'Wrong-Way' returns to right place

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Douglas "Wrong Way" Corrigan returned here today for ceremonies commemorating his famous "wrong turn" in the sky 50 years ago that led him to fly thousands of miles east instead of west, to Ireland instead of California.

His first transatlantic hop as pilot of a $900 monoplane was forbidden by U.S. officials, who said his plane wasn't safe. He said he would fly back to Long Beach, Calif., but somehow he landed in Ireland.

This time around, Corrigan flew as an honored passenger of Aer Lingus, the Irish Airline, on a Boeing 747. He wouldn't say before taking off from New York Sunday night if the true story of what happened 50 years ago might come out while he's in Ireland this time.

When he touched down in Ireland on July 18, 1938, he only had $3 in his pocket and didn't know anyone, Corrigan said in an interview Sunday prior to his late night departure from Kennedy International Airport.

His Aer Lingus flight was delayed for several hours because of rain in New York. When he took off from Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn on July 17, 1938, "it wasn't raining at all," the 81-year-old Corrigan recalled. It took him 28 hours to get to Dublin.

Today's flight took about six hours, and Corrigan did not seem to be suffering from the effects of jet lag when he arrived in Ireland this morning.

"I believe he's in splendid form. We had plans he'd rest for a while but he really wasn't interested in that," said Margaret Coyne, an Aer Lingus spokeswoman in Dublin. Corrigan is staying here as a guest of Aer Lingus, which plans three days of ceremonies.

On his arrival in Dublin a half century ago, Corrigan claimed, "My compass froze. I guess I flew the wrong way."

He has steadfastly maintained he thought he was returning to his home base of Long Beach, Calif., after federal aviation authorities said his used Curtiss-Robin monoplane was too heavy for a safe flight to Ireland.

But Corrigan, of Santa Ana, Calif., hinted recently that his "wrong-way" explanation may change after he arrives in Dublin.

The Bureau of Air Commerce, forerunner of the Federal Aviation Administration, suspended Corrigan from flying for five days after he made his unauthorized flight.

But America and Ireland loved his explanation. After he returned to New York, he received a ticker-tape parade. There was a meeting with President Franklin Roosevelt, and a movie, "The Flying Irishman," starring Corrigan as himself.

Corrigan, a woodworker, was inspired to try aviation when he helped build the "Spirit of St. Louis," which Charles Lindbergh flew across the ocean in 1927. He bought his plane for $310 in 1931 and spent $590 modifying it.

Dukakis, Jackson huddle

'We need Jesse,' says Dukakis before meeting

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson met privately today, trying to seal a show of unity only hours before the opening gavel of the Democratic National Convention. Dukakis, the certain presidential nominee, said, "There is no rift."

Jackson, surrounded by a crush of reporters, walked into Dukakis' hotel saying little except that he was "looking forward to a meaningful meeting."

Sources said the two candidates were expected to negotiate several issues, including Jackson's insistence on playing a significant role in the transition to a Democratic administration if Dukakis wins in November. Dukakis aides said it would be better to deal with that idea after the election.

In a conciliatory gesture Sunday night, Dukakis told a crowded party audience, "We're going to need Jesse, we're going to need all the delegates that are at this convention."

Even so, Dukakis said earlier in the day, "You can't have two quarterbacks. Every team has to have a quarterback. That's the nominee."

Jackson, refusing to act like an also ran, said it was "an illusion" that Dukakis should dominate the convention and declared, "this is not a coronation." He warned he might contest Dukakis every step of the way.

Meanwhile, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen set out to win over those Democrats who would have preferred Jackson for the No. 2 spot on the ticket. Bentsen is making the rounds among state delegations to press his case.

He made a point of including the New Jersey delegation, where there are mixed feelings about the choice of the Texas senator.

"We're not happy with Bentsen," said Assembly-

EPA, Corps take blame for stalemate

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

A resolution of the dispute over a wetlands permit for the town's sewage treatment plant is being held up because officials in each of the two federal agencies responsible for issuing a permit are split on the issue. Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said today.

The town has stopped work on the secondary part of the plant, where wetlands are located, in accordance with a cease-and-desist order from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The town failed to obtain a wetlands permit for that work.

DiRosa said that in the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers there are those who are willing to reach an agreement to allow work to continue on the secondary facility without a permit and others who believe that the town must go through the ordinary process of obtaining a permit.

He said that within the federal Environmental Protection Agency, there are those who want the plant built as planned in order to improve the quality of effluent to the Hockanum River, while there are others who are opposed to construction of the plant on wetlands.

Officials from both agencies are to meet on Tuesday in order to arrive at a common ground in dealing with the town. No progress was reported after a meeting Friday of officials from the town, the two agencies and U.S. Rep. Barbara B. Kennelly, D-Conn.

DiRosa said that Richard Roach, the chief of enforcement for the Corps' New England division, had suggested at a meeting last Tuesday that work might be allowed to continue at the secondary facility where wetlands are located if $1.5 million were spent on the creation of new wetlands.

What does Jackson want?

By Walter R. Mears
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Jesse Jackson is trying to get what he wants at the Democratic National Convention by refusing to say just what it is. That leaves artfully unanswered the riddle that has worried the Democrats all year.

Jackson described his demands in euphonic generalities that, right up to the convention's opening day, defied any settlement with Michael Dukakis, the Democratic presidential nominee in waiting.

That preserved what little suspense remained in the Democratic script. More to the Jackson point, it preserved the losing candidate's role on the convention stage.

Jackson's platform dissent will be played out on Tuesday. His name will be entered in his losing cause on the roll call for presidential nomination on Wednesday night. He isn't saying yet whether he will have it entered again for the vice presidential nomination on Thursday, but it is almost certain somebody will put his name up against Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Dukakis' choice and the certain nominee.

Nonetheless, Jackson says that by the end of convention week, the party will be united.

Dukakis will be in control from tonight's opening gavel. When delegates vote on a major issue, they will vote with Dukakis —

Sons find mom after 51 years

By Marie P. Grady
Manchester Herald

It took Floyd Totten 51 years to find his mother. It was then he realized he had just begun to find himself.

"It was like walking on glass," said Totten Saturday of the moment he saw his mother for the first time. "I still don't believe it."

On Saturday, Totten, who is a foreman at the town of Manchester's Parks and Cemeteries Department as well as a professional clown, and his brother Ron were reunited with their mother Marion Kozar, of Clinton, Mass. The reunion at Floyd Totten's 38 Kensington St. home was the second time this year the sons had seen their mother. It was also the second time in half a century.

When Marion Kozar, now in her 70's, was separated from her first husband Arthur Totten in Hartford in 1937, he received custody of sons Floyd and Arthur. Five years later, Ron Totten, who now lives in East Hartford, also was separated from his mother when she suffered an accident which she said left her unable to care for the child.

The family would not elaborate on the accident, saying only that the sons were separated from their

Thoughts

Many people suffer an ailment for which I must coin a term — "autallergy" — meaning to be allergic to oneself. Have you ever heard anyone say, "I hate myself for doing (saying) things like that"? Or perhaps they will say, "I can't stand myself when I act like that."

I once read of a bride who was allergic to her new husband. Now that is true frustration. And while it is bad news, being allergic to oneself is infinitely worse. There is no way I can escape from myself. It's a life-sentence! Or is there a way I can get away from myself?

Thank God there is a way of escape! "Knowing this, that our old man was crucified with him," Romans 6:3-4. The Apostle Paul concluded that only Christ could deliver him from his "autallergy." Romans 7:25. If you have a low self-image, if you are turned off by yourself, let the Lord cure you of your "autallergy." "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature," 2 Cor. 5:17.

Nuclear plan under fire

Evacuation proposal called 'meaningless'

By Anita M. Caldwell and the Associated Press

Provided there is at least three days advance notice of a nuclear attack, Manchester residents will have to seek cover in Mansfield, according to a revised plan drafted by the state Office of Civil Preparedness.

Other Connecticut residents will have to go to selected towns within the state, according to the plan.

The proposal immediately drew reaction from Ronald Kraatz, health director for the town of Manchester and director of civil preparedness.

Kraatz said that while it is the responsibility of state and local governments to design plans for a nuclear attack, it is done with the hopes that the plans will never be used.

"It doesn't seem to me that any plan is going to be successful," Kraatz said. "You end up with a situation in which you're trying to plan for something so devastating, it's impossible to plan for."

The plan, which replaces one put together in 1977 for 1.3 million people in 82 municipalities to drive or take buses to other parts of the state where they are considered safe from nuclear attack.

The plan is based on theory that tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union would increase slowly enough to allow for evacuation, according to Frank Mancuso, the director of the state office. Mancuso said that because of traffic jams, state planners believe it would take people at least three days to reach a safe haven.

"In a day and a half, if missiles start flying all over heck, there isn't much we can do about it," said Donald Mumley, population protection planner with the state Office of Civil Preparedness.

William Trousdate, a physics professor at Wesleyan University who is a member of the Connecticut Campaign board, termed the plan nonsense.

"If 13 nuclear bombs are dropped on Connecticut, we're going to die," Trousdate said. "It doesn't matter whether you go to Mansfield or stay home in your living room. The difference would be if you went to Mansfield, you would be in a better position before dying from radiation poisoning, rather than dying instantly."

But Mancuso said while the general feeling is that a nuclear war would not be survivable, the state has responsibility to try and save lives and property.

The plan is also designed to meet requirements set down by the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

The agency has identified 13 Connecticut sites it believes would be among the likely targets of Soviet weapons. Those sites include Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks, the naval submarine base at Groton and the ports of Bridgeport and New Haven.

The federal agency has said it will withhold emergency-planning money from states that do not prepare plans. States depend on the money, which totals about $81 million — to prepare for natural disasters.

The agency's position has provoked criticism from government officials, including Hartford's civil preparedness director, Francis R. Danaher Jr.

Joan Buch, a Waverly town council member, laughed when told that residents of eight Connecticut municipalities would be directed to flee to Mansfield.

State officials, however, say there is enough room in Mansfield if the University of Connecticut and the Mansfield Training Center are used to house the estimated 300,000 people expected to be evacuated to the Eastern Connecticut town.

Last hurdle for mall owners over after commission vote

By Nancy Concelman Manchester Herald

After tabling a vote earlier this month on a site plan modification that would allow the expansion of the $70 million Buckland mall, the Planning and Zoning Commission is expected to approve plans tonight.

Several PZC members said at the July 6 meeting they had no problems with the plan, but wanted to wait until the town staff had given plans a final review before the commission vote. The PZC is expected to approve plans tonight.

The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Lincoln Center hearing room.

The mall developers, the Hitchcock Development Co. of Chicago, have proposed to expand the mall building from 785,000 to more than one million square feet. The expansion includes increasing the size of the G. Fox department store by about 75,000 square feet, adding about 111,000 square feet of gross leasable floor area.

The expansion, which involves moving retail space around the mall building inside, would make the building longer.

Homart received approval for the expansion from the State Traffic Commission June 2 but is required to make additional road improvements. The Town of South Windsor has appealed the most recent STC approval, and appeals of two previous STC approvals for expansion are pending.

In addition to the site plan modification to come before the PZC, Homart has modified its open-space plan for the mall site to include 13.89 acres of open space around the mall building with landscaping, sidewalks and park benches.

Also on tonight's agenda is a vote on a North Main Street development of 41 townhouses that fronts Union Street.

The commission tabled a vote on the application for a zone change from Rural Residence to Planned Residence Development and preliminary plan of development for the 10-acre piece after neighbors objected during the public hearing.

Should I help my family or environment?

DEAR BRUCE: My dad and mom have run a successful retail store for most of their married lives. None of my brothers and sisters chose to work with them, although we all worked in the store when we were kids. After college, we all decided to do other things with our lives. However, now my dad is sick and I'm the youngest and only unmarried family member, have been asked to come in and take over. I know the retail business is exciting and fascinating to some people, but not only does it bore me, but it is just not in keeping with my lifestyle. I am currently working for a nonprofit organization whose stated goal is to fight inflation when it damages the environment.

While I'm only making a modest living, I feel what I am doing is right, and it serves a useful purpose. While it is true that everybody needs clothes, I believe that there are enough clothing stores around, so if my family's business closes, the public will not be harmed in any major way.

You may make the point that your siblings have an obligation as well, but they have other family responsibilities that prevent them from leaving their current jobs.

Since there are relatively few capable people willing to work for very modest salaries, it would seem to me that you are giving up little in going back and helping out your folks during their crisis.

You should make it clear to them that you are there on a temporary basis. Tell them you are willing to devote a year or two to see if your dad is able to come back to work or, alternatively, to prepare your mother to run the store herself, hire outside management or, indeed, sell the operation.

It seems to me that you owe your parents some loyalty. Trust me — when your obligation to your family is through, abuses of the environment will still be occurring. There will be plenty for you to do in the future.

Madonna's dress stolen

NOVI, Mich. — Madonna, the star of "Who's That Girl?" may be wondering "Where's my dress?"

A hand-sewn dress of powder blue chiffon worn by the pop singer in the video "True Blue" was stolen Friday from a mall featuring a rock memorabilia exhibit sponsored by MTV, the cable TV music channel.

"It was a great thing to do," said Chuck Lutz, manager of MTV's Museum of Unnatural History tour.

Phyllis Morasco, general manager of the mall, said security guards were patrolling the mall when the theft occurred around closing time Friday night.

The thief apparently broke into a plexiglass display case, popped open a frame holding the dress and stole it, leaving behind a napkin signed by Elvis Presley and letter written by Paul McCartney when he was a member of the Beatles, officials said.

Free tickets given

ESTORIL, Portugal — Fans of rhythm and blues singer Ray Charles got a financially profitable proposition when Charles had to cancel a show: complimentary tickets to a concert by crooner Julio Iglesias.

Charles was unable to reach Portugal for Sunday night at the Estoril Casino, but Lisbon after his plane developed mechanical problems in Toulon, France.

Concert promoters said ticket holders could still attend the dinner and floor show that was to have preceded Charles' performance at the Casino.

Many answer casting call

WATERBURY — A casting call for extras to appear in a Jane Fonda-Robert DeNiro movie drew thousands of people, apparently unfazed by the earlier controversy that surrounded plans for the movie.

The choice of Waterbury for some scenes in the MGM movie sparked protests earlier this year from veterans upset about Miss Fonda's visit to Hanoi in 1972 during the Vietnam War. But Miss Fonda met with the veterans in June and apologized for her trip to Hanoi.

Designer leaves film

SHREVEPORT, La. — Two-time Academy Award winner Gene Callahan has left his job as production designer for the movie "Steel Dawn."

Callahan confirmed that he's left the film but refused to comment on reports that his departure came as a result of differences with the director, Herbert Ross.

Callahan won Academy Awards for set decoration on "The Hustler" and for production design on "America, America." A production designer is responsible for every aspect of a film's decor and set construction.

Thursday is fertile night

NEW YORK — NBC entertainment chief Brandon Tartikoff says Thursday night is a fine time for couples anxious to start a family.

"It's the most fertile night on TV," Tartikoff said in this week's issue of People magazine.

As proof, he cited several actresses who have become pregnant in real life while performing on NBC Thursday night shows, including Meredith Baxter Birney on "Family Ties" (since moved to Sundays), Rhea Perlman and Shelley Long on "Cheers," Phyllis Rashad on "The Cosby Show" and the latest, Lisa Bonet on "A Different World."

Red Skelton collapses

HONOLULU — Red Skelton collapsed during a benefit performance, but returned to the stage as the audience sang "Happy Birthday" to the veteran comedian- clown who turns 78 today, an organizer of the event said.

Skelton, overcome by heat and humidity, collapsed into the arms of the sound crew as he left the stage 90 minutes into his two-hour outdoor performance Sunday night, said Lynn Cook, executive director of the March of Dimes Chapter of the Pacific.

"I'm really not feeling well. I'm going to have to leave you," Skelton told the audience before he collapsed, according to Mr. Cook.

Comedian Milton Berle, who turned 80 last Tuesday, came up from the audience to take over the microphone as his wife, Ruth, and Skelton's wife, Lotian, rushed backstage.

Tornado damage is surveyed

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — The devastation from tornadoes that turned parts of Iowa into a disaster area, damaging 10,000 homes and injuring 94 people, is drawing federal officials here today to assess the situation.

For the third night in a row, the Iowa National Guard remained on duty early today to enforce a curfew intended to prevent looting. Thousands of residents remained without power.

"To see that kind of devastation and not have more personal injuries or more serious injuries, I think we can just count our blessings," Brantstad said Sunday after touring the area.

Officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency's regional office in Kansas City planned to tour Council Bluffs today to assess the destruction.

Council Bluffs Mayor Tom Hanafan said Sunday that losses to residences and commercial buildings totaled $16.5 million. Insurance adjusters projected the overall damage figure would reach $20 million to $25 million. A thunderstorm packing 82 mph winds and up to four funnel clouds skipped over downtown Omaha on Friday afternoon before one funnel touched down briefly on the Interstate 480 bridge that spans the Missouri River, connecting Omaha and Council Bluffs.

Within minutes a tornado slammed into a 700-square-block area of western Council Bluffs, severely damaging at least 160 homes, uprooting 100-foot trees, downing power lines and upending scores of railroad cars. Officials estimate the city lost 30 percent of its trees.

Larry Allen, chairman of the Potawatomi County Board of Supervisors, estimated 18,000 homeowners will file insurance claims for damage caused by the tornadoes.

"I think we were a whisper away from a major catastrophe," Omaha Mayor Walt Callender said.

The governor said the disaster declaration will make the county eligible for state and federal relief. He said damage estimates would be presented today to FEMA in an attempt to speed relief to victims.

Hanafan said round-the-clock work likely would continue through Wednesday to clear trees and return traffic lights to working order.

The mayor said some minor looting was reported, but he downplayed the incidents and said no arrests were made.

The area of the curfew, which was in effect since Friday, was reduced to a section of about 100 square blocks Sunday. Earlier it covered most of the northern half of the city.

Hanafan said the $16.5 million loss figure is what city officials plan to file with the FEMA. It includes only residences and commercial buildings.

POPE ON VACATION — Pope John Paul II walks along a log bridge over a mountain stream over the weekend in Lorenzago, Italy, near the Austrian border, where he is on vacation.

He said Mass at a mountain-top shrine on Sunday and preached tolerance in the area, which has long been troubled by ethnic tensions after being separated from defeated Austria after World War I.

4 GI's are wounded in Honduras attack

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Four U.S. soldiers were recovering today from wounds sustained when a carload of men hurled bombs and fired guns at a group of off-duty American servicemen in a discotheque parking area.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Charles Barclay said no group had claimed responsibility for the attack, which occurred at about 1 a.m. in Honduras' second-largest city.

Barclay, in a telephone interview, said the four soldiers wounded in the attack were taken to a military hospital in Tegucigalpa. He said the Embassy officials refused to identify them until their families were notified.

A U.S. official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the wounded men "were out of danger." He did not elaborate.

The soldiers were on leave from Palmerola Air Force Base, 41 miles northeast of the capital of Tegucigalpa, and were in civilian clothes and carrying no weapons at the time of the attack, Barclay said.

"The American soldiers were on a one-day recreation trip to San Pedro Sula," he said.

They were leaving the nightspot's parking lot in a civilian vehicle rented from a Honduran company when the attackers threw small bombs and opened fire from inside another car in the parking lot, U.S. officials said.

Endangered deer in Florida too cute for own good

BIG PINE KEY, Fla. (AP) — The gentle key deer who inhabit the Florida Keys are so cute it's killing them.

Emboldened by handouts from well-meaning residents, many of the Bar-mesque creatures have been run over by cars while crossing highways in search of food.

The smallest species of white-tailed deer in the nation, the endangered animals roam among the ever-increasing houses on this island, nibbling rocks, homeowners' plants and flowers — and begging for snacks.

A few days ago, a young one was eating our tomatoes. I went out to take his picture and he trotted over to me for a handout," said island resident Grace Manillo.

"They'll sit there and be cute and beg for food. They'll eat anything. It's the deer's undoing — you can love them to death," added Deborah Holle, manager of the National Key Deer Refuge.

The deer, about 2 feet tall and 70 pounds when fully grown, will even munch marshmallows and potato chips, said Holle.

"We have one herd fed junk food daily. We noticed two of them with the worst coats we've ever seen."

Iran accepts U.N. plan to end war with Iraq

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said today that it will accept a U.N. resolution calling for an immediate cease-fire in the nearly 8-year-old war with Iraq, which has claimed an estimated 1 million lives.

Iran also said it will not withdraw its troops from its borders and called on Iraq to accept a cease-fire.

The announcement came one day after President Saddam Hussein of Iraq cited his country's recent string of battlefield victories and urged Iran to accept an "honorable" peace.

In a message to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Iran said it accepts cease-fire Resolution 598 in the "interests of security on the basis of justice," the official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

In a report mentioned in Nicaragua, the news agency said the General Command of the Iranian Armed Forces announced in Tehran that the government was accepting the cease-fire resolution.

Iran did not say when the cease-fire would go into effect. There was no immediate reaction from Iraq, which has already accepted the resolution, which was passed on July 20, 1987.

The United States maintains a fleet of 27 ships in and around the Persian Gulf to protect neutral shipping from war-related attacks. In Washington, the State Department said it would have no immediate comment on Iran's statement.

Tehran, in announcing its acceptance of the cease-fire, said it had been portrayed as "warmongering Muslims before world public opinion."

The statement said the cease-fire acceptance was part of a strategy of defending the Islamic Revolution that toppled the government of Shah Reza Pahlavi in 1979.

In the past three months, Iraq has recaptured nearly all the territory it lost to Iran over the past six years. There has been no official casualty toll in the war, but foreign analysts put it at more than 1 million.

The war has prompted a heightened U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf.

Confetti disco is frequented regularly by U.S. military personnel. San Pedro Sula, is 125 miles north of the capital. The injured were taken to a hospital in San Pedro Sula and later flown to Palmerola.

Maj. Wood said about 150 soldiers were on the one-day leave and that all returned to Palmerola as a precautionary measure.

The United States has maintained a varying number of American troops in Honduras since the leftist Sandinistas seized power in neighboring Nicaragua in 1979.

Holle said the deer have always prompted Holle to spend $20,000 from the refuge budget for extra Monroe County Sheriff's deputies to ticket speeders on nearby roads. But she fears more of her 250 precious wards may die on the highway.

"The refuge was established in 1957 to save the 50 deer that remained then. In 1967, the deer received endangered species protection, and by 1978, the population grew to about 400. Now it's dwindling again, mostly because of development that destroys habitats and brings cars," says Holle, who spends $2 million a year to add land to the refuge.

But she fears her efforts may not save the deer from extinction. "They have a very low reproductive rate," says Holle.

Not dangerous - but it looks bad

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son-in-law was the same eating utensils that his dog does. He's a very clean and nice person, but this looks terrible. What can I tell him that would stop this habit?

DEAR READER: If your son-in-law washes the utensils between uses, I see no health reason why he and his dog shouldn't share plates, knives and forks. If he doesn't wash them, I'd worry about his gastronomic preferences, because dried dog food is not particularly tasty.

I think that your son-in-law is probably old enough to make his own decisions about hygiene. Why bother yourself about his preferences? If he is good to your daughter, brings home his paycheck, helps put a roof over their heads and doesn't lift his leg on the furniture, what difference does it make that he uses kiddies as snacks? Now, if his dog drinks out of the Waterford crystal or insists on using a linen tablecloth with a full place setting of your grandmother's sterling, you've got a problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 76, and, as a young person, was uncomfortable with anyone who had epilepsy. Five years ago I had my first seizure and was treated with Dilantin, although I did not have an EEG until last month. Please tell your readers that epilepsy is not a mental condition and that people with epilepsy can lead normal lives.

DEAR READER: People with epilepsy can lead normal and productive lives. The condition, which is physical, not mental, is readily treatable with anticonvulsant medicine. You are correct in stating that epilepsy is an illness, not an emotional disorder.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A few months ago I had a transurethral biopsy to remove the prostate gland because of a blockage. I can now sleep for five hours at night, but still urinate every 15 to 30 minutes during the day. I drink 24 ounces of regular coffee and 24 ounces of regular cola daily.

DEAR READER: You are taking in a tankard of caffeine that is probably acting as a strong kidney stimulant. In addition, you're consuming a whole of a lot of fluid in your coffee and cola. Cut down to maximum of two cups of coffee a day, enjoy a soft drink as an occasional snack and see if your daily urine flow diminishes to a more normal level. I think that 48 ounces of caffeine-containing beverages are the reason for your problem.

Wife's toothless grin proves her husband's good nature

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Revolted in Maine," whose husband refused to wear his dentures. She said, "Looking at him is offensive, and watching him eat is unbearable." Believe me, if that's the only thing wrong with him, she's a very lucky woman. I think she wants more out of her marriage.

I'm 71 and Abe is 78, and we've been married for 45 years. I don't wear my dentures, either, and I haven't worn any for more than 10 years. I had four sets made by four different dentists and I couldn't wear any of them, but I didn't give up. I went to three more dentists, and the last one told me to quit wasting my money because there are thousands of people like me who just can't adjust to wearing dentures, no matter what. Eating without teeth is no problem for me. There are only two items I can't eat — raw carrots and nuts.

I'm a lousy cook and a worse housekeeper, but Abe never complains. He takes me out for dinner every night and says he doesn't care how I look, as long as I feel good.

WORRYING ABOUT THE CHILDREN

Catastrophic coverage: good, bad and ugly

The latest tax law is one of the most important laws to go into our nation's books in many years. It stretches out to include Social Security, Medicare, taxes, a host of other things. In many ways it's a law that helps while it hurts and hurts while it helps it can be summarized as being good, bad and ugly.

The good: Starting in 1989, Medicare will cover an unlimited number of days of hospitalization. Today, you (or your relatives) have to pick up part of the daily cost after 90 days of hospitalization. That's what's more, there's a cap of 150 days.

The bad: The annual deductible cost goes up. Today, the deductible amount is $1,000. It will be $1,500 in 1989. Next year it will be at least $564.

The ugly: Catastrophic coverage is going to cost more and cost big. Even worse, it's going to cost the middle class the heaviest. In a complete departure from previous methods of financing Medicare you will be paying an income tax you never paid before to finance this coverage. And it can be a whopping income tax.

Now go to the next step: doctor bills and the like.

start paying 50 percent of the cost of most prescription drugs that you pick up from your pharmacy. These are not now covered.

The bad: Fifty percent of expensive prescription drugs is payable. Actually, many states have much more liberal programs on prescription drugs for their Medicare recipients.

The ugly: In addition to the other cuts (such as increased Medicare "B" premiums, a hefty income tax wall, and cost-sharing on prescriptions) the IRS came up, in some peculiar manner, with a $600 deductible on prescription drugs.

Perhaps the ugliest of all parts of this new catastrophic health coverage law is what it does not cover. It does not cover the cost of nursing homes, and that's the cost that drives families to despair.

Good news: The new health law allows a couple to keep more assets and income in the family and still qualify for Medicaid coverage.

Before nursing home residents can qualify for Medicaid, they and their spouses generally must first apply their own savings and other assets toward the cost of care. They are allowed to retain (1) their home, (2) personal effects, and (3) a minimum amount of other assets. What the new law basically does is increase the minimum amount of other assets the

AGROGRAPH

Your Birthday

July 16, 1988

In the year ahead you might find yourself looking for ways to put your resources to work. There will be opportunities available, but each one must be screened very carefully.

CANCER (Aine 21-July 22) People who depend upon you will be extremely disappointed and angry if you do not fulfill your commitments. Do not leave matters of this kind until the last moment. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A matter of consequence might not come off in a way that lives up to your expectations today. Treat the situation philosophically, not angrily. (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial or commercial ventures could be a bit tricky today. Do not take anything for granted. What appears to be a sure thing could misfire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're likely to be more fortunate today doing things or your own than with a partner whose opinions aren't in harmony with yours. Avoid dead weight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) Although you will be ambitious and energetic today, your productivity could be affected if you try to do more than you can comfortably manage. Don't put yourself under pressure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) One of your close friends has a chip on the shoulder today, but the bark is worse than the bite. Don't take the comments to heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) To get others to do things for you today, you must ask in ways that aren't dictatorial or demanding. If you come on too strong, your pleas will be ignored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might be tempted to retort sharply today to a guy who thinks he's right about everything. He'll be wrong as usual, so just pass it off.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today, be careful that another does not make a commitment on your behalf without your authorization or knowledge. It will be a person with whom you are closely involved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It could be self-defeating today if you are too assertive in dealings with associates. Try rather than opponents.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let minor issues distract you from your primary target today. If they are given too much attention, they could obscure your objective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Lady Luck could be a bit fickle and impatient today. If you're not prepared to act when she's ready, she might desert you and go elsewhere. Move quickly.

Untold stories of '84 Olympics

By Rick Worner
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — While television cameras focused on the leaders, filmmaker Bud Greenspan zeroed in on the last-place runner in the 5,000-meter final at the 1984 Summer Olympics.

Dave Moorcroft was the world record-holder at the distance, but injuries had destroyed his chances of winning in Los Angeles.

As Moorcroft fell farther and farther behind, Greenspan told his cameramen to focus on the British runner.

"They said, 'Are you sure? He's last,'" Greenspan recalled. "And I said, 'I know, just do it. They thought I was crazy.'"

Like a fox, Moorcroft's battle to avoid being lapped by the winner, Said Aoutia, is one of the memorable moments in "16 Days of Glory," Greenspan's six-hour documentary on the 1984 Games. It will be broadcast in one-hour segments on public television beginning Wednesday night.

The film features such well-known athletes as gymnast Mary Lou Retton, track star Carl Lewis and diver Greg Louganis. What makes it special, however, are the athletes and stories that were ignored or slanted in ABC's vast coverage of the 1984 Games.

"I'm just interested in winners," Greenspan said. "Often, the losers make a better story."

Greenspan, 61, has chronicled both in his career.

Heisman Trophy to the early days of baseball

He also has written several books and recorded 19 spoken-word albums.

But his main passion is making movies about the Olympics.

Greenspan and his late wife, Cappy, won Emmy awards for "The Olympiad," television series, "Wilma," his 1977 TV movie on the life of Olympic champion Wilma Rudolph, got rave reviews and high ratings. And he's just completed his latest Olympic project, the official film of the 1988 Winter Olympics.

Greenspan's love affair with the Olympics began with the 1968 Games in London.

One of the competitors that year was Karyl Takacs of Hungary, a former pistol shooting champion whose right hand — the one he shot with — was shattered by a grenade in 1958.

"He was so despondent he contemplated suicide," Greenspan said. "But in 1948, there he was in London, and he won the gold medal in pistol shooting. He had learned to shoot with his left hand."

"That's THE KIND of human-interest story that excites Greenspan and gives his Olympic series a distinct flavor.

"16 Days of Glory" includes segments on Japanese judo champion Yasuhiro Yamashita, who overcame a painful leg injury to win a gold medal; U.S. runner Henry Marsh, who competed in the steeplechase with a serious viral infection, and American swimmer John Moffet, who hurt his leg while qualifying for the 100-meter freestyle.

"I'm interested in people, not statistics," Greenspan said. "I don't care about 10.2 dashes and .365 batting averages. I'm a storyteller. I want to make a connection between the athlete and the audience."

"16 Days of Glory" reflects Greenspan's

idealistic view of the Olympics

The Soviet bloc boycott is mentioned only briefly as is the controversial Mary Decker-Zola Budd collision. In the women's 3,000-meter race, Decker fell after tripping over Budd's trailing leg as the South African runner moved in front of the American. Greenspan prefers to shine his spotlight on Marica Pulca, the Romanian runner whose victory was overshadowed by Decker's fall.

"I'm not naive. I know about the politics and the controversy," Greenspan said. "But I would rather concentrate on the athletes and the competition. That's what I do best."

IT TOOK YEARS of research, a first-rate crew and a million feet of film to make the 1984 Olympics film.

"Logistically, it's like putting together the Normandy invasion," Greenspan said. "You do as much pre-production as possible, but a lot of it is never used. We threw out about 80 percent of the stuff we filmed before the Games."

While Greenspan waits the TV premiere of "16 Days of Glory," he is busy working on two other Olympic programs — a documentary on the 1936 Berlin Games and a television special that follows teen-age athletes as they trained for the 1988 Games in South Korea.

Despite tight security in Seoul, some people are afraid the Games could be marred by terrorism or student riots. Greenspan, who just returned from the South Korean capital, said the fears are unfounded.

"It's safer than Central Park," he said.

NO VERDICT — Richard Crafts listens Friday as a mistrial is declared in his trial for murder. He is accused of killing his wife.

Juror says Crafts may have been framed

By Larry Rosenhol
The Associated Press

PRESTON — Warren Maskell Jr., the holdout juror who forced a mistrial in the so-called wood-chipper murder case, said Saturday that he believes Richard Crafts is innocent of charges he murdered his wife.

A day after he brought the sensational trial to an abrupt halt after 17 days of deliberations, Maskell said Saturday suspicious gaps in the perfecting evidence and mistakes that seemed too clumsy for such a "perfect crime" led him to conclude Crafts did not kill his wife.

"I truly believe that Richard Crafts is innocent. I am not God. I cannot look at a person and tell if he's guilty," Maskell said at his Preston home, sweating profusely and chain smoking as he answered reporters' questions. "They missed the bag, they missed the chain saw and they missed the blade. Then, two days later, they find this..."

What also seems strange to him is that man does the perfect crime and leaves the name of the victim all over the place."

Another juror, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Maskell on July 9 indicated a willingness to find the Eastern Airlines pilot guilty, but he changed his mind after a weekend break.

"He said he thought he could vote guilty but that he felt he would be more comfortable if he could go home and sleep on it," the juror said.

When Maskell returned to the jury room last Monday, "he had changed his mind," the juror said. "I was in 11-1 in favor of conviction, the juror said. A unanimous verdict is needed to convict or acquit."

"What also seems strange to me is that man does the perfect crime and leaves the name of the victim all over the place."

Maskell was the only member of the jury not to vote in favor of finding Crafts guilty of murdering his Danish-born wife, Helle, in 1986, and disposing of the body with a wood-chipping machine. He had been the lone dissenter in eight jury votes since Monday.

"I think somewhere along the line, someone had to do this man wrong," Maskell said at his Preston home, sweating profusely and chain smoking as he answered reporters' questions. "They missed the bag, they missed the chain saw and they missed the blade. Then, two days later, they find this..."

What also seems strange to him is that man does the perfect crime and leaves the name of the victim all over the place."

Maskell, who was injured when he rolled his truck after deliberations on the night of July 1, said that when he returned to deliberations other jurors "told me that was God telling me I should change my vote."

The holdout juror said that he was relieved that the ordeal had finally ended for him.

"I wanted freedom. I wanted to get home with my wife and my son. I knew that there was 11-1 in favor of conviction, but I didn't believe like I did," he said. "Last night I slept better than I slept for a week."

On several occasions, Maskell brought notes to the jury room he had apparently made the night before at home, the juror said.

Maskell was guilty by a 10-2 vote when the entire panel is present, when the trial was in its 15-week trial concluded with a mistrial, the juror said.

"I can't even explain how I feel," the juror said.

More than 100 witnesses and 650 exhibits were presented during the trial, which was moved to this southeastern Connecticut town from Danbury due to pre-trial publicity.

The case was believed to be the first murder prosecution in the state without a body. Prosecutors presented body fragments, including a partial, crowned tooth, as evidence of the death of Crafts' wife.

Mrs. Crafts, a flight attendant for Pan American, was initiating divorce proceedings against her husband when she disappeared Nov. 18, 1986, following her return home after an overseas flight.

Crafts has been held on $750,000 bond since his arrest Jan. 13, 1987. His defense attorney, J. Daniel Sagarin, said he would seek a substantial reduction in his bond next week so that he can be freed from prison.

State's Attorney Walter Flanagan had previously indicated that he would retry Crafts if necessary, but he declined to discuss his plans Friday night and would not talk at all about the case Sunday.

FORCES MISTRIAL — Flanked by sheriff's deputies, Warren Maskell is escorted from Court Friday. Maskell is deflected Judge Barry Schaller's order to return to the courtroom for an adjournment, forcing the judge to declare a mistrial in the murder case.

STATE & REGION

Boat explosion

MILFORD — A Bradford man remains hospitalized after being injured when an explosion ripped through a 25-foot sailboat on the Housatonic River.

Peter Berdon, 52, of Bradford was listed in stable condition Sunday at Yale-New Haven Hospital where he was being treated for a burn and a fractured leg suffered in an explosion that burned the boat down to a foot above the waterline, police said.

"How it blew up I don't know," Coast Guard Petty Officer Kenneth Hill said. "But it burned just about down to the waterline. There was about a foot of boat left above the water."

A second man injured in the explosion, John Ellison, 26, whose address was not immediately available, was treated for minor injuries at Bridgeport Hospital, police said.

UConn can live with its budget cuts

GROTON (AP) — University of Connecticut officials say they will probably have to revise the $190 million budget they've adopted, but said they don't think the cuts will be severe.

University officials said they would have to revise the 1989-90 budget to meet cuts requested recently by Gov. William A. O'Neill.

"We don't see this as doomsday. We think the state revenue picture will improve," UConn President John T. Casteen III said. "Connecticut remains the most prosperous state in the country."

The $190 million budget, which includes a $19 million increase in spending, had been prepared before the governor said last week that all state agencies should cut spending by 10 percent.

Under the proposed budget, tuition for undergraduates from Connecticut would increase by 7 percent from $1,430 to $1,640, while tuition for out-of-state undergraduates would rise by 15.7 percent, from $5,660 to $6,520. Those figures would not be affected by the anticipated revisions, Casteen said.

The tuition increases and the budget must be approved by the state Board of Governors for Higher Education and the General Assembly.

Aside from dropping requests for an estimated $15 million in new programs and positions, "I don't know how we will scale back," Casteen said.

Insurers say AIDS testing is a boon to the industry

HARTFORD (AP) — Consumers filling out insurance coverage applications are being put under increasingly stringent tests, insurance officials said.

Just a few years ago, a consumer could buy several hundred thousand dollars of life insurance by answering medical questions on an application, without submitting blood or urine tests.

But with the growing concern about acquired immune deficiency syndrome, companies being required AIDS antibody tests before they will issue policies, insurance officials said.

Yale now spends $11 million a year on electricity from UI, about 2 percent of the utility's total business.

NEW HAVEN — Yale University is looking into building its own power plant — a move that could cost United Illuminating Co. its second largest customer.

The university's upcoming $90 million tax-exempt bond issue includes authorization for two six-megawatt gas-fired units that would provide Yale and Yale-New Haven Hospital with all of their heating, cooling and electricity.

Yale now spends $11 million a year on electricity from UI, about 2 percent of the utility's total business.

NEW HAVEN — The former finance director of the New Haven Housing Authority has pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia to embezzlement and mail fraud charges stemming from his misuse of funds at the New Haven and Philadelphia housing authorities.

Anthony Andoh, 45, formerly of Hamden, had pleaded innocent earlier this year to six counts of embezzlement and four counts of mail fraud for allegedly embezzling more than $250,000 from the two housing agencies.

In a plea-bargain, Andoh pleaded guilty Friday to one count of embezzlement and two counts of mail fraud and faces a maximum 20 years in prison when he is sentenced Aug. 26 in federal court in Philadelphia.

450 signatures back 'Holy Land'

WATERBURY (AP) — Despite the presence of bulldozers at Holy Land USA, a spokesman for the owner of the shrine says plans are to restore the park to its original state.

Jerry Raimo, a spokesman, says the owners hope to restore part of the shrine, which features a 52-foot cross overlooking Waterbury.

Admirers of the facility have gathered 450 signatures urging that the site be restored.

The petitions will be presented to Gov. William A. O'Neill and Waterbury Mayor Joseph A. Santopetro, said Majorie A. Trachtenberg, a folk art student at Eastern Connecticut State University who formed the Committee to Preserve Holy Land.

The committee also hopes to obtain a court injunction to prevent any demolition at the site, she said Sunday.

The 17-acre replica of Palestine, whose admirers call it the only environmental art in Connecticut and one of 10 folk art centers in the country, has fallen victim to vandals and the elements in recent years. Several statues have been headed by vandals. Weather has knocked down one of the statues.

Holy Land, built in the 1960s by John Greco, a city resident and devout Roman Catholic, has been closed since 1984.

Its owner, the Catholic Campaigners for Christ, has expressed concern that the damage has created a public safety hazard and that some buildings may have to be razed.

A spokesman for the Archdiocese of Hartford said the Catholic Campaigners are raising money for the project, but supports "the spirit of the organizers" in their effort to save the structures.

Yale now spends $11 million a year on electricity from UI, about 2 percent of the utility's total business.

NEW HAVEN — The former finance director of the New Haven Housing Authority has pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia to embezzlement and mail fraud charges stemming from his misuse of funds at the New Haven and Philadelphia housing authorities.

Anthony Andoh, 45, formerly of Hamden, had pleaded innocent earlier this year to six counts of embezzlement and four counts of mail fraud for allegedly embezzling more than $250,000 from the two housing agencies.

In a plea-bargain, Andoh pleaded guilty Friday to one count of embezzlement and two counts of mail fraud and faces a maximum 20 years in prison when he is sentenced Aug. 26 in federal court in Philadelphia.

Yale seeks own power

NEW HAVEN — Yale University is looking into building its own power plant — a move that could cost United Illuminating Co. its second largest customer.

The university's upcoming $90 million tax-exempt bond issue includes authorization for two six-megawatt gas-fired units that would provide Yale and Yale-New Haven Hospital with all of their heating, cooling and electricity.

Yale now spends $11 million a year on electricity from UI, about 2 percent of the utility's total business.

Sewer charge dispute stalls 8th pact

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald
A dispute over the town's sewer charges to Eighth District customers stalled an accord over fire and sewer jurisdiction between the two governments by a so-called Monday deadline.
But the directors of the Eighth Utilities District decided Monday night to postpone going out to bid on a new firehouse for at least another week to give negotiators more time to work out an agreement. Under the proposed agreement, the district would buy the town-owned fire station in

Jackson on stage tonight

'Upbeat speech' to stress unity
ATLANTA (AP) - Michael Dukakis, firmly in control, yields center stage tonight to Jesse Jackson for a speech certain to ignite a thunderous rally at the Democratic National Convention. He'll deliver an upbeat speech, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Dukakis' running mate, predicted today.
Democratic leaders including Bentsen, the man who got the No. 2 spot Jackson sought, were all emphasizing unity today. Before Jackson goes on, delegates will debate several platform planks that Jackson wants changed, but agreements to disagree without anger apparently have been worked out.
"I think it's going to be a good debate, but I don't think it's going to be divisive and I don't think it will be rancorous," Rep. Bill Gray, a Jackson supporter closely involved with platform deliberations, said today on NBC-TV.
Bentsen, in an interview on CBS-TV, showed no concern about platform differences being aired on television tonight. "If they bring these issues to the floor, well that's the way conventions are supposed to go," he said.
Asked on NBC if he expected Jackson's address to have a theme of unity, he said, "I certainly expect it will be an upbeat speech."
Jackson, the runner-up reluctant to quit, was given 22 minutes - starting at 10:21 p.m. EDT - to address the 5,372 delegates and alternates, following a video tribute to his campaign and his cause.
"The tone has to do with bold leadership," Jackson said, previewing his remarks. "That's what we need: new direction, sound ideas and American must never surrender to be bigger and be better."
Both Dukakis and Jackson will have their names put in nomination for the presidency but it will be Dukakis who stands at the podium Thursday night to claim the prize.
With his rival wielding overwhelming power, Jackson struck a gentleman's agreement on platform disputes, agreeing to withdraw 10 of 13 minority planks he championed.
Party sources said Dukakis would instruct his delegates to vote down Jackson's call for higher taxes on the wealthy and no first use of nuclear weapons, and that Jackson's call for a Palestinian homeland would be debated and then withdrawn without a vote.
In a convention fine tuned for television viewers, the Democrats set aside their customary wrangling over rules and credentials - adopting reports from those committees in a blink of an eye - and brought forth humorist Garrison Keillor and a bevy of sixth graders to recite the Pledge of Allegiance and sing the National Anthem.
The convention opened - on time - with attacks on the record of the Reagan administration and the competence of George Bush, the certain presidential nominee of the Republican Party.
Texas State Treasurer Ann Richards, the keynote speaker, said Bush, in eight years as Reagan's vice president, "hasn't displayed the slightest interest in anything we care about. And now that he's after a job he can't get appointed to, he's like Columbus discovering America. He's found child care. He's found education."

Time to mark great invasion

ON THE AIR - Orson Welles reads his script during a performance of his famous radio play "War of the Worlds."
WEST WINDSOR, N.J. (AP) - The 50th anniversary celebration of the "War of the Worlds" broadcast, Orson Welles' radio play about an alien invasion that terrified America, was launched with "Martian punch" and a song.
Welles and his Mercury Theater created a sensation the night of Oct. 30, 1938, with their broadcast based on H.G. Wells' tale of a Martian invasion of Earth. Despite disclaimers it was fictional, the realistic-sounding broadcast on CBS created a nationwide panic.
The "invasion" began at Grovers Mill, chosen at random by scriptwriter Howard Koch, and residents of the hamlet in West Windsor Township near Princeton have been reminded annually of its dubious place in radio history.
In the coming months, the group organizing the celebration hopes to remind the world of the broadcast, heard by an estimated 6 million people, and the role it played in redefining radio's power.
The Fiftieth Anniversary Commemorative Committee for War of the Worlds Inc. began the festivities Monday with the debut of "Over The Airwaves, The Ballad of Grovers Mill."
The song, written locally, opens with a brief excerpt from the Halloween broadcast, then relates the blurring of the line between reality and fantasy that brought "panic in the streets."
"On the other side of Grovers Mill, there's a pond where the water glows. What landed on that Jersey site, I'm sure nobody knows," four women in leotards sang as reporters listened.

Thompson backs Workshop jobs

State legislators are working to restore shortfalls in the state Department of Mental Retardation budget that threaten up to 12 jobs at the Manchester Workshop and possibly 400 jobs throughout the state, state Rep. John Thompson says.
"We're not going to cut back funds that the (DMR) commissioner said would be cut," Thompson said Monday.
He said he was committed to employment programs for the mentally retarded.
In early July, DMR officials announced a $1.2 million deficit in the DMR community work services budget. The DMR said the shortfall was a result of a cutback in federal monies, an increase in the program's cost and an estimated state budget that was too low.

War may end but more die

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The Iran-Iraq war could be halted within a week, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar predicted after Iran accepted a U.N. cease-fire plan. But the belligerents were fighting again today.
Iraqi warplanes attacked a unfinished nuclear plant and other Iranian industrial targets today, Iran said a day after revealing itself in announcing it would accept a year-old U.N. resolution calling for a truce in the 8-year-old war.
The conflict has claimed an estimated 1 million lives. Iraq said it shot down three Iraqi jet fighters today and Iraq said it downed two Iranian warplanes. But both sides claimed their planes all returned safely to base.
Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency also said Iraqi air raids near the city of Ahwaz in Khuzestan province killed and injured an unspecified number of people and inflicted some damage.

Iraq, which already has accepted terms of the resolution, on Monday expressed skepticism about its rival's abrupt about-face.
Baghdad said the reversal may have been prompted by "tactical considerations."
