Players' parents may sue CIAC

By Len Auster

A lawsuit which seeks to restore eligibility for more than a dozen tennis players suspended from high school matches after they participated in an outside tournament will likely be filed against the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference, an attorney says.

Sandy Plepler, of the firm Plepler, Barlow & Ruel, said Friday the suit will be brought by one of the athlete's parents and will likely be filed in Superior Court in Hartford Monday or Tuesday. "Several (parents) have given permission. We have . . . 19 parents' names. We're trying to put things together and file either Monday or Tuesday. We don't have the luxury of time. We need to seek relief for these kids right away."

Players from Manchester, Glastonbury, Rockville, Windham, East Catholic and Cheney Tech were declared ineligible by the CIAC for the rest of the season for violating the rule that prohibits outside play once a season is started. They had participated in the Manchester Racquet Club junior championships last weekend.

Eight members of the Manchester High boys' tennis team and the No. 1 player for the Manchester High girls' squad were among those declared ineligible.

"We're trying to piece it together ourselves and seek some relief for these kids who are innocent victims from what seems to be an archaic rule," Plepler said.

According to Tom Rodden, one of the teaching professionals at the Manchester Racquet Club, the practice of private clubs holding junior championships is common. "This situation is rampant throughout the state and everyone knows it. Just our kids are being discriminated against," he said.

Rodden, whose son plays for the Glastonbury High School team, said that members of that

Pillowtex makes final offer, denies unfair labor charges

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

A vice president for Pillowtex Corp. says he "categorically and in every way" denies four unfair labor charges brought by the union representing more than 70 workers who will lose their jobs when the plant closes.

Richard E. Kerner, vice president of personnel at Pillowtex's Dallas office, also said the company has made its final offer for employee benefits to the union, despite "substantial differences" in both sides' positions.

The union filed four unfair labor charges with the National Labor Relations Board Friday and is seeking an injunction to prevent the closing of the Manchester plant at the end of the month.

The company and union have been meeting for the past two weeks to bargain over severance pay and other benefits for workers, but haven't reached an agreement, said Robert Madore, president of United Auto Workers Local 376.

Madore said earlier this week both sides are "running into problems" reaching an agreement on bargaining proposals and the union wants to continue to meet with the company.

Kerner said Friday the company won't change its position, but would meet with the union if the union wants to make a different offer. Neither Madore nor Kerner would reveal details of the bargaining proposals.

"We have substantial differences between our positions," Kerner said. But, he added, "We've presented our final proposal."

One of the unfair labor charges is that the company is bargaining without the intent of reaching an agreement.

Kerner said he hasn't seen or heard about the unfair labor practice charges.

"We categorically and in every way deny that there have been any violations," Kerner said.

The charges include complaints that the company bargained with individual employees instead of with the union, which Madore said affected the union's bargaining package. Madore said on April 25, the day the closing was announced to employees, company officials told workers what benefits they were entitled to, benefits that are subject to negotiation, according to Madore.

That charge is "completely false," Kerner said.

The union is also accusing the company of regressive bargaining, which means the company presented different benefit proposals to individual employees than it put on the bargaining table. Pillowtex offered employees a five-month continuation of insurance at company rates, but in bargaining offered a three-month continuation and later modified it to four, Madore said.

"We did not bargain regressively, period," Kerner said.

Madore said the NLRB must decide if the injunction request has merit, but he thought it might be considered moot since closing plans are already in effect.

Kerner said the plant will likely close at the end of May, "give or take a couple of days."

Van Gogh, Cezanne art stolen

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Art thieves smashed a window in the Municipal Museum early Friday and stole three masterpieces worth up to $52 million, including works by Vincent Van Gogh and Paul Cezanne. It was the biggest art theft in Dutch history.

The burglars broke a ground-floor window before dawn in the museum's north wing, which is relatively sheltered from public view, said museum spokesman Maarten Bertheux. The thieves then walked through five galleries to reach the room where the works were hanging, he said.

Stolen were "Carnations," an 1888 work by the Dutch painter Van Gogh; "Bottle with Apples," a still life painted in 1894 by the French master Cezanne; and "The House of Maitre Billaud in Nevers," an 1874 painting by Dutch artist Johan Jongkind.

Two other valuable Van Gogh paintings, "The Diggers" and "The Rocking Chair," were hanging in the same gallery but were not taken. Rini Dippel, the museum's deputy director, said they may have been left because they are substantially larger than the others.

Museum director Wim Beeren said the stolen paintings are worth an estimated $52 million, although experts from Christie's auction house in London estimated their worth at $11 million.

The Municipal Museum houses a collection of about 3,000 works from the 19th and 20th centuries and is next door to the Van Gogh Museum, which has 220 paintings by the Dutch master, the world's largest collection.

Beeren and other art experts speculated that the theft was commissioned by a private art collector, since the Van Gogh and the Cezanne are too famous to be sold publicly and since the other Van Gogh works weren't taken.

Tennis players school's boys' team who played in the Glastonbury Tennis Forum junior championships were declared ineligible for the rest of the year. That leaves the team with two players.

Rodden said many tennis players involved in private clubs are penalized under the rule. "If you look at the letter of the law, all these kids are ineligible, too," he said.

Manchester High Athletic Director Mike Simmons and Rockville Athletic Director John Williams appealed directly to the CIAC Board of Control on Thursday but their appeal was denied. Manchester High School Principal Jacob Ludes, who is chairman of the CIAC, said he's asked the organization's tennis committees to look into the matter.

"I've asked them to see if this in fact is a wide-ranging problem in the state. I don't know what the (boys and girls) committees will do, but the problem needs to be addressed, if it is a wide-ranging problem."

Manchester High School was accused of not supporting the athletes, according to one source. Ludes denied the charge vehemently. "I intend to push the committees vigorously to look at this and expect a full report. We feel very badly about these kids who are innocent victims in this."

The matter was brought to the attention of Manchester assistant athletic director Joe Erardi when the results of the Manchester Racquet Club Junior Championships were published in an article that appeared in the Manchester Herald on Tuesday.

"A copy of the newspaper was brought to (Erardi) and he was asked if he had seen it," Ludes said. "The complaint was registered by a member of our coaching staff, which is another matter."

Woman who killed student found dead by SWAT team

By William C. Hidlay
The Associated Press

WINNETKA, Ill. — A woman opened fire in an elementary school, killing one child and critically wounding five others Friday. She was found dead when a SWAT team stormed a house where she had wounded a seventh person.

"I've just received information that the suspect has been found and she is dead," Police Chief Herbert Timm said about 7:30 CDT.

"The situation is over. I don't have any information about how she died. She has been found in the home, and she is dead. There have been no other injuries,"

Timm said.

The woman, whom authorities identified as Lori Dann, 30, was carrying at least two handguns when she opened fire in a classroom of the one-story, red-brick Hubbard Woods Elementary School, killing a child and wounding five others.

A hostage negotiating team arrived at the house moments after the woman took it over around 11:30 a.m., Timm said. Ms. Dann spoke by telephone to her parents, who were brought to the house in hopes of talking her out.

Asked why police had not attempted to storm the house earlier, Timm replied, "We've had seven people shot already."

We're not going in there without taking every precaution."

Timm said he decided to send the SWAT team into the house after repeated efforts by police and Ms. Dann's parents failed to contact her.

He said the SWAT team was accompanied by FBI agents using sound-detecting devices to try to detect any movement in the house.

Timm said police had yet to establish a motive for the rampage.

"There was blood all over the classroom and desks knocked over" as the children panicked during the 15 minutes the shooting lasted, said Glencoe Patrolman John Cegleski.

Money crunch stifles spending at Pentagon

By Norman Black
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Government accounting practices and the deficit-reduction drive prompted the Pentagon on Friday to stop buying office supplies, ban overtime and limit civilian hiring for at least the next six weeks.

All new contracts for research and development work also have been put on hold temporarily, as have purchases of everything from magazine and newspaper subscriptions to television sets, library materials, recreation equipment, lawn mowers and furniture.

Tools, paint, lumber, air conditioners and forklifts also are on the prohibited list for the time being, as are plans to lease cars, office space or computer equipment.

The new restrictions, ordered by Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV, will remain in place at least through June 30.

They were prompted by the terms of a deficit-reduction compromise reached by President Reagan and Congress last November. That compromise was crafted to control government outlays — the amount of money actually spent during a fiscal year.

Within the Defense Department, however, the number that counts is one known as budget authority — the amount of money that can be obligated, regardless of when it is going to be spent.

Arms treaty 'cheating' link is KO'd

By Lawrence L. Knutson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Amid growing pressure from Republican leaders to speed action, the Senate on Friday crushed a bid by the GOP's right wing to tie the U.S.-Soviet medium-range missile treaty to ending Kremlin cheating on other arms control accords.

All five sections of the amendment offered by Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, were overwhelmingly rejected in back-to-back roll call votes of 85-11, 87-10, 86-11, 82-15 and 89-8.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas repeatedly urged his GOP colleagues to "start making real progress" on the treaty so President Reagan can take a ratified agreement with him when he leaves on Wednesday for his May 29 Moscow summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

One Democrat, Sen. James R. Exon, D-Nebr., said the president will be partly to blame if he goes to Moscow with the treaty unratified and said Reagan "should put his foot down" and demand the support of Republican senators.

Exon said passage of the Symms proposal would "cripple the president as he represents the United States and the free world" at the Moscow summit. The Symms amendment, which was opposed by the White House, would have barred the treaty from going into effect until Reagan was able to certify the Soviet Union was in full compliance with five previous arms control agreements.

It noted that Reagan previously has told Congress the Soviets are in violation of the SALT I and SALT II arms-limitation treaties, a 1983 pact banning open-air nuclear tests, a 1925 Geneva Protocol ban on chemical weapons and the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

Symms said his amendment "simply means that the treaty does not go into effect until the president can report the Soviets are in compliance with existing arms treaties."

But Dole called the proposal a "killer amendment" and other senators denounced it as "nonsense," "extraneous" and an obvious attempt to slow Senate consideration of the pact.

The Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty requires the destruction of all U.S. and Soviet missiles with a range of 300 miles to 3,400 miles.

Treaty supporters said the pact is not a gift to the Soviets but is in the national security interest of the United States and stands on its own merits.

Dole said the president's record in combating Soviet arms control violations is beyond question.

In deciding to move ahead with the INF treaty, Dole said, "the president had to weigh all the factors and make a decision. ... Is there any member of this chamber who thinks that Ronald Reagan failed to consider Soviet violations?"

rizes $100 million for the Navy to buy a new ship, the Navy has $100 million in multi-year budget authority but might pay out only $10 million for work performed the first year.

All that makes it difficult for the Pentagon to project precisely how much it will pay out in a fiscal year.

Taft said the Pentagon now has to worry as well about the fiscal 1988 outlay estimate contained in the deficit-reduction agreement — $277.3 billion.

Kids learn reading fun

Washington School loves DEAR program

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Reading has become fun for students at Washington School. More than 225 of the school's 330 students recently participated in the school's voluntary Drop Everything And Read (DEAR) program, said Donna Moran, school reading consultant.

Moran learned about the program after watching a television show about it. She said the program emphasized how important reading is for students.

The students read a total of 1,831 hours, she said.

"I gave suggestions on reading and how very important it is in academics," Moran said. "Reading is a skill. It needs to be practiced."

The school implemented the program in an effort to make reading more of a common practice with students, she said.

"It encourages children ... to read," Moran said. "Sometimes it's hard to turn off the TV and turn down that soccer game."

The success of the program surprised Moran, especially since it was done on a voluntary basis. "I was thrilled (with the results). I was very pleased," she said.

Students also were pleased with the results. Two Grade 3 students, Brittany Behrmann and Michael Thompson, excelled in the program.

Behrmann said she loved the program "because you can read books and tell how much you like them."

Thompson said he is going to continue reading even though the program has been completed.

"I got to read a lot of books I never read," he said. "I think I learned a lot of books are good to read. You shouldn't not read. You should read some books."

Classes that read the most hours were: Dorothy Matzdorff's Grade 1 class, Millicent Koski's Grade 2 class, Margery Bialeck's Grade 3 class, Roberta H. Bryce's Grade 6 class and Joan E. Thuck's Grade 6 class.

The school's Parent-Teacher Association awarded the classes $50 each. The money will be used to purchase more books for each school's library.

Meotti against busing proposal

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — State Sen. Michael P. Meotti said Friday he was against a proposal that would bus minority students from the cities into suburban schools.

Meotti, D-Glastonbury, spoke to the town Democratic committee. He refused in an interview after the meeting to say exactly when he would announce whether he would seek re-election. But he said it would be sometime before the 4th District State Senate Convention on July 18.

Former Republican state Sen. Carl Zinsser, whom Meotti defeated two years ago, announced his candidacy earlier this month. Meotti, though, said he was unconcerned at this point with Zinsser.

"I've been too busy doing the people's work to worry about him," Meotti said.

While supporting a proposed change in the state educational funding formula, Meotti said he was against a report by the state Department of Education that calls for minority students from urban schools to be bused into suburban schools. Manchester would be part of a 20-town area designated to receive minority students under the proposal.

"I don't support the idea of spending money on transportation. I'd rather spend it on education," Meotti said. "I don't think I would be supportive of a plan that would permit redistricting schools ... and putting people on buses for 45 minutes to an hour in each direction."

But he said he might support other efforts to make sure schools are integrated.

"It's a societal problem. We should be a more mixed community throughout the whole country," he said. "But ... you can't solve the problem" busing students.

Meotti also spoke on recycling efforts throughout the state. Recycling will become mandatory in Connecticut in 1991.

The state will help town recycling efforts by becoming a buyer of recyclable goods, Meotti said.

Meotti also took jabs at the Republican party, both statewide and nationally. He said Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, a Democrat, will make a great president, if elected.

"We've got a candidate ... we can be proud of," he said. "We've got the candidate who come the fall ... is not going to have to be racing for the finish line with General (Manuel) Noriega of Panama and a group of drug dealers on his shoulder and with Attorney General Edwin Meese on the other shoulder dragging him down from the start."

On the state level, Meotti said the Republicans don't have their "act together," so they spend much of their time trying to embarrass the Democrats.

"You get up to the State Capitol, what I've seen in two years I've been up there absolutely astounds me at times," he said. He said the Republicans spend their time "rushing around" and rarely offer anything substantial to counter Democratic proposals.

Nurse honored

Nancy Hasty Miller, a staff nurse of the Manchester Visiting Nurses Association, has been awarded this year's annual "Excellence in Oncology Nursing" award for the Manchester North Unit of the American Cancer Society. Nominations for the award are made by patients, employers and nurses. Miller was recognized at a special program in May, sponsored by the Connecticut Division of the American Cancer Society.

Inspector choice likely in June

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

The town could hire a new chief building inspector by the end of June to replace Russell Davidson when he becomes the inspector for the Pavilions at Buckland Hills, Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Werbner said Friday.

Six applications for the job of chief building inspector have been received by the town, Werbner said. Applications for the position, which has a salary range of $34,297 to $41,156, closed on Monday. Werbner said he had not yet reviewed the applications.

Davidson, 66, has been an inspector in the building department for 10 years and has been the chief building inspector for the past four years. He will remain on the job as chief inspector until a replacement is hired.

The inspector for the $70 million mall project would work full time to make sure that all aspects of the building meet town and state standards. Davidson suggested to the administration last month that he be hired for the post because of his experience in the construction field.

Werbner said that he hopes to hold an oral examination for the six applicants for Davidson's job sometime in the second week in June. If there is a qualified applicant, a new chief building inspector could be hired a week later, he said.

As inspector for the mall project, Davidson would have a contract with the town for three years. He would receive the same salary and benefits as he receives now.

The mall inspector's salary would be paid for from the building permits for the mall, which are expected to bring in $300,000 in revenue.

Editor's Note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizen's Center.

By Joe Dominico
Activities Specialist

Greetings:
Big thanks are in order to the following individuals who donated their time and talents in the greenhouse this year. They are as follows: Joe Roginka, Tom Wright, Cyrus Cajal, Carl Swanson, Wes Johnson, Bill Valente, Ted Kaysiak, Hank Bartley, Adolph Yeske, Fred Hutt, Burton Hicock, John Zelane, Mike Reardon, and John Scheibenflug. Also, a big thanks to our patrons who have supported our plant sale over the years. Remember all the proceeds from the plant sale go to help defray the cost of our meals program.

The Senior Center, in observance of Father's Day, will be sponsoring a "Men's Day." From 10 to 11:30 a.m., two videos entitled "Legends of Golf" and "Champions of American Sports" will be shown. Donuts and coffee will be served at intermission. Lunch will be served from 11:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Beginning at 12:45, our featured guest will be Mary Dunphy, who will demonstrate the "Art of Belly Dancing."

Ladies, this is a good time to get your husbands or boyfriends out to see what the center is all about. Remember, lunch tickets are $1.50 and will be sold until June 7 at noon.

Individuals who own a microwave and would like to learn more about its uses are encouraged to attend our Microwave Class on June 15 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. The class is free of charge and will cover "microwaving for one or two." The instructor will be Ann Holden of the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Connecticut. Interested individuals should call the center to register.

Jan Sayre, our program assistant, will be offering a demonstration of Dried Flower Arranging on June 2 at 10 a.m. Jan will discuss the air drying, sand drying, and silica gel techniques as well as the varieties of flowers. Enthusiasts are encouraged to attend.

The Senior Center will be offering its last Driver's Education class until the fall on June 14 and 15 from 12:30 to 4 p.m. Individuals completing the class will receive a 5 percent reduction in their insurance premium, as mandated by state law. Fee for the class is $7 (payable by check to AARP), and must be presented with the application form.

Please make note of the following trips:
1) Coachlight — "Singing in the Rain", June 1, filled.

2) Wildwood — June 5-9, $204. Call Senior Travel at 875-0538.

Connecticut Historical Society — June 8, includes photography exhibit of the way it was during WWII. $2, register May 25 at 9:30 a.m.

Please make note of the following health department classes:

Tuesday, Nutritional Lectures by Gloria Weiss, 9:30-10:30 a.m.

Wednesday, Stress Class, 9:30-11:30 a.m.

Thursday, Manchester Memorial Hospital presentation of Emergency Room Care and Discharge Procedure.

Lastly, best wishes to Helen Grady, Sylvia Yeske and Bill Hansen, who are in Manchester Memorial Hospital, and Mrs. Jenny McCreedy in Crestfield. Also best wishes to Sabby DiMarco who is home recuperating. Deepest sympathy to Dorothy Hamilton on the loss of her brother.

Making music Dual concert nets reward

By Jacqueline Bennett

COVENTRY — They made beautiful music together.

A week after the North Stafford High School Band from Stafford, Virginia, and the Coventry High School Band performed together, their audience is still buzzing. The two bands performed together at the high school last Saturday night to a sold out crowd of 700 people.

"It was tremendous — a real success," Carl Salina, band director for the high school, said of the concert this week.

Salina arranged for the Virginia band to come as part of his annual exchange plan. Ninety-three band members were in town from Thursday to Sunday, reciprocating a visit the Coventry High School Band made to Stafford in April. Each group stayed with members' families during the visits.

"We match them up by instruments," Salina said.

In addition to the concert, the bands went to Mystic Seaport, Boston, and a Friday night dance at the high school.

Salina has had an exchange concert for each of the 22 years he has been director. Band members have been to England twice and Canada four times.

"This year I was interested in going south," he said.

Already he is set to go to England again next year and Canada in 1990. The following year, the exchange will be with the Virginia band again.

Musically, Salina notes, the bands learned they were both excellent with totally different emphasis. "North Stafford is concert-oriented, whereas we put on a total show," he said.

Coventry High School features soloists and has specialty performances, like those of their polka band. "We like to have fun. That spills over to the audience," said Salina.

And that certainly happened Saturday.

Naab named by Weicker

Republican Town Director Geoffrey Naab has been named Manchester coordinator in the political campaign of U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr., R-Conn, who is seeking election to his fourth term in November.

Frank Falana has been named coordinator for the campaign in Coventry, Marilyn Horton for Hebron, and Ylo Anson for Andover.

"Even though it's early in the campaign, I am seeing a great deal of support for my re-election at the grassroots level," Sen. Weicker said. "That support is due in large part to the dedication and hard work of these coordinators," he added.

Sister Mary Forcier

WEST HARTFORD (AP) — Sister Mary Madeleine Forcier, former administrator of St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center, died Friday at Convent of Mary Immaculate. She was 84.

Sister Forcier served as administrator of St. Francis Hospital in Hartford from 1962 to 1973. Under Sister Forcier's leadership, the hospital completed an $18.5 million expansion project, which included the McGovern Pavilion and completion of the Archbishop O'Brien Building. Also during her tenure, the hospital established the first coronary care unit in the state and opened the region's only cystic fibrosis clinic.

Sister Forcier joined the hospital's staff in 1927 and served as head nurse, medical secretary, instructor in the hospital's School of Nursing and assistant administrator.

Sister Forcier entered the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph in 1924.

Tribal chief dies

BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe (AP) — A tribal chief who witnessed the arrival of some of the first white settlers nearly a century ago has died at age 109, it was reported Friday.

Chief Wavela Mazetese, from the Mwenezi district of Matabeleland province in western Zimbabwe, died in his village Sunday after a short illness, the state-owned Chronicle newspaper said.

Landers cites district problems

By Alex Girell
Manchester Herald

Eighth District Director Thomas Landers, seeking election Wednesday as district president, says that three main challenges facing the district can be overcome.

Landers, who is being opposed for the presidency by Perry Dodson, former chairman of Save Our Sewers, said in a campaign statement issued Friday that the projects are completion of a sewer to serve residents of North Main Street and Tolland Turnpike, acquiring a fire station to serve the Buckland area, and converting the former Willis garage to district offices and a meeting place.

"We are close to an agreement with the town government."

Lebanon man faces charges

A Lebanon man faces three motor vehicle charges, including reckless driving, in connection with his arrest Friday after a reported domestic disturbance.

Steven E. Davis, 26, of Second Street in Lebanon, was sought in connection with a disturbance on Russell Street. He faces charges of threatening, engaging an officer in pursuit, operating a vehicle without headlights, reckless driving, and operating without insurance, police said.

Police said they arrested Davis after responding to a report by a Russell Street woman who heard a couple arguing in the parking lot near her home, police said. The resident said she heard Davis say, "I beat you last night, I'll beat you again," the report said.

Police said Davis's sister reported that his girlfriend had been assaulted the previous night but was afraid to report it. Police then went to the girlfriend's house and when the couple drove up, police saw the girlfriend's left eye was bruised but she refused to comment on how she got the injury, police said.

Davis began shouting obscenities at the police and was verbally abusive, police said. The car he was driving was registered to a New London woman but New London police couldn't reach her, the report said.

Davis was released on $1,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Superior Court Wednesday, police said.

Landers said in connection with the garage. He said if no compromise can be reached with the town under which the district can acquire the town-owned fire station on Tolland Turnpike, "We must build our own station to serve our residents in the that area."

In an obvious reference to Dodson, who has campaigned on a platform calling for a peaceful solution to the disputes between the town and the district, Landers said that it "takes more than calling yourself a 'peace candidate' to achieve peace."

"I have been working since November with other board members to get an agreement with the town," Landers said.

Dodson had said Landers is too abrasive.

Landers has won the support of attorney Robert Bletchman, who had considered and then abandoned the idea of running for the presidency on a platform of trying to achieve an agreement with the town. In a letter of endorsement, Bletchman said that although he has not always agreed with Landers on the provisions of an agreement with the town, "I believe that Tom shares my deep commitment to attaining a lasting peace."

Landers has also won the support of Thomas R. O'Marra Sr. and Andrew Katkauskas, both district firefighters.

In his campaign statement, Landers said the district would have to bond only about $350,000 to build a sewer to serve Tolland Turnpike and North Main Street because the district has already set aside $550,000 toward the estimated $900,000 cost of the residential sewer.

As for the Willis garage conversion, Landers said, "To let this building sit idle for any extended period would be a waste of money already expended and would deny the district the offices and meeting halls that are accessible to the handicapped which are required by law."

At the April 29 public hearing on the district budget, Dodson and some other district residents criticized the directors for planning to go forward with a $300,000 expenditure for conversion of the garage before the district had built a fire station for Buckland.

The critics said the garage could be left idle for a while if necessary.

Landers told the Manchester Herald Friday that if it comes to a choice between building a firehouse and converting the garage to offices, he agrees the firehouse should come first. But he said the district should be able to handle all three projects.

In his statement, Landers said, "When these projects are completed, the Eighth District will have $2 million in bonds outstanding. We will have met our obligations to protect and to serve the residents of the Eighth District into the next century."

Future teachers picked

HARTFORD — A carpenter, a mail clerk and a chemist were among the 111 people named Friday to participate in a new, eight-week summer program that could lead to a Connecticut teaching license.

The teacher-licensing program has been criticized by some teachers and college professors because it provides a shortcut to the classroom. The instruction program begins June 20 at Wesleyan University.

The institute, an arm of the Connecticut Department of Higher Education, is seeking to attract liberal arts graduates or successful people into teaching careers by removing normal teaching-training requirements.

The first class of 111 people was selected from a pool of 400 applicants.

Those who complete the course will get two years of on-the-job training compared to the one year provided for teachers who complete traditional programs.

Actress gets degree

NEW HAVEN — Southern Connecticut State University awarded actress Susan Saint James an honorary degree during the school's 93rd commencement ceremony Friday.

Saint James received a doctor of humane letters degree in recognition of her contributions to the international Special Olympics.

She was only the second person to be awarded an honorary doctorate by the university. Former Yale president A. Bartlett Giamatti was the first recipient last year.

Undergraduate and graduate degrees were awarded to 2,017 students, 200 more than last year.

Drug dealer sentenced

HARTFORD — An admitted drug dealer who helped convict a former federal prosecutor has been sentenced to one year in prison for his participation in the crime.

The prosecution agreed to the one-year sentence for Thomas Cardillo, 38, of Wethersfield because he had been "an extreme aid in the trial of Paul Sherbacov in getting a conviction," said Assistant State's Attorney Herbert Appleton.

Cardillo pleaded guilty Thursday in Hartford Superior Court to a reduced charge of possession of cocaine with intent to sell for paying Sherbacov $16,000 in cash for 500 grams of cocaine in 1986.

Fiberglass tied to ill

WETHERSFIELD — Fiberglass insulation may be largely responsible for continuing health problems among some of the 250 workers in a state Department of Transportation building, state investigators say.

"Test results showed fiberglass fibers had accumulated on cabinets and desks in areas where a number of workers had complained," said Emil Caruso, director of the state Division of Occupational Safety and Health.

He said Thursday it appears the fibers came from loose insulation around air ducts above a false ceiling and were sucked into the building's air system.

Error freed suspect early

NEW HAVEN — A man accused of severely beating a 72-year-old woman had been mistakenly let out of prison three months early and should have been in jail when the assault occurred, officials said.

"It is unbearable to hear something like that," said John Cicarella, the victim's son-in-law.

Todd C. Taylor, 20, was freed from a detention center here April 22, less than two weeks before he allegedly beat, robbed and tried to sexually assault a woman in her home. The woman had nearly ever bone in her face broken. The clerical error that led to his early release was revealed after the New Haven Register pressed officials for an explanation of Taylor's time served in prison.

'Racism' at UConn

President supports planned protest

By Larry Rosenthal
The Associated Press

The president of the University of Connecticut at Storrs, reacting to complaints from a student group and a protest planned for Sunday during graduation, Friday condemned all racial harassment and abuse of Asian-American students.

John T. Casteen also said he supported the efforts of Asian-American students and faculty to publicize their concerns about anti-Asian racism and to seek cooperation in fighting it.

A small group of Asian-American students and an Asian-American professor at UConn announced this week they would hand out leaflets at graduation exercises this Sunday containing information about a racial incident at the school nearly six months ago.

The activity will take place outside the liberal arts graduation ceremony at the university fieldhouse.

The students said they were upset by the university's handling of a Dec. 3 racial incident, and by what they said was Casteen's failure to issue a public statement condemning the act and other racial abuse and harassment.

Professor Paul Bock, who was working with the students, said Friday night that he and the students would go on with their quiet protest despite the president's statement.

But Bock said he and the students were pleased by Casteen's statement, which he said they considered a "good beginning."

"We're pleased. There has been a lot of progress," he said. "This may serve as a model that you don't have to shout to get things done."

In addition to handing out leaflets, the students plan to distribute buttons which read, "Please Reduce Racism at UConn."

Bock said the students would still distribute their materials to make sure the general public is aware of the growing racial abuse being suffered by Asian-American students.

In his statement, Casteen said he shared the students' "outrage and alarm" over the increase in racial incidents.

"We sympathize with students who are in any sense victimized by others and we feel responsible to assist them," he said.

Casteen said he had asked representatives from the Asian-American student association to meet with the appropriate university committees and the board of trustees to discuss steps to be taken.

"The university is prepared to continue these discussions for as long as it may take to reach sound solutions," Casteen said.

About 450 Asian-Americans enrolled at the University of Connecticut in the fall of 1987, making them the second largest minority group at the university.

Beaten man is out of coma

HARTFORD (AP) — A retarded man who was left in a coma after he was severely beaten and robbed of $5 two months ago has regained consciousness and was transferred Friday to a hospital to begin long-term rehabilitation.

Larry Levesque, a 36-year-old Hartford resident, was moved from Mount Sinai Hospital in Hartford to New Britain General Hospital. He has been hospitalized since he was robbed and assaulted March 8 on a city street.

Levesque came out of his coma about three weeks ago, according to Sue Lewis, a spokeswoman for Mount Sinai. But his recovery was kept quiet until Levesque made enough progress to begin rehabilitation.

"He is awake, he is responding and talking," she said. Levesque appeared alert as he was carried on a stretcher from the hospital Friday for his short trip to the nearby New Britain hospital.

"He is alert. He has spoken to his family and friends," said Debbie Maulucci, the victim's sister who was on hand as her brother was moved from the Hartford hospital.

Levesque had been unable to talk or move until the past few days because he had been hooked to a respirator, which helped him breathe while in his coma, Lewis said.

Levesque, who is mildly retarded, was mugged as he returned home from his job as a dishwasher at the Sage-Allen & Co. store in downtown Hartford. He was knocked to the ground in the driveway of his parents home and his head was repeatedly slammed into a brick wall. His wallet containing $5 was stolen.

The attack sent shock waves through the community, where residents bitterly criticized the assault. Levesque had been taught never to fight. A reward fund was started immediately after the mugging and quickly swelled to more than $8,000.

Residents rallied together, with community leaders saying they needed to band together to fight crime in Hartford. Levesque's family received numerous letters and cards of support.

An intensive police effort resulted in the arrest of Norman Green, 25, of Hartford, one day after the mugging. He faces charges of criminal attempt to commit murder, first-degree robbery and first-degree assault.

Yale plans new ethics program

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Yale University announced Friday the creation of a new program in public philosophy and ethics, with the program's director saying the need for attention to such issues may be greater now more than ever.

The program, which will be in the planning stage during the 1988-89 academic year, is an interdisciplinary initiative designed to promote scholarship and teaching on fundamental questions about public life, said Benno C. Schmidt Jr., Yale's president.

Professor Douglas W. Rae, a specialist in the study of political ideology and public institutions, was named program director.

The current importance of scholarly attention to issues of public philosophy is "perhaps without historical parallel," said Rae.

He said the urgency was due to such developments as the concentration of power and control in "massive public bureaucracies," the emergence of a single debt and credit structure for the world economy and the rise of "military forces capable of presenting an instant threat to any place on earth."

"These developments pose moral questions that are beyond the reach of the technical rationality that spawned them," Rae said. The new program will draw together scholars at Yale from the fields of philosophy, political science, law, divinity, economics and history.

Schmidt said the program will "encourage the integration of knowledge which the disciplinary specialization of the contemporary university tends to separate."

Stanford and only a few other universities currently offer such a program.

Last Wells Fargo defendant gets bail

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Filiberto Ojeda Rios was freed on $1 million bail Friday, ending a record 32 months of pretrial detention on charges he helped mastermind a $7 million Wells Fargo robbery to finance a violent separatist movement in Puerto Rico.

Ojeda was released after U.S. District Court Judge T. Emmet Clarie certified that title to three pieces of real estate in Puerto Rico was being transferred to the government, securing the defendant's $1 million bail.

"I have read it, I understand it, I agree to it voluntarily," Ojeda said of the terms of his release. A packed gallery burst into applause as he was pronounced free.

"It's good to breathe fresh air," he said moments later outside the courthouse, holding a full-sized Puerto Rican flag in front of him while family and friends waved smaller plastic versions of the flag behind him. "I think it's a victory of the people."

While awaiting trial with 15 other defendants, Ojeda must wear an electronic ankle bracelet that authorities will use to monitor his movements. He was released into the custody of his attorney, Richard J. Harvey, and will live in a Hartford apartment. But he won't be able to leave Hartford and will be able to move about the city only between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Clarie set Ojeda's trial date for Sept. 6. Asked outside the courthouse if he planned to appear for the trial, Ojeda said: "I do." No decision has been made whether defendants in the case will be tried together or separately.

But, he said, "I do not recognize the jurisdiction of the court and principles will be my line of guidance for future conduct. Principles, honor and particularly the honor of my people and my country are the elements that will serve as guidance as to whatever action I take in the future."

On Wednesday, Clarie rejected prosecution requests to set bond at $2.5 million for Ojeda, and he rejected the government's request that Ojeda be confined to the home of a defense attorney in what would have been a form of house arrest.

The judge also rejected a defense request that Ojeda be allowed to return to his native Puerto Rico to convalesce from April 11 triple-bypass heart surgery.

Authorities allege that the 55-year-old Ojeda is a Cuban agent who helped mastermind the September 1983 robbery of a Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford to finance activities of Los Macheteros, a violent group seeking Puerto Rican independence.

His release, Ojeda said, was "an accomplishment that I can take as a vindication of the Puerto Rican people. These are steps toward freedom."

"And freedom will only be achieved when the Puerto Rican people are free," he added.

Asked about his health, Ojeda said he was still "a little weak" but said being out of prison would mean a faster recovery. "Prison is not a proper place to recuperate."

Other Wells Fargo defendants are free on bonds ranging as high as $1.5 million. Clarie has previously denied bond for Ojeda five times. Prosecutors contend Ojeda is a risk to flee the country.

Ojeda's bond was being secured by three properties in Puerto Rico with a value of $126,000. These include two properties owned by his brother, Willibaldo Ojeda Rios, and property owned by his son, Edgardo Ojeda Serrano. Two of them were officially transferred to the government on Friday and paperwork on the third must be completed by Monday in Puerto Rico, Clarie said.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York last week ordered that bond be set and that Ojeda be freed by 5 p.m. Friday, saying further detention would violate his constitutional rights.

He was pronounced free at 5:38 p.m.

One piece of property could not formally be transferred to the government because a clerk in San Juan had gone home early Friday due to illness. It is to be transferred by Monday at 5 p.m. or, Clarie said, "the court will rescind bond."

U.S., Noriega OK deal

By George Gedda
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. and Panamanian negotiators have tentatively agreed on a deal that calls for Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to leave Panama for nine months starting this August and for the United States to drop drug smuggling indictments against him, an administration official said Friday.

The arrangement would give Noriega a role in setting up a transition government before leaving, said the official, who has followed the negotiations but insisted on anonymity.

The agreement, subject to final approval by both governments, allows Noriega to return to Panama for holidays and to go back permanently after presidential elections set for May 1989, said the official, who described himself as opposed to the arrangement.

He said Vice President George Bush has expressed reservations. However, one of Noriega's criminal attorneys in Miami said Friday night that no agreement has been reached.

"I've just talked to a high-ranking member of General Noriega's staff in Panama City, and he denies that any deal has been struck," Raymond Takiff said.

Roman Popadiuk, deputy White House press secretary, also denied that a tentative agreement had been reached.

"The talks have not broken down, nor has there been any agreement," he said. "The process still continues."

Noriega on Friday made no reference to the reports of a deal when he addressed thousands of supporters in the San Miguelito district outside the capital of Panama City.

CHEERS FOR NORIEGA — Panama military strongman General Manuel Antonio Noriega raises his fists to acknowledge the cheers of a crowd Friday in San Miguelito, Panama. Negotiators for the United States and Panama have reached a tentative agreement under which Noriega would step down as the nation's de facto leader.

Bush backing off policy; Dukakis, Jackson to talk

By David Espo
The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush took another step away from President Reagan's controversial negotiations with Panama's indicted leader Manuel Noriega on Friday. Democratic front-runner Michael Dukakis said he expects to meet regularly with Jesse Jackson as the primary season winds down.

Dukakis, who has generally not contested Jackson for the black vote in the primaries, also visited a predominantly black high school and was confronted by a student asking, "Is this a token visit?"

Replied the Massachusetts governor, "I've been in black schools for years."

Bush said nothing publicly on Noriega, but his maneuverings came two days after he declared that he would not negotiate with accused drug runners in this country or on foreign soil. At the time, he did not mention either Panama or its indicted leader, Noriega, by name.

But following the publication of a story Friday in The Washington Post, the vice president's chief of staff, Craig Fuller, issued a statement saying that "the administration sources who have suggested that the vice president favors ending the negotiations and bringing the envoy back to Washington are essentially correct."

The statement was issued just hours before sources disclosed a tentative agreement for Noriega to relinquish power and leave Panama temporarily in exchange for the Reagan administration dropping the drug indictment.

The Fuller statement was as close as Bush has come to publicly uttering words of disagreement with Reagan over his Panamanian policy, and came after several days of slippage in the public opinion polls and with many Republican allies urging him to air his differences with the president.

Dukakis, who has the Democratic nomination all but wrapped up, campaigned in California in advance of the state's June 7 primary.

He said he and Jackson, his sole remaining rival, met on Sunday and will "be meeting regularly." The Massachusetts governor did not say what he and Jackson would discuss in their talks, but his challenger has been pressing for a greater share of votes from "super delegates" to the Democratic National Convention.

Hostage deal thwarted

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Syrian-backed Amal militia claimed on Friday it had foiled an attempt by Iranian-backed guerrillas to trade a Western hostage for arms from a Christian militia.

The claim came as Amal and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, battled for the 15th day for control of the slums of south Beirut. Police said rival Palestinian factions clashed in house-to-house fighting in the nearby Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp.

Amal politburo member Atif Aoun told 10,000 Shlites in the south Lebanon town of Zahrani that Hezbollah had worked out an arms-for-hostage deal with the Lebanese Forces, the Christians' main militia.

Amal foiled the alleged swap "after we found out about contacts between Hezbollah and the Lebanese Forces," he said without elaboration.

'Last resort' Contra aid

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's plan to give cash to the Contra rebels inside Nicaragua is "a last resort" aimed at feeding the starving remnants of the guerrilla force, the head of the U.S. foreign aid program said Friday.

"There are people inside Nicaragua who are desperate ... we've had reports of people eating tree roots," Alan Woods, administrator of the Agency for International Development, told a Senate subcommittee.

Woods said AID plans to send cash at the rate of $1 per day per rebel, but is still working out the details.

A March 23 agreement between the Contras and Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government permits humanitarian aid to be sent to the rebels while the two sides hold peace talks.

But a dispute over how the aid should be delivered has meant no help has yet been sent, and the State Department came up with the cash plan as a substitute, Woods said.

Red ink is higher

WASHINGTON — Income tax payments in April helped shrink the federal budget deficit, but the monthly surplus was less than a year ago, leaving government red ink so far this year 24.6 percent higher than 1987, the Treasury Department said Friday.

The April surplus of $13.9 billion, representing the difference between what the government took in and what it spent last month, helped hold the deficit for the first seven months of the fiscal year to $165.0 billion.

But that figure was much higher than the $84.3 billion in red ink during the first seven months of fiscal year 1987, when the total annual deficit eventually amounted to $150.2 billion.

Economists say the April report indicates the Reagan administration will have a tough time meeting its goal of a $146.7 billion deficit for fiscal 1988, which ends Sept. 30, or even the Congressional Budget Office projection of $157 billion.

New Arizona probe

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Arizona's attorney general took initial steps Friday toward investigating Gov. Rose Mofford's expenditures of thousands of dollars in state funds on gifts and decorations when she was secretary of state.

Some of the spending appears to have lacked legislative authorization, according to records and interviews with officials, although the governor and a close aide said the Legislature had approved the funds.

"I have never misused any state funds," Mrs. Mofford said in a brief interview with radio station KFYI. "I never mispent a penny. It was appropriated for VIP gifts and I used it for that type of purpose. I never used anything for personal gain."

Mrs. Mofford, 65, became governor April 4 when Evan Mecham was removed from office upon being convicted in a Senate impeachment trial of misusing state funds and obstructing justice.

Lots of millionaires in the Senate

By Jim Luther
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senators gave the public a peek at their personal finances Friday, disclosing a generally well-to-do group that loves to talk for money, collects interesting gifts and leans toward conservative investments.

Release of the financial disclosure forms, required annually, showed there are far more millionaires in the Senate than are found in most other 100-member groups. Some, although not many, of the senators are not doing nearly so well, including Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., the former presidential candidate, and Robert W. Kasten, R-Wis.

Biden's assets, not including the family home, total only $21,000 and his liabilities are at least $260,000. But he earned more than $110,000 last year, including his $57,483 Senate salary.

Kasten reported assets of $21,000 to $45,000 and liabilities of $20,000 to $30,000.

Although it is likely that as many as three dozen senators are millionaires, it is difficult to determine real financial worth from reading the disclosure reports. Senators are required to report income, assets and liabilities only within a broad range; for example, a $10 million investment need be reported only as exceeding $250,000.

On that basis, John D. Rockefeller IV, D-W.Va., the Standard Oil heir who could be the Senate's richest member, is shown as having a net worth that could be as little as $132,000. Another millionaire, Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., put no dollar value on the trusts that make up the bulk of his wealth although he reported income of at least $596,747. Kennedy has the type of trusts whose worth are not subject to the disclosure law.

Some other millionaires and their minimum net worth:

Weicker, Dodd at opposite ends

By Christopher Callahan
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Connecticut's senators are at opposite ends of the Senate's financial ladder, with Lowell P. Weicker Jr. reporting millions in stocks, bonds and trusts while relatively modest IRA accounts are Christopher J. Dodd's biggest assets, according to Senate reports released Friday.

But both lawmakers relied heavily on speaking engagements to supplement their $89,500 Senate salary, making dozens of speeches around the country to various special-interest groups. Each earned more than $34,000 from honoraria last year, close to the maximum allowed by Congress.

Dodd also reported two Christmas gifts from long-time family friends — a $200 crystal bowl and a case of premium Scotch valued at $180. Friends paid for Weicker and his wife to fly to a tennis ranch in Arizona and later in the year to St. Croix, where he owns a condominium.

Weicker reported assets of at least $2.64 million with liabilities of $285,000 to $715,000. He reported 1987 income between $178,202 and $271,466.

Weicker earned at least $5,000 from renting his St. Croix condo, and received $3,000 for a "peace award" from the Unitarian Universalists of Philadelphia in addition to earnings from stocks, bonds and trusts.

On the other end of the financial spectrum, Dodd earned between $300 and $3,000 from two individual retirement accounts and a Senate credit union account. The accounts, his lone listed assets, are valued between $3,000 and $15,000. He reported no liabilities.

But Dodd made $37,350 from honoraria, including 21 speeches from Beverly Hills to New York and three op-ed pieces. He donated $4,450 to charity, keeping below the $35,000 honoraria limit imposed by the Senate.

John C. Danforth, R-Mo., a member of the Ralston-Purina family, $7.5 million; John Heinz, R-Pa., of the ketchup-and-pickle family, $10 million; Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., $1.9 million; Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., of the Squibb drug fortune, $1.9 million; Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, $1.2 million; Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., $1 million; John Warner, R-Va., $2.2 million; Chic Hecht, R-Nev., $1.6 million; and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., $2.5 million.

Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas won top honors in the talk-for-pay category last year. He reported $166,050, mostly for speechmaking, and gave $80,000 of it to charity. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who was in demand chiefly because of his role as senior Republican on the Senate Banking subcommittee on securities, picked up $47,350 in honoraria.

Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., reported $37,350 in honoraria; David Boren, D-Okla., $59,175, almost $30,000 of which was given to charity; Tom Daschle, D-S.D., $60,450, including $23,450 given to charity; and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., $50,500, of which $16,007 went to charity.

Senators are allowed to earn as much as they like by speechmaking, but they cannot keep for their own use any more than 40 percent of their Senate salary, which was $89,500 annually as of April 1987.

Several senators picked up pocket change last year by writing for newspapers and magazines. The New York Times' standard fee appeared to be $100; the Los Angeles Times paid $150 or $200; USA Today paid $150; the Christian Science Monitor paid $33.33. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., pocketed $300 for an article in Conservative Digest.

A few listed among their honoraria fees for "appearances" — no writing or speaking, just appearing. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., was paid $2,000 for an appearance before McDonnell Douglas aircraft company in St. Louis. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., got $1,000 for an appearance before the American Business Conference.

Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., whose panel oversees the securities industries, owns not one share of stock. Like many colleagues, he favors tax-free municipal bonds. House members' disclosure forms will be released next Wednesday.

Bolton's financial dilemma

To the Editor:

In response to Iivi Cannon's letter of May 19, I would like to make the following brief points concerning Monday night's Annual Town Meeting in Bolton, without resorting to personal invective:

1. I realize that I was "... elected to serve the interests of the whole community and not just the segment of the population that was 'weaned on credit cards.'" With all the people in mind, I tried to be as succinct as possible Monday night in describing our financial dilemma. Four major items account for more than 50 percent of the proposed increase: Revaluation costs, increased trash-tipping fees and hauling costs, our first year of new debt service (firehouse and library media center) and compliance with the Educational Enhancement Act.

Since we cannot reduce these costs in any real fashion, we can only reduce the overall budget by cutting into our normal town and school budgets and their inflation-adjusted line items. It was my intention Monday night to make certain that all town residents understood that fact, since any further reduction would involve both town and school budgets. By contrast, Mrs. Cannon once again reserved her criticism for the school board.

2. To date, we have cut $100,000 from the school budget and $95,000 from the town proper budget. (Please note: $55,000 of this cut is merely a deferral of this year's contribution to the new rescue vehicle.) Further cuts will involve personnel, maintenance and deferral of capital expenditures. The selectmen, on Tuesday night, already began this process. Next year, we will be criticized, as we have been in the past, for delaying purchases which resulted in further budget increases. The 66 people who voted for the budget were not looking to use their credit cards — they wanted to pay cash now and avoid "finance charges."

This year is a difficult year for Bolton taxpayers. Board of Finance members included. We should point out the following hopeful notes: a) Revaluation costs will be gone in two years, b) the debt costs are fixed for 15 years, and c) our state legislators are unlikely to anger all 169 towns by dropping education funding.

I, too, urge our residents to attend Monday night's meeting at the K-4 building at 8 p.m.

Charter work not finished

To the Editor:

As a member of the Bolton Charter Revision Commission, its secretary, and a member of the subcommittee studying "forms of government," the front-page headline of April 28 and the editorial April 29 regarding possible changes to our charter took me by surprise. It is my understanding that four members of the commission were called concerning the meeting held April 26. Is it possible to report accurate information of this sensitive nature as you did when no one from the press was present to hear the report, see the report or listen to the discussion? You make it sound as if all is decided. It is not! Much work has to be done.

Rose & Reagan, hero & hellion

By Chuck Stone

"That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet" — and would run the bases as swiftly as a paramecium pursued by an angry cuckold.

Peter Edward Rose: Record-holder for most hits, most singles, most games and most at-bats. Second in doubles, second in hitting safely in consecutive games and Time magazine cover-story subject, Aug. 19, 1985 ("Cincinnati's Wondrous Rose").

A. Bartlett Giamatti: Record-setter for the dumbest suspension in baseball history.

Dave Pallone: Record-setter for umpire buffoonery in an argument.

The videotape of the Pallone-Rose verbal barbedisc about the comparative merits of their visual acuity is as clear as a windshield-wiped glass in between swishes. Pallone appears to stick his finger in Cincinnati manager Rose's face. Rose instinctively reacts by shoving Pallone.

Rose's tepid response recalled one of my father's favorite anecdotes from Moran & Mack, two minstrels from the 1920s.

"What made you knock that boy down, jump on him and stomp him?" asked an incredulous Mack.

"The Lord told me to do it."

"The Lord told you to knock him down, jump on him and stomp him?"

"No. The Lord told me to knock him down, jumpin' on him and stompin' him was my own idea."

An umpire is supposed to diffuse the battle, not aggravate it. After a belligerent Pallone stuck his finger in the direction of Rose's eye (a scratch under Rose's eye supports Rose's accusation), Rose should have knocked him down.

His right to such an appropriate response is justified by what is known as the "fighting words" doctrine.

In Chaplinsky vs. New Hampshire (1942), the Supreme Court discussed "epithets likely to provoke the average person to retaliation... words which by general consent are 'fighting words' when said without a disarming smile." Rose and Pallone were not smiling.

But it may have been the violent response of Cincinnati fans after the Rose-Pallone blow-off that frightened National League president Giamatti. The classical scholar envisioned a 20th-century reprise of the lions and the Christians. He responded by wrapping his mind in a Roman toga, signaling "thumbs down" and sacrificing Rose to the den of lions.

But heroic reputations always survive the stench from the toxic dump of bad judgments. And Pete Rose is an authentic American hero.

Consider this quintessential paradox: One of America's most successful corporate executives spends two years as chief of staff to the free world's most powerful head of state. And what top-secret national security information is revealed in his 397-page itinerary? That the president's wife occasionally consulted an astrologist about decisions of state!

Hallelujah! Until little boy blue's published diatribe, I thought that the Reagan-Regan-Reagan regime (read that the Ronald-Donald-Nancy romper room) had sole responsibility for some of their bizarre decisions. At least, they reached for the stars.

Obviously, astrology isn't a science, but the movement of the stars is. The problem comes from assigning values to those movements. Nancy Reagan merely joins millions of Americans who believe that galactic reliability supports a seer's guesses about their lives.

But Nancy's honest faith is no worse than Reagan's reptilian pragmatism. If any doubts lingered about wisdom of his dismissal, the soreheaded hellion has removed them.

Only the Pete Roses stay heroes forever.

Citizenship for sale in the South Pacific

WASHINGTON — In the South Pacific's tropical paradise, entrepreneurs are marketing citizenship like real estate.

The scheme was spawned by savvy American and Taiwanese developers. They figured out that wealthy business people in Hong Kong and Taiwan will pay for access.

access to the United States for travel and business. That makes citizenship there a valuable commodity.

A California development firm, Onouris International, is trying to make a deal with Palau to sell that commodity. Robert Goldsmith, president of Onouris, has proposed to the government of Palau that he sell Palau citizenship to Hong Kong residents for $250,000 each. The government would get about 12 percent of the profits.

Goldsmith says he would use his share of the money to build three hotels and a golf course on Palau with a high-speed hydrofoil ferry boat to zip visitors between the islands. He sees primitive, unspoiled Palau as a potential Miami Beach for Japanese vacationers.

Sources close to Palau's negotiations with Onouris say that the republic's president, Lazarus Salil, and his followers will only approve the deal if the hotels have gambling casinos on their ground floors.

The U.S. State Department and the Department of the Interior, which currently supervise Palau, are adamantly opposed to trade in citizenship papers. Congress has tried to discourage the marketing of citizenship by limiting free access to the United States from the trust territories until someone has been a territory resident for at least five years.

The Palauan congress thinks Goldsmith's offer is legitimate, but its members are wary of how it will look to the U.S. Congress. Palauan senate president Joshua Koshiba told our associate Jim Lynch.

Meanwhile, a growing web of reports from Palau, including allegations that top Palauan officials are involved in heroin trafficking, contract kickbacks and assorted scams, has drawn the attention of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, which is considering the compact. The committee has ordered the General Accounting Office to investigate Palau.

Last fall, the Drug Enforcement Agency issued a report that indicated perhaps more than 400 of Palau's 15,000 residents were heroin addicts.

"It appears Palau's primary involvement in international drug trafficking is as a transshipment point for Southeast Asian heroin being smuggled into the United States," wrote DEA Administrator John Lawn.

Abuse unabated in Tibet

Thousands of Tibetans are suffering at the hands of the Chinese behind a bamboo curtain of silence, and the Western world is paying little attention.

Tibet, a region of China, has been closed to outsiders since last October when Tibetans rioted against Chinese oppression. British Lord David Ennals recently returned from an inspection of Tibet. A friend of the Chinese, Ennals was allowed in as the first official Western observer since the riots.

What Ennals saw, he could only describe as "colonialism" and "apartheid" when he testified before the Congressional Human Rights Caucus at the invitation of Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif. Ennals said the oppression and human rights abuses will continue in Tibet until the United States and other powerful Western nations show some interest.

China invaded Tibet in 1950 and has since carried out a brutal campaign to wipe out any vestiges of its culture and religion. Thousands of Chinese have been moved to Tibet in order to outnumber the natives. Tibetan families are limited to two children. Ennals said he has heard, but cannot confirm, rumors that the Chinese practice forced sterilization and abortion on Tibetans who don't comply with the population-control laws.

An unknown number of people disappeared or were arrested during the riots, and many are still missing. Ennals said that in some cases, the first word the families of the missing get is when they are summoned to the mortuary to pick up the body of their loved one. And the families are required to pay hundreds of dollars for the privilege of claiming the body, Ennals added. Some of the bodies are unrecognizable with their eyes gouged out and their limbs torn off.

China is still claiming that the riots have involved only a handful of people, but Ennals believes the number is closer to 10,000.

Sagging faith is forcing churches to unify efforts

By George W. Cornell
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In heavily secularized modern society, statistics indicate the churches aren't getting their job done by working at it separately. So they're tackling it together.

That's the path-breaking commitment of a broad coalition of American church leaders, Roman Catholic and nearly every brand of Protestant, to reclaim those detached from religion.

"The time has come for us to stop the quarrelling with one another, the rivalry and sheep-stealing, and learn to work together in mission," says the Rev. Alvin A. Illig of Washington, D.C.

Illig, director of the Paulist National Catholic Evangelization Association and a key figure in the wide cross-section of church leaders concerned with evangelization, added in an interview:

"The great challenge before us is reaching out to the huge mass of people not involved in churches and synagogues. We've all got to work together on it if we are to have any success in evangelization."

Spurring this collaboration is the aim of an unprecedented, multidimensional "Congress 88, a National Festival of Evangelism," in Chicago, Aug. 4-7. Planning for it has gone on for three years.

It is backed by a rare alliance of church specialists in evangelism from about 35 denominations, ranging from Mennonite to Catholic, mainline to Pentecostal, and Salvation Army to Southern Baptist.

"There's a breakthrough of real significance," Illig said.

"If Southern Baptists and Catholics and a coalition of this scope can come together and work harmoniously, it's ecumenical enough to encourage a lot of folks that they can, too."

A similarly inclusive affair, "A Gathering of Christians," takes place May 21-25 in Arlington, Texas, expected to involve about 3,000 evangelical, mainline Protestant, Catholic and Eastern Orthodox Christians.

However, that assembly is intended mainly to vent collective spiritual energies and concerns about contemporary social issues.

On the other hand, the Chicago congress, which hopes to bring together up to 15,000 church people, has a threefold practical purpose: To sharpen awareness of the need for evangelism; to offer advice from experts on various ways of doing it; and to provide resource materials for participants to take home and use.

"We can learn from each other," Illig said. "Lutherans, Catholics, Mennonites and Presbyterians, sharing their insights, can learn from one another in building the kingdom of God."

He said the urgency of stepped-up, concerted evangelizing efforts to bring in those outside the fold is pointed up by the growing ranks of unchurched Americans, now totaling 90 million.

"To a large extent, we've ignored them in terms of specific outreach programs," he said.

Meanwhile, this group has increased in 10 years from 38 percent of the population to 41 percent, he said, while the proportion without even a religious preference has risen from 3 percent in 1948 to 9 percent now.

"There's no question we're losing ground," Illig said, adding that out of an average five congregations, only one is growing, one is shrinking, and three are simply static, remaining the same.

"One reason we're failing and not making any progress is the scandal of divisions that is confusing and contradicts the basic nature of Christianity," he said.

While the unusual cooperation on the problem can't mend the brokenness, he said it can share insights and approaches, kindle mutual energies and enlist the various churches in the common task.

In doing it, he said, people drawn into religious participation will naturally "pick the particular church community to enrich their own lives," whatever the denomination.

"We've got to stop fighting one another, and together raise consciousness about the huge communities out there without any religious life," he said.

Planning for the joint congress developed through the Washington Roundtable on Evangelism, comprised of specialists on evangelism from various denominations.

Illig, 61, is treasurer for the event, which is expected to cost more than $1 million, with more than 60 denominational agencies and Catholic orders putting up advance funding.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
by Eugene Brewer

Erich Fromm wrote: "Love is an act of faith, and whoever is of little faith is also of little love." In order to love another I must have some confidence in his worthwhileness. God loves us despite our sins, because he knows our potential (John 3:16).

Perhaps I am reluctant to love a certain person for fear he will prove unworthy and my loving efforts squandered. Longfellow addresses such hesitancy through these words: "Talk not of wasted affection. Affection never was wasted."

Nothing so improves others for us as loving them. And nothing so improves us for them. Such is never easy. But was it easy for God to so love a world of sinners as to give his Son? A world of ingrates at that! Somehow we must develop faith in the unloveable's divine image in order to love him, even as God loved us.

FBI arrests accused wife swindler after TV show

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A man who allegedly swindled nine former wives was arrested after people who saw an episode of NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" called the FBI and said they knew a man who looked like him. FBI agents on Thursday arrested Louis Carlucci, a chef wanted by New York police on grand larceny charges. He went by the name Louis Serra in Tennessee.

Carlucci, 44, was the subject of a segment on the television show, which features dramatizations of wanted criminals.

Authorities say Carlucci has been married nine times and has more than 30 children. According to New York police, he is believed to have fleeced his wives of at least $1 million by running their credit card accounts to the limit, draining their savings and encouraging them to invest in jewelry, restaurants and cars.

U.S. Magistrate Kent Sandidge ordered Carlucci jailed Thursday, pending extradition to New York.

Carlucci said from jail that he was host of a birthday party Wednesday night and did not see the show.

She heals human flaws

Warden prepares inmates for life

By Anita M. Caldwell
Manchester Herald

When Evelyn Horn was looking for a job where there would be a lot of people contact, the Manchester resident never imagined she'd become warden of the Hartford Community Correctional Center on Weston Street.

Since accepting the post in 1984, she said, the challenges have been great.

"I don't think there's anything that comes close to what's involved in a correctional center," the 35-year-old said.

"We get everybody from (those charged with) breach of peace to murders," she said.

Horn said while the people in a correctional center are there because they have committed crimes such as rape or murder, it was the behavior they displayed in society before coming to jail, such as "irresponsibility, lack of will power" and "immaturity," that led to those charges.

"We're dealing with human flaws that we cannot always restructure," she said, adding that efforts to change those behaviors are made through educational and career programs.

But many people in the community resent giving inmates opportunities they themselves may not be able to afford, Horn said.

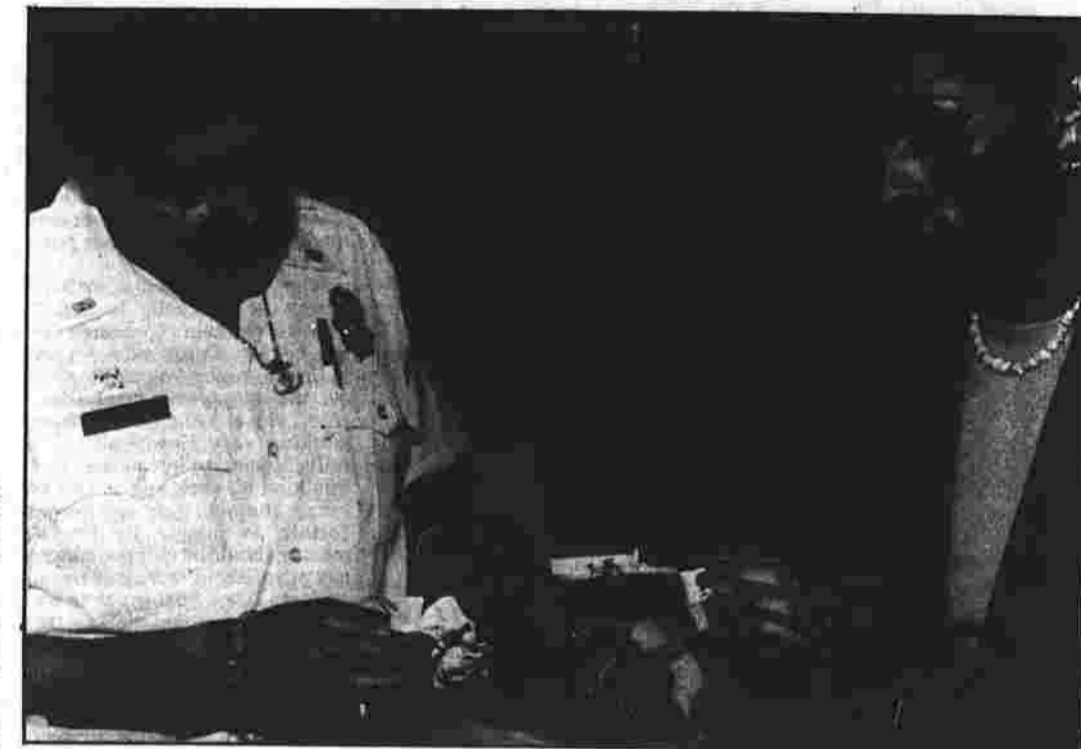

"We're in a dilemma," she said. While the jail, which houses 600 inmates, provides rehabilitative services for re-entry into the community, part of the community screams to keep them locked up, she said.

"We didn't breed these people. They came from somewhere," she said, adding that they deserve to be prepared to return to family and friends.

Meanwhile, Horn's strong commitment to the welfare of inmates has kept her in the field of corrections.

She became the highest ranking female in the department in a male facility in 1979 when she took the post of deputy warden of treatment and training in the Weston Street jail, she said.

She had worked in personnel after graduating from the University of Connecticut in 1975 with a degree in psychology.

As deputy warden, Horn was responsible for tasks that included overseeing the safekeeping of the inmates, public safety, medical records, visitations, education and furlough, she said.

She held that position until accepting the post of warden of the Hartford Community Correctional Center, which serves 34 towns in the greater Hartford area.

The facility, which opened in 1977 to replace the Seyms Street jail, is not for long-stay inmates, she said. It houses those who cannot make bond and are waiting for sentencing or for those who have been in a higher security prison and have two years remaining in their sentence.

The center "provides greater opportunity for interaction with the family and servicing agencies because of the less restrictive policies involved," she said, adding that during the last six months of the sentence a pre-release program helps inmates get acclimated to society.

Representatives from outside social service agencies work with inmates for re-entry into the community, helping them find jobs, housing and maintain counseling, she said.

But the success of the programs is not immediately seen, Horn said.

"The success in this business is not visible," she said. "Our success is getting through 24-hours ... if our staff can walk out of here with some sense of internal peace and the inmate can put his head on the pillow and feel internal peace."

Inmates swap drugs for TVs

ALDEN, N.Y. (AP) — Violence and intimidation, traditional sources of power behind bars, have declined in a maximum-security prison here since officials began using a simple kind of leverage long known to parents of unruly children: threatening to turn off the TV.

Drug use, too, has lessened among the 800 inmates at Wende Correctional Facility.

"It's become a very effective sanction," said prison director Dominic Mantello. "All we have to do is threaten to take it away."

Two years ago, the Wende inmates voted unanimously to give up their right to receive packages from the outside in exchange for the option to buy personal television sets for their cells.

The program was originally designed to stop most drugs coming into the prison, but authorities quickly noticed another benefit.

"They know if they act up, they'll lose their TV privileges," said Robert McClellan, deputy superintendent for security at Wende. "Now, they walk away from most fights and turn their backs on trouble."

Most state and federal prisons along with local jails have television sets inmates can watch in groups during recreational periods. Some allow inmates to have personal televisions, but very few have programs like Wende's, according to George Kamp, president of Criminal Justice Institute, a New York-based corrections consulting firm.

In the beginning, Mantello said he was suspicious of the idea, thinking it would be viewed from the outside as "coddling" criminals.

"Let's face it, these people were sent here to be punished," he said.

What convinced Mantello was the improvement in security at the prison.

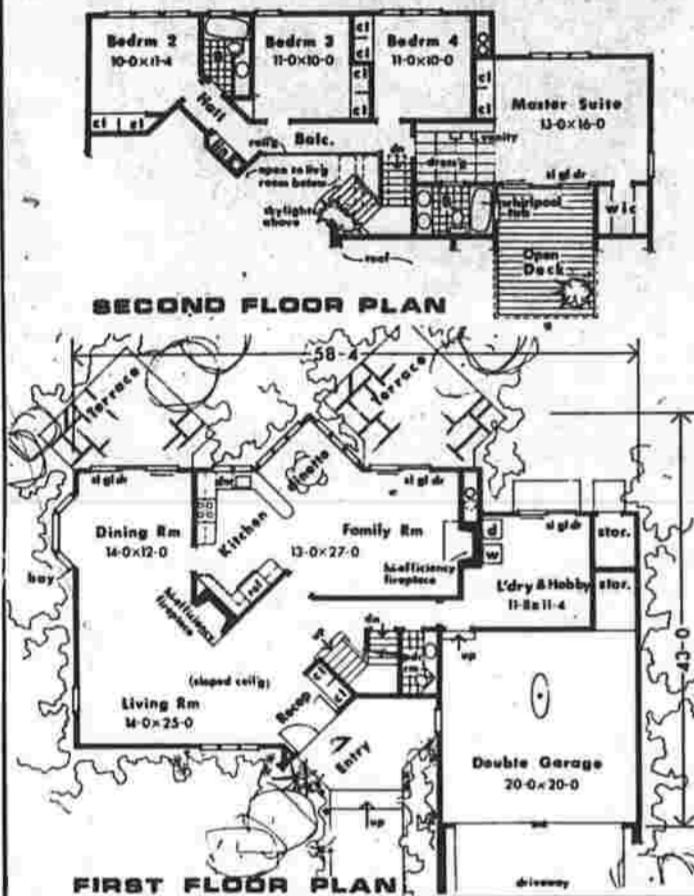

Instead of gathering in unmanageable groups at recreation time, inmates stay in their cells, which is the safest place for them and their guards, he said.

"I feel safer here than walking the streets in some parts of Buffalo," Mantello said. The prison is about 30 miles west of Buffalo in the farming town of Alden.

As Mantello walks through the cell blocks, inmates nod and greet

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: I have to install several locks in doors in my house. While I have done some carpentry work, I have never made holes for locks. Is it easier to do this with a compass saw or a keyhole saw?

ANSWER: Both of those saws are fine for the purpose, but if you have a portable electric drill, get an attachment known as a hole saw. You can get diameters of different sizes for a single attachment. It will make the job a lot easier. For certain irregular circles and shapes, though, the compass saw and keyhole saw are better.

QUESTION: I plan to install a concrete patio floor at the rear of our house. I want to be sure rainwater slopes away from the house. Is there any special slope that is necessary to make this work?

ANSWER: A good rule-of-thumb is the slope should be one inch for every 10 feet of patio.

QUESTION: I am puzzled by the terms "strip hardwood flooring" and "strip oak flooring." Isn't oak a hardwood?

ANSWER: Yes. The terms are used generally to indicate oak and hardwoods other than oak, such as beech, maple, etc.

Neglect weakens bricks

By Andy Lang
The Associated Press

A sensible reason to repair brickwork as quickly as possible is because neglect will result in a weakening of the construction by permitting water to enter it. Aside from that, brickwork that is starting to deteriorate becomes unsightly, losing its usual pleasing appearance.

When the mortar between bricks is cracked, it can be repaired without replacing any of the bricks. Doing this requires patience, since you must chisel out the damaged mortar. Use a cold chisel and a hammer, working very slowly and carefully. If you are inexperienced at this kind of work and attempt to hurry the job, you are almost certain to bungle it. The old mortar should be chipped away to a depth of about three-quarters of an inch. Use a stiff brush to take away the crumbled mortar, then dampen the area any way that is practical. It can be with water from a hose, a wet sponge or even a glass of water thrown against the damaged section.

You can make your own mortar mixture with one part of portland cement, two parts of hydrated lime and seven parts of sand, but you can make the job a lot easier if you buy a ready-mixed mortar that requires only the addition of water. However you handle it, use just enough water to make a workable mix. Redampen the area to be patched just before applying the mortar. Not so incidentally, always wear goggles when chipping away at any kind of material that is likely to send dust or chips through the air. When the brick itself is broken or otherwise in need of repair, it is better to replace the entire brick. Once again, use the cold chisel-hammer technique, but this time you must chip away at the old mortar until the brick can be removed. Sometimes you may have to chip away at the brick itself to get it loose. If you have never used a cold chisel before and must purchase one, get what is called a cape chisel, especially good for this kind of work. Once the brick has been removed and the mortar scrapped off the adjoining bricks, wet down the opening, this time using water from a hose, since the pressure will help to clear out the cavity. Professional masonry workers not only soak the replacement brick in water, they allow it to air dry before using it.

A trowel is necessary to butter the brick with mortar, but be extra careful not to get any mortar on the face of the brick. If any does get on, wipe it off immediately. Stop whatever you are doing to perform the wipe-off process, as even a minute or two can make a difference. That means you must keep a wet cloth handy at all times. When the brick is in place, try to make the same kind of mortared joint as the rest of the bricks have. Use a small jointer or a piece of pipe or anything that will smooth and shape the joint.

The new brick and the surrounding area, including the joints, should be wet down immediately and two or three times a day thereafter for a few days. The objective is to keep the patched section from drying out too quickly.

If your brickwork seems to be in fairly good condition but is getting whitish in spots, the condition is known as efflorescence. The whiteness is the salt being washed to the surface. Sometimes it can be removed with soap and water, but more severe cases require the use of muriatic acid. Don't even try this treatment unless you are willing to exercise extreme care. You must wear goggles, rubber gloves and old clothes and you must always add the acid to the water, not the other way around. The mixture should be one part of acid to nine parts of water. When you finish, hose down the area completely with water from a hose. Do it twice just to make sure there is no residue.

Plants can get out of place

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

A weed is a plant out of place. And weeds can spoil a lawn.

Lawns were maintained at least 5,000 years ago in China. Today, in America, an attractive lawn is a therapeutic, recreational, physical and economic asset for millions of homeowners.

A dedicated homeowner can handle some steps toward analyzing lawn problems. Other measures are too complicated, requiring professional help.

Why is an attractive lawn a necessity for many city and suburban dwellers?

Answers from the Professional Lawn Care Association of America include:

"In many communities, enforceable, noxious weed laws and intense peer pressure on neighbors make sure citizens take good care of lawns; therapeutic and recreational value of an attractive lawn is an important asset for families with two busy wage earners; housing prices are slowing or falling in some metropolitan areas, particularly in the high-priced Northeast and California. So it's vital for sellers to get the best price possible for their home. An attractive lawn is an important asset to your home. Good landscaping adds an average of 14.87 percent to the value of existing homes, according to a nationwide (Gallup) poll of homeowners."

"Healthy turf controls water erosion and mud, wind erosion, dust, diminishes sun glare, noise and buildup of heat," says Dr. Leonard T. Flynn of Summit, N.J., a member of the American Council of Science and Health.

"Turf rarely sustains fire. Open grassy spots around homes discourages burglars, vandals and unwanted animals such as snakes, rodents and ticks. Turf provides a cushioning effect for sports and active play. Well-kept lawns reduce allergies and the likelihood of trouble from plants that poison and insects that sting," he says.

Dr. Roger S. Ulrich, the Department of Geography, University of Delaware, reports that a 9-year study shows hospital patients with a view of landscaped areas spent only 7.9 days convalescing compared with 8.7 days for those who did not have a view.

"Furthermore," he adds, "those with a view required less potent pain-killers, had fewer postoperative complications and had a more positive hospital stay."

What constitutes a lawn in good condition? The experts say one with a thick, dark green turf; height and edges looking neat and crisp; minimum problems from weeds, insect and plant disease.

The homeowners' most important objective is to make sure conditions are right for healthy turf to choke out most weeds. The experts note that good weed control is complicated and often calls for a team effort with a professional "because no single activity can prevent or cure weed problems."

There are five important steps in your lawn care program to check if weeds proliferate: mowing practices, watering practices, soil conditions, species of turf and weed control program. Next week's column will detail these major steps in lawn care.

Prickly pear cactus

Walking along the Canaveral National Seashore near New Smyrna Beach, Fla., I saw several species of prickly pear cactus with attractive yellow blossoms.

Also growing in some areas: sea oats, yucca, seagrass, saw palmetto, beach berry and beach sunflower.

Edible red-purple fruit follow the blossoms on prickly pear cactus. Wear gloves in peeling off the spines. Some folks singe the spines over a fire.

The fruit may be eaten raw when ripe; some fruit may be used to make jam or wine.

Some tax law retroactive

One of the more shocking aspects of the new tax law is that in many respects it is retroactive — no matter what some officials claim. Not only does the law affect transactions that take place after the law was passed, it also can have a devastating impact on arrangements made years before. As a result, much of your financial planning for your children may go right down the drain.

Sylvia Porter

This is not an exaggeration. Why focus attention on taxes now? Primarily because this is mid-year, when many tax-saving techniques for 1988 are being reviewed. Taxpayers are discovering to their chagrin that matters are much worse — from a tax point of view — than they had anticipated. Some parents with young children found that their 1987 tax returns were a nightmare.

Consider a fairly typical situation, as told to me by Eli J. Warach, chief consulting editor at Prentice Hall Professional Newsletters.

Seth and Rachel Daniels have two young children, 10-year-old Kate and 13-year-old Sarah (who will turn 14 in 1989). Since both girls are under 14, they are being hit with a new crackdown.

Seth and Rachel, who are in the top tax bracket, had conscientiously gone about setting up a financial plan that would sock away money for the girls' college educations and even their wedding expenses. Money was put away regularly in the form of corporate bonds. Up to now, this technique worked fine. The children were building up nest eggs and, while the gifts were not tax deductible by the parents, there were significant tax savings. Since the earnings on the bonds were taxed at the much lower tax rates of the children, everyone came out a winner — except the tax collector.

The Daniels were thinking far ahead because they are serious parents. And they did everything right at the time they did it.

But now comes a retroactive tax effect. The annual earnings on the bonds, to the extent they exceeded $1,000 for each child, were taxed in 1987 at the parents' rates, as high as 38.5 percent. And that's true even though the gifts were made years before the new law took effect. Here's why: The new law states that if children under 14 have unearned income (interest, dividends and so on), in excess of $1,000, the excess is taxed at the parents' rate. So 1987 was bad news. Now, let's look at 1988 — and what can be done right now. Assume that Kate and Sarah each has a total of $4,000 in interest in 1988. Neither would pay tax on the first $500; they would pay tax at their own rates (15 percent) on the next $500; and the remaining $3,000 would be taxed at presumably 33 percent (their parents' rate for 1988).

So poor little Kate and Sarah would each owe $1,065 on $4,000 in income. That's an effective rate of 27 percent. To give you some idea of what that means, a single adult could reach about $72,000 of taxable income and still pay an effective rate of the same 27 percent in 1988.

In short, the tax rates for the children are extremely — and I mean extremely — disproportionate.

Here's what Seth and Rachel should do, as quickly as they can. Switch Kate's bonds into EE bonds. The interest accumulating on these bonds is not subject to these rules. So the trick here is to have the EE bonds in Kate's name until she reaches the age of 14.

How about Sarah? Well, since she's going to be 14 next year, they might want to convert her bonds into cash and buy a certificate of deposit that does not mature until 1989. They should make certain that there is no interest payable until that date. In the year she turns 14, her interest will be taxed to her, at her tax rate.

Incidentally, once you've applied a primer, any alkyd paint will do a good job — not just the so-called "rust-preventive" brands.

TAXES LOWER HERE — European countries tax gasoline and other oil products both to raise revenues and encourage energy conservation. So, even when oil prices decline sharply, the price drop in Europe is only moderate. In the United States, on the other hand, taxes on gasoline are widely opposed and thus are much lower than in many other nations.

Prices rising in Beijing, Shanghai

BEIJING (AP) — Prices for pork, eggs and other non-staple foods are rising by up to 60 percent in state-owned stores in Beijing and Shanghai as part of government efforts to phase out subsidies, official reports say. Food bills of urban shoppers already have climbed sharply in the past few years due to growing demand and stagnating grain and pig production.

FOCUS / Advice

There is almost no chance that the pill could blind you

DEAR DR. REINISCH: A friend told me about a girl who went blind in one eye because she took the pill. Can this happen?

Kinsey Report
June M. Reinisch, Ph.D.

DEAR READER: I assume you're asking about hormonal contraceptive pills (birth-control pills). There are a very few reports of vision and eye problems associated with taking hormonal contraceptive pills, but permanent blindness would be extremely rare. Moreover, the risk of this or other health problems known to be related to taking the pill (such as high blood pressure, blood clots and other cardiovascular problems) can be reduced to nearly zero by having a thorough physical before they are prescribed, by having check-ups each year a woman takes them, and by not smoking during the years in which the pill is taken.

There is very little risk of a serious problem resulting from taking the pill for healthy, non-smoking women younger than 35. In fact, there are higher health risks from pregnancy.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: This may be a topic you've already covered, but I'm causing me so much mental anguish and I need a few words from somebody (preferably a woman) about it. How does a woman get herself to the point of loving fellatio carried to conclusion? I have been told that 75 percent of all women like it, making me "not normal." I've also been told it's men's favorite thing (and I have enough imagination to see why), but I cannot seem to get myself to have the "right" attitude about it. Surely men's true opinion of women who do this (though never stated) is that they are absolute scum.

Am I abnormal? How can I get to like this? What does it do for women? I know if I don't do this I will "lose out" to women who will.

DEAR READER: You are right — you do need to talk with someone who can help you to understand your strong feelings about fellatio (oral stimulation of the male genitalia).

Call your local mental-health center and ask for an appointment with a woman counselor. This does not mean that you are abnormal or that you must learn to like this activity. Instead, a counselor can help you to examine why you feel as strongly as you do, explain that even within the context of a loving relationship, some other women do not like or do this, and provide support for your personal decisions about sex activities.

Each person makes decisions about sexual behavior based on his or her own values, past experiences and knowledge. Decisions about behavior may change for the same individual with different circumstances (such as marriage), different partners or as one ages, but no one should be forced or coerced into any sexual behavior.

For example, a woman who had been opposed to oral activities throughout most of her life might decide to engage in this behavior if she was informed that extra stimulation by hand or mouth had become necessary for her husband to gain an erection or to have an orgasm. It would be unusual for her to then report that she enjoyed this activity.

Once again it is important to point out that one of the most important part of sex is the sharing. The feeling of enhancing a partner's pleasure also increases one's own pleasure, unless force or pressure is involved.

Currently you feel pressure to perform fellatio, both from psychological forces (such as the fear of not keeping a partner) and from persons who have implied you are abnormal. A counselor can help you to rid yourself of these pressures by finding the attitude that is "right" for you and practicing with you to explain your feelings to partners in ways that strengthen and preserve the relationship.

How does a woman get herself to the point of loving fellatio

Have physician check vertebra

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is an unstable vertebra?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: An unstable vertebra is a doughnut-shaped bone in the back (or neck) that is not securely attached to the bones above and below it. Ordinarily, most vertebrae are firmly anchored to their neighbors. They become unstable as the result of a major accident or from the normal, progressive slippage that comes with age as our tissues and ligaments lose their elasticity; they also are caused by inherited weaknesses.

M.D., not by a non-medical practitioner.

However, the usual term "unstable vertebra" refers to an uncommon post-traumatic condition that requires therapy or attention from a neurosurgeon. The normal cracks and pops made by our moving spinal columns do not indicate instability. Before you accept the diagnosis of "unstable vertebra," make sure that it is given by a qualified

I suggest that you discuss your concerns with your dentist before undergoing surgery. This way, you can learn more about the procedure, its risks and complications; in their words, you need to give informed consent for tooth extraction, as well as for any surgical procedure. To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, Ohio 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had acrylic nails put on. Then my girlfriend told me it wasn't healthy to keep the nail from breathing? What do you think?

DEAR READER: Nails do not need to "breathe" in the way that other body tissues, such as skin, do. I think that your new acrylic nails are safe.

slim. However, the risks depend on the type of anesthetic used, the depth of anesthesia and the skill of the operator.

If you are on the golf course and can't reach a building, first drop your golf club, then head for your car — assuming the car is not a convertible, it will act as a "cage" to protect you. (The metal picks up the lightning, conducts it around you and into the ground.) Stay in the car. Keep windows and doors (and sun roof) shut.

Never stand under a tall tree. If lightning strikes the tree, electricity can run down the trunk through the roots into the ground and into your body. If you are riding a motorcycle, bicycle or tractor — get off. The rubber tires will not protect you. If you are caught in a flat, open field, bend down and put your hands on your knees. Do not lie down on the ground. Maintain minimum contact with the ground.

Use, don't lose head when lightning strikes

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm 30 years old now, but when I was a teen-ager in Kansas, I read a column you wrote about what to do if you're ever caught in a storm with lightning striking all around you. If you can find it, please give it another run. It really helped me.

STILL LIVING IN KANSAS

DEAR STILL: It ran in May 1979, and it's still helpful:

DEAR READERS: No problems today. Instead, I am devoting my entire column to tips that could save your life.

Let's pretend you're a contestant on "Hollywood Squares," and you are asked the following questions:

"More people are killed every year by (a) tornadoes, (b) cyclones, (c) lightning." If you said "lightning," you would be right.

The National Weather Service says that most deaths caused by lightning could have been avoided if only common sense had been used. But common sense is not as common as most people think it is.

Lightning occurs during thunderstorms, so the logical time to start protecting yourself is when you see the storm clouds gathering.

As a general rule, avoid high places, metal and water! If you are outdoors, seek shelter in a house or other large building. (Steer clear of sheds or small buildings in isolated areas.)

If you are on the golf course and can't reach a building, first drop your golf club, then head for your car — assuming the car is not a convertible, it will act as a "cage" to protect you. (The metal picks up the lightning, conducts it around you and into the ground.) Stay in the car. Keep windows and doors (and sun roof) shut.

Never stand under a tall tree. If lightning strikes the tree, electricity can run down the trunk through the roots into the ground and into your body. If you are riding a motorcycle, bicycle or tractor — get off. The rubber tires will not protect you. If you are caught in a flat, open field, bend down and put your hands on your knees. Do not lie down on the ground. Maintain minimum contact with the ground.

If you are inside, close windows and doors. Lightning can strike through an open window. Don't take a bath during a thunderstorm. If electricity strikes the plumbing system, it can be conducted into the tub.

Don't use the telephone unless it is absolutely necessary. Electricity can travel through the telephone wires.

If you are jogging, stop and get out of the wide-open spaces or you can run into trouble. You are far safer indoors as long as the doors and windows are closed. Most deaths and injuries from lightning occur outdoors; almost half of all people killed by lightning are engaged in outdoor recreation. Don't rely on rubber-soled shoes to protect you. Lightning can carry a jolt of up to 100 million volts. Rubber soles are insignificant as an insulator.

It's also not true that lightning never strikes twice in the same place. The conditions that attract the lightning bolt in the first place can attract it again.

Have a safe summer.

LOVE, ABBY

Astrograph

Your Birthday

May 22, 1988

In the year ahead, you will establish several extremely constructive alliances. They will offer mutual benefits, each in its own unique way.

GIEMME (May 21-June 20) If you're involved in any type of commercial dealings today, you should be able to get your terms if you take a firm position. State your price and mean it. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your wit, demeanor and charm are your most valuable assets today, and they will have a strong influence over people with whom you will be involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This could be a very pleasant day for you, owing to the thoughtfulness of others. Be as gracious at receiving what they offer as you are when giving.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make it a point today to try to spend as much time as possible with your closest friends. Delightful experiences could result when associating with kindred spirits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Challenging developments are not likely to intimidate you today. You'll enjoy the stimulation and be gratified by your accomplishment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) Something fortuitous may occur today. It might be channeled through someone with whom you're friendly socially.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A happy change is stirring at this time that could benefit you as well as someone you love. It may take time, however, before its impact is fully appreciated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) One of the reasons you will be so well received today is because you'll have the ability to make anyone with whom you deal feel important and appreciated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Be on your toes at this time, because there are strong indications that a way may open for you to increase your earnings. It could turn out to be something steady.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Today, you have a disarming knack of making light of serious situations. A companion who is presently under stress will be very appreciative of your attitude.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Everything will work out better when dealing with loved ones today if you let your heart rule your head. Make allowances that you would appreciate if others made them for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Give priority today to involvements that are not of a material nature. Your pleasure will come from things that can't be measured in dollars and cents.

LANGLEY STAMP — This 45-cent stamp was issued in San Diego, Calif., on May 14.

It's warming up to a hectic year

This 45-cent stamp along with a 36-cent postal card was issued at San Diego, Calif., on May 14, the first day of Air/Space America 88, an aerospace trade extravaganza.

Collectors' Corner Russ MacKendrick

Langley's "Aerodome Number 5," the unadorned lattice-work contraption at the left, was the first American heavier-than-air machine to make a significant flight. It proved to other experimenters, in 1896, that a plane could fly without flapping its wings. The stamp, carrying the new overseas airmail rate, continues the Aviation Pioneer series that debuted in 1978-79 with the Wright Brothers, Octave Chanute and Wiley Post.

The 36-cent postal card shows the fabulous 21-seat, twin-engine Douglas DC-3 being loaded with mailbags. In 1942 it was providing 80 percent of all domestic scheduled service. Many are still in use today.

Back to the beginning of this month's philately: A Jack London 25-cent stamp come out in booklet form on the 3rd. The following day saw the Blair House of Washington, D.C., on a postal card.

On May 6, a 25-cent Flag-with-Clouds definitive was released to take the place of the busy-busy Flag-with-Fireworks design. It is warming up for a hectic year with 72 issues announced to bring us 88 individual stamps.

So, moving right along: On the 9th of the month came a 39-cent aerogramme called "standard" with a small geometric design that leaves more space for the message.

On the 14th, the Langley and DC-3 as above, and on the 20th, another 25-cent flag. This time it is a flutter over the Half Dome in Yosemite National Park in California. (No, not Yozyymight, it's yo-SEM-tee. Just looked it up.) Still coming: there is a bleak-looking palmetto tree scene slated for Monday the 23rd at the South Carolina statehouse at Columbia.

And the best for last: The Linn's Stamp News just received shows an attractive color picture of the saw-whet owl and rose-breasted grosbeak se-tenant that will be issued as a $5 booklet on May 23 at the opening ceremony of NAPEX 88 (the National Philatelic Exhibition) at Arlington, Va. It is well-nigh unbelievable after some of the drabs we have seen from the USPS.

COMING EVENT: Tuesday, May 24, 6 to 8 p.m. — The meeting of the Manchester Philatelic Society at the Whilton Memorial Library auditorium. All stamp-lovers are welcome.

'Pall Mall' explained

LONDON (AP) — Pall Mall, a fashionable street noted for its men's clubs, has a name that often puzzles visitors.

It refers to a 17th-century Italian game, similar to croquet, that used a wooden ball (palla) and mallet (maglio).

The game, known as Pall Mall, gave its name to the place in Central London where it was played.

Author tells of troubled land

WHITE TRIBE DREAMING. By Marq de Villiers. Viking. 420 Pages. $21.95.

Eight generations ago, Jacques de Villiers, a French farmer of Protestant faith, fled Catholic France for Holland. Together with his brothers Pierre and Abraham, he was accepted by the Dutch East India Co. for settlement at the Cape, the southern tip of what is now South Africa.

Since their arrival in Africa in 1669, the de Villiers and their many descendants have shared the history of that troubled land. Readers seeking to understand the dilemma of modern South Africa can be grateful that after 300 years, a descendant of Jacques could draw on that rich tradition and had the skill and vision to write this book, subtitled "Apartheid's Bitter Roots, As Witnessed by Eight Generations of an Afrikaner Family."

The author leads us through the complex history of South Africa with clear understanding and a graceful style that makes unusually engaging reading. Despite their French origin, the de Villiers are completely Afrikaner and shared the country's development from the early Cape colony through Zulu wars, the treks into the African heartland, British colonialism, and Boer War defeat to the discredited apartheid system of the last 40 years.

The author's father, Rene de Villiers, a newsman and editor and a one-term member of parliament for the opposition Progressive Party, sets the liberal viewpoint from which the book is written. His author son clearly anguishes over the missed opportunities of history when rigid Boer decisions prevailed over more liberal possibilities. De Villiers, also a journalist and now living in Canada, sees Afrikaners not as Europeans living in Africa but as a "white tribe" reacting tribally to a sense of persecution and strong identity with place.

South Africa's apartheid, or strict racial segregation, is a trap into which the "white tribe" has mistakenly wandered, he says. "Hardly anyone believes in apartheid anymore, in the theology of apartheid, in the vision of apartheid as a just social order."

He urges understanding for the Afrikaners as they seek a way out. He sees no easy solution and his vision ranges from pessimistic nuclear martyrdom to "the deep reservoir of interracial good will still existing, incredibly, in South Africa in spite of the manifold injustices stretching over generations."

NEW FILM — Bruce Willis, right, plays Hollywood cowboy Tom Mix and James Garner is Wyatt Earp in "Sunset," a new film by Blake Edwards.

'Sunset' promises but doesn't deliver

SUNSET (R) Blake Edwards is the most uneven director in Hollywood. For every charming "Pink Panther" or "Victor-Victoria," he's made something ineffably bad like last year's "Blind Date." Or like this inert movie that imagines a friendship between Hollywood cowboy Tom Mix (Bruce Willis) and real-life cowboy Wyatt Earp (James Garner).

There's some promise in the fanciful notion that Mix and Earp became buddies in Hollywood in 1923, while the former was playing the latter in a movie. But as the cowboys team up off-camera to investigate the slaying of a prostitute, the movie pours on melodramatic nastiness and picturesque decadence — little of which turns out to be fun. There's something unseemly about the blend of fact, fiction and kinkiness in a buddy-movie format. Even the Hollywood lore doesn't amount to much.

The actors don't stand a chance. Bruce Willis as the cowboy-hatted Mix is pretty silly casting to begin with. As a Wyatt Earp who still has a fight or two left in him, Garner seems sabotaged by the script and direction. Malcolm McDowell, meanwhile, is reduced to glowering iciness as the powerful movie studio mogul who's also — no surprise — a sadist. Grade: 1/2

THE MODERNS (not rated) Here's another dose of Alan ("Choose Me," "Trouble in Mind") Rudolph's perfumed romanticism — intoxicating, classy, but quickly evaporating. A gorgeously designed portrait of expatriates in Paris in the late '20s, and a project that Rudolph had been planning for years, the finished film nevertheless fails to come together. It seems suffocating, airless and stultified. The main characters indulge Rudolph's penchant for edgy, overripe passion: There's the unfulfilled painter (Keith Carradine) who forges masterpieces; his long-lost lover, an alcoholic femme fatale (Linda Fiorentino); and her grasping, dangerous art patron husband (John Lone). Drifting in and out are caricatures of real-life expatriates of the era — Hemingway, Gertrude Stein and Alice B. Toklas. The best — and oddest — performance is given by Wallace Shawn as a gossip columnist who fakes his own suicide, and then goes into hiding dressed in drag. If only Rudolph could come up with a foreground story of conviction to match his remarkable grasp of milieu and mood. Grade: 1/2

Movies for summer 1988 will be light, breezy fare

By Frank Sanello

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Summer is traditionally a time for light escapism and action-adventure in movie theaters. And this year is no exception. Sylvester Stallone, Clint Eastwood and Arnold Schwarzenegger each put in celluloid appearances in the summer of '88, wiping out enemies while ignoring most of the constitutional amendments.

George Lucas and Steven Spielberg also offer cartoons with live actors. Hollywood continues its lucrative love affair with Roman numerals this summer, offering up sequels to everything from "Rambo" to "Poltergeist," "Crocodile Dundee" to "Caddyshack."

In summers past, no matter how mindless most of the movies were, the Hollywood studios — either out of a sense of guilt or with one eye on the Oscars — offered up a morsel or two for adults who prefer their movies thought-provoking rather than mind-numbing. This summer, there is no "Heartburn," "Prizzi's Honor," no "Under the Volcano." One of the few new adult films to watch for, though, is "Bull Durham."

In July, one of the greatest American actors, Robert De Niro, turns up in "Midnight Run" — a comedy about the mob. Indeed, the Mafia is big this summer: It's the subject of another comedy, "Married to the Mob," and the drama "Last Rites" (both of which bow in July); and of the supernatural comedy-thriller "She's Back," in August.

Laments Hollywood Reporter columnist Robert Osborne about the films of summer: "I got depressed after I looked at the list. There's not much variety. It's all 'high concept,' teen films, adventure flicks. There are no little gems to enrich the usual par. I'm just waiting for the fall."

Here is the tentative schedule for major theater releases:

Table with movie titles, genres, and showtimes for various theaters like Hartford, East Hartford, Manchester UA Theaters, Vermont, and Willimantic.

SYLVESTER STALLONE ... In "Rambo III"

TOMLIN AND MIDLER ... "Big Business" team

produced by "Star Wars" creator George Lucas. The Kitchen Toto — A story of racial strife and injustice, set in the '50s during the Mau Mau rebellion in Kenya. Midnight Crossing — Daniel Travanti smuggles millions out of Cuba just before Castro takes over. Faye Dunaway also stars. The Best — A new kid moves into a rough neighborhood and brings a little beauty and light with him. Crocodile Dundee II — Paul Hogan returns to the Big Apple and suffers more culture shock.

June Big — Tom Hanks plays a 12-year-old boy transformed into a 35-year-old man by a carnival wishing machine. The Great Outdoors — A John Hughes comedy starring Dan Aykroyd and John Candy as brothers-in-law who have a series of outrageous misadventures. Poltergeist III — They're back — one more time! Big Business — Jim Abrahams ("Ruthless People") directs Bette Midler and Lily Tomlin in a comedy about two sets of twins mismatched at birth — one set rich, the other poor.

Andy Garcia) against the seemingly almighty Al Capone (Robert DeNiro) and his heinous minions. It's a darkly comic, stylized version of an old-fashioned gangster film — and very entertaining.

The centerpiece suspense sequence involves a baby carriage rolling down the steps of Chicago's Union train station during a shootout. Connery won an Oscar for the twinkly gusto he brought to the role of Ness's mentor and eventual partner — a crafty old Irish Catholic cop. Grade: ***

DOGS IN SPACE (R) Key Video, $79.98. Australian director Richard Lowenstein's 1987 debut movie will irritate many viewers with its druggy hipness, though this same quality could make it a candidate for cult status. It's a meandering portrait of a rock band living in communal style in Melbourne in 1978. The band members and assorted groupies spend most of their time indulging in drugs and sex.

There's some semblance of a plot, and some attempt to make a statement about being young in a dark, apocalyptic age. But the movie really only works as an overdose of grungy atmosphere. Good musical soundtrack by Iggy Pop, David Bowie and others. Grade: **

Fox plans fall schedule, new night in spring

By Kathryn Baker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — It's that time of year when the networks announce their fall schedules, and Fox Broadcasting Co. is right in there with the big guys a year after it first started offering original, prime-time programming.

Fox's president for programming, Garth Ancier, announced Thursday that FBC will expand its weekend programming to Monday in the spring of 1989 with a "Fox Movie of the Week."

Meanwhile, Ancier said, Fox has renewed its "very exciting" Sunday night lineup of "21

Jump Street," "America's Most Wanted," "Married ... With Children," "It's Garry Shandling's Show," "Duet" and "The Tracey Ullman Show."

Saturday will be all new in the fall, depending on the end of the strike by the Writers Guild of America, with a new show from producer Stephen J. Cannell, "City Court," which will follow cases from "21 Jump Street" through the court system, and "Angels '88," a kind of "Charlie's Angels" descendant from Aaron Spelling Productions.

Until "Angels" premieres later this year, Fox will fill its Saturdays beginning this summer with a newsmagazine,

"Page One."
Fox canceled "Werewolf" and "Boys Will Be Boys." "The Dirty Dozen" is not on the fall schedule, but has not been canceled and might be brought back after its run this summer. "Family Double Dare" is not on the schedule, but hasn't exactly been canceled yet.

Like the big three networks, the start of Fox's fall season could be delayed because of the strike.

The Monday movie night will be delayed until 1989 because of uncertainty about the strike, but Ancier said Fox has obtained such theatrical releases as "Predator," "Black Widow" and "The Fly" that can be shown in the time period until original programming is ready.

Fox, owned by media magnate Rupert Murdoch, made its debut in October 1986 with the ill-fated "The Late Show" starring Joan Rivers. The weekend prime-time schedule was added in April 1987.

Fox has about 100 affiliated stations, less than half the number the big three networks have. Fox shows started out with ratings in the twos and threes. But "Married ... With Children," Fox's highest-rated show last week, had a 6.0, below the lowest-rated network show, which last week was ABC's "Supercarrier," with a 6.3. The rating is a percentage of the 88.6 million U.S. homes with television.

Ancier predicted that the Sunday lineup will improve by a rating point in the coming season.

Here is Fox's projected schedule:

Fall 1988:
Saturday — "City Court," "Angels '88."
Sunday — "21 Jump Street," "America's Most Wanted," "Married ... With Children," "It's Garry Shandling's Show," "Duet," "The Tracey Ullman Show."
Spring 1989:
Monday — "Fox Movie of the Week."

Inmates

him with "Hello, str."

"This is unlike any other max joint," said an inmate who serves on the Inmate Liaison Committee. "You can walk around without worrying about taking one in the back."

"I know guys who transferred here who give a massive sigh of relief," said the inmate, who asked not to be identified because he didn't want to "advertise the fact" that he was behind bars again.

The program was the result of a meeting between state Corrections Commissioner Thomas Coughlin and the members of the inmate committee.

The inmates had suggested the idea, arguing that personal televisions would put an end to the sometimes violent arguments that arise when groups of inmates try to decide what program to watch.

Coughlin agreed, but set two requirements. First, he wanted the inmates to limit their right to receive packages.

Packages sent to inmates from family and friends were a major source of contraband. Although packages are searched, officials said some drugs and weapons get through because of ingenious methods of concealment and because so many packages are sent, particularly at holidays.

Coughlin's second requirement was that prisoners adopt the swap unanimously.

Coughlin put the same proposition to inmates in the state's 11 other maximum-security prisons, but only Wende approved.

More than 400 inmates have paid $55 for 12-inch, black-and-white sets with headphones from the prison commissary.

Inmates earn the money working in the prison. Top scale is about $1.50 per day.

"I'm not naive enough to think there's no drugs," Maniello said. "But the inmates and staff are comfortable with each other. I don't have inmates ripping each other off for drugs. I have a safer environment."

An average 58 inmates per 1,000 at the other maximum-security prisons are found in possession of drugs, state figures show. The rate is roughly half that at Wende; 30 per 1,000.

Last year, 23,000 inmates at 43 state prisons facilities underwent random urinalysis testing. Six percent tested positive statewide; only 2 percent tested positive at Wende.

"It's totally different from any other facility," said Deputy Superintendent McClellan, who formerly worked at the nearby Attica Correctional Facility, the site of the 1971 riot that killed 43 people.

McClellan said the biggest complaint from the Wende inmates was getting too few channels.

The inmates can generally get six channels from Buffalo and Rochester stations, via an antenna on the roof of the prison. However, reception is not clear in some parts of the building.

LUNG CANCER

Despite filters now on 90% of cigarettes, which reduce the tar and nicotine absorbed, twice as many men died of lung cancer in 1980 as in 1950, and three times as many women. Experts believe it is due to modern tobacco farming with high-phosphate fertilizers which contain traces of radioactive lead, carried into the lungs, which produces a more rapid and pervasive cancer of the lungs. For health's sake, give up smoking.

Max celebrated his birthday at a fabulous place.

Chances are, Max won't remember what a great time he had at The Family Birthing Center at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

But his parents will never forget the wonderful experience.

From the moment they arrived, they enjoyed the special attention and personal care that are so hard to come by in some of the bigger hospitals. Throughout labor and delivery, Max's parents had the support of their own nurse in the privacy of their own birthing room, using the prepared child-birth methods they learned at the Center. After Max's arrival they celebrated with photo-taking, a champagne toast and hugs all around. All with the security and confidence that Max and Mom were getting the expert medical attention of Manchester Memorial's top-notch doctors and nursing staff.

After delivery, Mom was settled into her comfortable room where Max was welcome to "room-in" anytime. Dad even spent the night! The next day, Mom and Dad shared a special "Stork Club" gourmet dinner and got instructions on how to care for their little birthday boy.

If you see a "birth day" celebration in your future, The Family

Birthing Center would be delighted to show you their facilities and offer you more information. After all, doesn't your baby deserve as warm a welcome as little Max?

Computers: No way to run a railroad

By Peter Coy
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Computers would be easier to use if the companies that make them would stop their bickering, something that became clear this past week in a bitter battle over a simplification plan.

The fight over Unix, a base layer of computer software, is reminiscent of the days when railroads laid tracks of different gauges and couldn't agree who should rip theirs up.

Railroad museums have pictures showing that stevedores once had to lug freight between trains that couldn't run on the same tracks.

Most railroads overcame their differences decades ago, but computer makers are still at each other's throats.

There are few pure hearts in the fight over computer standards, which pits American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the upstart Sun Microsystems Inc. against International Business Machines Corp., Digital Equipment Corp., Hewlett-Packard Co. and four others.

Customers are clamoring for Unix, the prize in this battle, because it allows them to run the same programs on different kinds of computers.

As things are now, it's as if someone had to buy one kind of television to watch "Dallas" and another kind to watch "Monday Night Football."

AT&T made the telephone easy to use and says it can do the same for computers. AT&T invented Unix and wants to continue controlling its development, with Sun's help.

But by the end of the week, some people were saying that AT&T had miscalculated, alienating not only its rivals but some customers as well.

William H. Anderson, the computer chief for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., said AT&T had performed a "disservice" to customers by altering Unix to make it more dependent on a computer chip designed by its partner, Sun Microsystems.

AT&T denies it has doctored Unix for its own purposes. The company says Unix is in good hands and questions the motives of some of its rivals, which want to turn over development of Unix to an Open Software Foundation.

The foundation, announced Tuesday, is backed by $90 million over its first three years. Its mission is to create a computing "environment" that would include a unified version of Unix.

AT&T is refusing to join the foundation, and there is a possibility that Unix will split in half just as it reaches the big leagues.

"I think that AT&T has not learned that it is no longer possible for a single company to control standards," said Marvin Sirbu, a computer standards expert at Carnegie-Mellon University who takes the side of the Open Software Foundation.

The stakes are high. Computer systems that primarily use Unix are likely to make up 22 percent of a $120 billion world market by 1991, up from 6 percent of an $87 billion world market in 1986, International Data Corp. estimates.

Some AT&T executives are hinting that IBM and Digital might impede progress toward a unified Unix for selfish reasons.

It is indisputable that computer makers such as IBM and Digital benefit when they can lock customers into their own, private operating systems. That way they can charge more for products because there is less competition. Customers can't afford to switch to another supplier because they would have to junk all their existing equipment.

But like it or not, IBM and Digital are being pushed to support open operating systems such as Unix because customers are demanding them.

Prudential-Bache is insisting on Unix for many uses because it allows the company to choose computers with the best combination of price and performance without worrying that they won't be able to run the company's software, Anderson said.

Anderson dismisses the theory that IBM and Digital would try to fragment Unix to keep customers using their own, private operating systems. "I've listened to talk like that for the last 30 years," he said.

Other observers are more willing to attribute ulterior motives to IBM and Digital. But they say any impulses by those companies to undermine Unix would be checked by Hewlett-Packard, Apollo Computer Inc. and other members of the new foundation.

By Thursday, realizing it was losing ground in the public-relations battle, AT&T said it was willing to cooperate with the foundation and might some day put Unix development into a separate AT&T group at arm's length from the Data Systems Division.

Forty years after the first computers, visionaries are still waiting for the day when word processing will be as easy as food processing and searching a data base will be as simple as thumbing through an encyclopedia.

Standardizing on Unix is a step in that direction, as are setting standards for the ways computers hook up in networks and achieving some uniformity in the "look and feel" of computer software.

Unfortunately, each move toward standards seems to involve a fight. Apple Computer Inc., for example, is suing Hewlett-Packard for copyright infringement over the similar appearance of their software.

A history of conflict between computer makers has left customers wondering whether their interests are being slighted.

Striking workers going back

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Striking employees of Emhart Corporation's plant in Berlin voted Friday to return to work under terms of their old contract while negotiators try to work out a new pact.

About 700 members of the Machinists union, locals 1137 and 1249, went on strike at Emhart's Hardware Division May 2, after rejecting the company's contract proposal. The two sides returned to the bargaining table last week.

"Rather than keep our people out there while we negotiate, it's better that they're working," Albert R. Gonzalez, business representative for the union's District 204, said after the stand-up vote at New Britain High School. "Our members will be back to work on Tuesday morning."

Raymond W. Neiman, Emhart's vice president of industrial relations at the Hardware Division, said in a prepared statement that the company was pleased by the workers' decision. Neiman said that 35 workers will return to the plant on Monday "to start up operations, and the balance will be back on Tuesday."

He said negotiators for the two sides have scheduled bargaining sessions for Tuesday and Friday of next week. State and federal mediators will sit in on the talks.

A stumbling block has been a provision in the company's contract proposal that would change the incentive system for employees paid on a modified piecework basis, union officials and mediators have said.

Emhart's Hardware Division manufactures Corbin and Ruswin security doors. The plant has operated during the strike with management and salaried employees staffing some jobs, Neiman has said.

11 am - 7 pm

Highlights of the week

■ A record level of export sales reduced the U.S. trade deficit in March to $9.7 billion, lowest in three years. The news, although good, depressed the stock market by reviving fears of increased inflation. In reports for the month of April, the government said consumer prices climbed 0.4 percent, industrial production surged 0.7 percent, factory utilization edged up 0.3 percent and single-family home building declined 6.9 percent.

■ The Reagan administration group studying the stock market crash issued a report recommending a variety of modest financial market changes. Some criticized the report as weak, but others, including Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, said the market may have to learn to live with post-crash volatility.

■ Fifty of the wealthiest American universities lost an average of 13.1 percent of their endowments last fall in the stock market crash, a college business group reported. By comparison, common stock values overall dropped 22.6 percent during the final three months of 1987.

■ The biggest commercial airplane order in history was split between Boeing Co. and Airbus Industrie of Europe, with Boeing grabbing most of the $5.04 billion, 130-plane purchase by International Lease Finance Corp.

■ Eastman Kodak Co. agreed to reimburse at least 4.2 million owners of its obsolete instant cameras as part of a settlement of a class action lawsuit. U.S. owners of the cameras would receive between $50 and $70 in cash and coupons.

■ E.F. Hutton & Co. paid $1.01 million in fines for a money-laundering scheme in which $1.5 million in cash was hidden from the government for clients, some of them members of organized crime.

■ The Wall Street Journal reported that flamboyant financier Paul Blazerian, now chairman of Slinger Co., was the target of major Securities and Exchange Commission and federal grand jury investigations for possibly violating a litany of securities laws.

■ Takeover strategist Asher B. Edelman and a Midwestern building materials company said they had purchased a 7.6 percent stake in Payless Cashways Inc. and may try to acquire the company.

■ Texaco Inc. and Carl Icahn, its biggest shareholder, discussed how to resolve their differences without continuing a proxy fight over five seats on the oil giant's board.

■ A group led by Texas financier Robert M. Bass offered to pay about $1.5 billion for the 91 percent interest in the publishing concern Macmillan Inc. that it doesn't already own. The management of the company said it was not for sale.

■ Merv Griffin and Donald Trump resumed their on-again, off-again negotiations for control of Resorts International Inc., a week after talks about the casino company collapsed.

■ Irving Bank Corp. said its board rejected Irving Bank's offer to acquire the company in a friendly merger with a big Italian bank.

■ The Interstate Commerce Commission gave final approval to the $80 million merger of Greyhound and Trailways, the nation's two largest bus companies. The two bus lines have been operating as a single carrier since last July.

■ The House Banking Committee approved legislation requiring lenders to make full disclosure on home equity loans.

■ The General Accounting Office said the liabilities of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. exceeded its assets by $13.7 billion at the end of 1987, worse than the $6.3 billion deficit a year earlier.

■ A General Services Administration appeals panel found discrimination against AT&T by the agency's employees in awarding contracts. It canceled four contracts that had been awarded to the company's rivals and ordered them given to AT&T.

Consumer prices up again and higher inflation looms

By Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Big increases in food, energy and clothing costs sent consumer prices up 0.4 percent in April, an annual rate of increase of 5.3 percent, as the country got its second monthly dose of higher inflation, the government reported Friday.

Inflation, which has been at or below 4 percent for the past six years, is being pushed higher by price pressures caused by tight labor markets, high factory operating rates and a weak dollar, analysts said.

The April price increase followed a 0.5 percent May advance, which had been the sharpest monthly gain since January 1987. Analysts said the uptick in inflation over the past two months is worrisome because it reflected price increases in a variety of areas.

In April, grocery store prices shot up 0.8 percent, the biggest increase in 20 months, while gasoline costs, which had fallen from September through February, jumped 1.1 percent.

Clothing costs, which had surged a record 2 percent in March, posted another 2 percent rise in April, reflecting higher costs of imports. "We have an unacceptably high rate of inflation that is widespread," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "This is the consequence of both the strength in the economy and the effect of the weaker dollar on imported goods prices."

Seven months after the October stock market crash raised fears of a recession, analysts have now switched to worrying that the economy is growing so strongly that inflationary pressures are building. They cite the fact that factories are now operating at the highest level in eight years while unemployment has fallen to a 14-year-low of 5.4 percent.

The Federal Reserve already has boosted interest rates twice in the past two months in an effort to dampen demand and head off further inflationary pressures. But the tightening has done little to reassure financial markets, which have been in a lull since recent days, driven down not only by inflation concerns but fears that interest rates will go higher.

Bond prices and stock prices both fell Friday on news of the inflation report, even though the overall increase was no worse than what economists had been expecting.

Top Reagan administration officials, including Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, have contended the market's inflationary fears are overblown.

In a statement Friday, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said "inflation remains under control" with no significant acceleration from recent years.

But private economists disagreed. David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer, predicted consumer prices would rise by 5.5 percent this year. That would be the fastest inflation rate since 1981 and up substantially from the 4.4 percent increase in 1987.

"The fears that people have had about higher inflation are justified," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch. "The general message in this report is that prices have been rising in the past two months at a faster pace and they will continue to do so."

Steinberg said the Fed will be forced to keep pushing interest rates higher to fight rising inflationary pressures and that this eventually will lead to a recession sometime next year. But other economists said it was too soon to predict a recession from the uptick in inflation.

One way to reduce taxes

QUESTION: Being in the highest income tax bracket, the tax-free interest from municipal bonds appeals to me. I have about $150,000 in investments producing tax-free income. This money is for my retirement, as I will have a very small pension.

I realized the market values of municipal bonds change, in relation to interest rates. However, if I can do without the principal of such bonds until they mature, am I right in assuming they provide a reasonable way to reduce my taxes?

ANSWER: You are absolutely correct.

The market values of already issued municipal bonds rise when interest rates go down and fall when interests go up. But, by holding a bond until its maturity date, you'll receive the bond's face value — unless it is called for early redemption or defaults.

If a bond you own is called in before its maturity, you redeem it and get the "call price." That price will be equal to or higher than the bond's face value.

If a bond defaults, the issuer does not pay it off. Municipal bond defaults have been few and far between. You can protect yourself from that unlikely event by buying bonds insured by private companies, which pledge to pay interest and principal of defaulted bonds.

For people in the highest income tax bracket, municipal bonds certainly can reduce taxes. They are one of the few remaining legitimate tax shelters.

QUESTION: When a municipal bond's maturity date arrives, do I get the price I originally paid for the bond or do I get the bond's market value on that due date?

ANSWER: You get the bond's face value when it matures. Most municipals are issued in $5,000 minimum denominations. If you own a $5,000 municipal bond, you receive $5,000 for it. If you own $150,000 face value of bonds, you get $150,000 when they mature.

The face value might be more or less than the price you paid, depending on market conditions at the time of your purchase. On the maturity date, the market price of a bond normally is equal to the bond's face value.

QUESTION: I have read about short-term intermediate-term and long-term municipal bonds. How long is the maturity of each type?

ANSWER: There are no hard and fast dividing lines. Different municipals come with maturities of from less than one year to more than 30 years. Generally, those due to mature in about 10 years are considered intermediate term. But some people might call a 10-year bond long term. Municipal bonds with really short maturities, such as three years or less, usually are named municipal notes.

QUESTION: Municipal revenue bonds are issued for a single purpose, such as to pay for a hospital, a toll bridge or water system, and the bond's interest and principal payments depends on the success of that project. Are general obligation bonds issued to repair roads, build local schools, etc.?

ANSWER: Yes. General obligation bonds — "GOs," for short — also are called "public purpose" bonds. They are backed by the full faith, credit and taxing power of the state, city or other political subdivision that issued them.

Winning Colors looks for win in Preakness

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — A triumph by the filly Winning Colors in the Preakness Saturday would be something to savor for trainer D. Wayne Lukas, who was a victorious villain eight years ago.

A visit to the winner's circle at Pimlico would be a step into racing history for Lukas and his Kentucky Derby winner, who would become the first filly to win two Triple Crown races.

Eight colts, six of whom ran in the Derby, including runner-up Forty Niner, will oppose her in the 1 1/2-mile race.

The only other filly who had a chance at two wins in the series was Genuine Risk, who won the 1 1/4-mile Derby in 1980.

In the Preakness, she lost momentum when she was carried extremely wide at the top of the stretch by Codex, who won by 4 1/4 lengths, with the filly second.

Codex, who withstood a foul claim, was trained by D. Wayne Lukas.

The following morning a guard at the stable gate gave Lukas a bag containing 50 or 60 telegrams.

"I thought the whole world would congratulate me," Lukas recalled Friday. "I just won the Preakness."

When he began to read the telegrams, however, Lukas "found they were running 10-1 against me, so I stopped reading them."

"Most of them were from women and children. They said things like 'You quarter horse trainer, what are you trying to do?'"

The 52-year-old Lukas, a former basketball coach, began his racing career by training quarter horses.

The fourth and last filly to win the Preakness was Nellie Morse in 1924. A victory by Winning Colors would be generally popular and would put her in position to become the 12th Triple Crown winner and first since Affirmed in 1978 with a win in the 1 1/4-mile Belmont Stakes June 11.

Genuine Risk, who finished second in the Belmont, was the only filly to run in all three races.

"If she were to win this one and the next one, I think she would be great," Lukas said.

"The difference between the Derby and now is that this time we're not underestimating her," said John Veitch, who trains Brian's Time, who was sixth in the Derby. "We doubted the quality of her California races."

Brian's Time, a stretch runner, will need someone to pressure Winning Colors and not let her set her own pace, and Veitch feels he'll get help.

"I'd be very surprised to see her get her own way early in the race," Veitch said.

Trainer Woody Stephens said Forty Niner, who was second by a neck in the Derby, will go for the lead when he breaks from the No. 4 post just inside the filly.

Parker says clubs knew of drug use

By Alan Robinson
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Major league teams ignored evidence in the late 1970s and early 1980s that many top players were drug abusers because the teams wanted them to keep playing, lawyers for Dave Parker charged.

Bowie Kuhn, baseball commissioner at the time, failed to act against known abusers even after his investigator uncovered heavy cocaine use, in order to contain adverse publicity that could have damaged baseball's image, Parker's attorneys said in court documents filed Friday.

The Pittsburgh Pirates are suing their former outfielder to keep from making $5.3 million in deferred payments owed Parker under the five-year contract he negotiated in January 1979, shortly after he won the 1978 National League Most Valuable Player award.

Parker is now with the Oakland Athletics. The Pirates claim the former All-Star Game MVP was addicted to cocaine for nearly five years, that it caused an admittedly serious decline in Parker's play and that his fraudulent refusal to disclose his drug use legally cancels the team's financial obligations to him.

Parker's attorney, Louis Willenken, said in a pretrial statement released Friday that the Pirates knew about Parker's cocaine use but ignored it and never complained until it came time to pay him.

Parker will reveal names of other players who used drugs if the case goes to trial "pursuant to proper confidentiality procedures," according to the pretrial statement.

Malone, Jazz are confident

By Bob Black
The Associated Press

Karl Malone isn't giving any guarantees, but the Utah Jazz are confident as they prepare for the deciding game in their NBA second-round playoff series on the Los Angeles Lakers' home court Saturday.

"We know we can win down there," said Utah Jazz forward Thurl Bailey.

On Thursday night, the Jazz night evened the series at three victories with an awesome 108-80 victory over the defending champion Lakers.

Before the game, Malone guaranteed the Jazz would win and force a seventh game. He scored 27 points, 16 in the first half, and grabbed 11 rebounds to keep the promise, but Utah Coach Frank Layden criticized him for making such a rash prediction.

"I chastised Karl for that," Layden said. "He shouldn't say that. When you walk by the lion it's better to do it softly. You don't want to wake him up."

"But Karl plays with a lot of enthusiasm, and that's needed badly in the NBA — guys who play with college-type intensity," Layden said. "But they sometimes say college things."

The Jazz used a 26-2 run in the first quarter and led 31-13 after the first period en route to handing the Lakers their worst loss since the 1985 championship series. In that year, the Boston Celtics defeated Los Angeles 148-114, but the Lakers went on to win the title 4-2.

The Jazz, who have already won in the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., and lost Tuesday's game there on a last-second shot by Michael Cooper, are hopeful their momentum will carry over.

"I liked our chances after the second game," said Bailey, referring to Utah's 101-97 victory at the Forum May 10. "All it takes is believing in ourselves. As long as we hang together and play well, if we come up short, it's been a great year."

"It's great to be able to do that to a team like that," said Bailey, who scored 20 points Thursday night. "It's one of those things where our defense was clicking for us."

Utah's stingy defense held the Lakers to just 6-of-20 shooting from the field in the first quarter and Los Angeles finished the game shooting only 37 percent from the field, making 30-of-80.

Byron Scott and Tony Campbell scored 16 points and 14 points, while Laker all-stars Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson were held to just 10 points each.

Johnson, who entered the game averaging more than 20 points, was held scoreless in the second half as Bobby Hansen frustrated the veteran guard, who made just 3-of-12 from the field.

Hansen also helped Utah's scoring, making 10-of-11 shots from the field and finishing with 25 points.

"Throw out the 10 for 11," said Utah guard John Stockton, who had 17 assists in the victory. "What he's doing on Magic he deserves a standing O."

"People sometimes overlook that because Magic's still coming up with some pretty good numbers. They don't realize how hard Bobby's making him work."

"And it makes a difference," Stockton said. "Passes aren't as easy (and) driving isn't as easy. Mark (Eaton) has been getting a lot of the credit, but a lot of it has to go to Bobby, too. He's been playing extremely hard."

Hansen said he wasn't sure whether his performance has frustrated Johnson, but he said that is his goal.

"I try to frustrate people in any game I play — tennis, golf, anything," Hansen said. "That's one of my weapons."

Another Jazz weapon has been the 7-foot-4 Eaton, who has clogged up the middle and shut down the 41-year-old Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time playoff scoring leader.

Red Sox, Yanks beaten by foes from West

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Butch Wynegar lined a tie-breaking double after failing to sacrifice in the 10th inning Friday night, lifting the California Angels over the Red Sox and Roger Clemens 4-2.

Chico Walker led off the 10th with a walk, just the second issued by Clemens, 6-2. Wynegar fouled off a bunt attempt and then lined a double to right as Walker scored easily. Mark McLemore's run-scoring single made it 4-2.

Clemens, 6-2, walked only two while raising his major league-leading strikeout total to 102.

DeWayne Buice, 1-2, who replaced starter Chuck Finley at the start of the eighth, got the victory. Bryan Harvey pitched the 10th for his second save.

The Angels ended Clemens' scoreless streak at 19 innings with two runs in the second. But the Red Sox scored an unearned run off him without a hit to tie the score 2-2.

With one out, Dwight Evans reached second on a grounder to shortstop which Dick Schofield threw into the dugout. Evans took third as Mike Greenwell grounded out. On a 3-2 pitch in the dirt, Jim Rice struck out, but Evans scored and Rice reached first on a wild pitch.

Clemens, who threw three-hit shutouts at Kansas City and Seattle last week and had not allowed a run for 18 innings, allowed eight hits and struck out nine.

The Angels combined three hits to overcome a 1-0 deficit in the second. Chili Davis led off with a double and took third on Jack Howell's single off the wall in left field. After Chico Walker struck out, Butch Wynegar hit a ground ball directly to third baseman Wade Boggs. Boggs fumbled it, costing him any chance at a double play, then threw out Wynegar as Davis scored.

Schofield then tripled, scoring Howell.

Finley allowed seven hits, walked five and hit a batter.

Athletics 11, Yankees 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Carney Lansford, the major league's leading hitter, had four singles. Dave Parker homered and Ron Hassey drove in three runs as the Oakland Athletics beat the New York Yankees 11-3 Friday night in the first meeting of American League division leaders.

Lansford now is batting .396. Dave Henderson got three hits, including a pair of doubles, and Glenn Hubbard also had three hits in the 14-hit attack. Bob Welch improved to 7-2 as the Athletics, with the best record in baseball at 29-11, won for the 14th time in their last 16 road games.

Welch gave up seven hits, struck out six and balked three times in seven innings. He balked home a run in the third inning and, leading 7-1, gave up two runs in the seventh.

Welch had faced the Yankees four previous times, in the 1978 and 1981 World Series. He was 0-1 with a 10.39 ERA against New York in those appearances.

Oakland, eight games ahead of Texas in the AL West, continued its clutch hitting. The Athletics are batting .321 with runners in scoring position, and singles by Henderson and Hubbard set up Hassey's double in the second inning off Tommy John, 2-1.

John, who turns 45 on Sunday and is the oldest player in the majors, fell to 22-18 lifetime against Oakland.

Mariners 3, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE (AP) — Alvin Davis singled home Harold Reynolds in the eighth inning Friday night, lifting the Seattle Mariners to a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Reynolds reached first on an error by second baseman Bill Ripken to open the inning, and advanced on a sacrifice bunt and an infield out before Davis' single.

Mark Langston, 4-3, worked into the eighth inning, leaving after a leadoff walk to Fred Lynn. Mike Jackson pitched two scoreless innings for his first save of the season.

Royals 4, Indians 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bo Jackson's two-out double in the eighth inning scored Bill Pecota with the winning run Friday night as the Kansas City Royals edged the Cleveland Indians 4-3.

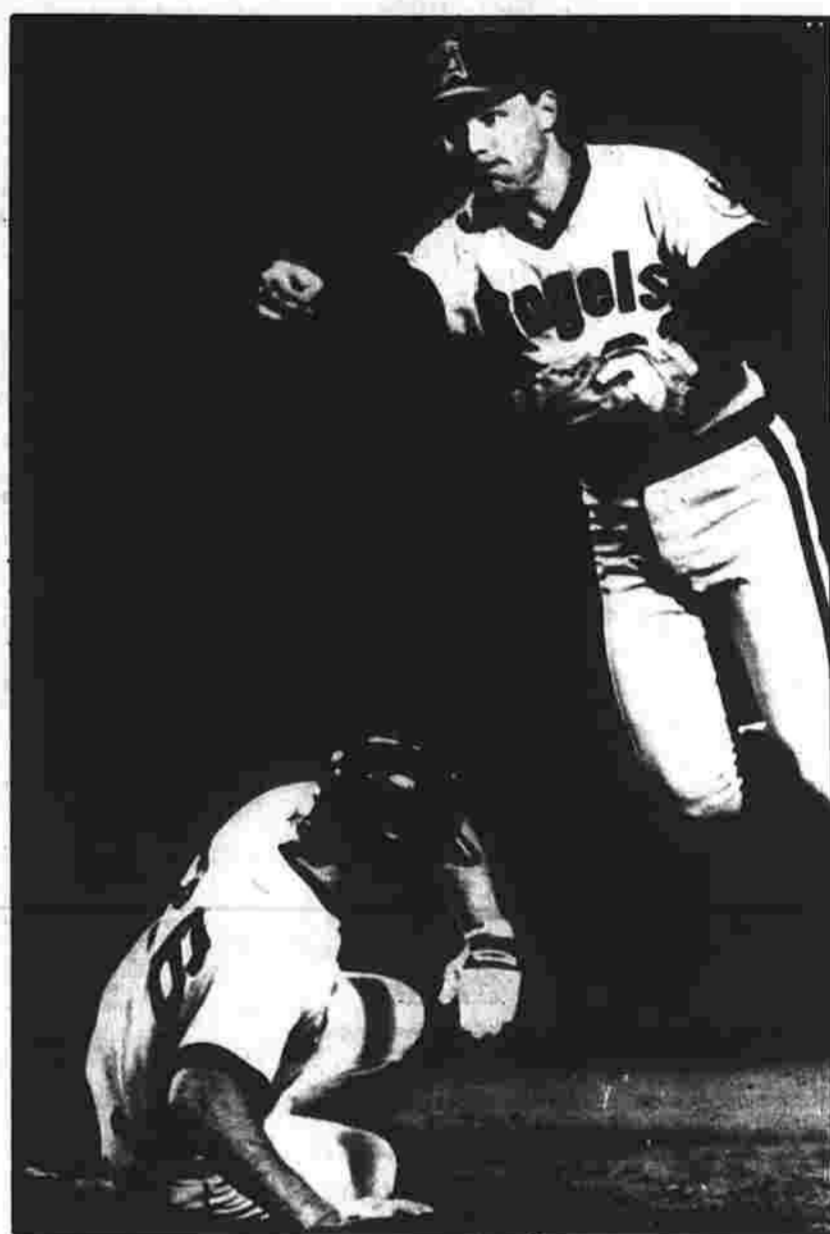

The Royals, who prevented Cleveland from moving into first place in the American League East, had blown a 3-1 lead. But Bill Buckner's infield single in the eighth was followed by Jackson's double off the left-field wall off John Farrell, 4-3.

Steve Farr then pitched the ninth for his second save.

Blue Jays 3, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jim Clancy got his first victory in a month and Lloyd Moseby homered Friday night as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the slumping Milwaukee Brewers 3-1.

Clancy, 2-4 and winless in his five previous starts, struck out six and gave up seven hits before giving way to reliever David Wells with one out in the seventh after a single by Jim Gantner and double by Paul Mollitor.

Wells struck out B.J. Surhoff and, after a walk to Robin Yount, retired Greg Brock on a bouncer to third. Clancy's victory was his first since April 19. Wells got his second save.

Tigers 14, White Sox 6

CHICAGO (AP) — Alan Trammell

hit an upper-deck homer, a double and two singles Friday night in leading the Detroit Tigers to a 14-6 trouncing of the Chicago White Sox.

Ray Knight and Darrell Evans each had three of the Tigers' 20 hits. It was Detroit's third straight victory and Chicago's fifth loss in a row, their longest losing streak of the year.

Frank Tanana, 7-2, gave up three runs and three hits — all in the fourth inning.

Pirates snap losing streak with win over the Braves

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mike Diaz drove in three runs with his first two hits of the season as Pittsburgh snapped a five-game losing streak with a 10-3 victory over Atlanta Friday night.

Junior Ortiz also drove in three runs for the Pirates, who scored three runs each in the first, third and fourth innings off Braves starter Tom Glavine, 1-6.

Mike Dunne, 2-2, picked up his first win since opening day. He allowed nine hits and three runs over 7 2/3 innings, struck out four and walked three. Dunne was on the disabled list from April 6 through April 28 with a muscle strain in his left side.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead in the first on Andres

Thomas' third homer of the season. But the Pirates came back with three runs in their half of the inning. Barry Bonds singled to lead off the Pirates first and Andy Van Slyke followed one out later with an infield single, breaking an 0-for-18 slump. Consecutive singles by Bobby Bonilla and Diaz produced two runs before Ortiz's sacrifice fly made it 3-1.

Diaz had been 0-for-9 since coming off the disabled list earlier this month.

Reds 7, Cubs 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Paul O'Neill drove in three runs and Mario Soto won the 100th game of his career as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-2 Friday night.

Soto, 3-2, allowed five hits, three of them by first baseman Mark Grace. He struck out six and walk one in his third complete game of the season.

Reds rookie Jeff Treadway had three hits, extending his hitting streak to 13 games. O'Neill hit two hits, including a homer, and scored three runs.

The Reds scored four runs on five hits in the second inning.

Sports in Brief

Oilers take 2-0 lead

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Wayne Gretzky, who set up Edmonton's first two goals, scored the game-winner with 8:39 to play Friday night, giving the Oilers a 4-2 victory over the Boston Bruins and a two-game lead in the Stanley Cup finals.

Gretzky set up first-period power-play goals by Glenn Anderson and Mark Messier, and it looked like that would be enough after the Oilers slowed Boston's attack to a standstill for the first two periods.

But Bob Joyce gave the Bruins life when he beat Edmonton goaltender Grant Fuhr with a slapshot from the top of the left circle 35 seconds into the third period. Ex-Oiler Ken Linseman tied it at 3:16, backhanding his own rebound behind Fuhr.

But the Oilers regained control of the tempo and Esa Tikkanen set up the winning goal, stealing a pass just inside the Boston blue line and relaying the puck to Gretzky, alone in the slot. Gretzky deked Boston goaltender Rejean Lemelin to the ice and backhanded the puck under his stick.

Jari Kurri scored into an empty net with seven seconds to play for the final margin.

The series moves to Boston for Games 3 and 4 Sunday and Tuesday nights.

Wadkins ties for lead

FORT WORTH, Texas — Lanny Wadkins scored an eagle-3 in a round of 68 that left him in a 3-way tie for the lead Friday at the halfway point of the $750,000 Colonial National Invitation tournament.

Wadkins was tied at 5-under 135 on the Colonial Country Club course with Clarence Rose and Scott Hoch. The three were part of the five-man group that shared the first-round lead.

Hoch and Rose, a playoff loser last week in Dallas, also shot 68. Hoch regained a share of the lead with birdies on two of the last three holes.

Charles leads Seniors

SCARBOROUGH-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. — Bob Charles shot a tournament record 7-under-par 63 Friday to take the first-round lead in the $300,000 Commemorative Tournament.

The 52-year-old New Zealand native, winless in nine events on the PGA Senior Tour this year, had an eagle, six birdies and a bogey at the 6,545-yard Sleepy Hollow Country Club to take a two-shot lead over Larry Mowry.

Mowry was the first-round leader last year, but finished in a tie for seventh.

Chuck Evans, a rookie playing his sixth event on the Senior Tour, was tied for third at 66 with Charles Coody.

Harold Henning, Bruce Crampton and Jim Ferree were next at 67.

Tom Watson to be honored

PINEHURST, N.C. — Tom Watson, Peter Thompson and Robert Harlow have been selected as 1988 inductees for the PGA-World Golf Hall of Fame, said Peter Stilwell, hall director.

The trio, chosen by a committee of the hall of fame and the Golf Writers Association of America, will be inducted to the Hall in Pinehurst, N.C. during the PGA-World Golf Hall of Fame Invitational Nov. 3-5.

Kimball leads U.S. divers

LARGO, Fla. — Bruce Kimball, 1984 Olympics silver medalist in the men's platform, won the men's event Friday to help the United States beat China in a dual meet.

Chen Xiaodan of China won the women's event. The United States outscored China 21-19 in the two-day meet.

Kimball, of Ann Arbor, Mich. scored 655.0 points. Mike Wantuck of Columbus, Ohio, was followed by 650.65 by Li Kongzheng of China with 639.1 and Chen Yingying of China with 636.45.

American Greg Louganis, who won the gold medal at the 1984 Olympics, withdrew because of a wrist ailment.

East names Facchini head football coach

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

The wishbone will live on. Thirty-three year-old Leo Facchini, who was nurtured under the wishbone teachings of Bill Loika at Central Connecticut State University, was named Friday as the head football coach at East Catholic High School. Facchini fills the vacancy created when Jude Kelly resigned in mid-February to accept a teaching and head football coaching position at Southington High School.

Facchini, who has been an assistant coach at St. Bernard's High School in Uncasville the last four years, will be a biology teacher at East. That was one of the criteria set by East Athletic Director Tom Malin and the selection committee in filling the vacancy. "We had a commitment to the football program that the coach would definitely be a teacher (in the building) as well as coach," Malin said. Facchini was one of 15-20 applicants for the vacancy.

Facchini is aware he's taking over a program that was ranked No. 1 in the state a year ago and one of the top 20 in the country by USA Today. "I know I'll be under a magnifying glass. I'm aware of that but feel if we employ the same work ethic as I preach, we'll be successful," he said.

Kelly, in nine years at East, posted an overall 61-23-2 mark. His last two teams went 21-1-1, and finished the '87 season on a 16-game winning streak. East won state Class M titles in 1983 and '86, and the Class M crown in 1987.

Facchini's philosophy seems to echo that held by Kelly. "While winning is important, it's important to be a winner in life as well as on the field. If you can teach these things that coaching is an extension of the classroom, then you can be successful as a coach," Facchini said. He is also a firm believer in weight training, one of the "secrets" that Kelly advocated. "I'm an ardent believer in weight training," Facchini, who implemented weight training programs at Waterford High and St. Bernard, said. "You need a good weight program to have a good athletic program," he said.

Facchini is familiar with recently named Manchester High head football coach Jim McLaughlin, who gave him his start in the coaching ranks at Waterford High in 1979.

Facchini is a 1973 graduate of St. Bernard's and a 1978 graduate of Central where he played and lettered four years. "My philosophy with the kids is hard work and commitment and loyalty and dedication to the program." He said there may be some fine tuning, but no major shift from the wishbone that Kelly installed in 1979. "I'm a disciple of Loika, the master of the wishbone. I'll run the wishbone. We may pass a little more but offensively I don't plan any major changes," Facchini said.

Facchini introduced William Palazzo, who'll join him off the staff of St. Bernard's, as his No. 1 assistant. Palazzo has been with the Saints for three years.

The new Eagle coach said he has no reservations about jumping into the fray in the All Connecticut Conference. "I have no misapprehension about the level of football they play or the expertise of the coaches that coach in it. Every week when you go to a game you know you're up against a well-prepared and well-coached team."

The Rev. William Charbonneau, East's president, in the press release said the school chose wisely. "We were not looking merely for an X's and O's man. Our program has been successful on and off the field, but Jude Kelly had shown that there were other important dimensions to the program.

David Kool/Manchester Herald

NEW EAST COACH — Leo Facchini, 33, a former assistant coach at St. Bernard's in Uncasville, was named head football coach at East Catholic High School on Friday. He succeeds Jude Kelly.

"We wanted a coach who understood the school's values, who could support the Catholicity of our program. We did not limit our vision to technical aspects, but took the total picture into account. Leo Facchini is in our judgement the best man for us at this time."

Quinlan takes lead at LPGA

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Sally Quinlan celebrated her 27th birthday Friday by shooting a 4-under-par 68 to take a two-shot lead after the second round of the LPGA Championship.

Quinlan's 68 followed a first-round 69 and left her at 7-under-par 137 through 36 holes over the 6,389-yard, par-72 Grizzly Course at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

Quinlan has one victory — in the 1984 MasterCard International Pro-Am — in five years on the LPGA Tour. Her best previous finish in a major tournament was a tie for 16th last year in the LPGA Championship. Her best finish this season was a tie for 10th in the Centinela Hospital Classic.

"I don't remember what I finished a year ago, but I remember thinking I'd like to come back next year and do a lot better for the weekend," said the Massachusetts native.

She said she planned a quiet birthday celebration, going out to dinner with friends, adding that, "I'll let them buy."

Among those friends, she said, was Laura Harbit, who shot the day's best round, a 5-under 67, to move into a tie for second with Amy Alcott and Sherrin Smyers.

"Laura is one of my best friends," said Quinlan. "She'll be chasing me all weekend."

Celtics triumph, even series the NBA finals in each of the last four seasons, held a 101-98 lead with a minute to play, but gave Atlanta chances.

Ainge was called for walking with 32 seconds left and Ainge then hit one of two free throws with 33 seconds left for a 102-98 lead.

Dominique Wilkins completed his 35-point night with a running one-hander with 29 seconds to play, ending the scoring.

The Celtics then permitted the 24-second shot clock expire on them, giving Atlanta one last chance to force overtime.

But Cliff Levingston's shot on a drive down the middle bounced off to the left, where Dennis Johnson claimed the rebound with one second left, assuring Boston of the victory.

Kevin McHale led the Celtics with 26 points and 10 rebounds. Larry Bird added 23 points and 11 rebounds and Ainge contributed 22 points and 14 assists.

The Hawks, who had won three in a row in the series, got scoring from only two players — Wilkins with his 35 and Glenn Rivers with 32.

The Celtics had lost eight of its last nine games in The Omni to Atlanta, but now get back to the Boston Garden, where the Hawks appeared to have taken the upper hand Wednesday night by snapping a 13-game losing streak on the parquet floor with a 112-104 victory.

Ainge scored nine points in an 11-4 run late in the third quarter that created an 83-74 Boston lead, which the Hawks were never able to erase.

The Celtics bolted to a 5-0 lead in the first half-minute when Ainge hit a 3-pointer and McHale scored on a turnaround jumper in the lane.

Boston stretched its lead to 15-6 on consecutive three-point plays by Bird and Ainge before the Hawks rallied with a 12-6 run that featured six points by Wilkins and chopped the Boston lead to 21-18 with just under five minutes remaining in the first quarter.

Spud Webb came off the bench to ignite a Hawk burst late in the first quarter, scoring six points in a 9-0 run that gave Atlanta a 37-32 lead two minutes into the second period.

Boston came back to tie the game at 37 and 39 before Atlanta regained the lead until McHale's two free throws with 4:06 left in the half gave the Celtics a 48-47 advantage.

The lead changed on the next six baskets before Mark Acres hit a layup and two free throws to give Boston a 56-53 lead.

Atlanta regained the lead at 57-56 on a dunk and two free throws by Wilkins before Johnson gave the Celtics a 58-57 lead by hitting from the top of the key 20 seconds before halftime.

East assures itself a berth in ACC tourney

H.S. Roundup

FAIRFIELD — A combination of strong pitching from Marc Mangiafico and Kevin Greene, solid defensive play, and just enough hitting propelled East Catholic High to a double-header sweep over Fairfield Prep, 4-0 and 5-3 in eight innings, in All Connecticut Conference action Friday afternoon at Fairfield University.

The sweep moves East to 6-3 in the ACC, 13-4 overall, and assures East a berth in next week's ACC Tournament which will be held at Fairfield University. "We played outstanding defense both games and had great pitching," East Coach Jim Penders said. Prep dips to 2-5 in the ACC and 8-8 overall with the setbacks.

Mangiafico, 6-2, pitched a five-hitter in the opener, striking out 12 while walking just one. "Marc was just outstanding," Penders said.

East plated all the runs it needed in the opener in the second inning. Mangiafico walked and Paul Dumais followed with a single to left. Joe Gorman cracked a one-out RBI single and Jimmy Robinson followed with an RBI single. East added two insurance markers in the third.

In the nightcap, Prep's Aaron Quinn had a no-hitter going into the sixth. A walk, sacrifice, walk and RBI single by Rob Stanford to break up the no-hit bid tied it. Mangiafico followed with a 370-foot two-run double off the fence in left.

Prep tied it in the bottom of the sixth on Rob Rotondo's two-run homer. Rotondo was 3-for-4 in the nightcap.

Gorman led off the Eagle eighth against losing pitcher Brian Cody with a single. Stanford sacrificed followed by a walk to Mangiafico. Dumais dumped a single to left to jam the bases with Cody plucking Jimmy Penders with a pitch, forcing the go-ahead run home. A grounder by Mike Begley was turned into a forceout at third, but the relay was thrown away sending Mangiafico home with East's fifth run.

Kevin Greene, 3-1, was the winning pitcher in the nightcap. He struck out four and walked none. He needed help from Mangiafico in the eighth. Prep got the first two runners on before Greene got the dangerous Rotondo on a pop-up. Mangiafico came in and fanned clean-up batter Ted Drury on a 3-2 pitch with Greene getting John Fismic on a pop back to the mound for the final out.

East was without its Nos. 3 and 4 batters, Pat Merritt and Doug Rizzuto. "I was proud the way the kids reacted without them," Penders said.

RHAM bests Tech

HEBRON — Hitting in the clutch was the difference in this one as RHAM High downed Cheney Tech, 7-4, Friday in Charter Oak Conference baseball action.

The Sachems are now 10-6 overall while the Beavers slide to 8-8 in the COC, 8-overall. Cheney's next game is Monday at Cromwell High at 3:30 p.m.

"RHAM hit in the clutch and we didn't. We left 10 on base and they stranded four. RHAM came through when it had to," Tech Coach Bill Baccaro said.

the damage with two outs on five consecutive singles. Cheney had scored three runs in the first on a Jim Krone two-run single and RBI double by Bob Bidwell. Don Sauer, back in the lineup for the first time in a month, ripped an apparent RBI single in the inning but it was nullified when the runner was ruled out for not touching third base.

Jeff Allen pitched well in relief for Cheney. He allowed three hits, two infield bleeders. Sauer was 2-for-4 in his return and Bidwell stroked two doubles for Cheney. Chris Queen slapped three of RHAM's seven hits. Steve Emt was the winning pitcher despite walking seven. He fanned one.

MHS hopes doused

SOUTH WINDSOR — Any flickering hopes the Manchester High girls' softball team had of qualifying for postseason play were dimmed as host South Windsor High slammed the Indians, 17-1, Friday in CCC East Division action.

The Indians are now 6-10 for the season and, with two games remaining, mathematically eliminated from tournament consideration. The Indians' next game is Monday at Fitzgerald Field against Windham High.

"We were kind of flat today. We tried real hard but South Windsor came in and its bats were really stinging," Manchester Coach Mary Faignant said of the Bobcats' 17-hit barrage. Manchester mustered just three hits.

Karen Clark, Jen Andralat and Kathy Stewart ripped three hits apiece for the 9-7 Bobcats. South Windsor started to pull away with a six-run third inning. Kate Schaffner was the winning pitcher while Linda Hewitt absorbed the loss.

EC sweeps pair

WEST HARTFORD — East Catholic High girls' softball team swept a pair of non-conference outings from host Northwest Catholic, 17-0 in five innings and 13-2, Friday afternoon.

East winds up its regular season at 12-8. Northwest falls to 4-11 with the double loss. East's next action will be at the All Connecticut Conference Tournament on Thursday in Trumbull against an opponent to be announced.

"For a long time I thought we needed these two to make the tournament. But we got a couple of wins we didn't expect along the way. These games were good practice for the tournament," East Coach Jay McConville said.

East had 10 hits in the opener with Beth White, Maura McPadden and Tiffany White leading the way with two apiece. Krista Wisniewski was the winning pitcher, spinning a one-hitter. She walked three and struck out four.

In the nightcap, East had only four hits but took advantage of nine bases on balls and several Northwest miscues to pull out the verdict. Tiffany White capped a strong day with two more hits in the second game. Beth White and Cheryl Constantine, a pair of sophomores, combined on a three-hitter.

Bolton thumped

HEBRON — Host RHAM High posted a 17-3 victory over Bolton High Friday in Charter Oak Conference girls' softball action. The Sachems are now 12-1 in the COC, 15-2 overall, while the Bulldogs are now 4-9 overall. Bolton's next game is Monday at Cromwell High at 3:30 p.m.

Hilary Bell and winning pitcher Jen Herrmann each collected two hits for RHAM while Jen Maneggia and Sue Metcalf hit best for Bolton. The Bulldogs had five hits against Herrmann.

ATLANTA — Danny Ainge scored key baskets throughout the second half and Boston survived some late floor mistakes to trim Atlanta 102-100 Friday night and avoid its earliest exit from the NBA playoffs in five years.

The Celtics squared the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series at 3-3 and set up a seventh game in the Boston Garden on Sunday.

The winner will advance to the conference finals to face the Detroit Pistons, who disposed of Chicago 4-1 in the other conference semifinal series.

Despite having already qualified for the Class LL state baseball tournament, Manchester High assured itself of a winning record with a 5-2 victory over South Windsor in CCC East action Friday at Moriarty Field.

The win lifts Manchester to 9-4 in the CCC East and 10-7 overall while South Windsor falls to 7-6 in the division, 11-7 overall. The Indians' final regular season game is Tuesday night at 7 against East Hartford at McKenna Field.

Sophomore Matt Helin earned his first varsity win, going 3 2/3 innings, allowing one run on two hits while walking one and striking out two. Senior Scott Aronson started the game, but left with two outs in the first inning.

"(Aronson) had stiffness in his lower back," Manchester Don Race said. "I don't think it's anything serious. It was a precautionary measure."

Senior Joe Leonard relieved Aronson before giving way to Helin in the top of the third. Leonard came in once again to relieve Helin with two outs in the sixth and finished to earn the save.

"He (Helin) didn't have the stuff he normally has," Race said. "(But) he's got a lot of guts and drive. He didn't like coming out."

Trailing, 1-0, Manchester tallied twice in the bottom of the second to take a 2-1 advantage. Ken Gancarz started things off with a base hit to left field and stole second. Two outs later, Frank Savino walked and he and Gancarz moved to second and third on a Douglas balk. Marcus Mateya followed with a single up the middle scoring Gancarz. Joe Leonard reached on a throwing error by third baseman Craig Cherwinski allowing Savino to score.

The Bobcats tied the affair at 2-2 in the third on a Helin wild pitch. The score remained the same until the Indian fifth when Manchester scored three runs to put this game away.

Dom Laurinitis led off with a walk and then stole second. Keith DiYeso followed with another free pass. Gancarz then laid down a perfect sacrifice bunt which Symonds threw over Dan Van Horn's head, who was covering first, sending Laurinitis home with the go-ahead run. DiYeso went to third and Gancarz arrived safely at second on the play.

On out later, Schackner followed with the key hit of the frame — a two-run single to center scoring DiYeso and Gancarz.

In the South Windsor sixth, the Bobcats loaded the bases after two quick outs. Joe Leonard struck out Van Horn to end the threat.

Gancarz, Schackner, Mateya and sophomore Aris Leonard collected two hits apiece for the Indians while Douglas had two for the Bobcats.
