity for which they registered. We are beginning to monitor no-shows and will only put these persons on a waiting list and allow them to register after all others have done so. We ask that you be considerate, for someone else could have taken your place.

Please make note of the following activities and programs:
Feb. 29 — 10 a.m., "All you wanted to know and were afraid to ask about AIDS," conducted by the Manchester Health Department.

March 3 — Fidelco Guide Dogs Foundation will present a slide show on the training of guide dogs for the blind. A representative will bring a guide dog along for a demonstration.

March 7 — 10 to 11:30 a.m., Handyman/Handywoman Home Repair begins for four weeks. Register in the office.

Graduate becomes prexy

NEW LONDON (AP) — A graduate of Connecticut College has been named its eighth president, the school announced Friday.

Claire Lynn Gaudiani, a 1966 graduate of the school, will officially become president of the 1,600-student college July 1, succeeding Oakes Ames.

Gaudiani is currently acting associate director of the Joseph H. Lauder Institute for Management and International Studies at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, Pa. At the institute, Gaudiani directs the graduate language and culture program.

The appointment marks the first time in the college's 77-year history that a graduate of the school has been named its president.

Gaudiani could not be reached for comment at her Philadelphia home Friday night.

Obituaries

Alice Adamsons

Alice (Vitins) Adamsons of West Hartford, died Friday morning at Manchester Memorial Hospital. She was the widow of Arnold Adamsons, who died in 1975.

She was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, Aug. 26, 1904, the daughter of the late Hermanis and Elna Vitins. She lived in Lebanon, Conn., and Vernon for many years before moving to West Hartford four months ago.

She was a member of the Latvian Evangelical Lutheran Church of Willimantic.

She is survived by one son, Atis Adamsons of West Hartford; two sisters, Nora and Berta, both in Latvia; one granddaughter, Karina Urtans Bennett of East Hartford; and two grandsons, Karl and Scott Adamsons, both of West Hartford.

The funeral will be Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the Latvian Evangelical Lutheran Church, 76 Windham Road, Willimantic. Burial will be at the convenience of the family in Latvian Memorial Park Cemetery, Elka Park, N.Y. There are no calling hours. The Cardinal-Gagne-Pichowski Funeral Home, 88 Windham Road, Willimantic, is in charge of arrangements.

Memorial donations may be made to the Latvian Memorial Park Cemetery, Elka Park, N.Y. 12427, or to the Latvian Evangelical Lutheran Church, 76 Windham Road, Willimantic 06226.

Connecticut in Brief

$8.5 million cancer center set

NEW HAVEN — The Hospital of St. Raphael will build a $8.5 million, full-service cancer center here, administrators say.

The new, 22,000-square-foot center will provide radiation services, chemotherapy, laboratory services, counseling, education and support programs for cancer patients, officials announced Thursday.

The project also includes two new linear accelerators for radiation therapy, costing $1 million each, and a new computerized treatment system costing $190,000, said Dr. Arthur L. Knowlton, the hospital's director of radiation therapy.

Lieberman not in conflict

HARTFORD — State Attorney General Joseph Lieberman was within the boundaries of the state's conflict of interest code when he accepted $6,150 in contributions for his U.S. Senate campaign from executives of a company awaiting a legal opinion from his office, an official said Friday.

Alan S. Plofsky, investigator for the state Ethics Commission, said he learned about the contributions from a newspaper article, but said, "It's not a conflict of interest under the code of ethics" for elected officials.

"If, in any way, (a candidate) tied some action to getting a contribution from someone, we'd slam him under the code," Plofsky said.

"But as long as it's a political contribution that's within the law, and I'm sure it is, it's not a conflict."

'Lollipop' issue still unsettled

HARTFORD — House Speaker Irving J. Stolberg said Friday he hopes to have a special committee resolve the issue of a censure against a legislator who referred to homosexuals as "lollipops."

Stolberg, D-New Haven, has been trying for several weeks to resolve the issue with House Minority Leader Robert G. Jaekle, R-Stratford, and avoid having the resolution come to a vote on the House floor.

The offending remark was made by Rep. Eugene A. Migliaro Jr., R-Wolcott, and Rep. Paul Gionfriddo, D-Middletown, wants Migliaro reprimanded. The resolution he drafted doesn't use the word censure, but Gionfriddo said it would amount to the same thing.

Cops take on booze providers

MADISON — A police warning that they're cracking down on people who provide alcohol to minors at parties follows an incident in which a drunken 16-year-old girl passed out on a lawn outside a home and was sexually fondled.

Police said they arrested three people earlier this week on charges stemming from a party on Nov. 21, 1987 in which the girl became intoxicated. She was taken by ambulance to Yale-New Haven Hospital, where her blood-alcohol level was measured at .447, police Sgt. William G. Dana Sr. said Thursday.

"That kind of blood-alcohol level could have meant death," Dana said. He said the girl survived. "We've had an ongoing problem with alcohol abuse in town," he said. "We are issuing a warning that we will arrest anyone who sells, dispenses or supplies alcohol beverages to minors."

Couple facing more charges

PLYMOUTH (AP) — Police say they have filed additional charges against a married couple already accused of sexually abusing an undetermined number of children whom they photographed in the nude.

Police have charged Nikolai Zarick, 32, with 11 counts of risk of injury to a minor and seven counts of second-degree sexual assault. Zarick's wife, Robin, 26, was charged with 11 counts of risk of injury and one of delivering liquor to a minor.

Police arrested Zarick at his home in Plymouth shortly before 6 p.m. Thursday. Mr. Zarick, who now lives at her mother's house in Wolcott, was arrested there by Wolcott police around 7:30 p.m. Thursday, authorities said.

Insurers opposing unisex plan say women remain better risks

HARTFORD (AP) — Insurance industry lobbyists on Friday urged a legislative committee to defeat a bill aimed at prohibiting sex discrimination in insurance rates.

They said that insurance costs are based on risks, and women, especially in areas such as life insurance, are better risks, so the cost of premiums is lower for women.

But representatives of the state's Permanent Commission on the Status of Women told the Judiciary Committee that any kind of discrimination based on sex is illegal in Connecticut and said the bill should be passed.

"Equality is the law in this state," said Gail K. Hamm, the commission's legislative coordinator. "And if sex is used to treat individuals differently in the issuance or pricing of insurance in this state, that practice is unconstitutional. Period."

She acknowledged that if the bill becomes law, women would pay more for some types of insurance, specifically life and auto insurance for women under the age of 25. She said health insurance costs would go down for women and up for men, if the bill passes.

"Women do not need to be treated in a preferential way, nor do we choose to be protected or taken care of by insurance companies," Hamm said. "In the long term, once sex has been eliminated as a factor, the result will be that men and women will be treated equally in all areas of insurance."

Barbara J. Lautzenheiser, an insurance actuary speaking on behalf of the Insurance Association of Connecticut, said the bill's intent "is constructive and laudable, but its effect is destructive and implausible."

"Any group that can be identified as having lower costs is given a cheaper price," she said. "Women are a lower cost group, justifying lower, more competitive life insurance prices."

"And similarly, in auto (insurance) for young men and women driving the same number of miles, women have fewer accidents and hence lower costs," she said.

Lautzenheiser said the same justification is used in offering discounts to non-smokers.

She said proponents of the bill were trying to "equalize something which just isn't equal."

State warns partners about AIDS

HARTFORD (AP) — The sexual partners of some people who test positive for the AIDS virus will be contacted by state officials under a new program already under fire from advocates of AIDS sufferers.

The pilot program funded with about $100,000 in federal money will begin in the southern part of Connecticut, possibly as soon as April, said Dr. James L. Hadler, chief of epidemiology for the state Department of Health Services.

He said the program will be launched first in New Haven, Bridgeport, Norwalk and Stamford, but health officials hope to expand it if the legislature approves $200,000 for "contact tracing" included in Gov. William A. O'Neill's proposed budget for 1988-89.

State health workers in the program will ask people who test positive for the AIDS virus to name sexual partners who could have been infected, Hadler said.

Those people will be contacted, told they "were named by someone who may be infected with the AIDS virus," and advised to seek counseling and testing for the AIDS virus, he said.

"The purpose is to attempt to let people who might not otherwise have known that they may have been exposed to the AIDS virus," Hadler said.

But the Rev. Brendan McCormick, president of AIDS Project Greater New Britain, said he does not think the program will work because few people will want to divulge the names of their sexual partners.

"It is my experience that people who think they are sick or have the AIDS virus will not go to be tested if they have to give their names," McCormick said.

"If people are not willing to give their own name, I think they will be equally reluctant to give the names of other people."

Hadler said the state has always considered contact tracing a possibility, but it was not a high priority until money became available.

Bail denied for Wells Fargo defendant

HARTFORD (AP) — A federal judge Friday denied bail for a Wells Fargo robbery defendant imprisoned without bail for a record 30 months while awaiting trial.

U.S. District Court Judge T. Emmet Clarie turned down the request of Filiberto Ojeda Rios, who pleaded with the court on Jan. 26 to release him on bail or grant him an immediate trial.

"The defendant is a risk of flight and a great danger to persons and the community," Clarie said in a 40-page, written ruling.

Clarie noted that when Ojeda Rios was arrested in Puerto Rico in August 1985, there was a shootout with FBI agents, and one agent was wounded.

He also said that the continued detention of Ojeda Rios without bail doesn't violate the defendant's 5th Amendment right to due process of law. Ojeda Rios has been held longer without bail than any other defendant in federal judicial history.

Rios had argued that the pre-trial detention was a violation of international law and denied allegations that he was a Cuban agent.

On Feb. 11, Clarie set bail at $1 million for Juan Enrique Segarra

Palmer, who had also been held for 30 months without bail. Attorneys said it would take some time to arrange for property owned by Segarra Palmer's father in Puerto Rico to be used as security for the bail so the defendant could be released.

In Segarra's case, Clarie said that the defendant's constitutional rights would be violated if the government continued to hold him without setting bail.

Prosecutors had argued against any bail, saying that Segarra Palmer was likely to flee if set free.

Clarie said Segarra Palmer is still a "risk of flight," but he does not pose a "risk to other persons" as required to hold him without bail under the federal Bail Reform Act.

Clarie said that while Segarra Palmer has been linked by federal authorities to an attack on the Muniz Air Base in Puerto Rico in January 1981 that resulted in nine aircraft being destroyed "this operation involved the destruction of property, not the threat to human lives."

Sixteen defendants are charged in robbery of $7 million from the Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford on September 1983.

Experts say print implicates suspect in reporter killing

HARTFORD (AP) — A fingerprint found on a pair of scissors near the body of a slain newspaper reporter is that of a suspect arrested in the case and not a police investigator's, a panel of fingerprint experts said in upholding an FBI finding in the matter.

James E. McDonald, a forensics expert who took part in the murder investigation, disagreed with the FBI ruling on the fingerprint, contending it was his own print.

But the seven members of the International Association of Identification's certification board disputed his claim, McDonald said Friday.

"I heard they agree with the FBI," McDonald said. "It doesn't matter to me. They read it (the print) backward like the FBI did. They're going to have to show me in court."

McDonald commented while waiting to testify at the probable cause hearing for Joseph Lomax, 22, of Hartford, who is charged in the murder of Kara Laczynski, 24, a reporter for the Journal Inquirer newspaper of Manchester.

Lomax was arrested on Dec. 24, 1987 and charged with felony murder, murder and first-degree burglary in the slaying of Laczynski, a Union, N.J., native whose body was found in her Hartford apartment by a co-worker on Oct. 5, 1987.

The FBI and the state police have said the print found on a pair of scissors in Laczynski's apartment matches Lomax's left pinky finger print.

But McDonald, who worked with Hartford police on the case, claims their identification was wrong. He was subpoenaed to court by prosecutors and came equipped with an armful of fingerprint blow-ups to use during his testimony.

McDonald's appearance on the stand was short, however. He was asked to examine copies of the fingerprint and testified that he had made them. He also was asked how fingerprints are made.

McDonald didn't get a chance to testify about the controversy because Assistant State's Attorney Dennis O'Connor didn't raise the issue. Since prosecutors didn't question McDonald on the dispute, defense attorneys also were blocked from exploring the matter.

O'Connor said that under court procedure defense attorneys could pursue the matter after the state has concluded its presentation. McDonald said he would return Tuesday and expected to testify more fully at that time.

Under state law, the fingerprint is enough evidence to charge a suspect with murder.

Earlier Friday, Hartford police Detective James Pasquell described the murder scene and evidence investigators collected.

"I saw the scissors when I first entered the apartment. They were a few inches from her (Laczynski's) head. James McDonald secured those," Pasquell testified.

"I saw Mr. McDonald bend down and pick up the scissors by the black handle. That's the last time I saw them until later when they were sitting on a kitchen counter," the detective said.

Max celebrated his birthday at a fabulous place.

Chances are, Max won't remember what a great time he had at The Family Birthing Center at Manchester Memorial Hospital. But his parents will never forget the wonderful experience.

From the moment they arrived, they enjoyed the special attention and personal care that are so hard to come by in some of the bigger hospitals. Throughout labor and delivery, Max's parents had the support of their own nurse in the privacy of their own birthing room, using the prepared child-birth methods they learned at the Center. After Max's arrival they celebrated with photo-taking, a champagne toast and hugs all around. All with the security and confidence that Max and Mom were getting the expert medical attention of Manchester Memorial's top-notch doctors and nursing staff.

After delivery, Mom was settled into her comfortable room where Max was welcome to "room-in" anytime. Dad even spent the night! The next day, Mom and Dad shared a special "Stork Club" gourmet dinner and got instructions on how to care for their little birthday boy.

If you see a "birth day" celebration in your future, The Family

Birthing Center would be delighted to show you their facilities and offer you more information. After all, doesn't your baby deserve as warm a welcome as little Max?

U.S./World In Brief

Arabs, soldiers in new clashes

JERUSALEM — Arabs and Israeli soldiers fought with stones and tear gas after Friday Moslem prayers, a weekly ritual in the occupied lands since riots began Dec. 8, and hundreds of police reinforcements moved into Jerusalem.

No deaths or serious injuries were reported during clashes in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel has occupied since capturing them from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war. Fifty-five Palestinians have been killed in the two weeks of violence, according to U.N. figures.

Neil Kinnock, leader of Britain's opposition Labor Party who is visiting Israel, said soldiers are using soft-nosed dum-dum bullets, which expand when they hit a target and cause greater damage. Israeli officials have denied similar charges by Palestinian doctors.

Swaggart under investigation

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart is under investigation by his church over matters that could cost him his credentials, the Assemblies of God said Friday.

CBS News and ABC News reported later Friday that church officials had received information about alleged sexual misconduct by Swaggart. There was no immediate confirmation from the Assemblies of God.

The 13-member Executive Presbytery of the Assemblies of God met in closed session with Swaggart at the church's international headquarters for nearly 10 hours Thursday.

Reagan, Kohl talk arms control

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl agreed Friday to devise a comprehensive Western arms control strategy to confront the Soviet Union with "realism, strength and alliance unity."

Kohl ended a two-day trip to Washington with a meeting and lunch at the White House in which he and Reagan congratulated each other on the recently signed Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces Treaty and hailed a NATO effort to sort out potentially conflicting arms control goals.

"We agreed that we must deal with the Soviet Union from a position of realism, strength and alliance unity," Reagan said in an East Room farewell to the chancellor.

Shultz is likely to visit Syria

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz "most likely" will visit Syria when he goes to the Middle East next week and is leaving his options open for a return to the region after a NATO summit meeting in early March, U.S. officials said Friday.

As Shultz set out for Moscow on a trip in which he will seek Soviet backing for his peace-making venture, his Mideast journey was taking on dramatic new proportions.

Shultz's purpose in going to Damascus would be to discuss the U.S. drive for Arab-Israeli negotiations with President Hafez Assad, whose support for any long-term settlement in the Middle East is considered essential by specialists in the State Department's Near East bureau.

Pollard had Navy list of Jews

WASHINGTON — The parents of convicted spy Jonathan J. Pollard said Friday that Navy investigators showed him a list of names of 25 American Jews and asked him to identify those who helped him commit espionage for Israel.

"They kept badgering him to indicate which of those on the list was involved in the spy plot," said Morris Pollard, a professor of microbiology at the University of Notre Dame.

Both the senior Pollard and his son denied that Jonathan Pollard had an accomplice in spying for Israel. Their statement came after The Washington Post reported Friday that government investigators had concluded that someone in the CIA or Defense Department also had spied for Israel.

WILLIAM PALEY
... critical condition

CBS founder in bad shape

NEW YORK (AP) — William Paley, founder and chairman of CBS, was in critical condition Friday suffering from lung and kidney failure, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 86-year-old executive has been in critical condition since undergoing gall bladder surgery Feb. 11, said Elizabeth Erlanger of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Paley built the Columbia Broadcasting System from a fledgling radio network that he bought in 1928. He controlled it for more than half a century, turning over the reins in 1983.

When CBS's biggest stockholder, Loew's Corp., became unhappy with his successor's policies, Paley teamed with Loew's chairman Lawrence Tisch to retake control in 1986.

Bush, Dole debate; Dems try to cool it

By The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush suggested Friday that GOP presidential rival Bob Dole was "angry and bitter" over his loss in New Hampshire but Dole countered "we'll see who's dispirited" after Tuesday's Midwestern contests. Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk told his squabbling presidential candidates to cool it.

The Democratic candidates save Sen. Albert Gore Jr. debated in St. Paul, Minn., ahead of the South Dakota primary and Minnesota caucuses, while the Republicans debated over a debate that dwindled to just two candidates.

Rep. Richard Gephardt and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis drew fire from their Democratic presidential rivals in the free-wheeling debate that indicated their status following wins in Iowa and New Hampshire.

At the Republican debate in Dallas, reduced to a one-on-one event by the refusal of Dole and Pat Robertson to participate, both Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp said they regretted the boycott and said it would hurt their opponents.

Bush and Kemp clashed bitterly over nuclear defense strategy, as Bush asserted the New York congressman won't understand war until "you've seen your fellow man drop dead."

In Oklahoma City earlier, Bush suggested that Dole was brooding over New Hampshire.

"You learn that the rodeo is full of hard encounters with the ground and you learn to pick yourself up and dust yourself off and get back on the horse again," Bush said.

"So you don't get angry and bitter when you get defeated. You pick yourself back up and get back on the horse and go on and win the next election."

But in Lexington, Ky., Dole shrugged off Bush.

"We're ready to go. We're ready for the next round in South Dakota and Minnesota and we'll see who wins those two. We'll see who's dispirited Wednesday morning next week," he said.

With only a few days to go, a Bush aide said the campaign was "pulling out" of South Dakota. "We're going to concentrate our resources on the South. And Dole got an enormous bump from Iowa," said the aide, who did not want to be identified.

Gore skipped the Democratic debate to make a money run to California, where he took a question about which of his rivals were Democratic deadwood.

"Mike Dukakis, Jesse Jackson and Dick Gephardt — all three represent an old approach that has been associated with losing four out of the last five elections," he said.

And rival Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois reversed his earlier statement that he could not continue his campaign unless he won either South Dakota or Minnesota next week.

"I'm in this race until Atlanta," Simon said first in Sioux Falls, S.D., then in Minneapolis. "And we're going to begin with the strongest show of support we can muster from committed Democrats in South Dakota and Minnesota who seek a fundamental change in America's direction."

WIND DAMAGE — Jim Roth, a Pacific Bell maintenance worker, walks through the charred ruins of a roofing company in East Los Angeles after a fire — caused by arcing electrical wires in high winds — destroyed the building and three nearby homes Friday.

Fierce Santa Ana winds cause death and damage

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The second blast of fierce Santa Ana winds in a week raked southern California, felling trees that killed a child, downing dozens of power lines and fanning fires that left about 50 people homeless Friday.

Damage to buildings and danger from flying debris forced a school district to cancel classes for 20,000 students, and the Coast Guard searched the stormy ocean for a missing yachtsman.

The latest blast of high wind hit late Thursday and before dawn Friday and reached 70 mph at Monument Peak in San Diego County, where Interstate 8 was temporarily closed, and 50 mph at Ontario International Airport, the National Weather Service said.

However, high wind warnings were canceled when the wind-generating high pressure system over Nevada and Utah weakened. The wind whistling over the mountains, deserts and coastal canyons was expected to end by Saturday morning.

Santa Ana winds are caused by high pressure areas over Utah and Nevada which send air flowing down into California. Although they are commonly associated with insufferable summer heat, Santa Anas are very common in February, said weather service forecaster Bob Grebe.

The death toll for the week's winds reached five late Thursday when gusts up to 60 mph hit Yosemite National Park, knocking down a ponderosa pine that crushed 9-year-old Jasmine Bitts of Garden Grove, Calif., when it fell on a cabin. The girl's mother and a companion suffered minor injuries.

Hundreds of campers were ordered from the area, but it was reopened by midmorning, said park spokeswoman Lisa Dapprich.

Falling trees damaged at least five cabins, she said. Thirty utility poles toppled in the morning in San Bernardino County, blacking out 6,300 Southern California Edison customers in the Rialto area, said spokeswoman Pat Messigian. The Los Angeles Department of Water and Power reported 28,000 customers with outages. In all, 112,000 customers lost power at one time or another.

Offshore, Coast Guard aircraft and a cutter searched for Chris Dodd, 28, of Los Altos, who was reported overdue Thursday. His 30-foot boat failed to show up Wednesday in San Pedro after setting sail from Santa Catalina Island in high seas, said Petty Officer James McPherson.

Balloons help stop strokes

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Some people with dangerously weakened blood vessels in the head may benefit from a new therapy that permanently inserts balloons in the arteries that supply the brain with blood, researchers said Friday.

The technique appears a highly effective way of preventing strokes in people with bulging arteries at the base of the brain, the researchers said.

Doctors have experimented with the technique for several years, but they say the latest refinements have overcome earlier drawbacks and should make it a safe way to stop lethal attacks in some people.

The treatment is designed to block off vessels that are likely to burst, flooding the brain with blood. Doctors from the University of Illinois in Chicago said they have tried it on 14 people, and in 13 of them it appears to be working well.

All of the patients had giant aneurysms. These are bulging weak spots, often an inch across, in one of the two internal carotid arteries that supply blood to the brain.

About 1,500 people are diagnosed with this condition in the United States each year.

Panama shows interest in bargain on Noriega

WASHINGTON (AP) — At Panama's request, a high State Department official sounded out the Justice Department about the possibility of dropping drug trafficking charges against Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega, the State Department said Friday.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams made the inquiry before meeting privately Wednesday in Miami with Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle. State Department spokesman Charles Redman said.

Redman suggested that Abrams anticipated that Delvalle would raise the possibility at their meeting.

Redman denied an account in The New York Times that said Abrams told Delvalle the indictment might be dropped if Noriega withdrew from politics and went into exile. The Times cited U.S. officials and congressional staff members as its source.

Redman said Abrams met with Justice Department officials merely to ask for a "legal opinion." Abrams was told it was "technically legal" and passed that information on to Delvalle, he said.

Raising of the possibility suggested Panamanian interest in a deal under which Noriega, head of Panama's Defense Forces, would fulfill a longstanding U.S. objective by withdrawing from politics.

Abrams "made no deal, offered no deal and was not in a position to offer a deal," Redman said.

He said the indictments against Noriega are "obviously based on strong evidence, and we have every intention on carrying through with them."

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland had no immediate comment. He said he would have to check with Assistant Attorney General William Weld, the Justice Department official with whom Abrams spoke.

The Reagan administration has been pressuring Noriega and his military colleagues to withdraw from politics and to allow an elected civilian leadership to run the country.

Potomac Potpourri

Out of 'circulation'

So who doesn't already know that activist actor Ed Asner is hardly a fan of President Reagan and his Republican administration?

Former Texas Sen. John Tower, for one.

It's hard to believe, but Tower, who retired from the Senate in 1983, sent an invitation to Asner's Hollywood office inviting the liberal actor to join the Republican senatorial inner circle.

Tower's letter told Asner that Bob Hope, Arnold Schwarzenegger and Wayne Newton were among those who had already joined the circle, one of the GOP's financial support groups.

Asner was a registered Republican back in the days when Reagan was still starring in epics like "Bedtime for Bonzo," but his views in the past decade or so are in no way, shape or form near the GOP's.

A few snickering Democrats who got wind of Tower's "oversight" recently wondered aloud whether members of the inner circle are "circulating" enough these days.

No records this year

North Carolina Sen. Terry Sanford kept up with tradition last week by reading George Washington's farewell address to a nearly empty chamber on the former president's birthday, but he set no new speed-reading records.

Sanford, the first North Carolina Democrat to read the 7,641-word address, took 52 minutes to complete the tradition which has been going on since 1896.

Utah Republican Sen. Jake Garn had the fastest reading, at 39 minutes in 1975, while the slowest was an hour and eight minutes in 1962 by West Virginia Democratic Sen. Jennings Randolph.

Only three other lawmakers were present when Sanford read the address: Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., and Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont.

Also by tradition, Washington's farewell address is the only item on the calendar when the Senate marks the former president's birthday.

Remote-control hearing

President Reagan appears to be happy with his new remote-control hearing aid, according to the chief executive's personal physician.

"I haven't heard him complain about it," Dr. John Hutton told reporters after Reagan began using the new hearing device.

The new hearing aid has a card-sized remote-control device for turning it on and off and screening out unwanted noise. Hutton said it is "particularly helpful" in preventing "feedback" or ringing during telephone conversations when the receiver is held against the ear.

The president, who attributes the hearing loss to the sound of a gun going off near his head during his Hollywood acting days, wears a tiny aid in each ear.

When White House reporters learned about the new hearing device, one well-known TV correspondent asked whether Reagan would be better able to hear questions shouted to him. Hutton had no comment, prompting the correspondent to ask the doctor if he was able to hear the question.

Black athletes and intelligence

New themes for Afro-American History Month in February are planned in advance to enrich the knowledge of concerned people in the world. However, the forces of ignorance and arrogance still exist to try to quell new information.

An example of this is with black athletes and intelligence. Al Campanis, Billy Martin and Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder tell avid readers that there is no equal access to front-line sports management for many qualified non-white candidates.

The late black abolitionist Frederick Douglass said: "Power concedes nothing without demand."

Several black ex-professional athletes and the Rev. Jesse Jackson have had success in drafting an affirmative action plan for baseball and football in the past year. Non-professional people should be allowed to develop their full potential as head coaches, broadcasters, supervisors, etc. Black athletes play hard, but they can think in productive ways.

College student Debbie Thomas, an Olympic ice skater, and attorney Alan Page, a National Football League Hall of Famer, are two examples of excellence.

Thomas L. Stringfellow

Former UCLA swimmer Chris Silva will hopefully win a medal at the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

Doug Williams, the first Afro-American quarterback to win a Super Bowl, has defied the myth that a black person would not be successful at this privileged position. Williams overcame the odds and his personal problems to win this game through ability. He is a good role model of a man who achieves his goals in life.

The University of Connecticut and Manchester basketball teams are integrated, and the members play as a winning unit with a respectable winning percentage.

The walls of prejudice still stand until united action does something to reduce it effectively. Black people can help themselves and will seek assistance from whites when it is necessary. The time of the white man's burden theory should be put to rest.

Sterling Tucker, a civil rights activist of the 1960s, states: "The white man has been the black man's burden; the black man has been the white man's crutch. It is time we freed ourselves of the white man's yoke. We need to be free to run our own errands, free to mold our own days, free to create our own futures."

Black athletes have done many things besides showing their speed and brawn.

The late heavyweight boxing champion Jack Johnson spoke French, German and Spanish fluently and he invented an adjustable monkey wrench. Julius Erving is a college-trained businessman for the Pepsi company.

The United States is still a decent country to live in, but we all must work toward democratic ideals everyday.

Dr. Jeanne Spurlock, a psychiatrist, emphasizes it: "Racism has a negative impact on whites also because such racial separation is bound to backfire on the people who institute it because it narrows their experiences."

The Olympics provide a time for athletes of all colors to compete and to have mutual consideration for another person's feelings. Winning isn't everything; and being a good sportsman is by doing the best that you can. Records can be broken, but the human spirit lives on.

Hide-and-go-see, played with cocaine

WASHINGTON — How would you sneak 75,000 kilos of cocaine into the country? The task sounds harder than it is. Drug smugglers manage to do it every year. The tough job lies with the people who try to stop the avalanche.

A task force of Pentagon experts recently analyzed the means and methods being used to detect illegal drugs and apparently found the task so monumental that they couldn't describe it in mere words. So they resorted to hypothetical numbers. The numbers show just how easy it is to break the law and how hard it is to enforce it.

The Pentagon looked at the typical size of cocaine shipments that have been seized and speculated how many trips it would take to bring in, by various means of transit, the 75,000 kilos of cocaine consumed in the United States each year. They speculated that the cocaine could enter the country hidden on:

- 250 of the 150,000 private airplane flights into the United States each year (with each of the 250 planes carrying 300 kilos);
- 375 of the 131,000 non-commercial ships and boats that annually dock in the United States (with each of the 375 carrying 200 kilos);
- 1,103 of 415,000 annual cargo aircraft arrivals (each carrying 68 kilos);

Jack Anderson

- 30,000 of the 34 million airline passengers (each carrying only 2.5 kilos);

- 122 of the 3 million ship cargo containers (with each smuggler's container carrying 615 kilos); or

- 2,185 of the 88.6 million cars imported to the United States annually (with a mere 34.3 kilos hidden in each).

As difficult as it is to stop drugs on people and in their luggage, the greatest detection challenges, according to the report, "are the large cargo containers, in which the majority of all imports are now shipped."

"Unlike railroad cars, for instance, there is at present no accepted means for rapidly — or automatically — identifying the owner, the shipper or the origin of the container. There is also no adequate means for scanning the contents or even identifying inner compartments."

What the drug enforcement officers need are systems for monitoring and sampling the contents of those cargo containers, the report said.

The experts concluded: "Means for sorting these illicit needles from these legitimate haystacks — without interrupting the essential flow of commerce — presents a major challenge for the technological community."

Footnote: It is just as hard to spot illicit drug money leaving the United States as it is to detect the narcotics coming in, according to the task force. "Drug money could leave the country as one dollar in every $2,500 among the $1 trillion of international wire transfers every business day."

The politics of AIDS

AIDS researchers are learning what happens when they don't toe the official line. We recently reported that the National Institutes of Health, the principal source of research grants for AIDS, has stopped funding any research that does not focus on the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) as the cause of AIDS.

Here are the cases of two doctors who tried to look at other theories. Dr. Joseph Coggin, an AIDS researcher at the University of Alabama, says the NIH encouraged him to apply for a federal grant for his research. But when he said he wanted to look at possible causes in addition to HIV, he was turned down. He still hasn't received an explanation from the NIH.

Dr. John Beldekas has learned what happens to a scientist when he goes against the popular tide. We reported in 1986 that Beldekas, a professor at Boston University, found a virus in the blood of AIDS patients that was similar to that of African swine fever. Since he published his findings, Beldekas says he has been blackballed. Rumors circulated linking him with various radical groups and attributing to him some bizarre notions, like the theory that people could get AIDS from eating pork. Commodity brokers even called him to ask if beef would be a better buy. His research money has dried up, and he says he was even pressured to leave his university position.

No free lunch

Agriculture Department auditors have turned up evidence that some school districts in the United States don't know their arithmetic. The federal government picks up the tab for school lunches for needy children; the schools are supposed to count the number of lunches they serve and bill the Agriculture Department. Department auditors checked 13 school districts and found that 10 of them counted wrong. The districts have been asked to return almost $2 million in overcharges. Part of the problem is failure of the states to review the counting procedures at the schools. The Agriculture Department auditors have now suggested that the school districts check their counting on breakfast programs, too.

Polls wrong, voters right

By Chuck Stone

Pollsters who pontificate about an election upset sound like Flip Wilson doing his routine on Columbus discovering America.

"We came here to discover y'all," Wilson's Columbus tells the Indians.

"S'pose we don't want to be discovered," the Indians reply. "How you gon' discover us when we been here all the time?"

So it is with the voters in presidential election 1988.

They have been there all the time. They have decided on candidates. The problem is the pollsters don't know which voters feel the strongest. That's known as intensity, and pollsters don't know how to measure it. Nor are pollsters able to assess how many are likely to make last-minute switches.

Five-and-a-half years ago, a dramatic last-minute switch happened when Mario Cuomo scored an "upset" win over Ed Koch in New York's Democratic gubernatorial primary. But it was no upset. The voters simply switched sides before the pollsters caught on.

In Iowa, Pat Robertson's second-place victory also was no upset. His supporters were there all along. But, like America's Indians, they were not waiting to be "discovered."

The pollsters — and even worse, Iowa's political experts — thought their predictive equations had ruled out any new discoveries. But nobody predicted the ILQ (intensity of loyalty quotient).

Going into the remaining primaries, pollsters will continue to survey, and TV networks will hustle to predict the outcome before the polls close. (It helps their ratings and increases ad revenue.) And voters will continue to show these "experts" the error of their ways.

Upsets exist only in the eye of the beholder. Or in the odds of the gambler. After New Hampshire and going into the South's "Super Tuesday," we can expect more upsets.

A series of events, moving irresistibly toward a foreordained end, will be labeled an upset, because the experts didn't see it coming.

Tolstoy called it "fatalism in history." When something happens, explained Tolstoy, "at a certain moment in time," it "becomes irrevocable and is the property of history, in which it has a significance, predestined and not subject to free choice." You know, que sera, sera and all that jazz.

Ever since 1948 when all the national pollsters predicted Dewey would defeat Truman, they have continued to make erroneous predictions in state and local elections. But national polls in our national quadrennial town meeting do an awesome disservice to the political process.

They become a substitute for national debate. They replace rational discussion. They weaken personal analysis. They lure the unsuspecting into an uneasy alliance with trends. And they redefine the candidate's battle strategy with gimmicks.

Richard Gephardt's amoral change of tactics is a classic case in point. Three weeks before the Iowa caucuses, the polls revealed that he was slipping. He poured in massive amounts of television money, came up with a couple of mindless, quick-fix solutions, and Iowans bought it.

Gephardt had not undergone any moral or intellectual change of heart on his personal road to Damascus. He simply read the polls.

As Sen. Edward M. Kennedy warned Americans last November in his landmark Harvard speech, potential dangers are built into our statistical obsession. "Polls have become the quintessential pseudo-events of the pre-primary campaign," he declared. "It is the statistical analogue of false consciousness. It is false objectivity."

It is also the consummate con job. The voters know it, but they don't care. Like Columbus' Indians, they are going to be "discovered" every time there is an "upset." voters enjoy being played for suckers. It means somebody cares about them.

Thoughts
There is a sixth sense that a Christian has and that is the deep and faithful understanding that the Lord is guiding you. It is a sense of calm, of knowing.
"Whatever was to my profit I now consider loss for the sake of Christ. What is more, I consider everything a loss compared to the surpassing greatness of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord, for whose sake I have lost all things." Phil. 3:7.
I have met people who have nothing, no home, no clothes, no job. They have lost their families, have no ties to anyone, anywhere, and yet have still maintained that they have faith that God is going to take care of them, and that he will lead them to a better place.
I have met people who are dying, slowly, sadly dying. They continue to be spiritually enriched through their faith in Christ and their love of a God who has given them inner peace.

I have not known great sadness or sickness. I have a loving family and wonderful friends. I attend a church with people who love me for who I am and who support me in my endeavors. I have a wonderful job and enjoy a full life. God has richly blessed me and I believe that he will sustain me in the future days.
God will help you to use your six Christian senses to their fullest — to feel the loving touch, to smell the wonderful earthly surroundings, to see the need of others and act accordingly, to trust the Lord with all, to hear the cry of one in need, to know and have faith in God's desire for your life.

MACC soup kitchen does not serve soup

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

The Shepherd's Place soup kitchen (our president, Newell Curtis, finds the phrase "soup kitchen" morally, historically and practically — we don't serve soup — is offensive, so I use the term in fear and trembling) has continued to operate out of Center Congregational Church this year. As the good folk at Center offered us five years ago this month, a temporary site for six months so that we could get a feeding program organized, we put "the man who came to dinner" story in the shade.

What makes the patience and charity of the congregation at Center even more remarkable is that I estimated we would be feeding — tops — some eight to 10 people a day.

We are feeding an average of 42 clients each day that the Shepherd's Place is open. The numbers eating at the kitchen rises at the end of each month as those on limited incomes run out of food and come to the Shepherd's Place to eat.

The Shepherd's Place is another of our MACC programs that is supported and made possible by a dedicated group of volunteers: — Barbara Phillip, Diane Dowd, Dot McCann, Blanche Brown, Emily Miller, Lily Krob, Mary Leslie, Fred Becker, Catherine Byron, Francesco Morasco, Catherine Anderson, Dot Annulli, Karol Brown, Marilyn Fabian, Ann Jackson, Mary Jaworski, Mary Kuzmickas, Lucille Simon, Emily Smith, Hazel Aronson, Germaine Breton, Betty Blevins, Ann Burdette, Anne French, Anne Rivers, Harriet Hiller, Rita Lombardi, Florence Parker, Bridgett Rooney and Rose Young.

The meals served at Shepherd's Place are not just soup and sandwiches. They often begin with salad, include a main course and end with dessert. The mastermind who transforms the food donations, government surplus foods and our FEMA food orders into well-balanced, good-tasting menus is coordinator Skip Boman, who came to us with years of experience in restaurant management.
Donations of food to Shepherd's Place were valued at $13,401.94. In addition, we received a FEMA grant of $20,000 which enabled us to purchase food-serving supplies, meats and other supplies not available at Foodshare and the surplus commodities program. A special monthly pledge by the Christian Involvement Committee of St. James Church and two contributions of $400 each from

A few years ago a man in Arizona went to his doctor complaining of severe headaches. Tests revealed a cherry-size aneurysm near the base of the brain. Its size and location meant that its rupture would mean instant death.

Doctors opted for a radical procedure. They chilled his body to a temperature of 62° and arrested heart and brain activity. While the patient lay legally dead for some 10 minutes, doctors snipped off the aneurysm. They then jump-started his heart and he is alive and well today.

In a spiritual sense this is what God does for his sinners. We have one option: die to self, lie in the tomb as Jesus did, and be raised with the sin problem eradicated. All of which is accomplished in repentance and baptism. Read Romans 6:3-8. The symptoms may linger awhile, but the source has been removed.

FEEDING THE FLOCK — Lillian Ueltzen, of Coventry, watches the sky for signs of the birds who flock into her yard during the winter for food. She first started feeding birds when she lived in New York city.

FEISTY FINCHES — These house finches didn't take long to get accustomed to the feeder outside Betty Walker's Harvard Road home. They are among the many species which frequent feeders outside area residences.

Bird lovers find joy in feeding

By J. Gordon Brown
Special to the Herald

Thirty years ago a "house-bound" Carol Eddy threw a little bird seed in her back yard and waited to see what happened. Today she is the proud tender of a mini-wildlife sanctuary.

"During the winter months when one is inside, it's nice to see activity (from the birds) going on outside. It brings a little bit of the outdoors to the inside," the Manchester woman said.

She is just one of several Manchester residents who are reaping the benefits of bird feeding. And, the beauty of it all, they say is that the pastime can be enjoyed for the cost of a 5-pound bag of birdseed and a simple bird feeder.

Some find it particularly rewarding in the winter when the birds' natural food sources may be scarce.

Eddy, who has five feeders in her back yard, uses thistle seed to attract finches, and sunflower seeds for chickadees, tufted titmice, and cardinals.

"Raisins and apples are good for wintering robins," she says, adding that those are good ground food also.

To discourage the common problem of squirrels, Eddy throws some of the seed on the ground away from the feeders. The Manchester homemaker became interested in bird feeding as a means of relief from domestic responsibilities.

"I had six little youngsters to care for, and I was house-bound, so to speak, and a friend said 'Carol, why don't you throw some bird seed on the ground and see what happens.' I was amazed that so many birds stayed up north (during winter). I thought they all went south. I was hooked."

Betty Walker, 69, of Harvard Road, has been feeding birds for 25 years. Her feeders attract evening grosbeaks, cardinals, juncos, white-throated, and house finches.

"Birds are coming more and more into the city because of people feeding them," Walker said.

Walker's interest in feeding birds is also academic. She is participating in a program sponsored by the Department of Ornithology at Cornell University called Project Feeder Watch.

Walker has reported 40 to 50 species in her yard to the Cornell Feeder Laboratory, but along with others interviewed, she has seen a decline in the feeding population.

She cites a sharp skinned hawk who "spooks" birds throughout the town as a reason for the lower number of birds eating from her feeders.

The hawk makes its appearance all winter long, she said. Lillian Ueltzen, 70, also has seen fewer birds in her yard at her Hop River Road home in Coventry.

"There's been something of a decline (in the bird population)," she said. "It might be because of the construction going on here," Ueltzen said.

White-breasted nuthatches, mourning doves, purple finches, and three varieties of woodpeckers feast at her two feeders. "Last season I saw a pileated woodpecker and a barred owl," Ueltzen said.

A retired hospital administrator, Ueltzen lived in New York City and fed birds to attract a little bit of nature to her home. "When I moved out here to the country, it was to my advantage, and the bird's too. It's a pleasure to see them. It gives a good feeling to know you might be helping them in the worst of the weather (in feeding them) and it's always a joy to hear them singing," Ueltzen said.

Bird feeding and togetherness go hand-in-hand for Raymond and Thelma Woodbridge of Middle Turnpike, East, Manchester. He is the former manager of the Manchester Teacher's Credit Union and she is a former teacher in the Manchester school system.

"We enjoy doing things together," Thelma said, adding that the couple especially enjoys going on bird-watching field trips. The Woodbridges fill their six feeders once a day.

"The couple have a feeder by their den room window.

"When we're sitting around reading in the den, it's nice to have the birds near," Woodbridge added.

Woodbridge also sees squirrels going for the food. He has tried to remedy the problem with a special squirrel-proof feeder sold in stores.

"It's supposed to be squirrel-proof, but it's not," Woodbridge said with a chuckle.

The new-found interest in birds has also given the couple an opportunity to see the country.

Their excursions have taken them from Delaware to Wyoming and Utah. The couple recently returned from Aransas Pass, Texas on the Gulf of Mexico, where they saw 21 whooping cranes, a species which was near extinction. Due to the efforts of wildlife preservationists, there are now about 100 in the country.

Bird seed sales rise

Area merchants say business is hopping because of a rise in demand for bird feed.

"We've seen an increase in sales," said Phil Silver, manager of Agway Inc., on Adams Street.

He added the demand is "very steady and strong."

Rayona Hobbs, manager of Woodland Gardens on Woodland Street, also has seen an increase in the sale of bird feed. She said the cold weather is a factor in bird seed sales. "Anything less than 10 to 15 degrees (in the temperature), people become very concerned about the birds. On a cold day, people come out and make the effort to buy bird seed," Hobbs said.

While many residents use traditional bird seed, Betty Walker offers an easy-mix treat:

- 1 cup of peanut butter
- 4 cups of white or yellow corn meal
- 1 cup of shortening
- 1 cup of flour
- Mix all together and set outside in a tin or pan for the birds. Then sit back and enjoy. The birds, that is.

Brick requires maintenance

By Andy Lang
The Associated Press

Houses, driveway dividers, retaining walls and anything else made of brick generally rate high for strength and durability when compared with wood. But brick requires maintenance or it can deteriorate as well as lose its pleasing appearance.

Most of the time the trouble occurs when the mortar between the bricks starts to crumble and permits water to enter the joints. Discovering what is happening before the actual leakage takes place and repairing the joints immediately can prevent major damage at a later time. No special skill is needed to make this discovery. Inspect the side of your brick house or wall periodically and you will be able to find out what is wrong very easily. If the mortar seems to be in poor condition, it is.

Another cause of seeping water through brick is that the material is porous and, after a period of years of being exposed to the weather, permits the passage of water. One way to prevent this is to seal the brick with a colorless liquid. An application holds for many years. It can be done after the original installation or after mortar repair.

There are times when the

mortar between the bricks has crumbled to such an extent that it is better to replace a few bricks in that vicinity. This is especially true if one or more bricks have been damaged. While somebody occasionally will fill in the part where the brick is broken with mortar, it makes a messy repair. Using a cape chisel and a hammer, you should chip away at the mortar slowly and carefully, wearing gloves and safety goggles. When the mortar has been removed, use a hose to wash out the cavity.

A new brick should be soaked in water before it is installed. After a short drying period to permit the mortar to adhere properly, use a trowel to butter mortar on the top and both ends of the brick, being careful not to get any on the face of it. Keep a damp cloth ready so if any mortar gets on the face of the brick it can be wiped off instantly. Waiting even a few minutes may make removal difficult. After the brick is installed, try to duplicate the shape of the old joints with a small jointer or piece of pipe or anything that will do the trick. The objective is to shape the joint so rainwater rolls off it quickly.

Wait about 10 or 12 hours, then wet down the new brick and the ones around it. Keep the area moist for a few days to prevent the new brick from drying out too quickly.

If you see a whitish substance on your bricks, it is salt that has been washed to the surface. While it occasionally can be removed with a scrubbing brush and water, it usually requires the use of muriatic acid, which should only be handled by someone who can work with great care. Use a solution of 8 parts of water to one of the acid. Wear old clothes, rubber gloves and glasses. Apply the solution to the top of the damaged area and work down.

Use a scrubbing brush — the kind made with wire bristles. Rub firmly but not so vigorously as to cause splashing. Flush off any acid residue with a hose, doing it twice to make sure. Incidentally, remember the truism about working with acid: Add the acid to the water, not the other way around.

Any time your encounter with damaged brick causes some of the color to disappear, give it an application of raw linseed oil. You also can try the redwood stain used on outdoor furniture.

Try a mix instead of topsoil

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

A soil-less medium has been developed especially for plants in hanging baskets, window boxes and other outdoor containers where they need closer attention than garden soil plantings.

"A growing medium must perform three functions to ensure vigorous plant growth," says Dr. George Wolster of Rutgers University's Cook College of Agriculture and Environmental Science. "It must strike a balance between water-holding, air-holding and nutrient-holding properties. It must be a uniform commodity that the consumer can depend upon to perform the same way with each purpose."

The mix was formulated for A.H. Hoffman Inc. of Landisville, Pa. Hoffman, which was established in 1899 on a farm in Banford, Pa., specializes in soil-improving products and farm seeds.

"Topsoils and so-called composted natural products generally fail in one or all of the three categories I mentioned," Wolster said.

The Hoffman mix combines coarse sphagnum peat moss with a sedge peat to trap water and air; vermiculite to absorb water and furnish magnesium; sand; a wetting agent, and lime to balance the pH.

Why substitute the soil-less mix for a good topsoil, which can perform growing functions admirably? Wolster gives the following reasons:

Weeders Guide

■ Good topsoil has become more scarce and more expensive. To ensure a pest-free product, topsoil must undergo expensive pasteurization to kill seeds, insects, nematodes and plant pathogens.

■ Often herbicide residues are found in topsoil that will kill plants as well as weeds.

■ Topsoil is highly variable in nutritional content and structure.

■ Topsoil is heavy to handle and ship.

■ Topsoil in containers will hold so little air that roots of seedlings and even established plants often suffocate, especially with soils containing large amounts of clay or silt.

George Ewing Jr., president of Hoffman, says the major problems of home gardeners are overwatering or underwatering of container plants. "Many times soil is the problem culprit. We know our mix is better in porosity and water retention. The average homeowner will neglect plants. Our mix allows the plant the best chance to survive.

"We are looking for outdoor and indoor soil-less mixes to help the homeowner — so that with a self-watering container, he or she can go away for a week or so; his container can drain well, and can't be overwatered or underwatered. We call it the forgiving soil."

Wolster says there is a confining of the root system in containers. "The medium can extract nutrients much faster than in soil where there is a constant steady supply. Containers are poorly drained. They don't have the deep source found in soil and the gravity source is not available."

He describes the container medium search: "We tried various formulations for annuals and perennials. We tested the durability of mixtures for two or three years. We created areas 1 foot wide and 2-3 feet long, using 30 different formulations. After the first season, we dug up those not suitable and tried others.

"We ended up with 10 or 12 formulations with qualities we are looking for. Some had the appearance of organic vitality that gave reasonable plant growth for a variety of vegetables and flower plants. For containers, the physical aspects, structure of soil, is of primary concern."

When the Rubbermaid company produced a new plastic planter, "Anywhere Garden," which has a wick-watering, one gallon reservoir system, it turned to Hoffman to furnish the planting medium.

Tax reform is a bombshell on scholarships

The tax reform law will not be considered "reform" when you or your tax consultants start working on scholarships. Have created, and families making out their income tax forms in the future will find that Congress handed them a bombshell.

Sylvia Porter

Here is the way the crackdown has been administered — particularly to lower-income families. Before 1987, full scholarships (those that covered tuition, tuition-related expenses, room-and-board costs) were completely tax-free. The entire amount was excluded from the taxable income of the student, and there was a bonus for parents, too. Not only was the scholarship non-taxable, it didn't occur as support for the student. The new law deals this giant tax-saver a walloping blow. Now the tax-free treatment for scholarships, in effect, applies only to the amount attributable to tuition and tuition-related expenses. Result: Tens of thousands of families, including those who can least afford it, will be sudden tax victims. Assume, for instance:

In 1986, Mr. and Mrs. Ward's three children were in school. Two, Rachel and Sarah, were in college with full scholarships and the third, Kate, was to start college in 1987. Each scholarship was worth $14,000; half for tuition, half for living expenses. In 1986, no one owed any tax on the scholarship money. And suppose the Wards helped out their collegians to the tune of $2,000 each, and Rachel and Sarah each earned another $1,500 in income.

At this point, you had the best of all worlds. For support purposes, the $14,000 scholarship each girl received was not counted as support for that child and it was not counted as support the parents contributed.

The wonderful tax results were: 1) the full scholarships were tax-free; 2) the parents, because they contributed more than half the support for each girl ($2,000 compared to $1,500), claimed both Rachel and Sarah as dependents. How about the younger, Kate? The parents would claim her as a deduction as well. A great tax and dollars-and-cents saga!

Now note how the new blockbuster hits them.

They have three children in college this year. The Wards are unusually lucky — each girl gets a full scholarship. Using the same figures, $7,000 of each scholarship is free — but the other $7,000 is income to each girl. That's a big chunk of income for those kids to pay tax on.

But there's also some good news here. The IRS has said that the $7,000 of income subject to tax is: 1) earned income and that helps with the standard deduction and 2) does not count as support.

How about parents? If they supply more than half the support, they get $7,500 in deductions for 1987. However, the children would pay more in taxes. Why? That's another little new-law beauty: When someone, say a child, is eligible to be claimed as a dependent on some other person's return, that child cannot claim her own dependent deduction.

So it's a double whammy. 1) Part of a scholarship may be taxable income to a child. 2) You may wind up paying the tax for your child without getting any tax benefit.

Other important points about scholarships:

■ Don't include the value of scholarships as support if the child is a full-time student. Thus, if you contribute $4,000 to a child's support, and the child has only a $4,000 scholarship, you're considered to be contributing ALL of the support.

■ To be eligible for the scholarship exclusion, students must be regularly enrolled at a qualified educational organization.

■ The exclusion definitely applies to tuition reductions a school grants to its employees or their spouses, and to the dependent children of such employees. But the tuition reductions must be for studies below the graduate level.

■ The rule changes aren't retroactive. They don't apply to scholarships granted before August 16, 1986.

■ Students who receive scholarships can't determine on their own what percentage has been allotted for tuition, books, supplies and so forth (excluded) and what percentage allotted for, say, traveling or for teaching (not excludable). The allotments are determined by the school.

Consolidators sell plane tickets below airlines' advertised price

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Picture this: An airline's lowest advertised round-trip fare from Los Angeles to Tokyo is $851, but you're able to buy a ticket on the same flight for only $569. Are you dreaming? No. You just bought your ticket through a consolidator.

Consolidators are little-known ticket brokers who sell seats on international flights that airlines think will remain unsold at their advertised fares. The consolidators offer these tickets to travel agencies and often directly to individuals at 20 to 30 percent less than the airlines' published prices. But many consumers are unaware that these flight bargains exist. Airlines aren't eager to publicize the fact that they sell tickets below advertised prices, and many of the sales transactions are contrary to current, though unenforced, federal law.

Recently, the editors at Consumer Reports Travel Letter weighed the risks and benefits of dealing with consolidators. In the editors' opinion, anyone traveling abroad should first explore the possibility of a discount ticket. You could save hundreds of dollars and even wind up with a ticket having fewer restrictions than one bought directly from an airline.

How do consolidators operate? Unlike bulk-fare tour operators, who often buy a large quantity of tickets in advance, most consolidators obtain their tickets from an airline individually, on an "as needed basis." The tickets they can offer depend on how much business volume consolidators can deliver and how eager the airlines are to fill the seats.

Discount tickets are confined largely to international routes, where fares are usually subject to government approval. Since de-regulation, the domestic airlines have developed sophisticated pricing practices and seat-allocation programs that allow them to raise and lower prices quickly in response to changing market conditions.

Some consolidators also market hotel rooms abroad. Hotels that anticipate periods of low occupancy often arrange with consolidators to sell rooms at discount rates, often at 40 to 50 percent savings. You may have to buy air tickets through the consolidator to obtain the discounted hotel rooms.

The vast majority of consolidator tickets are for coach/economy excursion tickets. For example, many have no advance-purchase requirement, and the minimum-stay restrictions may be less stringent.

Most discount tickets are only valid on the airline that issued them. You can't switch to another airline if your flight is canceled or delayed. If you miss a connecting flight because your first flight is late, you have to wait for the next departure on the issuing airline. On many international trips, that could mean a full day or more.

But many discount tickets can be refunded or exchanged through the issuing consolidator, bulk-fare tour operator or agency. Refund service charges vary.

As for frequent-flier mileage, most, but not all, airlines allow travelers on discount tickets to qualify.

If your travel agency doesn't handle consolidator tickets, shop around for one that does. You can also buy from a consolidator directly. Check the small ads in the Sunday travel section of your newspaper. Many consolidators that advertise in Chicago, Los Angeles, New York and San Francisco papers are used to dealing with out-of-town customers. You may want to call the local Better Business Bureau before you entrust a substantial sum of money to a consolidator you don't know.

One more tip: Use a credit card to buy the ticket — you'll have the additional protection of a potential charge back if something goes wrong.

To obtain the January issue of Consumer Reports Travel Letter containing the full report on consolidators, including address and telephone numbers, send $5 to CRTL, CS2010A, Attn: DCB, 256 Washington St., Mount Vernon, N.Y. 10551.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: I have read about the different ways in which squirrels can be kept from eating the food in a bird feeder. I thought you and your readers might be interested in my experience with this matter. I had trouble keeping squirrels out of my bird feeder. One day in our attic, I came across some very old phonograph records that belonged to my grandmother. It came to me that one of the large-sized recordings might be just what I needed to solve the squirrel problem. I ran a feeder pole through the large hole in one of the records and attached it to the pole about three-quarters of the way up. This made a kind of baffle such as is sold at bird stores. I attached it so that it would stay in place, yet move freely if any weight were placed on it. Sure enough, when a squirrel would climb up the pole and step on the record to go higher, the record would flop loosely and the squirrel would fall off. After trying this a few times and always getting the same result, the squirrel got the idea and gave up. Presto — no more loss of bird seed.

ANSWER: Very interesting. What you did was create a homemade baffle. By the way, it would have made the story complete if you had told us what song or outfit or singer was on the record. Thanks.

QUESTION: Our old house has plaster walls, not wallboard. We intend to paint the inside soon. Every room is covered with pictures or other things that have been hung on nails. When we take down the pictures before doing the painting, there will be a lot of nail holes. I know they should be filled. Will it be all right to fill them with regular patching material or will I have to get down to the mesh I knew is underneath the plaster?

ANSWER: If the holes were larger — say a couple of inches in diameter — you might have to worry about the mesh. But with small nail holes, you can fill them with a spackling compound or other patching material the same as you would do with wallboard. Fill each hole the tiniest bit above the surface, since the patch usually will shrink. A bit of sanding may be in order to make everything smooth.

QUESTION: We neglected to store our long garden hose during the early part of winter and it froze with some water in it. Is it possible to repair the hose or must a new one be purchased?

ANSWER: No way to tell from here the extent of the damage, but it sounds as though a new one might be in order. If the hose is damaged in only two or three places, you probably can do some patching. All kinds of splicers and mending tubes are available. Be sure to tell the dealer whether the hose is rubber or plastic.

Child may change sex life

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 34 and my wife is 26. For several years we had been having sex five to eight times a week. Since the birth of our first child two years ago, we have had sex only once or twice a month. I would like to have sex more often (two or three times a week), but my wife doesn't want to, and I choose not to force myself on her.

Kinsey Report
June M. Reinisch, Ph.D.

Is it common for a woman's sex drive to diminish after the first child? Is the condition physical or emotional? Should she see a doctor?

DEAR READER: Disagreement about how often to have sex is one of the most common problems of couples.

Marriage and sex therapists and counselors have experience in helping couples negotiate an agreement satisfactory to both partners about how often to have sex. They can suggest specific techniques to reduce both sexual and psychological tension for you to try in the privacy of your own home, such as your wife occasionally helping you masturbate.

The results of research on the effect of children on their parent's sexual behavior haven't provided definitive answers. Some studies find that children have a negative effect, while other studies report finding no effect.

However, whenever reduced sexual desire occurs (whether or not it follows birth of a child), it should be evaluated to see whether it is caused by physical problems, psychological problems or a combination of these factors.

Try to find a sex therapist who is also a physician or who works closely with physicians. That person can diagnose and treat any medical or psychological condition your wife has, plus provide counseling to both of you to help in resolving the conflict over sexual frequency.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm 26 and had my first child 15 months ago. I breast-fed her for two months. I still have not started having my periods again. I read that your period should start again 12 to 18 months after you stop breastfeeding.

Is this true? Is it possible to become pregnant again even if your periods haven't started again?

DEAR READER: The length of time between childbirth and reappearance of menstrual flows varies greatly, whether or not a woman nurses the baby. Among nursing mothers, menstruation has been reported as occurring as soon as two months after delivery and as late as 18 months after delivery.

In one study, 91 percent of non-nursing mothers and 33 percent of nursing mothers had menstruated by three months after childbirth. It's time to ask your physician or gynecologist about your lack of menstrual flow.

You most certainly can become pregnant before having a menstrual flow. This is because in a normal reproductive cycle, an egg is released before menstruation; in fact, menstrual flow is the sign that the egg released earlier in the month was not fertilized and that the uterus needs to clean itself before beginning to rebuild the lining to receive the next month's egg.

It's true that while a woman is breast-feeding she may not release eggs as regularly as usual (thereby somewhat reducing her risk of pregnancy), but breast-feeding is not a reliable method of contraception. Moreover, any slight contraceptive effect would end immediately when she stopped nursing.

Until you see the doctor, use a reliable method of contraception (such as condoms and foam) and then ask about which method is best for you now.

The physician may want you to consider changing contraceptive methods. For example, if your lack of menstruation is found to be related to changes in hormone levels, you may be asked to consider using a specific type of hormonal pill. If you used a diaphragm before becoming pregnant, you may need to be refitted with a different size diaphragm now that you've had a child.

'Pinpricks' indicate allergy

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother-in-law suffers from a strange illness every summer that seems to indicate allergies. She gets an intense pinpricking feeling in her legs and trunk while asleep, which is painful enough to wake her. Doctors are at a loss. She's too nice a lady to suffer.

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Your mother-in-law may, indeed, have allergies if she develops symptoms only at certain times of the year. Take her to an allergist to determine if she is reacting to a substance, such as dust or pollen, in her environment.

DEAR DR. GOTT: For the past month and a half, I've awakened every morning with large pink bumps all over me. They usually disappear around 10 a.m. I'm 72 and too old for acne.

DEAR READER: Large, temporary red bumps on the skin could be hives. These often develop in response to an allergic reaction. Ask your doctor to investigate this. I doubt that you have acne; this common condition is due to inflammation of pores in the skin that does not disappear as the day wears on.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My problems started about four years ago, when I was 28. I have to strain so hard to get words out that I feel out of breath. I was hospitalized with depression in 1979 and had three seizures when I was 14, so I don't know whether my problem is psychological or physical. I'm a parking-lot attendant and am having a bad time relating to the public.

DEAR READER: From the information you have supplied, I cannot draw specific conclusions. You should see a doctor for a complete examination, tests and possible referral to a specialist, such as a neurologist. Your symptoms of dysphonia (impairment of speech), seizures and depression suggest a physical nerve disorder. This needs diagnosis. Psychological counseling may be required as part of any future treatment, but at this point I would emphasize the physical aspect of your ailment.

Pen pals get together on sea of matrimony

DEAR ABBY:

You recently printed a letter from a young woman whose parents had met through Operation Dear Abby in 1966.

Her father had been stationed in Thailand with the U.S. Air Force when you asked readers to write to some lonely servicemen.) Well, here's another success story:

In January 1986, you printed a letter from a sailor on the USS Biddle urging everyone to write to his lonely shipmates. Since I'm a female sports fanatic, I wrote to "Anyone interested in the world of sports."

A Dennis Mallon picked my letter from a stack of thousands and responded with a terrific letter. Dennis loved sports, too—but unfortunately, he liked all the wrong teams. Anyway, it touched off a wonderful correspondence, and soon we were burning up the mails. We really "fell in love" through the mail.

I lived in New York, so when Dennis' ship pulled into Philadelphia's naval shipyard, I was there to meet him. We were already in love; the meeting was just a formality. He asked me to marry him a week later; however, we waited until Sept. 26, 1987, to marry.

Abby, thank you, thank you, thank you! If it weren't for you, I wouldn't be married to the most wonderful man in the world.

VALERIE MALLON,
ASTORIA, N.Y.

DEAR VALERIE: Congratulations. May you and Dennis enjoy a lifetime of smooth sailing on the holy sea of matrimony.

DEAR ABBY: I am "the middle child." I was told that several years ago you answered the question, "What do you think is the most difficult — being the oldest, youngest or middle child?"

Would you please try to locate it and print it again? Thank you.

DEAR MIDDLE CHILD:

If you ask the eldest, he'll say, "The eldest, because you're expected to set a good example for the younger ones. And if a fight breaks out, you get blamed because you're the oldest and should know better."

Ask the middle child, and he'll say, "Being the middle child is the hardest because you get none of the advantages of being the youngest or the oldest."

Ask the youngest child, and he'll tell you that being the youngest is hardest because "your parents try to keep you a baby as long as possible, and you're the one who has to wear all the hand-me-downs."

In other words, it all depends on where you're coming from.

DEAR ABBY: Our children are all grown and on their own now but my husband refuses to go to a restaurant for a holiday dinner because we'd have no leftovers.

Wouldn't it be nice if a restaurant would offer a nice dinner plus leftovers? Of course they would charge a little more, but I'm sure a lot of people would think it was worth it to take home some "fresh" leftover ham or turkey or whatever.

I know that doggie bags are available to carry home the leftovers from one's own dinner, but fresh leftovers could make a nother lunch or dinner the next day.

What do you think of this idea, Abby? It wouldn't be any more trouble for the restaurant — and it could be profitable.

HUNGRY FOR LEFTOVERS
IN ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR HUNGRY: I think it's a great idea. (I'm reminded of this old saying: "The person who says it can't be done is usually interrupted by someone who is doing it.")

LOOKING UP — Golden Globe recipient Sally Kirkland stands next to a poster touting her dramatic role in the Yurek Bogayevicz-directed film "Anna," for which she's hoping to continue her "overnight success" at the Academy Awards.

She's an 'overnight success' after 25 years as an actress

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Sally Kirkland has much to talk about these days.

There's the best actress award the Los Angeles film critics gave her for her performance as a faded Czech actress in "Anna" and the Golden Globe for best dramatic actress presented by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for the same film.

And she's been offered four movies in the wake of her "overnight success"—a success that came after 25 years as an actress, she points out.

No wonder Kirkland is more voluble than ever. She has waited for this. And waited.

"I have tested for the leading role in 25 movies, and each time the choice has narrowed to another actress and me," she recalled. "Each time the other actress won."

"The last time was 'The King of Comedy,' and the other girl (Sandra Bernhard) got the part. Bobby DeNiro, who is an old friend of mine, told me, 'Don't worry, Sally, you'll get your shot.' That was in 1981, and it has finally happened."

Despite her appearance in "Anna," for which she gained 15 pounds and taped her face to add wrinkles, Kirkland is a young-looking 43, with tawny long hair and a model's tall figure. She is bi-coastal, keeping an apartment in New York and a pied-a-terre a block from the beach in Santa Monica. The two rooms here are pure Kirkland, every inch of wall space filled with her own colorful paintings, Mexican icons, an "Anna" poster.

No one tells the Sally Kirkland story better than Sally Kirkland. "I wanted to be an actress since I was 8 years old. I took acting and dance classes from the age of eight. Because my mom was fashion editor for Life magazine and her name was Sally Kirkland, I was always Sally Kirkland Jr. That presented me with an identity crisis," she said.

"I went to a dramatic camp at 12. It was an all-girls camp, so I had to play all the men's roles. I was Macbeth at the age of 12. Then when I went to The Masters School at Dobb's Ferry (N.Y.), I was Prince Albert to Queen Victoria because I was five feet 10 — right? Finally I got around to playing a woman when I was 17.

"I didn't go to college, much to the shock and chagrin of The Masters School. They said it was the first time in history a student hadn't gone on to Vassar or Sarah Lawrence or something. I went right down to Avenue B and 11th Street (in New York) and lived in a $34-a-month apartment and was a waitress at Figaro's. I got a job with James Earl Jones off-Broadway in a play called 'The Love Nest.'"

"I'm happy to say I've been acting ever since."

Acting, yes, but never as a star in the big time. She worked with Andy Warhol's group and the LaMama Troupe and Joe Papp and achieved Manhattan fame as the Queen of Off-Broadway. But those top movie jobs went to other actresses.

Did she despair? "No," she said. "You know why? I was lucky to meet (producer) David Selznick when I was a kid. He adopted me. In a way, I was dating (son) Danny Selznick and (stepson) Michael Walker, and he kept hoping one of them would propose to me, because he wanted me in the family."

"David was my mentor. He said to me: 'Sally, with all my experience, I'm telling you right now you're going to be a star one day.'"

"But it's not going to be easy for you, because there's no studio system anymore. You remind me a lot of Ingrid Bergman and Katharine Hepburn. But they had studio contracts, and you don't have that. What I suggest is to rack up as many credits as possible. If they say don't do television, forget it. Do it."

"Get 300 women (portrayals) under your belt. Do as many classes as possible. Do everything. Because I don't think your shot will come until you're late 30s or early 40s. Don't give up. You have the talent, but because you're 5 feet 10 and you're very strong, they won't know what to do with you as an ingenue or even a young leading lady."

After 150 plays, 40 TV dramas and 27 movies, Kirkland's shot came with "Anna."

At first, director Yurek Bogayevicz was unimpressed, even though she was playing a Czech woman in the New York Public Theater play, "Largo Desolata." Kirkland persisted, perfecting her accent and even testing her scenes at the Actors Studio before her friends Shelley Winters and Robert DeNiro. Finally Bogayevicz gave in.

Is an Academy Award next? "I cannot tell a lie: My fantasy ever since I was 5 years old was to hold that (statue) and say, 'Thank you, thank you, thank you. Thank you for validating my entire experience.'"

Throwback romance with a playful mood

SHE'S HAVING A BABY (P.G.-13) Writer-director-producer John P. Hughes, having plumbed the purported depths of teenage angst in movies like "Sixteen Candles" and "Ferris Bueller's Day Off," now attempts to bring a pair of nubile young characters into the adult world. The resulting movie is virtually a throwback to the romantic comedies of the '50s and '60s — a picture about facing up to the responsibilities of marriage and parenthood without a whiff of thematic freshness. But at least the picture isn't all sick sermonizing. Stylistically, it represents some of Hughes' most playful work.

The protagonists are nervous newlyweds Kristy (Elizabeth McGovern) and Jake Briggs (Kevin Bacon), two cute yuppies who settle uneasily into a cozy Chicago suburb, where the neighboring husbands gab about their power mowers and the wives gossip while dutifully serving refreshments on the lawn.

Like a lot of young men of his time, Jake suffers from a Peter Pan complex. Scared of adulthood, he nevertheless takes the plunge. Jake may long for a career as a writer, but he follows the more practical route, accepting a cushy job in advertising. Meanwhile, he is plagued by all manner of fantasies, including the recurring one of a dream nymphomaniac who shows up tauntingly at the most inopportune times.

Several strenuous fantasy sequences, a few maturation lessons and one traumatic breech birth later, Jake comes to his senses. This being an ultra-romantic movie, he gets to have his career as a writer too. Kristy — about whom the movie has had only a secondary interest — gets a baby. So much for the film's sense of equality and liberation.

Kevin Bacon and Elizabeth McGovern are delightful together. They give the material more invention and warmth than it merits. And, as Jake's best buddy, a cad of a ladies' man, Alec Baldwin has the kind of charisma that movie stars are made of. GRADE: ***½

OUT OF THE CLOSET — Snoopy-lovers are coming out of the closet to form a burgeoning club. This convocation of Snoopys comes from the collection of a Manchester flea-market enthusiast.

Seven years later, Snoopy steps up to being collectible

A soap-dish Snoopy is being encouraged by his brothers to hang in there. "Take it easy," says the one in the Red Baron get-up. "Stay put just a while longer and you'll earn your wings."

Collectors' Corner

Russ MacKendrick

The big news in Snoopydom is the burgeoning of a collectors' club. They had their first convention at Santa Rosa, Calif., near the home of Charles Schulz, creator of Charlie Brown, Linus, Lucy and the other Peanuts. (He wanted to call them "Li Folk" but the syndicate took the bit in its teeth and ran away with "Peanuts.")

Author Freddi Margolin tells all about this and shows some of her collection of 6,000 Snoopys in the Feb. 3 issue of The Antique Trader Weekly.

Margolin notes that it has been about seven years since Snoopy dolls, clothes, ceramics, music boxes, toys and games first took fire in the shops. Now they've stepped up to being collectibles.

The convocation shown here belongs to a Manchester flea market enthusiast. The walking Snoopy at the extreme left is made of thin plastic. The arms, legs and ears are movable. He was made to swing on a windshield to keep you alert and cheerful. On his back it says "Made in Hong Kong."

The card showing the famous doghouse is a valentine, copyrighted in 1954 by United Features Syndicate, whose omnipresent C-in-a-circle drives us up the wall.

The "Red Baron" Snoopy has a hard plastic body with movable limbs. The head is rubber and will swivel at the neck. The smaller figure with the open arms is solid rubber with a wire skeleton. It has the pesky copyright "C" is dated 1969, and has another "Made in Hong Kong."

The last in the lineup is a glass Avon bottle Snoopy made to carry 5 ounces of "Excalibur" aftershave. He wears a blue cap and nestles a baseball on his paws.

And finally — "the star of our show" — a hollow rubber Avon

"SNOOPY SOAP DISH" copyrighted in 1950.

This is a magic date because on Oct. 2 of that year the Peanuts characters, including Snoopy, were first syndicated by United Features.

The author got hooked originally by the comic strip and started to see Snoopys everywhere. Now she has a museum in her basement. As a schoolteacher she has found ways to fit Peanuts characters into the curriculum, thus making the lessons more fun for the kids than any pranks they could dream up.

Membership in Freddi Margolin's club is free except for the expense of the newsletters. She invites any Snoopy-lovers to come out of the closet and write to her at 12 Lawrence Lane, Bay Shore, N.Y. 11706.

Price Daniel slaying is entertaining story

By Mike Cochran
The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — Some said it was a romance doomed from the start.

He was the bright, modestly rich, debonair son of a former Texas governor and a political middleweight in his own right. She was the 10th child of a nomadic refinery worker, a blond divorcee who waited tables at the local Dairy Queen.

It was hardly surprising, then, that folks in the small southeast Texas town of Liberty gossiped often and openly about the 1976 marriage of Price Daniel Jr. and Vickie Carroll Moore. But despite those misgivings, nobody could foresee the events of Jan. 19, 1981.

That was the night Mrs. Daniel killed her husband in the couple's ranch-style home on what was commonly called "The Governor's Road," a tribute to Daniel's father.

The story of their ill-fated romance, the shooting, a seamy child custody battle and the subsequent murder trial are retold in a new book, "Deadly Blessing" (William Morrow and Co., $18.95).

Subtitled "The Killing of Price Daniel, Jr.," the book by a California free-lance journalist, Steve Salerno, is entertaining but promises much more than it delivers.

Price Daniel Jr.'s death at age 39 commanded front-page headlines well beyond state boundaries and not totally because of his father's ties to the governor's mansion or his stint in the U.S. Senate. Daniel's mother, Jean Houston Baldwin, was a direct descendant of Sam Houston, president of the Republic of Texas in 1836-38 and often described as the "avenging spirit of the Alamo."

However, the slaying was a real shock in Austin, where Daniel once occupied his father's old legislative seat and served as speaker of the Texas House.

Nine days after his death, a grand jury indicted his wife, accusing her of shooting him to death. Mrs. Daniel did not appear before grand jurors but sketchy reports indicated that while she admitted shooting her husband, she denied it was intentional.

She later testified that her husband kicked her and threatened to kill her before she grabbed a gun and told him to leave. She said she fired a warning shot as he approached her but did not recall firing the fatal shot. She was acquitted.

The book is not, as the publisher insists, a true crime story in the tradition of "Blood and Money" and "Fatal Vision."

It is the story of an aristocratic but flawed young political figure whose first marriage ended in divorce and his second in disaster. The revelations about Daniel's quirky personal and marital habits almost overshadowed the question of his wife's guilt or innocence.

Indeed, there is little suspense and even less surprise surrounding Mrs. Daniel's acquittal in a trial that began before a Liberty jury but ended with a visiting judge delivering the verdict.

Some readers may find the biggest surprise of all an admission by the author in the epilogue that his exposure to Mrs. Daniel, the only living principal in the story, was limited to a series of telephone conversations.

Salerno said a "face-to-face" meeting was arranged once, but Mrs. Daniel canceled at the last minute.

Just as puzzling is the author's use of a quote from an unidentified friend of Daniel's to suggest, at the end, that the root cause of the tragedy was the young politician's belief that he failed to measure up to his father.

European singer makes impressive debut

By Paul Roeburn
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Epic Records did little to stoke the star-maker machinery last year when it released "Time and Tide," the debut solo recording by Basia Trzetrzelewska, a well known European pop singer.

Despite the absence of a major publicity effort, however, "Basia" slowly began creeping up record charts, as radio announcers and critics discovered it.

By December, Epic decided the record still had enough life in it, as industry executives say, to bring Basia to New York for press interviews and to begin planning for U.S. appearances in February.

"Time and Tide" moved to No. 1 in ratings by "The MAC Attack," a newsletter surveying adult contemporary radio stations. It was among the Top 20 best-selling jazz albums in Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco, and it climbed into the Top 10 on the "Radio and Records" jazz chart.

The record, a blend of pop, jazz and Brazilian styles, is difficult to classify. Basia, who pronounces her name BAH-sha and bills herself by her first name alone, possesses a spare but strong soprano with an expressive edge that marks her as an original.

BASIA TRZETRZELEWSKA
... little press but No. 1

There is a freshness to the compositions on "Time and Tide" that also attracts the casual listener's interest, perhaps explaining how the record began its climb without major-league promotion.

The melodies occasionally take unexpected, chromatic turns, and the arrangements are clean and simple. Judicious use of synthesizers and drum machines, combined with graceful performances on guitar, saxophone and some live drum parts, results in a record likely to appeal to pop listeners and jazz fans alike.

The same kinds of things were said not long ago about the pop singer Sade. But in contrast to Sade's dark, smoky sound, Basia's sound is bright and buoyant. The tunes range from "How Dare You," a pleasant rock shuffle, to "Astrud," a homage to Astrud Gilberto, and "From Now On," a bossa nova in which Basia is supported only by acoustic guitar, percussion and baritone saxophone.

"Prime Time TV," released as a single in England, has a synthesized brass ensemble that suggests big-band jazz. The record takes much of its sound from European synthesized pop, but its generous sampling of jazz and Brazilian sounds distinguishes it from other examples of that genre.

The tunes on "Time and Tide" were composed by Basia and Danny White, who also plays keyboards on the record. The two, who met in the successful European pop group "Matt Bianco," produced the album themselves in a London studio, where they were able to enlist the help of two fine musicians — Ronnie Ross, a noted jazz saxophonist in England, and Peter White, a tasteful guitar player whose styles range from rock to jazz, by way of Brazil.

"We try to make sure we have real guitar and other instruments," Basia said, to avoid a strictly artificial sound. For example, drum parts were largely synthesized by White, but the sounds of real snare drums and cymbals were added.

Basia wrote the lyrics for half of the songs. The other lyrics were written by a friend, Peter Foss. The recording was produced by Basia and White, who were left alone in a London studio to create it. Epic knew nothing of what they were doing until the final master tape was delivered.

"It's incredible how much freedom we have," Basia said recently in an interview in Epic's New York offices.

Basia grew up in the town of Jaworzno, a mining town in southern Poland. "When you come to town, you see smoke," she said. "Nothing else. But there's something about that town that makes me miss it."

She was from a musical family and frequently sang duets with her sister, who, she claims, has a better ear than she does. She started piano lessons at age 7, and vocal training sometime later.

Basia, now in her "very late 20s," as she puts it, moved to Warsaw at 18 to join a band. In 1980, she was part of a Polish band brought to Chicago for a year. There she soaked up all the American pop music she could. "I was always influenced by Stevie Wonder," she said, "and Aretha Franklin, too."

She returned to Europe and joined Matt Bianco. The group's debut album, "Whose Side Are You On?" featuring Basia, sold 1/2 million copies in Europe. But Basia had no say in the group's decisions. "I was like a guest," she said. "I wasn't involved in writing or anything about production."

Basia and White left that group and established a partnership. They recorded "Time and Tide" in late 1986, and it was released in the United States in the middle of last year.

Basia has been working on a video in England, but she will soon begin planning her next record, one that she hopes will include some rock tunes, making it slightly different from "Time and Tide." But not too different. "I don't want to shock anyone," she said.

'Never die young'

James Taylor hasn't changed as he nears 40

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

James Taylor faces 40 without deep soul-searching, he says in his laid-back way. "Just another decade ticks over. I've been doing this for 20 years."

Half his life ago, the singer-songwriter-guitarist became the first "outside act" signed to Apple Records and made his first album, "James Taylor," which included "Carolina in My Mind," "Fire and Rain" was on his second album, on Warner Brothers.

Now, shortly before he turns 40 on March 12, he has his 12th album released, "Never Die Young," his fifth for Columbia Records. On his birthday evening, a two-hour James Taylor concert is scheduled to be broadcast in stereo on PBS.

Comparing himself at 20 and 40, Taylor says, "I think very little is different. It is just that I think a lot was unknown at that point. A lot of empty spaces have been filled in now. At the age of 20 you don't know what your life's work will be, where you're going to live, who your friends or associates are going to be. There is a lot of openness to it."

"By the time you're 40, a lot of those questions are answered. It may change further. But a lot of stuff is filled in and has been identified."

The first single from the new album is the title tune.

Taylor says that the 1981 "Her Town, Too," co-written with J.D. Souther, "is the most recent song of mine that did anything really significant on the charts. But I got a certificate from BMI for a certain number of plays of 'Only One' off the last album." The last album was "That's Why I'm Here" in 1985.

"I never heard 'Only One' but there must have been places where it was played a lot. Don Henley and Joni Mitchell sang on it. It was an anthem-sounding kind of thing. I wrote it in the automobile, driving out of New York."

Taylor had songs in the 1985 movie "Smooth Talk." The 1978 Broadway show "Working" included two Taylor songs, "Millworker" and "Brother Trucker."

Asked whether he has written for the theater since his 1986 marriage to actress Kathryn Walker, he says, "Not really. I don't know if I have the discipline. Sooner or later I plan to give it a try. I have no idea what form it would take."

His two children, Sally, 13, and Ben, 10, born during his 1973 to 1981 marriage to Carly Simon, live in Massachusetts with their mother. Taylor says, "I see them on vacations and whenever I can get up there and visit them or bring them out on the road."

The Taylors live in Connecticut, have a small summer house on Cape Cod and an apartment in an old building in Manhattan. They were in Manhattan recently for his appearance on "Saturday Night Live" and for her to shoot a TV miniseries. Guitars propped against a couch and a piano furnish the apartment's front parlor. He practices in there, Taylor says, but doesn't compose. "I don't think there are any songs in that room."

His wife travels with him sometimes, during her acting lulls, and he has joined her on location,

These eggs won't fit in a supermarket carton

NORTH HAVEN (AP) — A North Haven couple has seen a lot of eggs in 42 years of raising chickens, but none were as big as two laid by one of their Rhode Island Red hens recently.

The two eggs, 3.5 inches to 4 inches long and 8 inches in circumference, are each about twice the volume of a regular chicken egg, said Fred Sibley, a collections manager at the Yale Peabody Museum of Natural History who is examining the eggs.

Anna Wilczynski, who owns the hen with her husband, Henry, said they were shocked to discover the first egg several weeks ago.

"We called my son up right away and our neighbors right away and showed it to them," she said.

Their son, Henry Jr., took the first egg to the Peabody Museum, where Sibley, a chief preparator for vertebrate zoology, said Friday that the eggs were very unusual.

"I haven't seen any nearly this size," he said.

Sibley drained the egg and discovered inside another fully formed egg with the normal red-brown shell of that formed by a Rhode Island Red. The outer shell was white.

He said the second giant egg also had a fully formed inner egg. The eggs probably took an extra trip through the chicken's oviduct, the passageway from its ovary to the outside, Sibley said. While moving back up the oviduct, they got another coating of egg white and shell, he explained.

Mrs. Wilczynski said her husband noticed that the hen, which is 10 months old, couldn't fit in her nest when she was laying the first egg.

"He caught it," she said. "The shell was soft on one side. This second one has really a hard shell."

The first egg will stay at the Peabody Museum, but Mrs. Wilczynski said she and her husband will keep the second one.

"I want to show it to my son who lives in New York and my grandchildren," she said.

Sibley said a regular chicken egg is about 2.5 inches to 3 inches in length and about 6 inches in circumference. He says the museum also has an unusually large duck egg, but the chicken egg is much bigger. The chicken egg is not being displayed, he said.

Mrs. Wilczynski said the hen was laying eggs of regular size before and after the big eggs were laid.

The 1988 Guinness Book of World Records does not contain a listing for the biggest chicken egg. But Mrs. Wilczynski said she and her husband aren't that interested in record-setting.

"We're not familiar with stuff like that. We're over 70 years old," she said.

Names in the News

Amused and alarmed

EXETER, England (AP) — Scores of jostling and shouting photographers besieged Princess Elena of Spain at Exeter University, where she is studying on a teaching fellowship.

Students and staff watched with a mixture of amusement and alarm Friday as photographers and TV crews closed in on the 24-year-old daughter of King Juan Carlos and Queen Sophia.

But the princess appeared unruffled and even shook hands with some of the photographers who had converged on the campus in southwestern England.

Elena, a teacher and friend of Princess Diana, is on a six-month teaching fellowship, working with children with special learning needs.

Men seek advice

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Newspaper columnist Ann Landers said Friday about one-third of the more than 1,000 pieces of mail she receives daily come from men, most of whom are seeking advice about personal relationships.

"Usually, the man who writes to Ann Landers is writing about his wife of long standing or his girlfriend of short standing, or a deadly combination (of both)," she said.

Landers said she has used her syndicated column to educate and credited her readers' wisdom with helping her.

"If I could give just one piece of advice to everyone in the world, it would be just two words: Be kind," she said. "It is the greatest gift you can give, and it costs you nothing."

Breaking the cycle

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — James Meredith, who broke the color barrier at the University of Mississippi 26 years ago, said education remains the best vehicle to break the cycle of poverty and oppression.

Meredith, 54, was the first black student to attend the University of Mississippi in 1962. Violence broke out on the Ole Miss campus, and President John F. Kennedy called in federal troops to maintain order.

Meredith graduated from the university and went on to earn a law degree at Columbia University.

In a speech to Air Force Academy cadets Thursday, Meredith said American blacks need to take more advantage of their citizenship rights to improve their economic and political opportunities. By seeking a state-funded education at Ole Miss, Meredith said he chose to challenge white supremacy.

No day at the beach

NEW YORK (AP) — Former vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro says life at her Fire Island summer home is no day at the beach — in fact, she can't even go to the beach because she's so recognizable.

That's why Ferraro and husband, John Zaccaro, are asking for a variance to build a swimming pool on their property and provide them with some privacy. "Because of the burden of celebrity, we are unable to take advantage of the beach except for early morning or late evening," Ferraro told an unusual Manhattan meeting of the Saltire Village Board of Zoning Appeals on Thursday.

Under village laws, an owner must have at least 10 lots to build a pool; the former congresswoman and her husband own nine. The board has reserved decision on the request, but it was not met enthusiastically by some members.

"When we give variances it's usually because of hardship, and I don't see the hardship here," said board member Hilliard Farr, a summer softball teammate of Zaccaro and his wife.

Ferraro ran unsuccessfully in 1984 on the Democratic ticket headed by Walter Mondale.

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

- President Reagan proposed his smallest Pentagon increase but sharply higher spending for AIDS research and airline safety in a $1.1 trillion fiscal 1989 budget.
- The nation's industrial operating rate was unchanged in January at 82.2 percent of capacity as cutbacks in the production of steel and autos offset gains in other areas.
- Industrial production edged up 0.2 percent in January despite big declines in auto production and steel, suggesting the economy will slow considerably this year.
- Sales of existing homes held steady in 1987 at close to 4 million units despite volatile mortgage rates and the October stock market collapse, a national real estate trade group reported.
- Housing construction declined in January for the second straight month, falling to the weakest level since the end of the last recession.
- Construction contracts will drop 4 percent this year, led by steep declines in office and other commercial building and lesser drops in housing and public works projects, a forecaster said.
- A significant number of Americans may have had too little tax withheld from paychecks last year, the Internal Revenue Service said.
- Domestic car and truck sales, boosted by aggressive buyer-incentive programs, rose 2.8 percent in early February over the same period a year ago, automakers reported.
- Ford Motor Co.'s earnings jumped 19 percent in the fourth quarter and 41 percent for all of 1987 as the No. 2 automaker outperformed General Motors Corp. for the second straight year.
- Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca said he would dedicate all the profits from new Chrysler cars sold in Wisconsin this year to a trust fund to help the 5,500 workers in Kenosha who will lose their jobs.
- International Business Machines Corp. unveiled new internal software for its largest computers, continuing a chain of enhancements dating back to the first System-360 in 1964.
- GAF Corp. became the first major company to exempt itself from Delaware's new law limiting hostile takeovers.
- Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. said it planned to spin off its worldwide tire business into a $1.8 billion joint venture to be 75 percent owned by Tokyo-based Bridgestone Corp.
- Irving Bank Corp. rejected the current $1.08 billion buyout offer from Bank of New York Co.
- California First Bank, which is controlled by the Bank of Tokyo Ltd., has agreed to acquire Union Bank in a deal valued at around $750 million.
- American Standard Inc.'s board of directors approved a restructuring plan to thwart a hostile $2.03 billion takeover bid by Black & Decker Corp.
- Severe insider-trading penalties are damaging new cases by discouraging potential defendants from cooperating, a top official of the Securities and Exchange Commission was quoted as saying.
- Gillette Co. said it would resist Coniston Partners' attempt to place four representatives on its board of directors.
- Texaco Inc.'s stock rose following word that T. Boone Pickens was seeking permission to buy at least 15 percent of the beleaguered oil giant.

Dow 2,000 becomes familiar

By Chet Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Just a little more than a year after the Dow Jones industrial average first reached 2,000, the stock market has adopted that level as a regular hangout.

Since the crash in October that sent the average tumbling into the low 1700s, the market has rallied back to around 2,000 four separate times. On each of those occasions, the advance has bogged down at that point.

Now, Wall Streeters hope, it may be ready to clear that obstacle.

Many stock market analysts say it is simplistic or even silly to talk about round-number levels in the Dow as measures of any significance for the market outlook.

When investing institutions measure their performance against the market as a whole, these analysts point out, they usually don't use the Dow, but rather the broader Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index.

Nevertheless, Dow 2,000 appears to provide a good reference point for the current state of the market.

It served as one of the landmarks of the great 1982-87 bull market when the average first surpassed it on Jan. 8 of last year.

And one emphatic message of the crash on Oct. 19 seemed to be that the Dow in the 2000s was too high.

Now that a semblance of stability has returned to the marketplace, a new symbolic appraisal has been made: Improvement in the trade deficit and a decline in interest rates have warranted a return to the threshold of 2,000 at least.

But to buy stocks much above that level is still considered a risky proposition.

"When the market rallies almost to 2,000 one contingent believes — loudly — that it is already running into trouble," observed Justin Mamin in a current market commentary for the investment firm of Cowen & Co.

"Another group quickly gets labeled on TV as 'emergent bulls' and insists they've never given up faith in new Dow highs."

In the past week the industrial average closed above 2,000 on threshold of 2,000 at least.

But to buy stocks much above that level is still considered a risky proposition.

"When the market rallies almost to 2,000 one contingent believes — loudly — that it is already running into trouble," observed Justin Mamin in a current market commentary for the investment firm of Cowen & Co.

"Another group quickly gets labeled on TV as 'emergent bulls' and insists they've never given up faith in new Dow highs."

In the past week the industrial average closed above 2,000 on Tuesday and Wednesday after the Washington's Birthday holiday, slipped back briefly, and then jumped ahead again. It closed Friday at 2,014.59, up 31.33 from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 2.10 to 146.96; the American Stock Exchange market value index 3.16 to 280.16, and the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market 3.85 to 357.12.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 160.98 million shares a day, against 179.43 million the week before.

Judge to rule March 7 on Bhopal case appeal

BHOPAL, India (AP) — A judge said Friday he would rule March 7 on Union Carbide Corp.'s appeal of a court order that it pay $270 million in interim relief to victims of the Bhopal gas leak.

Another judge hearing the government's $3 billion damage case against Union Carbide adjourned proceedings until March 16 to await the decision in the appeal.

High Court Judge S.K. Seth heard closing arguments on the appeal of the interim relief order, which Carbide says is unfair until liability in the 1984 disaster is determined.

More than 2,800 people died and at least 20,000 were seriously injured when gas leaked from a Carbide subsidiary in Bhopal, in central India.

Attorney F.S. Nariman, representing the Danbury, Conn.-based company, told the court Friday that the order would not be enforceable in the United States, the United News of India reported.

But Indian government attorney K. Parasaran said India had succeeded in previous claims cases, the news agency said.

Meanwhile, Bhopal District Judge M.W. Deo adjourned hearings in the main damages case until after the appeals verdict is issued.

It was Deo who ordered Carbide last December to deposit $270 million to be used as "interim relief" payments for victims. He said the victims were in great need and could not wait for help.

The government filed its suit on behalf of the victims Sept. 5, 1986, accusing Carbide of negligence. Union Carbide claims the accident was the result of sabotage by a disgruntled employee.

All's quiet on economic front

By Peter Coy
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — All's quiet on the economic front, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan declared this past week, and most economists were inclined to agree.

True, the economy remains at risk of slipping into a mild, election-year recession — some economists say one has already begun.

True, too, the huge trade and budget deficits will eventually have to come down, and the transition could be painful.

But in spite of all the problems, Greenspan was onto something in remarks this past Tuesday after a speech to the Bretton Woods Committee.

"The relationships at the moment among all the major financial variables seem to be in relative balance," Greenspan told the private group of economists, executives and former government officials.

"For the moment, we are in equilibrium," he added.

Such words could not have been spoken four months ago, when the chief of the nation's central bank was pledging to inject money into the banking system to protect the economy from the worst crash in Wall Street history.

Aftershocks of the crash that wiped out half a trillion dollars in stock value in a single day seem to have been slight.

In recent days the outward measures of the economy have been almost monotonous. Not great, but not terrible, either.

The dollar has hung around 130 Japanese yen, the Dow Jones industrial average has stuck close to 2,000 points and the yield on the Treasury's 30-year bond has evened out at a little under 8.5 percent.

Of course, the markets have shown themselves to be capable of sliding into chaos with less than a moment's notice. But so far, so good.

"One of the advantages a Fed chairman has in testifying before Congress is it only has to be true until he leaves the table," observed Robert C. Holland, a former Fed official and president of the Washington-based Committee for Economic Development.

"There's no driving force (in the markets). Fearful expectations seem to be tranquilized at the moment," Holland said.

Analysts took Greenspan's remarks to mean that the Fed had no intention of pushing interest rates lower to stave off a possible recession, the formula pushed by an odd mixture of liberals and election-minded Republicans.

President Reagan is nervous that the central bank could spoil his final year in office by inadvertently triggering a recession.

"There appears to be no need, at present, for restrictive monetary measures," the administration said Thursday in the economic outlook section of its 1989 budget proposal.

The Reagan administration is doing its own part to keep the economy growing through that old GOP nemesis, deficit spending. Reagan's final budget request provides for a 1989 deficit of $130 billion, and it could turn out far larger in case of a slowdown.

Greenspan's steady-as-she-goes strategy is earning respect even from the kind of economists who ordinarily lobby for stronger economic growth, such as Princeton University's Alan Blinder.

New York tabloid gets new deadline

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Post owner Rupert Murdoch said the newspaper had at least one more day of life as negotiations continued late Friday in an effort to save the nation's oldest continuously published daily.

Murdoch had said the paper would fold Friday unless its unions provided $24 million in concessions needed to close a deal with a buyer for the money-losing tabloid known for its screaming headlines and cheesecake photos.

But as talks stretched five hours past his 2 p.m. deadline, Murdoch left a meeting of management and the unions saying the Post would publish on Saturday. "We're going to keep working through the night," Murdoch said at a hotel where talks involving him, other members of management and union leaders were being held.

At the Post's offices, editors were preparing the Saturday edition.

Business in Brief

Chiropractor opens center

Dr. Brendan Marinan, who recently moved from New Orleans to Manchester, has opened the Burnside Chiropractic Center at 700 Burnside Ave., East Hartford.

Marinan is a native of Connecticut and a 1971 graduate of Wesleyan University. He received his doctorate from the Los Angeles College of Chiropractic. He was director of the Uptown Chiropractic Clinic in New Orleans for 10 years.

The new office, located above Arthur Drugs, provides chiropractic care for those injured in sports, auto accidents and on the job. Traditional chiropractic family health care is also available.

Business Express adds flights

WINDSOR LOCKS — Business Express, a Delta Connection regional airline based here, said Friday it will start service between Boston and Martha's Vineyard, Mass., beginning April 3.

The flights will operate from Delta gates at Logan International Airport in Boston, the airline said. Business Express serves 24 cities in the Northeast.

ICC rules Gullford hurt union

WASHINGTON — The Interstate Commerce Commission, ruling that a management reorganization by a New England railroad has "substantially injured" unionized workers, on Friday announced that the company must negotiate a new agreement with employees.

Gullford Transportation Industries Inc. last year began switching operations of four subsidiaries — Boston & Maine Corp., Maine Central Railroad Co., Portland Terminal Co. and Delaware and Hudson Railway Co. — to Springfield Terminal Railway Co.

Life premium earns interest

QUESTION: Our broker, who usually pitches stocks, has been pushing life insurance since the stock market went into its October dive. He advises us to put a large amount of money into a single-premium life insurance policy and says we would then receive monthly tax-free interest payments. What do you say?

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

ANSWER: I'd like to think you misunderstood what the broker told you. If you didn't and are actually relaying what he said, that broker did some damage to the facts.

You purchase a single-premium life insurance policy with one payment. That minimum "single premium" usually is at least $5,000, and you can buy in much larger amounts.

The premium earns interest and builds up cash value. That cash value buildup is not subject to income tax unless you surrender the policy. If you keep the policy until you join the choir silent, your beneficiary pays no tax.

You can borrow against the policy's increased cash value. Some single-premium policies allow you to obtain the loans at the same rate the cash value earns in interest — in effect an interest-free loan. With other policies, you have just a small out-of-pocket interest cost.

Borrowings reduce the death benefit your beneficiary will receive, but the borrowings do provide you with money. With many single-premium policies, arrangements can be made so that you automatically obtain a new loan and a check every month.

Nonetheless, despite what you say that broker told you, the money you take out of a single-premium life insurance policy is not interest. It's your own money you are borrowing. And because it's your own money, it is not subject to income tax.

QUESTION: Our broker has advised us to cash in a $50,000 municipal bond, which pays 9.75 percent but doesn't mature until the year 2023, and use the money to increase our single premium life insurance.

He said bond values can go down quickly and he doesn't want to see us lose on the bond. If the bond does go down, I feel we can keep it until it goes up. What do you advise?

ANSWER: Keep the bond. Its market value will fluctuate between now and its maturity date 35 long years into the future. But you shouldn't worry about that. Instead, be happy and collect the bond's 9.75 percent annual interest. Municipal bond interest is free from federal income tax.

The bond will be paid off at face value when it matures. If it's called for early redemption, you'll get more than face value. Either way, that's a better deal than the buildup of tax-free interest in a single-premium life insurance policy.

The 9.75 percent tax-free interest you are collecting on the bond is a very attractive rate. It's unlikely you would get a much higher rate on a single-premium life insurance policy.

Also, you can't "cash in" a municipal bond before its maturity or call date. To get money for that bond, you would have to sell it. Unless it's an actively traded issue, it can be difficult to sell a municipal bond at a realistic price.

QUESTION: After selling a $75,000 single-premium life insurance policy to my husband and a similar one to me, our broker wants to sell us another one for $50,000 but with a different insurance company.

I think he feels we shouldn't have all our insurance money with one company. What do you think?

ANSWER: That you are a bit naive. It's time you did some comparison. By extracting facts and figures from the broker, you'll probably learn you could obtain more insurance in one policy from one company. That also means the broker would collect more commissions by spreading your business around.

Pair of Brians top skate final

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — With all the requirements out of the way, the Battle of the Brians for the Olympic figure skating gold medal comes down to "the biggest minutes of our lives."

Those 4 1/2 minutes come Saturday night in the long program, an exhibition of freestyle skating at which both American Brian Boitano and Canadian Brian Orser excel.

Boitano, 24 of Sunnyvale, Calif., leads Orser, 26 and the reigning world champion, in the overall standings, but that doesn't matter. Whichever Brian wins the long — it's unlikely the judges will score anyone higher — will take the gold.

"You've got to have faith in the system or it's all sour grapes," Boitano said after finishing second to Orser in the short program, worth 20 percent of the total score. Combined with his second place in the compulsories, worth 30 percent, Boitano took the overall lead.

Like Boitano, Orser — who was third behind Alexander Fadeev of the Soviet Union and Boitano in the school figures — thus far has duplicated his results at the 1987 World Championships in Cincinnati. When Orser won the long program there, he ended a string of runner-up finishes that included the 1984 Olympics and the 1984, '85 and '86 worlds.

"We all know it still comes down to the long program," said Orser, who won the short event though Boitano skated just as flawlessly to a harder program. "There is no room between Brian Boitano and myself."

"We are great friends but that doesn't mean when I get on the ice, I don't want to win the medals from him. I want to win the medals, so does he."

"I don't think anybody has an edge over anybody."

Orser needs to finish ahead of Boitano Saturday night to win. In the unlikely event that neither Brian is first in the freestyle — but both finish in the top four — whichever Brian winds up better in the long program gets the gold.

Fadeev, the 1985 world champion, just about eliminated himself from gold medal contention with a disastrous ninth place in the short program.

Boitano will skate first in the final group, "which is best for me. Then comes Fadeev and Orser. I think we are all tied and whoever does the best performance will win."

Boitano, the four-time U.S. champion and 1986 world titlist, and Orser both wear military costumes for their freestyle routines. Boitano skates to music from the film "Napoleon," and his program depicts the various stages of a soldier's life.

Orser skates to "The Bolt," by Shostakovich. "It's very powerful," he said. "It sounds like the kind of music you would play when you are lighting the torch."

When he hears it, Orser said, "I can picture the Olympics. It starts off with a fanfare. It's about going to battle and returning."

Both Brians had problems with their long programs at their national championships. Boitano touched down twice at Denver, while Orser fell on his triple axels at the Canadian championships.

Neither, however, are thinking negatively. They said they would prosper from being off Friday.

Underdog Kiehl cops downhill

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — A winner lost and a loser won Friday in the women's downhill, while America looked forward to shedding its loser's image at the Winter Olympics.

Michela Figini of Switzerland was supposed to become the first Alpine repeat winner at an Olympics as she defended her downhill title. She finished ninth.

Marina Kiehl, a super-giant slalom specialist from West Germany, had never won a World Cup downhill race. She won the gold.

"When I came to the finish, I thought, 'Not bad, but not a medal,'" Kiehl said, clutching a stuffed animal she called "Teufel," or devil. "Now I'm here (being interviewed). I can't believe it."

Friday was not supposed to belong to America, and it didn't. The United States failed to add to its medal total of one bronze. It hoped to change all that on Saturday.

America's best shot for a gold medal is figure skater Brian Boitano of Sunnyvale, Calif., who goes into the men's freestyle program with a tenuous lead over world champion Brian Orser of Canada.

Eric Flaim of Pembroke, Mass., who has finished fourth already in two shorter races, could win a medal in the 1,500-meter speed skating event.

Josh Thompson of Gunnison, Colo., who became the first American ever to win a medal in a world championships with a silver last year, carries U.S. hopes in the 20-kilometer biathlon.

The Soviets added two more medals in cross-country skiing, a gold and a bronze, and now have 13, including five golds. East Germany took the first two places in doubles luge and has eight medals, four gold.

Host Canada finally won its first medal, a bronze in the downhill by Karen Percy. And that probably will keep Canada from becoming the most hospitable host in Winter Olympics history.

In 1924 at Chamonix, France, and in 1928 at St. Moritz, Switzerland, the host countries won just one bronze. With an assist from Orser and perhaps its hockey team, Canada can do better than that.

Kiehl won the downhill by three-quarters of a second over Brigitte Oertli of Switzerland, one of the world's best all-around skiers. Percy was a hundredth of a second behind Oertli, and Figini was nearly 1 1/2 seconds behind Kiehl.

Figini was heavily favored to defend the title she won in 1984 at Sarajevo, but she was hard put to attack the twisting upper portion of the course with the winds still blowing. She had trouble with a fallaway turn near the top of the course, then caught a gust of wind on the next turn.

HAPPY WINNER — Marina Kiehl of West Germany is all smiles after she won the gold medal in the Olympic women's downhill event Friday. Kiehl, a super-giant slalom specialist, had never won a World Cup downhill event before.

"I don't like to be unfair to the winner, but wind made the race easy for a few and difficult for many others," Figini said. "I was among the latter."

The winds of winter, called Chinook in these parts, were playing a big part in these Games. They forced delays, blew ski racers around like tumbleweed and had organizers blustered over suggestions that the 90-meter ski jump be moved.

"The Olympics are in Calgary, and the ski jumping will take place in Calgary," organizing chairman Frank King said, even if it means holding the event after the closing ceremonies.

Based on the forecast for continued wind, officials postponed the 90-meter ski jump from Saturday and moved it to Monday. That once again delays Matti Nykanen's quest for an unprecedented second jumping gold medal.

The women's downhill originally was scheduled for Thursday, but it was postponed a day by winds that gusted up to 70 mph and blew Oertli right off the course. Even on Friday, some skiers felt the race shouldn't have been run in 35 mph winds with higher gusts.

"We should not have started the race," said Sigrid Wolf of Austria, who had consistently fast training times but missed a gate one-third of the way down. "It's bitter to lose this way because the Olympics are a one-in-four years opportunity."

Kiehl said she forced herself not to think about the wind. "At the top, I had problems. I was fast and sometimes I couldn't hold my tuck," she said. "At the start, I wanted to have it in my mind that if I caught the wind, not to let it disturb me."

America's top hope in the downhill, Pam Fletcher, broke her leg in warmups Thursday. The top U.S. finisher was Edith Thys of Squaw Valley, Calif., who finished 18th. Hilary Lindh of Juneau, Alaska, who had some competitive training times, missed a gate.

The U.S. hockey team, coming off an adrenalin-draining 7-5 loss to the Soviets, played winless Norway Friday night. It was a must-win if America wanted to keep alive its chances of making the medal round from the B Group.

Other B Group games were West Germany-Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia-Austria.

Mikhail Deviatarov of the Soviet Union won the men's 15-kilometer cross-country race and teammate Vladimir Smirnov added a bronze to the silver he won in the 30 kilometers. That gave the Soviets eight of the 12 cross-country medals awarded at the Games so far.

Family support aids Jansen's return home

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (AP) — While millions of Americans watched in disbelief as Dan Jansen's hopes for Olympic gold were shattered for the second time, his family tried to put the shock behind them and display a sense of unity.

"There are things in this life that people can't control," said Geraldine Jansen, the speed skater's mother. "You struggle to make peace with those things. Everything else you try to make better."

"It's just probably not in the cards, I guess, for us to have even one medal."

Jansen, who had to carry both the hopes of an Olympic medal and the burden of his sister's death, returned home early Friday morning, hours after his second heartbreak at the Calgary Games.

Jansen, 22, appeared headed for a medal in the 1,000-meter speed skating race Thursday night, but he fell to the ice with about 200 meters left. Four nights earlier, after learning that his 27-year-old sister, Jane Beres, had died of leukemia, Jansen fell in the first turn of the 500-meter event, another race in which he was favored to win.

"Everyone's been supportive, and I'd like to thank everyone for that," Jansen said when he arrived at Milwaukee's Mitchell Airport. Jansen, who came home for his sister's funeral on Saturday, did not wish to discuss his ordeal further on Friday, family members said.

But before Thursday's race, Mrs. Jansen stressed how the Olympics were not the most important thing in her son's or family's life.

"We don't care if Dan wins a medal," she said. And her husband, Harry Jansen, echoed that sentiment after the race.

"I'm proud of him," he said. "He did well just to get out there and set an example for everyone else."

Jansen said he spoke with his son earlier Thursday, and while his spirits were improved, he was still riding an emotional roller coaster.

"I asked him how he was doing, and he said he was feeling pretty good," Jansen said. "But then he would read some of the nice telegrams he got and he said would start feeling down again."

One of the messages Jansen received came in the form of a banner with thousands of signatures.

The banner — which proclaimed: "Dan be strong. Keep the faith. Wisconsin is with you all the way" — symbolized the way the community rallied around their hometown hero.

A Milwaukee County supervisor, in fact, proposed that a park in West Allis be renamed "Jansen Park." The resolution from Supervisor Susan Baldwin says the Jansens are "a world-class family ... whose intense support for each other in times of triumph and tragedy have earned them a 'Family Gold Medal.'"

A neighbor of the Jansens, Jeanine Morgan, said her eyes filled with tears upon seeing the fall of the young man she watched grow up.

"It was hard to watch," she said. But Morgan added she would congratulate Jansen when she saw him.

"He's a winner in everybody's eyes," she said.

East Germans sweep the luge

By Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — World champions Joerg Hoffmann and Jochen Pietzsch gave East Germany a sweep of the Olympic luge gold medals by winning the doubles in record time Friday.

Hoffmann and Pietzsch, both 24, improved on their 1984 bronze performance by setting a course record of 45.786 seconds on their first run.

They followed with a second-run of 46.154 for a total of 1:31.940, about one-tenth of a second faster than teammates Stefan Krausse and Jan Behrendt, both 20, who won the silver at 1:32.039, giving East Germany six of the nine medals awarded in the sport.

West Germany's Thomas Schwab and Wolfgang Staudinger, the 1987 World Cup leaders, took the bronze at 1:32.274 over the 4,104-foot course.

The Soviet pair of Evgeni Belousov and Alexandre Beliakov, silver medalists in 1984, were third after the first heat, but had a poor second run of 46.580, dropping them into a tie for seventh.

The East Germans had won all three women's luge medals Thursday and Jens Mueller earned the gold in men's singles Monday.

The top American finishers Friday were Czechoslovakian immigrant Miroslav Zajonc, who was wearing a cast on his foot because of a January accident, and Tim Nardiello of Lake Placid, N.Y., who were 11th at 1:33.306.

GOLD MEDAL RUN — East Germany's Joerg Hoffman, front, and Jochen Pietzsch speed down the luge course on their way to a gold medal in the Olympic luge doubles in Calgary on Friday.

Winds have been only distraction in Calgary

By Larry Siddons
The Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta — Winds that have kept Calgary mild and drafty over the last week are the only blotch so far on the Winter Olympics and "should not be blown out of proportion, pardon the pun," the chairman of the Games' organizers said Friday.

Frank King, chief executive officer of OCO '88, said the Chinook that has forced postponement of four events in the first week of the Olympics was an unusual occurrence but one that could affect the city's reputation as a winter sports center.

"The winds are the only serious problem the Olympic Games have had so far," King said at a news conference. "They usually come to southern Alberta for a day or two, and to have them since the opening ceremonies (last Saturday) is most unusual."

"We should not overemphasize a bad thing, but it's an ill wind that blows no good."

Calmer air should cover Calgary by early next week, said Bruce Thompson of Environment Canada, the nation's weather service.

King said the 16 days of the Games, the longest ever for a Winter Olympics, gave organizers plenty of time to wait out the weather and reschedule events "in the interest of the athletes' safety" and the International Olympic Committee agreed.

"There is no reason to panic. There is no emergency," said Michele Verdier, the IOC's spokeswoman.

Both OCO and the IOC said other Winter Games had weather problems, too. A blizzard played havoc with skiing in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, four years ago. Warm weather in Grenoble, France, in 1968 forced bobsled runs to be held early in the morning or at night. And in Innsbruck, Austria, in 1964, winds tore down a tent when figure skating was being held.

Verdier said there had been no discussion about extending the Games past their scheduled end on Feb. 28. But King said it could happen, particularly with the wind-plagued 90-meter ski jumps, which were postponed on Friday from Saturday until Monday because of the weekend forecast for continued strong winds.

"We will keep scheduling until the event is held," he said. "It would not be the first time in Winter Olympics that an event took place after the closing ceremonies."

Records showed just one time an event was held after the Games officially ended. In 1932 at Lake Placid, the four-man bobsled was raced on Feb. 15, a day after the closing ceremonies.

The OCO official said moving the 90-meter jumping out of Calgary was "unthinkable."

King said about $300,000 has been paid so far in ticket refunds for weather-postponed events. He said those tickets would be resold, and that a $25 million surplus or "contingency fund" remained untouched.

The OCO chief also said that concern over empty VIP seats at figure skating, ice hockey and other sold-out events amounted to "a missing-tooth syndrome" where a few scattered vacancies stand out in an otherwise packed house. Some of those empty seats will be offered for public sale, officials said.

But King acknowledged that OCO was concerned over the weather.

Sports in Brief

Little League holding signups

The Manchester Little League will conduct signups this Sunday and Feb. 28 upstairs at the American Legion Hall on Legion Drive between 1 and 4 p.m. each day.

Signups are for all youngsters ages 7 through 12. Age is determined as of July 31, 1988. Birth certificates are required at time of registration and a parent or guardian must accompany all youngsters at the signup sessions. Registration is $15 per player or $20 per family.

League tryouts are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, March 19 and 20. Anyone interested in coaching, umpiring, as commissioners or in any other capacity is asked to attend one of the signup sessions.

For further information, call Frank Galasso at 643-4506 or Paul Scheinblum at 649-6470.

East Catholic hockey in action

The East Catholic hockey team (13-4) will take on Notre Dame of West Haven tonight at 6:30 at the Bennett Rink in West Haven. Both teams are ranked in the top 10 in the state. Notre Dame beat East, 6-2, on Jan. 13 at the Bolton Ice Palace.

Sports in Brief

SBM becomes MCC Relay sponsor

Savings Bank of Manchester has joined Pratt and Whitney as co-sponsor of the 13th annual MCC New England Relays to be held Saturday and Sunday, June 18-19. SBM's contribution will be $4,000. There will be over 70 track and field events Saturday, including the invitational Christie McCormick Mile, and a 4-mile run and a 4-mile walk race on Sunday.

Whalers play Islanders twice

HARTFORD — The Hartford Whalers (25-26-7) will play the New York Islanders (27-23-8) twice this weekend beginning today at 5 p.m. (Channel 18, WTC) at the Nassau County Coliseum. The pair will hook up again Sunday night at 7 (SportsChannel, WTC) at the Civic Center. The Whalers, in fourth place in the Adams Division seven points ahead of last-place Quebec, are 3-1 since Larry Pleau took over as head coach.

UConn hosts Syracuse

HARTFORD — The University of Connecticut (13-9, 4-8 in the Big East) will host 12th-ranked Syracuse University (19-6, 8-4 in the Big East) in a Big East matchup tonight (8, Channel 20, WPOP) at the Civic Center. The Orangemen are coming off an 82-68 win over St. John's on Wednesday night while UConn routed Fairfield, 74-48, Thursday night. UConn edged Syracuse, 51-50, at the Carrier Dome on Jan. 16.

Wrestling championships on tap

The Manchester High, East Catholic, and Cheney Tech wrestling teams will take part in the state Class Wrestling Championship Meets today. Manchester will compete in the Class LL Meet at Glastonbury High School while East and Cheney will be in the Class M Meet at Foran High in Milford. Preliminary matches took place Friday night while the quarterfinal matches were scheduled to begin this morning at 10:30. The finals will be held tonight at 8.

Cougars at Coast Guard JV

NEW LONDON — The red-hot Manchester Community College Cougars (18-7) on the road to take on the Coast Guard Academy junior varsity today at 4 p.m. The Cougars, ranked eighth among New England junior colleges, have won 11 straight.

Soviets to play in the NHL

CALGARY, Alberta — Soviet hockey authorities have agreed to release players to the NHL, and there is a slim chance it could happen before the end of this season, the executive director of the NHL Players Association said Friday. Alan Eagleson said there was a 10 percent chance that Soviet players would play in the NHL before the end of the current season and a 90 percent chance that it will happen for the 1988-89 season.

Parcells signs pact extension

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bill Parcells on Friday put an end to year-long speculation that he might be leaving the New York Giants by signing a contract extension to coach the NFL club for at least another four years.

Giants General Manager George Young would not disclose terms of the contract, but The Associated Press learned that Parcells will coach the team until at least 1991.

It has been reported that Parcells will receive about $3.2 million under terms of the contract, which was for the most part negotiated last year. Parcells, 46, had been rumored as a possible candidate for a number of jobs since the Giants won Super Bowl XXI in 1987. Less than a week after the Giants defeated Denver 39-20, reports had Parcells going to the Atlanta Falcons.

Barkley paces 76ers over Nets

NBA Roundup

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley scored 43 points, hitting 16 of 22 shots to lead the Philadelphia 76ers to a 115-100 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets Friday night. The win snapped Philadelphia's three-game losing streak, while New Jersey lost its sixth straight road game. The Nets have now lost 24 of 25 games away from home this season.

Bulls 111, Kings 90

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan scored 18 of his 49 points in the second quarter and broke open a close game with 16 points and two steals in the third period Friday night, lifting the Chicago Bulls to a 111-90 victory over the Sacramento Kings.

Bullets 106, Spurs 102

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bernard King scored 22 points and Moses Malone 17, including four free throws in the final 1:06, as the Washington Bullets beat the San Antonio Spurs 106-102 Friday night.

San Antonio's Frank Brickowski led all scorers with 26 points and Johnny Dawkins had 16. Jeff Malone and Terry Catledge each had 20 points for the Bullets.

Mavericks 113, Warriors 100

DALLAS (AP) — Rolando Blackman and Mark Aguirre scored 27 points apiece Friday night, leading Dallas to a 113-100 victory over the Golden State Warriors and the Mavericks' 300th victory in franchise history.

Dallas, 300-324 in eight years, extended its home unbeaten string against Golden State to 14. The Mavericks won their fourth straight and fifth in six games.

Lakers 126, Hawks 119, OT

ATLANTA (AP) — James Worthy scored a career-high 38 points and Byron Scott had six points in overtime, including the go-ahead basket, as the Los Angeles Lakers overcame a 17-point second-half deficit to down the Atlanta Hawks 126-119 Friday night.

Atlanta's Antoine Carr hit a pair of free throws with five seconds left to force the overtime at 111-111.

Magic Johnson had 29 points, 11 rebounds and 19 assists for the Lakers, while Scott finished with 18 points and Cliff Levingston equalled his career-best with 29 points.

The Lakers, who own the best record in the NBA at 41-9, won their sixth straight and 13th in 14 games.

Flyers nip Sabres

NHL Roundup

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Rick Tocchet scored two first-period goals, helping Philadelphia overcome a 2-0 deficit and sparking the Flyers to a 5-4 NHL victory over the Buffalo Sabres Friday night. Brian Propp, Mark Howe and Scott Mellanby were the other Flyer goal-scorers, while Mike Folligno, John Tucker, Doug Smith and Phil Housley tallied for the Sabres.

Devils 6, Rangers 3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Doug Brown scored two goals and set up another Friday night as the New Jersey Devils defeated the New York Rangers 6-3. The victory moved the Devils into a tie for fourth place with Pittsburgh, three points ahead of the last-place Rangers in the Patrick Division.

Mets trying to get it together

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets, who fell apart last season, are trying to get it together early this year.

Gary Carter, Keith Hernandez, Ron Darling, Bob Ojeda and Howard Johnson are already at spring training, even though the Mets' first official workout isn't until Monday.

"It's a great sign that so many guys are here. That hunger is back again," Carter said Friday. "If we win this year I think this place will be a big reason why."

Several other teams opened camp and began workouts Friday. Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, trying to join the Mets in chasing the National League East champion St. Louis Cardinals, were among those starting up.

The Mets, the World Series winners in 1986, never hit their stride last season. Injuries were a primary reason, although complacency may have been a factor.

Mookie Wilson, Roger McDowell, Rick Aguilera, David Cone, Randy Myers, Wally Backman and Tim Lincecum also are at the Mets' new camp in Port St. Lucie, Fla. The complex has 15 batting cages and 6 1/2 fields, including an AstroTurf diamond.

Wilson, platooned with Len Dykstra in center field last year, requested a trade during the season.

"I still expect to be traded," Wilson said. Cleveland and Oakland may give Wilson a chance to play full-time.

The Pirates, hoping to contend in the NL East, held their first workouts Friday for pitchers and catchers. Third baseman Bobby Bonilla and first baseman Sid Bream also participated in drills at Bradenton, Fla.

General manager Syd Thrift warned Pittsburgh's 14 unsigned players that their contracts would be renewed if agreements were not worked out by March 1.

"A lot of teams use the rule to coerce players into signing but I don't think that's right," Thrift said. "They tell them they'll give them $200,000 if they sign but that if they have to renew the contract they'll do it for $160,000. I will make an honest offer and I will live up to it."

Among the unsigned Pirates are Mike LaValliere, last year's NL Gold Glove catcher.

LaValliere earned $120,000 last year and is asking that his salary be doubled. He led NL catchers in throwing out runners attempting to steal and batted a career-high .300.

"We're not really close," LaValliere said. "I have no quarrel with Syd renewing the contracts on March 1. You have to have a deadline. ... We came up with a fair figure off last year and what I am capable of doing this year. All I want is a fair shake."

In Arizona, the Seattle Mariners and Cleveland Indians began work to improve dismal finishes last year.

LA JOLLA, Calif. — Don Pooley fired eight birdies Friday on the way to a 7-under-par 65 and a one-shot lead at the midway point of the $50,000 Andy Williams Open Golf Tournament.

"It's been an all-round good effort for me over the last two days," Pooley said after he completed one round on each of two courses at 132, 12 shots under par.

"I don't have many regrets for either round," said Pooley, winner of two titles in a 13-season career.

Tom Kite and Bob Tway were tied for second at 133 after shooting 65s. Kite birdied four of his last five holes on the North course and Tway birdied six of his first seven at the South.

Douglass tops Seniors

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Dale Douglass had six birdies on his way to a 5-under-par 67 Friday for a two-stroke lead after his first round of the $300,000 Suncoast Seniors Golf Classic.

Orville Moody and Don Masgenale were tied for second at 69. Arnold Palmer, Bruce Devlin and Gary Player were another stroke back at 70.

Douglass made four birdie putts of six feet or less on his way to the lead at the Tampa Palms Golf and Country Club.

"I was fortunate to hit a lot of fairways and get a lot of approach shots close to the hole," Douglass said. "When you don't do those things, it's extremely hard to score well here."

MHS girls upset Enfield, qualify for tourney

H.S. Roundup

"Believing and achieving."

That's how Manchester High Girls' Basketball Coach Mike Masse described the new-found attitude of his Indians, who put it into practice Friday night with a 51-48 upset win over Enfield High at Clarke Arena. The CCC East Division victory qualified the Indians, 8-10 overall, for state tournament play.

"I'm proud of the team. The attitude changed and they all started working together," Masse said. "Togetherness is the key and we're playing as a team. That's something (Assistant) Coach (John) Hackett and I stress."

Manchester, winners of four of its last five with the lone setback to Rockville, is now 6-6 in league play. Enfield, which topped the Indians by 17 points (54-37) in the first meeting, is now 8-4 in the CCC East and 12-5 overall.

Chris Rovegno tallied 11 of her team-high 15 points in the third stanza for Manchester. The Indians, who trailed 20-19 at the half, took a 34-30 lead after three quarters.

"We qualified for the tourney which is super. We don't have to wait the weekend," Masse said.

Val Holden added 13 points while Lisa Cartier and freshman Shelly Dieterle grabbed 9 and 8 rebounds, respectively, for Manchester. Kim Tyler netted a game-high 18 points to pace Enfield.

Manchester also won the junior varsity game, 51-35. Trish O'Connell (14) and Beth O'Brien (13) led the 13-5 young Indians.

Manchester is back in action Monday at South Windsor High at 7:30 p.m.

MANCHESTER (51) — Val Holden 6-1-2-13, Barb O'Brien 1-3-5, Chris Rovegno 5-4-1-15, Lisa Cartier 3-0-0-6, Tina Stone 2-2-6, Beth O'Brien 0-0-0-0, Shelly Dieterle 2-2-6. Totals 19-12-21-51.

East upsets Ellington

ELLINGTON — Foul shooting was the deciding factor for the East Catholic girls' basketball team as it pulled away with a 48-38 victory over host Ellington High Friday night.

East is now 11-9 and the third-ranked Eagles will take part in the All Connecticut Conference tournament Monday against St. Joseph at 7:45 p.m. at Xavier High in Middletown. Top-ranked Mercy High, which beat St. Joseph in double overtime Friday night, 60-56, will oppose fourth-ranked Sacred Heart in the 5:45 p.m. opener. The consolation and championship games are Wednesday night, also at Xavier High.

Ellington falls to 19-2.

The clutch foul shooting of Karen Mozdierz and Amelia Bearse, who led the Eagles with 22 and 15 points, respectively, was the difference for East as it broke away from a 29-25 edge after three quarters. For the game, Bearse and Mozdierz were 17-of-22 from the charity stripe.

Bearse sank 9-of-10 free throws in the final stanza while Mozdierz was a perfect 4-for-4. "Our foul shooting won the game for us," East Coach Donna Ridel said. "They (Bearse and Mozdierz) came through in the clutch."

Jo Marie Rucci and Maura McPadden combined for 13 rebounds and they, along with Noel Feehan, were cited by Ridel for their fine defensive efforts.

Ellington held a slender 11-10 lead after one quarter, but East took a 22-19 halftime edge. "We were able to slow down their fast break in the second half," Ridel said.

still in contention against Charter Oak Conference foe Rocky Hill High School.

However, the visiting Terriers outscored the Beavers, 44-19, in the second half and cruised to a 76-45 victory Friday night. Cheney falls to 1-17 overall while Rocky Hill moves to 10-8.

Cheney will be at Cromwell Tuesday night at 7:30. After trailing, 13-5, after one quarter, Cheney was only down, 32-26 at halftime. "It was still a ballgame (at half)," Cheney Coach Aaron Silvia said. "In the first quarter, we gave them 10 of their 13 points."

Rocky Hill led, 49-36, after three quarters and blew this one open in the final stanza. "We had to go man-to-man (defense) and they took it to us and got easy hoops," Silvia explained.

Chris Knott led Rocky Hill with 17 points while Sean Walsted led Cheney with a game-high 18 points. "Walsted played well," Silvia commented. "He (Walsted) has developed some nice moves to the hoop."

Manchester slams Enfield

ENFIELD — Playing well from the outset, Manchester High boys' basketball team surged to its eighth consecutive victory, 94-64, over host Enfield High Friday night in CCC East Division play.

The red-hot Indians are now 11-1 in the league and 16-1 overall. The loss drops the winless Raiders to 0-12, 0-18.

The Indian win, coupled with East Hartford's 63-55 loss to Hartford Public, puts the Indians and Hornets into a tie for the lead in the CCC East. The teams are scheduled to meet this coming Friday night at the Hornets' gym. East Hartford won the first meeting, 74-60 (Jan. 26) for the Indians' only loss of the season.

Manchester's next game is Tuesday at Clarke Arena at 7:30 p.m. against South Windsor High. Members of the Manchester High 1938 CCIL State and New England championship team will be honored in ceremonies prior to the varsity game.

"We played well from the beginning," Manchester Coach Frank Kinell said. "We were up 10-0 at the (game) gave everybody a chance to play and get in quite a few minutes. Everybody who played scored. That was good."

Manchester had a 26-15 lead after one quarter and extended its lead to 52-25 at the half. It was 71-45 after three quarters.

Jason Goddard led the Indians with 21 points along with 10 rebounds. Junior center Paris Oates had 15 points and 12 rebounds while point guard Matt Vaughn had 13 points and 6 assists. Cory Goldston chipped in 9 points, as did Calvin Meggett,

Coventry trips Vinal

COVENTRY — With Ron Gardner putting the defensive clamps on Vinal's Jay Mounts in the second half, Coventry High posted a 77-72 victory over Vinal Tech Friday night in COC boys' basketball action.

The Patriots are now 12-6 overall while the Hawks fall to 8-10. Coventry's next game is Tuesday against Bacon Academy in Colchester.

Mounts had five 3-pointers in the first half en route to a 17-point edge. That helped the visitors to a 43-40 halftime bulge. Gardner took the assignment on Mounts in the second half, holding him to just eight further points. "We changed our defense the second half. We just shut him (Mounts) down and played better defense," Coventry Coach Ron Badstuebner said.

Jack Ayer, Scott Lucas and Gardner each had 6 points in the third quarter for Coventry as the Patriots took a 61-56 lead into the final eight minutes of play. Lucas finished with a team-high 22 while Ayer netted 21.

Coventry won it from the foul line, hitting 21-of-29 opportunities compared to 7-for-13 for Vinal. The Patriots maintained control in the fourth quarter from the charity stripe, converting 11 of 15.

Mounts, who had seven 3-pointers, had 25 and Paul Serra 24 to lead the way for Vinal. Lucas and Gardner each grabbed 9 rebounds for Coventry.

Bolton tops Hale-Ray

BOLTON — Going to a box-and-one with six minutes left turned the tide as Bolton High subdued Hale-Ray of Moodus, 65-57, in non-conference boys' basketball action Friday night.

The win lifts the Bulldogs to 5-13 for the season while the Little Noises are now 6-12. Bolton's next game is Tuesday at home against COC rival Rocky Hill High.

Hale-Ray owned a 29-28 halftime lead, "We spurred to a 12-point lead but then had a lot of fouls called that put them back in the game," Bolton Coach Craig Phillips said. Bolton took a 51-47 edge after three quarters. "The fourth quarter we went to the box-and-one with (Craig) Winslow on (Ed) Kostess. Kostess had 23 points but only two in the fourth quarter," Phillips cited. "We stuck to him like a moth on a windshield. Craig did a nice job and everybody else behind him in the zone played well, too."

Wade Cassells led Bolton with 19 points with Brian Rooney adding 13. Winslow chipped in 11 points along with a solid defensive job while Josh Ryan did a good job rebounding.

BOLTON (65) — Brian Rooney 6-1-1-13, Wade Cassells 8-3-4-19, Josh Ryan 4-0-1-8, Jim Hathaway 0-1-2-1, Dave DeCampe 1-0-1-2, Cliff Stoudt 2-0-5, Drew Pinto 2-0-4, Craig Winslow 5-1-3-11, Mark Yavinsky 0-0-0-0, Thomas Hermann 0-0-0-0. Totals 26-6-15-65.

Saints trip up EC

UNCASVILLE — Any All Connecticut Conference game has been a challenge for the East Catholic High boys' basketball team this season.

It was no different Friday night. The visiting Eagles had a tough time with St. Bernard's High, dropping a 64-40 decision. East falls to 2-8 in the ACC and 5-14 overall while the Saints moved to 6-3 in the league and 12-5 overall.

The Eagles' final regular season game is at home Tuesday night at 7:30 against St. Thomas Aquinas. "They (St. Bernard's) came out and took it to us," Eagle Coach Ray Page said. "We couldn't handle their pressure."

The Saints jumped out to a 17-8 edge after the first turn and held a comfortable 32-17 halftime lead. Will Flowers had 14 of his 16 points in the first 16 minutes. "We couldn't defend Flowers inside."

East trailed, 49-29, after three quarters. Reid Gorman led the Eagles with 16 points, 12 in the final stanza. Scott Altrui and Rob Stanford chipped in with eight points apiece.

Mike Buscetto scored a game-high 17 points for St. Bernard's.

East won the junior varsity game, 68-61. Gorman and Peter Lopka led the 13-4 young Eagles with 17 points each.

MHS runners qualify

NEW HAVEN — The Manchester High boys' indoor track team qualified several individuals for the Class L State Meet Thursday night at the Eastern Sectional meet held at Southern Connecticut State University.

The Class L Meet will be Wednesday at Southern. "We had good performances and qualified everybody we expected to," Indian Coach George Sutor said.

The Indians were led by the first-place finish of their 4 X 800-meter relay team of Sean Toland, Pat Dwyer, Craig Hempstead and Mike Sears. Manchester's winning time was 8:39.2.

Toland and Sears also qualified in the 800 meters with Toland third and Sears sixth. Toland was timed in 2:04.3 while Sears was caught in 2:07.9. Dave Campbell and Tuan Nguyen placed fourth and sixth in the 500 meters to advance. Campbell and Nguyen had times of 1:11.15 and 1:11.66, respectively.

Qualifying in the 1600 meters were Dana Dieterle and Rick Eaton. Dieterle was fifth with a time of 4:45.12 while Eaton was 12th in 4:51.9. Todd Clemons secured fourth place in the 300 meters with a time of 37.43.

Todd Liscomb and Hempstead qualified fifth and seventh, respectively, in the 3200 meters. Liscomb ran a 10:00.74 while Hempstead was caught in 10:17.36. The Indians' 4 X 400 relay team of Jeff DeJoannis, Nguyen, Campbell, and Clemons qualified fourth with a time of 3:41.5.

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — The U.S. hockey team kept its faint Olympic medal hopes alive Friday night, struggling to a 6-3 victory over Norway as Corey Millen and Lane MacDonald scored two goals each.

The Americans, now 2-2 and battling for the third and final spot in the medal round from their pool, still have to beat the West Germans on Sunday.

The Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia clinched medal round berths Friday and meet Sunday in a game with significance to U.S. chances. If the Czechs tie or win, the Americans only have to beat West Germany; if the Soviets win, the Americans have to win by at least two goals.

The U.S. team outshot the Norwegians 34-13, but still had a battle, especially in the second period, when Norway scored twice. Another goal, which would have put Norway ahead at the time, was disallowed for a dislodged net even though replays indicated it should have counted.

Craig Janney scored for the United States to make it 4-2 after two periods and Millen, one of only two players returning from the 1984 U.S. team that failed to make the medals round in defense of its 1980 gold medal, scored twice in the third period to clinch it.

MacDonald, who had scored twice in the 7-5 loss to the Soviet Union on Wednesday night, got the Americans started in the first period and put them ahead to stay at 3-2 in the second.

The Norwegians had nearly as much support as the United States from the sellout crowd at the 19,000-seat Saddledome as cheers of "Norway, Norway" battled those of "USA, USA" throughout the game.

There was an especially large cheer when Arne Billkvam scored at 10:41 of the second period to give Norway a 2-2 tie.

But MacDonald broke the tie at 15:02 to give the Americans a 3-2 lead they never relinquished.

The Norwegians, who allowed 22 goals and scored just four in three previous losses, trailed only 1-0 after the first period.

MacDonald scored that goal from the side after goaltender Tommy Skaarberg failed to cover a rebound of a shot by Steve Leach at 17:13.
