"Soul Man" was revived as a hit by Dan Aykroyd and John Belushi in the 1980 movie "The Blues Brothers."

Thoughts

Do you ever think about what Forgiveness really is? Forgiveness never answers a question; rather it does what the great St. Paul said it does: "Don't let yourself be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good." Forgiveness always gives the person who has wronged you the opportunity of building a new relationship with you, and therefore the possibility for him or her to begin again. Forgiveness is walking together into the future in which evil does not have the last word. We all know that this is very difficult to do. We also know that it is a very beautiful part of life through forgiving, we give to all mankind a new way of life that is a way of peace.

Bolton budget draws fire from residents

By Nancy Connelman
Manchester Herald

BOLTON - The elimination of a recreation director position from the town's proposed budget drew more fire from residents at a budget hearing Monday than a 25 percent increase in the tax rate.
Nearly 50 residents attended a public hearing in Community Hall Monday to argue points of the Board of Finance's proposed town budget for fiscal year 1988-89, which will be voted on in May at the Annual Town Meeting.
Members of the Board of Finance and Board of Selectmen argued that in light of an increase of 9.65 mills, this was not the year to add the recreation director position. The proposed $3.5 million 1988-89 town budget, up $1.3 million, or 19 percent, from last year, will increase the mill rate from 35.75 mills this year to 44.8 mills in 1988-89.
The position was proposed by the Board of Education and the Athletic Study Committee.
Residents and members of the 24-member Bolton Athletic Study Committee, which spent four months researching the needs and benefits of hiring a recreation director, argued at the hearing that the position was necessary and in many other towns, the recreation director is self-supporting because of fees that come from recreation programs and financial support of those programs by local businesses.
Paul F. Brown Jr., representing the senior citizens, asked that a part-time combination human services coordinator, senior citizens-recreation director position be included in the budget.
"An investment here of $20,000 would bring in $40,000 to $50,000," Brown said.
"It's a person who does a multitude of things and can be self-supporting. If the report was read, people would have seen that," said Linda Fortin, a member of the athletic study committee.
Selectman Carl Preuss said, "The Board of Selectmen was not ignored that report. I'm a little bit perturbed that people assume that the Board of Selectmen have ignored that report."
Selectman Michael Zizka argued that the Board of Selectmen members met with "rubber stamp" recommendations made by advisory and study committees.
"We have a responsibility as the Board of Selectmen to implement policy on a town-wide basis."
First Selectman Sandra Pierog said that three Recreation Commission members met with the selectmen to present sports budgets and recommended to the selectmen that the recreation position wouldn't be necessary now. Study committee members argued that the selectmen acted on the recommendations of three Recreation Commission members instead of the report from 24 people.
"It was the consensus of those individuals, that was probably a 'could do without,'" Pierog said.
"These are the three people who are doing the work (with recreation programs)."
Zizka told members of the athletic study committee the selectmen hoped to implement their recommendations within the next three to four years. He said the recreation director position may be added in two years.
"We will try to implement the recommendations you've made to the best of our ability," Zizka said.
"This is not the year to add it," Pierog said.
"When is the year?" asked Donna Dietz, a member of the athletic study committee. "Each year we're going to have additional expenses."
About 10 tenth graders face expulsion from school next year if they do not have a state-mandated physical completed in two weeks, said Richard Cormier, director of pupil personnel services.
Cormier informed members of the Manchester Board of Education of the possible expulsions during a school board meeting Monday at Manchester High School. He said the board will have the opportunity to vote at its April 25 meeting whether to expel any of the 10 students who have not had a physical by then.
There are usually only two to three students who have not had a physical by this time, Cormier said. He said he hoped the number of students would be reduced to a student or two by the next meeting.
State law mandates that students in kindergarten, grades 6 or 7, and grades 10 or 11 have physicals. Cormier said, Manchester has chosen to mandate physicals for students in kindergarten, sixth and tenth, he said.
About 600 students must have a physical each year, said James F. Kennedy, school superintendent.
The students would be expelled from entering classes at the beginning of the 1988-89 school year, Cormier said. At the board's May 23 meeting, the board would again vote on whether to expel each of the students.

The second expulsion vote, if necessary, would come in executive session, Cormier said. The state's Freedom of Information Act allows governmental bodies to take disciplinary action against students in private meetings.
Parents of the students also would have an opportunity to appear before the board after the second meeting. If so desired, he said, the expulsions would be rescinded if the students have the physical in the meantime, he said.
The school system has never had to expel a student since the law was enacted in 1981, Cormier said.
There are a myriad of reasons why the students do not get the physicals, Cormier said. The school system, though, will make arrangements to help students who cannot afford a physical, he said.

Assessment notices criticized by Naab

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Director Geoffrey Naab criticized on Monday the notices of increased real estate assessments that were mailed out before the decision to scrap the problem-ridden 1987 revaluation. Naab made his criticisms, remarks during a meeting of a subcommittee studying the revaluation, despite an explanation from Assessor J. Richard Vincent, who is on a two-week leave of absence but attended the meeting, has come under fire in the past month for the controversial revaluation, which is the subject of an inquiry by the state Office of Policy and Management.
The notices of increased assessments contained two categories not printed on notices sent out in past years - "other buildings" and "acres." Where assessments for attached garages were included in the total for a house in past assessments, they are listed under "other buildings" on the new form. Any amount of property beyond the size of an average building lot was included under "acres."
The assessor's office was questioned with questions about the new categories, which were not explained in the notices.
Naab, during the meeting in the town manager's office, said, "It (categories) should have been explained in 'people talk' to begin with."
He said that the difference was a greater one than the difference between colloquial and ordinary English.
Director Barbara B. Weinberg also said that the notices created confusion.
Because of the large number of appeals the Board of Tax Review received about the new assessments, the town administration obtained permission last week from the OPM to have the 1987 revaluation Grand List set aside, substituting it with the 1986 Grand List, including new construction.
The subcommittee's next meeting is scheduled April 21.

School mission defined in revised statement

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The Manchester Board of Education unanimously approved a revision in the school system's mission statement at the board's Monday night meeting at Manchester High School.
The revision, which was started as part of an ongoing process of updating board policies, will make the statement clearer than the one adopted in 1973, said Allan Chesterton, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction.
"We wanted the man on the street to understand what we're all about," he said.
The new statement was written by members of the mission statement committee during a March 21 meeting. Chesterton said.

Peace is focus of school seminar

By Anita M. Coldwell
Manchester Herald

Students at East Catholic High School will have an opportunity tomorrow to participate in a program on justice and peace issues during a day-long seminar at the school.
Throughout the day, beginning at 8:30 a.m., more than 30 guest speakers will talk to the students about topics such as Star Wars, homelessness, human rights in the Soviet Union, nuclear threat, world hunger and Central America.
The speakers are involved locally and statewide in organizations that help promote peace and some will share their personal experiences working in other countries as well.
For example, Brother John Blazo and the Rev. Patrick Higgins will lead a workshop on global awareness. Both have worked in Third World countries. Leslie Liddell of the Christian Conference of Connecticut and a South African human rights activist, formerly imprisoned in that country, will speak about apartheid.
Students will also have a chance to participate in discussions on some of the topics.
According to John Carey, chairman of the Social Justice Committee responsible for creating the event, students are looking forward to the event.
"There's a good deal of enthusiasm and interest on their part," Carey said, adding that the program was planned "to increase awareness among our students of the different justice and peace issues."
In 1981, Carey said, the school held a similar event, but the program is more comprehensive and has more speakers.
Among the speakers will be Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr.

Ex-mayor charged in bribe

WATERBURY — Former Mayor Edward D. Bergin Jr. has been charged with accepting a $3,000 bribe three years ago in exchange for awarding a piece of the lucrative municipal towing contract. Bergin, who held the office for 10 years until his defeat by Republican Joseph Santropietro in 1985, surrendered at the state police barracks in Southbury at 4:10 p.m. Monday. He was released on a written promise to appear in Superior Court April 20. Bergin, 44, is accused of accepting a $3,000 payment from Executive Auto Sales in return for one third of the city's towing contract for 1985. Bribe receiving is a Class D felony punishable by a maximum five-year prison term and a $5,000 fine.

Crafts 'unconcerned'

NEW LONDON — Although his wife had been missing for nearly two weeks, Richard B. Crafts scoffed when her close friend suggested he call the police, the friend testified in the Newtown man's murder trial. "He said I'd been watching too many movies," Jette O. Rompe, a friend and co-worker of Helie Crafts at Pan American World Airways, testified Monday. Mrs. Rompe also said Crafts seemed to resent the persistent calls from other co-workers of his wife who begged him to arrange an emergency team with Mrs. Crafts' employer so she would not lose her job. Mrs. Buonanno, a Pan American flight attendant who was with the 39-year-old Mrs. Crafts on her last flight, testified last week that she called Crafts repeatedly in the weeks after his wife vanished.

Millstone 2 shutdown

WATERFORD — Workers repairing leaking valves in the Millstone 2 nuclear reactor discovered another problem, forcing an extension of the plant's shutdown, a Northeast Utilities spokesman said. Millstone 2 was taken out of service Saturday after a small leak of mildly radioactive water was discovered inside the reactor containment building, said Bob Winkler, the NU spokesman. He said Monday that while the leak was being repaired, workers found problems in three of the control rod drive motors, which control the reactor's power level. Those motors will be replaced before the plant is returned to service, probably in a week, Winkler said. He said the two problems were unrelated.

Firefighter rebuffed

WATERBURY — A veteran firefighter, rebuffed by the city Retirement Board in his fight to return to work after mistakenly being diagnosed as having a life-threatening heart condition, vows he will take his case to Superior Court. "The only recourse I have is to go to court," Morton J. Downey said Monday after the city retirement board rejected his request to reinstate him to the fire department, 4-1. Downey, 56, has received $86,882 in a tax-free pension since his forced retirement in 1982 after 29 years in the fire department. Three doctors now say he is healthy enough to return to work. Downey had contended the city should end his pension of $1,335 a month and give him back his job, but neither he nor his attorney, Linda Tabbeman, were given an opportunity to present their side of the case before the vote at the late-afternoon meeting.

Westport teen cleared

BRIDGEPORT — A Superior Court jury has cleared a Westport teen-ager of murder, deciding that he stabbed a 14-year-old Fairfield girl to death in self defense. The 12-member jury deliberated more than four days before finding 17-year-old Anthony M. Risi innocent at 4 p.m. Monday in the fatal stabbing of Samantha Leonard on Feb. 8, 1987. The jury also cleared Risi, a student at Staples High School in Westport, of lesser charges of first-degree manslaughter, second-degree manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide. As jurors left the courtroom, several huggled Risi and one gave him a St. Christopher's medal.

Chicken fire probed

SCOTLAND, Conn. — Authorities are investigating the cause of a fire that killed about 110,000 egg-laying chickens, destroyed one chicken coop and partially damaged another. It took firefighters about two hours early Monday to bring the multi-alarm fire at Tri-Crest Farms under control. A 530-foot-long wooden coop was gutted in the blaze, said Scotland Fire Chief Daniel D. Syme. The blaze spread through passageways and into a second coop, destroying about one-third of the front section of the henhouse, Syme said.

Poet wins fellowship

NEW BRITAIN — An English professor at Central Connecticut State University says a cascade of awards that has fallen on him recently may be a sign that he has escaped the trap of the "suffering artist." Brendan Galvin, 46, of Durham, a poet who has written eight books and hundreds of poems, is among the fellowship winners announced over the weekend by The John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation. Guggenheim award winners receive the equivalent of their annual salary from the Guggenheim Foundation, allowing them concentrate on their area of expertise.

Revenue uncertain as budget vote nears

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Executive and legislative branch officials say they still need to figure out how much tax revenue the state can expect next year before they can balance the proposed $6.3 billion budget for 1988-89. While difficulty has been trying to determine how much money will be raised by the corporations tax, which was due April 1, Gov. J. Stobberg, D-New Haven, and the governor's budget chief, Anthony V. Milano, said Monday that returns on the corporations tax have been weaker than expected. But they said the weaker returns are being offset by higher-than-expected capital gains, dividends and interest tax revenue. Legislative leaders said they had agreed to trim about $21 million from the budget for the year beginning July

1, so that they would not have to take as much as previously planned from the budget reserve fund. This "rainy day" money was originally set aside to pay off future deficits, not current expenses. There was no agreement, however, on where all of the cuts would come from. Some would come from reductions in proposed legislative pay raises. Under a bill approved by the Appropriations Committee Monday, those raises would be 5 percent, rather than 25 percent as originally proposed — a saving of about $500,000. Gov. William A. O'Neill proposed taking $73.5 million from the rainy day fund to help balance the budget. Legislative leaders, sensitive to potential public criticism of raiding the rainy day fund, said there was general agreement to take just $53 million from it. That amount would be used to pay for an extra state employee pay last month. Democratic legislative leaders have been talking about several variations on it, including a plan to exempt part of a home's value from taxation. O'Neill has opposed the homestead proposal, viewing it as another form of what is known as tax classification, allowing towns to tax residential property at a lower rate than commercial property. Another option, which leaders said now would have little chance of passage, is a circuit-breaker plan that would limit residential property tax increases. Stobberg predicted the General Assembly would adopt the governor's tax credit program coupled with some form of homestead exemptions. Stobberg said leaders would try to identify as much as $20 million in the budget in spending that could be eliminated. The decision on the actual cuts, he said, would be left to the governor.

Medicare law still unsettled

HARTFORD (AP) — The acrimonious debate over whether doctors should be required to accept Medicare reimbursement as full payment for treating elderly patients is brewing again — a year after lawmakers hoped they settled the issue by instituting a voluntary program. The Connecticut Medical Society, fearing doctors won't meet the required 85 percent participation level by July 1, is making vague overtures about possible changes in the law, such as an extension of the Medicare program to non-participating doctors. The state's chief medical officer, Rep. Paul Gianfriddo, D-Middletown, co-chairman of the Public Health Committee, said Monday. Lobbyists for the elderly have seized on that and are demanding that if the 1987 law is to be changed at all, the program should be made mandatory — which is anathema to the doctors. United Seniors in Action planned to hold a public hearing on the Capitol today to demonstrate support for that position. "Just hope it doesn't become a heavily polarized issue," Gianfriddo said. "It is almost impossible for me to predict who would win."

CHARITY FUND REPORT — State Attorney General Joseph Lieberman, left, and Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary Heslin issued a report Monday in Hartford stating that only about a quarter of the money raised by professional telephone solicitors hired by Connecticut charities ended up in the charities' coffers.

Report says solicitors give a small portion to charities

By Brent Lovmon
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Even though charities receive only about a quarter of the money collected by professional fund-raisers, a telephone solicitor cited in a state report contending that "getting a good deal" considering the expense and effort involved. The state report, released Monday, showed that of $8.8 million collected in 1987 by 19 telephone-solicitation companies, only about $2.3 million, or 26 percent, went to charity. The figures were based on information telephone solicitors must provide under a 1986 state law. Al Gentile, president of Wallingford-based Sentimental Journey Productions, said many telephone solicitors mount theatrical productions, raising money by selling tickets or advertising to the charity productions over the telephone. Such productions can be quite expensive, he said. "The reason they look to us is they can't get volunteers anymore," said Gentile, who has been in business since 1972. "For doing nothing, they are getting a good deal."

The companies last year conducted 175 fund-raising drives for 136 police, fire and civic organizations such as Kiwanis clubs. The solicitors kept between 62 percent and 92 percent of the money raised. Among charities that do their own fund-raising, the median percentage of money that goes toward charitable purposes, as opposed to administration and other costs, is 74 percent, according to Assistant Attorney David Ormsditt, who heads the charities unit. But under the state's 1986 Professional Solicitors Act, telephone fund-raisers must inform potential donors if they are being paid and what percentage of the donation goes to charity. Solicitors must also file financial statements with the public charities unit — a joint operation of the attorney general's office and the Department of Consumer Protection.

Palestinians deported

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian flashed a victory sign as he and seven others headed into exile after Israel deported them on charges of inciting the four-month Arab uprising or belonging to terrorist groups. In another development, Israeli soldiers on Monday shot and killed two Palestinians during clashes in the occupied West Bank. Eight Arabs were wounded. The deaths brought to 143 the number of Arabs killed since Dec. 8. Israel on Monday issued deportation orders for 12 other Palestinians. Among them were six Arabs from the West Bank village of Beita, where an Israeli settler girl and two Palestinians were killed in a clash last week. Critics on Monday claimed the expulsions were aimed at appeasing Jewish settlers, who were angered by an army report saying the girl, 15-year-old Tirza Porat, was accidentally killed by a bullet from a gun a settler used while guarding a group of Jewish hikers. Settlers say the girl was killed by Arabs.

TO GENEVA — Secretary of State George Shultz fields a question from reporters in the White House briefing room Monday. President Reagan announced he is sending Shultz to Geneva to sign the agreement calling for the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

Speakes faked quotes

WASHINGTON — Former White House spokesman Larry Speakes says he attributed remarks on major foreign policy issues to President Reagan that the president did not make. In one case because the president himself "had almost nothing to say." Speakes, in his new book, describes two occasions on which he attributed remarks to Reagan that he says the president never made. Speakes says that after a Korean Air Lines plane carrying 61 Americans was shot down in 1983, he credited statements made by Secretary of State George Shultz to Reagan.

Wallich wanted by Meese

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Edwin Meese III wanted longtime friend E. Robert Wallich to join the Justice Department last spring, despite the growing Wedtech scandal that eventually led to Wallich's indictment on racketeering charges. "The attorney general knew at the time that Wallich was a witness in the Wedtech case, a lawyer for Meese said Monday. But the attorney, James Rocaup, said Meese did not yet know that his friend was a target of the criminal investigation. Meese discussed hiring Wallich to the $77,500-a-year job of counselor to the attorney general.

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran today claimed its forces advanced into northeast Iraq, killing or wounding more than 2,000 Iraqis and capturing border highlands. Iraq said the assault was repulsed.

Gun banned approved

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The first state law in the nation to ban the sale of cheap handguns known as Saturday Night Specials cleared the General Assembly and was sent to the governor, who has promised a sign. Despite a fierce lobbying effort by the National Rifle Association, the bill was passed Monday night with support from top state officials and Sarah Brady, wife of James Brady, President Reagan's press secretary. Mrs. Brady told legislators at an earlier hearing that a $29 handgun that would be banned under the Maryland law was used by John Hinckley in his 1981 assassination attempt that wounded the president and left husband partially disabled.

Hindsight better than foresight

Town Manager Robert Weiss is certainly not alone in concluding retrospectively that Manchester would have been better served if it had hired an outside consultant to carry out tax revaluation instead of trying to do it in-house.

Everyone in the administration, which recommended in-house revaluation in the first place, and certainly the members of the Board of Directors, who approved it, would agree now.

But as Weiss observed, hindsight is better than foresight. The only reason it is possible to look back now and say the outside consultants would have done a better job is that the town did a bad one.

When the decision was made about five years ago to conduct the revaluation with town employees, town officials were aware that two nearby towns had had bad experiences with consultants. They also knew that Manchester had already been through a relatively successful in-house revaluation a few years earlier.

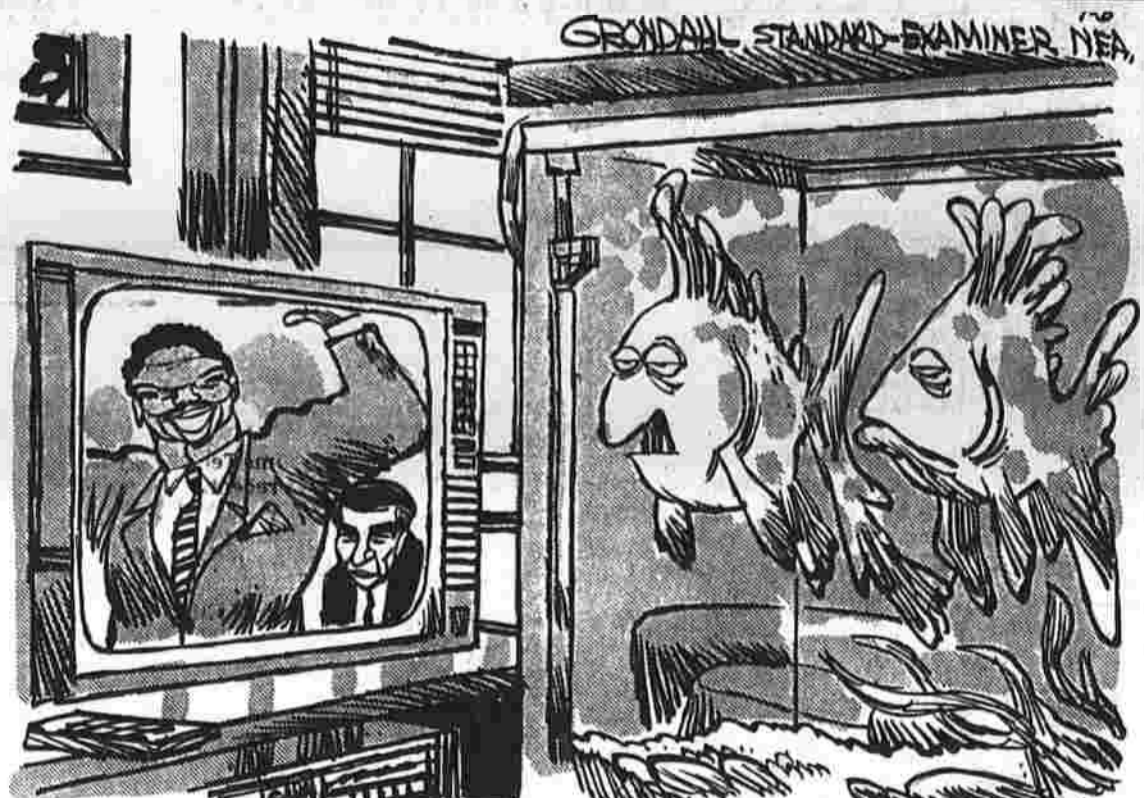

Most assessment officials say that a town as large as Manchester should not try to do a revaluation itself. Maybe they are right. Maybe they are merely overcautious.

It is a good political bet that Manchester will be cautious and will not soon undertake another in-house revaluation.

But the town's recent failure does not constitute an indictment of doing revaluations with town employees, or of using computers to help carry out the revaluations.

The cause of Manchester's failure more likely was that the method used to determine the new assessed values was flawed, or that it was a valid method that was badly implemented.

If state law in the future requires revaluations every five years instead of every 10 years, a move that would lessen property tax burden inequities, the computer-assisted in-house revaluation could become the norm instead of an experiment that went sour once

Front-runner: 'What all candidates want to be, but don't want to be called'

Political definitions timely

By Lawrence L. Knutson

A new book offers some timely definitions in this season of taxes and politics, including the observation that a "front-runner" these days is someone who claims to be the underdog for fear of going the way of his predecessors.

Or, for example, that the art of taxation has been defined as "so plucking the goose as to obtain the largest amount of feathers, with the least amount of hissing."

Front-runner is "what all candidates want to be, but don't want to be called," says the recently published "Dorsey Dictionary of American Politics," a product of Chicago's Dorsey Press.

With 4,000 entries, the book compiled and written by Jay M. Shafritz of the University of Pittsburgh graduate school aims to capture in dictionary form the nuts and bolts of American constitutional government, including the slang and stories of its 199 years of existence. It provides descriptions of government agencies, court decisions, people, places, things and states of mind.

A box charts the rise of the federal budget deficit from $2.8 billion under President Nixon in 1970 to $22.7 billion under President Reagan in 1986.

One entry recalls Thomas Jefferson asking George Washington why the constitutional convention — over which Washington had presided — had created a Senate as well as a House.

"Why do you pour your coffee into your saucer?" Washington is supposed to have asked Jefferson. "To cool it," Jefferson replied.

"Even so," concluded Washington. "We pour legislation into the senatorial saucer to cool it."

Flipping through the pages, one finds that one possible origin of the word Yankee to designate Americans in general and New Englanders in particular is from "a corruption of Jan Kees, an unkind Dutch nickname meaning John Cheese."

"The Dutch, who first settled New York, applied the name to the English who followed," the dictionary says.

Then there is "stand pat."

It is described as a phrase originating in the game of poker that has been extended to mean one who accepts a present situation or stands by an existing policy.

"Nobody in American politics today is in favor of standing pat," the dictionary maintains and adds:

"There is a classic piece of film from the 1960 presidential campaign in which Richard Nixon, then operating out of Exchange Alley.

The dictionary: "A broker who went bankrupt would 'waddle out of the alley' like a lame duck."

The expression has long since crossed the Atlantic and expanded its meaning to any person whose authority is consequently impaired.

Most of the dictionary's topics involve serious subjects. Derogatory words, detraction, denigration and dictators, for example.

Pfizer seeks legislation to avoid liability

WASHINGTON — The Pfizer drug company is lobbying hard on Capitol Hill for two bills that would make it next to impossible for foreigners to win sizable lawsuits against Pfizer or any other company over faulty products.

Pfizer has reason to worry: The company finally withdrew its convex-concave Bjork-Shiley heart valves from the market in late 1986 after the Food and Drug Administration had recalled the valve twice.

An investigation found serious manufacturing problems at the Irvine, Calif., plant where about 80,000 of the valves were produced. About half of those valves were implanted in foreigners. One hundred forty-seven deaths have been traced to broken Bjork-Shiley heart valves, according to a Pfizer report to the FDA in January.

The bills, filed late last year by Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., and Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., would force foreigners to take their product liability suits to federal courts instead of state courts. The legislation would also require federal judges to apply the laws of the foreigners' home lands. Foreign courts, for the most part, are not as generous with awards to the victims of faulty products. Currently, federal judges can choose between U.S. and foreign laws.

Aides for Heflin and Glickman argue that the legislation would make American companies more competitive in the international marketplace. If U.S. companies don't have to pay massive judgments to foreigners who sue in American courts, the lawmakers figure the firms will be able to lower their prices to compete with overseas manufacturers.

Proponents of the bills could not tell our associate Stewart Harris just how much the bills would mean to American companies slugging it out in the trenches of the trade war. On the other hand, the benefits to Pfizer would be enormous.

Pfizer's subsidiary, Shiley, has reported settled heart-valve lawsuits for as much as $1 million. Many of the settlements are being made in California, where the heart valve was made, and where liberal court procedures apply to such cases.

Not all of the 40,000 valves implanted in foreigners are necessarily defective, but it appears that Pfizer could save hundreds of millions of dollars if even a fraction of the foreigners were prevented from winning hefty lawsuits in American courts.

Pfizer's lobbyist did not return calls to his Washington office.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader and his Congress Watch are preparing a lobbying blitz against what they have dubbed the "Pfizer bailout."

We are considering buying a $300 one-year certificate of deposit every month until we have a reason to stop. As each CD matures, we would reinvest the principal, along with another monthly purchase. What do you think of this idea?

ANSWER: It's good and, because it is a very conservative way of putting your extra money to work, it is well suited for people such as you. Retired folks should not take financial risks.

The one flaw in your plan is that you won't build up a large amount of readily accessible cash for quite some time. After one year, you will have $3,600 plus interest in CDs. But at any point in time, you'll be able to get your hands on only $300 of that money without redeeming a CD before maturity and paying early withdrawal penalties.

Nonetheless, your plan should work well and, over time, your CD investments will pyramid. Meanwhile, your money market deposit account will be your emergency fund. So you might consider fattening up that account before making monthly CD purchases. You can always tap the money market account without penalty.

QUESTION: I have a $10,000 certificate of deposit on which I let the interest accumulate, instead of receiving a monthly

Toyotomi ahead of competitors

BROOKFIELD (AP) — The sun is setting on Toyotomi America Inc. and rising on successor Toyotomi USA Inc. as the country's biggest marketer of portable kerosene heaters.

The Brookfield-based concern — having met goals for sales, profits and market share since 1982 — is getting a new name as part of a worldwide internal restructuring within the parent company.

Toyotomi USA — like Toyotomi America before it — is the American heater marketing arm of the Japanese manufacturer Toyotomi Kogyo Co. Ltd., achieving about a 30 percent U.S. market share in 1987. Toyotomi USA Executive Vice President William Strickler said Monday.

"It took longer than I thought, but it's finally settled out. It was a good year overall in 1987," said Strickler.

A "good" year for a kerosene heater company means a "cold" year for most people. Under such conditions Toyotomi sells about 1 million units, which average $120-$130 apiece and range in size from 10,000 to 25,000 BTUs.

In a warm winter sales might dip to 700,000 units, Strickler said. Last year was "a mixed bag," he said. "The East Coast was cold, but the South (big market) had a bad winter, so that contributed to everybody's sell-off."

Inventory was largely depleted during the winter of 1987, he said.

"The market seems to be stabilizing now and if we can maintain our share it will be satisfactory," Strickler said.

In addition, the total market is about 25 percent of the 4 million units when sold for $38 a barrel, and the cost of product liability insurance is now about $1 million a year compared with $250,000 annually several years ago.

He also said the company has an expanding distribution network and listed new customers such as True Value, Ace, American and Cost-Plus hardware stores and Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Retired advised not to take risks

QUESTION: For the first time in our lives, my wife and I find that our income from Social Security, pension, bond investments and mortgage holdings exceeds our lifestyle costs by $300 per month. We also have a small mutual fund investment and an adequate amount in a money market deposit account. We have excellent health insurance and our home is mortgage free.

It occurs to me that building up a highly liquid and stable reserve fund would be useful, since we have no large lump sum immediately available for emergencies.

We are considering buying a $300 one-year certificate of deposit every month until we have a reason to stop. As each CD matures, we would reinvest the principal, along with another monthly purchase. What do you think of this idea?

ANSWER: It's good and, because it is a very conservative way of putting your extra money to work, it is well suited for people such as you. Retired folks should not take financial risks.

The one flaw in your plan is that you won't build up a large amount of readily accessible cash for quite some time. After one year, you will have $3,600 plus interest in CDs. QUESTION: I have a $10,000 certificate of deposit on which I let the interest accumulate, instead of receiving a monthly

ANSWER: It's not in most cases. Taking monthly interest checks from CDs is the thing to do, only for people who need the money to meet living expenses.

In a recent column you advised a lady with two large CDs to instruct the banks to send her interest checks monthly. Why is that better than letting the interest accumulate?

For you and many other people, it is wise to leave interest in CDs to build up. Assuming the interest compounds, your interest earns more interest and you get an annual effective rate higher than your CD's stated interest rate.

The more frequent the compounding, the higher the stated interest rate.

Since you obviously have no immediate need for your CD interest, leave it in to earn more for you.
