Man uses hostage in holdup

NEW HAVEN — New Haven police are searching for a man who held up a bank for $5,000 and made his getaway using a female hostage as cover.

The lone robber walked into a branch of Connecticut National Bank branch about 9:15 a.m. Wednesday and "pretended he had a weapon," said police Sgt. James V. Sorrentino.

The sergeant said the robber was holding a brown paper bag in a manner that made it appear a gun was inside and threatened to shoot.

As the robber left the bank with the money, he grabbed a customer, a 35-year-old New Haven woman, as a hostage and forced her to drive him a few blocks away, where he got out of the car and fled on foot, Sorrentino said.

The woman was unharmed, Sorrentino said.

Jury hears charge again

NEW LONDON — In what a state's attorney called a logical move, the jury in the murder trial of Richard Crafts has reheard the judge's final instructions.

The 12-member jury reheard the instructions Wednesday and adjourned without reaching a verdict.

State's Attorney Walter Flanagan said Wednesday it was "sort of a logical thing" for the jury to ask, finally, to hear the charge to the jury they've heard.

"They're being a very methodical jury," he said.

The jury began June 23 deciding whether Crafts, 50, an airline pilot from Newtown, murdered his wife, Helle, in November 1986, dismembered the body with a chainsaw and put the remains through a wood chipper.

Mental health staff strikes

ENFIELD — Forty mental health workers have walked off their jobs at a private regional center as they seek to bring their salaries in line with wages being paid their state counterparts.

The walkout came after last-ditch negotiations failed to bring a contract settlement.

The workers are seeking to bring their salaries in line with their counterparts at state facilities as being paid.

Management at the North Central Connecticut Mental Health Care System argues that its state funding isn't sufficient to cover the 30 to 60 percent pay raises being sought by the workers, who are represented by District 1199 of the New England Health Care Employees Union.

O'Neill argues for highway

NEW BRITAIN — The benefits of completing the Central Connecticut Expressway outweigh the impact on the wetlands in the highway's path, according to Gov. William A. O'Neill.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers last week halted construction of the project because of concerns about the impact on 14 acres of wetlands near the Stanley Municipal Golf Course in New Britain.

In a letter to Col. Thomas Rhen, New England director of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, O'Neill said that consideration of the wetlands should not halt construction of the expressway.

Arrest 'kink' in campaign

BRISTOL — Former Bristol Mayor Frank Longo said his arrest in May for soliciting on U.S. Postal Service property petition signatures has put a "kink" for his independent candidacy for U.S. Senate.

Longo was arrested at the Torrington post office and charged with criminal trespass. Post office regulations forbid soliciting on department property, but Longo said the regulation is unconstitutional.

The arrest has put a "kink" in his petition campaign, Longo said. Longo has solicited 6,000 signatures, about half of which were gathered at 15 other post offices around the state.

Former mayor enters race

ANSONIA — Former Meriden Mayor Joseph J. Mariani challenged U.S. Rep. John G. Rowland to a series of debates as he announced he will seek the Democratic nomination for the 5th District congressional seat.

Rowland is a two-term Republican incumbent.

In a remarks to about 60 supporters Wednesday, Mariani challenged Rowland to a series of debates and accused the congressman of being indifferent to trillion-dollar deficits, human rights and the plight of the poor and homeless.

Inmate nabbed a day later

MONTVILLE — An inmate who walked away from the Montville Correctional Center during an outdoor recreation period was captured a day later in Danielson, state police said.

Romeo Mabeu, 37, of Danielson was captured about 6 p.m. Wednesday and charged with escape. He was scheduled to be arraigned today in Norwich Superior Court.

Mabeu escaped from correction officers at Montville at about 8 p.m. Tuesday, police said.

He was serving a three-year term for sexual assault and was due to be released in April 1989, state police said.

Montville Warden William Maynard said Mabeu, who had never caused any trouble at the prison, has been in and out of jail since the 1970s. Mabeu had escaped once in the past, in 1977, authorities said.

O'Neill rejects call for spending cut

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill, who meets today with his commissioners to discuss budget problems, is rejecting a Republican call to trim the 1988-89 budget by 3.5 percent, or $200 million to avoid a deficit a year from now.

A week after announcing the state faced a $77.5 million deficit in the year that ended June 30, O'Neill summed his agency heads to the Executive Residence to urge them to switch spending in the new fiscal year.

Earlier Wednesday, Senate Minority Leader Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford and James H. McLaughlin, R-Woodbury, had called on O'Neill to trim the budget now while it was still early in the fiscal year.

They also said it was wrong for O'Neill to blame federal tax law changes for a $77.5 million deficit that the state faces for the 1987-88 fiscal year, which ended June 30.

They said the deficit is a result of double-digit budget increases that have been approved by the General Assembly. The 1988-89 budget carried a 12 percent increase in spending over 1987-88.

The deficit is the first in five years. The governor said federal tax reform was responsible for a $60 million drop in corporate tax revenue below what had been expected. He also said receipts from the state sales tax for 1987-88 were $20 million below projections.

Smith and McLaughlin repeated arguments they made during the springtime debate on the 1988-89 budget, that revenues from state taxes are not going to grow by 14 percent, as the Democratic majority claimed when it was putting together the budget.

A more realistic estimate, they said, was 8 percent, possibly 9 percent.

They declined to suggest areas where spending should be reduced, saying that is O'Neill's responsibility. Smith and McLaughlin said a special legislative session on budget issues, as some Democrats and Republicans have suggested, isn't necessary and that O'Neill has the authority to trim spending.

Smith said that Republicans are worried that the rainy day fund, which will have about $164 million in it when the 1987-88 deficit is covered, could be consumed by next year, "if some spending controls are not put into place."

"It is incumbent upon the governor to exercise his authority now, just one week into the fiscal year, while there is still some flexibility in the budget," Smith said.

O'Neill plans to name a special commission to look into the deficit and, more specifically, examine the impact of federal tax law changes.

Directory help no longer free in all incidents

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Telephone customers used to calling for directory assistance rather than looking up in-state telephone numbers in directories will soon have to pay for their habit.

State utility regulators Wednesday voted 3-2 to allow Southern New England Telecommunications Corp. to begin charging for some directory assistance calls.

Under the new system, residential customers will get five free directory assistance calls a month and commercial customers will get three. All information calls after the limits will cost 25 cents each, for residential and commercial customers.

"We continue to oppose it and believe when the public begins to get charged for these calls there will be a howl of protest," said state Consumer Counsel James Meehan.

But in approving the pay plan, regulators at the Department of Public Utility Control also ordered SNET to cut 90 cents from the monthly bills of all residential and commercial customers. The cut is expected to offset the estimated $15.9 million SNET will realize from information call charges and labor saved in answering those calls.

In its original proposal to the DPUC, SNET proposed giving business customers five free information calls a month. The company also sought to reduce some intrastate long-distance rates and accelerating depreciation to offset the anticipated gain.

SNET spokesman William Seekamp said the company was pleased that it will be able to charge for information calls, but dissatisfied that its proposal was rejected. He said the state's intrastate toll rates are among the highest in the region, while local rates are among the lowest.

"We had hoped the DPUC in its final decision would have used this opportunity to address, at least in part, this inequity between local and toll rates," Seekamp said.

The compromise also split the five utility commissioners. The two who voted against the plan, Commissioners David Harrigan and Otto Neuman, did so because they favored SNET's original proposal.

"We do not believe that only lowering exchange rates will provide any tangible economic or societal benefit to Connecticut's telephone users and indeed pose unintended burdens to particular uses," Harrigan and Neuman said in their minority opinion.

Peter G. Boucher, chairman of the five-member commission, disagreed.

Officials blast inmate's release

HARTFORD (AP) — The early release of a Hartford street gang member from prison has renewed criticism of the state Department of Correction.

In February, Scott L. Walton, 19, was sentenced to three years prison in connection with two shootings in June 1987. Four-and-a-half months later, the Hartford man was put on the state Department of Correction's inmate release program.

"This is a prime example of how the Department of Correction is setting sentences and not the judges or the judicial system," Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey said.

"This individual certainly was violent," Bailey said. "He pleaded guilty to assault with a weapon and on a three-year term — which is a very minimum term — he was released after 4½ months."

Bailey said Walton, a member of the Westland State Mob, could have been sentenced to 20 years on the first-degree assault charge. The other charges stemming from the two shootings were conditionally dismissed as part of a plea bargain, according to records in Bailey's office.

Some officials said, however, that prison officials, faced with overcrowding and legal limits on the size of the inmate population, have little choice but to release prisoners early.

"It's unfortunate we're in this situation. On the other hand, I'm not sure I can blame anyone," said Aaron Ment, chief court administrator and a member of a three-member panel charged with setting acceptable limits on the inmate population.

Ment said it is better for prisoners to be released to alternative programs at the discretion of the correction department than for them to be released automatically, as would happen if the legal limit of 6,824 were exceeded for more than 30 days.

But Ment said some prisoners are released sooner than they should be. "There are prisoners who are being released earlier than they would be under what I consider normal circumstances," he said.

Todd Fisk, director of classification for the correction department, said the home release often works well.

Fisk said while overcrowding places pressure on the prison system, "I won't say we are releasing people sooner than we'd like to."

Buildings to be razed at Holy Land

WATERBURY (AP) — Folk art enthusiasts have expressed concern now that those seeking to renovate the Holy Land park have brought in a bulldozer to raze two aging buildings.

The buildings to be leveled at the 17-acre park are a chapel and a replica of a catcombs. Owners of Holy Land, which is meant to be a replica of Jerusalem, say the buildings are too hazardous to be left standing.

Holy Land is located on a rocky hilltop overlooking Waterbury. It was built by hand with scrap materials by the late John Greco, a Waterbury attorney. But while Holy Land's giant, 52-foot-tall crucifix continues to dominate the horizon, the landmark has fallen on hard times.

It once attracted 40,000 visitors a year, but was closed about three years ago and has been a ready target for vandals.

Its owners unveiled a $5 million renovation plan in 1985, but work has been stalled by lack of public interest. Donations have not been sufficient enough to start the repair work, while the city's tourism department and Chamber of Commerce consider the park an eyesore.

When the renovation plans were first announced, it was revealed that some of the buildings would have to be destroyed. Jerry Reimo of Catholic Campaigners for Christ, an organization formed by the nuns who own the park to oversee renovations, said he didn't know when the razing of the two buildings would be completed. The bulldozer was brought in last week.

Meanwhile, some folk art followers are casting a wary eye toward Holy Land.

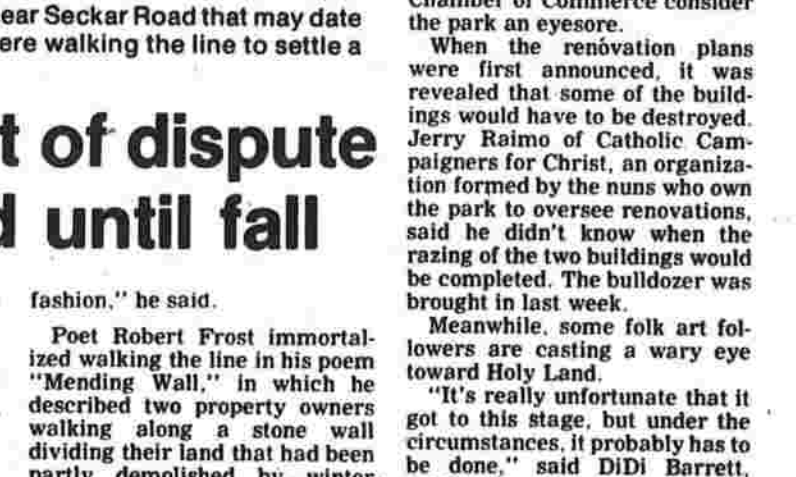

"It's really unfortunate that it got to this stage, but under the circumstances, it probably has to be done," said Didi Barrett, publications director at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City. She favors saving the site as a work of art.

"It's like cutting off a limb to save a life," she said.

But Daniel Prince, a Stamford art consultant hired by the museum, said any change would violate the integrity of Greco's work. He said the renovation plan is an "architect's nightmare" and accused Catholic Campaigners of intentionally letting the park deteriorate.

"They're letting the place go for an excuse to tear it down," he said. "It's always better to preserve and stabilize what you have. When you tear things down, it's usually more expensive and not more attractive or feasible."

Shiites threaten hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A shadowy Shiite Moslem group implied today that it will use two American hostages it holds to avenge a U.S. warship's downing of an Iranian airliner.

In a typewritten statement in Arabic, the Revolutionary Justice Organization said the hostages will "be part of a comprehensive response that will make the killers and their partners pay the price."

The statement said "everybody knows that all the strong cards are still in our hands, including the hostages' issue."

On Sunday, the USS Vincennes shot down an Iranian jet over the Persian Gulf. Iran said all 290 aboard were killed and vowed to avenge the deaths. The Pentagon said the Vincennes' crew mistook the Airbus A300 for an F-14 jet fighter.

Showdown being forced

WASHINGTON — Holding enough votes this time to override a veto, Democrats are forcing a second election-year showdown with President Reagan over giving workers advance notice of plant closings and large layoffs.

On a 72-23 vote Wednesday, the Senate passed a bill requiring companies to give 60 days' notice before shutting down any operation or instituting a layoff affecting more than 50 people or a third of the work force.

President Reagan cited the mandated notices as his primary reason for vetoing a huge overhaul of the nation's trade laws two months ago, saying advance notices would reduce U.S. competitiveness and stifle new job creation.

Party claims victory

MEXICO CITY — The governing party claimed victory today in Mexico's presidential election, and early results showed that its candidate, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, was leading the four opposition candidates.

Three of the opposition candidates accused the government of fraud. Interior Secretary Manuel Bartlett went on national television to reject the allegations.

Jorge de la Vega Dominguez, president of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, announced "a crushing, legal and uncontested victory" for Salinas de Gortari shortly after 7:30 a.m.

Senators volunteer names

WASHINGTON — Senators are weighing in with their favorite candidates for attorney general, while the man who's leaving the job predicts his successor will not be "a clone of anybody else."

President Reagan launched his search Wednesday for Edwin Meese III's replacement and one of his first steps in the process was to meet with the departing attorney general.

A lightning rod of controversy because of his conservative politics and his personal legal problems, Meese announced Tuesday he would be gone in a few weeks. He declared himself vindicated by an 830-page report on his official conduct compiled by independent counsel James McKay, although he acknowledged he had not yet seen it.

While a number of possible successors were volunteered at the White House, senators made sure that a steady list of possibilities kept drifting from Capitol Hill to the White House.

Plastic bullet kills one

MOSCOW — Soviet security forces using plastic bullets shot and killed a protester during a demonstration that shut down a major airport in Armenia, the Armenian press agency reported today.

It was the first official acknowledgement that Soviet forces have killed people and used guns against demonstrators since protests began in the Armenian capital, Yerevan, in February.

Soviet authorities denied anyone was killed. The account also was the first official indication that troops patrolling the area are armed with rounds designed to be non-lethal.

Plan to ease tensions

SEOUL, South Korea — President Roh Tae-woo today announced a six-point plan to ease 40 years of bitter confrontation with communist North Korea and clear the way for peaceful reunification of the divided peninsula.

In a nationally televised speech, the president called for broad trade, humanitarian, cultural and political contacts with the north to normalize relations and end the struggle for supremacy.

He called for an end to international rivalry between the two Koreas in foreign diplomacy, saying the two nations should work together instead of competing for international backing and trying to isolate each other.

Budget relief found

Michael Dukakis is finding some relief from a politically embarrassing budget crisis in his home state as Vice President George Bush pledged to right "a wrong that has been out there for many years" and appoint a Hispanic American to his Cabinet.

Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, was spending most of today in his Statehouse office before heading West for three days of campaigning. He was preparing to review a proposed fiscal 1989 state budget compromise.

Massachusetts House and Senate leaders agreed late Wednesday on a compromise budget of $1.75 billion that would increase state spending by about 4 percent.

Mortar shell explodes, kills two, wounds 15

POHAKULOA, Hawaii (AP) — A misfired mortar shell exploded among a platoon of Marines at the Army's training area here, killing two and wounding 15, a Marine spokesman said.

The platoon of about 30 Marines was conducting live fire exercises with 60mm shells at about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday when the mortar round accidentally landed among the group, said Maj. Kerry K. Gershaneck, the public affairs officer at the Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station on the island of Oahu.

"We had a company of infantry Marines who were practicing night defense fire," he said. "That is, all the fire, all the weapons and ammunition that would normally be used at company level were being fired simultaneously."

The injured were treated Wednesday night at medical facilities at Pohakuloa Training Area, located on Hawaii Island, and at Hilo and Kona hospitals, where they were taken by a military helicopter, Gershaneck said.

Two of the wounded Marines were in serious condition, he said.

The injured were taken to Hilo hospital, where officials declined to discuss their conditions, referring questions to the military.

Nine Marines were taken to Kona Hospital where Nursing Supervisor Patty Huppert said "most are what they call 'walking wounded.' We're mostly looking at stray shrapnel wounds."

She said there was no immediate determination of the conditions.

The names of the dead and wounded were withheld, pending notification of families.

Just how the mortar happened to land among the Marines "probably will not come out until we start the investigation," said William E. Buck, the deputy public affairs officer.

"It wasn't fired from the same location as the Marine Corps, but the actual circumstances are under investigation," he said.

Congress backs airliner destruction

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress attending a series of commander Pentagon briefings appear convinced that the captain of the USS R-Kan., noting that radar told the ship the approaching plane was descending from about 9,000 feet and gaining speed.

That information was at odds with data gathered by another ship in the area, the USS John H. Sides, which put the altitude at 12,000 feet and steady. That and other conflicts remain to be cleared up by a Navy investigative team sifting through recorded information in the Persian Gulf.

Other unanswered questions included why the Airbus 300 passenger jet apparently was emitting electronic signals for both a commercial plane and for a military craft.

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said he believed the most likely explanation was that the code for a military plane was actually emitted by a second aircraft in the area, but was confused with the signal from the commercial plane by the sophisticated gear on board the Vincennes, an Aegis-class cruiser.

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said he believed it was too early to explain the dual civilian and military signals that seemed to be coming from the plane. If a second plane were involved, "it suffices to say that the captain could not have known that based on the information he had," Nunn said.

Little new information emerged from the three House and Senate briefings by Defense Secretary Frank

Suit maintains firm abused some contracts

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A lawsuit accusing a top defense contractor of charging the government for everything from building a private plane to typing the Bible into a computer could open the way for fraud investigations into top-secret projects, a watchdog group says.

"What we have is a little wedge into the 'black world,' projects so secret they often don't appear on the defense budget, said Dina Raor, head of the Washington-based Project on Military Privacy.

"(It shows) you can expose fraud and waste in a black program" without divulging sensitive information, she said.

Raor spoke at a news conference Wednesday to unveil the lawsuit alleging fraud and overcharging against Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., the leading defense contractor in California's high-tech Silicon Valley.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court by a former and a current employee, claims Lockheed workers, while waiting months for security clearance to get into a profitable business, ran a football pool and even built a private plane — all at government expense.

If proved, the charges could result in suspension of defense contracts.

The alleged violations at one California plant cost the government more than $10 million, but that figure could go higher, the plaintiffs' attorney said.

"We expect additional people are going to step forward and describe additional examples of fraud at Lockheed," said Oakland lawyer Guy T. Sawyer.

Lockheed, the plaintiffs also charged, told employees to bill various government contracts for 40 hours even if they worked less and to charge their time to projects on which they had not worked.

Lockheed denied the accusations.

"We've vigorously denied that false claims have been or are made or condoned by the company," said company spokesman George Mulhern. "In fact, we've had a very strong program over the past several years to make sure all employees know any form of mischarging is wrong and can lead to disciplinary action, including dismissal, if warranted."

Mulhern said the company would wait until it receives a copy of the suit before responding to specific allegations.

"(But) we are also very confident the suit, if it goes to trial, will show the company has not engaged in any of the practices," he said.

Lockheed Missiles & Space, with 23,700 employees in Sunnyvale, develops spacecraft, satellite systems and submarine-launched missiles. It is a wholly owned subsidiary of Lockheed Corp.

The suit was filed under a federal whistle-blower law by Margaret T. Newsham, 45, a former Lockheed analyst, and Martin Overbeck Bloom, 34, an engineer who works for the company. The United States also is a plaintiff.

BLOWN APART — Smoke rises from the remains of the oil platform Piper Alpha in the North Sea, today, following an explosion late Wednesday.

Blasts rock North Sea oil rig; officials believe 160 are dead rescuers who disappeared into flames when a new explosion rocked the rig as they headed toward it in a small boat. Police said only two rescuers were missing.

The only confirmed death was reported by the Royal Air Force Rescue and Coordination Center.

Aberdeen hospital spokesman Alan Reid told reporters 21 people were hospitalized, 13 of them in serious condition.

Dr. Alistair Matheson of the Royal Infirmary, who treated injured aboard a rescue ship close to the rig, said, "There was a strange silence about the place. I could feel the heat of the flames in my face. I knew this was a disaster of major proportions."

Matheson said survivors told of taking refuge in a cool area of the rig, and when the flames approached, finding nowhere to jump where the sea was clear of flames. Two who jumped survived and told the doctor they did not know what happened to their companions.

Authorities said survivors leaped from as high as 200 feet into the 57-degree water 120 miles northeast of the Scottish coast.

"Those who were lucky and able to escape were up and at work at the time and were able to jump straight into the sea and get into rescue vessels," John Braiding, Occidental's executive vice president, told a news conference.

He announced an urgent inquiry into why lifeboats with room for 300 people failed to get off the platform.

The Royal Air Force Rescue and Coordination Center only confirmed one death, but hopes faded for the missing.

The injured "range from people who were able to walk away to those who are seriously ill with 50 percent burns," said hospital spokesman Alan Reid. "We have a lot of burns cases because, I gather, there were two explosions and there were people literally jumping for their lives."

He said 38 survivors remained hospitalized. The one death was confirmed by the Royal Air Force Rescue and Coordination Center.

Many workers were thought to have jumped into the frigid sea and some were taken to at least two other rigs in the area.

Witnesses said the flames engulfed the rig and towered over the horizon.

OPINION

Expensive addition of new bosses

The question of how well or how badly the town's recreation facilities are being maintained has been a matter of concern to the town administration and Manchester residents for a year or more.

It has produced an internal conflict within the town administration that at one point threatened a labor contract dispute.

The Board of Directors and the town administration have to come up with a solution that provides an adequate program of maintenance of parks and of recreation facilities. The solution must be one that avoids any confusion over who is responsible for making decisions about how much time and money will be spent on what facilities, and about what constitutes overuse of those facilities to the point where good maintenance is not possible.

Measures that have been suggested by a consulting firm the town hired to study the problem would very likely accomplish those goals.

But the solution proposed by the consultant appears to be extreme and costly.

The firm suggests a new high-ranking administrative official to direct the operations of the parks, recreation and cemeteries functions. The official would report directly to the town manager. The town would require that the person have a knowledge of both recreation programming and parks maintenance. The salary would probably have to be substantial.

There would be separate superintendents of parks and cemeteries, where there is now one. The added administrative expense might increase the productivity of the present maintenance workers by providing the coordination that is obviously lacking, but it would not increase their numbers.

Before the town directors embark on such an ambitious program, they should insist on exploring the possibility of achieving the needed coordination within the present administrative structure, with the overall supervision in the hands of the director of public works, for instance.

Decisions about who will do what and when do not have to be made by someone who has detailed expertise in recreation programming and park facilities maintenance. The boss simply has to be a good administrator who knows how to set priorities and priorities when he gets the information he needs from subordinates who have the expertise.

Coventry should control the lake

In 1954, a Coventry Town Meeting adopted a set of lake-use regulations recommended by an appointed committee headed by the late Walter Keller, retired U.S. Navy captain. The horsepower of motor boats was limited, along with speed, restricted areas were designated, and power boats were forbidden after dark — except for fishermen. Access to the lake was limited to town residents.

The late Rep. Stephen Lovvins, if I recall correctly, introduced a bill in the state House of Representatives that provided two state boat-launch areas.

To respond to widespread complaints, I introduced a bill in the first Town Council that saw the purchase of a patrol boat and trailer, and authorized town police to set regular patrols and deal with careless or reckless power-boat operators.

Later, when I represented the old 53rd Assembly District in the Legislature, in response to numerous complaints from local and nearby residents, I entered a bill to eliminate state control of these launching areas. This was met with violent objections by the Department of Environmental Protection. Nonetheless, the area at Avery Shores was given up — but the DEP remained adamant about the one off Cross Street.

This remaining state DEP-controlled area is jammed well after dark oftentimes, largely with out-of-town, and frequently out-of-state boaters. One must visit that site and note the powerful vessels that are launched into the lake.

The only way that control of access to this natural water body can revert to the town is by legislation action. The DEP will scream and holler. But if Rep. Edith Prague and Sen. Marie Herbst will exert their best efforts and fully use their good offices, this can be done. In so doing, they will render a distinct service to their constituents in Coventry that will reap the benefits of that quality of life we hear so much about. The DEP should not be the lake's gatekeeper and policeman. Its job is to protect our natural environment. The people of Coventry can decide how best to regulate the access and use of Lake Wampanoag and still make provision for non-residents to enjoy its waters.

Main St. design does make sense

Every issue has at least one or two sides. Permit me to address "Main Street design makes no sense," a letter from Al Lutz published in Tuesday's "Open Forum."

The proposed design was primarily a response to the massive amount of underground work needed to repair and install storm drainage, new gas, electric and telephone lines and make the resulting service connections. All this work requires more than a simple repaving of Main Street.

Any speed limit is enforceable if the town police department can revert to the state to enforce it. The decision for a 15 mph speed limit was made by town and state officials prompted by regulations on "sight distance parameters."

The access road was designed to facilitate a smoother transportation system and allow directional flexibility. During construction, he bypass road will serve as a through street. This alleviates some of the congestion on Main Street and will allow downtown shoppers to travel at a speed conducive to utilizing the angular parking.

A "Main Street" is a neighborhood gathering place — trees, benches, bicycle racks and other streetscape elements rein-

Secretary of Education William Bennett took a job that he didn't think was justified, presiding over a department that he doesn't believe should exist. Then he spent his Cabinet years telling anyone who would listen what was wrong with the system. Now Bennett says that he will write a book about the education establishment when he leaves office — not really a kiss-and-tell, more like a tell-and-tell-again. Maybe he can get House Speaker Jim Wright's agent to persuade the teachers' union to buy a few thousand copies.

Memo no aid to Heckler's chief of staff

WASHINGTON — Former Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler is as adept at the amnesia defense as any top official in the Reagan administration.

Her chief of staff at HHS claims he spent three months in prison because of Heckler's poor memory. C. McClain Haddow was released this spring from the Federal Correctional Institute in Petersburg, Va. His "crime" was conflict of interest. He allowed his wife to earn HHS money by writing several speeches for Heckler. His wife also worked for a foundation set up by the HHS.

Haddow claims that Heckler directed his wife's work. Heckler told the FBI and a grand jury she didn't, but later conceded she might have authorized some of the work. By that time, Haddow already had one foot in the cell, and Heckler was the U.S. ambassador to Ireland.

The case closed the books on Heckler's eccentric term in the Cabinet. She was appointed in 1983 and eased out in 1986 after it became clear that the $200 billion budget of HHS was beyond her managerial skills. In the meantime, Heckler earned a reputation for being self-serving, extravagant and flippant.

Haddow thinks he is the one who paid the price. In June 1986, six months after Heckler was exiled to Ireland, the FBI interrogated her on the emerging conflict of interest scandal. Haddow had passed two detector tests in which he claimed that Heckler had signed a waiver allowing his wife to work for the foundation. Heckler said she could not recall signing any waiver.

Sixteen months later, after six interviews with the FBI and a grand jury, Heckler, still ambassador to Ireland, was forced to remember more. Our associate, Jim Lynch, has obtained transcripts of the interviews with Heckler, which indicate that one not confronted her about her varying accounts.

On Oct. 27, 1987, the day before Haddow was slated to be sentenced, U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell, who was hearing Haddow's case, summoned Haddow's lawyer and the U.S. prosecutor to his office. The judge had received an anonymous letter. In the envelope was a copy of the signed waiver that Heckler couldn't remember.

According to a transcript of the meeting, Gesell and the lawyers wrangled about whether the waiver was real. Gesell noted that when Heckler appeared before a grand jury she made a "flat sworn denial that any document like this exists."

Several months before Heckler's grand jury appearance, an FBI agent read an unsigned copy of the purported waiver to her over the phone. Heckler said it was "as phony as a three dollar bill." But now the judge was looking at a signed copy of that same waiver.

"If Heckler has signed this document, it materially changes the entire matter and raises a large number of subsidiary questions as to whether or not action should be taken against her (Heckler)," Gesell told the lawyers.

He postponed Haddow's sentencing, and Heckler came to Washington for yet another interview with the FBI. But before they questioned her, they let her review the answers she had already given to the FBI and the grand jury about the waiver.

Suddenly, Heckler's memory started coming back. She remembered seeing the "phony as a three dollar bill" waiver before. If she signed it, she must not have read it, she explained.

But that wasn't enough to keep Haddow out of jail. He had already been persuaded to plead guilty. His entire defense had been hampered by an inability to find documents to back his claims.

Haddow had been in jail a week when Judge Gesell got another letter from the same anonymous correspondent. The letter claimed that Heckler had made a call to an ally in her old office soon after Haddow was charged with conflict of interest. The letter claimed Heckler had ordered a former staffer to purge some HHS files.

Heckler told us that accusation was "pure calumny. I would never do such a thing." We asked Heckler to comment about her changing testimony. "I do not believe any useful purpose would be served by rehashing what has already been resolved by the court," she said.

It's time to cash in on those dinosaur bones

Make no bones about it, the dinosaur quarry near the Buckland mall site could turn into a gold mine. We've been waiting for some slick businessman to cash in on the dinosaur connection at the mall. The possibilities are endless.

Why hasn't someone announced plans to open a dinosaur toy store? Kids love dinosaurs, not to mention some adults who carry an ill-disguised fossil fetish.

How about a paleontological puppet shop? Tyrannosaurus rex on a string could become the "in" thing.

Even a jingle for the mall — oops, we mean "Pavilions at Buckland Hills" — could cash in on this skeletal connection.

"Shop at the Pavilions and meet the Perodactyls."

An eager entrepreneur could even attract some of us with more refined tastes. How about a dinosaur museum? What better way for the mall developers to appease the geologists who wanted the small favor of being able to view the excavation during construction hours?

But the mall developer, the Homart Development Co., acquiesced. It's almost too bad. We like the museum idea better — maybe because of our more refined taste.

Let's hope the opportunity to cash in on the dinosaurs isn't lost. After all, it's a shame to let billions of years worth of history go to waste.

sold on the Independence Day chicken barbecue. He recalled rushing home one year from out of town to make it in time for the fireworks display. Only to find he was too late. This year, he was ready for the fireworks, having arrived on the scene at 5 p.m. But the fireworks were late. They were also a bit lame at first, he thought, although they gained a lot of oomph toward the end.

One thing surprised the newcomer to the festivities, however. When a spectator offered a $5 bill as a donation, the volunteer collector was taken aback at the generosity. Maybe the donations are geared a bit too low.

Follow the yellow brick road

Visitors to Mary Cheney Library may feel like they're taking a trip to Oz if they take a gander at the glass display case in the lobby of the Junior Room.

An extensive collection of "Wizard of Oz" memorabilia, put together by 19-year-old Rodger Phillips of West Hartford, was installed last week. There are gorgeous figures of Dorothy and her friends, pinatas made to look like characters' faces, framed posters, and even a Wizard of Oz wastepaper basket.

The display, which travels around the state, has been booked into the Manchester library for a two-month stay. Children's librarian Candace

Greenfield said she was planning to build her summer reading program around an Oz theme anyway, when this exhibit was offered to her. The program climaxes Aug. 11 with a secret, special event for all participants. Maybe they'll hop a tornado and head for Oz.

MYSTERY SOLVED — Ruthann LaPine of 102 Ralph Road had a surprise on the Fourth of July. So did lots of other people.

They woke up on Monday to find that someone had planted small American flags on their lawns. LaPine didn't know who put the flags there when she called, but she wanted to thank them. In her area of town, Redwood Farms, there were about 150 flags.

"Someone took the time and expense to put flags there for the Fourth of July," she said. "What a nice feeling."

Who carried out the secret operation? Coldwell Banker real estate agents, says Cyle Decker, district manager for the company.

More than 2,000 flags were planted in Manchester, South Windsor, Vernon, Tolland and other areas, she reports.

"It's just our way of celebrating the 4th of July and sharing our nation's symbols of freedom with our neighbors."

Before the police commissioners order any more "stop" signs, they will give study to the signs that are used in many places and will be guided in their decision by findings just released by the International Association of Chiefs of Police. ... The 10 signs that were placed during the past month exhausted the number now on hand.

The Bolton Lake Playhouse Company presented Edwin Burke's three-act comedy entitled "This Thing Called Love" at the new theater on the Coventry road, just east of Bolton Lake, last night before a good-sized audience. ... The initial performance was staged by G. Leslie Paul, who has had wide experience in both city and summer theater productions.

WHERE WAS IT? — Some of our readers are wondering about some of the places we've been mentioning when we reprint news items of 50 years ago.

"Where's the Sheridan Hotel?" one reader wants to know. "What's the Odd Fellows Building?"

The Sheridan Hotel was built by John F. Sheridan, one-time police chief, and opened in 1923 just in time for Manchester's centennial celebration. It was at the northwest corner of the block and Pearl streets. In the area just north of the block that now contains Paul's Paint and the Connecticut National Bank, the Sheridan building burned in 1971.

The Odd Fellows Building was built by the local fraternal organization in 1911 at the southwest corner of Main and East Center streets. The sturdy structure, with a contour to round the corner at the center, fell (with difficulty) to the wrecker's ball in 1962 when the site was realigned. The intersection. Much of the site is now dedicated to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Park.

Meese failed at much of his conservative agenda

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Edwin Meese III entered the Justice Department pressing a conservative legal agenda that heartened his supporters and drew fire from liberals, but he is leaving with little of it accomplished.

The lower federal courts are more conservative than when he came, but he failed to get two nominees he wanted on the Supreme Court, and the ones who made it have at times charted an independent course not to his liking.

The high court has chipped away at constitutional criminal law protections that Meese opposed, but they still stand and he has been rebuffed on a variety of other legal issues.

"He failed to articulate any cohesive rationale for what has been trying to do," Michael Glennon, professor of law at the University of California, said in a telephone interview.

Some conservatives argue that the long-running investigations of weakening the Constitution with sometimes "bizarre" rulings that he said were not "the supreme law of the land." Among other things, he said the court had erred in its landmark doctrine the Bill of Rights protects citizens against state, as well as federal, government action.

A.E. "Dick" Howard, professor of law at the University of Virginia, said, "That created a lot of blue and cry, and a great deal of fuss. I don't see that any long-term debate has resulted. Those turned out to be sort of flashes in the pan."

More importantly, he said, "throughout the years that Meese has been attorney general, the Supreme Court has dealt one rebuff after another to important administrative positions."

The most recent example was the court's decision upholding the independent counsel law, in which Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, elevated by Reagan with Meese's backing, wrote the court's 8-1 opinion. Only Justice Antonin Scalia, the most clearly conservative of the Reagan appointees to the court, dissented.

"It seems clear Rehnquist's dissent is somewhat different than Meese's," said Glennon. "As chief justice, Rehnquist sees it as his province to fit the interests of an independent and impartial judiciary."

The administration has also lost on cases involving abortion, affirmative action and church-state relations, among other questions.

When moderate Justice Lewis F. Powell retired, Meese backed Robert H. Bork, a conservative figure of the U.S. Court of Appeals, for the post. After the Senate rejected the Bork nomination, Meese recommended a colleague on the appeals court, Douglas Ginsburg, who withdrew in the face of opposition.

The eventual choice, Justice Anthony Kennedy, is carrying out a record more conservative than Reagan's first appointee, the Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, but slightly less consistently conservative than Scalia.

Some argue that Meese has made headway on issues such as the rule excluding illegally seized evidence against state, as well as federal, government action.

"Miranda and the exclusionary rule have been nibbled away at bit by bit so that today they cover far less than they did eight years ago," said Glennon.

Howard, however, said, "My overall sense is that the court had begun to back off from those even before Reagan became president and Meese became attorney general."

"The Meese legacy is much more enduring and I think more obvious, more evident, in the judicial appointments than in the Supreme Court decisions so far," said Howard.

Shift tax burden from buildings to land

ALTIQUIPPA, Pa. — Tired of soaring property taxes? Depressed by growing slums in old cities? Do you get angry that land speculators get rich for doing little work while you get a tax increase for adding a room?

Eight Pennsylvania cities have found an answer. In fact, this column helped transplant the idea from Pittsburgh and Scranton to Harrisburg, Duquesne, McKeesport, New Castle, Washington, and in 1988, Alliquippa.

Heaven has not arrived in any of these cities. But hope has replaced despair. For Alliquippa, that is a small miracle.

When I drove up the main drag, Franklin Street, last fall, more than half of the stores were closed. "It used to be a bustling booming steel town when there were 12,000 jobs in the LTV mill that stretches seven miles along the Ohio River," recalled Jack Mitchell, a Beaver County Times editor.

"I almost cried when I was there recently," he said. "The downtown was almost deserted. Fewer than 1,000 workers are at the mill now."

But there is hope in Alliquippa, nevertheless.

For there is a new property tax structure in place — one that is sparking development, a few months after the new tax went into effect.

Can a new tax spark development? Most businessmen would say "no."

But listen to Frank Guthrie, Alliquippa's building inspector:

"People are starting to do more with their lots. We have a couple of new buildings. I am well over my building permits of last year."

The spark came from a dramatic tax change. A single tax of 24.7 mills (2.47 percent) on land and buildings is now two separate taxes of 81 mills (8.1

Northern Perspective Michael J. McManus percent) on land value and only 5 mills (0.5 percent) on buildings.

Result: instead of having the highest tax rate on buildings in Beaver County, its building rate plunged to Pennsylvania's lowest rate of 53 cities. Though Alliquippa's new tax increased its revenues by 10 percent, four-fifths of homeowners enjoyed a reduction in city property taxes.

Therefore, there is a new incentive for big landowners to build or sell to others who will. An owner of a downtown parking lot, who was so outraged by the law that he considered suing, now has a better idea. He is selling to a man who will put a restaurant on it, according to Guthrie.

The tax change is inherently moral — and one every city should make.

"Under our present system the man who improves his property, builds a fine house or business block, thus helping his neighborhood and his community, is penalized with a higher tax," said the Warren (Pa.) Evening Times in a 1978 editorial. "The man who holds a lot vacant, useless to the community, until he can sell it at a greatly increased price — increased by improvements on neighborhood properties — is ethically wrong."

Abraham Lincoln said, "To enjoy the fruits of other's toil without labor is wrong." Yet that is what almost every American town allows today.

However, change is possible. The kinds of results that can be seen in Alliquippa today were predicted by the Johnny Appleseed of the two-tax system, Steve Cord, director of the Center for the Study of Economics in Columbia, Md.

Last January, he pleaded before an Alliquippa public hearing. "Give private enterprise a chance by not taxing it. If you tax buildings less, you'll have more of them and they'll be cheaper to operate. In addition, tax land instead of things. It'll be a greater incentive to develop sites more fully."

As an example, Cord noted that taxable building permits increased 70 percent in New Castle in three years following that city's adoption of the two-tier tax, compared to its previous three years. By that comparison, neighboring and comparable towns of Farrell and Sharon saw a 66 and 90 percent decline, respectively, in permits.

Consider the more dramatic example of Pittsburgh. Before it taxed land value at four to five times the value of buildings in 1980, new construction averaged $100 million a year. In the 1980s, it has averaged $268 million.

And this is in a metropolitan area that has lost 22,000 steelworker jobs in that same period — a cause of depression, not resurgence.

There is one dark cloud in this story. Only Pennsylvania has a state law that permits a two-tiered property tax. Your state law will probably have to change in order to follow Pittsburgh's or Alliquippa's example.

So why not give this clip to your state legislator, and ask him or her to do something specific for your vote this fall?

Charter Oak Bridge/I-91 Advisory

Construction of the new six-lane Charter Oak Bridge on Rtes. 5/15 between Hartford and East Hartford has begun. The existing bridge will be in service until the new one is opened to traffic in 1991, but construction will create changes to I-91 & Rtes. 5/15 on both sides of the bridge over the next several years.

Until the project is completed, we will advise you of any changes in construction activity which will affect your travel through the Hartford area, and offer suggestions for alternate routes whenever possible.

I-91 Southbound Ramp to Charter Oak Bridge to Close Permanently (Exit 29)

On Tuesday night, July 12, weather permitting, we will permanently close the ramp (Exit 29) from I-91 southbound to the Charter Oak Bridge in order to begin work on the new bridge structure. The entrance lanes to I-91 southbound from the Colton-Whitehead Hwy. will be reduced to one lane for repaving of I-91.

Motorists will be directed to Brainerd Rd. (Exit 27) to reach Rtes. 5/15 northbound that night. Beginning Wednesday, July 13, motorists should plan to use alternate routes to reach I-84 and Rt. 2 in East Hartford. Motorists who use this ramp via the Colton-Whitehead Hwy. should be particularly aware that this route will not be available after July 12.

Alternate routes include the Founders Bridge (Rte. 2), the Bulkeley Bridge (I-84), the Hume Bridge (Rt. 3), the Bissell Bridge (Rt. 291), and using local routes to reach Routes 5/15.

For more information on these changes or to request future updates, please contact the I-84/I-91 Hotline at 528-4023.

Guard against tick-related Lyme disease

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Lyme disease, unknown in the United States until the mid 1970s, has replaced Rocky Mountain spotted fever as the most common tick-borne disease.

Lyme disease has now been reported on five different continents, and in 32 U.S. states. Most cases in the United States have occurred in a few "hot spots" that include coastal New England, parts of New Jersey, Wisconsin and Minnesota, and the coastal counties of northern California.

Lyme disease is clearly a summer disease. About 90 percent of all cases occur from early June through September. If left untreated, it can cause cardiac problems and arthritis. In the Northeast, where most cases of Lyme disease occur, the deer tick is responsible. The adult deer tick is smaller than the more familiar dog tick. The best way to prevent the disease is to avoid ticks, but that's not always easy. In areas where the illness is prevalent, ticks often infest suburban lawns, making a stroll in the yard hazardous.

If you live in a community where tick-borne disease exists, it makes sense to take certain precautions. Don't go out barefoot, or in open sandals. Wear long pants, cinching pants at the ankle or tucking them into boots or socks gives added protection. Ticks lie low, on grass blades and shrubs. Avoid ticks from about mid-April through September. Tick-borne disease affects people of all ages, but children at special risk because they spend so much time outside.

Check pets for ticks. If a pet brings ticks inside, you can get infected without ever leaving the house. Know what to look for when making a tick check. A biting deer tick rarely hurts enough to draw your attention. To find one, you'll have to look for it. The tiny deer-tick nymph, which is responsible for most cases of Lyme disease, is smaller than a sesame seed. A nymph that's been attached to the skin for several hours looks like a blood blister with legs.

Pregnant women should be particularly careful. Lyme-disease spirochetes, the infectious agents, can cross the placenta. While it's not clear whether they cause birth defects, there could be a hazard. What should you do if you find a tick? First, don't panic. Research suggests that you have a grace period of at least a few hours from the time of the bite until the tick begins to inject spirochetes.

Consumer Reports' medical editors say that there is only one effective method of removal — pull it out with tweezers or small forceps. The idea is to grasp the tick close to its mouth — the part sticking into the skin. Then, without jerking, pull it upward steadily. Don't worry about pulling out a little skin in the process. The best tool is a thin, curved forceps, available from surgical-supply stores and pharmacies.

Such folk remedies as suffocating the tick with Vaseline, butter or the like don't work. Neither do time-honored techniques like gasoline, kerosene and hot matches.

Are kidney pain, protein related?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had a kidney removed nine years ago and have been fine. Since then, I've noticed that whenever I go on a high-protein diet to lose weight, or whenever I consume a lot of protein with aspartame, I get kidney pain. Why would the excess protein cause kidney pain?

DEAR READER: It wouldn't, to my knowledge. However, before giving an answer, I'd have to know the reason that you had one of your kidneys removed. Some patients with diminished kidney function are put on low protein diets to reduce the production of nitrogen, a waste product of protein metabolism. Kidney pain is not a usual consequence of excess protein. The pain you are experiencing may be due less to protein and aspartame (which contains protein substances) than to the foods that contain these compounds. For instance, your remaining kidney may be having difficulty dealing with the fluid overload that can result from eating more than usual or consuming excessive quantities of diet drinks. Ask your doctor why you are having symptoms and please let me know what he or she says.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A friend's baby has Lenz Majewsky syndrome and we can't find any information on this subject. Can you enlighten us?

DEAR READER: You really sent me scurrying to the books on this one — and still no dice. I cannot find a listing for Lenz Majewsky syndrome in any of my reference books. Any help out there?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm told that I have Frey's syndrome. What is this?

DEAR READER: Frey's syndrome (auriculotemporal syndrome) is an unusual condition seen as redness and sweating of the cheek during eating. It gland (the salivary gland in the cheek that sweats in mumps). Evidently, some parotid lesions affect the nearby auriculotemporal nerve; when the gland secretes saliva, the nerve is stimulated to cause skin changes. Once the parotid problem has been taken care of, the syndrome vanishes.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I live in a very dry climate and my nose is irritated a good deal of the time. What would you recommend?

DEAR READER: A humidifier in your bedroom would add substantial moisture to the air you breathe and might make your nose less dry. Some residents in dry climates maintain a large collection of houseplants; this method is also effective in raising humidity.

Wound from spouse's affair still festers for unhappy wife

DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago, my husband had an affair. They were caught by the lady's husband, and that ended it. I offered my husband a divorce, but he said he didn't want one. We had children in school, so I stayed in the marriage for their sakes. This has been on my mind every day since it happened, and it has changed the way I feel about my husband. At times I actually have feelings of hatred for him.

We are the best friends and very compatible, but I can't seem to get over the hurt. Can this wound ever heal? I know I can't forget it. Please publish an answer, as there may be others in this situation.

UNHAPPY

DEAR UNHAPPY: A wound will never heal if you continually pick at it. Concentrate on the present, and put away from your mind all the painful memories. God made no perfect people. Believe this, and don't permit hear-say of the past to sour your future. Get professional help to guide you out of this unforgetting bitterness. You deserve better.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I visited my ex-daughter-in-law and my granddaughter in another state, and this is how I was treated by my granddaughter (she treats her mother the same way):

She kicked me, spat at me, knocked books and other items out of my hands, poked me in the abdomen and breasts with her bony elbows, stamped on my feet and screamed at me until she got her way.

When she noticed that I was about to be seated, she jumped into my chair. Once while I was napping, she poured water on my pillow and my head. If I try to tell her something she doesn't want to hear, she covers her ears and yells until I stop speaking. When sent to her room, she throws things at me and swears at her mother and threatens to kill herself.

Her parents divorced about a year ago after a strife-filled marriage. Do you think this child behaves this way to get attention, or is she just toying with me?

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: You don't mention the child's age, but if she threatens to kill herself, she is not a 3- or 4-year-old spoiled child acting out to get attention.

I see nothing wrong with a woman living in a man's world — and picking up the tab if she can afford it — but many readers, both male and female, still maintain that a lady never takes the initiative. I disagree. Readers?

HIV virus must be present to contract AIDS

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am a 37-year-old gay male. My lover and I are monogamous. How much risk is there that either one of us will contract AIDS? We've been together six years, and our sexual activities are varied.

DEAR READER: If neither of you is carrying the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV, the virus that causes AIDS) and which researchers assume has been around for about 10 years) and neither is having sex with others or sharing needles with others, then your risk of getting infected with AIDS is as close to zero as anyone can get.

The sole remaining risk would be infection through a contaminated blood transfusion, which has become very rare now that all blood is tested for HIV antibodies.

Your risk would be no higher than it is for monogamous heterosexual partners with the same basic habits. If HIV is not present, one cannot get AIDS regardless of which sexual activities one engages in.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm concerned about my mother (age 53). Her mother died of breast cancer eight years ago, yet Mom keeps putting off having a mammogram because of what she might find. Also, she still has bleeding (menstrual) about every six months and that worries me, too. Can you help me encourage her to go to her doctor for a physical?

DEAR MOM: Please call your physician today and ask for an appointment for a pelvic examination, a Pap test and a breast exam. If you don't like your doctor for some reason, ask friends to recommend a gynecologist. Some communities have women's clinics that specialize in making these checkups as pleasant as possible.

All women should have a mammogram (breast X-ray) sometime between age 35 and 40, and then follow their physician's instructions about scheduling follow-up mammograms until age 50. After age 50, every women should have a mammogram each year. Studies show that such annual screening can reduce the rate of death from breast cancer by about 30 percent because early detection makes a complete cure much more likely.

If you heard that having a lot of breast X-rays is dangerous, forget it. The new mammogram machines use only a fraction of the radiation used by other machines.

All women should also have regular Pap tests to detect changes in the cervix and surrounding tissues. Some experts state that if every woman had an annual Pap test, the rate of death from cervical cancer would be zero.

I'm also concerned by your occasional bleeding. It could be that you're just slowing due to menopause, but it could also be a warning sign of a vaginal, cervical or uterine problem. Only a physician can tell what's causing this and again (if this is a disease) early detection means simpler treatments.

I urge you to decide on a physician or clinic and call for an appointment today. You may find that you've been worrying about the possibility of cancer even more than you realized, and be surprised by the amount of relief you feel after the examination. Besides, your daughter will stop

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Indiana Mother," whose beautiful, intelligent, 20-year-old daughter doesn't get asked out. She hit the nail on the head when she suggested that men are intimidated by beautiful women.

Yes, we are! Most of the beautiful women I see give the impression that your average male isn't good enough for them. Also, most guys take it for granted that beautiful women already have boyfriends.

You are right, Abby. "Indiana's" daughter should take the initiative if she's interested in a particular guy and ask him out. I would be tickled pink if a woman asked me out.

These are the '80s — a woman can take the initiative without being labeled a tramp.

YOUR AVERAGE GUY DEAR AVERAGE: It's true, most men assume that a beautiful woman already has a boyfriend. But you are wrong when you say that most beautiful women give the impression that "your average age male" is not good enough for them. The truth is that most men, on meeting a beautiful woman feel that they aren't good enough. It's their lack of confidence that keeps them from asking her out.

PEOPLE

MTM brings high price

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — What do you do when the company you founded is bought by foreigners for $310 million?

If you're Mary Tyler Moore, you keep working. And you make some charities very happy.

Miss Moore said Wednesday the sale of MTM Entertainment Inc., the production company she co-founded, will free her to boost contributions to the arts and to the fight against diabetes. A diabetic, Miss Moore is international chairman of the Juvenile Diabetes foundation.

Just how much money does the 50-year-old actress get from the sale of the company that bears her initials to Television South PLC of Britain?

"Enough so I don't have to learn to type, after all," was all she'd say.

Sale or no, Miss Moore is set to appear in a new MTM series slated to make its debut on CBS this fall, assuming the scriptwriters strike is settled.

Ava Gardner coming back

LOS ANGELES — Actress Ava Gardner, who suffered a mild stroke two years ago, is contemplating a return to the silver screen, her attorney says.

"She's fit as a fiddle. Feels strong, feels great and is thinking about doing a picture," lawyer Paul Caruso said Wednesday.

The 66-year-old actress has "recovered tremendously" from the stroke in late 1986, for which she was hospitalized for two months.

He did not say what kind of role Miss Gardner was considering.

Miss Gardner, who has lived in London for the past 20 years, was the daughter of a poor North Carolina tenant farmer. She became a leading lady in the 1940s and 1950s.

Lawyer to sue for dog

SAN FRANCISCO — Lawyer Melvin Belli, who is in the midst of a heated marital dispute, returned to his mansion last weekend to collect some things. Little Rumprast, also affectionately known as "Rumpy," wasn't one of them.

His estranged wife, Lila, said he could pack up three of the couple's poodles, but said their Italian greyhound was staying put.

"I just wanted to have a little watchdog here," she said, adding that she let her husband take the other dogs because he can't sleep without them.

Belli said it's not fair. He said that because of concern about "Rumpy's" tears on being separated," she said, adding that she let her husband take the other dogs because he can't sleep without them.

Plastic threatens Great Lakes

Virtually indestructible trash is killing fish and birds

DETROIT (AP) — Discarded plastic, already blamed for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of birds and fish in the oceans and along seashores, is spreading to the Great Lakes.

The virtually indestructible material is becoming not just an eyesore but a potential threat to wildlife in the world's largest freshwater system, according to researchers and lay observers.

Jim Mattis of Benzonia, Mich., has operated fishing charter boats for 15 years in Lake Michigan. He said he's found plastic debris floating up to 10 miles offshore, some of it in "scum lines" of garbage a mile long.

"There's more plastic bags and pieces of Visquine (a trade name for plastic sheeting) in the lake due to I've ever seen," Mattis said. "It's gotten worse in the last three or four years."

"I've heard a lot of people say, 'It's just a plastic bag. They don't realize the damage it can do.'"

Most legislation, research and enforcement has focused on a different kind of Great Lakes pollution — toxic chemicals that threaten widespread areas and can be traced to specific sources.

"There're about 1,000 different types of hazardous substances that are known to exist in the Great Lakes," said Cameron Davis, a research analyst with the Chicago-based Lake Michigan Federation. "Right now, toxic (and) contaminated sediments are the No. 1 thing."

Plastic pollution is less fully understood, although its potential for harm is clear. A single shard of plastic sheeting, six-pack beverage carrier or strand of fishing line can float undetected until it strangles fish or birds, binds a boat propeller or jams an engine intake.

"We see the pictures every year; we know it happens," said Glen Duddar, a Michigan State University biologist. "But we don't have any research on to what extent."

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources estimated that one bird in 100 observed by biologists was entangled in plastic fishing line, according to a 1987 report by the Washington-based Center for Environmental Education. Entanglement can also mean ingestion of the plastic.

Little is known, too, about another synthetic material intentionally put into the lakes: fishing nets that are loosed accidentally, but continue trapping their prey.

"Ghost fishing" has been documented mainly along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. But it also occurs in Great Lakes waters where gill-net fishing is done, either by state-regulated commercial interests or by Indians working under terms of federal treaties, the officials said.

"From the fisheries' standpoint, the worst thing we've got is gill nets that break away," said Asa Wright, manager of the Great Lakes Program of the state DNR's Fisheries Division.

Just last month, authorities retrieved a gill net containing more than 600 pounds of rotting lake trout. The 1,000-foot-long, 44-inch-wide net probably had been adrift several months in southern Lake Superior, investigators said.

Bill Eger, a biologist who works with Michigan's Indian fishermen, said gill nets occasionally are abandoned or torn from buoys in storms or by passing freighters.

But the approximately 350 Indians who fish in the treaty-protected waters of northwestern Lake Huron, northern Lake Michigan and southern Lake Superior usually set and retrieve their gill nets daily, Eger said.

Since gill nets cost about $1 a yard, they're seldom abandoned, he said. Those that aren't retrieved tend to "ball up" and sink, bearing only the fish trapped on the first day or two after being set, he said.

"It does not continue to catch fish at an exponential rate, as Asa Wright would like to have you believe," Eger said.

Disposal of solid waste anywhere in the Great Lakes has been illegal for years, Murdock said. Freighters and other large commercial vessels are required to store or incinerate their trash rather than dump it overboard, a practice common among ocean-going ships and blamed for at least part of the plastic pollution at sea.

Enforcement of anti-dumping laws is lax, conceded Capt. Larry Murdock, chief of the Marine Safety Division of the U.S. Coast Guard's district office in Cleveland.

Geriatric health care needed for pets

With pets living longer, healthier lives due to improved nutrition, medical and surgical care, geriatric problems have become more prevalent.

Dental conditions such as gingivitis, plaque, tartar and gum infections are more common in older dogs (but are also seen in some younger pets, especially miniature poodles). Since anesthesia is usually involved in dentistry, the older dogs and cats are the anesthesia question marks I wish to discuss here.

In our practice I often hear "Old poison breathe really needs to have dentistry but he/she can't take the anesthesia." I wonder where they get that information! Although anesthesia is indeed risky and geriatric anaesthesia is more so, it doesn't mean that aging subjects cannot be usually safely anesthetized. In order to perform adequate dental treatment, such as tartar removal, restorative extractions, etc., general anesthesia is usually needed.

The older patient can be carefully screened by a veterinarian and most health problems resolved or compensated for before and during anesthesia. The newer anesthetics, gas and injectable, are so much safer than previous ones, allowing us to perform procedures such as extensive dentistry in patients as old as 16-17 years and even older.

At a recent American Animal Hospital Association meeting in Washington, D.C., a veterinary dental lecturer said that he'd seen more pets die from secondary dental problems such as liver, kidney and heart involvement, than from anesthesia during dentistry.

The quality of life is to be considered too — pet with severe halitosis due to dental problems is no joy to its owner nor to itself. In extreme advanced cases of dental disease it is sometimes advantageous to extract all diseased teeth even if none are left. The pet will often be healthier and happier afterward and can survive and thrive on a soft food diet.

If your aging pet needs dental care, have your veterinarian examine him/her and evaluate the risks vs. benefit. Chances are good that dentistry can be performed safely and effectively. This also goes for other procedures requiring anesthesia in geriatric patients.

IN BRIEF

Collision injures boy

A 14-year-old boy on his bicycle was injured when he collided with a car stopped at a red light Wednesday afternoon at Homestead Street and West Middle Turnpike, police said.

Devon Wrubel, 66 Cambridge St., was traveling down West Middle Turnpike and made a wide turn onto Homestead Street, police said. A 1980 Cadillac, driven by Clara Fish, 69, of East Hartford, was stopped at the light on the corner of Homestead Street and West Middle Turnpike, police said. As Wrubel turned the corner, he hit the car, police said.

No charges were filed against Fish, police said. Wrubel was transported to Manchester Memorial Hospital where he was treated for contusions of the head and released, a hospital spokesman said today.

'Inmates' raise $32,000

Contributions from Manchester and surrounding towns in the 1988 American Cancer Society Jail and Bail fund-raiser totaled $32,000, cancer society officials said.

The money was raised from contributions gained from Manchester, Vernon, South Windsor and Ellington. Floyd Blair of Manchester Lumber Company, Chris Deadhill of Valley Fish Market of Ellington, and John Giofriddo of Gio-Graphics of Manchester each raised more than $2,000.

Volunteer wins award

Shawn Tripp, a volunteer with the American Cancer Society's Manchester-North unit, recently received one of eight court award awards from the society.

Tripp, who lives in Ellington, drives patients for treatment in the Road to Recovery program. He also is a trained volunteer in the Cancer Support program.

The award is presented annually to persons who have or have had cancer, who have demonstrated courage in dealing with the illness and who have made significant contributions to others by giving their support.

I-91 ramp to be closed

The Exit 29 ramp of Interstate 91 southbound in Hartford to the Charter Oak Bridge will close Tuesday.

The closure is needed so construction of a new $89.7 million six-lane bridge can begin. Motorists will be required to use Route 2, Route 3, Route 291 or I-84 to cross the bridge, state Department of Transportation officials announced.

The new bridge, which will be constructed close to the existing bridge, is scheduled to be opened to traffic no later than August 1991.

I-84 median work continues

Work is scheduled to continue tonight on a reconstructed section of median on Interstate-84 in Hartford, the state Department of Transportation announced.

The work will consist of removing temporary concrete barriers and installing pavement markings. The work will be in progress from 11 p.m. Thursday to 6 a.m. Friday and will reduce the expressway to one lane between the Bulkeley Bridge and Main Street in Hartford during that time.

Second Coventry referendum set on Booth & Dimock Library work

By Jacqueline Bennett

COVENTRY — A request for additional money for the Booth & Dimock Memorial Library expansion and renovation project will go to the voters for a second time despite the rejection of a similar request in a recent referendum.

The Town Council, in a 5 to 0 vote, approved a proposal from the Booth & Dimock Library Board of Trustees Tuesday that the town provide for an additional $290,000 for the $1.7 million project. Absent from the council meeting were members Mark Soltys and Elizabeth Paterson.

A town meeting to discuss the question will be held July 14, 7:30 p.m., at the Town Office Building and the referendum will be held July 26, 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.

In February 1987, voters approved the project with an estimated cost of $1.45 million contingent upon receipt of a state and federal grant of $450,000, which the town received. However, construction costs were underestimated and the library board came back to the voters asking for an additional $300,000. Voters rejected the request in a

Key meetings today, Friday in sewer flap

By Andrew Yurkowski

The continuation of work in wetlands at the secondary part of the town's sewage treatment plant could hinge on meetings today and Friday. Though town officials have refused to speculate on what will happen at Friday's meeting, a legal intern for the Corps of Engineers, Kathy Bloss, said last week that a determination on whether work should continue could be made at that time.

The town had ceased work at the secondary facility two weeks ago after receiving a stop work order from the Corps, which has said that the town should have gotten a wetlands permit for the work. The possibility of fines as high as $500,000 has been raised by Corps officials.

Today's meeting is to be held at the Corps of Engineers' New England division headquarters in Waltham, Mass. Officials from the town, the project engineer — Metcalf & Eddy — and the Corps are to discuss the feasibility of alternatives to work at the secondary part of the sewage treatment plant that would have less of an impact on wetlands.

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said today that the administration's representatives at the meeting will be Robert J. Young, the superintendent of Water and Sewer Division, Peter Lozis Jr., the public works director and Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Weinberger.

Friday's meeting is to be held at 11 a.m. at U.S. District Court in Hartford.

Robert Young said Wednesday that no determination has been made on the practicability of the alternatives the Corps of Engineers has asked the town to consider. He said the town has been providing information for the alternatives to Metcalf & Eddy, the project engineer, whose job it is to determine the feasibility of the alternatives and the costs involved.

There are 10 criteria the Corps of Engineers will be looking at in determining the practicability of each alternative, Young said. These are design, construction cost, engineering feasibility, whether the alternative plan differs from the intent of the original plan, the value of land involved, the effect on water quality, operational costs, operator liability, and efficiency, and lost opportunity values.

The 10th factor, "lost opportunity values," has to do with whether another town project will have been changed or scrapped in order to implement the alternative.

Wetlands filling called a violation

A Manchester developer may end up in court for unauthorized work planning official claim has been done in a wetlands area off Keeney Street.

The Planning and Zoning Commission Monday voted to issue a "show-cause" order to developer James Beaulieu, owner of the James Beaulieu Development Co., to stop work it said was done on a lot in the 18-lot Pondview Estates subdivision without a wetlands permit.

The PZC's vote came after Beaulieu did not attend Monday's hearing on a wetlands permit for the lot. The application for the permit was unanimously denied, but the commission unanimously approved the issuance of the order.

Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra said Beaulieu had wetlands permits for some of the work, but an inspection revealed the need for a permit for additional work being done.

Under the town zoning regulations, O'Marra will issue the order and Beaulieu has 10 days to respond. A hearing before the PZC must be held within the 10 days, O'Marra said.

The commission will tell the developer how he's violated the wetlands regulations and he'll be given a chance to respond. If the PZC isn't satisfied with his response, it may initiate action in Superior Court, O'Marra said.

Church growth

Manchester while the rest lies in East Hartford.

Those who have been sold by church members to partially fund the construction costs. The main church functions, including staff salaries and extensive charitable contributions, are funded by tithing, said Wiles. This is a biblical term, referring to the idea that a follower should contribute one-tenth of his annual income to the church.

During a worship service people may stand and dance in the aisles, and members of the church sing and play instruments. This speaking in tongues, technically called glossolalia, is said to be a sign of the Holy Spirit. This was a normal experience in early Christian days, said Wiles, and members of Pentecostal churches are taught to expect it in modern times.

The construction here follows a reported worldwide increase in membership for the church. Church literature indicates that, from 1980 through 1984, new Assemblies of God churches were opening at the rate of almost one per day, around the world.

In the U.S., there are about 11,000 churches with more than 2 million followers, according to material from the Assembly of God headquarters in Springfield, Mo.

The denomination is in approximately 110 other countries, as well. A single church in Seoul, South Korea, boasts more than 220,000 members.

The Assemblies of God church are the largest, and fastest growing part of what is called the Pentecostal movement, said Wiles, who also is a member of the church. The Pentecostal philosophy encourages physical manifestations of the ecstasy felt during deeply religious experiences.

When the congregation outrages the site on East Middle Turnpike, it launched a five-year search for land within the town limits. When no suitable location could be found, however, the group moved to a 35-acre site just west of the Manchester town line on Buckland Road in South Windsor, according to Gustafson.

Gustafson said that more than half of his congregation still lives in Manchester.

to restrict water use.

The town's largest water company, the Bridgeport Hydraulic Co., continued to do business as usual with its 99,000 customers in Litchfield and New Haven counties, said company spokesman Fred Iannotti.

"There is a water conservation program in effect in Litchfield because supply there is even with demand. Even if it was raining there, the situation would be the same," he said.

Hughes said four reservoir systems were also monitored in June. Surface water levels in Hartford were average; in Bridgeport levels were 6 percent below average; in Waterbury, they were 14 percent below average; and the Stamford system was 28 percent below average.

Although officials don't believe Connecticut's situation is similar to that in the Midwest yet, this is the driest summer since 1910, according to Dennis DeCarri, deputy environmental commissioner.

Hughes said the state Department of Health Services and the United States Geological Survey met Wednesday to discuss how the drought in the Midwest is affecting Connecticut. She said she also will meet with state health officials later this week to develop an action plan in case the situation worsens.

She said the state's water supply report for June showed that ground water levels and stream flow in Connecticut were generally below average.

they spread as they did," he said.

Jack Hughes, spokesman for the Town Fire Department, said the town has had four grass fires in the last few days. All the fires were of a "very minor nature," he said.

Two fires were reported Wednesday, one at the intersection of Tolland Turnpike and Deming Street, and the other was on Spencer Street, fire officials said.

"We've had some grass fires," Hughes said. "They probably wouldn't have been fires if it was normal conditions."

Since the weather has been so dry over the last few weeks, Hughes said grass fires are bound to occur more often than in normal conditions. "You can take a match to your lawn (now)," he said.

The town water department has not had a problem meeting higher demands than usual, but we're able to keep it," he said. "It's almost definite, if it keeps going, we'll have a problem. Right now, we're pretty well set."

Keatney said the department will know around the end of the month if any water conservation measures will have to be taken. The town's source of water is four reservoirs and several wells.

Manchester Memorial Hospital has not treated any patients with heat-related problems over the last few days, said Amy Avery, hospital spokesman.

DiRosa now out; Oilers have bye in Little League

With a loss sending the Oilers to the sidelines in the double elimination Town Little League Tournament, much was at stake in Wednesday night's game between the Firefighters and DiRosa Cleaners at Wadwell Field.

It was a tight affair with each side scoring a run in the first inning only to go scoreless until the fifth. In the top of that frame, the Firefighters scored three times and added two more in the sixth to gain a 6-1 victory over DiRosa. DiRosa was eliminated from the tourney.

The Firefighters, champions of the American League, will meet Boland Brothers, runner-up in the National League, tonight at 6 at Leber Field. Tonight's loser will be eliminated.

The Oilers, the National League champions, trounced Boland, 20-1, Wednesday night at Leber Field. The Oilers are the only undefeated team remaining in the tourney and will receive a bye tonight.

The winner of the Boland-Firefighters game will play the Oilers Friday night at 6 at Leber Field. A win by the Oilers would give them the town championship. An Oilers' loss would force a double game Saturday afternoon.

Keith Carini was the winning pitcher for the Firefighters, while Julie Smart pitched well in defeat. Pat Cox led the winners with three hits and Mike Carr added two. Smart and Michelle Alberts led DiRosa with two hits each, and Tony Muro and Jason Coglin also played well. Making the most of seven hits and six Boland miscues, the Oilers exploded for nine runs in the third inning and added six more in the fifth.

Eddie Pinkin was the winning pitcher for the Oilers. Pinkin allowed only three hits, walked one and struck out 13. He also added his own cause with a single, double, triple and three RBIs.

Kitsock was just on top of his game. Morency added "Dave Price had just been on a tear."

Champagne, who was relieved by Tom Rogace in the fifth, gave up all five runs on four hits, walked three, and struck out three.

"We're all trying to get the ring rust off of us," Morency said. "The Fourth of July (break) took a little out of us."

Oakland wins fans' fancy in All-Star voting

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Not since the days of Reggie, Catfish and Rollie have the Oakland Athletics been this popular.

These A's haven't won three straight World Series, as the 1972-74 Oakland teams did. They have captured the fancy of American League fans, fancy of fans with three of them being voted starters for the All-Star team.

Outfielder Jose Canseco, the overall leader in the AL with 1,785,499 votes, first baseman Mark McGwire and catcher Terry Steinbach were picked by the fans in results announced Wednesday. The Athletics will be the only team with three starters selected by fans for next Tuesday's classic in Cincinnati.

"This is a great team, and I think the fans realize this," said McGwire, the 1987 Rookie of the Year who is batting .245 with 14 homers and 47 RBIs. "It's an honor to the team, the organization and to us players who are recognized."

Canseco, the AL Rookie of the Year in 1986, leads the league with 23 home runs, 70 runs and 65 RBIs. He said the voting shows how positive a future the Athletics have.

It says a lot about the young players of our team, about the youth throughout our organization," said Canseco, who turned 24 last week. McGwire also is 24 and Steinbach, who has fought slumps and injuries this year and is batting just .217, is 26. "We're basically going to be around a long time. You're hearing about the A's for 10 or 15 years. We're going to have a strong core for a long time."

Joining the three A's on the AL starting line are outfielders Dave Winfield and Rickey Henderson of New York, Milwaukee second baseman Paul Molitor, Detroit shortstop Alan Trammell, who is on the disabled list, and third baseman Wade Boggs.

Boston, the AL's leading batter with a .353 average.

Molitor has served exclusively as a designated hitter this year, but with no DH spot on the ballot, he was placed at second base. And we're going to have a strong core for a long time."

Francisco, second baseman Ryne Sandberg of Chicago and Pittsburgh third baseman Bobby Bonilla.

The NL outfield has New York's Darryl Strawberry, Chicago's Andre Dawson and St. Louis' Vince Coleman.

The NL catcher is Gary Carter of the New York Mets, selected to start for the eighth straight season. Yogi Berra, Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt's record for overall starts. But, like his counterpart with the A's, Carter was struggling this year and was hitting .245 with eight homers and 33 RBIs.

A total of 6,146,477 votes were cast by fans this year, the most since 1984.

Players who will collect contract bonuses for being elected All-Star include outfielder Winfield ($50,000), Dawson ($50,000), Boggs ($50,000), Clark ($25,000), Strawberry ($25,000), Molitor ($25,000), McGwire ($20,000), Canseco ($20,000), Bonilla ($15,000), Coleman ($15,000) and Sandberg ($10,000).

Molitor's selection is ironic

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Being selected the American League's All-Star second baseman when he hasn't played the position all year does not embarrass Paul Molitor so much as it fills him with an ironic sense of deja vu.

"The only time I can remember this happening before was when I involved me in 1979," the Milwaukee Brewer designated hitter, third baseman said. "What an ironic thing."

Molitor, who made headlines as a 28-er hitting streak in 1987, hit .322 in 1979 as a second baseman.

"I played second base and Don Money played the first base and was elected to start at second that year," said Molitor, batting .319 with 25 runs batted in. "So, same position, same team, same result."

"It's kind of weird. Don had played third base most of the first half and I'd played second. That's the only other time I can remember a guy getting selected to start at a position he hasn't played all year. It goes to show you that the previous season's accomplishments will have an effect on the next season's voting. It shows you the power of the media."

HARTFORD (AP) — The Hartford Whalers on Wednesday sent defenseman Neil Sheehy and right wing Mike Millar to the Washington Capitals in exchange for right wing Ed Kastelic and defenseman Grant Jennings.

Sheehy, 28, who split last season between Hartford and Calgary, scored three goals and two assists in 75 games and picked up 189 penalty minutes.

He was originally signed by the Calgary Flames as a free agent in 1983 after playing for the Harvard Crimson. He was traded to the Hartford Whalers after playing parts of five seasons for the Flames.

Millar, 23, was the Whalers' second selection in the 1984 entry draft. He had split the last two seasons between the Hartford Whalers and Binghamton Whalers. He scored 32 goals and 49 points in just 31 games with Binghamton last season, and led the club in power play goals with 13.

Kastelic collected two goals and one assist in his 75 games with Washington over the last three seasons.

Jennings has been part of the Washington organization since signing a pro hockey contract in 1985. Virtually all of his time was spent at Binghamton of the American Hockey League.

Suns sign Tyrone Corbin

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Forward Tyrone Corbin has signed a four-year contract with the Phoenix Suns. The NBA team announced Wednesday.

The Suns obtained the 6-foot-6, 222-pound Corbin, along with guard Kevin Johnson and center Mark West, from the Cleveland Cavaliers last February for forwards Larry Nance and Mike Sanders.

Corbin, a veteran of three NBA seasons, averaged 7.7 points in 30 games with the Suns.

"He has established himself as a bonafide NBA player," said Suns president and chief executive officer Jerry Colangelo. "He's the kind of player when the game is on the line, you want him on the court."

The terms of Corbin's four-year contract were not revealed.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Pierre Page, who has spent the last eight years with the Calgary Flames, has been named coach of the Minnesota North Stars.

Page, 40, succeeds Herb Brooks, who coached the rest of the North Stars' season and was fired last month. The announcement of the NHL team's firings came June 14, the same day new general manager Jack Ferreira was hired. Ferreira introduced Page at a Wednesday news conference. Page (pronounced Pah-zhay') was Ferreira's top choice ever since June 22, when the GM decided not to rehire Brooks.

Page becomes the North Stars' sixth head coach since 1982. The North Stars, whose 18-48-13 record last season was the NHL's worst, will be paying three men for the job in 1988-89: Page; Brooks, who still is under contract at about $185,000, and Lorne Henning, who was fired in 1987 and will be paid about $150,000 for the last year of his contract.

Terms of Page's contract weren't announced.

Buoniconti suit continues

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Marc Buoniconti's previous neck injuries had nothing to do with the broken neck that left him paralyzed in a 1985 football game, an orthopedic surgeon testified.

Dr. Victor Frankel told the Charleston County Court of Common Pleas jury hearing Buoniconti's $16.5 million negligence suit Wednesday that an X-ray taken five days before the injury showed no weakening of the neck.

"The ligaments were all intact," he said, adding the broken neck was "totally independent" of Buoniconti's existing neck condition.

Buoniconti is suing Citadel football team doctor E. K. Wallace Jr. in the case. Buoniconti, the son of former Miami Dolphins linebacker Nick Buoniconti, broke his neck while playing middle linebacker for The Citadel against East Tennessee State on Oct. 26, 1985. He was left a quadriplegic by the accident.

Nuggets sign Davis

DENVER — Walter Davis, a six-time NBA all-star and the all-time leading scorer in Phoenix Suns' history, became the second unrestricted free agent to change teams when he signed a contract Wednesday with the Denver Nuggets.

Pete Babcock, Nuggets president and general manager, made the announcement during a news conference but would not disclose terms of the contract, in keeping with the club's policy.

Davis, a 6-foot-6 guard, has played his entire NBA career with the Suns. The 33-year-old Davis became an unrestricted free agent following the 1987-88 season and he signed with the Nuggets one day after forward Tom Chambers signed with the Suns after playing with Seattle for five seasons.

Unrestricted free agents are allowed to sign with any NBA team without former clubs receiving any compensation or having the right of first refusal under terms of the league's new collective bargaining agreement.

Nixon caught twice

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco Giants outfielder Donnell Nixon became the fourth player in major-league history Wednesday to be caught stealing twice in one inning.

Against the Chicago Cubs in the sixth inning, Nixon led off with a single but was apparently picked off when pitcher Jamie Moyer threw behind him to first baseman Mark Grace.

Nixon, who stole 144 bases at Bakersfield in 1983, broke for second and was safe when Grace's throw was dropped by second baseman Ryne Sandberg for an error. Even though he was safe, official scoring rules say that Nixon was caught stealing. Nixon reached third on a sacrifice but was caught trying to steal home.

The other players to be caught stealing twice are Don Baylor in 1974 and Jim Morrison and Paul Niece in 1987.

Tyson to earn $21 million

NEW YORK — Mike Tyson will make slightly less than $21 million from last week's heavyweight championship fight against Michael Spinks.

Shelley Finkel, who had the pay-per-view and closed circuit rights for the 91-second fight, said Wednesday that the home theater and arena showings earned $22 million.

Tyson retained his championship by knocking out Spinks in his first round.

Finkel said that 55 percent of the television distribution money came from closed-circuit showings in theaters and arenas and 45 percent came from pay-per-view sales.

Allen surprises in boxing trials

By Tim Dohlerberg
The Associated Press

CONCORD, Calif. — Darin Allen, one of the biggest names in the U.S. Olympic boxing trials, may also turn out to be its biggest surprise.

Allen, the former world champion who dropped out of the rankings after a series of defeats, fought his way into the finals of the 165-pound class Wednesday night with a bruising 4-1 decision over John Scully.

"The win was the second impressive performance in as many days for Allen, who quit boxing earlier this year and earned a berth in the trials only by special invitation after losing to Scully in the Eastern qualifying tournament.

"A lot of people didn't give me a chance," said Allen, of Columbus, Ohio. "But once I lost to Scully in the qualifying, I had no idea I'd be on the Olympic team. It just made me that much hungrier."

Allen, after a tentative first round, took the fight to Scully in the second and third rounds to score the narrow win in a decision roundly booed by the crowd of about 1,000 at the Concord Hilton.

"It's hard to beat a guy once he makes up his mind to win," said Allen, who will meet Anthony Hembrick in the finals. "I had more talent but he was very determined and it is only a three-round fight."

Allen, the world amateur middleweight champion in 1986, began a downhill slide the next year when he was knocked out in the first round of the Pan Am Games by Cuba's Angel Espinoza.

Daggett still a favorite in Houston gymnastics

HOUSTON (AP) — When Tim Daggett shattered his right leg during the 1987 World Gymnastics Championships last November, his first thoughts were not of a comeback.

"First, he had to be sure he'd have two legs to come back on," said Daggett, a 26-year-old from Fort Worth, Texas. "There was a fear that I might lose my leg for good some time."

Incaviglia's return nightmare for Yanks

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — While principal power threat Pete Incaviglia missed nine straight games due to a back injury, the Texas Rangers struggled to score runs.

Without Incaviglia the Rangers hit only five homers in 13 games.

Incaviglia celebrated his return to the lineup Wednesday night with a solo homer and a triple and threw out the potential tying run at the plate in the sixth as the Rangers beat the New York Yankees, 4-2.

"You'll never hear me complaining but it's a different lineup with him than without him," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "The home run and the triple were great but the throw to the plate was better."

Ranger starter Jeff Russell, 8-2, snapped a two-game personal losing streak despite allowing 12 hits, four walks and committing two balks in 7-2-3 innings.

"It was awfully good to have Inky back in the lineup," Russell said. "He told me before the game he was going to go out and hit one tonight and he did."

Texas took a 2-1 lead in the second, a rally that started when Incaviglia clubbed a leadoff homer, a 424-foot blast into the left-field stands. It was the 15th homer of the season for Incaviglia, who'd missed the previous nine games with a back injury.

"It's nice to get back in the lineup and help the team," Incaviglia said. "But I felt like I was in the Twilight Zone out there. I haven't picked up a bat or a glove in so long. It really felt strange."

After Incaviglia's blast, Larry Parrish doubled, then Jeff Kunkin drove in the go-ahead run with a double.

Incaviglia tripled with out in the eighth and scored an insurance run on Pete O'Brien's sacrifice fly.

Incaviglia made the defensive play of the game in the sixth, throwing out Ricky Henderson at the plate.

Peculiar Myers a hit with Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Randy Myers has some peculiar ideas about bullpen small-talk. The other day, around midgame, his subject was three ways to disarm a man with a knife.

"The whole league knows he's missing a few screws," explained Wally Backman, his New York Mets teammate. "But I think that works to his advantage. He's pumped up over there, staking the mound and acting like he doesn't know what's happening. And maybe he doesn't. It doesn't matter. He's got everybody scared, including me."

Myers, striking out the first batter and the last batter he faced, pitched perfectly for 2-2-3 innings Wednesday night, notching his 13th save and preserving Ron Darling's 5-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. Darryl Strawberry hit his league-leading 21st homer in the first and Darling singled home the go-ahead run in the sixth.

The victory kept the first place Mets 6½ games up on the idle Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East and prevented a sweep of the three-game series at Shea Stadium.

Myers came on for Darling with two outs in the seventh, running on first and second and a 2-0 count on Kal Daniels, who struck out three pitches later.

"I was pumped up to throw strikes," Myers said. "But I didn't want to throw one down the middle. So I put one fastball on the outside corner, one on the inside corner, and then came back with a slider outside."

Myers retired the Reds in the eighth on groundouts but in the ninth, after retiring pinch hitter Dave Collins on a liner and Lloyd McClendon on a grounder, he struck out Jeff Treadway to end the game.

Baseball fascination moves forward

The best curvball in history, an intentional triple play and angels in the outfield can't be seen at the ballpark. You can only see those things in the movies.

America's fascination with baseball has not been missed by Hollywood and this summer's entry is "Bull Durham," a film about life in the minor leagues.

The movies about baseball have portrayed reality and dreamed on the hopes and dreams of a boy's game off.

Sometimes, it wasn't a tell where reality stopped and fiction started.

In June 1967, a scene from the "Odd Couple" was filmed at Shea Stadium. The script called for a member of the Pittsburgh Pi-lines. "Russell said. "He told me before the game he was going to go out and hit one tonight and he did."

Strange still trying to sort out his life

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — More than two weeks after winning the U.S. Open, Curtis Strange is still trying to sort out everything, both in his head and at the mailbox.

"I still think about it every time I have some free time," Strange said of his June 20 playoff victory over Nick Faldo at The Country Club in Brookline, Mass.

Within moments of capturing the first major title of his career, the 33-year-old Strange dedicated the victory to the memory of his late father, who died of cancer.

The emotional outpouring Strange showed in the speech has prompted a flood of letters that Strange is still spending several hours at a time in recent days trying to read all his mail.

"The people who pick up a pen and pencil who you've never heard of before and write a letter to you—that to me has been more surprising than anything else," Strange said.

"Every one of those letters mentioned the ending, which was awful nice of them," he said.

Strange, a three-time winner this year, is hoping some of his recent success will carry over at home, which for him is on the grounds of the Kingsmill Golf Club, where the Amheuser-Busch Golf Classic began today.

"I feel good. I'm well-rested," said Strange, who has never finished higher than fourth at the Strange, a three-time winner this year, is hoping some of his recent success will carry over at home, which for him is on the grounds of the Kingsmill Golf Club, where the Amheuser-Busch Golf Classic began today.

"I feel good. I'm well-rested," said Strange, who has never finished higher than fourth at the Amheuser-Busch. Two years ago, he missed the cut. Last year, he finished in a tie for 36th place.

Strange is still trying to sort out everything, both in his head and at the mailbox.

"I still think about it every time I have some free time," Strange said of his June 20 playoff victory over Nick Faldo at The Country Club in Brookline, Mass.

Within moments of capturing the first major title of his career, the 33-year-old Strange dedicated the victory to the memory of his late father, who died of cancer.

The emotional outpouring Strange showed in the speech has prompted a flood of letters that Strange is still spending several hours at a time in recent days trying to read all his mail.

"The people who pick up a pen and pencil who you've never heard of before and write a letter to you—that to me has been more surprising than anything else," Strange said.

"Every one of those letters mentioned the ending, which was awful nice of them," he said.

This little piggy played no-trump

By James Jacoby

You don't have to spend much time at the bridge table to see greed rear its ugly head. Here South was in an easy three-no-trump, with nine top tricks available after the opening lead. But that wasn't enough.

Declarer won the king of spades in dummy, cashed the ace of diamonds and led a club back to his queen. West took the ace and switched to the jack of hearts. Now living in a dream world, declarer rose with the king. East won, returned a low heart to partner's 10, and took the setting tricks when West played the three of hearts through the dummy's remaining 4.

Of course, even after losing to the ace of clubs, declarer can still guarantee his contract simply by playing low from dummy on the jack of hearts. He can then cover West's 10 with the king, and dummy's eight will stop the run of the heart suit. But how much simpler to just take the first nine tricks ending in dummy and then lead a club. Declarer will make an overtrick if East has the club ace or if West has the heart ace or if the defense makes a mistake.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" written with his father, the late George Jacoby, are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

Summer doldrums sink ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — A combination of viewers away from their televisions and writers away from their desks handed ABC its lowest prime-time rating ever last week, according to figures from the A. C. Nielsen Co.

The Fourth of July weekend is traditionally a period of low viewing for the networks, but the strike by the Writers Guild of America forced some programs into early reruns and that helped lower ABC's average to 8.0, said Alan Wurtzel, vice president for marketing and research.

"It's not only just summer doldrums, but also the fact that the writers' strike has really affected what people are able to see," he said. "We went into a rerun mode earlier than we would have. We've been playing reruns now for an awful long time."

For the week ending July 3, ABC had a rating of 8.0. NBC won the week with an 11.7. CBS was second with a 9.6. The lowest previous rating for ABC was 8.7 two weeks ago and in July 1987.

The rating is a percentage of the nation's estimated 88.6 million households with televisions.

NBC's first-run TV movie "Nightingales" was the top-rated show of the week and seemingly have been off to a good start as a summer series, but there are no more episodes of the Aaron Spelling-produced show because of the strike, according to NBC.

The four-month-long strike has delayed the networks' fall season, NBC maintains, however, that the current low viewing levels are typical of summer rerun programming and do not reflect effects of the strike, at least not yet.

As a comparison of how low ratings have fallen, "The Cosby Show," the No. 1 show last season, had a season-long average rating of 29.9 compared to 18.9 for "Nightingales," the No. 1 show last week.

The rest of the top 10 shows, all reruns, were "The Cosby Show," "Cheers," "The Cosby Show," "A Different World," "L.A. Law," "Golden Girls" and "The 24th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee." ABC's first-run summer series "Hothouse" premiered to a lowly 6.4 rating and is in 60th place.

The lowest-rated prime-time shows of the week were "High Mountain Rangers," "Star-Spangled Celebration," "Hothouse," "CBS Summer Playhouse," "Charming Special," "Hotel," "Spot Marks the X," "MacGyver," "Rags to Riches," "Supercharger" and "Home Again."

CBS remained in first place in the close news race, finishing the week ending July 1 with an average rating of 9.1 and a share of 20. NBC was second with a rating of 8.8 and a 19 share. ABC had an 8.4 and 19 share.

The share is a percentage of sets in use.

Barbershop singers set for 'Olympic' competition

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — With the tough competition of the "Olympics" of barbershop singing "only a day away, hundreds of vocalists found harmony in hotel lobbies and halls as they belted out familiar tunes.

But all bets were off today, when more than 1,000 barbershop quartet and chorus singers compete at the 50th International Convention of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America.

Fifty-one quartets will battle for five finalist positions, while 16 choruses of 50 men each vie for five spots.

The finals are set for Saturday, with one gold, one silver and three bronze medals up for grabs in each category.

The gold medal winners are the international champions.

"This is the Olympics of barbershop singing and all of them have had to battle on the local level to get here," international president James Warner, a lawyer from Memphis, Tenn., said Wednesday. "It will be a tough competition because there is a lot of prestige that goes with the medals."

The competition may be fierce, but in virtually every corner of the Henry B. Gonzalez Convention Center and hotels Wednesday, many unfamiliar four-somes gathered like old chums and stretched their vocal chords.

Barbershop quartets, which cropped up mainly on the East Coast at the turn of the century and became popular during the vaudeville era, use four-part harmonies to carry tunes.

The lead singer carries the melody. A tenor harmonizes and a baritone and a bass handle the lower chords.

Barbershop quartets began fading when vaudeville was replaced by the forms of music and motion pictures in the aftermath of World War I.

Today, there are 2,000 quartets and 800 choruses divided into 16 regions in the United States and Canada.

Competitors helped by TV writers' strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television and cable channels are hoping to lure away network viewers as the lengthy writers' strike wears on, delaying the fall season for the networks and the debut of new series.

"I must say, I have mixed emotions (about the strike), because I hate to think about all those writers out of work, so it's nothing to jump up and down about. On the other hand, I think it will help us quite a bit," said Suzanne Weil, senior vice president of national programming and promotion services for the Public Broadcasting Service.

The strike, which began March 7, has forced the three major television networks to delay the traditional fall season when they launch new series. The guild rejected the most recent management offer last month. It voted Wednesday night on a model contract for independent producers. Results were to be announced this Wednesday.

When the strike ends, it will take weeks for producers to prepare new shows.

NBC is considering buying programs from the British Broadcasting Co., or re-shooting old TV shows with different actors to avoid reruns. Its "The Cosby Show" will continue in production under an independent contract, and it has the Summer Olympics in September. CBS is considering buying BBC shows. ABC plans to run the first 18 hours of its 30-hour miniseries "War and Remembrance" in November instead of February.

PBS is immune from the strike because its programs are produced under a separate contract with the guild, and it also buys British programming. CBS is considering buying BBC shows. ABC plans to run the first 18 hours of its 30-hour miniseries "War and Remembrance" in November instead of February.

WALKING NOT WRITING — Members of the striking Writers Guild of America picket outside CBS-TV studios in Los Angeles Wednesday.

"I think any time the cable networks can inch away a little more viewership, some of the viewership will remain on cable in a longer term," said Andy Orgel, senior vice president of programming for the Arts & Entertainment Network, which hopes to lure new viewers with sophisticated programming alternatives this fall.

At the end of the 1987-88 television season, most major cable channels increased viewership. HBO, for example, increased 5 percent, while overall network audience levels dropped 9 percent. Some of the drop is attributed to a change in A.C. Nielsen's ratings methodology, but networks agree there is a decrease in network viewing.

Public television already staggers its series to attract viewers to alternative programming, which network shows are repeats. For instance, "Alive from Outer Space," an avant-garde variety series, starts its new season on PBS next week.

Stoddard said the first 18 hours of the miniseries will be shown over 11 days beginning Sunday, Nov. 13. Stoddard had previously said the miniseries would run in the 1989 television season.

"When we began planning for 'War and Remembrance' five years ago, the problems of production logistics, budgeting and scheduling seemed insurmountable. But in retrospect, I'm very glad we didn't pass it up," said Stoddard, who termed the Dan Curtis-produced and directed film "masterpiece."

"War and Remembrance" is expected to be the last of the big-time, multipart miniseries for a long time. The last, "America," also on ABC, was a disappointment in the ratings.

New date for miniseries

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC said Wednesday it will run the first part of the 36-hour miniseries "War and Remembrance" in November, earlier than originally planned, because of the strike by the Writers Guild of America.

All three major networks are struggling to come up with original programming this fall, since the four-month-long strike has delayed production of new series. NBC will delay the Summer Olympics in September.

"War and Remembrance," based on the Herman Wouk novel, is the sequel to "Hellscape," also on ABC, which ABC Entertainment President Brandon Stoddard said the first 18 hours of the miniseries will be shown over 11 days beginning Sunday, Nov. 13. Stoddard had previously said the miniseries would run in the 1989 television season.

"When we began planning for 'War and Remembrance' five years ago, the problems of production logistics, budgeting and scheduling seemed insurmountable. But in retrospect, I'm very glad we didn't pass it up," said Stoddard, who termed the Dan Curtis-produced and directed film "masterpiece."
