Adopt a pet: Bunny lonely

By Barbara Richmond
Manchester Herald

There was one lonesome dog at the dog pound on Tuesday, a female English pointer named Bunny. We hope she's adopted before Easter.

Bunny was picked up last Wednesday on Tolland Turnpike and will be ready to be adopted on Friday. Dog Warden Richard Rand said Bunny is a quiet and friendly dog and also seems to be very smart. The dog may have had a litter of puppies a while ago, Rand said.

Gaston, last week's adopted pet, a little poodle, was adopted soon after the paper hit the streets. Rand took dozens of calls from people who wanted to adopt.

However, Licorice and Casey, dogs featured in recent weeks and at the pound for several months, were put to sleep last week, Rand said. The pound is located on town property near the landfill area off Old Street. Rand is at the pound weekdays from noon to 1 p.m. The phone number at the pound is 643-6642. If there is no answer call the police department, 646-4555. There is also someone on duty at the pound Monday through Friday from 9 to 9 p.m.

There is a $5 fee to adopt a dog and the new owner must see that the dog has its rabies shots and is licensed.

Adopting from Animals Inc. has many cats and kittens that are in need of good homes. This week's featured cat is a calico beauty named Cleopatra. Judy Lazorki of Aid to Helpless Animals said they have a large variety of cats now being kept in foster homes or at veterinary clinics.

Lazorki reports on the happy story of the adoption of Buddy, one of the first felines featured in the column. He now lives in East Haddam with a family that also owns a dog named Jessie and two female cats named Gobin and Ophelia. She said the animals get along fine and Buddy has turned into a family favorite.

All of the cats put up for adoption have been neutered or spayed and have had their shots unless a kitten is too young when adopted. Anyone wishing to adopt an animal, the group does have some dogs available for adoption, should call one of the following numbers: 666-7000, 623-0489, 242-2156 or 693-6138.

The Kenyon Oil Co. will be allowed to operate a snack store at a new Xtra Mart at 228 Spruce St. as long as the shop is closed by 10 p.m.

The Zoning Board of Appeals Monday granted the variance with conditions on the hours of operation and lighting, after neighbors who live across the street raised concerns about noise. A condition of the board's approval was that the store stay open between 6 a.m. and 10 p.m. and much more concerned about the neighborhood than I am about you're adding to your business," said board Chairman Edward Hachadorian.

Kenyon Oil Co. has originally proposed that the gas station and snack mart be open between 6 a.m. and midnight, but Joseph Thompson, who lives across the street, said he was concerned about the hours and traffic at the store.

"(There's a) problem now with kids hanging out in front of the gas station," he said. "The noise factor is a concern."

Thompson said he objected to the retail part of the operation, not the gas station.

But Conrad Decker, representing Kenyon, said during his presentation that the company plans to renovate only 440 square feet of the existing station, making the store one-fifth the size of a convenience store. The snack mart would not carry large grocery items or have a delicatessen, but would probably get most business from customers who were there to buy gas, he said.

Decker said three bays of the former Mobil gas station and auto repair business would remain empty and be used for storage. There will be two gas pump islands, he said.

The board also required the company to put up a cost high fence between the Xtra Mart and the parking lot of the British American Club Inc. at 73 Maple St. after club member C.D. McCarthy said that he and other club members were concerned that people from the Xtra Mart may park and drive through the club parking lot.

The board also required that all lighted store identification signs be on the property by 11 p.m. and only security lighting stay on.

Thoughts
Even churches that are not used to frequent celebrations of Holy Communion schedule the sacrament on Maundy Thursday. We remember that it was almost Passover in Jerusalem and the disciples had gathered in the "Upper Room" for their final dinner. It should have been a meal of Jesus presence and power like any other, but it was different. Before and after the meal, Jesus took the bread and wine and proclaimed them to be his body and blood — given for the sake of the disciples and for the coming of the Kingdom. The disciples were commanded to repeat the meal "often" in his living memory.

Little did they realize what this New Covenant in his blood was all about. But after Easter this meal became the hallmark of the presence of the risen Christ. It was eaten every Sunday and became the central act of Christian worship.

As Christians throughout the world celebrate this holiest of communions they are one with each other and with their Lord as Paul tells the Corinthians: "Because there is one bread, we who are many are one body, for we all partake of the one bread." (1 Corinthians 10: 17)

School increases listed in Coventry

By Jacqueline Bennett
The Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — About a dozen people turned out for a public hearing held Wednesday at Coventry High School on the Board of Education's proposed $8.3 million budget.

The $8,304,048 proposed budget for fiscal 1988-89, which begins July 1, is up from last year's budget of $7.4 million, and represents a 13 percent increase and a 2.15 mill rate hike if approved.

"Bear in mind the Board of Education is the largest employer in the town of Coventry," Mickel later displayed the budget in the form of a pie chart. "Of this (budget), 80 percent goes to teachers, administrators and other staff negotiated salaries. Maintenance and plant operation, transportation and special or vocational education tuition are basically fixed costs (a). That leaves 4.2 percent of the budget that the board has control over," Mickel said.

Although the increase in this year's proposed budget is $900,000 over last year's, the board expects $600,000 state reimbursement to offset the increase. The mill rate hike calculation is based on anticipation of those state funds.

"Actually we're only asking the town to fund $300,000 of the increase, which we feel is very reasonable," said Mickel.

In order to continue receiving state reimbursement money, the town must show willingness to foot part of that bill, Mickel said. The gifted and talented program is being expanded from a three-quarters time to a full-time position at the elementary schools, and into the high school, thereby serving Grades K through 12 now. Cultural and enrichment programs have been added and adult education funding increased under the proposed budget.

However, the area of most significant change is the $60,000 allocated for repair and maintenance of the town's seven recreational playing fields, according to Mickel.

Former assistant town engineer William Connosci has been named to the director of engineering services post. No schedule has been set for interviewing the candidates, whose applications will be reviewed by the town's Personnel Department. The applicants are required to have a license to practice civil engineering in Connecticut or the eligibility to get one. They must also have six year's experience in public works construction and maintenance. The public works director supervises engineering, water and sewer service, parks and cemeteries, highways, equipment maintenance, public buildings, sanitation and building inspection services.

Grissom Road group home obtains license from state

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

A state-run group home on Grissom Road has been licensed after months of delays and its three occupants could move in within two weeks, said a spokesman for the state Department of Mental Retardation.

The home, which was originally scheduled to open at the end of December, was licensed by the department on Friday, said Thomas J. Sullivan, regional director for the department. The three prospective tenants will likely visit the home and possibly stay overnight by next week, he said. The home, though licensed by the department, will be run and owned by the Connecticut Institute for the Blind. The three who live there may have mental or physical disabilities.

Residents on Grissom Road, many who had opposed plans for the home, refused today to comment on the home's opening. The licensing ends a string of delays and problems associated with the home.

Plans for the home originally called for six tenants, but complaints by neighbors forced the department to scale back plans. Neighbors in the northeast Manchester neighborhood had been concerned that the house was too small for six people and noise and traffic problems would result, Sullivan said. The plans called for converting the garage of the home into a bedroom area, he said.

The group home had originally been scheduled to be opened in December, but cost overruns and other problems such as minor changes in cost figures pushed back the opening a month.

A month later, officials cited a late shipment of furniture as the reason for delaying the opening another month. The opening was delayed a third time in that because licensing and training procedures had not been completed.

State and federal guidelines set a limit of 50 micrograms per liter. The lowest levels found in a home built in the 1950s. Less than 1 microgram of lead was found in a third sample in that home, and less than 1 microgram was also found in the second sample.

Kearney said solder in older homes had already flushed away or had been covered with a film preventing further leaching. He said there were 1,500 lead service lines in the system in 1980, but he said that number is probably lower now since some of them have been replaced. He said the replacement of those lines was being proposed because of the potential problems they might cause.

The high lead levels were in two homes built in the 1960s, before a ban on lead soldering in home plumbing went into effect in 1986. Kearney said the high lead levels were due to the soldering on the pipes.

"It is definitely attributable to the piping in the home," he said. Asked what kind of risk the high levels pose to users, Kearney said, "I'm not a toxicologist, so I couldn't tell you what type of risk level the high lead levels are. According to the federal guideline, I would say that obviously they pose some risk."

In some older homes, service lines — the lines extending from the water main to the property lines — are made of lead. These lines are slated for replacement at a rate of 80 per year, under a program by the Water Division Agency. The levels were within the guidelines of the federal Environmental Protection Agency, however, in a second sample, after water from the taps was allowed to flush out of the Manchester catches Heartsong's beat

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

Customers who stopped for lunch at the new McDonald's Restaurant on Tuesday afternoon got more than fast food. They got a fast-paced performance of rock-style gospel music as well.

A group of jeans-clad musicians called Heartsong, brought to Manchester by Trinity Covenant Church, performed in the parking lot of the old McDonald's Restaurant, 46 W. Center St.

The driving beat of the songs, projected through a powerful sound system, brought employees out of the court house across the street, and convinced McDonald's customers that they should eat their burgers outdoors.

Using a huge flat-bed truck as their stage, the group alternated between puppet numbers designed for the many youngsters in the crowd, and rock tunes with distinctly Christian lyrics. There was, for example, a rap tune about witnessing to the Gospel, and a tune about divine love with Her 3½-year-old daughter, Shiduna, seemed less interested in originality, and more concerned with the heat that the drummer, Bruce Helgeson, was keeping. In her red-and-white dress and party shoes, she danced and spun to the music until she tumbled to the ground, then picked herself up and started again.

A crowd of about 100 people — primarily mothers with preschool-aged children — heard the Heartsong concert. That was somewhat disappointing to the Rev. Paul Knight, who has coordinated the group's visit to Manchester.

"You understand, we had planned this for Saturday, but we got rained out," said Knight. The crowd was "pretty good, for a Tuesday afternoon," Knight said. "But on a Saturday, we'd certainly have had more people."

The eight musicians in Heartsong range in age from 20 to 27. Some were college students, one was a dietitian and another a sports editor for a chain of weekly newspapers when they auditioned for the group.

Members volunteer their services to the Covenant denomination, a Protestant sect, for a year. In fact, said Abbott, each musician must raise $2,500 towards the group's expenses.

During this year they live with host families, take meals at the host churches, and receive $25 per week for personal expenses. "When you figure that a new pair of jeans costs $40, that's not much," said Abbott.

Way of Cross celebration set for Good Friday

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

Fifteen Manchester churches will celebrate Good Friday by participating in a Way of the Cross walk, covering a two-mile route along Main, Myrtle and Church streets.

At each of ten sites, there will be readings, congregational prayers and devotions, illustrating the events from the time Jesus was condemned until he was laid in the tomb.

Stops will include churches, such as South United Methodist and St. Mary's Episcopal, as well as public locations, such as the Center Park flagpole and the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

This is the first such event for Manchester, according to Nancy Carr, who is director of the sponsoring organization, the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

The idea of walking a route to commemorate the events of Good Friday is an old one, however. It goes back to the third century, when pilgrims to Jerusalem tried to trace the route taken by Jesus from his condemnation until his crucifixion, said Dr. Kim-Eric Williams, the pastor of Concordia Lutheran Church, who proposed the walk to the MACC board.

But this may be the only ecumenical procession of this type in the nation, according to Williams. "I think this might well serve as an example, as a pattern, to churches around the country," he said. "I think it's a unique opportunity for Christians of different traditions to get together and reaffirm their faith."

Participants will follow a full-sized cross from Center Congregational Church, which will be carried by various clergy and lay persons.

All hymns used in the service will be spoken, rather than sung, in keeping with a centuries-old tradition forbidding music in church on Good Friday.

In addition, said Williams, "it suited our needs, because not everyone would be familiar with the tunes. We didn't want people to all back and say, 'OK, now here comes a Methodist hymn, so I don't have to sing.' We want everyone to be able to participate fully."

Aldes cleared of charges

WATERFORD — Two aides suspended from their jobs at the Seaside Center home for the mentally retarded will be allowed to return to work within the next month because there isn't enough evidence to substantiate charges they abused residents, officials said.

Vivian Royster and Michael Ashford were to be notified today "that they will be returning to work, based on a lack of evidence to substantiate any abuse on their part," said Ms. Kathryn duFree, director of the Department of Mental Retardation's Region 6, which runs Seaside Center.

The two were among six employees connected to Seaside's Unit 201 placed on paid leave in November after a state advocacy group received an anonymous letter alleging serious injuries to residents, including broken bones, to two retarded men.

ON THE RUN — Michael Jackson moves across the stage during his performance Wednesday at the Hartford Civic Center. It was the first concert in a three-day stand in Hartford.

Recycling plan questioned

MIDDLETOWN — Questions concerning a proposal to mandate recycling by 1991 were raised today by the state Department of Environmental Protection by environmentalists and business people during a public hearing.

More than 50 people testified before the DEP at two sessions Wednesday designed to give people a chance to comment on the measure, known as the Mandatory Recycling Act, before officials begin refining it.

Among the issues raised were complaints that the proposal as it stands does not provide for adequate enforcement and that it lacks sufficient public education and technical assistance to help communities implement recycling.

Lead paint found in school

STAMFORD — A parent's concern about peeling paint in a kindergarten classroom led to the city health director's declaration that high levels of lead posed a major health hazard at an elementary school and that it had to be closed immediately.

More than 470 students of the 88-year-old K.T. Murphy School were sent home Wednesday after the building was closed under the order of Dr. Andrew McBride, Stamford's director of health.

McBride said paint containing high levels of lead was peeling on walls and falling into dust balls on the floor. Tests of the air also found unacceptable levels of the toxin, he said.

Teletypes received in probe

NEW HAVEN — The local division of the FBI received at least seven teletype messages related to the agency's nationwide investigation of the Committee in Support of the People of El Salvador, the Yale Daily News reported Tuesday.

The student newspaper reported Tuesday it learned of the multiple teletype messages through a Freedom of Information Act request. FBI officials have denied they investigated the Yale-New Haven chapter or any other Connecticut groups associated with CISPES, an organization opposed to U.S. policies in Central America.

Bill sent to governor

HARTFORD — A bill imposing an open-end moratorium on the construction method used at the site of a Bridgeport apartment building that collapsed last year has been unanimously approved by the state Senate.

The bill, which forbids "lift-slab" construction in Connecticut until new regulations governing its use are adopted, now goes to the governor for his signature.

There was no debate before the Senate vote. Gov. William A. O'Neill, who has already endorsed the moratorium, is expected to sign the measure into law.

Budget panel likely to vote for 11 percent spending hike

HARTFORD (AP) — The co-chairman of the General Assembly's budget committee says the Democrats who control the House will stick together today and approve a $6.3 billion state budget for 1988-89 that requires an 11 percent spending increase over the current year.

Rep. Janet Polinsky, D-Waterford, co-chair of the Appropriations Committee, wouldn't say the total of the proposed 1988-89 budget, but said it would be "a wee bit lower" than the $6.3 billion package proposed in February by Gov. William A. O'Neill.

"There are always some changes, but most of them this time are not earth-shattering," she said.

O'Neill's three-part budget calls for a 10.6 percent increase in spending over the current year. He proposed $5.6 billion in General Fund spending, $536.7 million for the Transportation Fund, and $297 million for the Education Excellence Fund.

The Republicans, who are outnumbered 27-17 on the committee, plan to offer a half-dozen amendments aimed at limited spending increases. Democratic leaders said there was little chance any would succeed.

One GOP amendment would limit spending increases to 9 percent, except in those state agencies providing human service and public safety functions. Another would impose a freeze on state hiring.

House Minority Leader Robert G. Jaekle, R-Stratford, said unbridled spending by the O'Neill administration has prompted the legislature's Office of Fiscal Analysis to project a $42 million deficit in the current year and a potential shortfall of $160 million in 1988-89.

Jaekle noted that O'Neill proposes to balance his 1988-89 budget by using $74 million from the budget reserve, or "rainy day" fund and $63 million that had been set aside last year to pay off bonds.

On Wednesday, the House voted 118-27 to approve what's known as the "deficiency bill" — $38.7 million for state agencies that overspent their 1987-88 budget. The bill now goes to the Senate where equally easy approval is expected.

Some House Republicans argued it was time to say "No" to agencies who spend more than they're given by the General Assembly.

The Department of Public Safety, particularly its division of state police, came in for pointed criticism for spending $2.8 million more than expected on overtime.

Tourism ads lure New Yorkers

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut tourism officials are rolling out a new welcome mat, hoping more New York metropolitan tourist dollars will roll in.

They unveiled the state's first television advertising campaign Thursday selling Connecticut's fast-paced city life, bucolic appeal, and historic and cultural heritage.

The three-month campaign begins Monday to be broadcast on New York and Connecticut TV stations.

Economic Development Commissioner John Carson said Connecticut officials have already thought of ways to soften the inevitable effect a large influx of people would have on the state's already troublesome traffic congestion.

"We're sensitive to that problem," Carson said prior to the TV campaign's sneak preview, humorously catered at the Summit Hotel and attended by Gov. William A. O'Neill and Lt. Gov. Joseph Faillio.

"Word of highway reconstruction-related traffic jams — and appropriate detours — will be relayed from the state Department of Transportation to Carson's Division of Tourism, and brought to travelers over New York highways and via Connecticut's 13 highway information centers.

"But even if we're wildly successful (reaping returns on the ad project), we're still not going to create a (traffic) gridlock," Carson predicted.

He explained that the $650,000 promotion is still in a startup phase, results of which won't be known until the end of the summer, the busiest season for Connecticut's $2.5 billion annual tourism business.

According to market research, tourists liked visiting Connecticut and planned to return. But, said Carson, "by not advertising on television and radio, people had the perception that they were not wanted, and nothing could be farther from the truth."

The campaign, running through June, is expected to reach 20 million metro New Yorkers, said Gary Lesner, chairman of LSQE Advertising of Avon, which produced the three 30-second ads.

Don't underestimate Soviets, stage director says of trip

By John Gustavson
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Mark Lamos returned to Connecticut with an intelligence report for other Americans who will direct plays in the Soviet Union: don't underestimate the audience.

"The audience is much maligned by many of the theater artists because they feel the audience is uncritical, is too pleased by too many things," Lamos said.

"They're pleased by bad theater, by mediocre theater, by good theater, by brilliant theater. They'll go to all of it," Lamos said Wednesday, several days after his return from becoming the first American to direct an American play in the land of glasnost.

SOVIET REHEARSAL — Mark Lamos, artistic director of the Hartford Stage Company, confers with Soviet actress Nina Popova during rehearsals at the Pushkin Theater in Moscow recently. Lamos is the first American director to direct an American play in the Soviet Union.

In staging his production of Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" at the 1,000-seat Pushkin Theater in Moscow, Lamos also learned other lessons about the Soviet Union's actors, theater technicians, designers, directors, and playwrights.

They may help the three other American theater artists planning trips to Moscow through the Theatre International Exchange Service of New York. Nigel Jackson of the McCarter Theatre in Princeton, N.J.; Des McAnuff of the LaJolla Playhouse in California; and Adrian Hall of Trinity Repertory in Providence, R.I.

"I can't tell you what it was like to have a 24-hour difference between watching my play in Moscow the night before I left, and being here for the second preview of Richard Nelson's play," said Lamos, artistic director of the Hartford Stage Co., where Nelson's "Principia Scriptoria" opens on Friday.

"The difference was that there, you felt a sort of unified feeling forward and hunger for this. Lamos said, "Here, you look around the comfortable theater setting. People are listening. Yes, but there are some eyes seats at the preview, legs are crossed, arms are folded, people are waiting to be grabbed. But why shouldn't American audiences want to be grabbed in what Lamos referred to as "the grabbiest place in the world" — with thousands of stimulants "from the 32 cable channels to the video they can rent to just life in America."

"There aren't those stimulants in the Soviet Union and those audiences, Lamos said, come "eager to hear what's going on in the world, eager to be moved or eager to be preached to — frankly, politically."

"The one play I saw in the Soviet Union that wasn't overly political was my production of "Desire Under the Elms," he said. "Everything on their stage is political now in a very open and very critical way, but it still seems like it's 20 years old."

Lamos described himself as a "collaborative director" who wants to hear the views of actors, designers, lighting directors and sound engineers.

"I rely on the people I work with," he said.

Lamos said he was asked by many important people in Soviet theater how the American theater is structured — "how we structure work, how we treat the actors, how we pay the playwrights, how we pay directors,

'Pothole Patrol' on duty

Got a favorite pothole you'd like to see filled in?

The Manchester Herald's "Pothole Patrol" is waiting to help you do something about it.

Because roads and highways take a beating after winter's freeze-thaw cycle, the Herald is inviting readers to help warn fellow motorists about them, and, in the process, to alert town officials so they can take action.

Write us a brief letter (no phone calls, please) giving the location of the culprit and your unfortunate experience with it, if you've had one.

All potholes in Manchester, Bolton, Andover and Coventry are eligible to enter, but consideration will be given to large entries from other communities, too.

We'll print your letters, along with photographs. Then all the letters will be turned over to town officials.

Letters should be sent to "Pothole Patrol," Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 591, Manchester 06040.

John Banas of Manchester, 29, a town Highway Division employee for 14 months, fills a pothole Wednesday afternoon on Irving Street.

Investigators say NRC data was subverted

WASHINGTON — A decision by Congress earlier this year to take away the independence of Nuclear Regulatory Commission investigators is already backfiring.

In January, Rep. Thomas Bevell, D-Ala., sponsored legislation to fold the 40 people in the NRC's Office of Investigation into the rest of the NRC staff, making them answerable to bosses who have a reputation for being chummy with the nuclear industry.

The investigators, William Ward and Roger Fortuna, wrote the memo to the director of the Office of Investigation on March 7, after they saw what higher-up bosses had done to the answers they wrote for the Senate Nuclear Regulatory Subcommittee. Ward refused to comment to us about the memo. Fortuna could not be reached.

But their memo lays out some disturbing charges. It says their answers to the subcommittee were bumped upstairs at the NRC for approval before they went to Congress. The answers passed through several offices on their way to Capitol Hill and it is not known exactly where the changes were made.

The subcommittee, chaired by Sen. John Breaux, D-La., had asked if the commission had ever blocked the Office of Investigation from launching an investigation. Ward and Fortuna said "never" but they added that the commission in 1985 voted 4-1 not to support an investigation of two senior managers at the Wolf Creek nuclear plant in Burlington, Kan. The vote was enough to spike the investigation. The Wolf Creek managers had been accused of sexual harassment, blackbaling a former employee and illegal search and seizure.

Panic during speeches is common

Where does the phobia come from? Some people may have been especially sensitive, impressionable children who had a single embarrassing "public" episode or a whole series of them while growing up. Others may have had parents who were overly critical and demanding or who did not handle anxiety well themselves.

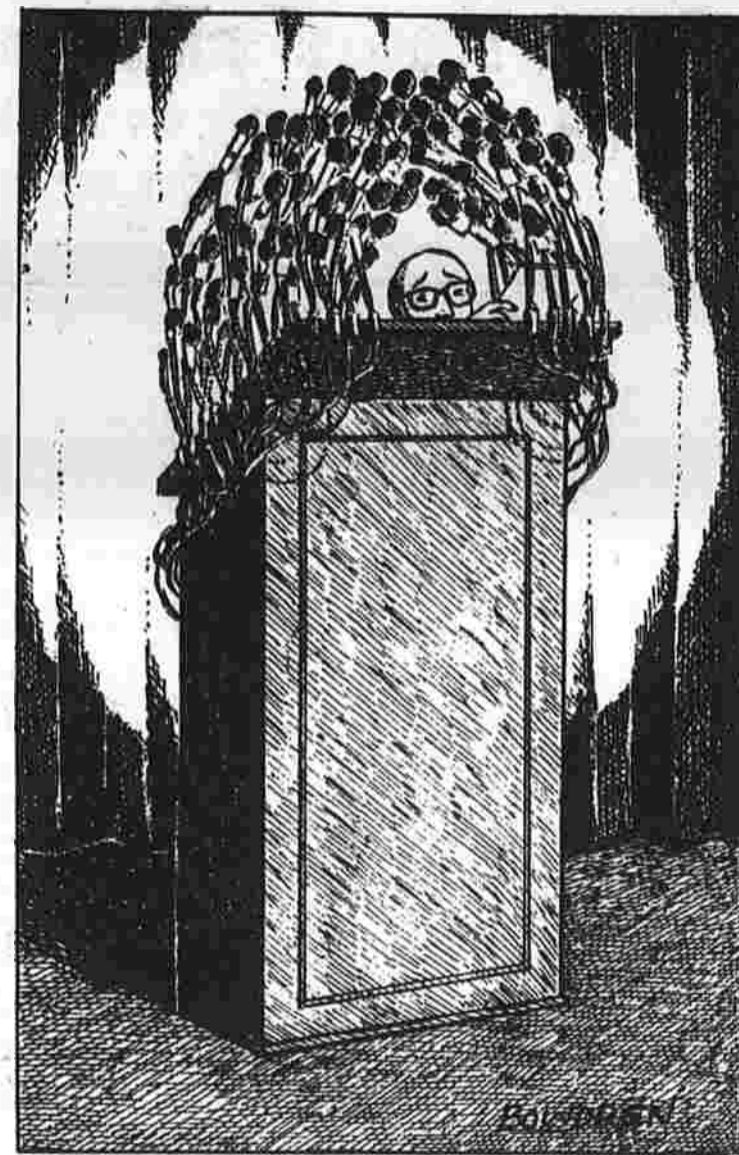

Whatever the causes of their condition, such phobias really don't fear giving a speech, but rather that others will perceive that they are terrified or out of control while they speak, explains Robert Handy, author of Beyond Fear and Anxiety and Panic Attacks: Their Causes and Cure (both published by Rawson Associates). Some may turn to alcohol or drugs to mask their all-too-visible symptoms and end up with a full-blown addiction.

Fortunately, the cure rate for public speaking phobia is extremely high. One successful therapy is called systematic desensitization, in which the phobic person either experiences or imagines the feared situation one easy step at a time.

Dr. Charlotte Zitrin, M.D., director of the phobia clinic at Long Island Jewish Hospital in Glen Oaks N.Y., gives an example of how it works: "A therapist may first ask you to read a short paragraph or poem aloud while sitting at a table with a small group of trusted friends or colleagues. Next, you may be told to do the same while standing up at the table, then at a podium, and then with several strangers present in the room — each step slightly more demanding than the one before."

Dr. Zitrin adds that you will be taught how to relax through slow, gentle breathing from the diaphragm, muscle stretching and other simple techniques.

Whenever any step causes too much anxiety, you are allowed to stop and relax until you are calm enough to try it again. Through this method, you learn gradually how to cope with small amounts of anxiety and are able to take on more challenging "assignments" as your confidence increases.

Since being well-prepared is an effective antidote to fear, therapists also advise "positive rehearsal": practicing a speech or report repeatedly until the material is thoroughly familiar. "Anything that helps the words flow out more easily will itself reduce the 'giveaway' nervous symptoms that people dread so much," Dr. Fennessey notes. For best results, she suggests, rehearse both at home (with a tape recorder or in front of a mirror) and in the room where you will be speaking, becoming aware of the layout, lighting, acoustics and the like.

"On the day of the speech, one self-calming approach is to fix your gaze on three or four people in the audience who look especially friendly and receptive," says Dr. Fennessey. By trying to project "warm, loving feelings toward these people, you will shift the concern and attention away from yourself."

Another way to counteract self-consciousness is to imagine that the subject matter of your talk is extremely important, that the people listening to you need it urgently and that it's your job to deliver it. "Realize that the audience isn't there to watch you perform," Dr. Fennessey stresses, "but rather to receive that much-desired material."

Since exaggerated fears are products of fantasy, therapists also suggest focusing on mundane, realistic details — the color of the walls, the number of chairs, the feel of the podium or carpet, the sound of traffic outside the room. "If your mind is busy with the delivery of the speech and with using the five senses, it cannot pay attention to fear," Robert Handy says.

Sometimes, polishing basic speaking skills and learning how to organize material is enough to build self-esteem and keep anxiety under control. Such essentials are taught by Dale Carnegie & Associates, Inc. as well as the 6,000 member clubs of Toastmasters International, sometimes referred to as the Alcoholics Anonymous of public speaking.

Both men, women seeking equal rights

During the month of March, I have read some articles about the achievements of women in various professions throughout Connecticut. I admire their victories over adverse conditions and hope that the 24-word Equal Rights Amendment will be passed by soon. I try to keep an open mind about feminist issues and to give some compassionate support. Some black men are changing their chauvinistic habits gradually and respecting black women more. Afro-American women in higher education have been good listeners and mentors for me.

Thomas L. Stringfellow

The articles written in Ebony Male and Chocolate Singles Magazine enhance my thinking about the relationship with black women. I do not want to be used as a scapegoat for past failures among women and their former suitors. I am not a potential mugger or lustful rapist, as claimed by white feminist author Susan Brownmiller in remarks from the book "Women, Race & Class" by Angela Davis. Black men doing their best to exist despite the odds against them, such as heart disease and suicide.

Richard Merrow, a counselor at Manchester Community College, says that both men and women are oppressed in our culture. The oppression is indicated by two examples: The self-worth of men is attached to work and money, or the fix-it syndrome, and women are paid less than men and taught to accept limits (in the past). A gender-free society is possible through co-existing not resisting.

Time to rethink issue of drug law repeal

A federal grand jury has indicted a Haitian military officer, Col. Jean-Claude Paul, for making his private airfield available as a refueling stop for cocaine smugglers on their way to the United States.

Nicholas Von Hoffman

This comes after a similar indictment of Gen. Manuel Noriega of Panama. One more indictment of a foreign official for violating our drug laws and these grand jury indictments are going to look less like law enforcement than crude headline chasing.

Maybe it's a mess we need to live through. After the Air Force fails to interdict our coast line and the narcotics continue to seep in they don't have to and we may be disposed to reconsider decriminalization. Fifteen or 20 years ago the idea was occasionally discussed in Washington: now it is never mentioned, and when it is brought forward it is vehemently rejected by influential people like Lois Haight Herrington, chairman of the White House Conference For a Drug Free America. "If we decriminalize drugs, how many more (air/rail) engineers do you think would be driving trains under the influence of marijuana?" she asks. "How many more pilots would be smoking or snorting or sniffing or injecting cocaine or whatever other drugs before they flew those planes? How many other people would be using drugs, riding on our highways, endangering other lives?"

The answer to her question is few to one. Her position is predicated on the presumption that the illegality of narcotics has made them hard to buy. That's crazy, unless all these cops, prosecutors and reporters are lying to us. We are told again and again that drugs are readily buyable in junior high schools, in small towns and large cities everywhere. According to expert testimony drugs are almost as universally available as bread and milk.

The argument for keeping drugs illegal is that it restricts the supply, but if it doesn't, if it merely influences the price and the conditions under which drugs are taken, thereby having such side effects as helping to spread AIDS, why have such laws? Perhaps the time has come to rethink the question of drug law repeal.

White vote 'is needed' by Jackson

HARTFORD (AP) — Despite the elation of Jesse Jackson's supporters, some political observers say his relatively strong showing in Connecticut's primary did little to show he can attract the white voters needed to win the Democratic nomination.

"The official story is that he did twice as well in Connecticut in '88 as he did in '84, which there is no doubting," said Adam Reed, associate professor of political science and Afro-American studies at Yale University and a longtime Jackson observer.

"Getting 15 or 20 percent of the white vote can be defined as a rousing success only if you start from the premise that he wasn't going to get any in the first place," Reed said.

Ninety-five percent of the black vote and 15 percent of the white vote in primary after primary after primary would not add up to the nomination and certainly wouldn't add up to winning in November."

Jackson, who pulled a surprise victory in last week's Michigan caucus, finished second in the Connecticut primary with 28 percent of the vote — more than double the 12 percent he took in 1984, according to unofficial returns. He also won 16 of the 52 delegates at stake. Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis had 58 percent of the vote and took the other 36 delegates.

"If you talk about momentum we kind of capped it here," said Hartford Mayor Carrie Moxam, vice chairman of Jackson's Connecticut campaign.

An NBC exit poll indicated 20 percent of white voters, or one in five, cast their ballot for Jackson, compared to the 5 percent of the white vote he took in 1984.

State Democratic Chairman John F. Droncy Jr. said Jackson had made every effort to follow his "magnificent" Michigan victory with a good showing in Connecticut, "but he did not come close to a victory."

"He had to follow Michigan with a better showing, and it didn't happen," Droncy said. Droncy, who has endorsed Dukakis, argued that Jackson's solid support in the black community, while it may not secure him the nomination, is natural and good for the black electorate.

"His overwhelming support and excitement in the black community is racially based, as it would be in the Italian community if (New York Gov.) Mario Cuomo were running and as it is with the Greek community with Mike Dukakis," Droncy said.

"One of the things I have been concerned about is that the other contenders off the hook for confronting the black electorate and campaigning hard for the black vote," he said.

As of Wednesday, Jackson trailed Dukakis by just a handful of delegates, fueling speculation that he could indeed end up the party's nominee in July.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charging that the Republican Party is ignoring advocates of social issues, Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. has vowed to hold his own platform hearing on a wide array of domestic topics.

The Connecticut Republican said he objected to the party focusing Wednesday's platform hearing here on defense and foreign affairs, relegating domestic issues to either late in the day or to a May hearing in Kansas City.

Weicker aides said the scheduling was deliberate to keep concerns about social issues among moderates and liberals within the party out of the media spotlight. "It is a disgrace to shuttle these advocates, representing the hurt, the elderly, the handicapped, minorities, women and children to a place far away from the national media, the day after Memorial Day," Weicker said.

"Most of their organizations are based in the nation's capital for a reason: so that they can petition their government to make the constituencies they represent a part of national policy," he said.

Jackson to woo 'super delegates'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson's campaign is planning an intense effort to woo Democratic "super delegates" as the likelihood increases that they will determine the party's nominee.

Jackson aides say the campaign also is planning to seek new money and hire an advance team, a staple of the other candidates' campaigns. And they said that as scrutiny of Jackson increases, the press and public can expect to see him offering more details and specifics of his various domestic and foreign policy ideas.

In two days of meetings here this week, Jackson met with his top financial organizers and with prominent Democratic leaders whom he hoped to pull into his camp, or at least milk for advice.

His campaign manager, Gerald Austin, said there will be a concerted plan to court super delegates, the 643 people who are automatically Democratic convention delegates by virtue of their status as party or elected officials.

They are viewed as critical in this year's campaign, since it appears no candidate by the end of the primary season will have the 2,081 delegates needed to lock up the nomination. The decision could rest with the super delegates at the summer nominating convention in Atlanta.

So far, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis has gained the most support from established party leaders, Jackson, who has a slight lead in the popular vote cast so far, has said the super delegates should "respect the super voters" and back whoever has the most votes after the last primaries on June 7.

Gore, passing through the same airport a short while later, took issue with that, and criticized Jackson anew.

"I think it's ridiculous," the Tennessee senator said. "He's a major contender for the White House. He is to be immune from any questioning of his position on the issues or his approach to the campaign? ... Is there a separate standard?"

Gore and Jackson had planned to meet Wednesday, but it fell through. In light of Gore's comments a day earlier, Jackson said, "It's not necessary to meet at this time."

On Tuesday in New York, Gore said Jackson had a "complete and total lack" of qualifications for the nation's highest office and criticized his foreign policy views.

Gore ridiculed rival Dukakis, saying the Massachusetts governor's hesitancy to spell out differences with Jackson was "ludicrous." Dukakis, campaigning in Wisconsin Wednesday night, replied: "We can discuss issues without attacking each other ... (Voters) don't want to

Gore attacks Jackson again; Bush steers clear of Meese

By Laura King The Associated Press

Democratic presidential contender Albert Gore Jr. leveled strong criticism at Jesse Jackson for the second day in a row, and asked why his other opponents — particularly Michael Dukakis — are reluctant to do likewise.

Dukakis has been under pressure as a result of recent losses to Jackson in Illinois and Michigan. But he managed to recoup with a solid 2-1 victory in Tuesday's Connecticut primary.

With that victory, Dukakis again took the lead in the national delegate race. According to the latest AP count, Dukakis had 648.55, Jackson 642.55, Gore 387.8 and Sen. Paul Simon 169.5, with 488.6 uncommitted.

Asked by reporters in Boston on Wednesday to detail the differences between himself and Jackson, Dukakis answered cautiously. He mentioned disagreements over Middle East policy and some domestic economic matters, but provided no specifics, saying he would discuss the matter more fully in a Wisconsin speech later this week.

Dukakis hinted that Jackson's lack of any experience in elective office ought to be considered by voters. But he quickly moved to stress that any disagreements he had with Jackson had always been "friendly and respectful."

"That attitude got Gore's dander up. ... If there supposed to be some unwritten rule why Jesse Jackson cannot be criticized, why his positions have to be just sacrosanct, and nobody can say anything about them for fear somebody will just misinterpret what you're saying?" he said.

Sen. Paul Simon, campaigning in Wisconsin, suggested that fear of alienating fervent Jackson supporters was keeping other candidates from engaging in any real rough-and-tumble with him.

"You have to be careful. You don't want to be perceived as anti-black," the Illinois senator said. Jackson has been getting nearly unanimous black support in primary states, according to exit polls.

WASHINGTON — A Republican senator today called on President Reagan to meet with a resigned Justice Department official and then reconsider whether Attorney General Edwin Meese III should stay on the job.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said a published report quoting resigned Assistant Attorney General William F. Weld as saying he would have moved to indict Meese if the decision had been his requires a presidential inquiry and decision.

Meese is the target of a broadening criminal investigation. Department sources have said the top officials quit because they felt Meese's legal problems were "poisoning" the Justice Department.

On Wednesday, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said flatly that Meese should resign. Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd also called for his resignation, calling him "the crown prince of the sleaze factor in Reagan administration history."

Specter, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, referred to a report in today's Washington Post that quoted sources familiar with Tuesday's meeting of Meese, Weld and Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns, at which Weld and Burns turned in their resignations.

The Post said Weld told Meese his situation presented a close call but that if it were up to him he would present it to the grand jury for an indictment.

Up until this moment, or perhaps yesterday, you had a situation where the independent counsel was looking ... but I think now is a different matter. The president has to talk to Mr. Weld, has to examine the facts and then has to make a presidential decision," Specter said.

Specter earlier questioned "whether the U.S. Department of Justice can function" with Meese firing people and he always defends people who are under attack," Bonatati said.

Reagan proved this theory once more Wednesday when he besieged with questions about whether he would push Meese out in response to the attorney general's mounting legal problems and mass defections at the Justice Department.

"He's been a friend for over 20 years. I have every confidence in him," Reagan told reporters.

His statement recalled the time in the summer of 1984 when Reagan, arriving in Dallas for the Republican National Convention, was quizzed about whether he would oust Donovan. Reagan declared that he wouldn't give in to a "lynch mob atmosphere."

In quintessential Reagan style, the president threw his arm around Meese when reporters tried to question about the attorney general early last fall, just after the two had appeared in the White House press room to announce Anthony M. Kennedy's selection for a Supreme Court vacancy.

Reagan has steadfastly said he thinks public officials ought to be presumed innocent until found guilty in court. He has gone even further in the case of indicted former White House aides John M. Poindexter and Oliver L. North, declaring that he thinks they are innocent — period.

While Reagan has been reluctant to fire people in general, he has shown even greater resistance when dealing with longtime confidants like Meese.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has always been reluctant to fire aides when they're in trouble and he is unlikely to change that now by ditching Attorney General Edwin Meese III, presidential scholars and observers say.

Reagan didn't fire Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, who was facing a federal court indictment in early 1985, nor did he oust Interior Secretary James Watt in 1983 after Watt made offensive remarks about blacks, women, Jews and the handicapped.

The closest Reagan came to being faced with a decision on what to do about an indicted top aide was when Donovan was indicted. Donovan spared him the decision, however, by resigning immediately.

Watt also offered to step aside, and the only way Meese will leave is if he does likewise, several observers say.

Reagan so dislikes firing top aides that an embittered Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. had to try at least twice to quit before the president finally accepted his resignation in June 1982.

"After watching Ronald Reagan and reading about him all these years, I've come to the conclusion that it is a matter of leadership style that dictates that he not fire people," said Robert A. Bonatati, who was Reagan's labor adviser early in the administration.

House OKs Contra aid

WASHINGTON — House approval of $48 million in humanitarian aid for the Contra rebels and for children injured in Nicaragua's civil war marks the first time in more than five years that lawmakers have been able to set aside partisan divisions on the issue.

The House voted 345 to 70 late Wednesday to approve the aid package and send the chamber's leaders said was a strong signal of support to the rebels and the leftist Sandinista government, which are trying to forge a long-term cease-fire.

The winning margin came from 179 Democratic votes and 166 GOP votes.

Rebels admit attacks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Contra rebels said they attacked Sandinista soldiers in two areas of the country in violation of a temporary truce that is to be expanded into a 60-day cease-fire on Friday.

But the rebels' chief field commander said on Wednesday he supports the peace accord with the leftist Sandinista government that brought the truce.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater was asked Wednesday why Meese remained on the job when White House chief of staff Howard Baker, Vice President George Bush and first lady Nancy Reagan warded off his resignation.

"I don't think any of that is true," Fitzwater replied. Asked if he was denying it, he said, "I don't know. I've never heard anybody say that."

Quitting with Burns, the No. 2 official in the department, and Meese predicted on Wednesday that Solicitor General Charles Fried, who had said he was reconsidering his future with the department, would not follow suit.

Arabs confront army

JERUSALEM — Hundreds of Arabs took to the streets of the occupied lands to mark Palestinian Land Day, confronting an unprecedented army clampdown and Israeli gunfire that killed four Palestinians and wounded dozens.

In Washington, Secretary of State George P. Shultz told Israeli reporters Palestinian must be part of a peace settlement and defended his Middle East peace plan — essentially a trade of land for peace with the Arabs.

Also Wednesday, 30,000 Israeli Arabs staged a show of support for their brethren in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, raising outlawed Palestinian flags and chanting anti-occupation slogans in protests throughout Israel.

Few oppose INF treaty

WASHINGTON — Democratic voters say the Senate will easily approve the U.S.-Soviet treaty eliminating medium-range nuclear weapons, despite Republican complaints over an amendment limiting future presidential interpretations of the agreement.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., No. 2 in the Democratic leadership, said his constituents show no more than five of the 100 senators are likely to vote against the pact.

Ratification requires approval of 67 senators.

Swaggart defies church

BATON ROUGE, La. — Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart vows to return to the pulpit in defiance of church elders, saying preacher Orl Roberts has freed him of "demons with long fingernails" digging into his body.

Swaggart, accused of motel fornicity with a prostitute, intends to return to the pulpit May 22, three months after stepping down.

Chinese students unite

NEW YORK — More than 800 Chinese students studying in the United States have signed their names to an open letter opposing China's policy to sharply reduce the number of students abroad, a student organizer said today.

"We have had an overwhelming response from fellow students across the country," said Pei Minxin, a 30-year-old doctoral candidate at Harvard University.

IRS waives penalties

WASHINGTON — Retirees don't have to worry any more about being penalized for underpayment of estimated taxes on their 1987 pensions.

The Internal Revenue Service announced Wednesday that it will waive penalties that otherwise would hit retirees who failed to pay sufficient tax in advance on their pensions.

Hospital granted 7.5% rate hike

Thirty-three other state prospective payment hospitals also filed appeals over their yearly rate orders. A prospective payment hospital is one that has all its rates determined in advance of service.

The commission, which began meeting with hospitals last week, has been able to resolve about 30 of the appeals through today, Stanley said.

Though a tentative agreement was reached, it will be a few weeks before the final agreement is signed, Stanley said.

The rate order, which still must be approved by the full commission, will go into effect April 1, said Andrew A. Beck, Manchester hospital spokesman.

The hospital will begin to use the figures almost immediately, to begin preparing its 1988-89 rate orders, Beck said.

"It gives us a handle... on our budget for '89," he said. "We feel it's adequate to cover our expenses for the remainder of the year."

Though the hospital showed a total surplus of $2,985,273 last fiscal year, Beck said the increase was needed to cover rising costs such as the new contract recently signed by registered nurses.

The contract, ratified for 218 hospital registered nurses, increased starting salaries from $22,000 to $27,000 and maximum salaries from $27,000 to about $35,000.

Assessments produce long line, questions

Daniel Reale, a real estate broker and representative of a partnership that owns three two-family houses on Congress Street, said one of the houses was assessed at a different figure than the others.

He called the houses "mirror images" of each other, and said they were on side-by-side lots of identical size.

He said, after presenting his case, that Frank Stamler, chairman of the Board of Tax Review, had listened to him and was very sympathetic.

He said Stamler seemed to be familiar with the kind of problem he was presenting.

Kenneth Burkamp was there to represent his wife, Anne E. Andrus, owner of a house at 62 Elro St. He had an assessment notice for that address, and another one for a property at 58 Elro St. But the second property is a small strip of land attached to

Also, the increase will be needed to maintain the level of surplus, which is crucial to the hospital's survival, he said. "Most businesses have an operating margin," Beck said. "It's needed for uncertainties and planning."

The rate order agreement also covers outpatient and psychiatric services, which have varying charges based on service, he said.

Because of the varying services and because the commission only sets rate order percentages, it is up to the hospital to calculate the monetary amount, he said.

If the hospital had been unable to reach an agreement with the commission during Thursday's meeting, budget hearings with the state were scheduled for April 14, said Cynthia Christ, Christ Academic Institute's executive vice president for public affairs.

When all the new orders are finally approved, the orders will only be in effect for about six months, said Christ. New yearly salaries from $27,000 to about $35,000.

Zealous fans aid Huskies

Thanks to the fans, Madison Square Garden was, unequivocally, a home away from home Wednesday night.

As UConn worked its way toward the NIT title with a 72-67 victory over Ohio State, the Garden was transformed into a massive sea of Husky humanity, furiously waving their blue and white pompons and bellowing out inspiring chants of encouragement.

It was a repeat of Tuesday night when UConn met its Big East conference foe, Boston College, in the semifinals.

It appeared as if the roar of the faithful, which almost brought the Field House in Storms down last Friday during UConn's win over Virginia Commonwealth, had uniformly entered the Garden and turned their volume up a few notches.

Husky guard Phil Gamble, the tournament's Most Valuable Player, appreciated the crowd. "In the past, it hasn't been like this. They were really pumping us up."

Likewise, sophomore point guard Tate George relishes the Husky support.

"Unreal," George said of the crowd effect. "When I came here as a recruit it was not like this at all."

Among those on hand for the title game was Gov. William O'Neill, seated right behind the UConn bench. O'Neill was ecstatic about the Husky win.

"It's a great ball team," O'Neill said. "When you have this whole place packed and they're almost all cheering for the University of Connecticut, it's loud. I think it builds the morale in the state and everything else."

Although he isn't an official cheerleader, Jerry Altman, a 1987 UConn graduate, led all the chatters and chants both nights while actually leading the cheerleaders themselves.

Altman is known throughout the Stars campus by his trademark piece of attire — a blue and white bandana. Altman also led the crowds at all the UConn home soccer games.

"I'm speechless," Altman said right after the Husky win. "No one else could have done what the whole crowd advantage helped. We pulled them up yesterday and we pulled them up today. What it means is the student support is going to keep going and going. We're going to ride this all the way to the NCAA's next year."

After UConn's amazing NIT performance, the impending horizon looks solid for the basketball program.

And, also, for the Husky faithful.

NIT crown belongs to UConn

Gamble MVP as Huskies win first-ever postseason title

NEW YORK — The exact crowning moment in New York City has faded.

But, for the University of Connecticut Huskies, the memories of their first-ever National Invitation Tournament title will exist forever.

After UConn defeated Ohio State, 72-67, to capture the NIT championship Tuesday night at Madison Square Garden before an immensely partisan crowd of 13,778, the Husky basketball program reached its apex.

For 6-foot-4 junior guard Phil Gamble, who had to sit out the second half of last season due to academic problems, now sat on top of the world along with his NIT Most Valuable Player Award.

Gamble scored a game-high 25 points, including five 3-pointers, and was a perfect 4-for-4 from the foul line.

Because of all our hard work," Gamble said. He reflected on his demeanor at this same time a year ago. "I had academic problems (last year) I was really down. Every time somebody said something to me, I was snapping at them."

"This puts us on the map," Gamble continued. "People said we didn't belong in the tournament, but we didn't listen and we proved we belong. Right now it (winning the NIT) is just a great feeling."

A pivotal stage in the game came when senior forward Cliff Robinson, the team's leading scorer who had 29 points in the semifinal win over Boston College, picked up his fourth foul with 15:43 left in the game. Robinson departed and, when Ohio State's Jay Burson buried a 3-pointer 23 seconds later, the Huskies led 36-30.

"I don't think I've ever been as proud of the kids in my 22 years of coaching," Calhoun said. "We hung in there. We hung in there. I kept telling them they're a good team and they'll have a chance to prove it some day."

The Huskies' Day, for now, will be etched in stone as March 30, 1988.

Calhoun spoke of Gamble's performance, especially after last year's off-court dilemma. "We told Phil last summer that we made a mistake when we ignored the 3-point line," Calhoun explained. "The way it came (for Gamble) last year to being ineligible and not being able to play with us, but sticking with our program. It's more a human story than it is a basketball story."

During the first half, UConn opened up a seven-point lead (11-4) after a Gamble 3-pointer. However, the Huskies fell behind and scored only two field goals in the next 7-40. The Huskies, though, didn't take advantage of the Husky drought due to some poor shooting of their own.

Another Gamble 3-pointer put the Huskies in the lead, 25-22, with 1:34 left in the first half. The Huskies led 27-25, at halftime.

Gamble had 13 points at the intermission while the Huskies' Curtis Wilson had nine.

Bolton baseball to start over from the beginning

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — When you're on the bottom rung looking up, there's no where to begin but at the very beginning.

That's the stance being taken by Coach Mark O'Neill as he begins the task of rebuilding the Bolton High School baseball program.

The troubles that have befallen Bolton baseball are well documented. Bolton's 1987 season came to an abrupt close last May after the number of players dwindled to eight. Bolton's last victory on the diamond in varsity action occurred in 1983 when a 4-16 record was posted. The last 66 trips to the baseball diamond resulted in losses.

With only eight players, Bolton Athletic Director

Dave Leete was forced to cancel the rest of the '87 season. Bolton will try to pick up the pieces this year, but on a junior varsity level.

"We have a 16-game schedule and we look at it as a new program. We're starting on page one," said O'Neill.

O'Neill, a native of Beverly, Mass., was assistant baseball coach at Stratford High School before joining the Bolton school system in 1986. "We will stress the fundamentals of baseball. We will learn how to throw, how to catch, how to field. We're taking nothing for granted."

The turnout for the resurrection of the program is encouraging. O'Neill said there are 25 players, including 18 players. There are two seniors, including captain Cliff Stoudt who has been with Bolton baseball for four years, six freshmen, four sophomores and six juniors. "A lot of the freshmen haven't played before," O'Neill said.

"We have no goals. We'll take it one game at a time. We can't get too excited one way or the other. We have to realize we're building and we will make mistakes. We will do our best to win but the big thing is to learn how to play."

"I'm looking at it from my sense. Nothing can be taken for granted as far as being know (about baseball)," he continued.

Four juniors, Drew Pinto (pitcher/infield), Mark Yavinsky (pitcher/outfield), Jon Wiedie (pitcher/outfield) and David Curlyo (pitcher/infield) are the heart of Bolton's squad. "They've shown the freshmen and sophomores a good work ethic. The team is enthusiastic and their heart is in the right area," O'Neill, a 1982 graduate of the University of Massachusetts, said.

The past, according to O'Neill, will remain there. "We're starting from square one. There's no negative talk. What's been in the past is buried. I wouldn't walk on the field if I didn't think we could win."

"We're just focusing on this year. One thing is to reestablish baseball so kids three or four years down the road will have a good attitude about playing baseball at Bolton High School."

Schedule: April 8 Cheney Tech H, 12 Hale-Roy A, 15 Coventry H, 25 East Granby H, 28 Cromwell H, 29 Portland A.

May 2 Rocky Hill A, 6 Bacon Academy A, 9 Bacon Academy H, 10 RHAM H, 11 Portland H, 16 Coventry A, 18 Rocky Hill H, 19 Cromwell A, 23 Hale-Roy H, 28 RHAM A. Games at 3:30 p.m.

Clemens shows he's ready for the 1988 season

By The Associated Press

As far as Boston's Roger Clemens is concerned, the baseball season can begin right now.

The way he pitched against the Cincinnati Reds in an opening day tuneup, it could have started Wednesday.

"I felt good," the two-time Cy Young winner said after a 13-strikeout performance in seven innings of a 6-1 exhibition victory over the Reds. "It was a good spring outing. Now I'm looking forward to next week."

Red Sox Manager John McNamara, who has picked Clemens to pitch Boston's American League opener on Monday against the Detroit Tigers, said he has never had more faith in his ace right-hander.

"He's a better pitcher than he was two years ago when he won 24 games," McNamara said. "Now he has the experience, the poise. He also is smarter and, of course, he has the confidence."

McNamara didn't have to grope for words Wednesday after Clemens turned in his dazzling performance.

"He throws hard, but I don't know if he throws any harder now than a couple of years ago," doing most anything as long as he keeps his health."

Yankees 2, Orioles 1: Rookie left-hander Al Leiter pitched six scoreless innings, clinching a spot on the Yankees' pitching staff. Leiter allowed only two hits, walked two and struck out six, lowering his spring ERA to 0.64 in six appearances.

Dave Winfield, Gary Ward and Claudiell Washington had two hits apiece for the Yankees, and Rickey Henderson hit his fourth home run of the spring.

Mike Boddicker pitched seven innings for the Orioles, allowing one run on five hits, and was named the club's opening day starter by Manager Cal Ripken Sr. Boddicker is 0-2 with a 4.50 ERA this spring.

Mets 4, Braves 3: RBI singles by Keith Hernandez and Darryl Strawberry rallied New York in the ninth inning against Bruce Sutter. Len Dykstra started the rally with a walk, pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli singled and Hernandez and Strawberry drove in the tying and winning runs.

Sutter, making a comeback after missing two seasons with shoulder injuries, was pitching for the first time this spring on only one day of rest.

JUST OUT OF REACH — New York second baseman Wally Backman, left, stretches to try to grab a pickoff throw on Atlanta's Ken Oberkell Wednesday in West Palm Beach. The Mets won the exhibition game, 4-3.

Carson is making his goals count for the Kings

By Ken Rappoport
The Associated Press

Jimmy Carson is making his goals count in two ways that one for the Los Angeles Kings these days.

"I would say this win means more for us than for them," Carson said after notching four goals and two assists to lead the Kings to a 9-7 NHL victory over the Calgary Flames on Wednesday night.

Carson's performance not only provided the Kings with emotional impetus in a first-round playoff preview with the Smythe Division-leading Flames, but marked a personal triumph for him as well.

NHL Roundup

With 55 goals and 106 points, the 19-year-old Carson is the highest-scoring American-born player in NHL history. Carson's goals top the 53 scored by teammate Bobby Carpenter when he was with Washington in 1984-85, and his 106 points is one more than the previous record for an American-born player — Neal Broten of Minnesota in 1985-86.

No other American-born player has scored 50 goals and accumulated 100 points at the same time in a season.

"It makes me feel really good," Carson said. "Like most of us Americans, we're proud of our nationality."

Elsewhere, it was the New York Rangers 4, Chicago 3 that Edmonton 6, Minnesota 3.

It was the fifth time this year that Carson has scored at least three goals in a game. His six points tied a Kings' record for points in a game, and he has scored seven goals in his last two games.

Teammate Luc Robitaille scored two goals and added four assists to give him 104 points this season and also tie the club record for points in a game.

Mike Hilliard scored two goals for the Flames, who have a 47-22-9 record for 103 points, tops in the NHL.

With the loss, Calgary missed a chance to clinch the home-ice advantage throughout the playoffs. All the Flames need in their final two games is one point, meaning a tie will get the job done.

"It would be nice to get it (the home-ice advantage) throughout the playoffs," but if we don't, the world won't end," Calgary Coach Terry Crisp said. "If we do get it, nobody's going to hand us the Stanley Cup just because we did."

"It would be nice to get it because the guys have been in the race all year. There's a bit of a point of pride in it for the fellows, so they'll get it."

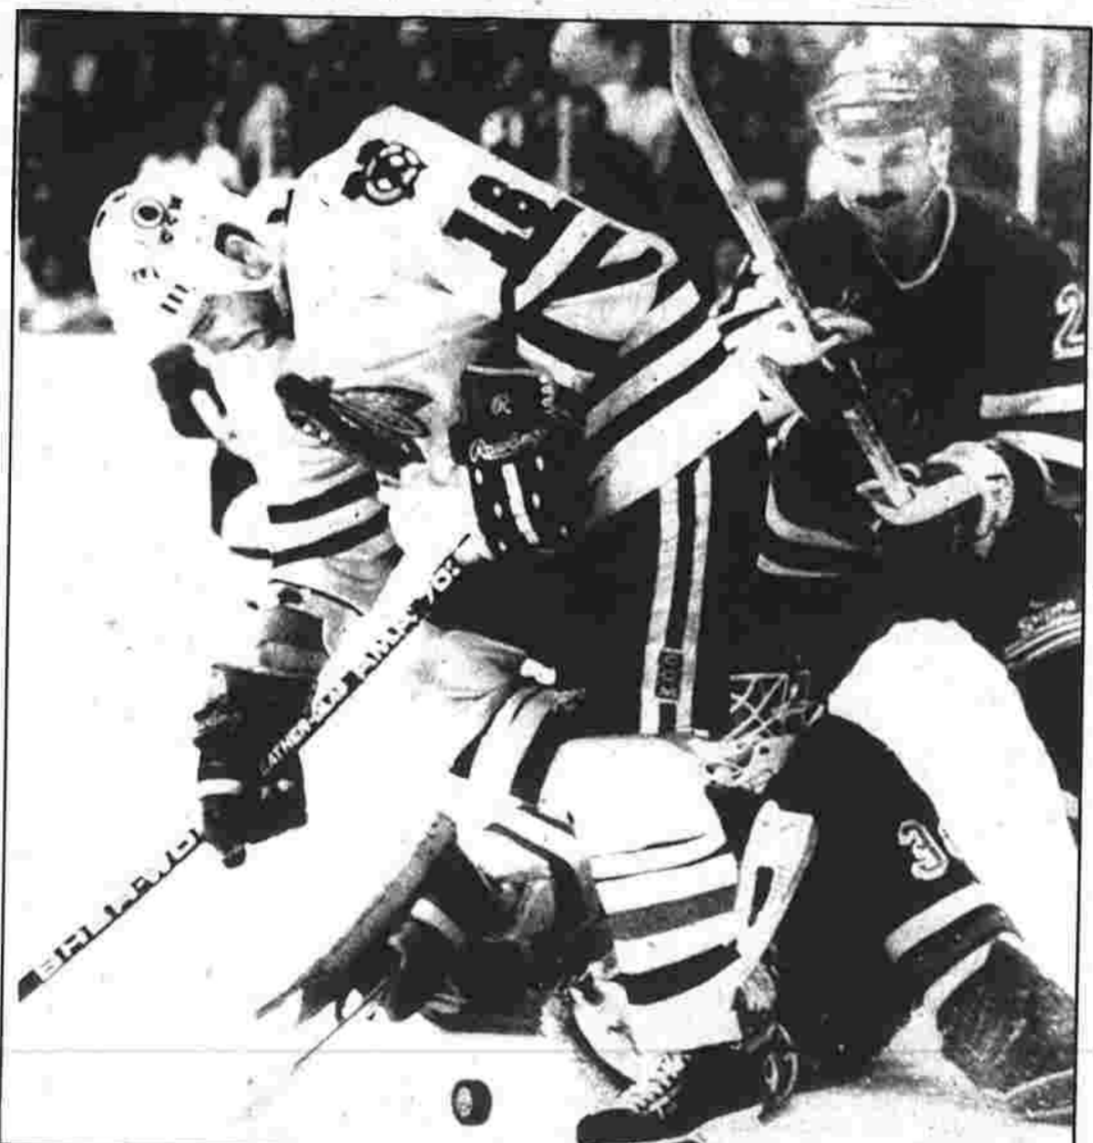

The Flames and fourth-place Kings will begin their best-of-seven first-round playoff series next week.

Rangers 4, Blackhawks 3

Kelly Kislak backed a three-goal barrage in the first period as New York beat Chicago and took a two-point edge for the fourth and final playoff spot in the Patrick Division.

The Rangers, winning for the first time on Chicago Stadium ice since December 1983, moved ahead of idle Pittsburgh with 70 points with just two games remaining in the regular season. The Penguins have three games left.

MCC nine opens year with a win

NEW LONDON — The Manchester Community College baseball team swung into the 1988 season with an impressive 12-6 win over homestanding Mitchell College Wednesday afternoon thanks to the hot bats of Todd Mercier and Troy Thornton.

Mercier, Thornton, center fielder Joe Perez, Shaw and Criscuolo combined for the five-run eighth inning for MCC.

Left-hander Peter Frankovich worked the first 3 1/3 innings for the Cougars, giving up four hits, striking out two and walking two. Thornton, out of New London High School, worked 3 2/3 innings, giving up one hit while walking three. Chuck Petchark, who started at third base, mopped up for the Cougars, striking out five. Russell Morrill started and absorbed the loss for Mitchell, now 0-2. He was rapped for 12 hits.

A double by Steve Criscuolo and single by Mercier plated MCC's first run in the opening frame. Thornton knocked in Dan Bon-tempo in the second frame for a 2-0 lead. The Cougars scored four times in the fourth inning, capped by catcher Scott Shaw's two-run double.

Yankees send Destrade to Pirates

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The New York Yankees traded pitch-hitting first baseman Destrade to the Pittsburgh Pirates on Wednesday for left-handed pitcher Hipolito Pena.

Pena, 24, who had an 0-3 record and a 4.56 earned run average in 16 appearances for Pittsburgh last season, was assigned to the Yankees' Triple A farm team at Columbus of the International League.

Destrade, 25, batted .256 with 25 home runs and 81 runs batted in last season at Columbus. In nine games with the 1987 Yankees, he hit .263.

Ueberroth suspends Milner for year

EDDIE MILNER suspended for year

PLANT CITY, Fla. — The Major League Players Association isn't sure whether it will appeal the one-year suspension of Cincinnati Reds outfielder Eddie Milner for repeated cocaine use.

A spokesman for the players' association objected after Milner was suspended without pay Wednesday by baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth just hours after the outfielder told the Reds he'd used cocaine.

It was the second offense for Milner, 32, who underwent rehabilitation for cocaine use last May when he was with the San Francisco Giants. Milner missed 52 days last season as a result.

Gene Orza, associate general manager of the A.P.C., said he said no decision has been made on whether to file a grievance over Milner's suspension without pay.

"The commissioner is taking actions that have no basis under the just-cause standard of the Basic Agreement," Orza said. "Something happened this morning, and six hours later they suspend a player for a year."

Cook said the team had no inkling that Milner was using cocaine again until he failed to show up for an exhibition game Wednesday against Boston.

The team contacted Milner at his spring training residence, and the outfielder said he'd used cocaine. Cook said Cook and the team's trainer and doctor then went to meet with Milner, who was in bad shape, according to Cook.

He advised us of his relapse," Cook said. "At this point in time, he's not in a position of really functioning."

The commissioner's office was notified, and Ueberroth heard about the suspension, Cook said.

Milner was the first player suspended by the commissioner for drug use since Feb. 25, 1987, when pitcher LaMarr Hoel played for the Reds from 1980-88.

Hawks renew faith in themselves with big win at Detroit

It would have been easy to get intimidated, look around at more than 47,000 people in the Silverdome and just want to go home.

When the Atlanta Hawks did head home after their game with the Detroit Pistons on Wednesday night, they left with a last-second 102-100 victory and renewed faith in themselves.

Antoine Carr's only basket of the second half, a turnaround jump hook from four feet with three seconds left snapped the Pistons' club-record home-court winning streak at 18 games. It spoiled a 35-point effort by Isiah Thomas.

The Hawks trail Detroit by 15 points in the Central Division.

Coaches can't agree who has edge at NCAA

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Even the coaches can't agree whether Duke and Kansas will hold a Final Four ace in the hole this weekend.

Those two, unlike Arizona, Oklahoma, have recently experienced the hype and hoopla that has come to surround the national championship of college hoops.

Arizona has never before been to a Final Four. And the second-ranked Wildcats' semifinal opponent Saturday, No. 4 Oklahoma, has not been there since long before any of its players were born.

But semifinal between No. 5

Duke and unranked Kansas will be a rematch of the 1986 semifinal in Dallas when the Blue Devils of the ACC prevailed over the Jayhawks of the Big Eight in Danny Manning's sophomore season.

"I think it helps some," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said Wednesday during a telephone hookup with the Final Four head men.

"You learn from any mistakes you might have made in your previous Final Four," Krzyzewski added. "I think it helps make you feel a little more comfortable and at ease. I hope we get to have this experience year after year."

Kansas' Larry Brown begs to differ.

"I just hope the kids we have who have been there in the past will keep reminding the kids we have in the future of what a great opportunity it is," he said. "I want our kids to take it lightly. But I really don't believe it's an advantage for us."

All four coaches did agree that despite the Final Four's high visibility, it does not produce the fierce pressures many assume it does.

"The pressure is greatest in the first game of the playoffs," Arizona Coach Lute Olson said. "I would be surprised if any of us in the Final Four feel a great deal of pressure."

"I don't think there's any pressure at all," Billy Tubbs of Oklahoma said. "We call it desire."

"Maybe there's pressure in getting into the Final Four once you start the tournament," Brown, who also coached UCLA to the Final Four in 1986. "Losing that regional championship game is the toughest on both teams because you're so close to the Final Four and then suddenly it's all over. But I don't feel any pressure. And I know our kids don't either. They're just thrilled to death."

Critics lightening up on Oklahoma's Tubbs

By Owen Confield

NORMAN, Okla. — Throughout his 14 years as a college basketball coach, Billy Tubbs of Oklahoma has been known as a man who put high-scoring, run-and-gun teams on the floor.

The numbers have backed up the label, particularly in his eight years at Oklahoma. During that time, his Sooners averaged better than 85 points per game. They scored 89.9 points per game in 1985 led the nation.

This year, the fourth-ranked Sooners scored 104 points per game; second only to Loyola-Marymount, Oklahoma put more than 150 points on the board twice in running up a 34-3 record, and 20 times eclipsing the 100-point mark.

The rap against the Sooners has always been their defense, or apparent lack thereof. And this season, after losses to slowpokes

Bruce to be No. 1 pick

ATLANTA (AP) — Andruy Bruce figures he's ready to cause some trouble in the National Football League.

"I like to apply pressure to the quarterback. I just like to cause hassles," the Auburn linebacker said Wednesday after the Atlanta Falcons said he would be the No. 1 pick in April's NFL draft.

"The feeling I got from (Atlanta Coach Marion) Campbell is that the Falcons need someone that can apply that pressure and cause hassles," he said.

"I'm some trouble in the NFL. Obviously, they do. I don't think they made the wrong decision."

The Falcons made no secret of the fact they were looking for defense. Not only was their 3-12 record the league's worst last season, they were last in points allowed, total defense, rushing yards allowed and in quarterback sacks, making only 17 in the 15 games.

UCLA in market for coach after firing Hazzard

By John Model
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Sometime soon UCLA will hire its sixth head basketball coach since the legendary John Wooden retired 13 years ago after guiding the Bruins to their 10th NCAA championship in 12 years.

Walt Hazzard, who helped UCLA win its first NCAA title 24 years ago, was fired Wednesday, less than three weeks after completing his fourth season as the Bruins' head coach.

Hazzard, who turns 46 next month, guided the Bruins to a 16-14 record in the Pac-10 conference, well below expectations for a team coming off a Pacific-10 Conference championship in 1986-87. The Bruins finished in a tie for second in the Pac-10, but were upset by Washington State 73-71 in a first-round game of the conference tournament on March 11.

Hazzard, the Pac-10 Coach of the Year last season, had received a two-year extension on his contract last summer, meaning he was under contract through the 1989-90 season.

The school said Athletic Director Peter Dallis is screening candidates for a successor to Hazzard and "hopes to name a replacement as soon as possible."

Among names being mentioned, according to a source close to the school, who asked not to be identified, are former UCLA coach Larry Brown, now the head coach at Kansas, and Arizona Coach Lute Olson.

Both Kansas and Arizona are among the Final Four who will compete in Kansas City this weekend — Kansas faces Duke and Arizona meets Oklahoma on Saturday's NCAA semifinals, with the winners squaring off Monday night for the championship.

Another possible candidate is Jim Harrick, head coach at Pepperdine, whose teams have gone 167-97 in nine seasons. He spent the two previous seasons as an assistant coach at UCLA under Gary Cunningham.

Reached in Kansas City on Wednesday night, Harrick, 49, said the firing of Hazzard was a complete surprise to him.

"I have not talked to anybody at UCLA," Harrick said. "Obviously, UCLA is a very outstanding job in my eyes because I'm a West Coast guy."

"I have no idea what they're thinking in terms of a successor to Hazzard. I know a lot about the school because I used to be there. It's nice to be thought of, to have your name mentioned for a position of that magnitude."

Gene Bartow succeeded Wooden, but lasted only two years as UCLA's head coach. Bartow was followed by Cunningham and Brown, each of whom also lasted two years, and Larry Farmer, who lasted three years. Hazzard succeeded Farmer before the 1984-85 season.

Dallis said that assistant coach Kris Janson will have responsibility for managing the day-to-day operation of the UCLA program until a new staff is in place.

A UCLA spokesman said assistant coaches Jack Hirsch, Ernie Carr and Sidney Wicks have also been relieved of their duties.

"We appreciate Walt's many years of contribution as a student-athlete, and alumnus, his four years of service as head basketball coach," Chancellor Charles Young said in a statement issued by the school.

"This was an extremely difficult and painful decision to make, but we felt that it was in the best interest of the UCLA basketball program, and we will make a change at this time."

Hazzard reached by telephone, told The Associated Press, "I have nothing to say at this point. I will issue a statement."

Hazzard's first season, 1984-85, was the worst in his UCLA career. He coached the Bruins to a 15-15 record in 1985-86, and a 16-14 record in 1986-87.

Hazzard's first team won the National Invitation Tournament championship, and his 1986-87 squad captured the Pacific-10 Conference crown. In the NCAA Tournament a year ago, UCLA beat Central Michigan 62-73 in the first round before being upset by Wyoming 78-64 in the second.

"The head basketball coaching position (at UCLA) is clearly one of the most prestigious in the country," Dallis said. "We will make every effort to fill the position with a coach capable of achieving the level of excellence we expect at UCLA."

Before coming to UCLA, Hazzard coached two seasons at Compton Junior College, where his teams were 53-9, and two more at Chapman College, where his teams were 49-14.

Meanwhile, CBS' new lineup of four Tuesday night comedies were the worst-rated shows of the week, with "Trial and Error" at the bottom with a miserable 5.8 and a 2 share. The move to Tuesday has hurt the critically acclaimed "Frank's Place," and the formerly sturdy "My Sister Sam," both of which were among the fatal four.

Today's hand has quite a few pitfalls, not the least of which is selecting the proper final contract. Ordinarily one would like to play a heart slam, which would be cold against most distributions, but not against today's horrendous trump split. Six diamonds East had been dealt two or more diamonds, because a spade could have been discarded from the table while East ruffed early, and the defense grabbed two spades and a club. Down one.

Allergies are difficult to control

QUESTION: Each year, beginning in the spring our dog begins her allergy problems with scratching, chewing her feet and generally gets a very bad odor from her skin.

Pet Forum

Edward A. Williams, D.V.M.

Over the last few years it seems to be getting worse and our veterinarian has told us we may need to try other treatments to see if we can get her more comfortable. What options are available?

ANSWER: You and your dog are by no means alone with the problem of allergic skin disease. Allergies are difficult to control and require diligence on the part of you and your veterinarian. Your question specifically refers to a season of the year; this usually differentiates the cause of the allergy from those caused by certain foods.

Essentially the problem lies with the dog's immune system. The problem is that when some animals are exposed to certain substances (allergens), antibodies stimulate cells to release histamines which cause intense itching, sneezing, skin irritation and hair loss. Exposure to these allergens can be by inhalation, contact, ingestion, or biting as is the case with flea allergy dermatitis. Flea allergy dermatitis is caused by an acute allergic reaction to the saliva of the flea. One added complication is that if a dog is allergic to one or two allergens, they quite frequently are allergic to a wide range of substances which then makes control more difficult.

The methods used for controlling allergic skin disease depend on the duration and severity of the symptoms. If the problem is very seasonal and lasts for a short period of time, antihistamines, bathing with medicated shampoo and short term use of anti-inflammatory medications may be prescribed and work very well. Ideally and theoretically, avoidance of the offending substances is the best way to avoid the problem. However, because allergies are frequently caused by grasses and pollens, avoiding contact with the cause is frequently impossible.

If the duration of the allergy season becomes longer and the doses of medication needed to control the scratching are excessive then alternative methods of control are needed. This is achieved in two phases. First, testing is performed either with a series of skin tests where minute amounts of allergens are injected under the skin and then monitored for a reaction or a recently developed blood test can be performed. The blood test has several advantages. There is no need to have your dog anesthetized for the procedure and the blood test has the capability of testing for many more allergens than skin testing.

Once the list of allergens is identified the desensitization program can begin. If there are some allergens which can be avoided (such as those in food), these can be eliminated from the diet. With others such as grasses, pollens, and trees an extract can be made specifically for your dog which is injected under the skin over a period of months, with gradual increases in the dose. This process introduces the allergens to the dog's immune system in a way which stimulates the production of new classes of antibodies. These new antibodies do not stimulate cells to release histamines, but remove the offending allergens from the system. In this way they prevent or reduce the allergic reaction.

In some cases the results with these allergy injections is remarkable. In the majority of cases the severity of the allergic reactions can be markedly reduced, thereby lowering the amount and frequency of medication and bathing necessary to keep your dog comfortable.

Regardless of the number of allergies your dog has, strict flea control is imperative. Flea bites can be very significant in the dog and recommend a specific and effective plan for your dog.

Youths maturing in ROPE program

By Susan Okulo
The Associated Press

WETHERSFIELD — Rappelling down a 50-foot cliff, sixth graders may be sending their self-esteem sky-high in a program designed to help them conquer the rocky road to adulthood. The program, called the Rite of Passage Experience, or ROPE, is getting high marks from many quarters seven years after it was developed by two youth service workers in Wethersfield's Department of Youth Services.

Blumenkrantz said in a recent interview that pre-modern cultures provided abundant events recognizing that children were becoming adults. Today, despite educational or religious ceremonies such as graduations and bar mitzvahs, there aren't many modern, culture-wide events marking when a person leaves childhood behind, he said.

Comets not unaltered relics of our solar system's birth

By Malcolm Ritter
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Comets do not deserve a reputation as pure samples of material from the birth of the solar system, because they have been altered in deep space, an analysis published today suggests.

Heat from very bright stars and star explosions called supernovae has altered their characteristics, researchers from the University of Colorado at Boulder propose.

"There's no such thing as a pristine comet," said J. Michael Shull, who presented the analysis with colleague S. Alan Stern in today's issue of the British Journal Nature.

Brain implants help relieve alcohol-related memory loss

By Malcolm Ritter
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Researchers reported today that brain tissue transplants in rats greatly eased memory problems caused by chronic alcohol intake, and said such therapy may someday help alcoholics and victims of Alzheimer's disease.

The transplants apparently worked by raising inadequate levels of a substance brain cells use to communicate, a deficit implicated in Alzheimer's, said researcher Jeffrey Gray.

As for alcoholism, "I think that really means there's hope, if you blow your mind with too much whiskey maybe we'll be able to repair it with transplants," said Gray, head of the psychology department at the Institute of Psychiatry in London.

Experts in alcohol-induced memory problems were skeptical, questioning how much the rats' condition resembled that of alcoholics and cautioning that any implication for treatment is only speculation.

Still, "I think it's going to stimulate lots of excitement and lots of further research," said Michael Eckardt, chief of the clinical brain research section in the laboratory of clinical studies at the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Gray reports the research with colleagues in today's issue of the British Journal Nature.

About 10 percent of alcoholics develop long-lasting memory loss, either by itself or as part of an overall loss in intellectual abilities, according to the federal alcohol institute.

In the new work, 78 male rats drank an alcohol solution as the only fluid in an otherwise normal diet for 28 weeks. Four weeks later, they did more poorly than other rats in learning to find food in a maze.

Rats that then got transplants of fetal rat brain tissue to two brain areas, the neocortex and the hippocampus, later performed almost as well as normal rats, the researchers said.

The fetal tissue was rich in a substance called acetylcholine, which some brain cells use to communicate. The transplants apparently worked by raising inadequate levels of the substance in the brain, Gray said.

Vaccine testing sought

SWIFTWATER, Pa. — The company that distributes the Salk polio vaccine is asking for federal permission to test it against AIDS, after California physicians reported the vaccine lessened some symptoms of the disease.

Connaught Laboratories Inc., of Swiftwater, filed an Investigational New Drug exemption petition with the Food and Drug Administration on March 22.

Just two weeks ago, Connaught stopped shipping the vaccine to California doctors who said they had used it to lessen symptoms in patients suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome. The company said it did not have FDA approval to use the vaccine for anything other than the prevention of polio.

Manatee has healthy heart

MIAMI — Naples, a 600-pound manatee, made veterinary history and got a clean bill of health when a portable electrocardiogram machine and a cellular telephone showed her heart to be sound.

Tuesday was the first time transtelephonic electrocardiography had been attempted on a manatee. The use of a cellular phone greatly simplified the procedure, according to Sequarium spokesman Walt Robshaw.

Spot freezing saves sight

WASHINGTON — Spot freezing can save the sight of many premature infants against a disease that causes 2,600 babies to lose their vision each year, say officials at the National Eye Institute.

The technique of using a supercooled probe to treat infants threatened with retinopathy of prematurity has been found to be effective in about half of the 172 babies treated in clinical trials at 23 medical centers. Dr. Carl Kupfer, director of the National Eye Institute.

State job agency using classifieds

By Nancy Conzelman
The Manchester Herald

The state Job Service, forgotten or misunderstood by many job hunters, has begun advertising in a place where it can't be missed — the classifieds.

On Mondays or Tuesdays of each week, the Job Service will list available positions on the classified pages of the Manchester Herald, said E. Lada-bouche, manager of the Manchester branch of the state Labor Department Job Service. The service is provided free by the Herald to the Job Service, she said.

"Local newspapers and television stations have cooperated with the job service office in the past to help increase awareness of the service," Lada-bouche said. At the Manchester office, located at 806 Main St., a management advisory committee, which consists of people from businesses and agencies, was formed "to get input from everyone as to how the Job Service can better serve the community," Lada-bouche said.

The first column of the job listings ran this Monday, March 28. It listed 10 brief job descriptions written by Lada-bouche.

She said many people don't know about the Job Service and its functions because the Labor Department doesn't have money in its budget for advertising. Many people who do know about the Job Service think it's only for unemployed people or those receiving government assistance, she said.

"We're here for anyone who's looking for work," she said. But the Job Service can help people who are unemployed, underemployed or who want an additional part- or full-time job. Most businesses, on the other hand, are aware of the Job Service's functions, she said.

"Most of them know they can contact us. Our service is free to everyone," she said. The Manchester Job Service office covers Manchester, South Windsor, Vernon, Tolland, Ellington, Bolton and sometimes gets calls from East Hartford and Glastonbury, she said. There are 10 other offices in the state.

Job hunters can come into the office and view microfiche, which lists available jobs and the salaries, location, description and required experience for each. A computer printout of all jobs on the microfiche minus the job description is also available. Government jobs are posted on bulletin boards.

The types of jobs available "run the gamut," Lada-bouche

Do rules protect amateur buyers?

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A regulation of the Federal Trade Commission declares that "no statement or illustration should be used in an advertisement which creates a false impression of the usability of the product offered."

The law is violated, according to the regulation, "if the first contact or interview is secured by deception."

Question: Is an automobile-company finance subsidiary guilty, therefore, if it advertises a low-rate on two-year loans, knowing that most customers will need longer-term loans at higher rates?

Some other credit lenders think they are, and they have petitioned the FTC to rule in their favor. The practice, they say, "is a classic case of bait-and-switch, and is unlawful under the FTC Act."

As viewed by the Credit Union National Association and the Independent Bankers Association of America, whose members depend heavily on income from car loans, the interest-rate promotions hurt not just them but customers, too.

Their claim adds another twist to one of the more puzzling challenges of today's marketplace: What is the price of a car? It isn't the first time the question was posed.

In fact, detailed sticker pricing on car windows was among the primary accomplishments of the consumer movement that began in the 1960s. Before then, not even a cryptographer could foresee with certainty what you might pay.

The stickers helped, but still left many questions, in part because of the number of options their products in the most enticing way they know how? The rates are honestly quoted; they're available, if only for two-year periods.

And if the automobile financing companies are guilty, what then can be said about many savings and commercial banks that publicize high returns on their certificates of deposit — and quietly restrict them to larger accounts?

Basic to all this is the same question that prevailed in the 1960s, when it was widely asserted that consumers were at a disadvantage in the marketplace because they were amateurs and sellers were professionals.

Since then, the consumer has become more aware of how the marketplace works, the result of legislation, advocacy groups, education, publicity and honest efforts by sellers to make products and policies understandable.

Still, many people suspect that perhaps the ingenuity of the marketplace pros may have developed more rapidly in the past two decades than the awareness of customers.

Minorities topic of parley

Gov. William A. O'Neill Jr. and Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman were among the speakers at a conference held for minority- and women-owned businesses Monday at the Aetna Institute for Corporate Education in Hartford.

The conference focused on the Connecticut Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities' report on the status of minority- and women-owned business in state contracts.

The conference was held to introduce minority and women business owners to the state's minority business enterprise development programs and to provide other assistance as needed.

MARKET REPORT

Factory orders drop again

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods fell 0.8 percent in February, the second consecutive monthly decline, the government reported Wednesday.

The Commerce Department said that orders for durable and non-durable goods dropped to a seasonally adjusted $210.86 billion last month following a 4 percent January decline.

The February drop was the largest since a 1.4 percent setback in August. The back-to-back declines were the first such since the summer of 1986.

But analysts said they were not overly concerned about the setbacks, contending that manufacturing will still be one of the top performing sectors this year.

FTC won't block GE bid

FAIRFIELD — General Electric Co. has announced that the Federal Trade Commission has decided not to interfere in the company's bid to acquire Roper Corp.

GE and Whirlpool Corp. are battling for the right to acquire Roper, with GE offering $54 a share compared to Whirlpool's offer of $50 a share.

Roper's directors initially supported the Whirlpool offer, but Tuesday urged stockholders to accept the GE offer.

GE said in its brief statement Wednesday that the FTC had considered action under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976. GE said:

Asbestos fine sets record
NEW HAVEN — The improper removal of asbestos from a demolished factory in Naugatuck has resulted in a record total fine of $260,000 imposed against two companies for violations of the federal Clean Air Act. U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said Wednesday.

Big Apple Wrecking Corp. of Middle Village, N.Y., and General DataComm Industries Inc. of Naugatuck will pay $130,000 each for the demolition of a former Union Corp. shoe plant in Naugatuck under consent decrees filed Tuesday in New Haven federal court, Twardy said.

General DataComm owned the plant when it was demolished, while Big Apple was the demolition contractor. The factory was leveled about two years ago to make way for a new General DataComm facility.

Irish is president of the W.J. Irish Insurance Agency in Manchester. In addition to serving on PIACT's board of directors, he has been a member of several association committees, including the member relations committee. Irish has served as Justice of the peace, a director of the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the Manchester chapter of UNICO National, and as a volunteer firefighter and assistant fire marshal with the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department.

Hallmark sells subsidiary

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hallmark Cards Inc. has announced that it will sell its costume jewelry subsidiary to Crystal Brands Inc. of Fairfield, Conn.

Terms of the sale of Trifari, Krussman & Fishel Inc. of New York were not disclosed. Trifari, which has about 1,000 employees, was being sold because Hallmark wanted to concentrate on larger companies and investments, said Steve Doyal, a Hallmark spokesman.

Hallmark bought Trifari in 1975 from the family that started the company in 1925. At that time, Doyal said Trifari was a good complement to Hallmark's composition as a greeting card and gift company.

Hallmark last year acquired a Spanish language television network for $300 million. Its other subsidiaries include printing and graphics companies, Crown Center Redevelopment Corp. and Binney & Smith Inc., the maker of Crayola crayons.

Dollar down all around as gold rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against all major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices rose.

In London, the British pound, spurred by market expectations that Britain's Conservative government will not move to hold it down, rose to $1.8796, up from $1.8790 late Wednesday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar dropped against the Japanese yen to close at the day's low of 124.50 yen, down 0.80 yen from Wednesday. Later, in London, the dollar fell further and was quoted at 124.28 yen.

"Profit-taking dollar selling brought the dollar down, but besides that there was no notable movement in the market," said Koh Iyo of the Bank of Tokyo.

Rules for the new investor?

No sure way to pick winners

QUESTION: What are the best methods for a new investor to determine which stocks to buy for gains in six to 12 months, or even less time? Assume the new investor has $5,000 to $10,000 to invest.

ANSWER: We'll also have to assume you are that "new investor." If you had been following the stock market — either as an active participant or just an observer — for any length of time, you would be well aware there is no sure answer to your question.

No one in this wide world can provide methods of selecting stocks that are going to rise in price in six months, or 12 months, or any other length of time.

Anyone who had a sure formula for picking winners in the market would be the richest person in the world. I can't perform that feat. Neither can anyone else. After you have been around the market for a while, you'll probably run into people who say they can. Don't believe them.

Some brokers, investment advisers and financial planners contend they pick nothing but sure things in the market. If you run into someone making that claim, counter with the time-honored adage: "Where are the customers, y'all?"

Here's another stock market lesson you must learn. Buying stock and selling within a short period of time is not investing. It's in-and-out trading. A truism of the market goes as follows: "Traders die broke."

This is not meant to discourage you from becoming a true investor. By studying the market and choosing individual securities for long-term holdings, it is intended to caution you that the stock market does not provide a sure road to riches.

QUESTION: What factors cause a company to split its stock?

ANSWER: A stock usually is split when the price of the company's board of directors considers too high to attract investors. What's too high? That depends on the feelings of the board members and varies from company to company. Some stocks split at $20 a share, some at $50, some at $100 or higher.

The basic idea behind a split is to lower the price and entice more people to buy shares. Many — not

Investors' Guide

William A. Doyle

280 shares you own after the split will be worth half as much as each of the 100 pre-split shares. The total value of your investment will not have changed, unless buying demand sends the price of XYZ stock higher.

QUESTION: Interest from municipal bonds is supposed to be free from federal income tax. But that interest is added to a retiree's adjusted gross income and half of his Social Security benefits to determine if up to half of the SS benefits are subject to federal income tax.

ANSWER: Technically, no. In practice, however, it is a backdoor tax on municipal bond interest that otherwise would be exempt from federal income tax.
