Sewer work halted; town weighs $18 million option

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

The town administration has decided to stop work Monday on the secondary part of the sewage treatment plant after failing to resolve a dispute over wetlands filling with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said Friday.

The decision followed a meeting Friday between the administration and officials from the Corps of Engineers and other federal agencies, during which the Corps made its case for a plan to move the secondary facility to the area where the town dog pound is now located. That plan would cost an additional $17 million or $18 million above the $27 million cost of the planned improvements to the plant, Weiss said.

Director Barbara B. Weinberg called the proposal "mind boggling."

The plan is one of several the Corps had asked the town to look into to determine whether there are less-damaging alternatives to work that had already been carried out in some 4 acres of wetlands.

The Corps of Engineers had issued a cease-and-desist order two weeks ago for work on the secondary facility because the town had failed to get a wetlands permit. But the town had resumed work on Tuesday under an informal agreement with U.S.

Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. that allowed the town to continue work through Friday.

Weiss said the decision to stop work again was made because "the Corps of Engineers was reluctant to continue that arrangement."

Weiss said that he would meet with Lt. Col. Stanley J. Murphy, deputy division engineer of the Corps' New England division, on Tuesday morning at the treatment plant with other town officials. He said the work stoppage would continue at least until Murphy's visit.

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said that he hoped the town could convince Murphy that there are no alternatives to building the plant where work is now going on. Commenting on the work stoppage, he said, "I don't think we have any alternative until we review our options. I don't think we know what our options are at this point."

Republican Director Theunis "Terry" Werkhoven, the minority leader on the Board of Directors, could not be reached Friday for comment on the decision to stop work. But when told of the Corps' alternate plan earlier in the day, he said that he wished the Corps of Engineers could be "more lenient."

Town officials, including DiRosa, met Friday morning in U.S. District Court in Hartford with Twardy and officials from the Corps of Engineers, the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Twardy said after leaving the meeting that "there's no lawsuit imminent" but he would not comment on what happened at the meeting. Brian Valiton, a case handling specialist with the Corps of Engineers, said, "We're working toward a solution, but we haven't got one."

Valiton said that the Corps of Engineers would issue a statement on Friday's meeting, but officials from the Corps could not be reached for additional comment Friday night.

Weiss said that the dog pound was the only alternate location proposed by the Corps of Engineers. He said that the relocated plant would require more workers and would be more costly to operate.

"It's a much more complicated operation, which I understand from the technicians could go astray more readily," he said.

Weiss said work could continue at the primary part of the plant and other areas where there are no wetlands.

The Corps of Engineers has said that fines as high as $500,000 could be levied on the town for unauthorized work in the wetlands. Weiss said that the issue of fines did not come up at Friday's meeting.

State wins first round in tandem license suit

HARTFORD (AP) — The state's right to require special licenses for tandem-trailer truck drivers has been upheld by a federal judge, giving Connecticut an initial victory in a pending lawsuit filed by six Pennsylvania truckers.

The truckers contend Connecticut's 1983 license regulations violate their right to equal protection and due process under federal law, while also intruding on the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce.

Judge Jose Cabranes, in a June 30 ruling made public Friday, found that federal law doesn't preempt states from requiring special licenses for tandem truck drivers.

"The federal regulations ... make clear that highway safety is an important goal underlying the federal scheme of highway regulations," Cabranes wrote. "Connecticut's tandem trailer statute, rather than frustrating this goal, clearly serves to promote it."

Cabranes left open the question on the state law's effect on interstate commerce. The judge said the truckers and the state will have to argue that claim during a trial.

Assistant Attorney General Lawrence Russ said no date has been set for the start of a trial. He said the state would first seek more information from the six Pennsylvania truck drivers relating to their experiences with the state's licensing law.

Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said he was pleased with the state's initial victory in the lawsuit, noting the Federal Highway Administration also had approved of the state's tandem truck laws.

"It means we can continue to require licenses for tandem truck drivers. These monster rigs are a threat to the motoring public, as any driver knows," Lieberman said.

William H. Clendenen Jr., a New Haven attorney representing the truckers, was not available for comment Friday. A secretary at his law office said Clendenen was out of town until Monday.

The ruling was the latest development in the long-running dispute between Connecticut and the trucking industry. The state in 1982 banned tandem trailers from its roads, but the restriction was found unconstitutional by the courts.

The Pennsylvania truckers originally filed their lawsuit in Pennsylvania in 1984, but the suit failed on jurisdictional grounds. They filed their suit again in Connecticut.

Tandems, which are trucks pulling two trailers, were first allowed on the nation's interstates in 1982. Connecticut immediately imposed a ban, alleging the trucks were a threat to motorists on the state's crowded highways. The ban was found illegal in federal court, and the state's bid to reimpose the ban ended when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case in 1984.

Congress passed a law in 1986 that imposes a minimum uniform standard of licensing.

BUS PROTEST — Clayton Jones of East Hartford chained himself to a bus in Hartford Friday to protest alleged discriminatory practices against the handicapped by Greyhound Lines Inc. Six people were arrested.

Town woman in bus protest

About 30 people, including a Manchester woman, protested the allegedly discriminatory policies of Greyhound Lines Inc. Friday by positioning themselves behind buses during a 45-minute rally in Hartford.

Lynda Hanscomb of Manchester was among the about 30 protesters.

Six people, including a wheelchair-bound man who chained himself to a bus, were arrested at the downtown bus terminal during a protest of the company's allegedly discriminatory policies toward the handicapped.

Members of American Disabled for Accessible Public Transportation, many of them in wheelchairs, positioned themselves behind buses parked in the terminal's parking lot during the protest.

ADAPT, which plans a series of similar protests this summer at Greyhound terminals around the country, is unhappy that none of the 3,700 buses in Greyhound's national fleet are equipped with wheelchair lifts, said Hanscomb, chairwoman of ADAPT's Connecticut chapter.

The six arrested were charged with disorderly conduct, booked at the scene and taken to court in lift-equipped vans for immediate arraignment before Superior Court Judge Raymond R. Norko.

Norko dismissed all charges when the protesters argued that "the laws of the state of Connecticut should not be used to protect Greyhound and perpetuate their immoral, discriminatory and illegal conduct," said defense attorney Jacob Wieselmann.

FBI suspects Paisley took money from firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI suspects that defense consultant Melvyn R. Paisley accepted bribes or gratuities from three defense contractors while serving as a top Navy official, court documents disclosed Friday.

Search warrants said the FBI was looking for memos about "payment from General Dynamics and McDonnell Douglas to Paisley in the form of checks, gifts, or other forms of remuneration, or to his wife, Vicki" at the time he was an assistant Navy secretary. Agents were also looking for evidence of payments or gratuities from Pratt & Whitney employe3s to Paisley.

In a detailed search warrant of Paisley's home in McLean, Va., the FBI also said it sought evidence that Paisley gave James E. Gaines, a deputy assistant secretary of the Navy, a Western painting titled "Lonesome Whistle." They also sought evidence that Paisley or fellow consultant William Galvin provided gratuities to Gaines including "money to Gaines' companies, entertainment tickets, and tires."

The warrant used by the FBI in the June 14 search of Paisley's house, was released by the clerk of the U.S. District Court in nearby Alexandria, Va. The search was one of a series carried out across the nation on that day in an investigation of massive corruption in the $150 billion-a-year Defense Department purchasing system.

The FBI documents showed the government is investigating Paisley's work as a consultant to 10 defense contractors and disclosed the names of several Pentagon employees whose contacts with Paisley are being investigated.

Ollie North trial opens on Sept. 20

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the Iran-Contra case Friday ordered fired White House aide Oliver L. North to stand trial Sept. 20 and ordered prosecutors to give the defense any secret documents showing North acted with higher authority.

That ensures the case will come to trial as the presidential campaign is in full swing.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ruled that during a closed hearing earlier this week, North had demonstrated that highly sensitive documents are relevant to defend charges he conspired to illegally divert U.S.-Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Gesell directed independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh to produce any documents to support North's claims that money raised by arms dealers Albert Hakim and retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord from the U.S.-Iran arms sales was combined with government money for covert operations to help the Contras.

The judge ordered Walsh to produce any documents that corroborate North's claim that these actions "were all approved at or near Cabinet level; their execution was closely monitored through the use of a variety of intelligence methods and sources."

The documents should include those that show "funding of the activity from any source" and "whether or not senior government officials were aware of the activity," Gesell said.

Any references to covert aid to the Contras in President Reagan's daily intelligence briefings between Sept. 1, 1984, and Dec. 31, 1986, or in the president's regular daily briefing by his staff should be turned over to the defense, Gesell said.

Any other information about aid to the Contras that was forwarded to the White House by the Central American Joint Intelligence Task Force during this period should also be provided, the judge said.

Humid weather for 3 more days

Central Connecticut will continue to suffer in the hot sun for at least three more days, said a spokesman for the National Weather Service.

The open-air sauna weather will continue to either late Monday or early Tuesday, when showers are predicted. After the rains, the temperature should drop into the mid-80s, the weather service reported.

Until then, more of the same weather that gripped the area Friday will continue.

Today's forecast calls for a cloudy, hot and humid day with temperatures hitting the mid 90s. Sunday's forecast is for partly cloudy skies with temperatures reaching the upper 90s.

"It looks like it may begin to break up Tuesday," the spokesman said. "It will continue right the same until we get showers. It should remain hot and humid."

The continuation of the hot weather may be good news for air conditioner and ice cream salesmen, but it is not good news for farmers. Local farmers, though not as troubled as farmers from the drought-stricken Midwest, have been pleading for showers to hit the area, but to no avail.

So far this year, rainfall is 6 inches below average as only 15.89 inches have fallen this year, the weather service reported.

Manchester Memorial Hospital officials reported that no patients with heat-related problems were treated Friday.

OPEN WINDOW — Ann McFee of Manchester takes care of business at the main post office Friday with clerk Steven Bruckner. She was one of few who were not excited about a plan by the U.S. Postal Service to restore hours that were cut back.

They're all smiles over postal hours

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The restoration of postal service window hours cut back because of federal budget shortfalls is good news to many residents.

Postmaster General Anthony Frank announced Friday that the service has found sufficient savings in other areas for it to restore full window hours at United States post offices across the country. The hours, reduced in February to save money, will be restored in September.

"I couldn't agree more," said Frank Napolitano of Manchester as he left the main post office at 479 Main St. Friday. "The hour they were closed was the hour (I tried) to get stamps."

After the cuts, the Main Street office's service window closed at noon on Wednesdays, five hours earlier than before. The window, though, did stay open until 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays.

The window was open from 8:30 to 5 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Fridays.

At the Broad Street and Buckland stations, the windows are closed every day between 1 and 2 p.m.

At the Bolton Post Office, only the box lobby remained open after the cutback. The lobby is open from 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday, while it previously had been open from 8:30 a.m. to noon Saturday.

The restoration of hours does not necessarily mean a return to old schedules, Frank said Friday. He has told postmasters to open windows during hours they deem most appropriate.

Manchester Postmaster Robert Paiva could not be reached for comment Friday.

But the news of Frank's announcement brought smiles to the faces of many post office customers at the Main Street office.

"I think that's good," said Kathy Perron of Manchester. "If I come here on a Wednesday afternoon, at least it will be open."

"I think it will (help)," said Dr. Sobhy Ghabriel of Manchester. "I came here twice and found it closed. I'm used to it being open" the hours before the cutback.

"That's great," said Barbara Ledard of Tolland, who works for J.C. Penney Co. Inc. in Manchester. "I'm always at the wrong post office at the (wrong) time. I spend more time at the wrong place and driving around. I'll be glad when they're all open."

Not every customer, though, said the news would help them.

"No. We don't care," said Elma Turkis of Manchester. "We use the post office when we go shopping."

She said by usually using the post offices at Buckland station and Broad Street during office hours, she did not have to make a special trip to the post office too often.

"It hasn't bothered me either way," said Ann McFee of Manchester. "I'm a housewife. I can come down anytime of the day."

Pioneer moves to S. Windsor

By Nancy Conzelman and Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The new owners of Pioneer Systems Inc. announced plans Friday to reduce the workforce and move the plant to South Windsor, said the company's new president.

Michel Labarre, president of the new Pioneer Aerospace Corp., said the new company will keep 40 to 45 workers in administrative and engineering positions and move to a smaller plant in South Windsor by October.

Labarre declined to name the new location because of negotiations. The company's lease on its Hale Road plant, owned by Economy Electric Supply Inc. President Robert Weinberg, runs out in September.

"We have a pretty good idea (where the new plant will be), but it's not definite," Labarre said Friday. Pioneer Systems Inc. on June 30 sold all of the operating assets of its aerospace-defense group to the Paris, France-based Zodiac Group, whose subsidiary, Aerazur, is a worldwide parachute manufacturer.

The financially troubled Pioneer, with a loss in operating assets of $7.4 million since 1985, employed more than 100 people in January and 80 in May, said former President Alan Greenstadt on Thursday. Layoffs have been taking place at the plant for a number of months, and the new owners did not offer work to 10 to 15 people, Labarre said. He was unsure how many people were employed at the Manchester plant when the sale was finalized June 30.

Officials of the union representing the workers, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textiles Local 125 of North Dartmouth, Mass., are on vacation and could not be reached for comment Friday.

Labarre said that he is hoping that the company will be able to hire more workers in the future, but that growth, if it occurs, will take place in the company's Mississippi plants. The company's parachute manufacturing plants are in Melbourne, Fla. and Columbia and Liberty, Miss.

Labarre said he believed the financially-troubled company can become a viable manufacturer again. "We believe fundamentally it's sound and can be turned around," Labarre said. "It will take a lot of work but it can be done."

The management team from the old Pioneer will be retained, except Greenstadt, who resigned as head of the parachute division. Labarre will be the only French representative of the parent company stationed in South Windsor.

Pioneer owns 90 percent of the stock in Vogart, which manufactures needlework kits and other craft items. Vogart recently underwent a restructuring and broke even by 1987, according to Pioneer Systems 1987 annual report.

The annual report cited the operating losses and a significant decrease in working capital as reasons for the decision to sell the operating assets of the aerospace-defense group. The company in January announced plans to restructure, scaling down operations and moving to a smaller facility.

Greenstadt said then the company would shift its focus from the manufacture of parachutes to developing more high-tech recovery systems for the aerospace and defense industries.

Toddler stops breathing

A 9-month-old child who was with his parents shopping for an air conditioner died Friday night at Manchester Memorial Hospital after he apparently suffered a cardiac arrest, hospital officials said.

Debbie DePasqua, hospital nursing supervisor, said the child died at 9:17 p.m. The child was brought by ambulance to the hospital emergency room after his parents noticed he was not breathing as they shopped in a Hartford Road appliance store, police said.

DePasqua said it had not been determined why the child stopped breathing. Police had few details on the incident immediately available.

Farmers' Market opens today

By Anita M. Caldwell
Manchester Herald

The Downtown Farmers' Market sponsored by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches opens today from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Main Street in front of St. James Church.

The market is held annually each Saturday through the fall to provide fresh produce to the elderly and low-income families living within walking distance of the downtown area, said Joanne Coykendall, program supervisor at MACC. Anyone is welcome to purchase goods, however.

Coykendall said the residents look forward to the market for many reasons.

"It's a combination of things," she said. "It seems to foster a sense of community." Coykendall said some of the residents look for the same farmer year after year.

Some of the items the farmers plan to sell include cucumbers, yellow and green squash, lettuce, spinach, green beans and tomatoes. Breads, jellies and jams and honey will also be available.

However, Coykendall pointed out that only about three or four farmers will be selling goods today since it's still early in the season. She said the season peaks around mid-August. By that time, Coykendall expects 13 or 14 farmers at the market.

Agency to help with labor woes

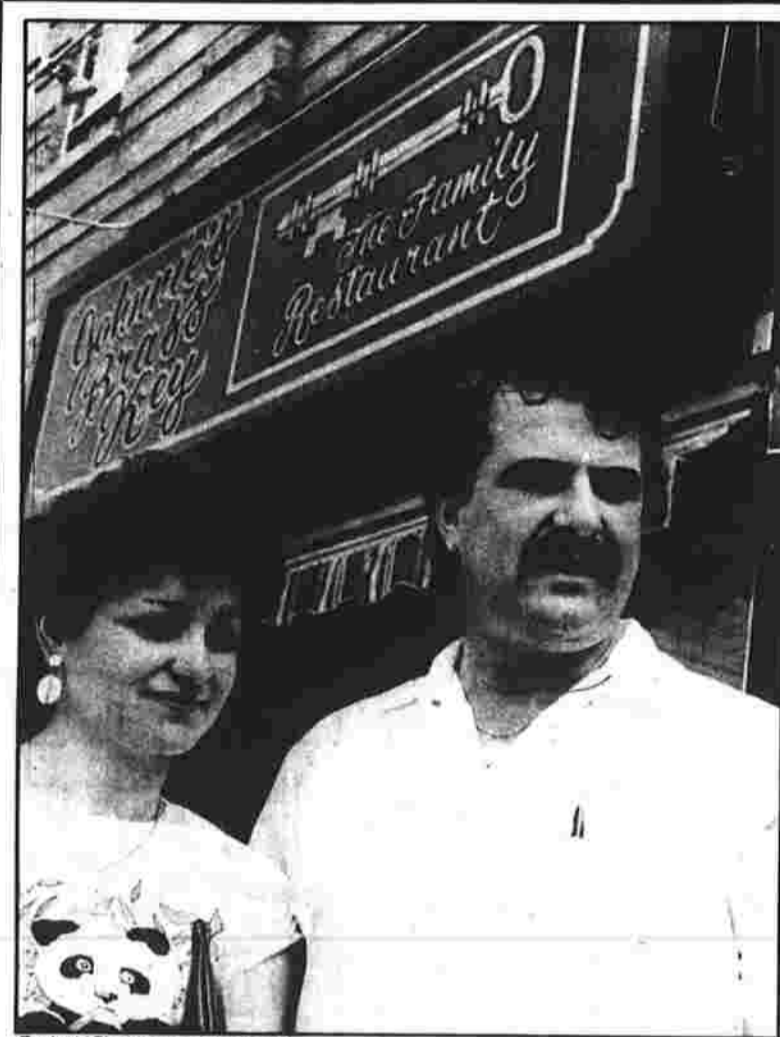

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

To help small and medium-sized companies deal with the tight labor market here, the New England Office of the National Alliance of Business will begin studying and cataloging programs that assist businesses in the recruitment of employees.

The organization will work with companies throughout New England to identify and catalog internal and external programs that help businesses recruit, train, motivate and retain workers, according to a release from NAB.

Frank Fletcher of NAB said the organization hopes to begin working with chambers of commerce in various regions throughout New England in the fall, but specific areas of research haven't been decided on and Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce officials said they have not yet been contacted.

Statistics from the state Labor Department compiled in 1986 show that between 1990 and 1995, about 89,572 new jobs will be created statewide, said Garrett McDonald, research supervisor with the department. Because of retirement and death, an additional 325,289 jobs will require replacement employees between 1990 and 1995, he said.

NEW OWNER—Luisa Parreira, former owner of the Brass Key Restaurant at 829 Main St. greets the new owner, Steve Karamesinis, former owner of Nikki's Restaurant, will be using some familiar recipes.

Recipe for success changes at the Brass Key Restaurant

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

The recipe for success changed at the Brass Key Restaurant at 829 Main St. Friday. The kitchen started dishing up Greek salads with Calamata olives and feta cheese chunks, as Steve Karamesinis, a Greek restaurateur, took over from Luisa Parreira, who is Portuguese.

Karamesinis, who sold Nikki's Restaurant on Broad Street last year, bought the Brass Key from Parreira on Thursday. By Friday, he had added fresh fruit salad platters and one of his specialties, a Greek salad, to attract customers who were strolling on Main Street for the Sidewalk Sales.

A few of the signature dishes from Nikki's, including the Monte Cristo sandwiches and the crab or shrimp rolls, will probably be added to the menu, said Karamesinis.

But Brass Key won't stop dishing up such American fare as grilled cheese sandwiches and ice cream sodas, said Karamesinis.

"You don't play around with a good thing," he said Friday.

He plans to keep many of the perennial favorites, and the well-known low-cost breakfast specials. But there will probably be small price increases, particularly on that $1.29 breakfast.

"My kid's got to eat, too," said Karamesinis. "That price is just too low."

Parreira, who bought the Brass Key 11 months ago from John Johns, is planning to leave the restaurant business and spend more time with her family, she said on Friday.

The Brass Key was the first restaurant for Parreira, who had worked in a bakery but was primarily a press and computer operator at an

"You get a lot more walk-in customers here, and there is more a feeling of friendliness with the neighbors."

— Steve Karamesinis

insurance company. She planned to introduce Manchester to such delicacies as caldeverde soup and Portuguese shrimp.

"But things didn't work out that way. The restaurant business was good, I tried it, but it was just getting to be a little too much for me," she said.

Karamesinis agreed that restaurant life can conflict with family responsibilities. That is, in part, why he sold Nikki's Restaurant, he said. Since Nikki's was open for breakfast, lunch and dinner, he said he would routinely be at work from 6 a.m. until 10 p.m., every day.

"It got to where I'd be putting in 110 hours a week," he said. "I named the restaurant for my kid, but I never saw the kid."

For this reason, he said, Brass Key will probably continue to serve only breakfast and lunch.

Karamesinis, who operated The Egg and You on Main Street from 1969 through 1975, said that he is pleased to be back in town.

"You get a lot more walk-in customers here, and there is more a feeling of friendliness with the neighbors," he said.

"Yeah, he moved back to Main Street, just to be next door to me," said Mike Boyle, who owns the Mary Lewis shop next to the Brass Key.

Strike looming over Bradlees

Employees at the Bradlees department store at the Manchester Parkade will likely strike Sunday along with other members of the United Food and Commercial Workers Local 919, which is demanding for employees a share of windfall profits and increased benefits from a leveraged buyout in March, union officials said Friday.

A strike at Connecticut Bradlees stores is imminent, and workers are being asked to strike when the contract expires this Sunday, according to Local 919 President Arnaldo Espinosa. Attempts to reach union officials to determine whether the strike had been endorsed by the union at a meeting late Friday night were unsuccessful.

The union is challenging a leveraged buyout by King Kolberg, Kravis and Roberts, which led the successful buyout of Bradlees with management in March in response to a takeover threat by Dart Industries.

In addition to wage and benefit increases, Local 919 demands greater worker participation in making Bradlees more profitable and a share of the new profits, Espinosa said. During June negotiations, the union demanded a profit-sharing plan that officials said would benefit the company and members.

The Local 919 meeting for a vote on the strike was taking place late Friday at the Parkview Hilton in Hartford to fight what Espinosa called "Wall Street's greed, rigidity and insensitivity to common working people."

Visit to Yale library turns up gems

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Libraries are considered mines of information but a student digging for knowledge got more than she expected recently when she uncovered 12 uncut diamonds.

Garda Ray, a doctoral student at the University of California at Berkeley, was doing research work at Yale University's Sterling Memorial Library last month when she found the gems wrapped in old cigarette papers inside a letter. The letter was tucked into a 1902 diary of author Katherine Mayo.

"Though there have been lots of discoveries here, they have always been intellectual ones," said Mary LaFogg, an archivist at the library.

The Mayo collection has been used by researchers for almost 30 years, said LaFogg, but none noticed the diamonds before.

"I can't think of anything quite as exciting," LaFogg said, adding that there has never been a similar discovery at the library.

Peabody Museum mineralogist Eleanor Fuller said the diamonds are not valuable but they match stones found during the early 1900s in British Guiana, now Guyana, in South America.

The stones were sent to Mayo (1867-1940) by a friend living in British Guiana.

The diamonds will now be housed in the Peabody museum.

Housing projects, prison plan OK'd

HARTFORD (AP) — More than $9 million for housing for the elderly, the homeless and low- and moderate-income families has been approved by the State Bond Commission.

The panel also allocated $642,000 Thursday to convert Deardon Hall at Mansfield Training School into a prison with bed space for about 90 inmates. The money would pay for fire alarms, doors and partitions, lighting and security fencing.

The housing projects approved will make funds available in Granby, Oxford, Rocky Hill, New Haven and Fairfield and for a statewide loan program.

The largest amount, $4.5 million, will go to the House Purchase and Rehabilitation Fund to provide low-interest loans to help buy or rehabilitate housing containing up to four units. The family that qualifies for the loan must live in one of the units.

The loans are based on a family's financial needs and are issued for as long as 30 years at an interest rate not to exceed 6 percent.

The money is expected to assist in the purchase of as many as 225 homes.

Spawning salmon count drops

WINDSOR — Fewer salmon have returned to the Connecticut River to spawn this year, say environmental officials who put part of the blame on the quality of fish used to stock the waters.

Robert A. Jones, director of fisheries for the state Department of Environmental Protection, said 91 Atlantic salmon returned to the river system this year.

He said the number is down from "slightly under 340" Atlantic salmon that returned to spawn last year.

The "quality of stock that was available and the environmental conditions that occurred during the release period two years ago" have affected the number of returning salmon, Jones said.

Efforts to return Atlantic salmon to the Connecticut River started in 1966 and the first few returned in 1977. Hundreds of thousands of young salmon have been placed in the river system during the restoration effort.

The salmon spend two years at sea before they return to spawn.

Prosecutor asks changes in youthful offender law

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut's youthful offender law should be changed to prevent lenient treatment of 16- and 17-year-olds who commit the most serious crimes, says Hartford County State's Attorney John M. Bailey.

"The intent is correct — to protect a young person from having a criminal record," Bailey said. "But now we're seeing attorneys applying for YO (youthful offender) for murder."

He said the legislature intended the law to be used in cases involving crimes such as shoplifting and breach of peace, not murder.

A youthful-offender trial is held in secret and the file is sealed after the case is disposed of, Bailey said. A killer convicted as a youthful offender could receive no more than three years in carceration compared to adults who face up to 60 years in prison for a murder conviction, he said.

Bailey said he could not comment on the case of Karin Aparo, 17, who will be tried as a youthful offender on a charge of conspiracy to commit murder and as an adult on a charge of accessory to murder.

Aparo is accused of plotting with her boyfriend to kill her mother, Joyce Aparo, who was found strangled Aug. 5, 1987.

Lawyers have asked the court to grant youthful-offender status to two youths accused in the May 15 beating death and robbery of Richard Reihl, 33, at his Wethersfield home.

A Superior Court has not yet decided whether Sean G. Burke, 17, and Marcos J. Perez, 16, are eligible for youthful-offender status. They are charged with felony murder. A hearing for Burke and Perez is scheduled for July 15.

In a statement to the police, Perez said he and Burke had beaten and robbed Reihl after meeting him near a gay bar in downtown Hartford.

State law permits youthful-offender status to be given to defendants 16 or 17 years old charged with Class B felonies, including conspiracy to commit murder.

It has been common practice to try 16- and 17-year-old suspects as adults when they are charged with murder-related offenses. Bailey has argued that defendants charged with Class A felonies, such as murder, do not qualify for youthful-offender status.

Legal Services head accused of improper use of funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Evidence from a congressional investigation indicates that the chairman of the Legal Services Corp. improperly used government funds for presidential politics, personal business and to help weaken the agency, Rep. Bruce A. Morrison charged Friday.

The Connecticut Democrat called for the resignation of W. Clark Durant III, who has served as chairman of the agency's board since December 1984 and was an adviser to Rep. Jack Kemp's failed presidential campaign. Durant, in a telephone interview, denied the allegations.

"He's faithless to his duty. He's been undermining the Legal Services Corporation by personal and political activities ... at the expense of the taxpayers," Morrison charged.

Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and the administration of justice, agreed that the evidence appears to show "significant improprieties in the financial management of the corporation."

But Kastenmeier stopped short of calling for Durant's resignation, saying he would delay judgment until the subcommittee holds a hearing in several weeks. But, he added, "It's very unlikely that (Durant) could explain these matters satisfactorily."

Durant, contacted via telephone from his Detroit law office, denied the allegations and countered that the congressional attack was motivated by political and policy disagreements over the direction of the agency, which funds legal assistance programs for the poor.

Durant said he would appear at a congressional hearing "at the appropriate time and under the under right set of circumstances."

The corporation, in a prepared statement issued late Friday, defended Durant, saying it has uncovered no evidence "that would lend credence to insinuations of misappropriation."

Jury is still out on Crafts

NEW LONDON (AP) — Unable to reach a verdict after 11 days, the jury in the Richard Crafts murder trial has agreed to continue deliberations Saturday at Superior Court.

For the first time since getting the case June 23, the jury went the entire day Friday without listening to portions of testimony replayed or re-read.

The 12-member panel asked at 4 p.m. for a replay of portions of testimony dealing with a chainsaw recovered from the Housatonic River in January 1987.

But the court said it would be time-consuming to locate the portions of tape the jury wanted, and the panel accepted a written answer, read aloud in court by Judge Barry Schaller, to the questions they had about the chainsaw testimony.

The response was agreed upon by State's Attorney Walter Flanagan and defense attorney J. Daniel Sagarin.

The state has accused Crafts, a 50-year-old airline pilot from Newtown, of murdering his wife, Helle, by unknown means in November 1986, dismembering the body with a chainsaw and putting the remains through a wood-chipping machine.

The chainsaw recovered from the Housatonic River was identified by a receipt that Crafts' wife had kept in a box of records, and which she had turned over to a friend, as one purchased by her husband.

Strands of hair and human tissue were found on the chainsaw, but they could not be identified as being from the remains of Mrs. Crafts.

The defense attorney raised questions about the circumstances surrounding the chainsaw's recovery and attempted to get the jury to infer that it may have been a planted piece of evidence.

The jury on Thursday asked to hear a replay of another piece of testimony that was cited by the defense attorney in his efforts to get the jury to believe there was some type of conspiracy against his client.

Local News in Brief

O'Neill names probe team

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill on Friday named a five-person task force to investigate management and operation of the state's Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities.

O'Neill's move follows allegations that the commission often hesitates to grant hearings on discrimination complaints, even when its own investigators find the complaints have merit.

"It has been recommended to me that the best way to determine whether questions raised concerning CHRO should prompt changes in the way we operate is to undertake a comprehensive, public review of our enforcement procedures," O'Neill said.

Hazardous waste probe

WINDHAM (AP) — A criminal investigation was initiated Friday after state officials discovered 20 barrels of hazardous chemicals at a rental storage business, Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman said.

The barrels have been removed from Stock'n Lock on Route 32 where they were illegally stored and all danger to the public has been eliminated, Lieberman said.

The type of chemical in the barrels has not been determined, the State Department of Environmental Protection said.

The barrels were stored in an area rented by Quality Heat Treat Inc. of Willimantic according to records, Lieberman said.

CE strike is over

WINDSOR — Striking boilermakers at Combustion Engineering on Friday ended a weeklong walkout by accepting a three-year contract similar to one they earlier rejected.

The vote was, 117-81, according to Ralph C. Peling, president of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers Local 558.

He said the contract allows workers to refuse a day's overtime nine times a year instead of six times as in the original proposal. Peling said the mandatory-overtime clause was the reason the rank-and-file rejected the company's earlier offer.

The contract proposal calls for a 4.2 percent wage increase the first year and 4 percent increases in the following two years. The average salary is about $10 an hour.

Coast Guard seizes speedboat

NEW LONDON, Conn. — The Coast Guard seized a $30,000 speedboat under the federal government's "zero tolerance" anti-drug policy after a small plastic bag of marijuana and a marijuana cigarette were found on the vessel.

The 26-foot pleasure boat, called "Piece of Cake," was stopped in the mouth of the Connecticut River on Thursday night because the registration numbers were outdated, according to Coast Guard officials.

A Coast Guard officer assisted state police in boarding the boat near the Old Saybrook marina.

After half a marijuana cigarette was found on the dashboard, the entire boat and five men on board were searched, said Lt. Jeffrey Hammond of the Coast Guard.

Fargo tapes tossed out

HARTFORD — A federal judge Friday tossed out hundreds of tape recordings collected by the FBI during wiretaps of 16 defendants in the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery case.

U.S. District Judge T. Emmet Clagie said the tapes were not sealed by the government in a timely fashion.

The ruling virtually eliminated evidence against five or six defendants and weakened the cases against others, said members of the defense team who claimed a partial victory. Attorneys refused to identify the defendants involved, noting the tapes remain sealed.

U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy said he was deciding whether to appeal the ruling.

Training school residents push for their freedoms

SOUTHBURY (AP) — A group of residents at the Southbury Training School, a state-run facility for the mentally retarded, said Friday the state had not lived up to an agreement aimed at moving more residents into community-based group homes.

The agreement, a consent decree signed in 1986, sets as a goal 100 community placements a year. The residents said, and the school director confirmed, that there had been just 35 placements in the year ending June 30.

"I want to have my own apartment so I can be on my own," said Mirabel Silva, a resident at the school for six years.

Thomas J. Monroe, who lived at the school 11 years before moving into a group home and then to his own apartment, said the issue was one of civil rights.

He said that almost all of the 1,048 people living at Southbury could make it on their own with the proper support services in the community.

The residents, he said, "should be treated as people, not as a vegetable or a dog on a leash."

"Some of these people shouldn't be here now," he said, gesturing to those who attended a news conference in an auditorium at the institution. But, he said many people "don't want group homes in their communities."

Jean N. Bowen, executive director of the Western Connecticut Association for the Handicapped and Retarded, said it's "just real hard" to live in an institution with more than 1,000 residents.

"There are privacy issues, and (issues of) personal freedom," she said.

Steven D. Staughtis, director of the school, marveled at seeing residents conduct a news conference.

"I very much applaud that," he said. "The issues about privacy and freedom are very real issues."

Their frustration, he said, is understandable. "They were promised something and they didn't get it."

He said, however, that the state has complied with as much of the consent decree as it can, but that adequate support services, such as nursing and therapy, are not abundant in most communities.

"We are behind schedule," he said of the 100-placements-a-year plan in the consent decree. "Just about anybody here could go out into the community with the proper support."

He said it's not a simple matter of funding.

The state Department of Mental Retardation recently revealed budgetary problems that officials said could adversely affect community group homes.

Last month, a $6 million error in the department's budget led DMR Commissioner Brian R. Lensink to propose canceling the planned transfer of about 200 people from state institutions like Southbury to private, community group homes.

Lensink and other officials now say they are confident the money can be made up.

But even with that money, Staughtis said he expects only 58 more people to be transferred from Southbury to group homes in the current fiscal year.

Gillies quits insurance post

HARTFORD (AP) — Insurance Commissioner Peter W. Gillies has resigned, almost three years before the end of his second term, to become a partner in a New York City law firm that is opening an office in Hartford.

Gillies has headed the Department of Insurance since 1983, when he succeeded Joseph C. Mike. He previously had been a deputy attorney general.

The resignation was delivered to Gov. William O'Neill late Thursday but was not made public until Friday. It takes effect July 22 and is the second resignation by a commissioner in a month. Economic Development Commissioner John J. Carson left in June to become director of business development for a Hartford accounting firm.

Gillies has presided over the state department during the worst insurance price and availability problems in the nation's history.

The department has come under fire from some trial lawyers, businesses and legislators as being too slow in responding to the insurance crisis of 1985-86 and for being generally too soft on the industry.

But the department has won praise from insurers and regulators from other states for responding with a cool head and avoiding making the situation any more difficult.

Gillies headed the Governor's Task Force on Insurance Costs and Availability during the insurance crisis. The panel recommended changes in liability law to reduce lawsuits as part of the solution.

He opposed proposals to create an insurance consumer advocate, saying he acted in that capacity and he agreed with the insurance industry that laws and court rulings have made pollution-related liability too risky to insure.

Gillies was one of O'Neill's first appointees after he was elected to his first full term in 1982.

O'Neill and Gillies began service together in the state House of Representatives in 1967 and have remained good friends. After they served three terms, reappointment put Gillies and O'Neill in the same district and Gillies stepped aside.

Midwest is suffering

Residents of parts of the Midwest were warned Friday of unhealthy air pollution trapped by the stifling heat wave, and Wisconsin officials said rural school projects will be delayed because the drought will cut taxpayers' income.

A Canadian official said that country would block a proposal to divert water from the Great Lakes down the Illinois River to the Mississippi. Iowa's governor declared a statewide disaster because of the drought.

The White House said President Reagan will travel Thursday to the Midwest to talk to farmers, and Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad said he will have lunch next week with the president and push for drought-relief measures.

Record temperatures were reported Friday in at least 20 cities across the Midwest and into Tennessee and upstate New York.

Adair fighting leak

ABERDEEN, Scotland — Prince Charles on Friday visited survivors burned in the Piper Alpha oil rig disaster, bringing solace and equipment needed to treat their burns, and troubleshooter "Red" Adair flew to the North Sea platform to help plug gas leaks.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher also flew to Aberdeen to console families of those killed in the world's worst oilfield disaster — an explosion and fire Wednesday night in which 166 men died.

Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum, visited the some of the 64 survivors and said his company, which owns the platform, was donating $1.7 million to a trust fund for the injured and bereaved. The government gave a like sum and the European Economic Community added $952,000.

Nancy picks ghostwriter

WASHINGTON — Nancy Reagan has tapped one of the nation's premier ghostwriters, Bill Novak, to help her write her memoirs, the White House revealed Friday.

Novak has helped several personalities create best-selling books about their lives. His credits include "Iacocca," the autobiography of Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca; "Man of the House," the political memoirs of former House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill; and "The Mayflower Madam," the story of Sydney Elldie Barrows, who detailed her life running a high-class prostitution service.

New York beaches closed

WANTAGH, N.Y. — Lifeguards tried a new way of protecting swimmers Friday: keeping them off beaches altogether as medical waste once again washed ashore.

With temperatures in the 90s, Jones Beach and Robert Moses State Park beach were closed because officials decided a ban on swimming would be insufficient to ensure no one was hurt by the debris.

The only people on the beach were cleanup crews searching for additional garbage floating ashore — bad news for the state and concessionaires, who say the weekend after July 4 is traditionally summer's biggest. A crowd of more than 100,000 would normally be expected at the state beaches.

Ex-Dukakis aide jailed

BOSTON — The former top education adviser to Gov. Michael S. Dukakis was sentenced Friday to 2½ years in prison and ordered to pay up to $80,000 to the state in restitution for skimming money from a program he ran.

Gerard T. Indelicato, 42, was ordered to surrender to federal officials Aug. 5. Where he will serve his prison term has yet to be determined.

He had pleaded guilty in federal court in April to five charges of conspiracy, mail fraud and tax evasion in a scheme with three others to bilk an adult education program of some $80,000.

Navy discounts radar flaw as factor in airliner attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "minor degradation" in radar aboard the USS Vincennes was repaired before the warship entered the Persian Gulf and played no role in the vessel's failure to correctly identify the Iranian airliner it shot down last weekend, a Navy spokesman said Friday.

Other Pentagon officials said they were awaiting results of an investigation to learn why the Vincennes missed air traffic communications and other clues indicating that the Iran Air A300 Airbus was a civilian plane and not an F-14 fighter, as officers aboard the ship believed.

The chief of Iran's air force, Brig. Gen. Mansour Sattari, told reporters in Tehran on Thursday that U.S. systems should have been able to monitor 21 minutes of conversation in English between the jetliner and the airport control tower in Bandar Abbas, near the mouth of the Persian Gulf. But Pentagon spokesman said they were not sure U.S. forces in the gulf were monitoring, or were able to monitor, air traffic control communications at the time of the incident.

"We are looking forward to an analysis of the tapes to help clarify the issue," said Lt. Cmdr. Chris Baumann, a Pentagon spokesman.

As the Vincennes steamed from its home port in San Diego toward the gulf in May, said Navy spokesman Lt. Brian Cullin, an unspecified part in the ship's sophisticated Spy-1 radar proved to be unreliable.

A replacement was flown to the Arabian Sea, outside the gulf, the repair made and the Vincennes "was fully operational on June 6, before she entered the gulf," Cullin said. The ship reported to the battle group in the Arabian Sea on May 22, he said.

The $1 billion ship's Aegis radar and tracking complex, of which Spy-1 in part, mistook the Airbus for an Iranian F-14 fighter and shot it down with all 290 civilians aboard last Sunday. Since then, Pentagon officials have been trying to figure out why.

In other developments Friday: —President Reagan said the question of compensation for the families of those killed in the incident is one issue "under consideration." White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said there were "still some open questions" on the compensation issue. He said messages of condolence had gone to the victims' families in Pakistan, the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, India, Yugoslavia and Italy.

—Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the United States should adopt a new stance in the Iran-Iraq war "equidistant" between the two warring countries.

Rescue leader kidnapped?

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins was planning a mission to rescue eight American hostages in Lebanon when he was kidnapped by pro-Iranian forces, the chief PLO spokesman was quoted as saying Friday.

The plan was disclosed in a transcript of Higgins' interrogation by his abductors, Bassam Abu Sharif was quoted as saying in the Beirut daily Ad-Diyar.

"We have seen a transcript of the interrogation with Higgins," he told the newspaper during what it described as a pre-dawn telephone interview.

Asked about the report, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley replied, "Nonsense."

Higgins, 43, of Danville, Ky., was chief of a 76-member observer group attached to the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon. He was kidnapped Feb. 17 near the southern port city of Tyre.

The Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem faction, claimed responsibility for Higgins' abduction, charging he was a CIA spy. The United States and UNIFIL denied the charge.

The group said in April that Higgins would be turned over to a tribunal for "to try him for the crimes he has committed."

"We know from seeing the transcript of interrogation with Higgins ... that he was preparing a large-scale operation under the slogan of rescuing all the American hostages," Abu Sharif told the newspaper, which is based in Christian east Beirut.

He did not say how the Palestine Liberation Organization obtained the purported transcript.

The interview also quoted him as saying that Higgins "had headed the operations department of the U.S. Delta Force and had arrived in Lebanon wearing (the U.N.'s) blue beret."

The Delta Force was set up to act against terrorism and other threats to American interests.

He also said the ousting from Beirut of guerrillas loyal to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat was part of a plan by the United States and Syria.

Arafat's loyalists Friday evacuated the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp, their last stronghold in Beirut, after it fell to Syrian-backed PLO dissidents of Col. Saeed Mousa's Fatah-Uprising faction.

Reparations terms debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican George Bush vowed Friday to "never, ever under any circumstances" pay reparations to the Iranian government for the downing of a civilian airliner, though he said payments to victims' families are being considered. Democrat Michael Dukakis said he favored "humanitarian assistance" in the case.

Under the torrid summer sun, it was a day for each of the nominees-to-be to campaign hard on the other's turf.

In Atlanta, where the Democrats gather in 10 days for their national convention, the vice president tried to shrug off Democratic charges that his cash-starved campaign was illegally using tax dollars to keep going, calling them "outrageous."

"We've bent over backwards to be within the letter, certainly the spirit of the law," he said to reporters traveling on Air Force Two with him to Atlanta from Washington. Earlier, his aides had made similar denials.

Asked about the issue of reparations, Bush said in Atlanta that he feels "terribly sad for the families of those people" killed in the attack and repeated his understanding that payments to the families are under consideration by the Reagan administration — but not reparations.

"I would never, ever under any circumstances offer reparations to the Iranian government," he said.

In Texas, where Bush votes, Dukakis campaigned with a potential running mate, homestate Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, amid indications that the Massachusetts governor's search for a vice presidential choice may be entering its final days.

Report: Meese could have been indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent counsel James McKay concluded Attorney General Edwin Meese III could have been charged in connection with his holdings of $14,000 in regional Bell telephone stock, but decided against prosecution, National Public Radio reported Friday.

NPR quoted unidentified sources as saying Meese's lawyers were told toward the end of the 14-month investigation that at least technically, McKay determined Meese could have been charged with two felonies. NPR said it could not determine what McKay's reasons were for not proceeding with a criminal case.

Nathan Lewin and James Rocap, Meese's attorneys, declined to discuss the NPR report, saying in a statement that McKay's decision not to prosecute Meese "is, in every real sense, a vindication" of the attorney general. The statement added that "the avenue" by which McKay "arrived at that result or the rationale he employed is entirely beside the point."

Federal law prohibits any official from participating personally and substantially in any matter in which he or his family has a financial interest. Sources familiar with the probe, speaking on condition of anonymity, have said McKay was examining a possible violation by Meese against the provisions of this federal conflict-of-interest law.

Meese met in 1985 and 1986 with executives of four regional Bell companies which wanted the Justice Department to switch its position and urge that restrictions on the types of business they could engage in be lifted. Early in 1987, a few weeks after he obtained a White House waiver allowing him to make a decision despite his stock holdings, Meese approved a reversal of Justice Department stand, recommending to a federal judge that the regional Bell companies be allowed to enter new lines of business.

Meese's waiver, granted by the White House counsel's office, was based partly on erroneous information supplied by one of Meese's aides, Justice Department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, have said. Meese's office underestimated the value of the stock, saying it was worth $9,600 instead of $14,000.

In granting the waiver, the White House counsel's office mischaracterized Meese as having sold the stock. In fact, Meese had transferred the stock to someone else, as a Meese aide had explained to the department's Office of Legal Counsel, which applied the White House with the information on which the waiver was based. Meese was still the legal owner of the stock, a number of legal experts said earlier this year. In fact, the attorney general finally retrieved his telephone holdings last year and sold them.

The person to whom the stock had been transferred was Meese's investment manager, W. Franklyn Chinn, who is currently under indictment for racketeering in the Wedtech scandal.

Also in granting the waiver, the White House counsel's office told Meese that "you indicate that you have no financial interest in or immediate family relationship with the new owner of the stock." In fact, Meese and his wife had entered a partnership with Chinn's corporation.

Report leaked; probe vowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent counsel James McKay said Friday the court order prohibiting any leak of his report on Attorney General Edwin Meese III had been violated and that he would investigate and seek sanctions against those responsible.

Sources who declined to be identified by name said a portion of the 830-page report had been leaked to The New York Times. Executives of the Times in New York and Washington declined immediate comment.

One source said the Times had acquired those portions of the report which were made available to Meese's former lawyer and confidant, E. Robert Wallach.

Volunteers help trapped victims

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Volunteers from across the lower Rio Grande Valley flocked here Friday to donate blood, crawl shirtless through tight spaces and do whatever else they could for victims of a department store collapse.

They ignored temperatures in the 90s and the threat of collapsing rubble to help dig the living and the dead out of the Amigo Store.

"It's such an overwhelming response to the point that we've been asking people to come back later and relieve the people who are tired," said police Sgt. Ben Reyna said.

The roof of the popular discount department store crumbled under torrential rain Thursday afternoon. At least 11 died, 47 were injured and an unknown number were missing.

"I'm just here to help somebody who needs help," said Mario Camarillo, of Brownsville, who inched his way into a crawl space to help deliver oxygen to survivors trapped in the twisted jungle of concrete and steel.

"You can't turn your back on them. I hope somebody would do that for me," he said. Some volunteers crawled deep into the rubble through a path cleared by a wiry Freddie Gonzalez, 34, who is 4-foot-8.

"We kept hearing them crying in there, so we kept digging and digging. They were all tangled with wire and pieces of wood," said Gonzalez.

Police were not sure how many people and agencies had responded to calls for help by noon Friday, but Reyna said the volunteers came from all over the state and some from across the border Mexico.

Despite the call for volunteers to work in shifts, many were ready to stay until the rescue was complete.

"I'm not even sleepy," said Berta Capatillo, 34, of Brownsville. "I just want to get those people out. I think that's what's keeping me awake. I'm hoping they will be alive."

On Thursday, Ms. Capatillo collected information from families looking for missing relatives or friends. Friday morning, after staying up all night, she was filling Gatorade bottles with ice and passing them out to workers, reporters and bystanders.

Top Mexico party loses ground

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Partial results from Mexico's presidential election show the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party winning, but with the lowest margin in its six decades of rule, sources said Friday.

The figures from the Federal Electoral Commission, which a reliable source gave The Associated Press, show presidential candidate Carlos Salinas de Gortari ahead with 47.4 percent of the popular vote.

Cuahtemoc Cardenas of the leftist coalition National Democratic Front was second with 26.7 percent, and Manuel J. Clouthier of the conservative National Action Party third with 20.7 percent.

The count for the 11.7 million of the 38 million registered voters or 30.7 percent.

In addition to the presidency, 64 Senate seats and 500 in the newly expanded Chamber of Deputies also are at stake.

The Federal Electoral Commission, which controls the vote count, released fragmentary, unofficial results early Thursday, one day after the nationwide elections. It said final results were not expected until Sunday.

The leak of a vote count appeared to be made to deflect growing speculation that the ruling party, known as the PRI, had suffered a devastating loss.

No presidential candidate since the PRI's inception in 1929 has won with less than 70 percent of the vote.

The slow vote count also is making evident splits within the party between the 40-year-old Salinas de Gortari and his closest associates, known as technocrats, and the old-style politicians.

The Federal Electoral Commission is headed by Interior Secretary Manuel Bartlett, who was one of Salinas de Gortari's chief rivals for the PRI's presidential nomination.

Salinas de Gortari has insisted throughout the campaign that a new era of modern Mexico will be recognized in which opposition voices will be heard.

Bullmooses, go in peace

By Sarah Overstreet

The Supreme Court insists that I be admitted to the every-other-Saturday venison potluck supper down at the Bullmoose Lodge. They say that the Royal Bullmooses have been discriminating against me by not letting me in.

Gee, I hate to have it said that anyone is doing an action verb against me, especially when I don't know what the action verb means, exactly. So I looked up the word "discriminate" to see what it was the Bullmooses were doing to me.

My dictionary defined "discriminate" as "action on the basis of prejudice." I wasn't sure exactly what that meant, either, so I looked up "prejudice." My dictionary defined that as acting with either a "preconceived preference or bias," or "with an irrational hatred of a particular group, race or religion" or to my "detriment or injury."

Well, I was just shocked. I had no idea the Bullmooses felt that way. Here I'd thought all this time the old fellows just wanted to get off by themselves so they could swear, belch and otherwise do things they'd feel more restrained from doing if I were among them.

And really, I'd never thought I had much to offer them, if they'd asked me to join, seeing as how they mostly like to shoot pool, hunt small game and drink each other under the table. Some of my friends say I'm thinking wrong.

My friends tell me it's to my "detriment and injury" that the Bullmooses don't allow me a seat at the every-other-Saturday potluck dinner. They say I'm losing the opportunity to "network," to make valuable business associations which will propel me along my career. I guess I just didn't understand that "career-propelling" was part of my constitutionally guaranteed rights. I'd always thought the Constitution merely guaranteed me and the Bullmooses the freedom to associate with whomever we please, even if that isn't me.

Personally, I'll admit I'm a little worried about the recent Supreme Court ruling. They say private clubs with more than 400 members, and whose members' dues are often paid by employers, are subject to state and local anti-discrimination laws. As a matter of fact, I'm darned afraid that some of the Bullmooses are going to get into the Royal Order of Worn-Out Journalists. I'm afraid they'll want to start belching and hunting small game there in the Dangling Participle Lounge, just when we're starting to talk about fat old men who wear antlers on their ceremonial hats. Hey, I pay my dues and this is America. I want to associate with worn-out journalists, not Bullmooses.

I wonder if the Supreme Court thinks we can't discriminate against anyone who wants to join our private clubs, what's the next step? Let's say an applicant to the Royal Order of Worn-Out Journalists is not only not a journalist, but also someone who doesn't have the money to join. Will we be discriminating against the poor by not admitting her or him to full membership? Will we have to pass the hat anytime someone takes a notion to join one of our private clubs, so that we don't discriminate against those who don't have the ante for the game?

I might not like the rules other private clubs make up to determine membership, but then they might not like mine, either. And believe me, I think it's pretty important that the First Amendment guarantees worn-out journalists the right to gather together in a dark tavern, away from Bullmooses.

Go in peace, Bullmooses, and don't set another place at the potluck dinner just yet. The Constitution guarantees you the right to associate with whomever you please, and the Supreme Court may eventually discover that.

Tawana epic lures Barnums

By Chuck Stone

The name, Tawana Brawley, may not strike an immediate mnemonic chord in your mind, but she is currently the vortex of a storm that has swirled into the biggest media hustle since the phony Adolf Hitler diaries.

The media is hustling Brawley. Her advisers are hustling the media. And both are hustling the public. Brawley is the black teen-ager from Wappingers Falls, N.Y., who claims that six white men (including a police officer) raped her last November and abducted her for four days.

Any rape is a brutal, dehumanizing experience. But three factors escalated Brawley's case into a racial gang rape, her accusation that it was a racial gang rape, her accusation that a policeman participated, and the subsequent role of three prominent New York City black activists as Brawley's advisers. On their advice, she has refused to cooperate with investigating authorities.

Increasingly, the case resembles a rotten apple in the criminal justice system's barrel of already rotten apples. And that's the problem.

White New York City-area policemen have victimized and killed so many blacks under frighteningly suspicious circumstances in the last three years that blacks are quick to believe any reckless accusations.

Media manipulator Rev. Al Sharpton (a fastidiously manicured civil rights hustler), two prominent black civil rights lawyers, and a series of incredible accusations have legitimized Brawley's charges. Circulation-embattled New York City newspapers are having daily reportorial orgies.

From the gitgo, I've felt that the Brawley case was a hoax. I'm not suggesting she wasn't raped. But neither the FBI nor any other police investigators have been able to corroborate her accusations. Conflicts in her story involving her actions during the time she was missing have surfaced, as well as information about stormy relationships within her family.

Then the king of electronic P.T. Barnums, Phil Donahue, took over center stage.

Recently, Wall Street Journal critic Robert Goldberg capsulized TV's nasty throwback to the cameraman, Morton Downey Jr. of "The Morton Downey Jr. Show," as "Phil Donahue for hoodlums." That is a terrible insult to all self-respecting American hoodlums. Downey, whose thoughtless venom spews from his mouth without being interrupted by his brain, is the newest kid on the electronic block.

He has followed capacious Oprah Winfrey who shows combine a vast experience ("I know, it happened to me, honey") and intense desire to wrap her smooth brown arms around you and smother you with motherly kisses.

Meanwhile, Donahue, who started it all, comes on like Jack Armstrong, all-American boy (with white hair), dripping sincerity like syrup oozing out of a Vermont maple tree. After Winfrey wasted Donahue in the ratings, however, he was forced to be less cerebral and more gonadal.

But all three hosts are variations on the same theme. Their purpose is to get as salacious, inquisitorial, compassionate and entertaining as possible, without making idiots out of themselves.

Not long ago, Donahue did the Brawley case and succumbed.

He lost control of his show. The predominantly black audience and one of Brawley's legal advisers took over the show and turned it into a media circus. No new information was revealed. No understanding was increased. When the show ended, the audience was still racially polarized.

It was show business, not journalism. What's even more troublesome is that when urbane journalist Ted Koppel interviewed the Brawley case participants, he came off as poorly as Donahue, although he did manage to maintain control of his show.

In this videocracy, Donahue, Winfrey and Downey are electronic P.T. Barnums.

I haven't figured out Koppel's role yet.

How could Main Street generate sales and excitement, like the sidewalk sales, at other times of the year?

"Maybe do a sidewalk sale, also, at another time of year. Perhaps when it's not so hot, maybe October or so. Do it in combination with more arts and crafts people. I think that would draw a lot more people."

Ruth Klemens Storrs (lived 14 years in Manchester)
 School teacher

"Do another sale day, maybe with more of a New England theme. It could be a more artistic kind of thing... Decorate the street, with something running all along the way. I hadn't really given it thought, you know. I'm not a city planner. Maybe just publicizing downtown more. Maybe have Thursday night specials."

Florence Gregory

"Well, I think sometimes they should have an arts and crafts show here, running through the whole town, and sell things. Like just before a holiday, unless it's a snowstorm or something. I think it would go over very big."

Douglas Vranas

"Probably more sales gimmicks, and good parking facilities. I think it's hard to park in downtown."

Barbara Plaut

"How about a grocery store? Then you wouldn't have to go all the way over to the Parkade, or all the way over to the other side of town. And once you're here, you could do everything. There's a bank, drug stores here, everything else you'd want."

Mexico releases terrorist wanted in U.S.

WASHINGTON — It's time to haul out Teddy Roosevelt's big stick.

Last week, the Mexican government released a Puerto Rican separatist who is wanted in the United States for terrorist activities. In response, the White House pronounced the action "outrageous" and recalled the U.S. ambassador to Mexico for "consultations," a moderately serious form of diplomatic protest.

There was only one problem with the U.S. reaction: It wasn't nearly strong enough. This is a case that clearly calls for severe interruption in commercial and diplomatic relations with our southern neighbor for a prolonged period. We would even suggest sealing the border with airborne rangers, although the cautious sages of diplomacy might find that a little extreme. That is about the only way to get the message across to foreign leaders mesmerized by terrorists masquerading as political prisoners — that the mollicoddling of zealots dedicated to the murder of Americans is an egregious and unforgivable transgression.

Jack Anderson

The man the Mexicans have set free is 37-year-old William "No Hands" Morales, a leader of the Puerto Rican separatist movement called the Armed Forces of National Liberation, or FALN. The group claims to be dedicated to independence for Puerto Rico; it is, in fact, inclined to cold-blooded murder.

One intelligence document we have seen alleges that the FALN is responsible for scores of "terrorist bombings in the U.S. since its founding in 1973... (It) has developed an extensive terrorist network stretching across the U.S. and into Mexico. Morales is also developing links with insurgent movements in Central America."

Morales grew up on the streets of New York's East Harlem, picking up politics from the radical movements of the 1960s. In 1978, his face was disfigured and both hands were blown off when a bomb he was working on exploded. He was sentenced to 99 years in prison on weapons and explosive charges.

While being treated in a New York prison hospital, Morales wove a rope from elastic bandages, hung it from a window and shimmed down to freedom. He disappeared into the underground, but the police located his wife in Chicago and soon learned she was receiving a lot of calls from Mexico. The FBI later tipped off the Mexican authorities that Morales was planning to bomb a Mexican-U.S. legislative conference in Puebla, Mexico on May 28, 1983. He was captured after an exchange of gunfire that resulted in the death of an accomplice and a Mexican policeman. He was sentenced to eight years and had served five of them when he was released last week.

After an elaborate clearance procedure and two trips to Mexico City, our former associate, Jon Lee Anderson, met with Morales in the spring of 1984 in the maximum security wing of Reclusorio Norte, a model prison on the outskirts of the city. Morales described his escape from the prison hospital in New York and talked about the "imperialist domination" of the Western world. He seemed every bit the determined revolutionary and Marxist zealot that intelligence reports had painted him to be. His most fervent expletives were reserved for the United States. "I am a member of a revolutionary movement which is at war with the United States government," he told our reporter.

This is the unabashed cutthroat that the Mexican authorities turned loose on the grounds he is "political fighter for the independence of Puerto Rico" who had been "politically persecuted."

For that brutish act, it seems to us, the Mexicans ought to pay a very high price.

Dissent in the ranks

Some of the professional terrorists recruited by Moammar Gadhafi to harass the United States are stirring up trouble at home. According to intelligence reports, the hired terrorists have clashed with Gadhafi's local Libyan troops more than once. But that hasn't discouraged Gadhafi from his schemes to attack U.S. targets. Given the record of the "Mad Dog of the Middle East," the United States is in little danger.

Apology expected

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — The American Family Association says CBS should apologize to the public and fire those responsible for showing Mighty Mouse sniffing what appeared to be cocaine on a Saturday morning cartoon.
The Rev. Donald E. Wildmon, AFA executive director, said that in the episode, Mighty Mouse feels dejected until he draws a handful of powder from under his cloak, inhaling it, and afterward is back to normal.
Wildmon says the intent seemed to be to "show that cocaine helps one overcome feeling 'down'."

Crisis centers promoted

ATLANTA (AP) — Calling abortion the "No. 1 social and moral issue of our day," the Southern Baptist Home Missions Board is encouraging churches to start crisis pregnancy centers, says board President Larry Lewis.
The board has named Sylvia Boothe, a former foreign missionary, as the agency's first coordinator for abortion alternatives. She has directed a crisis pregnancy center in Oklahoma City for the past two years.

Thoughts

About three weeks ago some delegates to a church conference being held at Springfield College went out for a pizza following the evening session. When they returned, they found the campus deserted, dormitories in darkness, parking lots empty, a telephone dangling from its cord. It was something out of "Twilight Zone!"
Then an official came to warn them: A fire ... a cloud of chlorine gas ... evacuation of the college and neighborhood to safety. They soon joined a stream of cars, buses, ambulances heading for shelter. Following the crowd, and not knowing where their conference members had gone, they found themselves caught up in giving emergency help to elderly patients from a nursing home. They assisted in getting them from a bus to a place on the gymnasium floor, calmed their fears, and made them as comfortable as possible. Later they found their conference friends in a nearby college gym attempting to sleep on the floor.
For three days and nights the danger persisted. And hundreds of volunteers, along with fire and police officials, helped thousands of people find safety and ways of coping with miserable and upsetting conditions.
Praise God for these "Good Samaritans" who took time to help their neighbors instead of merely rushing to save themselves. They deserve the Master's words of approval: "Well done, good and faithful servants!"

Visit to Morgan Street jail was a disturbing experience

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

Several of us went to jail the day after Memorial Day. The conference was one of six area agencies invited by the Criminal Justice Coalition to participate in an educational tour of the Morgan Street Jail, in Hartford.
I'm still stunned.

Department of Corrections Commissioner Larry Meachum accompanied us on the tour of the lockup, which has been improved under a court order regulating overcrowding of jails.
There are two "bullpens" at the jail. Each bullpen is about 25 feet by 25 feet. Three narrow benches are bolted to the floor in the middle of each pen.
Until May 27, each bullpen held 50 men. Since the area was far too small for 50 men, some sat on the bench, some found room to sit on the floor, the rest stood.

There is no eating area at Morgan Street. The only recreation room, a small no window, no ventilation area, has had to be pressed into use holding prisoners.
There are cells with two stacked cots but these were full and the overflow were crammed into the bullpens. Since there is no eating area, food and drink were passed in to the men. When the men were finished, they threw their garbage out onto the floor. The walk areas were ankle deep in garbage.
The men had to sleep, as well as eat, in the bullpen. There were no rooms for everyone to sit, let alone sleep. Some men stood while others slept — on the floor.

There is only one toilet for each bullpen. Correction officers took five men at a time to the toilet. But some men didn't wait and used the wall of the bullpen as a toilet.
Men lucky enough to be held in what used to be the recreation area had mattresses to put on the floor. I'm not fussy. After 11 children and years of camping (in tents, not trailers) dirt doesn't horrify me. I would have slept on the floor before touching one of those mattresses. They were incredibly filthy and stained.
The entire criminal justice system is overcrowded. Until the court order, some men were held in the bullpens up to 12 days.
What does the court order do? 1 Inmates may be housed in non-celled areas (bullpens) are not to be considered cells) only if they are admitted to the facility after 6 p.m.
2 Any inmate so housed in a non-celled area after 6 p.m. must be released from such areas no later than noon on the following day.

Does the court order solve the problem of overcrowding? Commissioner Meachum says it only displaces the problem. The court order resolves some (not nearly all) the problems at Morgan Street jail by transferring the men to another facility. The court order does not solve the severe prison overcrowding situation in Connecticut. For example, there is no court order at Union Street jail in New Haven. Meachum says conditions are even worse in New Haven than they were in Hartford before the court order.

More women in seminaries

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of women in seminaries continues to increase, while the number of men decreases, with some predictions that by the year 2000, a fourth of mainline Protestant pastors will be women.
Women still encounter some resistance in roles as church leaders, while male clergy are tending to be older. Nonetheless, the ecumenical presence of women spreads, as do the gray hairs among male ministers.

Summing up statistics for the 1987-88 crop of seminarians, the Association of Theological Schools says women now constitute 27 percent of total enrollment.
Fifteen years ago, when inclusive figures first were gathered, women amounted to only 10 percent of enrollment 15 years ago.
Compared to an enrollment then of 3,358, the ranks of women have swelled fourfold to 15,310, up 3 percent this year. But the overall enrollment was down by 1 percent to 55,766.

It was the third straight year of overall decline, as men became a gradually shrinking majority in 201 Protestant and Roman Catholic seminaries, while the proportion, and numbers, of women rose in contrast.
Despite the increase in their numbers, women say they still face obstacles as clergy. In the United Church of Christ, which has the largest number of women — totalling 1,460 — a survey found that 61 percent say they've been turned down for jobs because of their gender.

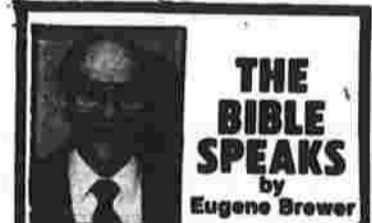

However, the Rev. Ann Corday, a United Church pastor in Miami, says "there's a great deal more openness toward women leadership in the church than we had for a while."

hundreds of years protected the rights of its citizens by declaring them innocent until proven guilty. Most of the men (we arrest very few women) in lock-ups are not sentenced.
It stuns me that in the wealthiest state in the world, we should choose to imprison any human being in such conditions for days at a time particularly knowing, as almost all of us do, that with the deinstitutionalization of our mentally ill many of them have wound up in jail instead of hospital beds.
I hope you are as disturbed as I am. Disturbed enough to start asking questions about the present overcrowding of our jails and prisons.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
Eugene Brewer
How much effort does it take to grow weeds? You likely would answer, "None." Just do nothing and they'll grow! But what about growing tomatoes or other garden vegetables? Oh, these require considerable effort in preparing the soil, planting, cultivating, and — yes, weeding.

Life is much the same. Do you have situations you wish were different in your life and relationships? Why aren't they? Because change requires effort. And you know, that change must begin with you.

Changing one's attitude nearly always brings changes in attitudes of others. If you remain the same so will the undesirable situations. Jesus challenges us to alter our lifestyles: "If anyone would come after me, he must deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." (Mark 8:34) But change is difficult. It requires specific effort. And growing weeds is much easier.

Wedding dower chests

From Country Home
a Meredith Magazine

The tradition of providing a young girl with a dower chest to fill with treasures for her wedding is centuries old.

Though it's not certain exactly when or where the custom originated, by the 15th century most European families made sure that each daughter had a chest of her own. In the chest were stored precious linens, blankets, china, silver and family heirlooms, all saved for the longed-for marriage. When a young woman married she took the chest, filled with many of the essentials of housekeeping, to her new home.

According to Country Home magazine, chests were some of the earliest pieces of furniture, made in the days of ancient Egypt. They first were used to lock away church treasures. Later, during the Middle Ages, each home had several chests in which the family clothing was kept. Eventually, certain chests were set aside especially for the trousseau of a bride-to-be. Bridal or dower chests became important to every young woman and furniture builders did some of their finest work in producing them. These chests were valued as works of art as well as for the riches they held.

When settlers came to America, they brought cherished souvenirs of the Old World to the new land in chests. Colonial furniture makers carried on the tradition of dower chests: By the time a colonial girl was eight or nine, she probably had one of her own. In addition to household and personal items, the girl stored her needlework here, knowing it would one day embellish her own home.

The most popular dower chests came from Pennsylvania German furniture makers. These often were painted in soft blues or greens. Against this background fanciful motifs were applied, many of them reminiscent of the old-world tradition of manuscript illustration.

Diamond engagement rings and history

By Bill Sileo
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — History doesn't tell us Mary of Burgundy's reaction when Maximilian of Austria gave her a diamond engagement ring in 1477.

But if a modern-day Max were to slip a similar ring onto the hand of an '80s Mary, the chill might go all the way to her feet.

The stones in the ring presented by Maximilian were somewhat small and dull, by current standards, but that modest ring holds a special place in jewelry history, experts say. It was probably the first diamond engagement ring.

"They don't have that fire to them," says John Loring, design director at Tiffany & Co., whose famed Tiffany setting remains universal nearly 100 years after its development.

A copy of Mary of Burgundy's ring has been on display in a special exhibit, "The Power of Love: Six Centuries of Diamond Betrothal Rings," tracing the history of a girl's best friend.

"This gives you a sense of where it all started," says Benjamin Zucker, gem dealer, author of the book "Gems and Jewels" and primary organizer and supplier of the recent exhibit at Christie's, which continues on a worldwide tour following its close here.

It also shows where it ended up—large, dazzling stones with 58 facets—the "brilliant cut" that most effectively reflects and disperses light.

Job sharing is rated a success

Working mothers in town employ find program a help

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

There was skepticism among some town directors last September when Diane Wicks asked to split her job as coordinator of the Elderly Outreach Program with another worker in order to have time to take care of her young children.

But there is no doubt in the mind of Wicks' supervisor, Hanna Marcus, that the town's first job-sharing setup — now six months old — has been a success.

Wicks' job partner, Deborah Stein, came on board in November.

"It's great, it's gone beyond what my wildest dreams have been," said Marcus, the director of the town Department of Human Services. "We have two dedicated and motivated employees."

The success of the job sharing led the Board of Directors earlier this year to approve a similar arrangement for Personnel Director Linda Parry. Parry, who is now on maternity leave, will share her job with another woman when she returns to work in August.

Marcus has had no complaints about the arrangement with Wicks and Stein. In fact, she said, one advantage of having two coordinators is that each is able to specialize in certain aspects of the job and become expert at them. Stein, for example, is in charge of a new alcohol abuse program for the elderly, while Wicks administers the Phone-A-Ride program, a free transportation service for the elderly and handicapped.

The Elderly Outreach Program, which provides social services for elderly citizens and offers referrals for the services of other agencies, has about 180 active clients.

Wicks and Stein work on alternate days. On Wednesday, when Diane Wicks holds a staff meeting and discuss what they have done while the other has been away.

"I think it's been working out very well," Wicks said. "On a personal level it's great to continue my career and have two days to spend with my kids."

Wicks, 35, who had headed the Elderly Outreach Program since 1975, decided she wanted to share her job with another worker after her second child was born last year. She has two boys, ages 3 and 11 months.

Stein, 38, who had worked until 1983 for Harford Easter Seals, had been looking for a job involving work with the elderly. The Elderly Outreach coordinator's job fit the bill because she wanted time to take care of her two sons, ages 4 and 8.

"I think it's meeting both our needs, personally and professionally," Stein said.

One of the advantages of the arrangement, Stein said, is that those working in the Elderly Outreach Program benefit from the different perspectives she and Wicks bring to the job. One of the challenges is keeping abreast of what the other is doing.

"I think you have to make a constant effort to make sure you're caught up on things that happen when you're not there," she said.

Wicks, too, said that it can be an advantage to have two coordinators rather than one.

"I like (the job) because we both have different perspectives, and we can bounce ideas off each other," she said.

Back-at-home grads may need push out door

WASHINGTON (AP) — After graduation from college, many young people find themselves back at home with their parents. But if grown children stay too long without goals parents may have to send them packing, suggests a psychology professor at The Catholic University of America here.

Despite stresses accompanying a move home, most graduates adjust to the real world and leave the family fold before conflict becomes too great, says James E. Younis, a specialist in changing family relationships.

But, he adds, even the pressures of living with parents and desire for independence aren't enough to push some young adults out of the nest. Parents may have to give their children the push they need.

"I've known graduates who stayed home for months. They became dependent on their parents. They were afraid to get into the game," Younis said. "The longer this situation lasts, the lower the graduates' self-esteem becomes. They are caught in a downward spiral of depression that makes it difficult to act."

Life after college represents the great unknown to most graduates, he points out. It's the first time in their lives when they don't know what to expect and can't follow a simple path.

"It's not that they don't want to work," he said. "Most get jobs, but find them boring or beneath their abilities. At college these young people had ample opportunities to socialize. In a work environment, they may find themselves with older people and also learn they are competing for raises and promotions and practicing 'office politics' with employees their own age."

Today's economy makes it difficult for new grads to set up housekeeping, Younis notes. While entry-level jobs in engineering and computer science pay well, jobs in many fields do not. Fledgling social workers may find their financial straits more difficult if they compare themselves with well-paid classmates. And many students go through college without a clear idea of what they want to do after graduation. These people have particular difficulty finding a satisfactory first job, he explains.

While the process of decision and action is trying for graduates, it is trying for parents as well, Younis says.

"Most parents want to help their children get a start," he said. "Parents may have a positive attitude when the graduate moves home. But after four years of having a child at home only during school vacations or not at all, the parents' lifestyle has changed."

Harvesting, preserving flowers

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

Summer is the time to harvest flowers to preserve for decorations and for crafts, and collectors are finding modern microwave ovens and new freezing units speed and ease their efforts.

Harvest flowers just before they reach the fully opened stage with the newer methods of preservation just as you do with the older drying methods. Don't wait until they are starting to fade.

From Grace Rymer, a floral designer at Cleveland, Tenn., comes word that marigolds and chrysanthemums need 3 minutes of heating in microwave ovens and 10 minutes of cooling. Salvias and tulips need 3 minutes of heating in the microwave and 24 minutes of cooling. To keep flowers bright after drying, spray them with hair spray, an aerosol lacquer or a specially formulated floral preservative, she advises.

Some suggestions from Rymer: For flowers that wilt, apply a drying agent such as silica gel, borax or cornmeal, or an absorbent kitty litter mixture before drying in the microwave.

She says silica gel is good for smooth surfaces such as daisy or orchid.

Rymer uses glass or paper items of the size used for dessert, cereal bowls or shoe boxes, deep enough so that the drying agent covers the entire flower.

Rodale's Organic Gardening magazine reports that widely decorated beach balls suspended above crops and bobbing in the breeze may save American and Asian fields from crop-threatening birds.

"Nearly 1.5 million of these beach balls were used in Japan last year protecting orchards, gardens and rice paddies from bird damage," the magazine noted. "It seems giant 'eyes' painted on the balls appear to be predators' eyes, frightening thieving birds. Generally performing well in tests, the balls reduced bird damage on a commercial grower's blueberry crop from the usual 80 to 90 percent to only 5 percent ... For unknown reasons, the only bird not fooled so far is the robin."

Six balls per acre were found to offer the best protection; yellow-colored balls were most effective.

In her May-June FlowerLetter, Sunny O'Neil (River Road, Bethesda, MD 20817) writes about freeze-drying flowers, including a visit to the Northstar Co. at Nisswa, Minn., which she says has pioneered in portable freeze-dry systems for preserving flowers. O'Neil will be guest curator this fall for a flower preservation exhibit at the Smithsonian National History Museum.

Avoid quicksand of health insurance forms

If you or a family member have suffered a serious illness, you have been inundated with bills from physicians and various hospital departments. When you send in your insurance forms and copies of the bills, your insurance company may want more information, or worse, may refuse to pay. After a while, you may give up on getting all of the money that is rightfully due you.

Sylvia Porter

To address this difficult situation, more and more entrepreneurs are going into the business of helping patients deal with health insurance companies. They submit your forms for you and badger the companies to pay up.

The first step in dealing with the mass of paperwork is to recognize that it will probably take more time and effort than you suspected. It can be a major project, not something you knock out in a few minutes.

You'll need a ledger to keep track of your campaign. Include entries for the names of the health-care providers (physician, hospital, etc.); dates of visits; costs; which insurance company or supplementary insurer you mailed the form to and when; when the company responded; and how much you were reimbursed.

Be careful to note whether you agreed to pay the provider directly, or to pay the provider the difference between the original bill and the amount paid by the insurance company.

It's better, of course, to have the insurance company pay the provider directly. That way you're less likely to suffer a cash-flow crisis.

You can hire someone to help you. The typical charge is $20 to $50 an hour, or 10 to 20 percent of the amount you eventually collect. Many companies have gotten into this business, among them Mediform in Cleveland, Medical Insurform Service in Sioux City, Iowa, Paper Chasers in Buffalo, N.Y., and Naples Medical Claims Service in Naples, Fla.

For do-it-yourselfers, here are some tips:

1. Find out exactly what your health insurance policy covers. Read the policy carefully. "The average person never does, and doesn't know what coverage he or she is entitled to," says Pat LaClair, president of Medical Insurform.

2. Fill out your forms as completely as possible. Attach copies of bills. Also furnish the health-care provider with the name of the insurance company, address and zip code, along with a stamped, addressed envelope. Warns LaClair, "Don't assume that your provider knows where to send your forms. The more information you furnish, the better."

3. File promptly. "When you wait too long, you may miss deadlines and lose some of your rights," says Jeff Spitzer-Resnick, a lawyer at the Center for Public Representation in Madison, Wis. (That group has a contract to train volunteers who help members of the American Association of Retired Persons fill out health-insurance forms.)

4. Keep copies of your completed forms. In fact, keep copies of everything — bills receipts, correspondence. Staple or clip together related items, or keep them in separate envelopes in a larger file or box.
5. Don't get discouraged when you encounter glitches. Claims may be turned down simply because the forms aren't complete or the physician gave the wrong diagnosis code. Besides, "Medicare makes lots of mistakes," reports Spitzer-Resnick.
6. Demand an explanation if your insurance payment is meager. Says Kathleen Hogue, president of Mediform, "Review any claim where you're reimbursed less than 50 percent of what the doctor charged."
7. If a claim is denied, ask for a review. If a private insurer gives you a hard time, tell your employer, group, or insurance agent, or complain to your state department of insurance. Inform your doctor or hospital, too. (Remember, though, that most insurance policies don't cover operations to improve your appearance, experimental procedures, or preventive therapy.)

8. Don't get discouraged. According to Hogue, 30 percent of available benefits aren't claimed. "People just don't persist, especially if a spouse or a relative dies. They feel diminished and can't cope with so much paperwork."

My research assistant tells me that when she had to complete and submit claims after the death of her husband, the entire procedure was a disaster. Claims for reimbursement were lost, forms had to be redone (even though she followed the recommended procedure), and worst of all, it took the insurance carrier 1 1/2 years to finally reimburse the hospital.

Persistence pays off.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: We have screens with metal mesh that is neither fiber glass nor any kind of plastic. Small holes have developed in several of them. Can they be patched so the patches will not be too conspicuous yet will keep out insects?

ANSWER: For very small holes, putting a dab of household cement over the opening often is sufficient. For larger holes, you can buy ready-made patches that can be placed over the openings and attached according to directions. Or you can take pieces of a similar mesh, make your own patches and attach them by unraveling a few strands and then bend them into place.

QUESTION: I am a paint dealer and do not agree that, when enamel is shaken in a mechanical shaker, it causes bubbling. Enamels can be put on a shaker because they mix well that way, much better than when stirred by hand. Varnishes are another matter. They will bubble up when shaken. Your questioner's problem probably stems from applying enamel over unprepared or unsanded surfaces, in which case the enamel may bubble.

ANSWER: Of course, enamel is varnish with pigment. I found two written supports for the non-shaking of enamel, but they were in books published some years ago. After talking to two authoritative sources, I am convinced you are correct about modern enamels. Both agreed enamel can be placed in a mechanical shaker. They are John Oberle, technical director of Benjamin Moore & Co., and Kathleen McGuire, manager of technical services, Pittsburgh Paints.

The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 75 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743.

Drug rehab is deductible

By George W. Smith

QUESTION: It cost me a great deal of money to pay for my son's care at a drug rehab center. Is any part, or all of these costs, deductible as a medical expense?

B.W. SEATTLE

ANSWER: If your son qualifies as your dependent, you may include payments to a drug or alcohol abuse treatment center as medical expenses if you itemize your expenses. The cost of meals and lodging provided for him by the center during his treatment are also deductible.

QUESTION: My father, who was blind, died in May of this year. Will an exemption for blindness be allowed on his final income tax return?

C.W. ST. THOMAS, V.I.

ANSWER: The extra exemptions for age 65 or over and blindness were repealed by the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

QUESTION: After 32 years of dedicated employment I'm retiring. I will receive a lump-sum payout in August from my company's retirement plan. How than I do.

W.R. PHILADELPHIA

ANSWER: Your wife is not only welcome, but it's her constitutional right to attend. The IRS says that if you have an income tax audit and you filed a joint tax return, either you, your spouse or both may meet with the IRS. It's all part of your marriage vows.

Send your questions to: The Tax Adviser, care of George W. Smith & Co., P.C., 29229 Northwestern Highway, Southfield, Mich. 48034. Due to the volume of mail, personal replies cannot be provided.

Oxygen discovery

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — British scientist Joseph Priestly (1733-1804) discovered oxygen in 1774. He called it "dephlogisticated air."

Priestly, who was a friend of Benjamin Franklin, also discovered hydrochloric acid, sulfur dioxide and nitrous oxide (laughing gas).

Priestly left England in 1794 for the United States and lived the rest of his life in Northumberland, Pa.

Tax Adviser

QUESTION: Taxpayers can defer income tax on part or all of a lump-sum payout from a qualified retirement plan by rolling the money received into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). To receive this special tax-free treatment, the rollover must be completed within 60 days after receiving the payout. The IRS recently ruled that if you miss this deadline by even one day, and for whatever reason, you're not entitled to the tax-free IRA rollover treatment. Count your days.

QUESTION: I was notified by the IRS that my income tax return is being audited. This is my first time ever after many years of filing. Can I take my wife along with me to the audit? She knows more about tax returns

Father's cocaine use may be linked to birth problems

DEAR DR. REINISCH: Is there any relationship between a woman having fertility problems, a miscarriage, still birth, or a child born with birth defects if the father uses cocaine occasionally (about once every two weeks) but the mother does not?

Kinsey Report
June M. Reinisch, Ph.D.

DEAR READER: There are reports that cocaine can reduce a man's erectile ability and his ability to ejaculate (presumably thereby also reducing his level of fertility), but the rest of your questions have not yet been carefully studied. Until they are, it is my belief that men who plan to become fathers should avoid any unnecessary substances for a minimum of three months before trying to conceive. (It takes more than two months for sperm cells to be formed, matured, and moved through a man's reproductive system to appear in the ejaculate.)

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I have been married for two years, and have suffered several vaginal infections — all traceable to sexual activity. My dear husband is terrific about abstinence while they clear up, but I'm getting fed up with this cycle. About 85 percent of the time I have intercourse I get an infection.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our son has a problem biting his nails and hands. He has bitten the insides of his hands and knuckles for so long that there are big calluses and some raw places that just won't heal. Now he's a teenager and is very conscious of his hands. He'd like to quit the habit. What sort of doctor should he see?

DEAR READER: Habits such as this are hard to break. Your son would probably be best helped by behavioral modification. Many large hospitals have these programs, which are designed to help people alter habits and regain control of their lives. Behavioral modification involves a system of aversion therapy and reward: Inappropriate behavior is "punished" and suitable behavior is supported. If no behavioral modification expected. In fact my gynecologist said, "It's the price you pay for intercourse."

So we have sex. I get an infection clears up. We abstain for awhile, and then this expensive, tiresome cycle repeats.

I wear cotton underwear, keep clean, have tried washing with soap and water or plain water immediately after sex, tried with lubricants and without — nothing works. I've been tested for diabetes, chlamydia and other conditions.

My husband says if this was a male problem, it would've been cured by now. Is there a solution?

DEAR READER: It's important that both you and your husband be thoroughly examined. Even the common "yeast" vaginal infections can be harbored by male partners without any symptoms at all. Your current cycle sounds like the "Ping Pong" effect (when a disease is bounced back and forth between partners) caused by treating only one sex partner.

There's also the possibility that your current treatment is not completely eliminating the microorganism causing your infections, leaving a few that regrow after treatment. If you use a diaphragm for contraception or use a douche, it's possible to re-infect yourself (many microorganisms can live on the surfaces of a diaphragm or douche nozzle if not cleaned.)

It is also not unusual for a woman to have infections caused by two or more microorganisms. When only one is diagnosed and treated, the other continues to grow. This is the reason why each occurrence of vaginal infection requires a separate diagnosis, and why automatically repeating a treatment is often unsuccessful, even if symptoms seem the same.

Many different microorganisms can cause symptoms of vaginal infection, nearly all have also been found in male partners, and testing can be complicated. Try to find a specialist in sexually transmitted diseases; often they are more familiar than other physicians with the latest diagnostic tests and have experience with more sophisticated laboratory procedures and interpretation of test results.

If you're not aware of such a specialist, the local public health office can refer you to the nearest STD clinic. These were formerly called VD (venereal disease) clinics.

Follow instructions carefully. For example, you must take the full amount of any medication prescribed (do not stop if your symptoms disappear). You both may be asked to schedule a follow-up test to check whether a treatment has been completely successful.

Lost poem deserves to be printed again

DEAR ABBY: I am 10 years old, and my mom once read a poem in your column titled "The Man in the Glass." She liked it so much, she hung it up on the wall, and each day we read it.

Well, I loved the poem so much I wanted to share it with my class. So I took it to school and lost it! My mother is very upset with me and she asked me if I would write to ask if you would please print it again in your column. Thank you, Abby.

WENDY REINGOLD IN MIAMI

DEAR WENDY: Here's "The Man in the Glass." Clip it and give it to your mother. But first make a copy of it for yourself.

"The Man in the Glass"
When you get what you want in your struggle for self
And the world makes you king for a day,
Just go to a mirror and look at yourself
And see what THAT man has to say.

For it isn't your father or mother or wife
Whose judgment upon you must pass,
The fellow whose verdict counts most in your life
Is the one staring back from the glass.

Some people might think you're a straight-shootin' chum
And call you a wonderful guy.
But the man in the glass says you're only a bum
If you can't look him straight in the eye.

He's the fellow to please, never mind all the rest
For he's with you clear to the end,
And you've passed your most dangerous test
If the guy in the glass is your friend.

You may fool the whole world down the pathway of years
And get pats on the back as you pass,
But your final reward will be heartaches and tears

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

If you've cheated the man in the glass.

AUTHOR UNKNOWN

DEAR ABBY: I'm driving on the highway during the day and see a car with its headlights on. I blink my headlights to let the driver know his lights are on.

Once, I was stopped by a highway patrol officer who asked me if I had some kind of emergency — and why was I blinking my headlights?

I thought blinking your headlights to signal that someone's lights were on in broad daylight was a well-known signal to all motorists. Or am I mistaken?

AL JOHNSON, HOBBS, N.M.

DEAR AL: Blinking headlights is not only a well-known signal in the USA and Canada, it's a universal way of saying, "Hey, friend, turn off (or on) your headlights."

Since it's a motorist's way of attracting attention, it's comforting to know that the highway patrol is so alert.

Your Birthday

July 10, 1988

Don't be disappointed in the year ahead if the fruits of your efforts seem to come slow at first. Time is your ally and you will eventually reap the rewards to which you are entitled.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Guard against purveying hearsay about a friend when unsure of the facts. It's best to say nothing until you know what you're talking about. Major changes are ahead for Cancer in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An acquaintance who is more of a taker than a giver may make some unreasonable demands on you today. Don't feel obligated to comply.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There are no shortcuts to success today. If you hope to achieve specific objectives, it looks like you are going to have to earn them the hard way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Complications with others are likely today if you fail to see things from the other guy's perspective. Be open-minded.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A collective venture will fail flat today if the burden or costs are not equally distributed. Be careful if you're the person who is expected to hold up the heavy end.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't let anyone coerce you into doing something today that you feel is against your better judgement or best interests. Say no and mean it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you might be required to perform some unwelcome assignments. If you make more of than then they are, it will only make matters worse.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Play competitive, friendly sports just for the game's sake and not for money. If you let batting enter the picture, it might get out of hand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Goals can be achieved today, provided you have the stick-to-itiveness to do so. Don't back off or back out just because the going gets a bit rough.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Confrontations are likely today if you walk around with a chip on your shoulder. What may start out as a trivial disagreement could turn into something more serious.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be both penny-wise and pound-conscious today or else you may overwork your credit cards. Your inclinations to buy things you really don't need could be strong.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Companions will have to be handled with considerable tact today in order to avoid petty misunderstandings. Be cooperative, considerate and charming.

Bridge

got a club lead. But lots of play remained.

Declarer won the club king with the ace and led a diamond. When West played the eight, it was possible that he was holding up his ace, so declarer played the king from dummy. East took the ace and returned a club. South won the queen and played the jack of spades. East won the king and played a heart to dummy's king. Declarer ruffed a diamond and led a spade to dummy's ace. When West showed out, declarer decided to read West's Q-8 of diamonds as a doubleton. So he ran the 10 of diamonds from dummy, pitching a club when East played low. Declarer ruffed another diamond to drop East's jack and got back to dummy with the other high heart. That left dummy with ♠6, ♠9-7; East with ♠Q-9, ♠J; and declarer with ♠10, ♠Q, ♠10. As the good diamond was led from dummy, East was baffled. If he ruffed high, declarer would shed his losing club and his hand would be good. If East ruffed low, declarer would overruff and ruff the last club. Even though East then overruffed dummy, he would have only a losing heart to lead to declarer's queen. And that was 10 tricks to declarer, but not without some travail.

South, clever dog that he thought himself, bid three hearts as a game try when North supported his spade response. Sure enough, North then jumped to four spades, and declarer

'A World Apart' is simply beautiful

A WORLD APART (PG)
This directorial debut for cinematographer Chris Menges ("The Killing Fields") has a beautiful, bracing simplicity.

Filmeter

Robert DiMatteo

The movie is based on screenwriter Shawn Slovo's actual childhood in South Africa — when she watched her well-heeled white parents suffer the consequences of their anti-apartheid political activism. It is a portrait of heroic resistance in the face of enormous repression, plus a study of the toll taken on a family by that heroism. The film has its conventionally stirring side — its noble, white-liberal sentiments. But it's a haunting portrait of those sentiments, one painted in swift, fluid strokes. The film's triumph — as with a curious number of other good movies recently — is to filter tumultuous events through the consciousness of a child. The child here is Molly (marvelous newcomer Jodhi May) — an alert, quizzical 13-year-old who is ostracized by her suburban friends. This happens when her father skips the country and her dissident journalist mother, Diana Roth (Barbara Hershey), is arrested under the infamous 90-Day Detention Act.

The movie bristles with menace as the police, led by a deviously humane chief interrogator (David Suchet), work to break down Diana. Meanwhile, on the outside, Molly and her sisters watch their bourgeois paradise of a life start to disintegrate.

Since we see Diana through Molly's eyes, there is a limit to our understanding of her. Barbara Hershey's superbly flinty performance almost makes up the difference. She gives us a brusque, handsome woman whose idealism can also be seen as a form of selfishness. Diana simply cannot sit back and watch a minority of ruling whites destroy South Africa's black population, even if it means she must neglect her own family. Though it hurts her daughter to realize it, Diana's real family is her country — a family of whites and blacks together. GRADE: *½

BULL DURHAM (R) People who go to this movie expecting a salty little baseball romp are in for something of a surprise. Yes, the movie is chockful of sports lore, locker room antics, and after-hours bawdiness. But it's more than that, too.

Written and directed by Ron Shelton, this picture takes a sneaky pleasure in subverting our expectations. Despite its jock predilections, Shelton's script is literary with a vengeance: When's the last time you heard an athlete in a movie mention that the novels of Susan Sontag are overrated?

That athlete is an aging minor-league catcher (Kevin Costner), who suddenly finds himself confronted with a callow new pitcher (Tim Robbins) who needs some seasoning. Meanwhile, both guys vie for the same woman — a sexy team follower (Susan Sarandon). She picks one player a season to cavort with, luring him into her lair — where Edith Piaf records play and a candlelit shrine marks the "church of baseball."

Shelton's script, however fancy, is surer than his direction. Accordingly, the rhythm of some of the scenes is a little off, and others fall a bit flat. But, unless you're a prude, this shaggy, loose-lipped movie will keep you happily off-balance. And Sarandon's performance triumphantly honors a male fantasy that should satisfy both male and female viewers: She's a curvy kook who turns out to offer both erotic and intellectual challenges of the first order. GRADE: *****

CRY FREEDOM (PG) MCA.

BARBARA HERSHEY plays an activist

$89.95. This collaboration between "Gandhi" director Richard Attenborough and screenwriter John Briley chronicles the friendship of South African black activist Stephen Biko (Denzel Washington) and liberal white journalist Donald Woods (Kevin Kline). Focusing on Woods' political awakening and subsequent escape with his family from South Africa, the movie eclipses the tale of Biko, whose probable torture at the hands of the Afrikaner police resulted in his death.

You get the suspicion that the filmmakers didn't think a black man's story would completely hold our interest. They've still made an impressive and colorful film, though — especially in the first half, over which Washington's Biko eloquently presides. GRADE: *****

New video teaches first aid

By Dolores Barclay
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — If your child accidentally swallows a pesticide, will you know what to do? What if a bee stings you, or while camping with friends you stomp through a patch of poison ivy. Not every one knows instant first aid, but it's one of the most important things for us to know. A new cassette from MCA Home Video, "Dr. Heimlich's Home First Aid," gives simple, useful instructions for everything from poison to burns to bleeding, choking, bee stings and animal bites.

Henry Heimlich, the doctor who is credited with the procedure used for choking victims called the Heimlich Maneuver, developed the video with home emergencies in mind. He cautions that one should remain calm in any life-threatening situation.

"There's no place for panic in an emergency," he says.

The 36-minute home video will be in stores in September in VHS and Beta with a suggested retail price of $19.95.

Also for September from MCA is "Swing — The Best of the Big Bands," a wonderful collection of vintage 1940s and 50s film footage of such artists as Duke Ellington, Nat "King" Cole, Tommy Dorsey, Charlie Barnet, Gene Krupa and Billie Holiday.

The two-volume package will be available on laser videodisc with a suggested retail price of $34.99 each.

Lehigh prof wrote book about history of coinage

The book "Fractional Money" was written, after researching a thousand sources, by a Lehigh professor who had been teaching a course on money and banking. He described it as "defensive" after having been driven to the wall by smarty-panted students. Until the publication of the 372-page volume in 1930 there had been no complete history of United States coinage.

Collectors' Corner
Russ MacKendrick

He noted in the foreword that the book carried a critical tone, saying that he could not bring himself to gloss over the errors of various administrations. This adds to the spice. (From an erstwhile grande dame of Washington society, Alice Roosevelt Longworth: "If you can't say anything good about somebody — come and sit by me.")

Upon flip-reading, we note on page 188 an 1862 newspaper query: "What causes this premium on nickels... the panic-mongers have driven them up 3 or 4 percent..."

The answer was that the possession of a few copper cents meant that the owner could ride rather than walk. (The 1857-1864 cents were being called "nickels" — 12 percent nickel, 88 percent copper.)

Remember the roll-collecting binge of a few years back? It was worse in 1863. One store in New York had a floor collapse from the weight of junky coins.

The Carothers book was published by Wiley in 1930 and soon went to $75 in the out-of-print market. This is a soft-cover version being offered by Bowers and Merena Galleries for $19.95, or $21.95 postpaid. Address: Box 1224, Wolfeboro, N.H. 03894.

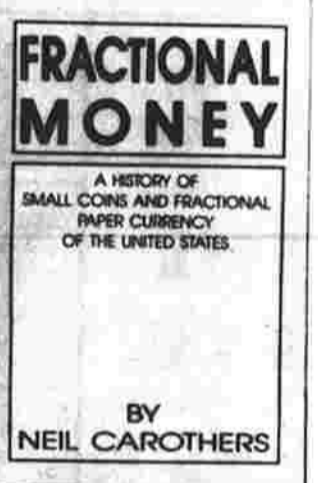

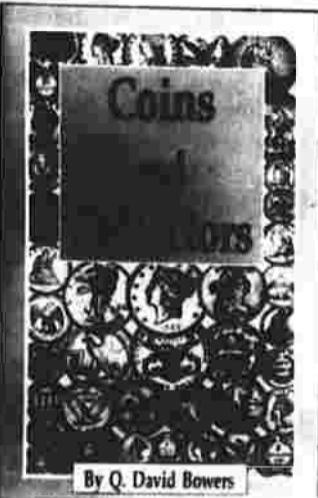

double-die cent together with the assurance by a mint spokesman that it couldn't have happened. Also from a similar source came a denial of two different date sizes for the 1960 cent.

Bowers relates that the furor over the discovery of the small date, together with the start-up of the weekly "Coin World," actually doubled the number of coin collectors that one year.

We read of the growth of the hobby literature in the early 1900s with special reference to the typically Texan ads coming from Max Mehl of Fort Worth. He was good for half a century. One of the first general references was Scott's Standard Catalogue and later came the forerunner of the Red Book; the volume by the squire of South Norwalk, Conn.: Wayne Raymond.

This edition of "Coins and Collectors," jam-packed as it is with numismatic lore, is available over the counter for $9.95, or by mail, $11.95, from Bowers and Merena Galleries, Box 1224, Wolfeboro, N.H. 03894.

New type of camera a 'bridge'

By Sandy Colton
The Associated Press

Not so long ago, camera manufacturers set out to woo the amateur photographer away from the 110-size, point-and-shoot camera. The Kodak Instamatic-type cameras and disc cameras were the target.

First, manufacturers came out with simple, inexpensive 35mm cameras with cheap wide-angle lenses. These lenses keep any image relatively sharp from about 4 feet to infinity. There is no need to focus, and the price is very affordable.

Next came autofocus and auto-exposure. Autofocus just manages to get you into a zone of focus close enough to make the picture relatively sharp. Auto-exposure brings the user within the f-stop latitude of most amateur color print films.

Film manufacturers cooperated in this process by improving their films, making them faster, brighter, and with finer grain. The novice photographer, afraid of all those numbers and things associated with 35mm photography, delighted with the autofocus-auto-exposure cameras, forgot about the 110-size camera. The Instamatic is dead; the disc camera is on its way out.

Now manufacturers want amateurs to move another step closer to the top-of-the-line, interchangeable-lens SLR camera — and to spend more money doing so. They have come out with a new camera, called a bridge camera.

With a bridge camera, you can point and shoot, or, with the push of a button, you can use an operating mode similar to what you'd find in a more sophisticated camera. Some bridge cameras have a lot of buttons for a lot of options. For example, the Ricoh FF-7, which was introduced at the recent Photo Marketing Association show in Chicago, does everything — plus a little bit more. The Ricoh FF-7 has a sleek design. It is compact and light, and it can fit into a shirt pocket. At first touch, the Ricoh FF-7 feels like a simple point-and-shoot camera. And it is. It does all those things you'd expect of such a camera — just about auto-everything. "A nice camera," I told a tech rep who was showing it to me, "probably very good for novices, people who just want to point and shoot and get good pictures without worrying about all those numbers and things." I was in for a big surprise. The tech rep depressed a small button on the side of the camera, and a whole range of sophisticated features became available. It was amazing to find so much in such a small camera.

Baseball and fantasy spell success

By Jeff Brodley
The Associated Press

TORONTO — The Seattle Mariners' mascot turns out to be a loveliest creature from outer space. The entire town of Frank Pierce, Iowa, disappears. Three friends find a K mart on their old baseball field so they set up a pitcher's mound in the women's wear section.

Fans of W.P. Kinsella will recognize the style. The Canadian creator of "Shoeless Joe" and "The Iowa Baseball Confederacy" is back with a new collection of stories mixing bittersweet fantasy with America's national pastime.

Social Security

QUESTION: I have never worked under Social Security but my husband has for many years. When can I get retirement benefits as his wife?

ANSWER: In order to receive a wife's benefit you must be 62 years old. In addition, your husband will have to apply for his own retirement benefit.

QUESTION: I'll be 65 later this year and will have Medicare coverage. I'm confused about the difference between Medicare's hospital insurance and medical insurance coverage. Can you explain?

ANSWER: The hospital insurance part of Medicare, sometimes referred as Part A, helps pay for inpatient hospital care, some inpatient care in skilled nursing facilities, and hospice care. The medical insurance part of Medicare, sometimes referred to as Part B, helps pay for medically necessary doctors' services, outpatient hospital services, and a number of other services and supplies that are not covered by hospital insurance. Hospital insurance and medical insurance both help pay for home health care.

QUESTION: My friends' young son was seriously injured in an auto accident and will not be able to return to work for over a year. He recently found out he will get a Social Security disability benefit. He found out his wife and two young sons will also be eligible for payments. Is this true? If so, how many young people realize that the Social Security program is more than just retirement benefits?

ANSWER: Yes, it's true. A lot of young people don't realize just how important Social Security is for them even before they're old enough to collect retirement benefits. Every month more than 2 million workers under 65 get disability payments from Social Security and more than 1 million wives, husbands, and children get payments as dependents of disabled workers. These payments make a real difference to people while they're recovering from an accident or illness and getting ready to return to work.

QUESTION: I need to have some rather expensive laboratory tests. Will Medicare pay for this?

ANSWER: Medicare medical insurance can help pay for diagnostic tests provided by independent laboratories. The lab must be certified by Medicare for the service you receive. Not all laboratories are certified by Medicare, and some laboratories are certified only for certain kinds of tests. You may want to check with your doctor to see if the tests you need are covered.

QUESTION: My mother gets Social Security and SSI check every month. She is 86, and I'm concerned about the way she has been handling her money. Can Social Security send her checks to me?

ANSWER: Sometimes a person getting Social Security or SSI checks loses the mental or physical ability to manage money. When this happens, Social Security should be notified. Arrangements can be made for a "representative payee" — usually a relative — to receive and use the benefits for that person.

Joshua Johnson

The retrospective of the earliest known black American portrait painter for whom a body of extant work survives includes 39 portraits of late 18th and early 19th century subjects.

The museum says, "Johnson absorbed the stylistic tradition of the renowned Peale family, for whom it is believed he worked, and assumed their artistic approach, which was based on conventions prevalent in 18th century European portraiture and widely adopted by colonial artists."

David Hockney

NEW YORK (AP) — "David Hockney: A Retrospective," a major international loan exhibition of the work of the contemporary artist, is on view at the Metropolitan Museum of Art through Aug. 14.

The exhibition contains 150 paintings, 60 drawings, 30 photographs, several suites of prints and samples of Hockney's collaborative work in stage design.

Works in the show came from public and private collections in the United States, Japan, South America, Australia, Asia and Europe.

"The first large-scale attempt to assess the work of one of the most gifted, inventive and popular artists at work today."

Poulsen and Pickford were awarded the $15,000 prize following the end of the competition. Each dancer competing performed works from both the contemporary and classical repertoire.

Bruhn was the late artistic director of the National Ballet of Canada. He conceived the competition just prior to his death in 1986.

Isozaki cited

NEW YORK (AP) — Arata Isozaki has received the 1988 Arnold W. Brunner Memorial Prize in Architecture from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

The $1,000 prize is given each year to "an architect in recognition of his contribution to architecture as an art."

Isozaki, who born in Japan, is best known in this country for his design of the Museum of Contemporary Art in Los Angeles. Other works in the U.S. include the office building for Walt Disney World in Florida, the Minnesota School and Resource Center for the Arts, and the Palladium, a New York City dance club.

RODNEY CROWELL
...singing with Rosanne

Crowell becomes more self-accepting

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

Rodney Crowell's fifth album, "Diamonds and Dirt," on Columbia Records, is the first to contain a duet by Crowell and his wife, Rosanne Cash.

He wrote the duet, "It's Such a Small World," four years ago, about a man and woman who meet 10 years after they've had a relationship.

Crowell and Cash have been married nine years and he says she has been ready to sing a duet for 10 years. "I was stubborn. My mother would say I was prideful."

He adds, "I had to evolve to the place I felt comfortable doing it. Each artist has their own road to arrive at wherever they're going."

"The first things we put together on Rosanne, she was accepted. Her association with her father made the doors fly open for her initially. By her own merits, intelligence, integrity and talents, the doors have remained open."

"For me to define myself was a harder job. It took me awhile to be comfortable with the idea of going for the obvious commercial success of a duet with Rosanne."

"It's Such a Small World" went to No. 1 on the country chart. "I Couldn't Leave You if I Tried," the second single from Crowell's album, was No. 43 and climbing on the June 25 country best-selling chart.

Crowell says, "We're both competitive people. Rosanne has written songs I've admired and secretly wish I'd written, which has inspired me to write."

"Sometimes, within a year's time, we've both put out LPs. Hers has gone to the top of the charts and mine has hung around midway. It took me awhile to realize it was OK, and it was OK to be somewhat resentful. Once I learned to accept that anyone in that position would feel the same way, it did a whole lot to eliminate that kind of rivalry. The idea of becoming more self-accepting is to me one of the finer things about growing older."

Crowell's career took a producing turn from 1981 to 1984. He didn't release an album for five years. "What happened is, Rosanne drafted me to produce her record. It was fun. It was a success, so other people in the industry shined the flashlight in my corner."

"Isn't it typical, the things you're not trying to make happen, happen on their own. Suddenly I was in the midst of a good three-year stint in the studio."

"It was an opportunity for me to focus on where I really wanted to concentrate my energies in music. I realized there isn't any more satisfying form of professional self-expression than performing a piece of music you've written and knowing you've really moved an audience. I'm now doing what I like to do, writing songs and performing them for people."

Bob Seger had a hit with "Shame on the Moon," which Crowell had on an album. He says, "I'm not good at commissioned writing. I can perform pretty well with a deadline but that doesn't feel like pressure the way it does if Joe Arista said, 'I've got to have a hit song. Please write it for me.'"

His favorite song always is a recent one "where I break some ground I hadn't broken before or found some new twist on my style. Any time I can get into the murkiness, bluesiness and sometimes brightness of emotion and come up with something that is digestible to listeners, I'm happy."

Crowell was born in Houston, went to Nashville for two years in the early 1970s, spent seven years in Los Angeles, returned to Nashville, where the Crowells live with three daughters, the oldest his from a previous marriage. Another child is on the way.

BUSINESS

It's a summertime boom
Teen-agers drop jobless rate to 5.3%

WASHINGTON (AP) — A boom in summertime work for teen-agers dropped the nation's unemployment rate in June to a 14-year low, 5.3 percent, the government said Friday. Joblessness among black youths plummeted more than 6 percentage points to its lowest level on record.

The 0.3 percentage point drop from May's 5.6 percent jobless rate was caused by a seasonally adjusted surge of 820,000 people — three-fourths of them 16 to 24 years old — onto America's payrolls, the Labor Department said.

Including an unusual decline of 536,000 in the number of people at work in May, employment increases had been averaging only 90,000 a month this year until June.

The government's raw data showed 1.4 million more teen-agers at work in June than in May, dropping the adjusted unemployment rate among them 2 percentage points to 13.6 percent, the lowest since early 1970.

Among black teens, joblessness dropped from 34.8 percent in May to 28.4 percent last month, the lowest since the government began keeping separate data on them in 1972 and the first time since late 1973 that it has dipped below 30 percent.

Analysts had anticipated a large increase this year in the usual number of available summer jobs, especially in the tourist industry, as foreigners taking advantage of the devalued

American dollar flock to the United States for their vacations.

However, some were skeptical that overall job growth and the consequent decline in the unemployment rate was as great as it appeared in June figures.

"Anything in the report that deals with summer workers will look better than it is," said Larry Chimerine, president of the WEFA Group, an economic forecasting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "The July report will be the purest indication because that's all summer."

The Labor Department acknowledged its June figures were affected in part by the fact its survey was conducted late in the month, "allowing extra time for students, graduates and seasonal workers to find jobs."

As a result, according to Chimerine, the "filters" used to adjust the total figures treated some of the normal seasonal increase as non-summer employment.

The numbers were good enough for President Reagan to claim them as "solid evidence" that his economic policies were working, and he put in a thinly veiled plug for Vice President George Bush.

"I predict that 1988 will be a banner year for Republicans because it's a banner year for peace and prosperity in America," he said. "As they sit around their kitchen tables, more Americans are planning for their future, not desperately searching the want ads for jobs."

The numbers were not so good for Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis. Unemployment in the Massachusetts governor's state jumped from 2.8 percent to 3.5 percent.

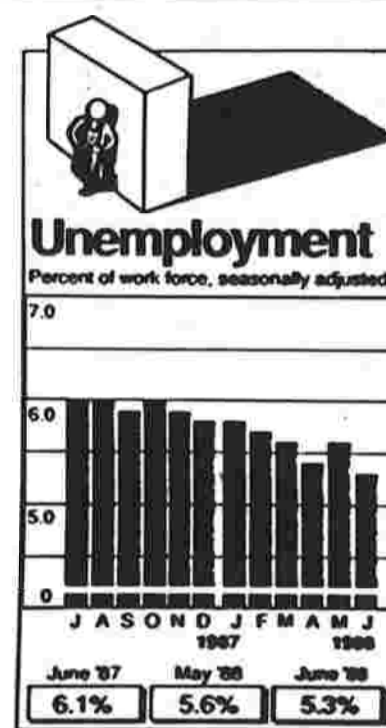

But it was the first time in more than four years that Massachusetts has not had the lowest unemployment rate of the nation's 11 largest states. Its rate in June was equaled by New York and exceeded by North Carolina, where joblessness dropped from 3.5 percent in May to 3.2 percent last month.

Nationwide, the number of unemployed fell by 328,000 in June to 6.5 million, with teen-agers and adult men accounting for all of the decline. And the percentage of working-age Americans holding jobs climbed to 62.3 percent, an all-time high matched only once before — in April.

Construction employment rose by 55,000 and factories added 45,000 new workers, 20,000 more than their average monthly increase from January through May.

"There are no signs that a growing economy driven by exports and capital equipment investment is slowing down," said Jerry Jasinoski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Jasinoski said manufacturers are beginning to run up against labor shortages and predicting that if employment growth continues at its June pace there will be an acceleration of wage inflation by Christmas.

Some other economists also echoed those fears, although there was no indication of any wage spike in June. Average hourly wages actually fell by 2 cents to $9.23 last month after rising at an annual rate of 6 percent in April and May.

Louisiana won't tax its foreign visitors

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana has become the first state to give sales tax rebates to foreign visitors, a move designed to boost the tourism industry and create jobs in a state plagued by double-digit unemployment.

The state will join 17 European countries that offer similar refunds under a bill Gov. Buddy Roemer signed into law Friday.

"I think it is a fantastic concept for us in that we are the first in the nation to do it," said Lt. Gov. Paul Hardy, who serves as the head of Louisiana's Department of Culture, Recreation and Tourism.

The program, which the state hopes to implement in early 1989, will offer the rebates only for retail sales. Hotel bills, rental cars and restaurant and bar tabs will not be affected.

"While we're debating only the tax on shopping, we will get more (visitors) paying the sales tax on everything else," said Eugene Schriber, managing director of the World Trade Center in New Orleans.

According to a World Trade Center study, 301,900 foreign tourists from countries other than Mexico and Canada visited Louisiana in 1986 to take in such attractions as New Orleans' French Quarter, pre-Civil War plantation mansions in southern Louisiana and the Cajun country.

During that year, Louisiana attracted 3.4 percent of overseas tourists who came to the United States, ranking it 15th among the states. "I don't think Louisiana is getting its fair share," said Hardy, who campaigned last fall on the theme of building the state's tourism industry.

Singer sells 2 divisions

STAMFORD (AP) — The Singer Co. announced Friday it will sell its vocational and military training divisions to separate companies for a total of $570 million as part of a continuing divestment program.

The state will join 17 European countries that offer similar refunds under a bill Gov. Buddy Roemer signed into law Friday.

Integrated Resources Acquisition Inc. will acquire the Education Division, known as Career Systems Development, for $20 million. The division, a major operator of Job Corps vocational training centers for the U.S. Department of Labor, is headquartered in Rochester, N.Y.

CAE Industries Ltd. of Toronto, Canada, will acquire Singer's Link Domestic Simulation and Training Systems Division for $550 million.

The division is the leading supplier of military simulation systems and training services to the U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Its headquarters are in Binghamton, N.Y., but it also has facilities in Houston; Dallas; Sunnyvale, Calif.; Silver Spring, Md.; and Alexandria, Va.

trial products manufacturing and services.

The Singer divisions are the second and third to be sold since the company was acquired earlier this year by a partnership headed by Paul A. Bilzerian, in making the acquisition, Bilzerian said at least part of the company's operations would be divested.

Ryobi Limited of Tokyo, Japan, announced Tuesday it would buy Singer's motor products division for $325 million.

Company officials said they expect the sale of the Education Division to be completed in August. Integrated Resources, a subsidiary of the financial services company Integrated Resources, Inc., then will offer interests in Career Systems Development through a privately placed limited partnership.

The closing date for the Link sale hinges on regulatory approvals.

David H. Race, president and chief executive officer of CAE, said Link and CAE "are the ideal fit." He said CAE intends to operate Link as an autonomous business unit in its present form.

"The combination of technical, manufacturing and financial resources resulting from this agreement will enhance the ability of

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

- The nation's two largest financial markets took a joint step toward averting another stock crash, proposing reforms that include special attention to small investors and coordinated trading halts when the Dow Jones industrial average falls 250 points. The announcement by the New York Stock Exchange and Chicago Mercantile Exchange addressed many issues raised by government studies on the causes of the October crash.
- The Securities and Exchange Commission voted to limit American companies' ability to weaken the voting power of their stockholders as a way of fighting hostile takeovers. The new one-share, one-vote rule spells out how shares with reduced voting power can be issued.
- Federal regulators said it will cost $15.2 billion to bail out Texas' ailing savings and loan institutions, more than double their previous estimate.
- The government said youth summertime employment helped drop the nation's civilian jobless rate to 5.3 percent in June, the lowest since 1974. Another government report showed Japan was the only industrial power to beat the United States in reducing manufacturing labor costs in absolute terms last year.
- The nation's major retailers said sales rose between 3.5 percent and 4 percent in June, helped by the hot weather and consumer purchases of summer clothing.
- Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, after meeting with six farm-state governors, said there was an urgent need for legislative action to provide drought relief.
- Officials of the Farm Credit System announced a merger that will combine nine of the system's banks for cooperatives into one lending institution.
- The United States and Japan signed an agreement opening Japan to more American beef and citrus.
- American Suzuki Motor Corp. said sales of its Samurai sport vehicle plunged 70.6 percent in June from a year earlier. It was the automaker's first sales report since Consumers Union alleged the Samurai tips too easily.
- Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. said their car sales rose in late June, and the Big Three automakers all finished the first half of 1988 ahead of the same period last year.
- Singer Co. agreed to sell its motor products division to Ryobi Limited of Japan for about $325 million. The division is a major source of power tools for Sears, Roebuck & Co.
- Sun Co., a leading producer and distributor of gasoline and petroleum products, agreed to buy the smaller Atlantic Petroleum Corp. for $913 million.
- Tropicana Products Inc. sued Coca-Cola Co. over labeling and advertising claims for its "premium choice" pasteurized Minute Maid orange juice.
- Bank of New York Co. got a reprieve in its hostile pursuit of Irving Bank Corp. when a state judge struck down a provision of Irving's anti-takeover "poison pill."
- Eastern Airlines and its unions signed an agreement designed to defuse years of bitter battling and improve safety procedures at the often-criticized carrier. The pact comes a month after federal investigators warned that safety could be threatened.
- USG Corp. shareholders approved a recapitalization and restructuring plan that increases the company's debt fourfold. The plan was part of the company's successful defense against a takeover bid from Desert Partners L.P.
- Financier Marvin Warner was stunned by a Florida jury verdict requiring him to pay $22.6 million for fraudulently removing money from ESM Government Securities, a falling securities dealer.

Mortgage rates increase for third consecutive month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages moved higher in June, the third consecutive monthly increase, the government said Friday.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the regulator of savings institutions, said the national average for conventional, single-family loans jumped to 10.75 percent in early June, up from 10.65 percent in early May. It was the highest rate since January, when the average was 10.97 percent.

However, a separate report by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., known as Freddie Mac, indicates that rates eased later in June and early this month. It said the average this week was 10.38 percent, down from 10.39 percent last week and 10.58 percent in the week ending June 3.

Freddie Mac averages are lower than the bank board's comparable averages because they do not include add-on fees, known as points, which are paid by borrowers.

The bank board averages, which hit 11.42 percent just before the October stock market crash, dropped steadily for five months, hitting 10.33 percent in early March, and then began rising.

After the brief respite in June and early this month, economists are expecting rates to begin climbing again.

Richard W. Peach, deputy chief economist of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said he expected 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages to be in the 11.25 to 11.5 percent range by the end of the year.

The bank board said rates for the most popular type of one-year, adjustable-rate mortgages, those with caps on how high the rate can increase, also rose, from 8.63 percent in early May to 8.80 percent in early June.

The percentage of mortgages closed with adjustable rates rose to 55 percent in June, up from 53 percent in May and 49 percent in April.

Peach said as fixed-rates rise, home buyers turn to the less-costly adjustable rates.

A 'banner year'?

Wall Street not as excited as Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — Though the stock market has rallied since late spring, Wall Street is still having trouble working up much excitement over what President Reagan has labeled a "banner year for peace and prosperity."

The occasion for Reagan's statement was a Labor Department report Friday that the civilian unemployment rate fell three-tenths of a percentage point in June to a 14-year low of 5.3 percent.

That figure, and the accompanying news of a $46,000 increase in non-farm payroll employment, far exceeded advance estimates on Wall Street.

The dramatic numbers seemed to leave the stock market with a clearly defined choice: Either it could jump ahead on the evidence of solid economic growth, or it could drop sharply amid the inflation fears that have been raised by many other favorable economic reports of late.

As it turned out, however, the market did neither of those things. Instead, it spent the day drifting quietly lower, almost as though there was no news of any note to deal with.

One primary source of caution in the financial markets of late has been a widespread suspicion that the state of the economy is too good to last.

Before long, many investors fear, strong growth will bring with it increased inflation and upward pressure on interest rates. Indeed, rates moved up significantly on Friday after the employment statistics were issued.

To some analysts, this amounts to nothing more than the latest of a series of false inflation scares that have hit the markets in recent years.

Yes, they say, the rise of the Consumer Price Index in 1988 is likely to be a little larger than it was last year, with production closer to full capacity and special influences like the drought in the farm belt.

But no, they argue, inflation is not about to reach the point where it forces stringent credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve and brings an end to the economic expansion.

"The economic cycle will last longer than any investors expect," maintains Donald Carver at Centre Square Investment Group in Philadelphia.

"Peak earnings are still several quarters away. Inflationary pressures from some commodity prices are offset by weakness in energy."

"Interest rates are unlikely, anytime soon, to reach levels that would dampen the economy."

Such assurances did little for the stock market in the past week, however. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 25.43 points to 2,106.15.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell .87 to 152.81, and the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market lost .37 to 394.33. The American Stock Exchange market value index edged up .02 to 399.02.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 163.40 million shares a day, down from 208.42 million the week before.

Susan Berge Kent at Tucker, Anthony & R.L. Day Inc. takes a different slant on the inflation debate: She regards fears of upward pressure on prices as misguided, but thinks the stock market is headed for trouble anyway.

Ms. Kent argues that the basic question facing the stock market is how the nation will deal with "the greatest debt problem this country has faced since the late 1920s."

"Since the early 1980s," she says, "deflation has been a greater risk than inflation, particularly in light of the debt problem."

But, in her view, fears of inflation could lead policymakers, notably the Federal Reserve Board, to take actions that would turn many heavy debtors into bankrupts.

She concludes, "The risk is that the Fed will tighten, raise the discount rate, at a time when free market forces are already pulling in the direction of deflation rather than inflation."

Company negotiators planned to meet with representatives of Local 376 Saturday in hopes of reaching a similar agreement quickly, McDaniel said. Local 1010 represents about 1,900 workers, while Local 376 represents about 240 workers.

Joseph Ciuci, president of Local 1010, was not at union headquarters Friday night and could not be reached for comment.

Textron, union OK contract

STRATFORD (AP) — Negotiators for Textron Locomotives and one of two striking unions reached tentative agreement Friday on a new, three-year contract, a spokesman for the defense contractor said.

Members of United Auto Workers Local 1010 will vote on the proposed contract as soon as possible to end the strike, which began May 30 when the previous contract expired, said company spokesman William McDaniel.

U.S./World In Brief

Fire kills 4,000 animals

GARY, Ind. — A barn that housed 2,000 rabbits and 2,000 guinea pigs being grown for research was burned, killing all the animals, authorities said.

The fire Thursday also destroyed the barn. Gerald Kuiper, owner of Kuiper Rabbit Ranch, said he and a worker were cleaning the barn when they noticed some hay on fire.

"I tried to grab a hose to put it out. Everything was filled with smoke, and it just started to go up in flames. It just seemed to start on its own," said a tearful Kuiper. "I don't know what I am going to do now."

Kuiper, who has raised animals at the farm for 26 years, estimated his loss at $100,000. But he said he has other barns where he raises animals. The animals are sold, for $3 to $10, to laboratories around the Midwest.

Officials were investigating a cause for the blaze.

Nixon has hernia surgery

NEW YORK — Former President Nixon was discharged Friday from a hospital following successful hernia surgery, a spokeswoman said.

Nixon was admitted Wednesday and was operated on Thursday morning by George Wantz, a hernia expert.

"It was a procedure called the Canadian repair, a very commonly performed surgical procedure and it was performed under local anesthesia," said Myrna Manners, spokeswoman at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Nixon is to recuperate at his home in Sadle River, N.J., she said.

"It was really very routine, very minor surgery. And he went home in good condition," Manners said.

Sarah unhurt in crash

LONDON — The Duchess of York, who is eight months pregnant, escaped injury Friday when her chauffeured Jaguar struck an oncoming car on a highway 20 miles outside London, police and Buckingham Palace said.

The accident involving the former Sarah Ferguson occurred on a section of the M40, a busy western highway into London. Part of the road was closed for repairs, police said.

A police bodyguard was driving the duchess' Jaguar, and she continued the journey in an accompanying police car, Buckingham Palace said.

The 28-year-old duchess is married to Prince Andrew, the second son of Queen Elizabeth II. She is expecting their first child.

Judge convicts wrong man

PHILADELPHIA — Rodney Morris insisted he'd been arrested on a robbery charge and shouldn't be on trial for allegedly tampering with a car.

But Municipal Judge Thomas J. McCormack convicted him of theft and conspiracy charges anyway.

McCormack said he figured if the wrong Rodney Morris had really been brought in for trial Thursday, his lawyer, William J. Hagan, would speak up.

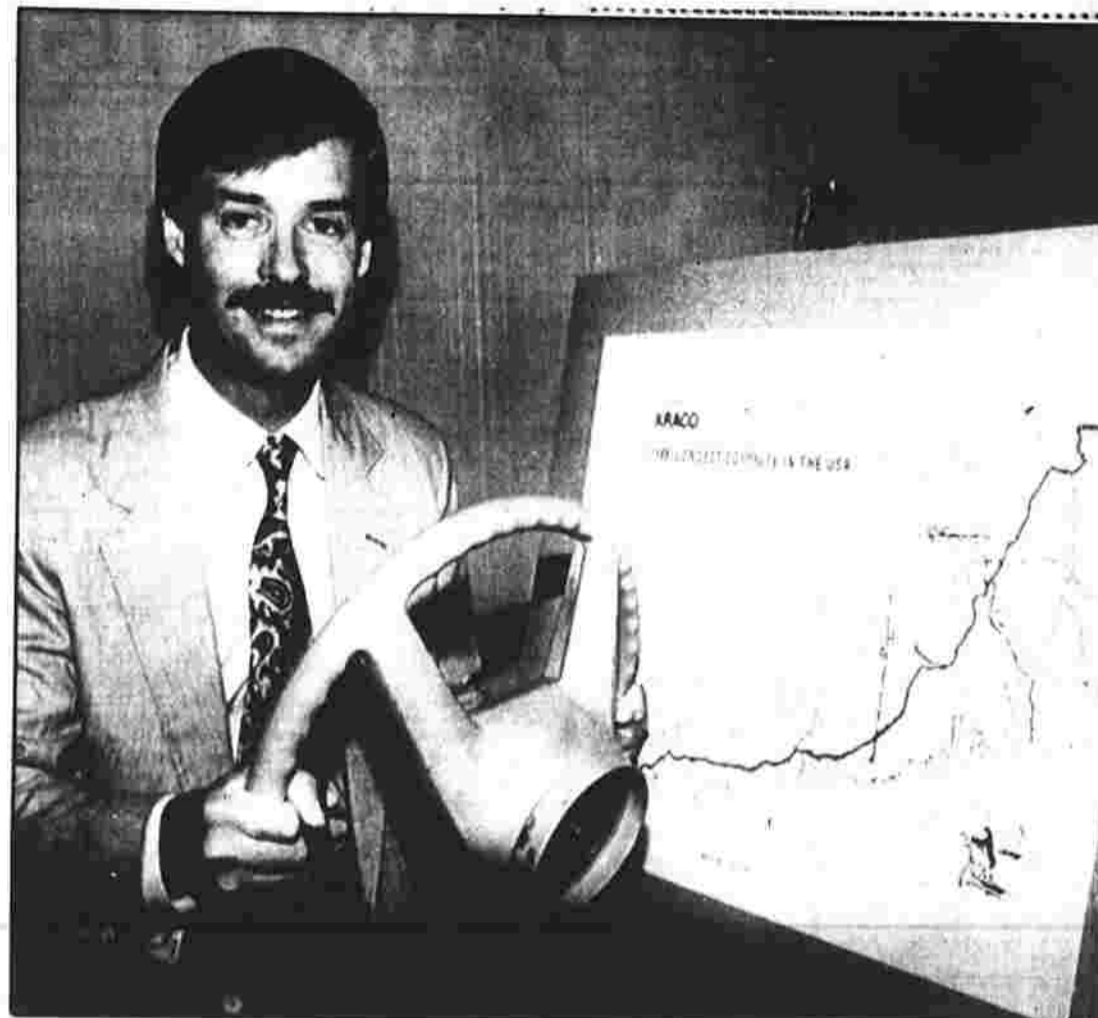

A police officer identified Morris as one of three men who had been tampering with a car last January. When the defense opened, Morris refused to take the stand because he said, "This is not my case. What can I say?"

"Guilty," the judge said. "I was never arrested in this case," Morris said as McCormack was about to impose sentence. "I'm not the real guy. I'm charged with robbery, not this."

The judge asked Hagan if Morris was his client. Hagan said he wasn't sure.

Records were checked, the prison was called and sure enough, the wrong Rodney Morris had been brought to court.

"I couldn't believe it," the judge said. "I withdrew my verdict."

NUMBER ONE COMMUTER — Rod Conklin of Darien poses in Los Angeles Friday after he was honored by Kraco, the automotive electronics company, as the nation's number one commuter. The 35-year-old advertising sales representative daily drives 408 miles roundtrip between Darien and his office in Boston.

No charges in Arizona probe

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Rose Mofford will not be charged in connection with gifts she gave as secretary of state or financial disclosure statements she filed as a public official, the county attorney announced Friday.

Maricopa County Attorney Tom Collins said technical violations in the statements were not "significant in that they did not involve large amounts of money or personal gain for Governor Mofford."

Mrs. Mofford was not available for comment immediately, but aides issued a statement on her behalf.

"Obviously I am relieved that this investigation has concluded and I can continue to lead Arizona without any doubts about my integrity," it said. "It feels good to be exonerated from these charges because every decision I have ever made in public service has been for the benefit of the state of Arizona."

State Attorney General Bob Corbin had asked Collins' office to investigate omissions from financial-disclosure statements Mrs. Mofford filed over the last 10 years and at thousands of dollars in state money that went for gifts and office decorations while she was secretary of state.

Sources close to the probe said before the announcement that investigators had concluded Mrs. Mofford had broad authority to spend money.

And while they found some evidence of payments by Mrs. Mofford of bills that her late husband incurred, sources said the investigators had been unable to locate a will for T.R. Mofford that could have helped prove or disprove her claim that items omitted from her disclosure statements were not really hers because they were being used to pay her former husband's debts.

Car bomb kills 31 in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A truck packed with explosives exploded Friday in a crowded business section of the Afghan city of Jalalabad, killing 31 people and damaging cars and buildings, the state-run Kabul radio reported.

It was the third car bomb attack in an Afghan city in as many days.

The radio, quoting Afghanistan's official Bakhtar news agency, said the blast also destroyed 25 vehicles parked in a nearby parking lot and damaged a local theater and 45 shops.

Kabul radio, monitored in Islamabad, blamed "criminal extremist opposition" for the explosion, apparently referring to Afghan guerrillas fighting the pro-Soviet government. It called the attack an "unforgivable crime."

The radio did not mention injuries. The official Soviet news agency Tass reported 33 injured, most of them women, children and elderly people.

Kabul radio said the latest deaths brought to 38 the number of people killed in the three car bomb explosions.

On Wednesday, six people died when a car bomb blew up in Kabul, the Afghan capital, the radio said. Western diplomats reported four dead.

A second car bomb exploded in the capital Thursday, killing one person, the radio said.

No group has claimed responsibility for any of the explosions. Jalalabad, about 70 miles east of Kabul, has been the scene of heavy fighting during the Afghan civil war.

Baseball takes midseason review

By Ben Walker
 The Associated Press

Billy's gone and Mike Schmidt, Gary Carter and Fernando Valenzuela could be going fast. Home runs are way down and so are squawks about balks. Arguments with umpires, however, are up.

The Chicago White Sox are staying home and the Minnesota Twins are winning on the road. The Baltimore Orioles may not be the worst team in history — but they do a good imitation. And the Chicago Cubs will soon be seen in a new light.

Another big story at the All-Star break? Lively arms, not lively balls. Greg Maddux, 22, is tied for the major league lead with 14 victories. He went 6-14 for the Cubs last year. "I was just hoping to get back to .500," he said. "This isn't something I expected."

Roger Clemens, Dwight Gooden and World Series MVP Frank Viola are doing well as expected. So are David Cone, Greg Swindell, John Smiley and John Farrell, all of them 25 and under.

Cone is also among 17 pitchers to take no-hitters into the seventh inning. Ron Robinson, Nolan Ryan, Mike Scott, Doug Drabek, Odell Jones and Tom Browning are in the more exclusive Close Call Club — they've come within three outs of Cooperstown. No pitcher has gotten his no-hitter yet. A lot of pitchers, however, have been stopped for not stopping.

There have been 622 balks, compared to last year's record total of 356, under newly enforced regulations that require pitchers to come to a "discernable" stop in the set position.

The pitchers, though, have been at most partly responsible for a discernable stop in balls leaving the ballpark. In a startling drop — almost as stunning as last season's increase — home runs are off 24 percent. This year, only three teams have gotten to 80, topped by Minnesota's 85.

Carter has heard all the theories. A 10-time All-Star, Carter is in the longest homerless drought of his career. He has gone 149 at-bats without his 300th home run — which would make him only the fourth catcher to accomplish the feat — and is batting .212 since April.

"I go through a slump and everybody wants to get rid of me," said Carter. 34. "I wonder if the guys in Philadelphia are writing about how bad Mike Schmidt is or about how Dale Murphy is slumping in Atlanta. Are they ready to retire Dale Murphy? Are they ready to retire Mike Schmidt?"

Schmidt, 38, has been bothered by nagging injuries and is batting just .234 with six home runs. Murphy, 32, is hitting .220 with 13 homers. Also in a rut is Valenzuela. His 5-6 record and 4.19 earned run average includes a first-inning knock-out, the earliest exit of his career.

Montreal's Floyd Youmans, once a promising young pitcher, was suspended indefinitely by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth for violating terms of his drug rehabilitation program.

Billy Martin is one of five managers who have already lost their jobs. It was the fifth time Martin was fired by New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

Dick Williams, who said before the season that this would be his last year, was fired by Seattle. Larry Bowa, who said he wasn't given enough time, was fired by San Diego.

Atlanta chopped Chuck Tanner and Baltimore bid goodbye to Cal Ripken Sr. Ripken left after the Orioles lost their first six games; replacement Frank Robinson saw Baltimore lose the next 15 and set a major league record with an 0-21 start.

The Orioles are on a pace to win about 50 games. The worst record in modern times went to the New York Mets in 1962 at 40-120.

Dodger's Hershiser unhappy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Orel Hershiser says it's a "slap in the face" that he was the only Los Angeles Dodger chosen for the All-Star Game "because we've been in first place more than any team in the division."

Hershiser's selection was announced Thursday when pitchers and reserves were announced. They were chosen by St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog, who will manage the National League All-Stars next Tuesday in Cincinnati.

Hershiser noted that Herzog's has four All-Stars from his own team, which is fifth place in the National League East, while the Chicago Cubs, third in the division, have six players.

"A fourth (actually fifth) place team has four players?" Hershiser remarked of the Cardinals. "And where are the Cubs, third?"

The Dodgers could have had a second All-Star, outfielder Kirk Gibson, whose name was among those submitted to the league office by Herzog. But Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said Gibson asked not to play in order to rest a sore leg.

It would have been the first All-Star appearance for Gibson, who also turned down a chance to play in 1985 when he was with Detroit in the American League. In his first Dodger season, he leads the club in home runs with 15 and has 46 RBI, 59 runs scored and 15 stolen bases.

Still, Hershiser said there was a Former UNC assistant new Kansas coach

By John Hanna
The Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Roy Williams, an assistant coach at North Carolina for 10 years, was named head basketball coach at defending national champion Kansas Friday. He replaced Larry Brown, who bolted to the NBA.

Bob Frederick, the Jayhawk athletic director, said Williams was chosen because of his reputation as a good recruiter and a coach who emphasizes academics as well as a winning program. Williams was given a four-year contract calling for $78,000 a year.

Williams said he hopes to spend the rest of his career as Kansas, where he became the school's seventh basketball coach. Brown had the reputation of being a nomad because of his frequent job changes.

"My hope is that you don't have to go through another press conference to hire a new head basketball coach for the next 30 years," Williams said.

Williams, 37, said he anticipated no easy task because of the competitiveness of the Big Eight Conference, the loss of All-American Danny Manning and because other schools will be gunning for the defending national champion.

"Following the job Larry Brown did is not going to be something that's easy to do," Williams said.

Originally, Kansas officials said they expected to hire a head coach from another NCAA Division I school to replace Brown. Several big-name coaches withdrew their names or said they weren't interested before Williams was hired.

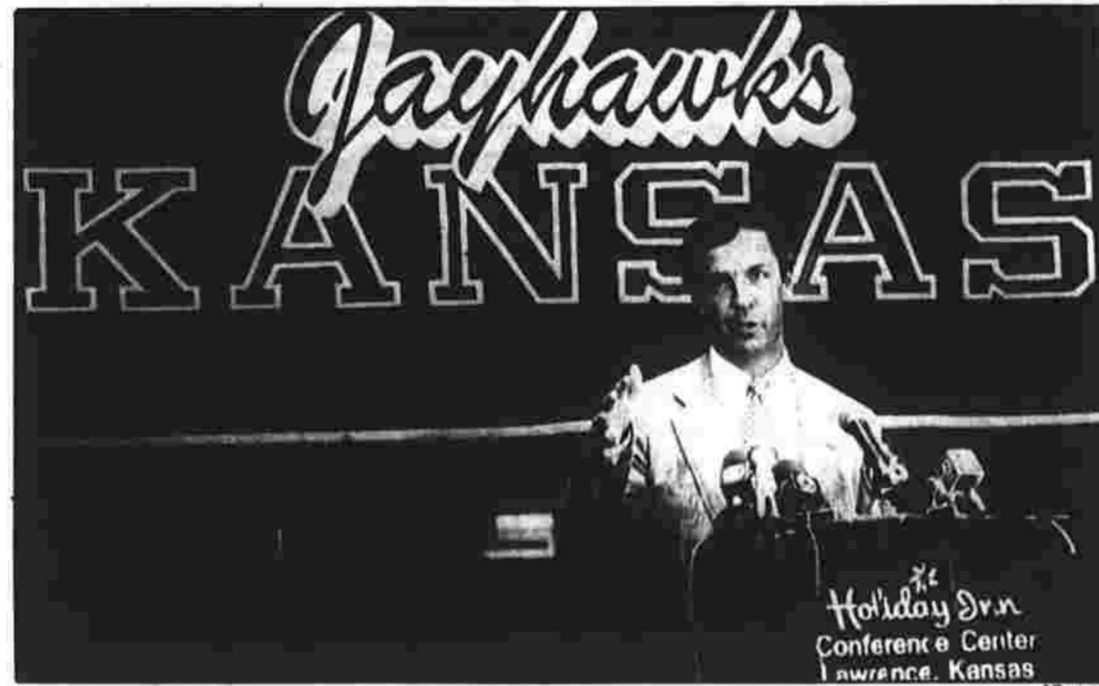

Earlier names included Wichita State's Eddie Fogler, Southwest Missouri's Charlie Spoonhour, Ohio State's Gary Williams and Purdue's Gene Keady.

Frederick said he had no qualms about hiring an assistant coach to take over the Jayhawks.

"That's something I was able to satisfy in my own mind. I felt he could step in and do the job. I don't think I would have considered any assistant other than Roy or other program than the one he was in," Frederick said.

Williams graduated from North Carolina in 1972 and returned as an assistant to Coach Dean Smith after five years as basketball coach at a North Carolina high school.

"Roy is a highly organized person who has all the characteristics of a great coach," Smith said in a

NEW COACH — Roy Williams became the seventh head basketball coach at the University of Kansas at a press conference Friday in Lawrence, Kansas. Williams had been an assistant to Dean Smith at North Carolina since 1978.

statement released at the news conference. "He's played a key role in the success we've had here in recent years. His goal is to be a head coach and he will be an outstanding one."

Williams said his reputation as a strong recruiter may stem from the fact that he stays put and does not move from job to job. Brown has said his reputation as a nomad hurt his recruiting efforts at Kansas.

"I've had the same wife for 15 years, and I've had the same set of golf clubs for 17 years," Williams said.

Brown, who played at North Carolina and was an assistant coach under Smith in the early 1960s, announced June 13 that he was leaving to become head coach of the San Antonio Spurs for reported five-year, $3.5 million contract.

The hiring of the new Kansas coach follows one of the most successful periods in the school's 90-year basketball history. Brown's 135-44 record in five seasons includes one Big Eight title, trips to the 1986 and '88 Final Four and the 1988 NCAA championship.

Frederick said when Brown resigned that he had been thinking for more than a year that he might have to hire a new coach this summer. Brown turned down an offer to coach at UCLA just two months before accepting the San Antonio job.

Frederick acknowledged the advice of Smith, a Kansas alumnus, was an important factor in the school's decision.

UK hoop assistant files suit

By Mike Embry
The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey filed his $8.9 million lawsuit against Emery Air Freight Corp. on Friday, and his lawyer said it was not a ploy to influence the NCAA's investigation of Wildcat basketball.

"I file lawsuits on the basis of lawsuits," attorney Joe Bill Campbell told reporters outside U.S. District Court. "I don't file lawsuits as ploys."

The lawsuit seeks $8,966,950 in compensatory damages and an unspecified amount of punitive damages, charging the company mishandled a package allegedly containing money bound for a basketball players' family.

The suit names as defendants Emery, five of its employees, the security firm that dealt with a package that sparked the NCAA probe, and the head of the security firm.

The lawsuit alleges that Casey's privacy was violated, his character was defamed, information regarding the package was unlawfully disclosed, the package was handled negligently, and Casey suffered "severe and grievous mental and emotional suffering."

Burl McCoy, a Lexington lawyer who represents Emery, told The (Louisville) Courier-Journal late Thursday: "I suspected that he was going to file a lawsuit. If he intends to file a suit, Emery intends to defend it vigorously. We will maintain our position that we have done nothing inappropriate."

On April 14, four of the five Emery employees were quoted in a copyright article in the Los Angeles Daily News.

The employees said they saw $1,000 inside a package Casey had sent to Kentucky recruit Chris Mills' father March 30. The package popped open in transit at Emery's Los Angeles warehouse, the employees said. Casey denied sending the money, and Mills and his father denied receiving it.

Emery employees said the money was resealed in the package and delivered to the home.

The fifth employee was not quoted in the paper, but he has a brother-in-law who worked for the Daily News, Campbell said.

Also named as defendants are Security Experts Inc. and its head, who also was quoted as saying he saw the money.

Campbell said the NCAA again would interview Casey on Monday.

"We told them we'd cooperate and answer any questions they have," he said. "I don't know of anything else they'll be asking Dwane other than the Emery episode."

Campbell had said he was told by NCAA investigator Chuck Smrt last week that "he hoped this interview (with Casey) would wrap it up. Then he said the NCAA would decide whether to issue an official inquiry and continue the probe or completely drop the investigation."

Smrt, reached at NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kan., on Friday, said, "I can't comment on that one way or the other."

Curry captures WBA crown

SAN REMO, Italy — Donald Curry captured the World Boxing Council junior middleweight title Friday night when a bleeding and battered GianFranco Rosi of Italy failed to answer the bell for the tenth round.

Rosi went to his knees seven times in the nine rounds, though two were regarded as slips, before losing the title in his second defense.

It was the second world championship won by Curry. The 25-year-old fighter from Fort Worth, Texas, previously held the World Boxing Association welterweight title.

Curry floored Rosi for the first time in the second round with a sharp left hook that caught the champion on the jaw and sent him down for an eight count.

Curry, who had been knocked out in previous fights against Lloyd Honeyghan and Mike McCallum, seemed to gain confidence from the knockdown.

He began to batter Rosi with a quick, two-fisted attack that stunned the Italian, who seemed confused by powerful onslaught.

Curry's flashy combinations were reminiscent of the style that earned him the "Cobra" nickname.

Rosi went to his knees twice in the fourth round and again in the eighth.

Bleeding from a cut near his left eye, and wobbling from Curry's punishment, Rosi stayed in his corner when the bell sounded for the tenth round.

Curry's handlers hoisted the new champion on their shoulders. "I trained hard for five months to win this title and it paid off," said Curry, who also was bleeding from a cut under his left eye.

"Rosi never hurt me, but I could feel his strength. I was surprised when he quit. But the more I knocked him down, the stronger I got. I could not miss this chance."

The three judges had Curry well ahead on points when Rosi quit.

The 30-year-old Rosi, who won the title from Mexican Lupe Aquino last October, now has a 43-3 record.

He said he hurt his left hand in the second round.

"I knew at that very moment I could not beat a fast boxer like Curry with only the right," he said.

Curry improved to 30-2, with 22 knockouts.

A crowd of 2,000 fans saw the fight at the Portosole, an outdoor arena, in this Italian Riviera resort.

Lakers "feeling out" Moses Malone

WASHINGTON (AP) — The NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers are "feeling out" the possibility of adding free-agent center Moses Malone to their roster, one of Malone's representatives said Friday.

discussed.

"It was just a feeling out type-thing," Austin said. "It was my impression that it was an informal, preliminary call."

Austin said Malone's agent, Lee Pentris, is vacationing in Maine.

Malone, 14-year veteran who will be 34 next season, was told by the Washington Bullets earlier this week that the team is no longer interested in signing him.

The Atlanta Hawks have expressed an interest in Malone, who spent the last two seasons with the Bullets. Atlanta reportedly offered the veteran center a three-year, $6 million contract.

With their current roster, the Lakers would be hard-pressed to sign Malone and still remain within the league's salary-cap.

Allen sets sights on a gold medal

By Ed Schuyler
The Associated Press

CONCORD, Calif. — Darin Allen won a world amateur championship, but he couldn't box his way to the U.S. Olympic Trials.

He needed an invitation. Now that he's here, he feels he can go to Seoul and bring home a gold medal.

The 23-year-old Allen, who has been boxing since 1975, can take a big step in that direction when he fights Anthony Hembrick of the U.S. Army in the 165-pound final.

Allen and Kenneth Gould of Rockford, Ill., who won a world title at 147 pounds in 1986, will compete in two of the six finals Saturday at the Concord Pavilion. Six more will be held Sunday.

The 12 champions qualify for the box-offs July 16 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, where they will meet "most worthy opponents" selected by a six-man committee. If a Trials champion wins, he makes the Olympic team. If he loses, there is another bout the following day, with winner making the team.

"I feel I'm fighting pretty good here," Allen said Friday, which was off-day. "I'm back. A lot of people counted me out. I counted myself out."

"My career went downhill. I had to go all the way to the bottom to get back to reality."

Allen won a U.S. Amateur title in 1985 and a world title in 1986 at Reno, Nev.

"You know fighters," Allen said. "Once they get to a certain peak, their heads get big."

In 1987, Allen lost on a disqualification in the semifinals of the U.S. championships and got outpointed by Hembrick in the semis of the Olympic Festival. However, he twice outpointed Hembrick in the Pan American Games box-off.

Then came a rushing one-round knockout by Angel Espinosa of Cuba in the Pan Am quarterfinals, followed by failure to qualify for this year's U.S. championships.

"A world champion getting beat in the regionals — that's unheard of," Allen said.

He considered quitting.

Wilander upset by de la Pena

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Top-seeded Mats Wilander fell victim to the extreme heat and unseeded Horacio de la Pena on Friday at the $415,000 U.S. Pro Tennis Championships.

Wilander, heavily favored to win the tournament at Longwood Cricket Club, lost 7-6 (7-4), 6-1 on the clay center court, where temperatures were estimated to be well over 100 degrees.

Second-seeded Andre Agassi was scheduled to face Tom Muster of Austria in an evening match.

Wilander, who had defeated the 21-year-old Argentine in straight sets in their only previous meeting in 1986, had won the U.S. Pro championships twice in the last three years.

"He played very well," Wilander said. "He kept me back and he played long and high. I don't think anyone can get used to this heat. Maybe it affected me more than it did him."

Wilander said he would take some time off to rest and practice before representing Sweden in Davis Cup play.

De la Pena set the tone for the match when he broke Wilander in the third game of the first set, and held on to take the tiebreaker in a set that lasted 57 minutes.

He jumped to a 2-0 lead in the second set and, after being broken in the third game, won the next four to secure what he called the biggest victory of his career.

"When I have a very tough match, I try to play steady like this. I try to wait and play my best," de la Pena said.

LL all-stars announced

Oilers edge Firefighters for LL town title

It was a fitting way to end the Little League Town Tournament.

The unbeaten Oilers, the National Champions, hung on for a 3-2 hard-fought victory over the Firefighters, the American League champions, and captured the town title Friday night at Leber Field.

The Oilers ended their magnificent season with a 22-0 record while the Firefighters finished at 19-3. Pitching and sparkling defense — the trademarks of any good baseball team — were exhibited by both sides. The Oilers' Mike Helin was the winning pitcher, he tossed a three-hitter, walked three and struck out six in his route-going performance.

The Firefighters' Keith Carini also went the distance and also twirled a three-hitter. Carini walked four and struck out 11.

The Oilers scored all three of their runs in the bottom of the first inning. Josh Solomonson led off with a walk, Eddie Pinkin grounded into a force play. Scott Scheinblum delivered an RBI-double scoring Pinkin. Helin followed with an RBI-single scoring Pinkin. With two outs, Peter Santos ripped an RBI-double to score Helin with the third run.

The Firefighters scored their two runs in the second. Norm Delaura reached on an error and came around on wild pitch. Keith Carini singled and came home on an RBI-single Pat Cox.

In the Firefighters sixth, Cox led off with a drive to the centerfield fence which was caught by Brendan Prindville. Mike Carr followed with a drive to the left field wall which was corralled by Eric Lang.

Santos also played well defensively for the Oilers while Ray Gagnon played well in the field for the Firefighters.

The Little League All-Star teams have been announced for both the National and American Leagues. The National League will begin play Monday at 6 against the Vernon All-Stars at Legion Field in Vernon. The American League opens up Tuesday night at 6 against the Windsor American

Holtz allegations are ludicrous

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Allegations of NCAA violations against Lou Holtz, the former Minnesota football coach now at Notre Dame, are ludicrous, says Notre Dame athletic director Richard Rosenthal.

A former Minnesota player, Pudgy Abercrombie, claims assistant coach Jim Strong paid him several hundred dollars after Holtz referred him to the assistant. Earlier, a Minnesota special counselor claimed he paid an unidentified player $500 at Holtz's instructions.

Holtz came to Notre Dame in 1986 after two years as the Minnesota head coach. He and Strong, now an assistant at Notre Dame, deny the allegations. Rosenthal said he stands by both coaches.

"Lou has a long history of playing by the rules and doing the right thing," Rosenthal said. "He's indicated to us that the accusations are without merit and without foundation, and we certainly believe it. As far as we're concerned, they're frivolous accusations."

Holtz said he would welcome an NCAA investigation of the matter. Rosenthal says he knows of no NCAA officials on campus yet.

"I am deeply hurt, and I really feel sorry for Notre Dame," said Holtz. "But they've been outstanding. At times like this you really appreciate what Notre Dame is all about."

Abercrombie claims that Holtz sent him to Strong after he asked for money. Abercrombie said Strong paid him a $500 airline ticket from his home in Allouppa, Pa., to Minneapolis before the start of his freshman year in 1985. Abercrombie, a running back, also claimed Strong bought him clothing and paid rent on his apartment.

"Jim is adamant that there's no truth to it," said Rosenthal.

Strong said, "I do not spend that kind of money on my daughter, who I love and who lives in my own home."

LeRoy Gardner, an academic adviser to the football team until his resignation last week, said he paid a player $500 at Holtz's request. Several Minnesota players have alleged they received thousands of dollars from another university official, Luther Darville.

In April, Darville was fired as acting coordinator for minority and special student affairs. Authorities say Darville is being sought in connection with $197,000 in missing university funds and has fled to the Bahamas.

Paul Giel, who was fired Tuesday as athletic director, says he believes his dismissal is related to the Darville controversy.

RACING THE CLOCK — Andrew Hampstead of the United States is in action during the race against the clock in the Tour de France Friday in the sixth stage of the Tour de France.

Dutchman Nijdam grabs Tour lead

QUEHEAL, France (AP) — Jelle Nijdam became the third Dutch rider in as many days to lead the Tour de France on Friday as Britain's Sean Yates won the 32-mile time trial.

After six stages, Nijdam led by one second over Steve Bauer of Canada.

Nijdam finished fourth Friday in the time trial from Lievin to Wasquehal, won by Yates in 1 hour, 3 minutes, 22 seconds with Italy's Roberto Visentini following, 14 seconds behind.

Swiss rider Toni Rominger placed third, 23 seconds back, and Nijdam, Thursday's fifth stage winner, came in fourth, 41 seconds behind the winner.

Nijdam moved into position of overall lead from the 10th spot he held Thursday. The Superconfex team member took the yellow jersey, emblematic of the top position, from another Dutchman, Henk Lubberding. Still another cyclist from the Netherlands, Teun Van Vliet, led from Monday to Wednesday.

Some of the favorites in the time trial were hindered by winds that plagued the later starters. Yates, beginning just after noon, benefitted from his low position in the overall standings after the fifth stage.

Ireland's Sean Kelly and France's Jean-Francois Bernard, both expected to do well in the time trial, trailed, finishing 1:56 and 1:14, respectively, behind Yates.

Saturday is a 138-mile leg from Wasquehal to Reims in the cycling classic which continues through July 24 on a 2,036-mile journey around France.

season with a four-hitter and Bo Jackson hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 4-0 victory over the Yankees on Friday night.

Gubicza, 12-5, allowed only one hit after the second inning, a leadoff double by Bobby Meacham in the fifth. He then retired the last 15 batters. Gubicza, who was named to the American League All-Star team earlier in the week, walked two, struck out six and retired 15 Yankees on ground balls.

New York was the only team in the major leagues not to have been shut out this season.

Jackson's 11th homer came after singles by Kevin Seitzer and Frank White opened the fifth against John Candelaria, 9-5. Jackson hit an 0-2 pitch over the fence in right-center.

Candelaria struck out eight and allowed six hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Kansas City added an unearned run in the sixth. Danny Tartabull was safe on third baseman Meacham's throwing error with one out, took second on Seitzer's single, went to third on Candelaria's second balk of the game and scored on White's single.

New York, which scored only two runs against Texas on Wednesday night despite 13 hits, five walks, a hit batsman and two balks, stranded five runners in the first three innings.

Jose Canseco opened the Oakland fourth with a double, was sacrificed to third by Ron Hassey and scored on McGwire's grounder.

Rangers 8, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pete O'Brien drove in three runs with a homer and double and Scott Fletcher went 4-for-4 Friday night to lead the Texas Rangers to an 8-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Blue Jays 3, Mariners 2

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Flanagan scattered seven hits in seven innings for his 150th major-league victory as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Seattle Mariners 3-2 Friday night.

Billy Swift, 6-6, pitched a complete game but was the loser despite giving up only four hits, all in the third inning when the Blue Jays scored their three runs and erased a 2-0 deficit.

Flanagan, 8-8, had been credited with his 150th victory on June 26 when he beat Detroit but club officials later discovered that they had credited him with an extra triumph last year before he was acquired from Baltimore on Aug. 31.

Phillies 1, Reds 0

CINCINNATI (AP) — Don Carman allowed four-hits in 7 2-3 innings and Milt Thompson homered leading off the eighth as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Cincinnati Reds 1-0 Friday night to snap a five-game losing streak.

Reds starter Jose Rijo, 9-4, had allowed just a third-inning single by Greg Gross when Thompson lined a 1-2 pitch over the right-field fence for his second homer. Thompson had fouled off five two-strike pitches before breaking the scoreless tie.

With one out in the eighth, Barry Larkin walked and one out later Steve Bedrosian relieved Carman, 5-5, and finished for his 15th save.

Rijo allowed three hits over 7 2-3 innings before Rob Murphy relieved.

Although Rijo was stingy with the hits, his early wildness gave the Phillies several chances. Rijo walked the bases loaded in the second and walked two in the fifth, but avoided escaped both jams.

The Reds had a scoring threat in the fourth, when Eric Davis walked and took third on Nick Esasky's one-out single. But Tracy Jones grounded into a double play to end the inning.

Expos 7, Braves 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Bryn Smith pitched a five-hitter and Andres Galarraga singled in the first of four first-inning runs as the Montreal Expos beat the Atlanta Braves 7-1 Friday night for their fifth straight victory.

Mitch Webster and Mike Fitzgerald hit solo home runs as the Expos snapped the Braves' three-game winning streak.

The Expos jumped on Rick Mahler, 5-4, for five consecutive hits to take a 4-0 lead in the first inning.

Webster beat out in infield hit, advanced to second on third baseman Ken Oberkell's wild throw and scored on Galarraga's single.

AL Roundup

CHICAGO (AP) — Ellis Burks hit a pair of two-run homers, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 10-7 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Friday night and a split of the first of consecutive two-night double-headers.

The White Sox won the opener 6-5 as Harold Baines broke out of a 3-for-24 slump with a pair of run-scoring 400-foot doubles and a game-winning RBI single in the seventh inning.

Burks' second home run of the nightcap and 10th of the season keyed a seven-run fifth inning when Boston erased a 5-3 deficit with nine straight hits, one shy of the club's American League record set in 1901.

Reliever Dennis Lamp, 3-3, was the winner with 6 1-3 scoreless innings. Lee Smith yielded a two-run homer to Daryl Boston in the ninth.

The White Sox took a 4-0 lead off Steve Ellsworth in the first inning triggered by Baines' RBI single. Burks homered in the second following Mike Greenwell's leadoff triple and Chicago's Ron Karkovice hit his third homer in the bottom of the inning for a 5-2 lead.

Jim Rice had a sacrifice fly in the fourth off loser Bill Long, 3-4, following a three-base throwing error by third baseman Steve Lyons.

The Red Sox then broke it open in the fifth. With one out, Marty Barrett, Wade Boggs and Greenwell singled for a run and Boggs also scored on right fielder Dan Pasqua's fielding error, tying the score.

Burks' second homer put Boston ahead 7-5 and the Red Sox added three more runs after Steve Rosenberg relieved Long.

Rice singled, Todd Benzinger doubled and Rich Gedman, Kevin Romine and Jody Reed hit consecutive RBI singles, the last off Ken Patterson.

In the opener, the hitting of Baines and Fred Manrique, who hit a two-run homer, helped make a winner of reliever John Davis, 2-2, who pitched two innings and yielded two unearned runs. Bobby Thigpen earned his 16th save by pitching the last two innings.

Boston starter Mike Smithson, 3-3, was the loser despite a career-high nine strikeouts in 6 2-3 innings.

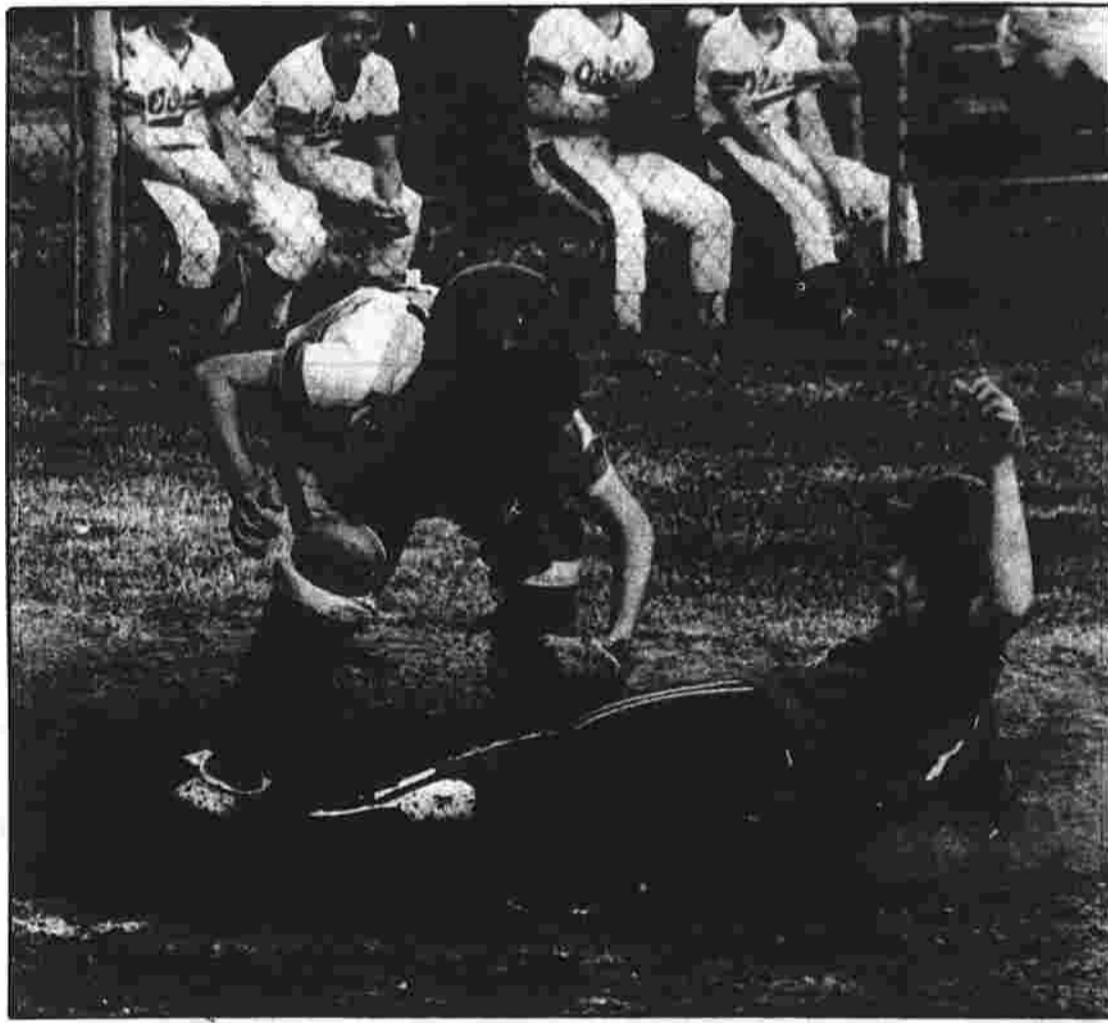

The White Sox blew a 5-1 lead when Boston scored three times in the sixth and once in the seventh. But in the bottom of the seventh, Gary Redus doubled with one out and Tom Bolton relieved Smithson. After Lyons grounded out, Baines singled score Redus.

Baines doubled home the first of two Chicago runs in the first inning. Ozzie Guillen was hit above the right knee with a pitch in the fifth and had to leave the game. Pinch runner Mike Woodard scored on Manrique's third home run of the season. Lyons singled with two out and scored on Baines' second double for a 5-1 lead.

The Astros took a 3-0 lead after two innings on Glenn Davis' RBI single in the first and consecutive run-scoring singles by Gerald Young and Bill Doran in the second.

Doran singled to center field, went to second base on Gooden's balk and scored when Davis lined a single to center field in the first inning.

Rafael Ramirez doubled and rookie Craig Biggio walked in the second inning before the singles by Young and Doran.

Kevin Elster started New York's scoring in the third inning with a triple to right field and scored on Gooden's sacrifice fly.
