Residents complain proposed 2-3 mill tax hike too high

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Most of the residents who spoke during Wednesday night's hearing on the proposed $64 million 1988-89 General Fund budget said that the 13.5 percent increase over last year - a figure that will require a hike of 2 to 3 tax mills - is too high.

About 30 people, many of them public officials, showed up at the Wadwell School for the hearing.

Although no tax rate has been set, town officials said Wednesday that the budget would require an increase of 2 to 3 mills over the current rate of 48.59 mills.

But Elizabeth Sadloski, of 48 Hollister St., said that the school budget, like all budgets, is prepared with cuts in mind.

Bolton debates budget hikes at heated meeting

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — About 80 people debated whether a $4.6 million school budget that would add 5.6 mills to the tax rate should be approved at a public hearing in Community Hall Wednesday.

The 1988-89 budget, an 11.2 percent increase over the current school budget, would add about 5.6 mills to the current 33.75 mill rate. Added with the town budget, residents may face a 9.05 mill increase this year.

The increase may be even higher if a proposed $100,000 cut in the school budget is defeated. The Board of Finance has recommended the cut in an effort to decrease the mill rate an additional mill, Ray Ursin, finance board chairman said.

The budgets will be voted on in May at the Annual Town Meeting.

The hearing often became heated as residents for and against the budget increase debated the issues. At one point, Ursin had to bang his gavel repeatedly to quiet a citizen who would not let finance board member Robert L. Campbell finish his statement.

The citizen, John Skrainki, was against the total 9.05 mill increase. Campbell, though, told Skrainki that the point of the meeting was to discuss the school budget and not the mill rate.

"You're talking about a 25 percent increase in taxes," Skrainki said. "It's just a very big increase in one year."

Skrainki was joined in his argument by resident Ron Beaudoin. Though school board members told Beaudoin that about 90 percent of the budget was designated for areas such as salaries and fringe benefits, which can not be cut because of state mandates, Beaudoin demanded that the cuts be made elsewhere.

The total increase to the school budget is $755,710.

"I don't want to pay an increase of three-quarters of a million," he said. "It's unrealistic. I'm requesting you take reductions some place else. I don't want to pay it."

While residents may not want to pay such a large tax increase — as much as an additional $450 on a house assessed at $50,000 — Ursin said the increase would have taken place last year. Since $357,674 in surplus funds were used last year to artificially suppress the mill rate, the mill rate only rose to 35.75 mills from 33.5 mills, he said.

"If the surplus was not used, rates would have climbed an additional 5.4 mills, he said.

"What happened, happened last year," Ursin said. "We anticipate no surplus to reduce the mill rate this year."

Other residents supported the proposed increase.

"I'm tired of the schools living with minimum funds," said Chris Walsh. "I don't think they ask for too much. I think they ask too little. I like our school system. I'd like it to be better."

A major portion of the meeting also was spent debating the need for Willington students to attend Bolton High School. Many residents argued that the district was partially subsidizing the students, who they said were taking up space though Bolton schools are in a space crunch. School officials, though, said the district makes money on Willington students, and that the space crunch is currently taking place at the elementary school, which is only attended by Bolton students.

About 95 Willington students attend the high school, resulting in tuition revenues of $335,000, Willington, which does not have its own high school, pays 80 percent of the costs, though Bolton pays between $70,000-$75,000 yearly, said Richard E. Packman, school superintendent.

School board member Michael Parsons said Bolton pays for some of the costs because it competes against Windham High School, which also accepts Willington students.

"They bring a lot of money to this town," he said. "We are making money on these kids. If you want to blow off your right foot, fine, but think of what you're doing."

A public hearing on the town budget has been scheduled for Monday.

Coventry moving to resolve its great playing field debate

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Playing the field in Coventry is risky business according to many residents. They say the town's recreation fields are in bad shape and they want something done about it.

Included in the proposed town budget for 1988-89, which begins July 1, is a $172,000 program for repair and maintenance of the fields. A $110,000 portion is in the proposed General Government Spending Budget of $3.8 million, the other $62,000 is part of the Board of Education's proposed $3.3 million dollar budget. Both will be voted on at a town meeting or adjourned referendum.

Members of the council and Board of Education joined some of the upset residents to form the committee to investigate the problem. They had a study done by officials of the state DEP and environmental experts at UConn. of the fields — which include ball fields at Coventry High School, Captain Nathan Hale Middle School, Coventry Grammar School, one behind the Town Office Building, Miller-Richardson and Laidlaw.

The committee also researched how area towns care for fields and then developed the program. It includes a request for one supervisor and two laborers to work on the fields, town green and Patriot's Park, nine months of the year. The fields division would plow snow in the winter. There is also a request for the purchase of capital equipment.

"The fields are in deplorable condition. I can't stress this enough," John Fleming, a member of the Fields Committee and Board of Education said at a meeting.

Some residents oppose the program saying "The price is too steep." Others are concerned about lack of accountability to ensure the funds will go to the fields.

The loudest voices, however, support the plan. It is not only an issue of safety and liability, says Carpenter, but a matter of pride.

"Our kids deserve better," he said.

Robert Plaster, a coach at Manchester Memorial Hospital and remembers treating the boys. Carpenter says the fields have been badly neglected for 10 years. "They need to be fertilized, loamed and mowed on a regular basis," said Carpenter.

Road race route is uncertain

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The Great American Race is coming to Hartford, but organizers have not determined if the race will pass through the Manchester area.

Phil Cole, race organizer, said that the final race route of classic American cars has not been determined after races stop in East Hartford-Hartford on July 3 for the Riverfest celebration. The race, open to owners of vehicles made before 1937, will be run from Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif. to Boston.

Arthur Shorts of Manchester will drive in the race in his 1932 Chevrolet Deluxe Coupe with the help of Joe Curry of Bolton, who will serve as his navigator. Ernie Reed of Hebron, who operates a developing business in Manchester, will drive a 1936 Ford four-door convertible in the race with navigator Michael Mac Bryde of Manchester.

There will be 120 contestants, who must travel the 4,000 miles between the two cities in 11 days.

There is between $250,000 and $300,000 in prize money. The race is sponsored by Interstate Batteries of Dallas.

Though the tentative schedule has the route passing from Hartford to Providence to Boston, Cole said the final route will be decided in the weeks to decide the final route.

However, organizers will not reveal their findings until the morning of the last day of the race, Cole said. Any news of the route beforehand might give some racers a chance to practice on the final route, which would be an unfair advantage, he said.

"(It's) a time, distance and speed race," Cole said. "If someone had the instructions early, they could practice. A lot of people might be upset."

Though Cole would not say whether the route would pass through the area, he said the possibility still exists that it will.

"That route (from Hartford to Providence) has not been ruled out," he said. "But we're not sure if we're going to Providence."

Wilmington, which does not have its own high school, pays 80 percent of the costs, though Bolton pays between $70,000-$75,000 yearly, said Richard E. Packman, school superintendent.

School board member Michael Parsons said Bolton pays for some of the costs because it competes against Windham High School, which also accepts Willington students.

"They bring a lot of money to this town," he said. "We are making money on these kids. If you want to blow off your right foot, fine, but think of what you're doing."

A public hearing on the town budget has been scheduled for Monday.

Fogarty heads recycling group; state funds closer to approval

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Mayor Peter F. DiRosa Jr. said today he has appointed Director James F. "Dutch" Fogarty to head a citizens' committee to study recycling in Manchester.

Meanwhile, a bill that would make it possible for towns like Manchester to receive state assistance for recycling efforts has been selected in about a week. Fogarty could not be reached for comment this morning.

A state law passed last year prohibits a landfill from accepting certain recyclables after Jan. 1, 1991. Lee O'Connor, the acting superintendent of the highway and sewer divisions, has said that the town should start to educate citizens about the need for recycling before that deadline comes up.

DiRosa said the recycling program outlined by the administration will be discussed by the Board of Directors at its May meeting. The administration is proposing that the program be started around Labor Day.

The proposed town budget includes $55,000 for a vehicle for the collection of recyclables, but the administration has said that it may be possible to pay an outside contractor to collect the recyclables instead.

Suleyman's poetry

The poetry written by Suleyman the Magnificent, a 15th century ruler of the Ottoman Empire, was transcribed by a court scribe in calligrapher and often decorated with gold flecks sprinkled on the wet ink.

The proposed town budget includes $55,000 for a vehicle for the collection of recyclables, but the administration has said that it may be possible to pay an outside contractor to collect the recyclables instead.

Coventry champs honored

COVENTRY — The Town Council presented members of the Coventry High School girls basketball team with a certificate of recognition for the team's state championship during a regular meeting Monday at the Town Office Building.

"We are very proud of you," Council Chairman Joan Lewis said as she presented the certificate to CHS seniors Anna Wertheim and team co-captains Leslie Daney and Kim Mizesko. Also present were Coach Raymond Dimmock and Assistant Coach Roger Thalacker.

The team won the 1987-88 Charter Oak Conference championship and the Class S state championship. They won the title on March 11 defeating Kolbe Cathedral at Bridgeport. Daney was chosen most valuable player of the tournament.

"It is a feeling of complete accomplishment," Daney said. The council also began a preliminary review of the proposed town budget of $3.8 million for the next fiscal year, which begins July 1. They are considering cutting new personnel and capital requests.

"What we really need is additional information about these requests," Lewis said. Formal cuts are unlikely to be made until a special council meeting April 11, she said.

The council also received a letter from Marion Leber, business manager for the Board of Education, notifying them that the Board of Education has received complaints about the poor condition of some town roads from school bus drivers.

The streets cited are Silver, Brewster, Broadway, between Carpenter Road and North River Road, Flanders Road, South Street from Doly Road to Route 5, Swamp Road, and North School Road.

The owners complained of frost heaves, poor visibility entering some roads, and street signs missing in many locations.

The council directed Acting Town Manager Frank Trzasko to investigate the complaints.

Pet store owner fined

EAST HAVEN — A pet store owner has been fined more than $50,000 for failing to comply with a consent order he signed in January, a state agriculture official said.

The consent order stipulated that Ricky Sachs, owner of Animal Kingdom I in Hamden and Animal Kingdom II in East Haven, follow a schedule of health measures designed to protect dogs and cats sold at the stores.

Andersen, who initiated divorce proceedings for Mrs. Crafts, testified undercross examination by defense attorney J. Daniel Sagarin that Mrs. Crafts sought a no-fault divorce, was willing to grant her husband liberal and flexible visitation of their three children, and rejected her lawyer's recommendation she seek to have her husband removed from their home.

Mrs. Crafts had also said she and her husband had grown closer while he was undergoing treatment for colon cancer and was forced to stay home from work, Andersen said.

At the same time, however, Helle Crafts stated that should anything happen to her that she should not believe it was an accident, Andersen said. The statement was made during a meeting in October 1988, Andersen said.

Mrs. Crafts, a 39-year-old Danish-born stewardess for Pan American World Airways, was last seen on Nov. 8, 1988. Prosecutors will seek to prove body fragments they found along the shore of the Housatonic River in Southbury are from Mrs. Crafts' remains.

The state called Mrs. Crafts' divorce lawyer to the stand Wednesday to show how the Crafts' marriage was deteriorating before her disappearance and to establish a motive for the alleged crime.

Defense attorney J. Daniel Sagarin sought to prevent Andersen from identifying Mrs. Crafts' gun collection and his wife's fears.

Although Mrs. Crafts' obtained evidence that her husband was involved with a woman in New Jersey she did not want adultery mentioned as a reason for divorce.

Andersen, under direct examination by prosecutors, said Mrs. Crafts did not want adultery mentioned because "basically she was concerned about the children and their knowledge of that" and about what "the community would think."

Keith Mayo, the private detective hired by Andersen and then by Mrs. Crafts, took the stand late in the day and will be recalled Thursday.

Mayo's first job in the case was to identify the holder of a New Jersey telephone number Mrs. Crafts had obtained. Mrs. Crafts had suspected the number belonged to her husband's girlfriend.

After Mayo identified whose number it was, Mrs. Crafts hired him to conduct a surveillance of the woman's home.

Mianus Bridge crash fatal

GREENWICH — A 60-year-old Great Neck, N.Y. woman was killed and a New Jersey man seriously injured in a five-vehicle crash on the Mianus River Bridge, state police said.

State police Trooper Kevin Connelly identified the woman as Lorraine Welner, 60.

Peter Tyler, 43, of Plainfield, N.J., was listed in critical condition at Greenwich Hospital with head injuries, according to a nursing supervisor at the hospital.

John C. Ehrnfelt, 25, of Bridgeport and Charles Mitchell, 55, of Stamford were treated at Greenwich Hospital for minor injuries and released. Hain said.

Ehrnfelt was driving a truck owned by American Linen Corp. of Stamford northbound in the center lane of Interstate 95 on the Mianus River Bridge when a tire blew out around 2:40 p.m. Wednesday, state Police Sgt. Robert W. Slattery said.

Work bill defeated

HARTFORD — The General Assembly's Judiciary Committee has dealt what would be the final blow to a bill originally designed to allow 15-year-olds to work in restaurants.

The committee voted 15-11 to kill the measure, which, after going through several revisions this legislative session, simply would have cleaned up a law enacted last year allowing 15-year-olds to work in grocery stores.

The 700-member Connecticut Restaurant Association had lobbied hard for the measure, citing a shortage of workers.

Dole delegates retained

BRIDGEPORT — Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., may be down, but he is apparently not completely out of the presidential campaign picture.

Dole is telling his campaign staff to retain the 10 delegates he won in Connecticut's presidential primary March 29, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Dole has given similar instructions to campaign figures in other states where he gained delegate commitments in primaries and caucuses, the Bridgeport Telegram reported Wednesday.

CRAFTS TRIAL — Richard B. Crafts reacts to testimony given during the third day of his trial on charges that he murdered his wife, Helle Crafts, a 39-year-old Pan American World Airways flight attendant. Mrs. Crafts was last seen on Nov. 18, 1986, at the couple's Newtown home.

O'Neill rejects claim of shortfall

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill says he is confident the budget he's proposed for 1988-89 can be supported by existing taxes and rejects legislative leaders' claims the $6.32 billion document is $40 million to $200 million out of balance.

"Our projections show that that's not the case," O'Neill said Wednesday.

"Our people are already meeting with the legislature. This came as a total surprise to me and I think to most of the other members of the General Assembly."

O'Neill has made a commitment not to raise taxes in this legislative election year and reiterated that commitment Wednesday. His budget for the year beginning July 1 calls for no tax increases, with the exception of an additional penny on the gasoline tax that's part of an increase schedule approved in 1984.

Rep. Ronald L. Smoko, D-Hamden, and Sen. William A. DiBella, D-Hartford, the co-chairmen of the tax-writing Finance Committee, said Tuesday that the budget approved by the Appropriations Committee will have to cut or taxes will have to be raised to cover proposed expenses.

"The bottom line of the budget is too high, perhaps as much as $160 million to $200 million," Smoko said Tuesday. "It cannot be balanced with the existing revenue structure, even stretching it to the bursting point."

DiBella said the best possible scenario is that the proposed budget would be $40 million short of the necessary revenues.

The budget calls for a 12 percent increase in spending over the current year.

Democratic leaders met Wednesday with the Office of Policy and Management to discuss the budget, which is to be voted on next week in the House of Representatives. The budget would take effect with the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Rep. Janet Polinsky, D-Waterford, House chairwoman of the Appropriations Committee, said Smoko's and DiBella's predictions were not a shock. She also cautioned that the Finance Committee figures were preliminary estimates.

"All along we've been hearing 'We're not sure' about revenues. I don't think (DiBella and Smoko) have reached a conclusion. Depending on what the final figures are, the budget will reflect them," Polinsky said.

Asked why he was not as alarmed as Smoko and DiBella seemed to be, O'Neill said: "There's nothing to be frightened of."

Senate rejects ban on busing

HARTFORD (AP) — Supporters of a proposed ban on forced busing say they are sending a message to the state Department of Education that they should look to other remedies for integrating Connecticut's schools.

But others see the Republican proposal, which was defeated roughly along party lines in the state Senate on Wednesday, as a shameful attempt to play on the fears of some citizens.

"I'm disgusted and ashamed that people are trying to manipulate the Connecticut citizenry and are not dealing with the issue of one black and one white Connecticut," said Sen. John C. Daniels, D-New Haven, in a speech that brought applauding Democrats to their feet.

"The real issue is having an equal educational system for all citizens of Connecticut," Daniels said. "It's hypocritical and shameful that you're turning this into political fodder."

The proposed ban came in the form of two amendments to a bill barring the state Department of Education from implementing any plan to integrate Connecticut public schools without legislative approval. The amendments were rejected on votes of 25-11 and 26-10.

The bill itself, approved 36-11, was prompted by a controversial desegregation report that itself provoked sharp criticism of education Commissioner Gerald N. Tirozzi after its release late last year.

The desegregation plan, to be acted on next year by the legislature, calls for towns to work together to create such things as "magnet schools" that would attract students from beyond the boundaries of existing school districts.

House promoted at bank

Arthur H. House of East Granby, son of Judge and Mrs. Charles S. House of Manchester, has been appointed senior vice president and director of public affairs-government relations at Connecticut National Bank.

House will be responsible for public affairs, community relations, special events and the corporate communications departments.

House joined CNB from CIGNA Corp., where he was a consultant to the CIGNA Investment Group. He also served as vice president and general manager of CIGNA Healthplan of Connecticut and as manager of government and industry relations.

Before joining CIGNA, he was a legislative assistant and administrative assistant to Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff and a staff director for the Senate Democratic Policy Committee. He also served as an aide on foreign relations to Sen. Christopher J. Dodd. From 1975 to 1976, he was a White House fellow assigned to the assistant to the President for National Security Affairs.

House is a graduate of Tufts College and completed his graduate studies at Tufts Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. He was awarded a doctorate in international relations.

MARKET REPORT

Biggles enjoy good year

NEW YORK — America's industrial giants enjoyed record sales and soaring profits last year, unfazed by the stock crash that left many people expecting a recession. Fortune magazine said today in its annual list of the 500 mightiest manufacturers.

"Across the Rust Belt you can hear the sound of champagne corks popping and beer cans spritzing open: The Fortune 500 had its best year ever in 1987," the magazine said in an advance text of its April 25 issue, available on newsstands next Monday.

"After half a decade of sitting on the sidelines while the rest of the economy boogled, the biggest U.S. industrial corporations walked into the year with a bang." Fortune said.

Chrysler Corp. returned to the top 10 for the first time in a decade, helped by its acquisition of American Motors Corp. Fortune said. Chrysler "perhaps best symbolized the story of the 1987 Fortune 500 list — the Rust Belt was back."

The new list contained fewer members of industries such as building materials, food, industrial and farm equipment, petroleum refining, rubber products, toys and sporting goods.

Cocoa glut drops prices

NEW YORK — Chocolate lovers may soon be paying less to satisfy their craving as a world cocoa glut pushes prices to their lowest levels in six years, industry analysts predicted.

World production of cocoa this season, which ends in September, is expected to top 2.1 million tons, 6 percent more than last year and a new record, according to the GIL Duffus Group P.L.C., a London-based commodities firm.

The firm and the International Cocoa Organization predict production will exceed consumption by as much as 100,000 metric tons.

Retail prices for individual chocolate bars may not fall right away, but consumers may see a trend toward bigger bars continue, slightly lower prices on bagged and boxed chocolates, and more coupons and other promotional efforts, according to analysts and Richard T. O'Connell.

Household size shrinks

WASHINGTON — American households have shrunk to their smallest size ever, containing by far the fewest people as at the start of the Civil War.

The Census Bureau reports that the average household contained 2.64 people as of last July 1, continuing a long-term decline. By comparison, the 1850 census found an average household of 5.28 people.

US Sprint Co. feeling sting of gadfly seeking presidency

By Deborah Mesce, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A 32-year-old San Diego entrepreneur is waging an unusual coast-to-coast campaign to oust the management of US Sprint Communications Co., the company for which he says he recruited hundreds of thousands of residential customers.

Walton's campaign has one big stumbling block, though: Shareholders do not elect the president.

US Sprint has acknowledged its billing problems and admitted they have contributed to the company's losses. Spokesman Syd Courson said the company plans to have new computer software installed by January to take care of the problem.

"We've owned up to our billing problems and we've done a lot to correct them," Courson said, adding that Walton has become a "nuisance."

Walton says he signed up 600,000 residential customers for US Sprint and one of its precursors, US Telecom, from 1984 to 1986 when he worked as an independent sales contractor for the company, the nation's third-largest long-distance carrier.

The former high school teacher hired a sales force of about 400 young people who set up tables on downtown street corners and college campuses across the country and signed customers for the new long-distance company.

"After his contract with US Sprint was terminated in September 1986, Walton wrote scores of letters to US Sprint executives about his lost commissions and the company's billing problems. At the time, Walton said, the company owed him between $3 million and $5 million in unpaid commissions.

Walton estimated that about half of his recruits were never counted for a commission.

Market jump tests new limit on program trading

By Rick Glodstone, The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A jump in the Dow Jones industrial average tested for the first time the new restriction on program trading, but experts disagree over how much the restriction was announced Feb. 4, Wednesday, marked the first time the threshold was breached.

The collar is part of an effort to suppress wild price swings in the aftermath of the Oct. 19 market crash and restore investor confidence. Some traders said that without the limit, the Dow average might have risen as much as 100 points Wednesday, but others said it was impossible to know.

"There was a lot of program trading when the Dow was up between 35 and 40 points," said Philip C. Puccio, manager of institutional trading at Dillon Read & Co. "It went from 40 to 49 within five minutes."

Several other influences boosted stocks, notably a stronger dollar and lessening fears of higher interest rates. But many brokers said program trading played at least a partial role in the Dow's sudden surge.

Program trading refers to a sophisticated form of arbitrage, the simultaneous purchase and sale of similar goods in different markets in order to profit from price disparities.

Using computers that instantly place massive orders, program traders buy stocks in New York and sell corresponding stock index futures in Chicago, or vice versa.

Many brokers have blamed the technique for injecting enormous volatility — as well as crushing trading volume — into the stock market without regard for underlying stock values. Some studies have suggested program trading was an important element in the October crash.

NYSE spokesman Richard Torrenzano said Wednesday after the 86-point collar was triggered that

"It's not the solution but it's clearly a first step in controlling what we call intra-day volatility."

Asked how far the Dow average would have moved without the limit, Torrenzano said, "If you talked to 10 people you'd get 10 different answers. I have no idea."

Robert Gordon, president of Twenty-First Securities Corp., which utilizes program trading, said he believed the technique wasn't an element in the Dow's rise Wednesday, largely because the price disparities between stocks and stock-index futures weren't profitable enough for widespread arbitrage.

Others said the reaching of the limit caused the Dow to retreat several points before it began moving up again, but at a slower pace that reflected the absence of program trading's influence.

"Without the restriction, I think you would have seen it up 100 points today," Puccio said.

Some mutual funds can buy on margin

QUESTION: Are mutual funds allowed to buy stocks on margin, by law or Securities and Exchange Commission regulation? If so, are the owners of mutual fund shares liable for losses due to margin calls?

ANSWER: Some mutual funds buy stocks on margin — putting part of the purchase price and borrowing the rest. Most do not, however.

The Investment Company Act of 1940, the principal federal law covering mutual funds, restricts the amount any mutual fund can borrow. A fund which borrowed the maximum amount possible under the '40 Act would be in a 66-7/3 percent margin position.

But mutual funds are not exempt from the Federal Reserve Board's 50 percent margin requirements.

Any mutual fund using margin for stock purchases must spell out that fact in its prospectus. The relatively small number of funds using margin are classified as "aggressive" or "go-go" funds — meaning they shoot for big gains in share value and sometimes suffer huge losses.

William A. Doyle

QUESTION: Your explanation that when a person redeems some but not all of his mutual fund, the basis for tax purposes can be calculated by the "average cost" method, the "first-in-first-out" method or the "specific identification" method was most helpful. Can the same three methods be used when selling shares of individual stocks?

ANSWER: Nope! The Internal Revenue Service allows the use of the average cost and FIFO methods only with mutual fund shares. When you sell individual stocks, you are required to use the specific identification method, also called the "identified share" method.

With that method, you report your capital gain or loss on Schedule D as the sale of shares you bought on such-and-such a date at a certain price.

Years ago, mutual fund shares had to be reported under the same method. But the IRS relented and allowed the use of average cost and FIFO. Considering the fact that many people buy full and fractional shares of individual stocks through dividend reinvestment plans, it would be a blessing if average cost and FIFO were extended to stocks.

A margin call occurs when the market value of a stock purchased on margin falls and the buyer must put up more collateral or be sold out. A mutual fund using margin can always produce more collateral. The fund's shareholders wouldn't even be aware of the margin call.

Billy Masse tearing up league for new team

By Len Auster
The Manchester Herald

WINSTON SALEM, N.C. — Former East Catholic High School and Davidson College baseball star Billy Masse is tearing up the Atlantic Coast Conference in his first and only season in the Tobacco Road Belt at Wake Forest University.

BILLY MASSE tearing up ACC

The 6-foot-1, 190-pound outfielder in the latest ACC statistics was either first or second in all offensive departments. He was batting .416 (64-for-154) after games played through Tuesday, with 17 doubles, 3 triples, 17 homers and 61 RBI. He had 34 bases on balls, struck out only 10 times and was 26-for-28 in the stolen base department.

Masse also has already set a single-season school mark for the Deacons with 59 runs scored. Wake Forest, 26-13, has 20 games left plus at least two games in the double elimination ACC Tournament to be held May 11-15 in Greenville, S.C., at Greenville Municipal Stadium.

LaFontaine does his thing in OT

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

It didn't take him as long. It wasn't quite as dramatic or significant. Still, Pat LaFontaine gladly will accept the glare of the Stanley Cup spotlight once again.

LaFontaine's most recent playoff heroics came in the Islanders' historic 3-2 four-overtime victory against Washington in Game 7 of the opening round of the 1987 playoffs. His game-winner at 6:11 of the extra period Wednesday night didn't eliminate anyone from the Cup chase, but it gave the Islanders a 4-3 win over New Jersey, which was making its postseason debut riding a hot streak.

Norris Division

Capital Centre certainly will help their outlook. Dave Poulin snapped a 2-2 tie with a power-play goal midway through the third period. Philadelphia, which had blown a 2-0 lead, got an empty-net goal from Murray Craven with 18 seconds left. Peter Zeehl had the other two goals for Philadelphia and goalie Ron Hextall, who made 35 saves, stopped 18 of 19 shots in the third period.

Leafs 6, Red Wings 2

Goaltender Allan Bester continued his mastery of the Red Wings and Toronto got off to a good start toward a third successive first-round upset.

FALLING SABRE — Buffalo's Mike Ramsey (5) is just about to hit the ice during third-period action with Boston Wednesday night in the first round of the playoffs at the Garden. Boston's Nevin Markwart is on the ice. The Bruins won, 7-3.

Adams Division

Bruins 7, Sabres 3

The Bruins used attacks by their penalty killing team to break the game open. Steve Kasper and Gord Kluzak scored shorthanded goals 57 seconds apart in the second period.

Blues 4, Blackhawks 1

The name Hull usually meant glory and success for Chicago. It meant defeat for Chicago. It meant defeat for the Blackhawks Wednesday night as rookie Brett Hull scored two power-play goals.

Prevention of Lyme disease seen years away

By Larry Rosenthal
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — Measures to contain the spread of Lyme disease are at least two to three years away from being developed, so the emphasis must remain on early diagnosis and treatment of the tick-borne bacterial infection, speakers told a medical conference Wednesday.

"You can't really think about control until you understand the ecology of the disease," said Louis Magnarelli, chief agricultural scientist at the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.

The bacterium that causes the illness is transmitted by a tiny tick that most often attaches itself to white-tailed deer and a small forest mouse. The season when ticks pose the greatest threat has just begun in Connecticut.

Reports of Lyme disease in Connecticut have increased by 183 percent over the last 20 years, according to state's chief epidemiologist.

Magnarelli said he was hopeful that in two to three years scientists would be able to develop a way to slow the spread of the disease that would likely involve measures to contain the movement of ticks and also the use of insecticides and repellents.

"I think with a set of strategies and a coordinated effort," he told the conference at the Yale School of Medicine.

"We're thinking that if we can suppress the tick, and lessen the infection rate, we've made progress," Magnarelli said.

The Lyme disease problem has worsened as an increasing number of people have moved into new homes in wooded areas, where the ticks and their hosts live.

Magnarelli rejected as unwarranted, impractical and too costly a number of suggested courses of action to keep the tick from spreading.

"Noting that some people want to see deer heads thinned out, Magnarelli said the question remains how many deer would have to be killed to have an effect, and whether it would be worth the cost.

"We believe you would have to remove just about all of them," he said. "We're not going to cut out and slaughter 30,000 deer."

Lyme disease is named for the southeastern Connecticut town of Lyme where the first outbreak in the United States was identified about a decade ago. The ailment can be treated by antibiotics at any stage, but the chance of permanent damage is decreased if it is detected and treated early.

A public information campaign is being conducted this year in the state to ensure the public and the medical community are familiar with the early symptoms of the disease.

The illness often but does not always begin with a rash, at the bite site or at multiple locations. Victims develop flu-like symptoms, including headaches, fever, muscle aches or fatigue. More serious symptoms, such as inflamed joints, facial paralysis and neurological disorders, can appear later.

A highly potent tick repellent called Permethane has been cleared for sale in Connecticut in an effort to slow the spread of Lyme disease and Rocky Mountain spotted fever. It was announced this week. The product is intended for application on clothing only.

Magnarelli said that repellent and others are being screened this year to see which are most effective. He said Permethane is a good compound that "will definitely kill ticks."

Computers get little use

WASHINGTON — Only about half the adults who have a computer at home actually use it as reported in nearly three-quarters of all children, the Census Bureau reports.

Youngsters use computers for learning and games, and many children are also exposed to the machines in school, said bureau statistician Robert Kominski, whose survey was released Wednesday.

Even though many adults use computers at work, the home computer may have been bought by one adult for a specific use, and not be of interest to others in the home, Kominski suggested.

In addition, many computers were bought "as learning tools and game machines for children," he said.

Kids get many colds

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — If your normally healthy child always seems to have a cold during the winter, is something wrong?

"Not really," says Dr. Caroline Hall, a professor of pediatrics at the University of Rochester. "The typical young child has between seven and nine acute respiratory infections — most often colds, sometimes influenza — each year, and most of these happen during the winter."

Hall says parents can't prevent colds from occurring, though they can take steps to diminish their child's exposure to cold viruses, particularly in the home. Some suggestions: Wash your own hands often, throw away used tissues immediately, and don't share objects normally used by infected and non-infected family members.

Binder twins leave hospital

BALTIMORE — Separated Siamese twins from West Germany were sent home from Johns Hopkins Hospital on Wednesday, seven months after an operation to separate their skulls and circulatory systems, the hospital said.

With gifts of toy blue jays — the symbol of Johns Hopkins University — Benjamin and Patrick Binder, 14 months old, were discharged to return home with their parents to Ulm, West Germany.

The twins were separated in a lengthy operation in September.

Doctors said Tuesday the boys have the potential to lead normal lives, but emphasized that their development has been severely delayed.
