Strikers hit Lenin shipyard

By John Daniszewski The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland - Workers went on strike today at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, birthplace of the Solidarity independent trade movement, government and opposition spokesmen said.

Government spokesman Zbigniew Augustynowicz said he did not know how many shipyard workers were taking part in the strike. It followed an appeal by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa on Sunday for a "day of action" to support striking steelworkers in southern Poland.

A banner at the shipyard gate said "Sit-In Strike," said Andrzej Gwiazda, a local Solidarity leader in Gdansk, speaking by telephone. He said the strike began between 1:30 p.m. and 2:30

Also today about 700 workers rallied and interrupted work at the Dolmel electronic machinery plant in Wroclaw, in southwestern Poland, said Jozef Pinior, a Solidarity leader in that city. He said workers had not declared a strike, but were seeking pay raises of $50 a month

A secretary at the plant managing director's office refused comment on whether there had been a work stoppage, but said, "at the moment, work goes on

The woman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, con-firmed talks had taken place between the management and members of the workforce but gave no details.

Sunday, thousands of people heeded Solidarity's call for a national day of protest and scores of demonstrators were arrested in clashes with police in at least 19

But 10 days ago, Adamson sat with friends in a movie theater in Boston and heard her voice on the soundtrack of a Paramount Picture, 'Permanent Record.'

Adamson performs the theme song, "Wishing On Another Lucky Star," in this picture, which focuses on the issue of teen suicide. The film was released in Boston and New York City on April 22, and is expected to come to the Showcase Cinemas in East Hartford in the next few weeks.

On camera, the number is performed by the film's star, Jennifer Rubin, as a memorial to her friend, who has killed himself. But as Rubin moves her lips, it is Adamson's voice which the Town starts search now for assessor

By Alex Girelli Manchester Herald

The town will begin almost immediately to seek a new town assessor to replace J. Richard Vincent, who resigned amid controversy over the failed 1987 revaluation

Town Mananager Robert Weiss said this morning that advertise-ments will be placed this weekend, seeking applicants for the post. Meanwhile, he said, the asssessors' staff will proceed with plans to work on a new revaluation to be used as the basis for the taxes for the 1989-90 fiscal

The current salary range for the asssessor's post is $34,175 to $43,145. But Weiss said that may change when the budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1 is

He said the job will be advertised at the current range in any event. Weiss said no decision has been made about whether to hire an outside firm to conduct the revaluation or to get a new software package.

William Moon, who became acting assessor today in the wake of Vincent's resignation, said this morning he will apply for the job. Moon has been deputy assessor under Vincent.

Weiss said that revaluation work will go forward before the post is filled, the new assessor will have responsibility for it once that official is on the

Weiss said he is not sure exactly what deadline will apply to the town for completing its corrected revalued Grand List. The normal deadline for an assessor to complete work on a Grand List is Jan. 31, but extensions are sometimes granted. One was granted to the end of February for the assessors' work on the Grand List that was later set aside by the state's Office of Policy and Management.

Vincent, who came under heavy criticism for the problemridden revaluation, submitted his resignation Friday, effective immediately. Under an agreement with the town, he will receive $43,000, minus tax deductions, as a settlement. Th sum includes six month's salary and accumulated vacation and sick leave time.

Weiss has also come under criticism for the revaluation failure, and while his dismissal has been ruled out as a possibility by Mayor Peter DiRosa Jr. and other Democrtic directors, they have not ruled out the possibility of other disciplinary action.

Republican Town Chairman John Garside said this morning that the three Republican directors have not held a caucus to determine whether any disciplinary action is called for.

In his letter of resignation, Vincent said of the revaluation failure. "It is unfortunate that sometimes even the best of intentions can wither under the pressure of time and of misconceived opposition."

The town is seeking depositions from five plaintiffs who filed a suit opposing the $9.5-million tax break approved by the town to finance utility improvements for the Buckland mall.

Elizabeth Sadloski of Hollister Street, Adele Katkauskas and Joyce Senkbeil of Tolland Turnpike, Virginia Celinski of Summit Street and Harvey Steeves of Woodbridge Street have been subpoenaed to appear at the offices of Updike, Kelly & Spellacy of Hartford next Monday.

The five, members of the Manchester Property Owners Association, filed a suit in February in Hartford Superior Court seeking a permanent injunction against the tax-break financing approved for the 115-acre mall site by the Board of Directors in February, claiming the agreement between the town and the mall developer, the Homart Development Co. of Chicago, constitutes an "improper use of public

Thoughts

People often ask what makes Christian school education unique? It is unique in its philosophy, its educational process, and its authority and responsibility. It is education from God's perspective. The philosophy is God-centered in every aspect. It integrates God's view into man's world. Students learn to see the world from God's point of view. They are transformed as this knowledge becomes an active part of their life

The building blocks include four very important juestions. What is Reality? What is Man? What is Truth? What are our Values? These are fundamental questions of life. They are questions to which & students want an answer. In the world today, many people have lost their sense of direction because these questions have not been adequately answered. There is more to life than "our own little world." Students need to have a sense of purpose in life. Answering these questions can lead a student to their "purpose." Each day this week, we will look at each one of these questions. Biblical answers to each question will be given. We will also explore how the answers affect education from God's perspective.

NEW LONDON - The Coast Guard Academy's assistant superintendent has been relieved of his duties at his request pending the outcome of court proceedings on a charge of sixth-degree larcency.

Capt. W.S. Rich, who was relieved of his duties Friday, also will be the subject of an independent Coast Guard review. Rich, 50, was charged Tuesday with larceny of a bag from the Bradlees department store on Route 12 in Groton. The bag included two boxes of briquets, a cookbook and toothpaste according to Groton town police Chief Thomas

Rich told The Day of New London Thursday that the bag was in a shopping cart between double doors at the entrance of the store, and that it appeared to have been paid for and abandoned. He said he moved the cart several times, once inside and then outside the store. when security guards asked him if he paid for TOLLAND - Three years after her son was born with an unknown ailment, a Tolland woman has formed a foundation to spread the word about Lyme disease.

Karen Vanderhoof-Forschner said she knew immediately that something was wrong when her son was born in July 1985. He had a red flush all over his body, and soon suffered from chronic stomach problems, persistent vomiting and eye problems.

Her son, Jamie, was 2 years old and suffering from potentially irreversible brain damage when he was diagnosed as having Lyme disease. "I tried to call a foundation for Lyme disease and found out there was none," she said. So Vanderhoof-Forschner founded the Lyme Borreliosis Foundation Inc. of Tolland It took her less than a year to establish the

Lifeguard shortage

NEW HAVEN - With the swimming season just around the corner, the state has found itself once again lacking enough lifeguards to parrol its beaches.

"It's like almost the same position we were in last year, maybe a little worse," said Gus Constantine, state lifeguard examiner. As few as 135 lifeguards patrolled Connecticut's 22 state beaches last summer, 30 fewer lifeguards than needed. Ten percent fewer people have applied to be lifeguards this year than did at the same time last year, he said. State beaches open May 28.

Newtown police have been criticized for their failure to aggressively pursue the case once it was reported that the 39-year-old Mrs. Crafts was missing. She was last seen alive on Nov. 18, 1986. In an unusual move, Danbury State's Attorney Walter Flanagan took the case from Newtown police and turned it over to state police. Defense attorney J. Daniel Sagarin is expected to make an issue of DeJoseph's contract when he questions the chief on the stand sometime this week "I think there are a whole lot of people who wan Richard convicted for reasons that have nothing to do with justice, but have to do with people's careers and institutions," Sagarin said recently. "It's extraordinary that a police chief's contrac is, in a way, dependent on the outcome of the case,'

DeJoseph says he's not overly concerned about the trial or the contract. The 22-year veteran who was head of detectives at the time the Crafts case began, said he is confident of his department's handling of the case.

"I can tell you, we're not going to be the whipping boy." he said. He also said he doesn't feel his $40,000-a-year job is threatened by the clause in his contract, saying: "They can't investigate until the final appeal. It'll be years. I'll be in Florida

Arms sales could jump

NEW YORK - U.S. arms sales abroad could jump by $3.3 billion, to more than $15 billion this year, with much of the increase going to the Middle East, The New York Times reported

A confidential report from the State Department to Congress lists potential sales to 33 countries, Israel, which would get $3.6 billion worth of arms, and Egypt, which would get $2.7

billion, the Times said. The request gives more attention to the Persian Gulf region than requests of previous years, with the Reagan administration asking or advanced arms and equipment for Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates to counter threats from Iran, the newspaper said.

decision a good one

The decision by Town Assessor J. Richard Vincent to resign from his post, obviously under a great deal of pressure from political leaders, is a good one for both Vincent and the Vincent was not solely responsible for the mess that arose from the town's attempt to conduct a tax revaluation with an inexpensive and inadequate computer software program. However, he was the person with the most expertise in tax matters. Thus, he was the one in the best position to evaluate the program in the first place and to realize that when problems with it began to mount, the program was failing.

Town Manager Robert Weiss was in part to blame. He could have decided earlier to set the revaluation aside as evidence mounted that it was not proceeding well, particularly when Democratic members of the Board of Directors were urging him to do so. Democratic Town Chairman Theodore Cummings has criticized the manager for not "keeping the store." But the Democrats, themselves, are not without fault. They could have insisted more strongly, and publicly if necessary, that steps be taken to postpone the revaluation when they became concerned about it.

In any event, the tension between Vincent and the elected officials has risen to the point where he can not remain on the scene while the town sets out to correct the revaluation

There is some question about whether terms of Vincent's resignation, which provide him with six months salary, are justified. Perhaps those terms are generous. But Vincent would have the right, if he were fired. to have a public hearing before the Board of Directors, at which his attorney would present his best case and perhaps lay the goundwork for legal action.

Whether the town administration yielded too much in the settlement is something the directors will have to decide. But if that is the arrangement that was necessary to end Vincent's connection with the town, they will have to accept it.

It will be difficult enough as it is to get the new revaluation done in time. If Vincent had emained, he would have been totally ineffective in the face of opposition from the

A growing number of "foreign" cars on the roads are actually being built in America. In the past 10 years, according to the General Accounting Office. oreign automakers have invested about $5 billion n plants in the United States to assemble mobiles and light trucks. The foreign brands with U.S. plants include Honda, Nissan, Toyota, Mazda and Subaru.

On the surface, that looks like a plus for people who want to buy American and still get the features of a foreign car. But the United Auto Workers union is afraid the trend of foreign investors will cost American autoworkers jobs in the long run. The foreign makers bring many of their own workers They rely more heavily on foreign-made parts. Future of Social Security The question of whether there will be any Social Security funds left for the baby boomers rests in part on some complicated math by the Social ecurity Administration. The agency figures that this year or next will be what it calls the "imbalance year" - the year when the expected payouts from the system will begin to come within 5 percent of the average expected revenues over the next 75 years. As long as the balance is larger than 5 percent, Social Security is said to be "in close actuarial balance."

That doesn't mean that Social Security is broke, but it is the early warning indicator for the administration to begin making some changes to keep the fund solvent. The imbalance year is the equation the Social Security Administration uses to keep ahead of any possible failure in the system. The baby boomers are reaching their prime earning years, and that means a buildup of Social Security reserves. But in about 20 years, the front line of the baby boomers will begin to retire and start draining the funds. In 2019, the money paid out to Social Security recipients is expected to surpass the money paid in by the working

Convention politics

Leaders of both parties are wringing their hands over the upcoming nominating conventions. The party with the best convention could impress the voters enough to sway the election. Yet each party stands a good chance of ending up with a ho-hum nominee. And each party also has an unpopular former president who wants to speak during prime time. The Republicans don't know what to do with Richard Nixon and the Democrats don't see how they can snub Jimmy Carter in his own hometown Atlanta. Both ex-presidents will probably be invited to speak. Unhappily for the Republicans, their convention is the same month as the next scheduled space shuttle launch, an event sure to capture the headlines. They have quietly asked NASA to get the shuttle in orbit before the

Machinists on strike

BUSINESS

BERLIN - Emhart's Hardware Division opened today with management filling in for about 700 workers who voted to strike Saturday after negotiations on a new, three-year contract broke down

Raymond W. Neiman, vice president for industrial relations at the plant here, said negotiations between the company and the Machinists Union broke off at 4: 30 a.m. Saturday. The old three-year contract expired a midnight Friday.

Neiman said the division will be open with managers handling most of the worker's duties. The workers voted to strike hours after negotiations on a new three-year contract broke down, Albert R. Gonzalez, president of the union, could not be reached for comment by elephone Sunday at the union's headquarters in New Britain.

Neiman declined to comment on the issues involved in the negotiations. He said the company, which began negotiations with the union April 6, made its final offer Friday night. "It is very premature to discuss issues

Administrators again this spring are trying to match up students who fill out a secret list of their top five choices for a prom date. School officials a ballots and try to get interested students together. Some 60 students attended last year's prom because of the dating service, said principal

"Everything is done at the highest level of discretion because nobody wants anyone to be embarrassed; that's not the purpose of this," she said. "The purpose of it is to get as many seniors to the prom as we can get there because we really believe it's a fun evening."

Proms fell out of favor with high school students in the 1970s, but their popularity has increased in recent years, Ms. Lindsay said. But finding a date for the evening is still nervewracking. The school's dating service takes the fear out of finding a date because school officials serve as intermediaries, she said. 'I think it's a little less threatening because the girl knows she's going to be asked," said athletic irector Tim Flannery.

The dating service was an outgrowth of a program first held three years ago to acquaint idents with prom attire and etiquette. Ms. Lindsay said she had noticed how uncomfortab students seemed at the prom because of the formal "While they aren't major faux pas, kids would

"Everything's to get them there. You have too many people sitting back, bashful, embarrassed, said guidance counselor Bill DeLisio. The senior prom is a couples-only affair, while students don't need a date to attend an all-night party at the school afterwards.

Senior class president Cindy Costanzo, 17, thinks the dating service is a good idea because she thinks most students want to attend the prom... "I don't know about the guys, but I know the girls talk about it all year. And it takes a lot of the pressure off, because you know someone else is pulling for you, too," she said.

Cindy is one of those using the dating service this year, and she's not shy about admitting it. "I filled one out in a roomful of people. I had three names question, with the possibility of a suspension for hitting Pallone hanging in the air.

The reaction from the fans brought tightened security Sunday for the final game of the series with the Mets. A guard stood watch outside the umpires' quarters at the stadium. The public address announcer skipped the custom of naming the umpires before the game. There were no problems in Sunday's game, which the Mets won 11-0. Pallone has declined comment on Saturday's game, which heated up with a bench-clearing fight in the seventh inning.

North East Pass Dbl. Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: • 7

Asleep at the switch By James Jacoby

I don't sympathize with East's failure to open the bidding. Although much of his strength is in overvalued suit. I would bid in first position. South is probably right to bid only three spades after partner's takeout double, and North is wise not to barge double, and North is wise not to barge into game, but the play for 10 tricks in spades is not that bad. All that is needed is a reasonable diamond division and his contract. and the club queen with West. In today's deal, correct defense should de-feat even three spades, but West foolthought banged down ace and a heart. After all, East might have only one heart. Declarer took the king of hearts and shed a club. He ruffed a heart, WINTHROP by Dick Cavalli drew trumps ending in his hand and played a club. When West played low. e rose with the king and lost only one elub trick. How did South know to go up with the club king? Since East had much of his strength is in overvalued queens and jacks, a id the value of the Q-J doubleton is questionable, he still has 12 high-card points and a six-card suit. I would hid in first position. have opened the bidding. But if West follows his partner's suit-preference declarer will have to lose five tricks

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" ishly ignored his partner's signal.

After leading his singleton diamond, (written with his father, the late Os-West was pleased to see East get in wald Jacoby) are now available at with his spade ace and return the dia-mond three. West ruffed and without a bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

'Necessity' unintentional humor

NEW YORK - With just a touch-up here and there, "Necessity" could be a fine satire on the made-for-TV movie genre.

"Necessity" stars Loni Anderson as a nodel named Lauren LaSalle who is living an dyllic life with husband and darling baby girl when, suddenly, after several years marriage, she realizes that her husband is a cocaine dealer Apparently she has never asked why he has helicopter and several hit men hanging around their fabulous upstate New York While this woman is clearly no mental giant, she does figure out how to swipe $2 million of hubby's drug money, establish new identity in California and launder the funds through stock market transactions. But "Necessity" does intend to be taken

CBS' black hole of ratings, so no one, neither friends nor colleagues nor relatives, nor anyone else for that matter, need ever know. Back to Lauren, who, once ensconced in Los Angeles, takes flying lessons. Is she going to forget the kid and start a new life as a commercial airline pilot? No way! She's going to go back to New York and swoop down and pluck her child from the evil influences of her husband, who is busy obsessing in artful

Which brings us to the subject of bizarre JAMES NAUGHTON, who plays the "dese-and-dose" drug dealing husband, most recently starred in Paul Newman's film of double exposures about the wrong she has

Both are fine stage actors. Are their agents elling them they better grab this turkey while they can, since they might never work

Anyway, Charlie must tell Lauren, who is quite good at high-speed car chases, that Since Charlie has a kid of his own, and can use $50,000, he agrees to pilot the babynapping plane himself.

The getaway goes awry, of course, so Lauren slaps baby in a car seat and takes off on a high-speed truck-helicopter chase through the hills and vales. Lauren apparently believes it is better to risk Baby's necl stunt-driving over brushy cliffs and mowing down fences than leave her to grow up or daddy's drug money.

All this set-up is just so wonderfully kitsch, it's hard to believe the ending is even better In fact, it's so good, it's worth taping, just for the slow-mo dialogue and 12 gunshots pumpe
