Steve Landesberg, perhaps best known as Sgt. Arthur Dietrich of the TV show "Barney Miller," brought his dry sense of humor to Manchester Community College Thursday. Recently voted the campus comedy star by the National Association for Campus Activities, Landesberg treated an audience of 700 people to more than an hour of stand-up comedy.

It was when Danny Arnold, executive producer and major writer of Barney Miller saw him on the "Paul Sand Show," that his career began to take off.

Mobile home park stirs neighbors' ire

DEAR BRUCE: The owner of a piece of property about two miles from us is trying to open a mobile home park. All of the neighbors are opposed to it, and there have been petitions and a lot of talk, but little action. The application has been put off for a couple of months, so we have time to formulate our attack. If you were faced with this type of problem, how would you proceed?

Smart Money

Bruce Williams

DEAR READER: There are many ways to do this. You can hire a lawyer to file a lawsuit or you can go to town meeting and speak out. If you are on the fence, you should hire a lawyer to represent you. You can also hire a lawyer to negotiate with the developer. You can also hire a lawyer to file a lawsuit.

DEAR READER: If the property is zoned for mobile-home-park use and the applicant meets the zoning rules, there's very little that you can do about this project. Should he need to obtain a variance from zoning laws, however, you can fight your battle.

You might form a collective pot and hire an attorney to represent you and the other neighbors when this matter comes before the board of adjustment. You can be certain that the applicant will be so represented, and if you go in there individually, your strength will be severely diluted. You also may want to hire experts if it can be shown that the project will add an undue burden on the road system, utility system, etc. Your opponent probably will do the same. One thing to bear in mind is that most of us who are opposed to a particular project in our area tend to be emotional about it and, while understandable, your emotion can work against you in a hearing. This is why I urge you to hire an attorney.

NO NAME, NO TOWN

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

Illness could cause sleepiness

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband is very sleepy. He gets plenty of sleep, but gets drowsy the minute he sits down. Is this due to the prednisone he takes, or something else?

DEAR READER: Prednisone, a form of corticosteroid, does not usually cause drowsiness. I'd be more concerned about your husband's sleepiness due to the underlying disease for which he is taking prednisone. For example, prednisone is sometimes used to treat asthma. If the asthma is not brought under control with the medicine, it — rather than the drug — can make a patient sleepy because of an inadequate supply of oxygen to the lungs.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What can you tell me about oligohydramnios? I lost a baby at 27 weeks because of a lack of amniotic fluid. My doctor admits she's not that familiar with the condition.

DEAR READER: Oligo (sparse) hydramnios means a lack of amniotic fluid, the liquid in which the baby grows before birth. This fluid protects the unborn child and usually totals about 1500 cc at birth. Oligohydramnios is defined as less than 300 cc of amniotic fluid. This condition is associated with stillbirth or difficult delivery.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there anything to make chloasma go away?

DEAR READER: Chloasma are brown patches on the face, seen primarily during pregnancy and in women taking birth-control pills. These harmless blemishes are accentuated by exposure to sunlight. They tend to fade after pregnancy or when birth-control drugs are discontinued. Treatment can be difficult and prolonged: 2 percent hydroquinone in an alcohol glycol base applied twice a day (with a No. 15 sunscreen, when needed) for several weeks or months.

Executor makes tax choices on estates

It's amazing how a soap opera can spin out of a poorly executed will. Mistakes and oversights in estate planning can cause anguish for those who beneficiaries of the will was intended to protect. And yet reluctance to dwell on the topic of death often prevent individuals from making sound judgments and planning prudently. Wills, as a result, tend to get short shrift. Some families can be suddenly faced with complex decisions, particularly when a family member's death. Appointed executors, often friends and associates, are often presented with a major job they are unprepared to handle. Careful planning, however, can ease the burden.

The executor is the person designated in the will to handle assets, taxes, debt payments and any other necessary functions in settling the decedent's will. This is by no means an honorary role, but instead a responsible, often complicated position. For a simple estate, it is typical to select a spouse, close friend or relative as executor. In any case, it must be a person who is capable and willing to manage the task. If the estate is more complex, you will need a professional. Selecting an experienced executor can be the most valuable planning step of all. In recent years, there have been substantial tax changes. Since 1981, fewer and fewer estates have been subject to federal estate taxes; now in 1988, estates worth less than $600,000 are exempt. The rate has also changed, from the hefty top rate of 70 percent in 1981, to a maximum of 55 percent through 1992, and 50 percent in 1993 and thereafter. Of course, estate inheritance and estate taxes still apply. Changes in federal income tax laws have had an impact on estates. Certain types of trusts and property transfers have had their income tax benefits removed, as has a wide range of shelters available to beneficiaries.

DEAR BRUCE: I recently inherited a diamond ring that belonged to my mother. My dad told me during his lifetime that the ring was worth about $60,000. While there is a certain amount of sentimental value here, my growing family could use the money. What is the best way to dispose of this ring to ensure that we receive as much money as possible?

R.N. PORTLAND, OR.

DEAR R.N.: I'm not sure there is "best way," but there are several ways for you to consider. The first thing to do is to get an accurate appraisal of the ring and determine its value in today's marketplace. Be certain that the appraiser understands the reasons for the appraisal (i.e., resale), and be sure you know whether you are receiving a wholesale or retail appraisal. Wholesale will generally be slightly less than half of the retail price. If you choose to wholesale it, you may take your ring to any number of jewelry buyers in your area, offer it for sale, and find out what they will pay for it. Don't let them know the price you want. It's up to them, not you, to provide the price because they are the experts in this transaction. If you choose to sell it retail, you can advertise the ring in local publications and meet potential buyers on neutral turf — in a bank or some other fairly secure environment — as opposed to in your home. A third possibility is to broker your jewelry. This means leaving the jewelry in the care of a retailer, who will attempt to sell it for you and take a commission, usually amounting to 10 or 15 percent of the sale price. If there is no sale, there is no commission due. Over the long haul, the latter option could net you the most money with the least inconvenience. If you must sell the ring instantly for cash, you'll probably have to sell wholesale, and that will give you the least return.

Bruce Williams, America's top radio talk host, is heard each week night on NBC stations. His column appears every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Write to Williams in care of the Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 391, Manchester 06040. Letters of general interest will be answered in the column.

Tour: 'The Ultimate Event'

LOS ANGELES—The "Rat Pack" tour has become "The Ultimate Event," as Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr. joined forces with Lisa Minnelli for an 18-concert, 12-city U.S. tour. Sinatra and Davis had begun a recent singing tour with rat-pack buddy Dean Martin, but Martin had to drop out after six concerts when an old kidney problem flared up.

"We miss Dean and we love him — he's like a brother to me and Sam," Sinatra said Thursday. "Lisa is the greatest female performer of our time. She is a great lady and it is always a privilege to share a stage with her."

The tour, dubbed "The Ultimate Event," will debut at Houston's Summit Arena on Sept. 17 and end at the Chicago Theater on Oct. 18, said Susan Reynolds, vice president of entertainment, marketing and publicity for Burson-Marsteller.

Princess DI loves to shop

ST. ALBANS, England—Being a princess is not all it's cracked up to be, says Princess Diana, who added that she enjoys an occasional shopping trip to a supermarket, local workers reported. Diana, the wife of Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, was in this city 19 miles outside London to open a big new shopping mall Thursday and told workers she enjoys buying tea-time treats for her young sons, Harry and William.

"I spoke to her about it not being an easy life. She said it was not all that it's made out to be," said pet shop manager Judy Straton. But, "She said she'd rather not say anything about that."

Snyder hides in hotel

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—Jimmy Snyder, fired as a CBS sports commentator earlier this year, says he's been "hiding" in a posh hotel since then. To add to his troubles, he's stuck in the hospital for chest pains. Snyder, dismissed from "NFL Today" in January because of his controversial remarks about black athletes, said he woke up in his hotel room here Wednesday with chest pains. "I don't take any chances, the sooner they can do something for you the better," he said from his hospital bed. "They (doctors) are just looking to see what they find."

Talk-show host cleared

SECAUCUS, N.J.—Morton Downey Jr., the ultra-conservative talk-show host known for his confrontational style with guests, has been cleared of charges that he assaulted a gay rights activist during a program. Judge Emil DeBraglio found Downey innocent of assaulting Andrew Hamm, a 34-year-old spokesman for the Coalition for Lesbian and Gay Rights. DeBraglio watched a videotape of the show and listened to testimony during a 4 1/2-hour trial Wednesday before issuing his decision.

Don't be afraid to get lucky

By James Jacoby

I hope Willy Nilly has better luck with his tax return than he did with the heart slam, which came up in a regional tournament in Portland in February. The slam is certainly no bargain, since any three-card heart holding with West gives the defenders two tricks. Still, when you get to an ambitious contract, you have to give yourself a chance to make it. As usual, Willy Nilly knew to both it.

Willy won the ace of clubs, played to his spade ace and ruffed a spade, played a heart back to his ace and ruffed another spade. Now he was ready to play a second heart, but first he had to get to his hand. So he played the king of clubs. East ruffed with the queen, and the slam was set.

At another table, Careful Charlie could tell that with this hand, it was right to throw caution to the winds. If hearts split badly, he was down, and it wasn't going to matter if he ruffed his spade losers first. So he won the ace of clubs and immediately played ace and a heart. Making six.

Is there a lesson? You bet. If you're in a contract that needs a good break, play for it. Don't dawdle around looking for a break. You were afraid to get lucky.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Downtown 'storefront' suggested

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

State and local agencies have joined the town Board of Directors in pressuring the U.S. Postal Service to keep a centrally located "storefront" post office open for downtown-area residents and merchants after the proposed Sheldon Road office is built.

The state Office of Policy and Management, which is the inter-governmental review agency for the post office project, the town Planning Department, the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Merchants Association have written letters supporting a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors April 4 to maintain a centrally located office.

"Everybody is of the opinion that we ought to keep that (a central office) there," Planning Director Mark Pellegrini said Friday.

In an April 14 letter to postal service officials, Pellegrini said the Postal Service's plans not to maintain a central office would be a "poor decision" and would "create problems for its customers," including residents and downtown-area businesses.

Pellegrini said he met with Charles Vidich and Charles Pierce of the U.S. Postal Service and officials of the state Office of Policy and Management on March 31 to discuss an environmental assessment of the project. Officials also talked about opening a downtown "finance office," which would sell stamps, allow customers to send and pick up packages and get registered mail, among other things.

In his letter, Pellegrini suggested opening the finance office in the current main office, which he said the town has always SENTENCED — Robert Chambers, right, appears in a New York court Friday for sentencing in the strangulation of Jennifer Levin. Chambers was sent to jail for five to 15 years for the Central Park slaying.

Chambers apologizes for 'preppie murder'

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Chambers apologized for the first time Friday for the "preppie murder" case death of 18-year-old Jennifer Levin as he was formally sentenced to five to 15 years in jail for manslaughter. "The Levin family have gone through hell because of my actions, and I'm sorry," Chambers said. "Whoever said time heals all wounds is definitely wrong, because how can these wounds heal?"

Despite his statement of remorse, the 21-year-old Chambers repeatedly shook his head as if to say "no" to his plea and sentencing, and Miss Levin's uncle said afterward the apology carried little weight.

Chambers stood silently while state Supreme Court Justice Howard E. Bell handed down the sentence, which was agreed to by lawyers for both sides when Chambers entered the guilty plea to a reduced charge of manslaughter March 25.

The plea came after the jurors in the highly publicized case reported they were deadlocked on the murder charge in their ninth day of deliberations. Chambers began his sentence the day after the plea was entered.

Ex-chief charged in 1978 killing

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The former police chief of Marlow was charged Friday with second-degree murder, a month after authorities dug up the remains of his wife's first husband in his yard after his father made a deathbed confession.

Robert Chambers, 36, appeared relaxed but said nothing as he surrendered at the state police station in Keene and sat

Miss Levin's partially nude body was found in Central Park early in the morning of Aug. 26, 1986, a few hours after they had left a fashionable East Side bar together. Chambers had claimed that the death occurred by accident when Miss Levin hurt him during "rough sex." By pleading guilty to manslaughter, Chambers admitted he intended to hurt Miss Levin.

Miss Levin's father, Steven, who had also asked to address the court, was not allowed to. But he later released a statement, saying that Chambers' "outrageous lie" had defamed "the memory of our lovely child."

Chambers sighed deeply before starting his remarks. He apologized to his family and friends, as well as Miss Levin's, and thanked more than 150 supporters for letters he said he has received since being jailed on his guilty plea.

"Jennifer's looking down on us now at this circus arena, looking and wondering why it all happened and I don't know," Chambers said. "I never wished any of this to happen. ... I wish to apologize to the family and to her friends for all the trouble they have gone through."

through two court appearances in the 1978 killing of Russell Bean, a close friend. Unable to post the $200,000 bail, he was taken to the Cheshire County Jail.

Chambers was not handcuffed during his arraignment in Keene District Court and bail hearing in superior court. He entered no plea, but his attorney, Mark Sisti, said his client will plead innocent to the charge, which he called a

Man held in slayings of 4 teens

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 20-year-old man was arrested Friday in the slayings of a boy and his three teen-age sisters found mutilated in their home and stabbed so hard with steak knives that the blades broke, police said. The suspect was taken into custody after being treated at a hospital for a stab wound to his thigh and a cut on the hand, said police spokeswoman Sandy Perez. Ms. Perez said he will be charged with four counts of capital murder.

The man was not immediately identified. Police earlier said they were seeking to question the girls' boyfriends.

"We figure he either surprised them in their sleep or there's a possibility that more than one person was involved, which would have kept them from running out or anything like that. We can't tell for sure," said homicide Lt. Albert Ortiz.

Ortiz said a girl called the 911 emergency number about 3:27 a.m. and said "one of my sister's boyfriends is beating us up and has killed my sister."

Police were able to trace the call and found the bodies at 3:55 a.m., Ortiz said. Police said at least five steak knives were used in the slayings and that more could have been carried off from the five-bedroom mobile home.

"It's unbelievable. All of them were savagely stabbed. There are knives broken off in their necks," said Sgt. George Wilson, a 28-year member of the department. "It's a slaughterhouse."

Ortiz said police wanted to question the three girls' current or former boyfriends, especially one who was named in two complaints filed by their father.

Ortiz identified the victims as Jennifer Mann, 19; Shannon Mann, 17; Martha Mann, 14; and Ernest Mann, 13.

Mary Mireles, who lives across from the trailer park, said there have been numerous robberies there and that she heard a commotion early Friday, and thought she heard gunshots.

"I heard a lot of screams," Mrs. Mireles said. "They were screaming, 'Help' and they were crying and screaming and I told my husband and he said, 'No, let's not get involved.'"

Updated '86 Grand List rises 6.7 percent

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

The updated 1986 Grand List completed by the town assessor's office Friday afternoon totals $803,811,319, an increase of 6.7 percent over the 1986 Grand List used to calculate tax bills last year.

For the tax bills that come due this July, the town will use the updated 1986 Grand List instead of the 1987 revaluation Grand List. The town administration got permission from the state to scrap the 1987 revaluation Grand List last month because of the number of appeals made of the increased assessments.

No figure was available on what tax rate would be needed to support the town manager's proposed $64 million General Fund budget. The tax rate last year for the adopted $56 million General Fund budget was 48.59 mills.

Assessor J. Richard Vincent, who began a two-week vacation April 8, appeared at the Municipal Building Friday afternoon especially to sign the Grand List. Vincent has been criticized by the town Board of Directors and some members of the public for problems related to the revaluation.

Friday was the self-imposed deadline of the assessor's office to complete the update.

The $803 million total for the updated 1986 Grand List does not take into account any decreases in assessments that may be agreed upon by the Board of Tax Review.

The Board of Tax Review will hear appeals of increased assessments April 26 through 28.

The updated 1986 list includes the same totals for personal property and motor vehicles as the 1987 revaluation Grand List. Values for real property on the updated list, however, are taken from the 1986 Grand List and increased only for those properties on which there have been additions or modifications.

The value of real estate property increased by 3.8 percent in the updated list over the regular 1986 Grand List, from $566,096,962 to $587,375,342. Motor vehicle assessments increased by 19 percent, from $96,936,974 to $115,436,662. Personal property increased by 12 percent, from $89,793,202 to $100,999,315.

The 1987 revaluation Grand List that was scrapped totaled $889,447,000, an increase of 31.2 percent over that of all classes of property on the regular 1986 Grand List.

The value of real estate on the 1987 Grand List increased 36.5 percent over the regular 1986 Grand List, to $773,011,000. Most of that increase was due to the revaluation.

Many had a taxing day racing those deadlines

By Anita M. Caldwell
Manchester Herald

The rush to meet the Friday midnight deadline to file federal and state tax returns produced a "zoo" at the local H & R Block office.

And some last-day tax filers found their rush complicated by the 1-to-2 p.m. daily closing of the post office caused by federal budget cuts.

"I think it's outrageous," one Manchester woman said at the Broad Street post office. "Postal workers are working a six-hour day."

"After rushing around all day, I can't even get in there," said a woman from Andover also waiting in line.

But for others, the delay to mail was a waiting game.

"I like doing this," said Bill Stanley of New State Road. "This is how I did my term papers, too," he said with a chuckle at the Broad Street office.

Stanley, a sales representative for Bloom's Business Systems in East Hartford, said he just kept putting off preparing his tax return. When he finally did it, he discovered he's only getting $18 back.

Alison Caxide, of Briarwood Drive, had another reason for procrastinating.

"I want to keep my money as long as I can," said Caxide, a data analyst at the Travelers Insurance Cos. in Hartford. Besides, she added jokingly, "it's all my husband's fault. He didn't have time."

For others, waiting until the last minute was beneficial.

"I'm in the process of trying to buy a house," said Mark Frizzell of Love Lane. "I submit estimated taxes and held off as long as possible to see what I could save. It paid off. I saved $6,000."

But Frizzell, who is an educational consultant in the area, still has doubts about being able to buy a house.

"The interest rates just went up. I'm still not sure if I could afford a house," he said. Meanwhile, the H & R Block office on Broad Street was hopping.

Elaine Brown, office manager, said Friday was "a zoo." Most of the customers were filing extensions. Others were just trying to find forms, she said.

Brown said that the banks and post offices may not have been issued enough tax booklets and forms because so many people stopped in at the last minute.

Submitting tax returns late is not uncommon, according to Brown.

"You don't do things you don't like to do, especially if you're going to owe," she said. Others resent the fact that they have to pay the government in each paycheck and then at the end of the year also file a return, she said.

Though April 1 begins the crunch and "panic," Brown said February is the busiest month. "The first two weeks are absolutely unreal," she said.

But this year was even more of a headache for many people because of the new tax laws and forms.

Even the tax experts were burdened with the complexities of tax simplification.

H & R Block Brown said in an embarrassed whisper, also had to issue corrections for their employees.

OPM, business groups press for post office expressed an interest in buying. If the town were to buy the current main office, he said, it would "alleviate concerns over possible damage" to a historical building. Pellegrini also said a long-term lease on a location in the central business district may be available at reasonable rents.

The OPM supported the idea of a finance office and postal officials said they would investigate the possibility. Pellegrini said.

In his letter, Pellegrini listed several factors that "militate" against the Postal Service's plans not to operate a downtown office.

For example, he said the current post office provides services to government offices and the Central Business District, which requires a range of counter services.

Also, the current office is also located within walking distance of 16,000 residents within a 1-mile radius. The Sheldon Road area is not as well-suited for pedestrians, Pellegrini said.

Pellegrini also disagreed with the Postal Service's claims that the new office, located 1.9 miles from the main office, would be almost as convenient as the main office. North-south travel is "notoriously difficult" in town because the limited number of direct routes already carry high volumes of traffic, he said. Forcing one or two trips daily on Main, Oakland and North Main streets for 440 businesses could further aggravate traffic, he added.

Bernard Apter, president of the Downtown Merchants Association, and Steven H. Thornton, chairman of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce, also submitted letters opposing the Postal Service's plans. Thornton said in a letter to Pellegrini that chamber members are "most concerned" about the plans to abandon a central office and possibly the Broad Street station.

The recent reduction in hours at the post office will make it especially difficult to serve the downtown and Broad Street areas, Thornton said.

The reduction in hours was caused by the same federal budget cuts that have delayed construction of the $5 million Sheldon Road facility and proposed new post offices nationwide.

Coventry questioning value of the state's Mastery Tests

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Members of the Board of Education and school administrators questioned the validity of the Connecticut Mastery Tests Thursday night despite their agreement that the town did well on those tests.

"We can't get too myopic, using just one test in one state to determine how well our kids are doing, how well we are preparing them. If we do, we may be preparing them for the needs of the dominate businesses and industries in the state and maybe not for overall needs," said Dennis Joy, principal at Coventry High School, during the meeting at Coventry High School.

Joy's remark was one of several critical of the Connecticut Mastery Tests and standardized exams in general.

Among those present at the meeting were all members of the Board of Education except Patricia Soltys. Also present were Superintendent of Schools Nathan Chesler, all principals from the town's four schools, and John MacLean, director of pupil and staff services.

The tests were given to students in grades 4, 6 and 8 last fall.

Board vice chairwoman Judy Halvorson took aim at math scores that show an escalating weakness among students, especially fourth-graders in the areas of decimals and fractions. Forty percent more from all grades tested in town scored lower, in 1987 than in 1986, a trend mirrored statewide.

"Some of the material on those tests is not even taught in most third grades in Connecticut. If it's not taught, not addressed in the curriculum, how meaningful are the results?" said Halvorson, an elementary teacher in Chaplin.

A similar downward trend appears in the area of degrees of reading power. Town students are especially weak in evaluative and inferential reading, but doing well on the literal level.

Ed Mahoney, principal at Capt. Nathan Hale Middle School said Friday that "we're not sure if it is the design of the test or the curriculum." "If scores continue to drop next year, he said, the board will likely change the curriculum.

At the meeting, however, some warned against building a curriculum to suit the test, saying the test may be flawed.

Mark Wollman, assistant principal at CNH and Coventry High School, attacked the criteria for development of such exams.

"The standard may have been developed on unrealistic expectations, based on ideal desires without sufficient knowledge of those subjects," said Wollman. Having been involved in the development of standardized tests himself, Wollman said he has seen it happen.

However MacLean, who presented the results of the Mastery Tests to the board, said one purpose of the exams is to influence curriculum.

"This type of instrument is meant to drive curriculum decisions," MacLean said.

Holistic writing is an area of overall strength among students, including written development, detail and organization.

MacLean stressed the exams should be used as a diagnostic tool, "a place to begin not end," he said.

Identifying problem areas provides the groundwork for implementation of a remedial program, said MacLean.

Latin America exports

Exports among the member countries of the Latin American Integration Association rose by 7.2 percent in 1986 over 1985, from $7.05 billion to $7.55 billion, says the Inter-American Development Bank. The pick-up reversed a downward trend in intra-regional trade, evident since the banner year of 1981 when such exports had risen to $11.7 billion.

State asks Kaman about report

HARTFORD — State officials will meet with Kaman Aerospace Corp. representatives Monday to discuss allegations that the company discharged polluted water into a Bloomfield aquifer and dumped cans containing poisonous chemicals at a landfill.

Kaman has denied the allegations raised in a report published Sunday by The Hartford Courant.

The state Department of Environmental Protection asked for the meeting. The DEP said Thursday it would attempt "to clarify the situation and correct any existing or potential problems."

The DEP said it also would ask the Courant for information it collected in its story about Kaman.

Courthouse expansion planned

HARTFORD — A congressional subcommittee has been asked to approve a $12.7 million expenditure to expand the federal courthouses in Bridgeport and Hartford.

U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson, D-Conn., Thursday told the House Subcommittee on Treasury, Postal Service and General Government meeting in Washington, D.C., that the courthouses in Bridgeport and Hartford are among the busiest in the nation.

The General Services Administration has asked for $7.7 million to expand the Hartford courthouse and $5 million for the Bridgeport building.

24 hurt as school buses crash

MIDDLETOWN — Two school buses collided Friday setting off an accident that sent 24 people to area hospitals including 22 students, police said. A school bus carrying students from Wilson Junior High School rammed into the back of another one from the same school that had slowed to allow a car to make a turn around 3 p.m. Friday, Lt. George K. Lang said.

None of the injuries appeared serious, and the 24 people were taken to area hospitals for treatment, Lang said.

The impact forced the first bus into a pickup truck, which struck a car that had stopped to make a left turn, Lang said.

No charges had been filed against the driver of the second bus, Jody B. Hickman, 23, of Middletown, pending the results of an investigation, Lang said.

Millstone shutdown continues

WATERFORD — The shutdown of the Millstone 3 nuclear power plant will continue for at least a week as workers repair a water leak, a Northeast Utilities spokesman said.

"We found a valve leaking and to repair the valve we must bring it to a cold shutdown," NU spokesman Anthony Castagno said.

Castagno said work will begin Saturday afternoon to repair the leak which was discovered in a valve near a pipe leading to the plant's reactor. He said work is expected to be complete within three to four days.

A leaky valve discovered Thursday was fixed, but plant workers discovered that it wasn't the only source of the water leak.

FBI agent held in shoplifting

GUILFORD — An FBI agent who allegedly switched price tags on a calculator to save himself $50 has been charged with shoplifting, police said.

Edmond P. Gavin, 36, of Madison, an FBI agent based in New Rochelle, N.Y., is scheduled to appear Monday at Superior Court in West Haven on a charge of sixth-degree larceny, according to police.

Gavin, a former Madison police officer, was allegedly spotted changing price tags on a calculator at a Bradlees department store here April 6, police said.

Gavin was detained by the security officer after purchasing the calculator for $50 less than its actual price, police said. He identified himself as a FBI agent and then asked the security guard not to press charges, police said.

BUDGET PUSH — Rep. Janet Polinski, D-Waterford, co-chairwoman of the Appropriations Committee speaks Friday in an effort to push the Democrats' $6.29 billion budget for 1988-89. Republicans objected, but a 99-48 vote sent the spending plan to the Senate.

Federal indictments expected soon in New England mob investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The entire leadership of the New England branch of La Cosa Nostra is under grand jury investigation and subject to indictments in the "relatively near future," a top FBI official said Friday.

James F. Ahearn, the FBI agent in charge of the Boston regional office, said after testifying before a Senate subcommittee that the federal probe includes Raymond J. "Junior" Patriarca, the reputed head of the New England mob, and his 10 top lieutenants in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Ahearn declined further comment on the investigation or who may be indicted.

An FBI report submitted to the Senate Governmental Affairs investigations subcommittee backed up Ahearn's contentions. It said, in part, "The new leadership is subject to indictment in the near future."

99-48 vote sends budget to Senate

HARTFORD (AP) — Democrats pushed their $6.29 billion state budget for 1988-89 through the House of Representatives Friday over the objections of Republicans who said it was balanced by gimmicks that would require huge tax increases next year.

The budget, which now goes to the Senate, was approved on a 99-48 vote after 8 1/2 hours of debate. One Democrat voted against it, while 12 Republicans voted for it.

Republicans predicted the budget would cost Democrats at the polls in this legislative election year. Democrats said they were happy to run on the budget.

To make income match spending, the Democrats took $73.8 million from the budget reserve, or "rainy day" fund, which was only supposed to be used to pay off future deficits.

They also depleted a $70 million property tax relief fund set up less than a year ago that was supposed to provide local relief in the coming years. Just $18 million of the fund will be used for property tax relief. Another $32 million goes into next year's budget and the other $20 million is being set aside to avoid a deficit in this year's budget.

The Democrats, who control the House 91-60, said they had little choice, especially with predictions of a downturn in the economy in the coming year.

"Our high-flying economy is beginning to recede," said Rep. Janet Polinski, D-Waterford, co-chairwoman of the budget-writing Appropriations Committee. "We knew it couldn't go on forever."

"Yet, our responsibilities to the needs of so many does not diminish with the currents of the economic forecasts. Good year or bad, this all takes money, lots of money."

Deputy Minority Leader R.E. Van Norstrand, R-Darien, called the budget "garbage."

"It doesn't work, it doesn't balance, it's a fraud," Van Norstrand said. "If you vote for it, you ought to be indicted."

House Minority Leader Robert G. Jaekle, R-Stratford, said the problem with the budget was simple: "We're just plain spending more money than we're going to bring in next year."

A year from now, said Rep. Craig P. Taylor, R-Bristol, "we will have no other alternative than a tax increase."

Republicans offered several amendments, aimed at limiting the growth in spending and eliminating the so-called gimmicks employed to balance the budget.

Democrats, who control the House 91-60, said the budget was as lean as possible. It calls for a 12 percent increase in spending over the current year.

Polinsky noted that her committee had trimmed the package by $35 million, compared with the budget submitted by Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill. Some of the reductions were achieved by delaying the start of programs. And there were scores of positions eliminated from the governor's budget.

The budget contains money for about 1,100 new state employees, Polinsky said.

Woman surrenders after siege in office

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — A distraught constituent carrying a shotgun burst into U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson's district office Friday and held a pregnant staff aide hostage for about 90 minutes before surrendering, police said.

The Republican congresswoman was not in the office during the episode and none of the four female staffers present when the siege began about 9:30 a.m. was injured, police said. The 16-gauge pump shotgun wasn't loaded, police said.

Donna Mullen, the office manager, walked out soon after the gunman arrived, telling her she was going to get Johnson. Mullen then summoned police. Two others scrambled out a window 15 minutes later while the gunman talked through a closed door to a police negotiator in the hallway.

The pregnant staff member, Nancy Andrews, 24, of Unionville, locked herself in an inner office midway through the incident, police said.

Johnson talked to the gunman over the telephone and convinced her to surrender by promising to meet with her about her complaint that she had been hypnotized against her will, said Thomas McLaughlin, Johnson's district director.

The gunman was identified as Elizabeth Hill, 39, of Burlington, a rural town in the southwest corner of Johnson's 6th District.

"She came through the door ... and said to my staff people, 'I'm not going to use it, you don't have to be afraid. But I want to see the congresswoman. You won't make an appointment, you won't let me see her, so I'm going to see her,'" Johnson said.

Johnson, who went to police headquarters after being reached while traveling in the district, said that during their telephone conversation, Hill rambled incoherently about having written to her two years ago about her complaints without getting any satisfaction.

"There's a whole picture in her mind about how she has been used and abused," Johnson said. "She thinks she must have some rights and I'm the government and ... she wants me to do something to protect her against being hypnotized against her will."

Johnson told Hill they could meet face-to-face, but only after she relinquished her weapon. Johnson then donned a bullet-proof vest and went to the converted factory building that houses her district office. By the time she arrived, Hill had surrendered to police.

"I just wanted to talk to the congresswoman," Hill told reporters as she was escorted from the building to a waiting patrol car.

Hill was admitted to the New Britain General Hospital for psychiatric evaluation, Lt. James Ahern, a police spokesman, said. She faces charges of threatening and unlawful restraint upon her hospital release, he said.

"I'm going to meet with her face to face because I told her I would," Johnson said. "I'm anxious she get to some appropriate help."

Speakes quits Merrill Lynch

NEW YORK — Former White House spokesman Larry Speakes quit as chief spokesman for Merrill Lynch & Co. on Friday, days after he created an uproar by admitting he twice concocted quotes for President Reagan.

Speakes said in a statement that his resignation was "the best course of action for Merrill Lynch and for me personally. Merrill Lynch is a great firm and the industry leader, and I've enjoyed being part of it."

The announcement reflected intense pressure on Speakes to resign as head of communications at the Wall Street investment giant because of his disclosures in a book about his tenure as White House spokesman. He said in the book that he had attributed to Reagan comments the president never made.

Mob, Teamsters link claimed

WASHINGTON — The former underboss of the Cleveland mob testified Friday that organized crime played a large role in Teamsters union affairs, including the elections of former president Roy L. Williams and current president Jackie Presser.

Angelo Lonardo, 77, told senators he was part of a 1981 effort to line up organized crime support for Williams' successful candidacy.

And when it became clear that an indictment against Williams would force him to step down, Lonardo said he traveled to Chicago to obtain organized crime's backing of Cleveland native Presser.

Presser, who currently is under indictment, was the "protege" of a man affiliated with the Cleveland mob, and it was felt his election "would increase the Cleveland family's prestige and respect," Lonardo said.

Settlers walk near Arab town

JERUSALEM — Dozens of Israeli settlers, guarded by as many soldiers, marched Friday near the Arab town where 15-year-old settler Tirza Porat and two Palestinians were killed in an exchange of gunfire and rocks last week.

Their purpose was to demonstrate that Jews could walk freely in the occupied West Bank. Army radio said they objected to the large army guard for the mass re-enactment of the hike by Miss Porat and a group of friends.

Israeli troops wounded two Palestinians in scattered violence Friday after midday prayers on the Moslem sabbath, hospital officials reported. The army deployed hundreds of soldiers and surrounded major mosques to keep order in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Fetus research called off

WASHINGTON — A decision to temporarily bar federal researchers from implanting brain tissue from aborted fetuses into patients with Parkinson's disease focused renewed attention Friday on ethical questions involving the emerging technique.

The first reported use of the experimental procedure was in January when surgeons in Mexico City said they had injected tissue from a miscarried fetus into the brains of two Parkinson's sufferers. The researchers said the results were promising.

Researchers in Sweden also have reported using a similar technique, but there have been no documented instances of it being done on humans in the United States.

Philly gangs starts retreat

PHILADELPHIA — Eighty young people boarded buses Friday to escape — at least for the 10 days of their mountain retreat — the turfs of the gangs that bring violence and drugs to their urban neighborhoods.

"The thing I want to get out of this is to better my life," 15-year-old Michael Williams said as he waited to board one of the three buses going to the Pocono Mountains in northeastern Pennsylvania.

Nearly all the 15- to 20-year-olds taking part in the "Youth at Risk" program have been suspended from school at some point.

BOMBING AFTERMATH — Cars outside the USO club in Naples, Italy, are burned and damaged after Thursday night's bomb attack. Five people, including an American servicewoman, died in the explosion.

Terrorist sought in USO blast

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Police said Friday they believe a Japanese terrorist accused of attacking Western embassies around the world parked a car bomb outside the Naples USO that killed an American servicewoman and four Italians.

Two Arab groups claimed responsibility for the explosion Thursday night in a narrow street that runs past the club, where a party was being held to welcome destroyer USS Paul to port. Seventeen people were wounded, including four U.S. sailors.

All five people killed last week were just outside the USO. They included Angela Santos, 21, of Ocala, Fla., who held the rank of radioman 3rd class and was based at the Naval Communications Area Master Station in Naples.

A man speaking accented English telephoned a French news agency office in Rome on Friday and said the bomb was planted by a group called Organization of Jihad Brigades. "The American imperialists must die today, two years after their barbarous attack against the Libyan Arab state," he said.

His reference was to the U.S. bombing of Libya on April 15, 1986, which was intended to punish the radical Arab nation for alleged sponsorship of international terrorism.

In Beirut, a statement signed by a group calling itself the Islamic Jihad Organization for the Support of the Oppressed on Earth said it "claims responsibility for the attack launched by our brethren holy warriors in Italy against American targets in the city of Naples in which several imperialist soldiers were killed or wounded."

The typewritten statement, in Arabic, was delivered to the Beirut bureau of the Italian news agency ANSA. Its language indicated the group was made up of pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems.

Libya's ambassador to Italy denied involvement in the bombing by Col. Moammar Gadhafi's government.

Italian investigators said Friday that Junzo Okudaira of the Japanese Red Army, which has links to terrorists in Lebanon, was the prime suspect in the Naples attack.

Romano Argenio and Ansoino Andreassi of Italy's anti-terrorist police said they believed Okudaira, 39, had accomplices and both claims of responsibility were being taken seriously.

In December, Okudaira was charged in Italy with bomb and rocket attacks on the U.S. and British embassies in Rome last June during the annual summit of Western leaders in Venice. Several people were wounded.

TALCUM POWDER

Researchers have found that women who use talcum regularly as part of their feminine hygiene routine are three times more likely than normal to develop cancer of the ovaries. Talc found imbedded in the ovaries apparently traveled up the vagina, then thru the uterus and Fallopian tubes. Some mothers dust their babies' bottoms with talc powder when changing diapers. Inhaling the talc can lead to lung cancer as well. Many doctors now urge their patients to stop dusting themselves and their children with talcum powder.

Hostages plead for their lives

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Two hostage passengers on a hijacked Kuwait Airways jet pleaded for their lives via radio Friday and urged the Kuwaiti government to give in to the demands of the Shiite Moslem gunmen.

Algerian mediators shuttled between the booby-trapped jet and Kuwaiti officials on Friday, the 11th day of the crisis.

The masked gunmen who commandeered the jumbo jet on a flight from Bangkok to Kuwait on April 5 want Kuwait to release 17 terrorists, convicted of bombing the U.S. and French embassies in Kuwait in 1982.

"In the name of God the merciful, I greet my family and my friends and I ask the Kuwaiti authorities to free the 17 prisoners held in Kuwaiti prisons," said Soleiman Mohammed Soleiman al-Mashari, one hostage, in a message to the control tower. "In the event of refusal, they are going to kill us."

In a second message, a man identifying himself as Mohammed Ahmed Al-Ajem said: "I am one of the hostages from the Boeing. I greet my family, large and small and I ask the Kuwaiti authorities to free the prisoners in the prisons. Without that, the kidnappers have decided to kill us."

An estimated 31 passengers and four crew members were being held in grim conditions by eight hijackers, armed with guns and grenades.

One hostage, the male cousin of the emir of Kuwait, shook continuously, could not speak and "just cries all the time," a released captive said.

The Boeing 747, which had 112 passengers aboard when it began its journey, was diverted to Mashhad in northeastern Iran, then to Larnaca, Cyprus. Fifty-seven passengers were released in Iran and another 13 in Cyprus. Two passengers were killed in Cyprus.

The air pirates have threatened to kill the remaining hostages and blow up the plane if their demands are not met.

Dukakis, Bush quibble on Noriega; rhetoric tame in primary campaign

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis slammed the Reagan administration Friday for putting "drug-peddling" Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega on the U.S. payroll, but Vice President George Bush retorted that it is Libya that has been propping up Noriega with millions of dollars.

Jesse Jackson made fun of efforts by fellow Democrats Dukakis and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. to claim leadership in the fight against drugs, saying they are captains and lieutenants while "I'm the general in this war."

As the presidential campaign moved into the final weekend before the pivotal New York primary on Tuesday, the rhetoric was tamed.

For Republicans, it was a day for unity.

Democrats aimed their fire mostly at the Reagan administration, drug pushers and the owners of Eastern Airlines — not at each other.

Democratic front-runner Dukakis talked to Brooklyn junior high school students about drug abuse, using wife Kitty's 26-year dependence on diet pills as an example. The Massachusetts governor used the low-key approach of a talk-show host in discussing drug abuse, such as crack, the potent cocaine derivative.

"Crack can kill you, right? Who was killed by crack — Lenny Bias, right?" Dukakis said of the former University of Maryland basketball star. "In about four minutes, that young man's life was snuffed out."

Dukakis tossed aside a prepared speech on drugs, in which he criticized the Reagan administration for paying Noriega money through the Central Intelligence Agency before he was indicted for drug-running.

"Why do we have the money for Star Wars but not for the war against drugs? And why did you pay $200,000 a year to a dope-peddling, gun-running Panamanian dictator?" Dukakis' speech said.

Then he flew to Albany to meet with Gov. Mario Cuomo.

For his part, Jackson continued his attack on drugs at the South Jamaica housing project in Queens, where he compared drug dealers to members of the Ku Klux Klan, who harassed and killed blacks while wearing white hoods.

"Ropes, sheets and hoods represent death," Jackson told a cheering crowd. "We never lost as many lives to Southern rope" as to drugs.

"The dope pusher does not wear sheets and hoods, the dope pusher is the hood who lives in the neighborhood," said Jackson.

Bush, in a speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said Democratic charges that the administration had propped up Noriega are "demagogic statements."

"It is this administration that has brought Noriega to justice, or at least taken the first step," Bush said. "Noriega should go and Noriega will go."

Bush added that Noriega has resisted the U.S. economic pressure because of outside help.

"Several reliable sources indicate that he is receiving millions of dollars in support from Libya," Bush said. He did not elaborate on his sources.

Otherwise, the Republican nominee-to-be talked of pulling the party together for the fall general election.

Bush had lunch with vanquished rival Sen. Bob Dole in his Capitol office, standing together for the cameras as Dole proclaimed, "We're ready to go to work for George Bush."

Thoughts on Bennett's idea

To the Editor:

Re: The April 7 comment by U.S. Education Secretary William J. Bennett on his proposal, "Project Voluntas."

Parochial schools are urged to enroll the toughest public school students and ask for partial compensation from the government.

Reading this statement, my first thought: "Wherefore art thou come?" I can't believe what I read.

"Challenge is simple," said the secretary. "Show educators around the country what works."

Beautiful oratory. I just love it and recognize the facts as true, but why the suggested bargain prices for something that is considered the Cadillac of the education field? Not three-quarter payment, not full payment, "but half what it would cost to teach the students in public schools."

What is the planned consideration to be used as guidelines in the placement of the public students?

What are the present estimated numbers of so-qualified 5 to 10 percent of public school students in the state of Connecticut that would be eligible for this suggested enrollment?

What has happened to separation of the church and the state?

I came from a generation of parents who believed and taught us to pay, pray, obey — church and school — and passed on this faith through the Catholic schools with lots of sacrifice — no assistance but belief and action.

I realize, as I reminisce today, how privileged I was to have been a graduate of St. Joseph's School. This is the same school where my dreams and goals of hairdressing and cosmetology originated — and where my Catholic values were instilled.

Mass and Rosary gave me the strength when I needed help, through the tough times in the high-paced business world for 30 years. My European exposure and education led to my expertise as a hair colorist, developing my teaching and consulting career throughout the northeastern states. I was also privileged to attend the Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Poland, where my Polish heritage became a reality.

My special thanks and gratitude to the Felician Sisters of St. Francis, who devoted their lives to the students, and to this day hold this honored position in our field of Catholic education and tradition. God bless. You are wonderful.

All in all, boiled down, the "Catholic education" can be called and referred to as the learning of the faith from our parents' generation, and then sharing the faith with our generation, and then passing of the faith to our children's generation.

Our Catholic educators must not drop their scholarly pursuits. Elbert Hubbard said, "There is no failure except in no longer trying." Lose your scholars, you eventually lose your students. Lose your students, you eventually lose a generation of the Catholic leaders. And youth and leadership is our future life and existence.

"Lots of doors will be opened to you — and you will open lots of them for others. I will pray for you." That was said by Sister Bonaventura on graduation day June 1932. Thanks, Sister Bonaventura.

'Tipping point' for Jackson

By Chuck Stone

That Jesse Jackson has earned the right to be on the Democratic Party ticket in November should no longer be a debatable issue. Sweat equity is a powerful reason.

If further legitimacy is needed, a Roper poll for U.S. News & World Report confers it by showing a Dukakis-Jackson ticket beating a Bush-Any Running Mate You Name ticket, 47 to 42 percent. It's a new America.

Yet racism can still destabilize legitimacy.

Peel away the layers of arguments against Jesse Jackson, and they come back at variations of a theme — Jackson's skin color.

Their subtlety is multi-colored; the venomous attacks on Jackson's positions, the protests that he lacks elective experience, the "separate but equal" treatment given Jackson by the press, a winking at Albert Gore's outrageous pandering to ethnic divisiveness, the argumentum ad hominem.

Example: Sen. Paul Simon's wife compared Jackson's oratorical skills to Adolf Hitler's. Columnist Charles Krauthammer compared Jackson's "power and passion" to Benito Mussolini's and Juan Peron's, and called Jackson "cheap" and "dangerous."

Example: Marvin Kalb, a former "Meet the Press" moderator and the current director of a Harvard press-government program, interviewed all of the presidential candidates for PBS. Jackson was the only candidate whom Kalb asked, "Would you drop the bomb?" Not once, but twice. In another interview, Ben Wattenberg accused Jackson of embracing Moammar Gadhafi, when Jackson had never even met Gadhafi.

Example: Columnist Paul Greenberg indicted Jackson for "rendering the black vote meaningless by appropriating it for himself." In the ghetto, that kind of Nordic tripe is known as racism. Jackson hasn't reduced black voters to non-cognitive robots. They're supporting him because of their pride in his presidential-like conduct. Other ethnic groups assiduously practice ethnic fidelity at the ballot box. (Shall I name them?) Why can't blacks be just as American?

Example: "Misgivings" about Jackson's lack of previous elective experience are repeatedly cited. Dwight Eisenhower had no previous elective experience, and nobody raised that issue. Ronald Reagan had "previous elective experience," yet he has presided over the biggest budget deficit in American history. His administration is the sleaziest ever, and has set a record for the most officials under investigation and indictment.

Example: Jackson's deplorable canard, "Hymietown," his earlier embrace of Yassir Arafat and Louis Farrakhan, and his praise for Fidel Castro still plague him. They were mistakes. He admits it and has tried to distance himself from his egregious indiscretions, just as Lyndon B. Johnson moved away from his earlier segregationist record. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd was once a member of the Ku Klux Klan, an organization that lynched blacks. He shrugs it off as a "youthful indiscretion." But not one of the groups or individuals criticizing Jackson have ever denounced Byrd for his former

KKK embrace. (That applies especially to Gore.)

Enough examples. They're only the tip of racism's iceberg.

Jackson's real problem is the "tipping point." Whenever a neighborhood or a school exceeds a certain percentage of blacks (it varies with the region), that tipping threshold sets in motion a white flight that accelerates segregation.

Jackson's "tipping point" came on March 26, when he won Michigan. That's when he became not just a serious candidate, but a serious threat.

Despite the compassion and fairness of those white Americans who are voting for Jackson, he is still being vetoed by the media, the vast majority of white columnists, and the Democratic Party's power structure.

Their tipping point has already tipped.

U.N. refugee chief bowed to pressure

WASHINGTON — Refugee experts are resigning from the United Nations because they say the office charged with protecting refugees is bowing to countries that refuse to accept their fair share.

Jack Anderson

The discontent inside the office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees flared in January when High Commissioner Jean-Pierre Hocke burned almost all the 138,000 copies of the agency's official magazine "Refugees."

Hocke's official reason was that a story on an evolving refugee policy in West Germany was out of date. But others inside the agency told a reporter Sally Dinkel that Hocke was afraid the story would embarrass West Germany because it revealed that the country had effectively closed its borders to all but a trickle of refugees.

According to a copy of the magazine that escaped Hocke's fire, West Germany now requires visas of all refugees who want to enter the country, but West German embassies abroad have been ordered not to issue visas unless the refugee will serve the immediate interests of West Germany. The number of deportations from West Germany is also on the rise.

There is no U.N. requirement that member nations accept a certain number of refugees. Hocke's office is supposed to oversee protection of the refugees and assist the countries that give them asylum. For their part, the countries voluntarily contribute to the agency's budget for refugee assistance. So Hocke has to walk a fine line between helping the refugees who need a home and catering to the countries that pay for his programs. Some of Hocke's staffers think he has stepped over the line, and favored the countries that contribute funds.

After the United States and Japan, West Germany is the third largest contributor to the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Roland-Pierre Faringaux, the editor of "Refugees" magazine, told us that he is leaving his job, but said he made his decision before Hocke burned the magazines. He defended the 17-page article on West Germany as "very good," and said it was written by Yefine Zarjevski, who had been the agency's representative to that country.

Other officials, who spoke on the condition that they not be identified, cited Hocke's controversial reorganization plan as another reason some employees are leaving the agency. He has appointed several highly paid consultants to reorganize the agency, ignoring objections and advice from longtime staffers.

Workers also reportedly have been alienated by Hocke's plan to keep a low profile when it comes to protecting refugees.

Congressional and State Department sources told us that Hocke's commitment to making the agency more accountable to contributing nations is one of the reasons the United States supported his selection as high commissioner 2½ years ago. At the time, donor countries on both sides of the Atlantic were tightening their refugee policies.

Hocke is up for re-election before members of the United Nations this year. U.N. sources tell us that he can expect U.S. support. But many private relief agencies who work with the commissioner tell us that they are concerned about his commitment to refugees.

We asked Hocke for a comment, but he declined to speak to us over the phone. He promised to meet with us if we flew to Geneva, where his office is located.

Old secrets are out

Some of the most in-demand files in the National Archives, according to archivist John Taylor, are documents from the old Office of Strategic Services. Thousands of them were ordered declassified by the late William Casey while he was director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

While poring over some of these records, author Chris Simpson found the details of Operation Bloodstone. Under Bloodstone, American officials recruited large numbers of Nazis and Nazi collaborators to work for the U.S. intelligence network after World War II. One early recruit was Reinhard Gehlen, Adolf Hitler's senior military intelligence officer on the eastern front. Gehlen fed the American information about the Soviet Union in exchange for protection. William Casey was a member of the OSS branch that had a direct liaison with Gehlen.

In another Cold War operation, the United States took money that was confiscated from the Nazis and gave it to Roman Catholic leaders to help them turn an election in Italy that communists were predicted to win. Some of the money rightfully belonged to Jews, from whom the Nazis had confiscated it.

'Tinkerer' builds first-class sets

By Anita M. Caldwell
Manchester Herald

IF YOU NEED to build a porch or the deck of a ship or even a dungeon, you'd probably want to call Pierre Marteney.

Unless, of course, you want it to last more than a couple of weeks.

Since the early 1970s, the 56-year-old Hackmatack Street resident has been building sets for the Manchester Gilbert & Sullivan Players. Though his repertoire includes more permanent projects such as adding on a room in his house and "a couple of harpsichords," an instrument which he plays frequently, he's had as much fun with creating the almost-real structures that are needed for the musicals.

"I've always been a tinkerer," Marteney said.

But he's had no special training, said Marteney, a research scientist at United Technologies Corp. in East Hartford since 1961.

And often that's the challenge. For example, building a set tree, he said, has been his toughest assignment.

"There's no way to make it stand up," he said with a hearty laugh. "Platforms and housing are easy."

Marteney said that in this year's production, "Oklahoma," which will be performed the weekends of April 22, 23 and April 29, 30, one of the scenes calls for a fence that someone has to jump over. Tickets for the show, to be performed at East Catholic High School, are $8 general admission and $4 for children and senior citizens, available by calling 528-8595.

Marteney said the fence has to be secured, but he hasn't quite figured out how to construct it.

For another show, Marteney said he had to create "waving grass" to illustrate the wind was blowing. To do that, the builders used cut blades of pressed hardwood, stuck them on sheets of plywood and painted them green.

"I think the green paint is still on the floor," he said.

And all the creating and constructing is done in a building other than where the performance will be, he said. The set won't be raised on the performance stage until a week before the show.

Marteney, who searches annually for a site to build the sets, is working this year at a town-owned building at the former Nike site on Garden Grove Road.

The fences, walls, gazebos, bedrooms, living rooms and anything else that is part of a stage set has to be moved like a kid's Erector set. The set is built in parts, largely because it must be moved to the performance stage

David Kool/Manchester Herald

IF I HAD A HAMMER — Pierre Marteney of Hackmatack Street works on the stage set for the Manchester Gilbert & Sullivan Players' production of "Oklahoma," to be performed at East Catholic High School the weekends of April 22 and 23 and April 29 and 30.

in a rented truck and because, depending on the building, parts may not fit through the doors.

So far, Marteney said, he hasn't lost any pieces.

Among other considerations, Marteney said, is getting the set constructed in time for the dates of performance.

"It's always hectic," he said. Even though the show is selected in the spring, a year before the performance, rehearsal doesn't begin until the following January and the support people — the set builders, lighting technicians and props people — begin work at that time or sometimes even later.

Making sure everything comes together on time is "a matter of coordination," he said.

But Marteney doesn't mind the jigsaw-puzzle life he leads during the months of preparing for the shows.

"It's good therapy," he said.

"It's creative in a sense. Sometimes you have to be a little inventive to interpret what the (set) designer wanted."

How a stage set looks is usually determined by the ideas of a set designer and the director of the show. The set builders follow something like a blueprint and often a miniature stage set provided by the designer.

But set building is not the only connection to the show Marteney has.

When he's not building sets on the weekends, he's rehearsing with the show's chorus during the week.

Marteney has been a member of the G & S chorus since 1970 and a percussionist with the Manchester Symphony and Chorus since 1962.

"Fortunately, there isn't any percussion part in the (Manchester) Symphony or I'd be trying to get that in, too," he said.

Astrograph

Your Birthday

April 17, 1988

The aspects indicate that you may make some important changes in your life in the year ahead. You could either move into a larger living space or redecorate your present abode.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today that you are not jockeyed into a position where some of the obligations of another are foisted on you. Protect your position. Major changes are ahead for Aries in the coming year. Send for our Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH, 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be a bit more selective than usual regarding companions with whom you pal around today. Try to avoid one who has a knack for causing complications.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Give prompt attention to matters that require immediate action today. If they are ignored, they will be much more difficult to contend with later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Friends will resent being imposed on today, even those you've gone out of your way to help in the past. Keep this in mind if you're in need of a special favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It will be a serious mistake today to try to shift the blame to others for your own shortcomings. If you err in some manner, admit it openly, without excuses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're a bit more touchy than usual today. Be a good listener, or else you may take offense at something another says where no ill will was intended.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Tact and logic are your two greatest tools for success today, yet, to your detriment, you might not use either of them properly and fail to achieve your aims.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try not to take on any assignments or tasks that are too strenuous for you either physically or mentally. If assistance isn't available now, wait until it is.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you're a rather prudent and cautious person, but today, there are indications you might become involved in something that has too many elements of chance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your reputation could suffer at this time if you fail to come through on a commitment you made recently that concerns others as well as yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't yield to peer pressure today if there is something others want you to do that is opposed by your own better judgment. Be strong and firm.

Starling defends title against favored Breland

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

WINNING MOMENT — Marlon Starling raises his arms in victory after he defended his title against Fujio Ozaki on Feb. 6. Starling defends his welterweight title tonight against the man he took the crown from, Mark Breland.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Mark Breland, who has won 130 of 132 amateur and pro fights, will be in a must-win situation Saturday night when he challenges welterweight champion Marlon Starling.

"I'm not going into the fight thinking that, but I know it is," the 24-year-old Breland said.

"Losing back-to-back to the same guy would be bad."

The 29-year-old Starling won the World Boxing Association welterweight title when he knocked out Breland in the 11th round last Aug. 22 at Columbia, S.C.

Another loss wouldn't necessarily end Breland's career, but it would badly hurt the 1984 Olympic champion as a gate attraction.

Dollars and cents are not at the heart of matter as Breland sees it. "It's a matter of pride," he said.

Breland was a 2-1 favorite Friday to win the scheduled 12-round bout at the Las Vegas Hilton, which will be the second half of an HBO television doubleheader.

Julio Cesar Chavez of Mexico, who has won all 56 of his pro fights, will defend his WBA lightweight championship in a scheduled 12-round bout against Rodolfo Aguilar of Panama.

The Chavez-Aguilar fight will start about 7 p.m. PDT. The Starling-Breland match could start about 8 p.m. and no later than 8:15 p.m.

Having to prove himself is nothing new for Breland despite an amateur record of 110-1, with 73 knockouts and a pro mark of 20-1, with 13 knockouts.

"People say 'You haven't fought anybody,'" Breland said. "They look for me to hit a guy once and have him fall. But if he does, they say, 'Who did you fight?'"

Breland won the title with a seventh-round knockout of Harold Volbrecht of South Africa Feb. 6, 1987, at Atlantic City, N.J. He lost it in his first defense.

He said he went into the fight against Starling with torn rib cartilage.

"It was just pride," he said of his decision to fight with the injury.

"Sometimes you have to eat your pride."

Breland grew up in New York, but he has family in Columbia and he said, "I had a lot of distractions trying to cater to my family and other people. I just couldn't pick myself up for the fight. In the fight I had no motivation at all."

"I'm up for this one."

It will be the second title defense for Starling, of Hartford, Conn., who has a 43-4 record, with 26 knockouts. One of those losses was on a 15-round unanimous decision to Donald Curry in a bid for the WBA 147-pound title Feb. 4, 1984.

In his first defense, Starling won a 12-round unanimous decision over Fujio Ozaki of Japan last Feb. 5 at Atlantic City.

Breland has fought twice since losing to Starling. He scored a 10-round decision over Javier Szuazo Dec. 5 at Atlantic City and knocked out Juan Alonso Villa in the third round of a preliminary to Starling's victory over Ozaki.

The 25-year-old Chavez, who has scored 47 knockouts, is a prohibitive favorite in his first defense of the 135-pound title.

Foreigners dominate Boston Marathon field

By Bert Rosenthal
The Associated Press

BOSTON — With the leading U.S. runners absent, an avalanche of world-class foreigners has descended upon the Boston Marathon, setting up an intriguing race Monday.

Not only will the field of more than 6,000 be racing for the top prizes of $45,000 plus a car valued at more than $35,000, for both the men's and women's first-place finishers, but many will be vying for berths on their national Olympic teams.

Kenya, Tanzania, Finland, Britain, Italy and Mexico will select all or part of their Olympic teams from the 92nd running of the historic Boston Marathon.

The race will be devoid of recognizable Americans, except for four-time Boston winner Bill Rodgers, 40, and two-time women's runner-up Patti Catalano, 35, because the leading U.S. marathoners are preparing for their Olympic Trials.

The men's trials will be April 24 in the New Jersey Waterfront Marathon and the women's trials will be May 1 at Pittsburgh.

Leading the foreign invasion of Boston are Steve Jones of Wales, Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya, Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania, Geoff Smith of Britain and Gelindo Bordin of Italy.

In addition, there are Orlando Pizzolato and Gianni Poli of Italy, Suleiman Nyambui, Gidamis Shahanga, Filbert Bayi, Zakariah Barie, John Burra and Simon Robert of Tanzania, the unrelated Gomezes- Rodolfo and Jose- of Mexico, Tommy Ekblom and Martti Vainio of Finland, Joseph Nzau, Gabriel Kamau, Wilson Waigwa and Sam Sitoni of Kenya, Nechadi el Mustafa of Morocco, and Tomoyuki Tanaguchi and Hideki Kita of Japan.

The women's field is not nearly as deep as the men's, but it features two of the world's best, defending champion Rosa Mota of Portugal and Priscilla Welch, 43, of Britain.

All indications are that with the heavy number of Africans, the race will be fast, provided the weather is good.

Last year, when rain and strong winds battered the 26-mile, 385-yard course that begins in the little town of Hopkinton, west of Boston, and ends in the middle of the city, Toshihiko Seko of Japan beat Jones by nearly two minutes in 2 hours, 11 minutes, 50 seconds.

Jones had little to stake then. This time, the race has much more significance for him.

He and Smith, the Boston champion in 1984-85 and third last year, only five seconds behind Jones, will be vying for the third and final spot on the British marathon team. The other places will go to the first two British finishers in Sunday's London Marathon.

Between the two British runners is Ikangaa, the world's top-ranked marathoner in 1986, with a best of 2:08:10.

Five others in the field have broken 2:10:00: Shahanga (2:09:39), Rodolfo Gomez (2:09:12), Poli (2:09:57), Nzau (2:09:45) and Rodgers (2:09:27).

"I'm stunned by the terrific field," said Rodgers, who is running his 52nd marathon — he has won 21 — and his 13th Boston. "This is the best field assembled in the 92 years of the race."

"I wish I was 10 years younger, and in some ways, I'm glad I'm not," said Rodgers, who will be running his first Boston as a member of the Masters Division — over 40 group.

Fred Lebow, race director of the New York City Marathon, agreed with Rodgers as to the potential of the field.

"This is better than the (1984) Olympic Games and better than the (1987) World Championships," Lebow said.

"This is the greatest array of talent ever assembled at Boston," said Dave D'Alessandro, senior vice president of John Hancock Financial Services, the major sponsor of the race.

"It should be a fascinating race. It shouldn't be a strategy race. Certain runners... will have to do well time-wise to get a qualifier for their teams."

"If they have a slow performance, they could get x'd out," D'Alessandro said. "They can't afford not to run fast."

Unless the weather is bad, D'Alessandro should have no worries about a fast race.

Generally, African runners like to push the pace and occasionally throw in some fast bursts, trying to disrupt the opposition.

Sometimes, their tactics work for an entire race, and an unknown African wins a marathon, such as Shahanga did in the 1978 Commonwealth Games and Douglas Wakiluru of Kenya did in last year's World Championships.

FIRST YANKEE HIT — Jack Clark watches the baseball after getting his first hit as a Yankee against the Brewers Friday afternoon in Milwaukee. The single drove in a run. The Yankees went on to a 7-1 win.

Mets, Gooden blank Cards

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden pitched a two-hitter as New York beat the St. Louis Cardinals 3-0 in a rain-shortened game Friday night for the Mets' third consecutive shutout.

With none out in the top of the seventh, Tommy Herr was batting with a 2-1 count when the rain started. The umpires waited 1 hour, 45 minutes before calling it.

Gooden, 3-0, struck out seven and walked none en route to his fourth career two-hitter and 17th shutout. He did not allow a Cardinal to reach base until Herr's infield hit to deep short with two outs in the fourth. Ozzie Smith singled to right center in the sixth for the Cards' second hit.

The shutouts, thrown by Ron Darling on Tuesday, Bob Ojeda on Thursday against Montreal and Gooden, marked the second time in club history the Mets had three consecutive complete-game shutouts.

Gary Carter gave the Mets a 1-0 lead in the second inning when he hit his fourth homer off starter Greg Mathews, 1-1. The Mets have homered in seven straight games and have 16 in nine games.

MILWAUKEE — Jack Clark joined the Yankee band on Friday and kept the beat going strong.

After missing the first nine games, Clark joined New York in Milwaukee and delivered a first-inning single in his first American League at-bat to ignite a five-run first inning as the Yankees sent the staggering Brewers to their seventh straight loss, 7-1.

"This is a ball club that I know can hit so I guess I'm where I'm supposed to be," Clark said after the Yankees' fourth straight victory and ninth in their first 10 games — their best start ever.

"I missed opening day in Toronto and I missed opening day in New York, so I was happy to get a hit in my first at-bat."

Clark, who was activated Friday, sent a looper into center to drive in the first run off Mike Birkbeck in a balk and argument filled first inning.

"It wasn't the prettiest but I'll take it," said Clark, who began the season on the disabled list with a torn tendon in his left calf.

"It doesn't matter if there are 50,000 or 50 fans in the stands. I'm just out there trying to do my job."

Clark's prowess as a hitter is established but the Brewers always have plenty of trouble with lesser-known Don Slaught, who had a squeeze bunt and his first homer.

Slaught is 7-for-9 against the Brewers this season with five RBIs.

"There are just certain clubs you hit well against. Usually the Brewers just seem to catch me when I'm swinging the bat well," he said.

The Yankees' five-run first helped Tommy John pick up his first victory of the season.

The 44-year-old left-hander allowed four hits before he was replaced in the seventh by Cecilio Guante after giving up a walk to Greg Brock and single to Rob Deer.

Guante walked Glenn Braggs to load the bases but struck out Bill Schroeder and got Ernest Riles to hit into a double play, the Yankees' third of the game.

The Yankees' victory came before the Brewers' regular-season record crowd of 55,887 at County Stadium, the biggest opening-day crowd in the majors this season.

New York's five-run first gives the Yankees 18 runs in the first inning of their last five games.

Birkbeck, who had not pitched since March 31 in spring training, committed three balks, walked three and surrendered five hits in his 1-3 innings on a gray, windy 40-degree day.

Rickey Henderson opened the Yankees first with a bunt single and moved to second on Birkbeck's first balk. Willie Randolph walked and was forced at second on Don Mattingly's grounder.

Clark singled in the first run and another hit by Mike Pagliarulo loaded the bases.
