FLAGS AND SIRENS — Thomas E. Landers Jr. and his bride, Ellen Burns, leave St. Bridget Church in a fire truck owned by Eighth District firefighter Mark J. Sevetz. Landers, who is president of the Eighth Utilities District, and Burns, a district director, were married Saturday morning.

Fire siren sounds off as Landers, Burns wed

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

It wasn't quite Prince Charles and Lady Di, but the Eighth Utilities District had its own "royal wedding" this weekend.

Eighth District President Thomas E. Landers Jr. married District Director Ellen Burns on Saturday morning in St. Bridget Church, as more than 200 people watched, wept and witnessed.

After the Rev. Emilio Padelli pronounced the union to be both holy and legal, the couple stepped into their coach — in this case, a long, bright red fire engine — and drove off. They were sent forth to the "music" of the alarm from the Eighth District Firehouse, next door.

Over the past few months, Landers and Burns have been reluctant to answer reporters' questions about their approaching nuptials. Today, however, Landers was more expansive, saying that about 225 guests attended the ceremony and a dinner-dance at The Jester's Court on Tolland Turnpike.

It was very conventional, nothing out of the ordinary, he said. The only unusual touch was the fire engine, he said, a 1985 American LaFrance truck owned by district firefighter Mark J. Sevetz. "It was brought up one day, and since my fiancée and I were both firefighters, it seemed like a nice touch," said Landers.

Landers said Sevetz operates Same Day Fire Department, a private business which brings the fire truck to weddings and parades.

Today Landers was at work at his landscape firm, but said he and his wife will be taking a honeymoon. He would not say when or where.

And he was mum about the couple's future plans. "We're going to get a place somewhere in the Eighth District, let's just leave it at that," Landers said.

Sewer plant fine OK'd

DiRosa won't reveal the penalty until negotiations end

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Town and federal officials have reached an agreement on the amount of money to be paid in fines and other costs for illegal work on the town's sewage treatment plant, Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said today.

DiRosa said he expected an agreement could be reached by late this afternoon even though other details of the settlement had yet to be worked out this morning.

"I think there are just some details as to which party will do what when," he said. He would not disclose the amount of the fine or the other costs.

DiRosa said last week that he thought it was possible a settlement could be reached by today. The dispute centers on the town's failure to get a wetlands permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for work on the secondary part of the sewage treatment plant.

A proposal for the town to pay a $1.5 million fine to the Corps for illegal work on the plant was rejected by the town last week, and sources have said that Assistant U.S. Attorney Frank Santoro subsequently offered to cut the fine to $500,000.

Corps officials have said that a $1.5 million fine would be the highest levied in New England and could be the highest levied nationwide.

U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said today that negotiations were "ongoing," but he couldn't say whether an agreement would be reached today.

"I'm optimistic that we will be able to reach an agreement this week," he said.

DiRosa could not be reached for comment this morning. Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Werbner would not speculate today on when an agreement would be reached.

Asked how a decision would be made on the amount of money to be paid for a fine, Twardy said that "a lot of different factors" would have to be considered.

Director Ronald Osella said that federal officials "have to extract their pound of flesh" to show that they are treating developers and municipalities that violate wetlands regulations in an equitable manner.

"According to Peter DiRosa, an acceptable fine would be zero," Osella said. But what level would be acceptable to the Board of Directors, I don't know."

Director Geoffrey Naab would not say whether the town has a limit in mind for the size of fine it would be willing to pay.

"I can't comment on that — I won't comment on that," he said.

He said the motive behind the $1.5 million fine originally proposed was "to send a signal all over the country that you'd better get your permit."

Laurie Prytko can see the fruits of her success in shredded lettuce heads and assembled engine parts. She can measure progress in loaves of bread and piping hot Big Macs.

But she really reaches nirvana every time another one of her retarded clients says, "I got a job."

In the eight years since Prytko left a job as a process engineer for Pratt & Whitney to become executive director of the Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens, the clientele at the MARC Workshop has tripled, and the profits from a MARC run bakery and thrift shop have more than doubled, helping the workshop to fund $800,000 worth of its $1.8 million budget.

More than half of the 142 clients have left institutions or the comfort of their families for community living arrangements. Nearly a third are employed in jobs ranging from convenience stores to machine shops to fast food restaurants.

The apparent success story of the Manchester Workshop comes at a time when the state Department of Mental Retardation is coming under increasing criticism from advocates for the retarded. Two department budget shortfalls that threatened as many as 400 state-supported jobs for the retarded and the opening of several new group homes resulted in unprecedented demonstrations by the retarded themselves. Those shortfalls have since been corrected.

Gumshoes zero in on beach wastes

By Robert Dvorchak
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lt. Tony Rossano, one of 13 city sanitation cops, sifts through syringes, blood vials and other disgusting debris, hunting for the culprit who's dumping the infectious medical waste tainting beaches in five states.

"It's like the detective work on a murder case," Rossano said. "We're doing interviews, surveillance, followup. Just good old-fashioned police work. We trace every marked item we can."

These gumshoes of garbage look for names, dates and places so they can zero in on the offending source. But most of the seaborne slop, carried by the whims of tides, currents and winds, either has no markings or waterlogged labels are unreadable.

More than 1,000 items of medical waste, most of it syringes used to inject insulin or illegal drugs, have been bagged in an evidence trailer. Under particular scrutiny are people who were caught dumping before.

"There's reason to believe we can identify the bad actors who are illegally dumping," said Brendan Sexton, head of the city's Sanitation Department.

"It looks like repeated dumping by a smaller user," said Marlene Gold, who heads the Sanitation Department's en-

IRA bomb kills one at London barracks

By Maggie Jackson
The Associated Press

LONDON — An explosion and fire ripped through a two-story army barracks in north London early today, killing a soldier and injuring nine people, authorities said. The IRA claimed responsibility.

In a message to the Northern Ireland bureau of the British news agency, Press Association, the outlawed Irish Republican Army said its guerrillas laid a bomb in the Inglis barracks in the wooded Mill Hill neighborhood.

Police had said there was no immediate indication the 7 a.m. explosion was caused by a bomb.

The barracks border the Finchley parliamentary constituency of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, a prime IRA target.

Two major hospitals in the area, Barnet General and Edgware, reported admitting a total of nine injured, including one who was in an intensive care unit.

London Ambulance spokesman Chris Webb had said initially that 10 people were injured. He said the dead man was a soldier.

Anti-terrorist police rushed to the barracks and sealed off the area after the explosion, which could be heard more than two miles away, ripped through a brick single men's dormitory block, the army said.

Soldiers dug through rubble to rescue several of the injured who were trapped by falling masonry.

One soldier was rescued after being trapped for more than 30 minutes. Col. William Butt, commander of the postal section of the barracks, said the soldier was saved by a radiator that shielded him from falling bricks and debris.

Butt said most of the injured had burns or neck and back injuries.

The blaze was under control two hours after the explosion, although pockets of flames remained late in the morning, said London Fire Brigade spokesman Michael Whitty.

Police Roundup

Teen arrested at nightclub

A Windsor teen-ager was arrested Sunday at a teen-age nightclub after police said they found two double-edged knives in his vehicle. Frankie Hernandez, 17, of 225 Willowcrest Dr., was arrested and charged with two counts of having weapons in a motor vehicle, after police were called to Checker's Lounge near the corner of Adams and Olcott streets, police said. A group Hernandez was with refused to leave the premises at closing time, police said.

Police subsequently checked Hernandez's vehicle, where two, double-edged knives were found, police said. One had a nine-inch blade, while the other had a five-inch blade, according to the report. Hernandez also was charged with misuse of registration after the license plates found on his car, a four-door Buick LeSabre, were found to be registered to a person with a two-door Monte Carlo, police said.

Hernandez will appear in Manchester Superior Court Wednesday. He was released on a $500 surety bond.

Man sprays officer, arrested

A 40-year-old Manchester man was arrested Friday after he charged a police officer with water after a dispute with his neighbor over a fence, police said. Bruce Gaunya, 31 McKee St., was charged with disorderly conduct and threatening after he verbally abused construction workers and his neighbor, Lynn Corona of 18 Dougherty St., police said. Corona was having workers construct a fence on her property, but Gaunya said the fence was partially on his property, police said.

After police and town Zoning Enforcement Officer Thomas O'Marra, who was called to the scene by police, informed Gaunya that the fence was on Corona's property, Gaunya said he was going to dig holes on her land, police said. Police left the scene after advising Gaunya not to dig the holes, but were called back about two hours later, police said. Police had been called back after workers and witnesses accused Gaunya of spraying workers with his sprinkler and dumping gravel off their truck, police said.

While police were there a second time, Gaunya began yelling at the workers, police said. He was then issued an infraction ticket totalling $68 for public disturbance, police said. Gaunya then asked police whether he'd again be able to water his property, and was advised by police that he could as long as he did not spray Corona's property, police said. He then turned his sprinkler on the high setting, and sprayed a police officer who was standing on Corona's property, police said.

Gaunya will appear in Manchester Superior Court on Wednesday. He was released on $1,000 non-surety bond.

Accident injures motorcyclist

COVENTRY — A North Windsor man was seriously injured early Sunday morning when the motorcycle he was riding went out of control on Dally Road and struck a car and house, police said. Police said that John J. Connor, 39, was traveling northbound on Dally Road at about 1:36 a.m. when he failed to negotiate a right turn. No charges were filed against Connor, but police said that he were "probable in the future."

Connor was taken to Windham Hospital, where he was listed this morning in critical but stable condition with multiple injuries, a spokeswoman said. Critical but stable condition means that a patient's prognosis is questionable but his or her vital signs are stable. Connor was not wearing a helmet at the time of the accident, police said.

Thoughts

The list of negative effects of beverage alcohol is lengthy and so well publicized that I feel no need to repeat it here. And it is extremely difficult if not impossible to find any positive effects, any redeeming qualities. In view of this acknowledged imbalance of virtues, it is disheartening to observe that product's evergreening increase in production, sale, and use.

But there are encouraging blips along the way. Some 20 years ago the granddaughter of the founder of Miller Brewing Co. of Milwaukee disposed of her 53 percent alcohol holdings because of a newly found spiritual persuasion that it was not morally right for her to continue to profit from such a business. Such profound conviction in the business world is rare indeed. In fact, any of us might ask ourselves: "When did I last forego a profit (or other advantage) because its means violated my conscience?"

King David once uttered a deep conviction: "I will not sacrifice to the Lord my God burnt offerings that cost me nothing." — 2 Samuel 24:24. Acting in violation of one's belief is dishonest, and the Apostle Paul enunciated this principle in Romans 13:33 — whatever is not of faith is sin. A persuasion worth having will be expensive at times.

Manchester trash haulers try to regain dump rights

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

A Manchester trash-hauler that lost its dumping privileges at the East Hartford landfill for non-payment of bills has paid more than one-third of what it owes and should eventually be granted dumping rights, said an East Hartford official.

ANCO Inc., of 260 Tolland Turnpike, paid $5,600 of its $14,924 overdue bill for dumping privileges at the East Hartford landfill Wednesday, said Bill Kennedy, East Hartford director of public works. The East Hartford landfill is part of the Connecticut Resources Recovery Authority, which serves 44 towns throughout the state, he said.

Once the company pays the remainder of the fine, it will be granted CRRA dumping rights, Kennedy said. But ANCO will be ordered to dump at CRRA's Hartford facility, though it will be up to Hartford to give final dumping approval, he said. As of the first of the month, area commercial dumpers who use CRRA's East Hartford facility were ordered by CRRA to begin dumping in Hartford to better facilitate dumping, Kennedy said.

East Hartford officials will meet with ANCO officials on Tuesday to discuss payment of the remainder of the fine, he said. O'Connor Jr., superintendent of highways and sanitation. Both companies operate offices at 260 Tolland Turnpike.

Admiral General Manager Angelo Squillante said today the company only owes CRRA $11,000. He said he has asked CRRA to show him proof that his company owes $52,000, but CRRA, which charges $35 a ton for trash disposal, has not answered his energy issues, he said. "All we're asking for is a fair accounting (procedure) instead of a computer printout," he said.

Robles gets GOP nomination against 'country club' Kennelly

By Anito M. Caldwell
Manchester Herald

WEST HARTFORD — Mario Robles, a 33-year-old Republican from Windsor, has been nominated to challenge U.S. Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-Hartford, in the First Congressional District. Robles was nominated in a convention Saturday at Sedgewick Middle School.

Robles repeatedly referring to Kennelly as "Country-Club Kennelly," Robles told the 40-member audience, including 13 Manchester delegates, that Congress needs a representative for the "working people."

"The working people are not represented by the country-club Democrats," Robles said. "They pretend to understand what living from paycheck to paycheck is all about." Robles's speech was flavored with humor and emotion and more than once the audience responded with applause and laughter.

"I'm not a Lord & Taylor Republican," he said. "I'm a K mart Republican."

Robles, an engineer, says most U.S. legislators do not have the technical expertise to make decisions about energy issues and the environment or defense and the development of the space program.

"The politicians' incompetence and negligence cause the space program to go to pot," he said. Congress must realize you can't build a space program the way you build a car, he said.

Besides taking a firm stand on continued development of the space program, Robles believes strongly in nuclear power and defense.

However, some at the convention said his strongest appeal is his stand on the work ethic and the plight of the working class.

Herschel Klein, former Congressional candidate, said Robles' strong conviction on getting better representation for the working people will gain him the greatest support.

Several Manchester delegates agree. Carroll Johnson-Matton and Mary Willhide, both alternate delegates, said they were moved by Robles' speech and believe his interest in the working people will "hit home."

"He's gonna give Kennelly a good fight," Mary Willhide said.

Carberry gets GOP nod in 2nd

NORWICH (AP) — Glenn Carberry, a 33-year-old Republican from Norwich, has won the Republican nomination for the 2nd Congressional District race against four private advocates.

Carberry, who was unopposed, told delegates at the district convention Saturday that Gejdenson has forsaken his responsibility to represent the people of the 57-town district in eastern Connecticut and instead pursued a private agenda.

Gejdenson's record on the war on drugs, defense, the budget and campaign spending limits. Gejdenson, 40, has represented the 2nd District since 1980. He was born in Germany and immigrated to the United States with his family in 1950. He served two terms in the state legislature.

Inspection shows no mill odor

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The third inspection of a Manchester grain mill last week revealed no violations, two days after the mill was reprimanded by the Department of Environmental Protection, a DEP official said.

Michael Ciszewski, a senior air pollution control engineer, said that his Wednesday inspection of the mill owned by the Central Connecticut Cooperative Farmers Association revealed no violations.

On Monday, Ciszewski inspected the mill at 10 Apol Place in the morning and the afternoon and gave owners a notice of violation because the mill emitted an objectionable odor in the afternoon. He said he detected the odor while on North Elm Street about 200 and 300 feet away from the mill.

But he said, "There was no odor problem (Wednesday)."

Ciszewski said Emanuel Hirth, general manager of the mill, has had his workers clean up the area. The area was swept and garbage was picked up, he said.

Ciszewski said the cause of the odor was grain in the loading area and the roof area of the mill.

Even with the cleanup, the DEP plans to inspect the mill periodically and the prior violation is still on record, Ciszewski said. The mill has about 26 days remaining to respond to the notice of violation, and if the problem is not corrected to the DEP's satisfaction, a fine could be levied, he said.

The mill had not received the notice in the mail, Hirth said Friday. Once it does arrive, the company does plan to respond, he said.

"I didn't even get it yet," he said. "I can't respond to anything I didn't get."

The Democratic State Convention

Beating Weicker will be 'tough but doable'

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

Connecticut Democrats closed ranks behind Attorney General Joseph Lieberman's candidacy for U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker's seat Saturday as 22 Manchester delegates took front row positions.

The 22-member Manchester delegation sat at the front of the Civic Center in Hartford and listened attentively while Lieberman was lauded, nominated, and endorsed by acclamation to wage what supporters and the candidate himself said was an uphill battle.

They joined in the celebration of unity that marked the first part of the day-long convention when the speeches all stressed the party's tradition of resolving its internal differences and joining to win election. Later, the Manchester delegation cast a ballot.

Cummings said Democrats would be campaigning hard for members of the Democratic National Committee.

Manchester delegates said that Lieberman will have a tough fight ahead of him to unseat Weicker, whose maverick style has given him broad appeal to both moderate Republicans and Democrats.

Manchester Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. gave the Lieberman battle a rating of "C" on a difficulty scale of 1 to 10.

"Joe knows he's got an uphill battle," said DiRosa. "But even though he's got an uphill battle, he can win."

DiRosa predicted that Lieberman would gain ground on Weicker in the coming months.

Theodore R. Cummings, Democratic Town chairman, and one of the Lieberman campaign coordinators in the 1st Congressional District, said of the possibility of a Lieberman victory, "It's tough but doable."

Cummings said Democrats would be campaigning hard for the attorney general. "We'll do what we've always done... phone banks, leafleting, advertising and mailing."

His son Theodore T. said, "I think Joe Lieberman is a people's person and a people's politician. I don't think that Lowell Weicker at all represents the people of Connecticut."

John Sullivan, Democratic State Committeeman said, "It's going to be a very difficult one."

He also predicted that Lieberman's popularity would rise.

Henry Kelsey, one of two Bolton delegates, said if Lieberman is elected, "We will get more from our junior senator than we ever got from our senior senator."

Many area delegates said that the momentum of the presidential campaign of Democrat Michael S. Dukakis and his running mate Lloyd Bentsen will have a major effect on state races.

"I think that (national race) is going to be the key," said

Theodore T. Cummings. Sullivan said, "If Dukakis does well, it'll help us too."

In his keynote address to the convention, U.S. Sen. Chris Dodd issued a call for unity, saying the Democratic Party is "more united, more together, than we have been in 20 years."

"Once the dust has settled, we will be together, we unite," Dodd said.

"Joseph Lieberman is going to make me the senior senator from Connecticut," he added.

Gov. William O'Neill, who has had differences with Lieberman in the past, made reference to some of those in his nominating speech.

He said, "Have Joe and I always seen eye to eye on every issue? No, we haven't. Is that a bad thing? Of course it's not. In fact, I believe it to be a great asset of this Democratic Party that we are made up of diverse views and differing opinions and that the strength we achieve through frank discussion and compromise is far more potent than that of a party which attempts to conceal its differences."

Speeches seconding the Lieberman nomination were made by New Haven Mayor Biagio DiLieto, State Sen. Margaret Morton of Bridgeport, and State Rep. Miles S. Rapoport of West Hartford.

In his acceptance speech, delivered by video tape, Lieberman, who conceded he is underdog in the campaign, said, "I couldn't be more confident that this is going to be a year of change. This is going to be a Democratic year."

"We're going to elect our friend and neighbor Michael Dukakis as the next president of the United States."

"And, I know as a new Democratic senator, working with the Democratic majority in the United States Senate and that Democratic President, I'm going to be able to do more for the people of Connecticut on the day that I'm sworn in than Lowell Weicker has done for more than a decade."

The party unity that accompanied Lieberman's nomination was in sharp contrast to the division that marked the battle over the election of three people to the Democratic National Committee last night.

Sullivan was busy on the convention floor during the morning keeping track of the lineup of votes in the national committee battle. Later, Sullivan's candidate, William O'Brien, who was backed by Gov. William O'Neill, defeated incumbent John Flynn for one of the three posts on the Democratic National Committee.

Democratic delegates from Manchester and most nearby towns backed William O'Brien and thus Gov. William O'Neill Saturday, in a bitter contest for the election of Connecticut's three members to the Democratic National Committee.

O'Brien's win over incumbent John J. Flynn was seen by political observers as a clear victory for the governor, who endorsed O'Brien over Flynn.

Flynn had the backing of the entire Congressional delegation as well as most leaders of the General Assembly.

It was also seen as setback for the liberal wing of the Democratic Party in Connecticut.

Flynn, who had supported Toby Moffett in his 1986 effort to wrest the gubernatorial nomination from O'Neill, was ousted from the committee along with incumbent Mary Sullivan.

John Sullivan of Manchester, a Democratic state central committeeman, led the floor fight for O'Brien, who won the seat with 87 votes to Flynn's 49. O'Brien today credited both Sullivan and Theodore R. Cummings, Democratic Town Committee chairman, for providing the support that helped him win.

Earlier, he and several others were doing what they do best — pumping hands and flashing signs to would be supporters of O'Brien Sullivan was floor manager of O'Brien's campaign.

The race between incumbent John Flynn of Avon and O'Brien was enough to bring the spotlight to the eyes of some delegates. Henry M. Kelsey, a Bolton delegate and chairman of that town's Democratic Town Committee, said, "I think it's more interesting than this convention usually is because of the contest for the national committee."

the defeat of Flynn proved especially gratifying. After the vote was tallied, Penny said "John Flynn had abused his office in sending his troops out against me."

Penny was referring to the 1983 local election in which members of the United Auto Workers campaigned against him. He was re-elected to the Board of Directors but Weinberg was the high vote-getter in the party and became mayor.

In a retrospective view of his political career after he decided not to run for re-election in 1987, Zinsner said his defeat as mayor was largely due to the lobbying by the UAW, which accused him of union busting in his practice as a lawyer.

Meanwhile, Sullivan said after the O'Brien victory, "I feel good." O'Brien had said it was Sullivan who urged him to run.

Sullivan told a reporter that when he persuaded O'Brien to seek the post, Sullivan told him, "You've got two votes, you and me. All you have to do is get 654 more votes."

When O'Brien led a group of supporters in a march around the convention hall, he was arm in arm with two Manchester delegates, Alphonse Reale and John DiDonato.

"I has been a long road. I'm very happy I want to thank all that supported me, including the state AFL-CIO."

In thanking her supporters, Cambi said "Our differences are never as great as our differences with the other party."

The Glastonbury delegation cast 8 votes for Cambi, 2 for Flynn, 11 for Kelly, 9 for O'Brien, and 3 for Sullivan.

Columbia cast 2 for Cambi, and one each for the other candidates. Coventry cast 4 for Cambi, 1 for Flynn, 3 for Kelly, and 4 for O'Brien.

Bolton cast 1 for Cambi, 2 for Flynn, and 2 for Kelly. Andover cast 1 for Cambi, 1 for Flynn, 1 for Sullivan.

Hebron cast 3 for Cambi, 3 for Kelly, and 3 for O'Brien. South Windsor cast 9 for Cambi, 1 for Flynn, 9 for Kelly, and 8 for O'Brien.

Tight Meotti-Zinsner fight forecast

By Marie P. Grady
Manchester Herald

State Sen. Michael Meotti, D-Glastonbury, will have to wage a hard campaign to keep the seat he wrested from three-term Republican Senator Carl Zinsner two years ago, according to area delegates who attended the Democratic State Convention Saturday.

Meotti, who was nominated at a convention of the Fourth Senatorial District last week to run for re-election against Zinsner, didn't argue that point.

"I expect a vigorously fought campaign," he said.

His words echoed those of Manchester delegates, including Democratic Town Chairman Theodore R. Cummings and his son, Theodore T. Cummings. Most delegates interviewed described the Meotti-Zinsner race as a neck-and-neck battle.

"I don't think he's got a very good chance," said the younger Cummings.

While Meotti said in an interview at the convention he didn't want to focus on his opponent, he took the opportunity to respond to remarks Zinsner made Friday.

Zinsner said his defeat as mayor was largely due to the lobbying by the UAW, which accused him of union busting in his practice as a lawyer.

Meotti won the senate seat in 1986 with 17,776 votes to 16,998 votes for Zinsner. He received 9,110 votes in Manchester to Zinsner's 9,124. The 4th Senatorial District is composed of Bolton, Columbia, Glastonbury, Hebron, and Manchester.

the one he talks about and the other one."

"If he's going to challenge someone's integrity, he better have the facts," said Meotti.

Meotti, co-chairman of the Environment Committee of the General Assembly, said he would emphasize environmental issues and the need for proper waste disposal in his campaign. Zinsner has already chosen as campaign issues forced busing to desegregate schools and the projected, state budget deficit.

The Republican opposes forced busing and blames a $100 million state deficit projected for next year on the Democrats.

Meotti said he thought Zinsner was "clouding the issue" on forced busing, adding that no one, including state Education Commissioner Gerald Tirozzi, has recommended that parents be forced to bus their children to desegregate schools.

"I don't think the answer is where people go to school. It's the quality of the schools they're in," Meotti said.

Oil spills in harbor

STAMFORD (AP) — A barge loaded with more than 760,000 gallons of No. 2 heating oil sprung a leak after hitting a rock in Stamford harbor, spilling 150 to 200 gallons into the water, authorities said.

The rock punctured a hole about the size of a quarter in the barge's bottom, said John Wolfe, the city director of emergency management.

The barge, owned by Reinauer Transportation Cos. of Staten Island, N.Y., was delivering oil to Genovese Industries Inc., a fuel oil and building material company, when the mishap occurred about 4:30 a.m. Sunday, Wolfe said.

Genovese contained the spill by encircling it with a boom and it was largely cleaned up by late Sunday afternoon, Wolfe said.

Prosecutors convene

FARMINGTON (AP) — Thanks to federal and state grants, about half the state's prosecutors are expected to attend a nationally recognized program on drunken driving and vehicular homicide.

The state Division of Criminal Justice could afford to send only a handful of prosecutors over the past three years to the program, so this year Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly has brought the program to Connecticut.

About 75 prosecutors are expected to attend the three-day conference coordinated by the Traffic Institute of Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. It was scheduled to begin today at the Farmington Marriott Hotel.

Kelly said only 13 prosecutors have been able to attend the conference in the past three years, when it was held in Chicago and other out-of-state locations. The cost exceeded $1,000 for each person, Kelly said.

Fonda aids fund-raiser

MIDDLEBURY (AP) — About 2,500 people donated $27,000 at a fund-raiser for victims of Agent Orange herbicide, according to new figures released by a spokesman for actress Jane Fonda.

Steven Rivers said the money raised Friday at the Quassy Amusement Park will go to the Brandie Schieb Children's Fund, named after a Winsted girl, the daughter of one of Connecticut's most decorated Vietnam veterans, who suffers from serious birth defects because of her father's exposure to the defoliant.

The fund's leaders say an estimated 64,000 children nationwide suffer birth defects linked to Agent Orange. Initial estimates said about $10,000 had been raised at the event Friday.

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — A police crackdown on drug dealing in Middletown's low-income housing projects has generated complaints from some residents that officers are harassing innocent people in an attempt to root out drug dealers.

"You can't even sit out on your doorstep without getting your picture taken," said Nick Haggard, 22. "If you've got a nice car they figure you must be dealing or something. If you're driving a rented car, they think you stole it."

Police reject the accusations by Haggard and others, saying the only people they are bothering or photographing in the projects are those involved in the drug trade.

Night court may ease jail crowds

By Brent Laymon
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The "Night Court" portrayed on television is the zany twilight zone of the criminal justice system, but Connecticut officials are hoping a night court can alleviate one of the state's most serious problems: jail overcrowding.

The state Judicial Department is looking at the feasibility of operating a night court in Connecticut to arraign suspects arrested at night and on weekends. Judge Aaron Ment, the state's chief court administrator, said during a recent interview.

Ment stressed that a night court is several years away because of the added expense at a time when the state is facing a fiscal crisis.

It would also require renegotiating union contracts and perhaps a change court in rules to allow magistrates to arraign suspects, he said.

What we are really trying to do is look at it from a long-range point of view and then make decisions based on fact rather than supposition," Ment said.

But judicial officials satisfied at themselves that a night court could operate smoothly on July 8, when judges, prosecutors, sheriffs and other court workers stayed into the evening in Hartford Superior Court for the arraignments of six people arrested at a protest of Greyhound Lines Inc.'s policies toward handicapped riders.

In 1987, pretrial detainees accounted for only 17 percent of the inmate population.

Carbone attributes the growth in the pretrial population to an increase in drug arrests and community pressure for tougher enforcement against certain crimes, such as drunken driving.

Many of the inmates will remain in jail until trial because they can't make bond. But if the state could process those who will make bond more quickly, it could relieve jail overcrowding. Carbone said.

Before last month's court order, the Morgan Street jail had population limit of 240 inmates. Carbone said.

Charges against the protesters were dismissed the same night and they were freed immediately.

Suspects arrested after the courts have closed for the day often have to wait until the next business day to appear in court to have their bonds set. That means they take up precious space in one building or convert it to condominiums. Through membership in resident councils, tenants have a voice in the management of their homes.

The housing is not affected by the forces of the speculative marketplace, so it remains affordable. Residents can pass apartments along to family members. Housing costs, in part, are based on income.

"It's a variation on ownership," Malone said. "It gives residents everything ownership offers, except the right to sell for a killing."

Money accrued by mutual housing associations over and above the costs of operating the housing can be used to acquire and develop more mutual housing sites.

In Hartford, mutual housing is planned on Park Terrace, where seven apartment buildings will be purchased and on Granby Street in the Blue Hills neighborhood, where 24 condominium-type housing units are planned.

Purchase and construction will be financed primarily with grants from the state Department of Housing, which considers mutual housing an important bridge between renting and being a homeowner.

So far, the housing department has committed more than $20 million to mutual housing projects.

Man, free on bail, held in abductions

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — A man awaiting sentencing for kidnapping and raping a youngster has been charged with abducting and kidnapping two boys and abducting a girl during a 24-hour spree through two states.

Richard E. Gardner, 21, of Weymouth, Mass., had been freed on $3,000 bail while awaiting sentencing for the rape and kidnapping of a boy in Hingham, Mass., said Rhode Island Attorney General James O'Neill.

"I think this well demonstrates the need for bail reform," O'Neill said at a press conference Sunday.

Gardner's mother, Sylvia, said he had received psychiatric treatment as an outpatient and had gone to a counseling session Thursday.

"There was no indication that said he was wrong," she said. Gardner was arrested Saturday night shortly after a 6-year-old boy was returned to his home in Bellingham, Mass., police said.

The spree began early Friday when a man broke into a Warwick home, pointed a flashlight in the eyes of a sleeping 10-year-old boy, and forced the boy at knifepoint to leave with him, Burlingame said.

The boy's parents were sleeping. The child was awakened and then released to find his way home, Burlingame said.

Later Friday, a man tried to abduct an 11-year-old girl in Bellingham, Mass., police said.

Democrats must mend their fences

As expected, Connecticut's Democratic Party joined in a harmonious and unanimous endorsement of Attorney General Joseph Lieberman to run for the U.S. Senate.

And, as expected, the party engaged in a bitter dispute over the election of two members to the Democratic National Committee, foregoing the usual practice of returning incumbents to office and electing instead two newcomers favored by Gov. William O'Neill.

The effects of the fight, an internal struggle of interest primarily to those who remain active in the nitty-gritty of party politics, is not likely to have much effect, or be remembered long, by rank-and-file Democrats.

Democrats outside the circle of party regulars, if they paid any attention at all to the battle involving people they probably had not heard of before, probably ended up wondering if it was a dispute between liberal and moderate elements of the party, between leaders in two giant unions, or simply a successful effort by O'Neill to punish party officers who had supported Toby Moffett when Moffett challenged the governor for the nomination in 1986.

It was probably some of all of those things, but mostly it was an attempt by O'Neill to solidify his already strong grasp on the party. The question is whether the fight created more disharmony than it was worth.

Democrats are fond of saying they fight each other vigorously until someone wins, then resolve all their differences and devote their energies to the battle against Republicans.

But intraparty battles do have an influence on how enthusiastically party workers join in the campaign.

Former Moffett supporters, liberals in the party ranks, and those who, for whatever reason, supported the incumbent national committee members may have some difficulty now giving the hard campaign the effort it needs.

Town chairmen will have fences to mend. Ironically, if the struggle had been an epic one with important stakes involved, the fence mending might be easier. The pettiness of the dispute will make it more difficult.

Duke's truce with Jackson still uneasy

WASHINGTON — As the Democrats settle down to the sober business of winning back the White House, Michael Dukakis urgently needs the support of Jesse Jackson, whose campaign style worries him.

Sources privy to the Dukakis strategy tell us that the Democratic presidential nominee is privately wary of Jackson. Dukakis needs Jackson to rally Jackson followers behind a ticket they don't really like. But Dukakis fears Jackson will attract most of the media and steal the spotlight.

What worries the Democratic nominee is that the flamboyant Jackson might be a loose cannon whose firing can't be controlled and coordinated. His colorful phrase-making, which anchors his liberal constituency, may turn off the middle-of-the-road majority.

Ms. Jordan's condition was upgraded Sunday afternoon from critical to serious but stable, and she continued to improve Sunday night.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forest fires, even the big ones that hit Yellowstone National Park last week, are an essential part of nature's cycle of death and renewal. Humans unwittingly rearranged a lot of nature's handwork before realizing that.

"We almost lost the loblolly pine" in the Southeast in the 1920s and 1930s because of the insistence of the Forest Service in suppressing all fires, says Gene Wood, a wildlife ecologist at Auburn University.

Such a no-fire policy let hardwood species get established, and once established the hardwoods can out-compete the pine, Wood said.

Traditionally, lightning or Indians, who set fires for hunting or farming, would keep hardwoods from setting fires to hardwoods down, he said.

When Wisconsin was settled around 1830, two-thirds of the state was prairie, one-third forest. Humans fought prairie fires. Now the state is two-thirds forest, with special organizations trying to save the prairie chicken — an setting fires to keep the prairie vigorous.

Though specifics differ according to soils, weather and species, there has been far more important in forest evolution in the arid West than elsewhere — natural fires caused by lightning are usually small. Without burning trees very much they prevent litter from leaves, dead limbs, twigs and other organic matter from building up.

National Park, trying to return the forest to its natural state. In 1972 it adopted what has been called a "let burn" policy.

"We were almost killing the trees with kindness," before that, said Chief Ranger Walt Dabney. "The new policy had been long germinating from research dating to the 1930s, said Wood, some of whose research helped spread the gospel. "A lot of the old foresters and game wardens could have tarred and feathered me," he said.

King Hussein challenges PLO about West Bank

By Jamal Halaby
The Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — Relinquishing any Jordanian claim to the West Bank, King Hussein has challenged the PLO to try to make a Palestinian state of the territory his family ruled until it was seized by Israel 21 years ago.

The king's announcement in a nationally televised speech Sunday was the latest in a flurry of moves by the Jordanian leader that appeared to rule out the possibility of Jordan representing Palestinians in any peace talks.

On Saturday, Hussein dissolved the lower house of Parliament, half of whose members represent the West Bank. On Thursday, he canceled a $1.3 billion development project for Israel's occupied lands.

"Jordan is not Palestine," the king said Sunday in his 17-minute address. "The independent Palestinian state will be established on occupied Palestinian land after its liberation. God willing."

It was the first time Hussein, who has previously backed the idea of an independent Palestinian state, told Palestinians to take affairs into their own hands in the West Bank, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

The move could leave the PLO, which claims to be the sole representative of Palestinians, Israel's only potential negotiating partner in talks to resolve the issue.

That could dash hopes for Secretary of State George P. Shultz's peace initiative, which Jordan would have been partially responsible for representing the Palestinians in proposed Middle East peace talks.

The PLO, calling it a terrorist organization, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, a backer of the Shultz initiative, said Sunday that Jordan will still remain a key partner in the peace process.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Peres' rival in Israel's governing coalition, had refused to embrace the Shultz plan.

Israeli leaders have called for negotiations with a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation and said the Palestinians must not be members of the PLO. Hussein said Sunday that Jordan's links to the West Bank hamper the Palestinian struggle to gain international support for the Palestinian cause, as well as national cause of a people struggling against foreign occupation.

The 8-month-old uprising in Israel's occupied lands, claiming the lives of 235 Arabs and four Israelis, has given greater international prominence to the Palestinian cause and increased calls for an independent state.

The uprising has been largely driven by the PLO, reducing Jordan's political influence in the West Bank.

Still, Jordan pays $50 million in salaries to teachers, lawyers and other employees who work in Arab institutions in the territory, which it had controlled after gaining independence from the British in 1946.

Hussein said Sunday that his moves were "in response to the wish of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the prevailing Arab conviction that such measures would contribute to the struggle of the Palestinian people."

He said they were aimed at "enhancing the Palestinian national orientation and highlighting the Palestinian identity."

Hussein nevertheless reaffirmed his interest in participating in the peace process. "Jordan is a principal party to the Arab-Israeli conflict and to the peace process."

The king also called for national unity and said his policy toward the West Bank would not affect Palestinians living in the rest of Jordan.

Up to two-thirds of Jordan's 3.5 million people are Palestinians, and Hussein was nearly toppled in 1970 during a war with the PLO. In 1951, he witnessed a Palestinian extremist assassinate his grandfather, King Abdullah.

December 1982 it released the results of its investigation, including a recommendation that each camp survivor be given a $20,000 tax-free payment, providing they agree to drop all related claims against the government.

Earlier this year, the House and Senate accepted the recommendations and passed separate bills slightly different provisions providing for the money. The differences were reconciled, and the Senate last week approved the compromise version without dissent. The House should do the same this week.

Once approved by the House, the reparations package will go to the president for his signature. B. Jay Cooper, deputy White House press secretary, said following Senate approval that, "They have improved the bill a lot. A lot of our concerns have been taken care of."

One of those concerns was how many years the government would take to make the payments. The Senate approved a five-year payout, but the White House objected, claiming it would cost too much, too soon. As part of the compromise, the government now can take up to 10 years to make the payments, starting in about a year.

The House-Senate proposal also authorized payments of up to $12,000 for surviving members of the Aleut Indian tribes who were removed from the Aleutian Islands during the Japanese attack on those islands in 1942.

"It is most gratifying to me personally to see this long battle for personal justice come to an end at last," said Sen. Spark M. Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, sponsor of the Senate bill.

WASHINGTON — Congress is poised this week to give final approval to legislation providing more than $1 billion to Japanese-Americans who were forced from their homes and sent to internment camps during World War II.

The House is expected to approve the bill on Wednesday, sending it to the White House, where President Reagan is likely to sign it into law.

If all goes according to that schedule, Japanese-Americans who qualify should start getting individual $20,000 tax-free payments in about a year. The most elderly will be given priority for the first payments.

Enactment of the reparations bill will help end the nearly half-century-old controversy over how the United States treated its Japanese-American population after Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on Dec. 7, 1941.

About 120,000 U.S. citizens and resident aliens of Japanese descent were interned in the United States during the war. Many were of German or Italian descent — and sent to internment camps for the duration of the war.

In addition to losing their freedom, some of the internees lost jobs and possessions and were forced to sell homes at below-market prices. In the years immediately after the war, some were reimbursed for direct losses, such as impounded property. But efforts to losing their across-the-board payment were delayed for decades.

In 1980, Congress authorized a federal Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians to study the issue. In ROME (AP) — As the nation's top Mafia investigator, Giovanni Falcone symbolized a new generation of brave, activist judges dedicated to ending the reign of organized crime in Sicily.

Now, he and eight fellow investigating magistrates have resigned, spurring questions about the depth of the government's commitment to fighting the Mafia. All nine had played a prominent role in Italy's largest Mafia trial.

In stepping down with the others on Saturday, Falcone said he wanted to be able to testify freely before a judicial panel looking into the government's anti-Mafia effort. He also suggested there was something profoundly wrong with the war on organized crime.

SECaucus, N.J. (AP) — With a few minutes to spare in a long campaign day, Michael Dukakis stopped by the Harmony Early Learning Center to shake a few hands with preschoolers.

Looking to campaign on a tight pre-convention budget, George Bush a day later rode out to Tysons Corner, Va., in the Washington suburbs to do the same thing, tossing a foam ball and pushing youngsters on a tire swing.

For both it was time well spent. Dukakis was rewarded with prominent photographs in newspapers and the television news networks; and Bush reaped similar coverage.

The twin events on the presidential campaign trail last week underscored what already has become apparent to both campaigns: Child care is a hot issue in the 1988 race for the White House.

FOND FAREWELL — Bunnies Rachelle, right, and Julie remove the ears from their Playboy Bunny costumes for the last time in their "Bunny Hutch" Saturday night. The last Playboy Club in the U.S., located in Lansing, Mich., closed its doors Saturday.

ABOARD USS CONQUEST IN THE PERSIAN GULF (AP) — This old U.S. Navy mine sweeper and five others like it may remain in the Persian Gulf until an estimated "couple of hundred" mines still lurking in the waters are found and destroyed, U.S. officers say.

While a cease-fire in the Iraq-Iran war would probably keep new mines from being laid, those already deployed could pose a danger to shipping for years to come unless cleaned up.

The task falls to ships like the creaky, 800-ton Conquest, whose crew works these days in 130-degree deck temperatures, using a submersible robot to locate mines and trailing gear to cut the cables that moor them to the seabed.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats are working on a proposal to give military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras rebels if the Sandinista government does not honor the peace pledges it has made, according to a key architect of the plan.

President Reagan has already called for renewed assistance in the wake of a crackdown on the opposition in Managua.

The Washington Post said in Monday's editions that the Democratic plan calls for a release of $18 million in frozen military aid to the Contras fighting the Sandinista government if it violates provisions of the regional peace pact reached earlier this year.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan was listed in serious condition this morning, recovering from a near drowning in her backyard pool, and a doctor says she could be out of the hospital within a week.

"Right now, I think things look very good that she'll get totally back to normal," said Dr. James Little, a neurologist. "She's very close to normal right now. I think she will continue to improve. As best as I can tell, she probably will regain full mental functions."

Ms. Jordan's condition was upgraded Sunday afternoon from critical to serious but stable, and she continued to improve Sunday night.

Ms. Jordan, 52, gave the thumbs-up sign Sunday to her intensive care unit nurse and able to talk.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forest fires, even the big ones that hit Yellowstone National Park last week, are an essential part of nature's cycle of death and renewal. Humans unwittingly rearranged a lot of nature's handwork before realizing that.

"We almost lost the loblolly pine" in the Southeast in the 1920s and 1930s because of the insistence of the Forest Service in suppressing all fires, says Gene Wood, a wildlife ecologist at Auburn University.

Such a no-fire policy let hardwood species get established, and once established the hardwoods can out-compete the pine, Wood said.

Traditionally, lightning or Indians, who set fires for hunting or farming, would keep hardwoods from setting fires to hardwoods down, he said.

When Wisconsin was settled around 1830, two-thirds of the state was prairie, one-third forest. Humans fought prairie fires. Now the state is two-thirds forest, with special organizations trying to save the prairie chicken — an setting fires to keep the prairie vigorous.

Though specifics differ according to soils, weather and species, there has been far more important in forest evolution in the arid West than elsewhere — natural fires caused by lightning are usually small. Without burning trees very much they prevent litter from leaves, dead limbs, twigs and other organic matter from building up.

Lottery scheme is most often a bad bet

DEAR BRUCE: I live in a state where the lotto jackpots can grow to tens of millions of dollars. So I've figured out a system in which a lot of people could pool their money, playing many combinations of numbers. This could increase our chances of winning.

Smart Money

I figured if enough of us get together, it's almost a sure thing. I've discussed this a lot with my friends and, although most of them say it seems like a pretty good idea, they won't invest their money.

percentage of the gross goes to profit and operating expenses. The payoffs seldom reach 50 percent. Compare this with payoffs of 99 percent for some wagers at casino craps tables and 80 to 95 percent in slot machines.

Please don't misunderstand me — I'm not advocating that you "invest" your money in slot machines or craps tables, because even there the house percentage will grind you down. But state lotteries, purely from a mathematical point of view, are terrible gambles.

Maybe you could give me some ideas for convincing them that this is almost a sure-fire way to win the lottery.

L.A., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR L.A.: Not on your life. The state lotteries may serve a useful public-purpose by taking the profits and plowing them into things like education, seniors, or the disabled, whatever. But, in terms of an investment, you have to be ready for a rubber room before you do something like this.

Workshop

Prytko credits both her retarded clients and the MARC staff for her success. But she also credits DMR Commissioner Bryan Lenskink, who has been the subject of protests by the retarded.

"I think Bryan Lenskink is the best thing to happen in the field of mental retardation for a long time," says the tall, energetic Prytko, whose own sister Patty Rowe is retarded. "The field has drastically changed in the last five years. Clients have the opportunity not to stay behind the walls of a workshop."

Lenskink, who has been DMR commissioner since 1985, returns the compliment, calling Prytko a "leader" in supported employment for the retarded. "We're really pleased with the direction she's going," he says.

The DMR is pushing supportive employment.

"All of our new money in the last few years has all been in the supportive employment direction," Lenskink says.

But like Prytko, he also admits that much more can be done for the retarded.

"We've had a waiting list of 14 clients (waiting for group homes). The problem is there's no money in the (state) budget. Their time has come," says Prytko, whose sister moved into a group home in 1980.

Lenskink says the DMR must first meet the need to move retarded people out of institutions under the terms of the 1984 Mansfield Consent Decree. Only then can the DMR fund group homes for those retarded people whose parents are becoming too old to care for them.

But he says, "There doesn't have to be this competition. If we had 400 (community living arrangements a year), we could meet the need."

State Rep. Paul Gionfriddo, D-Middleton, chairman of the Public Health Committee of the General Assembly, has called for such funding. He and state Rep. John Thompson, D-Manchester, will hold a meeting at the Manchester Workshop, at 57 Hollister St., at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to discuss such concerns with the mentally retarded.

Despite the needs that have yet to be filled, Lenskink, Prytko and others point to the Manchester Workshop as an example of what can be done for the retarded.

Peg Lahda, president of the Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens from 1978 to 1980, says, "We've come a long way in the last eight years. Our clients are more independent and there are more clients."

The new is a MARC staff member.

MARC was founded 36 years ago by parents like Lahda at a time when the vast majority of the severely retarded ended up in institutions or the quiet seclusion of their parents' homes. In addition to the state, MARC receives a total of $58,816 from the towns of Manchester, South Windsor, Vernon, and the United Way.

The organization has nearly 250 members although only 142 are in residence.

Beach waste

forcement team of five lawyers, 13 environmental sleuths and 10 extra officers.

"I don't think we're looking at large hospitals. There's no indication of wholesale dumping," she said. "It's just very hard to reconstruct what has happened. It's very hard to trace this material. We're looking for people who have no regard for the way they handle waste."

State and federal authorities are also part of the investigation. This summer's floating fifth dump first came ashore July 6 on a Long Island beach. Also contaminated are beaches in New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

The refuse is mostly unmarked needles and vials, several of which tested positive for AIDS antibodies and hepatitis B virus. Other items included stained bandages, catheter bags, colostomy bags, respirator parts, prescription bottles, plastic tubing for intravenous drugs, rubber gloves and nine dead rats.

Infectious medical wastes, treated like industrial trash, are supposed to be placed in red bags to alert handlers of the contents. No red bags were washed ashore. State investigators believe the rubbish may have come from several sources: illegal dumpers, runoff from city storm sewers, the Workshop's supportive employment program.

Robert Gorman, now a planner for DMR Region 3 and formerly employed by the state Office of Policy and Management, was president of MARC from 1976 to 1978 and a former president of March Inc., a non-profit agency which arranges community living dwellings for the retarded.

He remembers MARC as almost "entirely a workshop" which began reaching out by establishing a mobile work crew to maintain town parking lots — one of the first such crews in the state.

Gorman, whose 37-year-old son lived in the Mansfield Training School for eight years before leaving to live in a community home, can measure success personally.

But he admits "it's not leaps and bounds for everybody. But we really do want to provide all the services that are necessary."

The success of programs statewide cost money. In fiscal 1980, the state DMR budget was $68 million. Today it is $330 million. In the same period of time, the number of people served by the DMR has risen from 25 to 77. Together with group homes run by private agencies, the number of community living arrangements for the retarded has risen from 25 to 77. Together with group homes run by private agencies, the number of community living arrangements for the retarded has risen from 25 to 77.

But there is still more to be done, agree Prytko and others.

Since the Mansfield Consent Decree was signed in 1984, the number of people living in that institution has dropped from 1,350 to about 300, according to Cathy Daly, consent decree coordinator for the DMR. About 35 of the MARC clients had lived in the Mansfield Training School.

Advocates for the retarded still are pushing for more and have filed a motion seeking to find Lenskink in contempt of court for what they call failing to meet the terms of the consent decree.

Prytko applauds advocacy for and by the retarded. She says of the training school, "Nobody should live there."

For now, she is continuing to plan for a future when every retarded person will have a chance to work and live in the community. She also is waiting for a time when the three catch words of the MARC philosophy, "respect, choice and dignity," become a part of life for every retarded citizen and not just a vision for their future.

"We view clients as productive, viable citizens of Connecticut," Prytko says. "Connecticut is better because of us."

Lenskink says he "fell in love" with the retarded while working at a workshop like MARC when he attended the University of Minnesota. He agrees that more can be done.

"I'm really pleased with the direction Connecticut is going," he says. "It's really an intense place to work. But I wouldn't have it any other way."

ON STRIKE — About 35 Central Connecticut Cooperative Farmers Association truck drivers, mill workers and mechanics went on strike today after their three-year contract expired. The workers are demanding better wages.

Co-op workers strike over pay

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

About 35 millworkers, drivers and mechanics at the Central Connecticut Cooperative Farmers Association on Apol Street have gone on strike to seek better wages, officials of Teamsters Local 559 said today.

The strike was called after workers' three-year contract ran out at midnight Sunday, said Roger Racine, president and business agent of Local 559. Strikers began picketing at 8 a.m. in front of the co-op's driveway on the corner of Apol and Summit streets, and plan to continue picketing until the strike is over, he said.

Local 559 is based in South Windsor, he said.

Co-op General Manager Emanuel Hirth said today he was unsure what the union specifically wanted, but said he is ready to negotiate when contacted by the union.

"There's a strike. That's all there is to it," Hirth said. "Whenever the union comes to talk to us, we're available."

About 12 office workers and supervisors were still working at the plant this morning, Hirth said. When non-striking workers arrived for work at about 8 a.m. this morning, strikers politely made way for automobiles to enter.

The strike was called after strikers rejected management's contract offer this morning, Racine said. Though he would not reveal details of the contract or the exact strike vote, he did say the union's constitution requires that two-thirds of the membership reject the contract and vote for a strike.

The union is seeking better wages, pensions, more vacation days and more sick days, Racine said. For example, a mill truck driver makes $9.25 an hour, but could make between $11 and $13 elsewhere, he said.

"The usual," Racine said when asked what the union was seeking. "A nominal increase, a fair increase. Whatever I can get to get the men to go back to work."

Union officials have not met with co-op officials today except to notify them of the strike, Racine said. He said the union was ready to talk with management about settling the strike.

Town to set age limit for North Elm

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

The town Board of Directors will have to set an age limit for tenants of the housing for the elderly project on North Elm Street, neighbors were concerned that people as young as 55 might still be working and driving and adding to rush hour traffic.

In all, the letter from DiRosa deals with eight questions raised by the neighbors.

DiRosa said siding on the apartment buildings will have to be all one color because it was all purchased before any meetings with the residents were held.

Originally, the plans had been to use three colors, but they were changed to save money.

The letter says there are no plans to remove North Elm Street completely, but that temporary patches there will be replaced with permanent patches before the construction project ends.

And the letter says the Police Department cannot foresee any traffic problems at the complex, but that if an on-street parking problem develops, areas can be posted for no parking during certain hours.

Addressing other questions raised by the neighbors, the letter says the contractor has been told there should be no playing of radios early in the morning at the construction site, that plans are being developed to address drainage problems behind two houses, and that the town is contacting the Eighth Utilities District about a sanitary sewer problem at one house in the area.

War is re-enacted 200 years later

COVENTRY — Three tepees, two tents and animal hides drying in the sun greeted visitors to the Nathan Hale Homestead Saturday.

It was part of a Revolutionary War Encampment and Battle Re-enactment activity sponsored there for the third year by the Connecticut Antiquarian and Landmarks Society Inc.

"The purpose of an event like this is fun with a strong educational component," said Karin Peterson, coordinator of Properties and Programs for the society. Peterson described it as a living history lesson that is also entertaining.

According to Peterson, the homestead site was chosen because the Hales exemplify a "staunch Yankee type of family," Peterson said. "They had strong civic and religious principles and acted upon them."

She noted not only Nathan Hale, who was executed by the British for spying, served in the Revolutionary forces, but also his three brothers. Those that returned became either teachers or ministers and were active in the community, Peterson said.

Because admission to the event that ran from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. was free, Peterson said it was difficult to estimate how many people attended.

Nathan Hale was spread across the grounds, however, and it seemed that participants outnumbered a small group of spectators that mingled about.

Despite temperatures close to 100 degrees, participants were dressed in Colonial style garb. They included militia men in long sleeved shirts and long pants and women wearing long dresses made of cotton and linen.

The local Nathan Hale Fire and Drum Corps took part as well as Colonial regiments from Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Some came as the American Indians who often served as scouts for the Colonial or British troops. There also was a unit of Loyalists (Colonists that sided with England) as well as a few Redcoats.

Later in the day, the warring factions staged a mock battle.

There were some musical presentations and a number of crafts being demonstrated. Doti Diest, an art teacher at Bowers and Washington schools in Manchester, showed basket weaving.

"The most common treatments were bleeding, urinating, vomiting and sweating because they believed it would rid the body of the ailment," said Scarth, adding that many people bled to death as a result.

24-hour daylight is over

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — When the sun sets briefly here Tuesday for the first time in almost three months, it will herald the end of round-the-clock daylight and the onset of long winter darkness.

The sun will dip below the horizon at 2:19 a.m. on Alaska's North Slope and will rise 30 minutes later, the first sunset since May 10, said the National Weather Service station here.

Summer in Barrow and the seven villages in the North Slope Borough typically is a time of non-stop outdoor activity. It is unusual to see children on playgrounds at midnight.

Three to four days after that first sunset, the nights will get dark.

Boddicker's path may lead to pennant

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

Hall of Famers Johnny Mize, Enos Slaughter and Eddie Mathews made the trip. So did Gaylord Perry, Hoyt Wilhelm and Don Sutton.

Now, it's Mike Boddicker's turn to follow the path traveled recently by Don Baylor, Rick Reuschel and Dave Henderson.

Another voyaging veteran moving from pretender to pennant contender, usually being traded for youngsters, it's a baseball tradition almost as rich as the World Series and one that often leads to October heroics.

Two years ago, the Boston Red Sox needed an extra bat and got Henderson in a deal with Seattle just before the Aug. 31 deadline for postseason eligibility.

Every Boston fan — and California rooter, too — knows the rest. Henderson rescued the Red Sox with a last-strike home run in the playoffs and almost led Boston to victory in the World Series.

On Friday, the Red Sox made another move by getting Boddicker from Baltimore for two minor league prospects. It looked good when Boston had to put Oil Can Boyd on the disabled list the same day, and seemed even better when Boddicker combined on a shutout Sunday in his debut.

"He's a great shot in the arm," Red Sox general manager Lou Licerio said. "He was thrilled and so are we."

Said Boddicker: "It's a good bunch of guys in Baltimore and it was mostly good years. But on the other end, it means going to club that's in the race."

Ken Phelps feels the same way. The New York Yankees got him from Seattle two weeks ago to bolster their bid to beat Boston and Detroit in the American League East.

It was fitting the Yankees made the first move of the stretch run:

they initiated these late-season juggling acts in 1949 by acquiring Mize, and later got the likes of Slaughter, Perry, Sal Maglie, Jim Konstanty, Ewell Blackwell and Dale Long.

Who will be next? Could it be Fred Lynn or maybe Charlie Hough or perhaps Jesse Barfield? Ken Griffey and Gary Roenicke, both recently released by Atlanta, are also available for American football drawing a following in England

By Edith M. Lederer
The Associated Press

LONDON — It looked like a typical American football game — cold beer, popcorn, tailgate parties and cheerleaders.

But there was one English tradition the San Francisco 49ers and the Miami Dolphins couldn't break Sunday at Wembley Stadium, the citadel of English soccer.

It dripped, drizzled and rained, leaving puddles along the sidelines of the slippery field. Despite all that, a sellout crowd of 70,585 enjoyed it thoroughly as the Dolphins downed the 49ers 27-21 in the third annual "American Bowl."

"I think God is trying to say this is not the game for us over here," said Don Compton, 27, a foreign-exchange dealer from suburban Orpington in Kent. "It rains every year when there's an American football game."

American football, which soared in popularity after it became a regular feature on British television five years ago, is a long way from challenging the country's biggest sports, soccer and cricket.

English soccer in recent years has been marred by fighting among fans, violence around the stadiums, abused obnoxious and bottle-and missile-throwing.

In contrast, Sunday's incidents were pretty tame. A man in a Mickey Mouse T-shirt ran across the field in the middle of a play, holly pursued by police who led him away. On another occasion, a large plastic doll of a nude woman floated down from the upper seats, deflating as it fell to great laughter from the crowd.

Otherwise, the show was all-American — from the Dolphins cheerleaders, who drew the biggest applause of one halftime show, to the flame-throwing jugglers.

Wembley Stadium, site of the 1966 World Cup soccer final, was the only stadium that ditched its usual fare of steak and kidney pie, warm beer and fish and chips in favor of hamburgers, hot dogs, popcorn and ice-cold American beer.

McCane, who was quarterbacked in the only casualty, suffering a bruised elbow when he was inadvertently knocked over by an overzealous English opponent.

The champagne, hamburgers and English sausages of Courtney's party was matched by San Francisco architect David Moulton, who has lived in London for a year. He hosted a party for about 30 British friends and clients, offering a table featuring roast beef, salmon, oysters and champagne.

"I think really it's a way of integrating our Americans with their Britishness by inviting them to something American," he said. "We wanted to give them a little bit of what we come from."

Not far away an Anglo-American touch football match was underway in a clearing between the parked cars and buses.

"We taught them how to play the asking.

Last August, Detroit traded for Jim Morrison, Kansas City acquired Gene Garber and California plucked Johnny Ray, although none were a factor.

Sometimes, the moves work out great.

Minnesota got Baylor from Boston last Aug. 31 and the went on to hit .385 in the World Series, including a three-run homer that helped the Twins rally past St. Louis.

Reuschel was among several players San Francisco got after last year's All-Star Game. He joined with Dave Dravecky, Kevin Mitchell and Craig Lefferts in leading the Giants into the playoffs.

In 1986, the Mets plucked Mazzilli off the scrap heap after he was released by Pittsburgh. Mazzilli contributed three pinch hits in the postseason as the Mets went on to beat the Red Sox in the World Series.

Cesar Cedeno, Dave Lopes, Sparky Lyle and Vic Davallito are among others who performed well after changing addresses in August past.

Other times, they turn out terrible as teams that are trying to help themselves wind up in ruins.

In August 1983, Los Angeles and Atlanta were battling for the National League West title. Both clubs wanted another pitcher and the Dodgers made the first move, getting Rick Honeycutt.

The Braves then traded with Cleveland for Len Barker, who went 1-3 as his new team faded. Barker won only nine games in the next two years and was released last year.

But there was one trade that was particularly notable. In 1987 with St. Louis, which needed a catcher.

Partly because of that deal, the Pirates are now challenging the Mets in the National League East. And ironically, it was Pittsburgh that this year made one of the first trades for a veteran, getting Glenn Wilson from Seattle for Darnell Coles.

"You always have to be looking and know what's out there," Wilson said. "That's how you improve yourself."

Plus he had everything going for him. "He was going against a pitcher who was struggling to do anything right."

Despite the victory with Stanley's help, Boddicker insisted "it wasn't my best outing of the year."

"It was the first time we went through with a shutout. I've had better stuff and better control," he said. "I don't worry about that, though. Whatever it takes to keep us in the ballgame, that's what I'm going to do."

"He really has some great stuff," said Boston slugger Mike Greenwell. "It's not too often you can go out and get a front-line pitcher like that. We're lucky to get him."

"When do we lose next? I don't know," Morgan said. "It's unbelievable, isn't it?"

The Red Sox enjoyed a break in the schedule before shooting for the club record of 21 consecutive Fenway Park victories in the opener of a two-game series with the Texas Rangers Tuesday night.

Darling keys Met win

By Ben Wolker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Each day, it's a different pitcher and another home run hitter for the New York Mets.

But it's been the same result, a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates for the third straight time, winning 2-1 and pushing the Pirates five games behind.

"There's an old adage that good pitching stops good hitting and that's the way it's gone," Darling said after his six-hit performance.

The Pirates have been held to one run on 13 pitches in the three games. Tonight, they face Dwight Gooden in the finale of the four-game series.

"We have to figure out a way to beat them. We're not exactly scoring the ball," Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland said.

"I expect to pitch good from here on in," said Rick Rhoden, who won his fourth straight decision Sunday.

"We've got a lot of guys who have been through a lot before," Rhoden said. "We don't have any overpowering pitchers on this team, like (Roger) Cle-

On Friday night, Bob Ojeda decided John Smiley 1-0 in a duel of three-hitters. On Saturday night, Sid Fernandez and Randy Myers combined to defeat Brian Fisher 3-0. Sunday, All-Star Bob Walk took the loss.

Give their staff credit. They've been good," Mets manager Dave Johnson said. "But our pitching has been outstanding."

The Mets aren't ripping the ball, either. But they've gotten timely hits — Kevin Elster's home run on Friday, Howard Johnson's homer on Saturday and Strawberry's league-leading 27th home run Sunday.

Strawberry and Darling combined to give New York its fifth straight victory. The Mets are 7-2 against Pittsburgh this season.

The Pirates have lost seven of their last nine games and scored only 12 runs in that span. They got a run in the first inning against Darling, ending a streak of 38 1/2 innings at Shea Stadium without scoring, but nothing after that.

"I'm sure they are pressing," Darling said. "They're going to score runs. They were second in the league in scoring. But hopefully it won't be against us."

Jose Lind singled with one out in the first inning and took third on Andy Van Slyke's hit-and-run single. Lind scored on Bonilla's weak groundout.

Darling, 11-7, then took charge. He walked two and struck out eight in his fifth complete game in 22 starts.

Walk, 11-6, lost for the second time in eight decisions. He went six innings and made only one bad pitch. It was one too many.

With two outs in the first, Walk walked Dave Magadan. Strawberry followed with a drive over the center-field fence, giving him 10 RBIs in his last seven games.

"I can't say enough about the pitching staff. It's really risen up a notch for this series," Johnson said.

Now, it's Gooden's turn. "I can't worry about the previous games. I just have to wait what I can," Gooden said. "There hasn't been too much to work with. That's when a pitcher has to take command."

GAME WINNER — New York Mets' Darryl Strawberry, right, gets a low five hand slap from third base coach Sam Perazzo after hitting a two-run home run in the first inning of Sunday's game with Pittsburgh at Shea Stadium. The Mets won, 2-1.

Rhoden leads Yankees to victory; AL East race continues

TORONTO (AP) — No, the New York Yankees aren't slipping out of the American League East race. They say they are in it to stay.

"I expect to pitch good from here on in," said Rick Rhoden, who won his fourth straight decision Sunday.

"We've got a lot of guys who have been through a lot before," Rhoden said. "We don't have any overpowering pitchers on this team, like (Roger) Clemens or (Teddy) Higuera who are going to go out and strike out fourteen or fifteen, but we have guys who can get you a good game."

Rhoden, 7-6, beat Toronto for the first time in five career starts, allowing five hits in six innings. He was 83 with a 6.00 earned run average against the Blue Jays 7-3.

"Rhoden's getting sharper," Yankees manager Joe Mauer said. "His slider had more bite to it."

of 17 games since the All-Star break with 15 RBIs, said the Yankees need solid pitching from their top three starters — John Candelaria, Tommy John and Rhoden — to remain consistent.

"All we need is quality starts from our pitchers," he said. "All we need is seven or eight quality innings."

Dave Righetti got the final five outs Sunday for his 16th save. Rhoden said that if Righetti returns to form as a top reliever, opponents will be in trouble.

away earlier this season," Rhoden said. "When Dave's right, those are our games."

The Yankees got three hits each from Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield and two run-scoring singles by Jack Clark. Henderson, with 17 hits in the last 11 games, is batting .425 against Toronto this season and Winfield, with 18 hits and 12 RBIs, is batting .466.

Clark, who's been fighting a batting slump, played his second consecutive game in the outfield. New York scored four times in the fourth of Jimmy Key, 6-2, who gave up nine hits in 4 2/3 innings.

Henderson, who reached base in the first inning for the 13th consecutive game with a single, hit an infield single in the third. Third baseman Kelly Gruber took Willie Randolph's bad-hop grounder off his chest for an error.

Mattightly he doubled to the alley in right for a run. Winfield hit a RBI single and Clark hit a 3-0 pitch to drive in another run. Joel Skinner's squeeze bunt made it 4-0. Singles by Henderson, Winfield and Clark produced the Yankees' fifth run in the fifth.

Lee drove in two runs with a single in the seventh off reliever Steve Shields.

Jesse Barfield, who was reported to have been observed by scouts from the San Francisco Giants and Texas Rangers, had a triple and single and made an over-the-shoulder catch in center. Barfield made two outstanding catches in right on Saturday and hit a home run.

Injury sidelines Valenzuela

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers southpaw Fernando Valenzuela, who rarely mentions aches and pains, finally had to give in to a sore shoulder that may have been bothering him for more than a year.

"I believed as early as the spring of '87 that Fernando had some physical problems," Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda said Sunday.

Valenzuela, who has never been on the disabled list or officially treated for an injury, will be forced to miss his turn after making 255 consecutive starts dating back to opening day of 1981.

He has a stretched anterior capsule in his left shoulder and has been forced to leave in the fifth inning of Saturday's game against the Houston Astros. The anterior capsule is an enclosing structure which surrounds the joint and contains ligaments that stabilize the joint.

"He's just such a competitor that he could never let on," Lasorda said. "He knows this club is paying him big money to compete and he's gone out there time and time again giving it all he's worth."

million in the final year of his contract, took himself out of Saturday's game after allowing a home run to Alex Trevino, who hadn't cleared the fence in more than a year.

"I don't know the extent of the injury," Dr. Frank Jobe, the Dodgers' team physician, said Sunday. "But it is causing a slippage of the muscle away from the mound, and pitching can only make it worse. I insisted that he be taken out of the rotation."

Jobe added that an operation is not planned. He said he can't make any promises about when he'll be ready to pitch again this season.

"It's bad news that I can't pitch," Valenzuela said Sunday. "But, yeah, it's nice to know what it is. The doctor said if I try to continue throwing, I have a chance at (surgery). It would become worse and worse. Right now, I just don't touch a ball and rest it."

After Saturday's game, Valenzuela said his whole left arm felt weak.

Valenzuela, 5-9 with a 4.39 ERA, was trying to protect a 2.0 lead and had a one-hitter going with two out in the fifth inning when he suddenly backed off the mound, summing up his career pitching coach Ron Perranoski and the team trainer.

"He said he wanted to finish out the inning, that's why we left him out there," Lasorda said.

After a few practice tosses, play resumed and Valenzuela gave up a single to Rafael Ramirez, then allowed the game-tying home run by Trevino, a former Dodger and a friend of Valenzuela.

Houston won 14-6. It was a no-decision outing for Valenzuela, who hasn't won a game since June 14.

Valenzuela has a reputation among his teammates for rarely mentioning any aches or pains.

But he said he immediately departed after giving up the home run because he was worried that something was seriously wrong.

Valenzuela was brought up from Class AA San Antonio late in the 1980 season and made 10 relief appearances for the Dodgers. In 1981, he became the first player to capture the Rookie of the Year and Cy Young awards in the same year.

He has compiled a career record of 118-90. His best season was 1986, when he went 21-11. Last season, when Valenzuela missed his shoulder tightness, he went 14-14.

VALENZUELA SIDLINED — Los Angeles Dodgers southpaw Fernando Valenzuela, shown here in a file photo, has succumbed to a sore shoulder which has placed him on the disabled list for the first time in his career.

Legion wins

After struggling a bit as late as the Manchester Legion Post 102 baseball contingent bounced back with a 3-1 non-zone victory over Simsbury Sunday night at Moriarty Field.

Post 102 is 24-11 overall and 16-4 in the Zone. Manchester ends its regular season tonight at 7:30 against East Hartford at McKenna Field. The winner of tonight's game will gain the home field advantage in the best two-out-of-three Zone Eight playoff which begins Wednesday night.

'Big' Willie Stargell enters Hall of Fame

By Jim Donohy
The Associated Press

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — Willie Stargell made it to the Hall of Fame by doing everything in a big way.

He hit huge home runs to win big games. He had a big smile for his teammates and the fans. And, he always has a big heart for those in need.

There are so many people who have inspired me," Stargell said. "Baseball has afforded me the opportunity to rub shoulders with so many fine people. That has always been my bottom line. I am eternally grateful for these types of people in my life."

"I also accept this award for the people at the stadiums, the clubhouse guys, the batboys, the grounds crew, the announcers, the media."

In 21 years as an outfielder and first baseman with Pittsburgh, Stargell hit 475 home runs, drove in 1,540 runs and batted .282 in helping the Pirates win the World Series title in 1971 and 1979. In the '79 Series at the age of 38, Stargell hit .600 with three homers and was selected most valuable player.

Last January, Stargell became the 17th player to be elected in the first year of eligibility.

Stargell, who had five 100 RBI seasons and 353 extra-base hits, credits much of his success to a very special place in his heart — Roberto Clemente.

Through the years, Stargell also developed a special meaning to his teammates and people in need.

Murray, a syndicated columnist for the Los Angeles Times, was presented the J.G. Taylor Spink Award for 1987. The award was established in 1962 by the Baseball Writers' Association of America to recognize meritorious contributions to baseball by members of the BBWAA.

On 14 occasions, Murray has been named "America's Best Sportswriter" by the National Sportscasters and Sportswriters Association.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Geoff Brabham won a record seventh consecutive IMSA Camel GT sports car race Sunday, capturing the 300-kilometer G.I. Joe's Gran Prix by more than 19 seconds.

Brabham averaged a race pace of 108.8 mph in his Nissan GTP prototype to beat teammate John Morton of El Segundo, Calif., at Portland International Raceway.

He was equally regarded for his qualities as a leader on the field and off, and was affectionately known as "Pops" to his younger Pirates teammates in the 1970s and early '80s.

The two berths weren't decided until Saturday night's final round, the ribbon competition.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Ledoux stars do well

NEWINGTON — Three representatives from Ledoux Electric of Manchester performed well at the Greater Hartford Women's Fast Pitch League's All-Star Saturday at Churchill Park.

Catcher Angela Scussel, first baseman Lisa Schwartz and pitcher Pat Giguere helped the 'A' Division capture a 9-0 decision. Schwartz went 2-for-2 with an RBI. Scussel had a run-scoring hit and Giguere pitched three innings of one-hit relief.

Two other Manchester residents played in the game. Gail Guetmarcher of Dino's Pizzeria of West Hartford singled while Karen Wright of Hartford's Cooper & Lybrand didn't play because of a prior commitment.

Ledoux will be in action Tuesday against Dino's at Cigna Field West in Bloomfield in a semifinal bout.

Francis on TV tonight

HARTFORD — Hartford Whalers' President and General Manager Emile Francis will be the guest of SportsPage tonight at 7 on WHCT-TV, Channel 18. Francis will answer questions from the public. The telephone number is 825-6045.

Sanchez bests No. 1 seed

HILVERSUM, Netherlands — Second-seeded Emilio Sanchez of Spain defeated top-seeded Guillermo Paves of Bolivia of Argentina 6-3, 4-1, 3-6, 6-3 Sunday to capture the $150,000 Nabisco Grand Prix tournament.

In a 2-hour, 45-minute match, the 22-year-old Sanchez dropped only one set, and won it after three set points.

Tennis title to Muster

BORDEAUX, France — Austria's Thomas Muster won his second Nabisco Grand Prix title in a month Sunday, defeating Haiti's Ronald Agener 6-3, 6-3, in the final of the $245,000 Bordeaux Passing Shot tennis tournament.

Muster won $43,000 for his victory, while Agener collected $21,500. Muster won at Boston in the first week of July, beating Andre Agassi on his way to the final.

Muster, ranked 24th in the world, came into the Bordeaux tournament as the No. 3 seed. Agener, who lives in Bordeaux, was the No. 5 seed and eliminated top-seeded Yannick Noah in Saturday's semifinals. It was the second successive year that Agener lost in the Bordeaux final. He bowed to Spain's Emilio Sanchez in 1987.

"It was a great victory for me," said the 28-year-old Muster. "I didn't expect to win so easily playing here against Ronald with the public behind him so much. Maybe I was the fitter player and I was able to move him around."

Allison returns home

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Stock car driver Bobby Allison returned home to Alabama on Sunday, six weeks after he was seriously injured in a crash at Pocono International Raceway.

Dale Witcher, a spokeswoman at Lakeshore Rehabilitation Complex in nearby Birmingham, said the 50-year-old Hueytown driver arrived at the complex Sunday afternoon as the Talladega 500 was being run at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Graf nets Slims' title

HAMBURG, West Germany — Steffi Graf captured the $200,000 Virginia Slims women's tennis tournament Sunday with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Bulgaria's Katerina Maleeva.

Graf, who won her first Wimbledon title earlier this month, needed 86 minutes to dispatch Maleeva.

Dibnah wins British title

LINDRICK, England — Australian Corinne Dibnah dropped a six-foot birdie putt at the second extra hole Sunday to beat South African-born American Sally Little and win the $170,000 British Women's Open Golf Championship.

Dibnah and the 36-year-old Little tied at 285, 1 under par, after both players made par-36 at the last hole to finish a shot ahead of defending champion Alison Nicholas of Britain. Dibnah shot a final-round 75 and Little had a 76.

Jackson retains crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Julian Jackson retained his World Boxing Association junior middleweight title by stopping Buster Drayton in the third round of a scheduled 12-round nationally televised bout Saturday afternoon.

Jackson capped a minute-long flurry with a booming left hook that sent Drayton crashing to the canvas late in the third round.

Drayton, of Philadelphia, hit his head on the canvas and still looked groggy at the count of five, prompting referee Tony Perez to stop the fight at 2:57 of the round.

Cavs to sign Rollins?

ATLANTA — Atlanta Hawk's center Terry Rollins, a free agent who has spent his entire 11-year career with the NBA club, will sign a contract to play next season for the Cleveland Cavaliers, according to a newspaper report Sunday.

The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution reported in combined editions that Rollins will sign Tuesday if he passes a Cavaliers' physical examination Monday.

The newspaper cited unnamed sources as saying Rollins would sign a contract paying him $1.6 million over two years, with incentive clauses that could push the figure higher.

Hawks president Stan Kasten, who is with the team as it joins the Soviet Union, declined comment about Rollins Saturday, the paper reported.

Nelson, Murray cited

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — Sportscaster Lindsey Nelson and sports columnist Jim Murray were honored Sunday during induction ceremonies at the Hall of Fame.

Nelson, a broadcaster for the New York Mets for 17 years, was the recipient this year of the Ford C. Frick Award for meritorious service to baseball and his profession.

Nelson, Ralph Kinser and Bob Murphy made up the first broadcasting team for the Mets in 1962 and remained together for 17 years, a record for a baseball broadcasting trio.

Seve triumphs but not satisfied

By Stephen Nosstrom

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Despite winning the British and Scandinavian Open titles in consecutive outings, Seve Ballesteros feels he still needs to improve his golf game.

"Believe it or not, but I've got many things to improve," the stylish Spaniard said Sunday after becoming the first three-time winner of the Scandinavian title.

"There is always room to improve the short game," Ballesteros suggested. "I also need to practice with my driver. It will be very important to hit straight next week."

Ballesteros, who won the British Open title at Royal Lytham and St. Anne's in England two weeks ago, was talking about the American PGA Championship, which begins Aug. 11 at Oak Tree in Tulsa, Okla.

The PGA is the last Grand Slam event of the year and Ballesteros has never won it.

"I don't know the course very well, but they're always narrow," he said. "So it's important to hit straight." His toughest rival at Ballesteros' club is the American PGA Championship, which begins Aug. 11 at Oak Tree in Tulsa, Okla.

The PGA is the last Grand Slam event of the year and Ballesteros has never won it.

"I've had them for four years," he said. "I'll probably give the irons I used in the (British) Open and am playing with right now to charity for raising money for 10,000 pounds. I'm hoping for 10,000 pounds."

Ballesteros, who admits he is superstitious, will stick to his lucky color when choosing trousers in the final rounds of future tournaments.

"I feel that blue makes me feel comfortable," he said. "Blue is my lucky color."

Ballesteros closed with a 67 on Sunday for an 18-under-par total of 270 on the 6,747-yard Drottningholm course outside the Swedish capital in winning his fourth tournament title of the year.

The soft greens and fairways made the scores so low," said Ballesteros, who also won the Majorca Open in Spain and the Westchester Classic on the American tour this year. "And there is hardly no rough on this golf course."

Craig Sneed had 25 birdies and one eagle in the tournament that drew a record crowd of 29,650 on Sunday and a four-day record of 85,500.

Gerry Taylor was runner-up at 271, one stroke ahead of fellow Australian Peter Senior and Graham Marsh.

In the PGA, he said, he'll use a new set of irons because the grooves of the old irons are wearing in his 13th season. He had chances at the Masters and Kemper Open this year, but hasn't won since 1984.

Verplank's new resolve nets win at Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — A visit to a sports psychologist helped Scott Verplank get his head together. A weekend at the Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club did wonders for his golf performance.

The two came together Sunday, when Verplank shot his third 66 in four days to win the $700,000 Buick Open, his first PGA Tour win in three years and his first as a pro.

It also cemented his new resolve to let golf rule his life. "It all started about a week ago when I missed the cut at the Hartford Open," said Verplank, who had missed most of his last three tournaments since winning the 1985 Western Open when he was still a collegian at Oklahoma State.

"He didn't tell me anything I didn't already know," Verplank said. "What he basically does is refresh your memory."

Verplank, the youngest player to ever win the U.S. Amateur, finished the tournament in a playoff and I needed the rest. I was very surprised when I found out I had won."

Verplank had not finished higher than a tie for 15th this season and entered the Buick Open 107th on the money list with $75,302.

Verplank finished at 20-under-par 268 to earn $126,000. It marked the fifth week in a row that a tournament was won by a previously winless pro.

The string started with Jim Benepi in the Western Open and continued when Tom Sieckmann won the Buick Classic, Blain McCallister won the Hardee's Classic and Mark Brooks captured last weekend's Greater Hartford Open.

Doug Tewell, who started the final round four strokes off the pace, blazed his way through the pack with a tournament-best 64 to finish second, two shots behind Verplank.

Verplank finished at 210. Rodriguez repeats

Beth Daniel and Connie Chellimi As it turned out, she didn't have to move at all. Daniel and Chellimi each held off contenders Okamoto for her third victory of the year.

The victory wasn't assured until Daniel bogeyed No. 18 after hitting her tee shot into the woods and Chellimi let a birdie putt six inches short of a cup on 18.

Okamoto shot a 4-under-par 67 on Sunday to finish three rounds at 206, one shot better than Daniel and Chellimi.

The challengers fell away as Okamoto relaxed in an air-conditioned comfort inside the Bethesda Country Club clubhouse every week.

Okamoto, fifth on this year's money list, either parred or birdied the last 29 holes of the tournament in earning the $33,750 top prize.

Schrader finally is a winner

By Mike Harris

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Ken Schrader knew how to get to the finish line. It was the route to Victory Circle that proved elusive.

Following his victory Sunday in the Talladega 500 at Alabama International Motor Speedway, his first Winston Cup stock car triumph in 108 starts, the 33-year-old native of Benton, Mo., was wandering around looking for the official place of celebration.

"I turned in where I normally do before I realized it wasn't the right place to be," Schrader said with a laugh.

"Hell, I did the first part. I figured out the route, but I didn't get me where I needed to be."

The first part wasn't all that easy, with Schrader coming out on top in a typical Talladega canopy-charger finish. He drove from fourth place to first on the last lap to become the eighth driver to win his first Winston Cup race on the superfast 2.6-mile, high-banked oval.

"Man, with 20 laps to go we were running 13th," Schrader said. "Harry (Hyde, his crew chief) was yelling at me to get up there so we could at least get a shot at it. We were scratching pretty good."

Schrader, whose best previous finish was second a week earlier at Pocono, slipped through the pack and got to fourth with three laps remaining.

"With two laps to go, I figured we had a pretty good chance at it. Then, when everybody started scrambling around, I figured we were either going to get a pretty good finish or get in a real big crash. I realized it wasn't the right place to be."

The crowd of about 80,000 was standing and its roar almost drowned out the sound of the race as Dale Earnhardt and the two-time defending Winston Cup champion, led going into the last of the 188 laps in the 500-mile race.

Godfroid, who earlier had made up a last lap caused by a flat tire, was second, with Sterling Marlin third and Schrader fourth, as he headed into the first turn.

Marlin moved to the outside, got past Bodine and pulled alongside Earnhardt. The cars of STRATTON MOUNTAIN, Vt. — The way things were going, it should have taken Andre Agassi one more year to win the Volvo International tennis tournament.

Two years ago, at age 16, he was a quarterfinalist playing his first tournament. Last year, he made the semifinals before losing to Ivan Lendl.

This year, he expected another confrontation with Lendl in the finals. But Lendl, the world's top-ranked player, was ousted early and on Sunday Agassi, ranked fifth overall and No. 1 among American players, cruised to his fifth Grand Prix singles title this year with a 6-2, 6-4 win over Paul Annacone.

"I was just praying I wouldn't have to wait another year to win it," Agassi told the crowd of 12,000 after collecting his check for $114,000, the second biggest of his two-year career.

Annacone, seeded 18th and ranked 48th, took home $57,000 from his first final since 1985. Agassi, 18, appeared on the

Davis sees title hopes at an end

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Buddy McGirt can now look ahead to a better day. Howard Davis has had his "I made history," McGirt said Sunday after knocking out Davis in the first round and retaining his International Boxing Federation junior welterweight title.

"For Davis, though, it almost certainly was his last fight. At age 32, he now has failed three times in championship bids and is the only Olympian to have boxed a medalist without a professional world title.

"This is probably my last fight," Davis said. "I hate to go out on a sour note."

McGirt, a 24-year-old from Brentwood, N.Y., set Davis up with left hands and boxed him into the ropes in McGirt's corner. He then hit him with a right that knocked him down.

Davis fell to his back and lifted his head, looking like he had every intention of getting up and away. But then he rolled over onto his knees and, as he tried to use the ropes to get up, referee Joe Santapio counted him out at 2:45 of the round.

"It's hard to explain. The left hook grazed me," Davis said. "I don't remember the right. I remember trying to get up, but my legs wouldn't let me."

The title defense was McGirt's first since he stopped Frankie Waters in the 12th round of February in Corpus Christi, Texas, to win the title and avenge the only loss in his 38-1 record, which now includes 33 knockouts.

Up next for McGirt is a fight with 1984 Olympic gold medalist Meldrick Taylor. They will fight Sept. 3 at New York. Las Vegas or Atlantic City.

Taylor was supposed to have fought McGirt on June 12, but McGirt came down with tendinitis in his elbow. When the fight was remade, Taylor's handlers said the date conflicted with a fight since fallen through.

Taylor has a pro record of 19-1, the draw coming in April 1986 against Taylor.

Davis, of Glen Cove, N.Y., now is 32-5 with 13 knockouts in his career, which includes lightweight title losses to Jim Watt of Scotland in 1980 and Edwin Rosario of Puerto Rico in 1984.

Bengals, Dolphins begin preseason on right foot

By The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Bengals and Miami Dolphins got off to a winning start as the NFL exhibition season opened on two continents.

Playing in the annual Hall of Fame Game at Canton, Ohio, the Bengals defeated the Los Angeles Rams 14-7 Saturday in the kickoff game of the NFL pre-season schedule.

On Sunday, the Dolphins beat the San Francisco 49ers 27-21 in a game played at London's Wembley Stadium. A capacity crowd of 70,585 turned England's national soccer shrine into a football carnival as they cheered on both teams in their third annual NFL-sponsored "American Bowl."

The Dolphins' 49ers game had all the earmarks of a pre-season contest — lots of penalties, erratic play and brief appearances by the stars. While starting quarterback Dan Marino saw little action for Miami, third stringer Dave Archer was the hero, scoring the winning points on a 4-yard bootleg with 1:28 left.

"Archer did outstanding job by moving the young players down the field in the last quarter," Miami Coach Don Shula said. "It was a very exciting pre-season performance."

Meanwhile, the Bengals, trying to bounce back from a 4-11 season, were on a mission. For them it was more than just an exhibition game.

"Some people say it's only a pre-season game," said David Fulcher, a third-year safety from Arizona State who had two interceptions in the NFL draft.

The Steelers declined to disclose terms of the agreement, but Dawson told a television station in Lexington that he was leaving because of a stress-related disorder.

Arrival: The Green Bay Packers resumed two-day practices Sunday in Tampa Bay, Fla. The roster lists Clay at 6-5, 285 pounds, but he weighed 320 upon reporting to the Chargers. Saunders said. The team also learned Clay had missed about a week of full practice with the Raiders.

Injuries: Starting right cornerback Ron Francis and reserve wide receiver Rod Barksdale were labeled as "usual bumps and bruises" by Coach Chuck Knox.

More than 89 percent of those surveyed by the St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch said Paul Wilson may miss the Dallas Cowboys' regular-season opener because of injuries suffered in Saturday's intrasquad scrimmage.

Francis, a second-year player from Baylor, could be out six weeks because of a sprained left shoulder he suffered while making a tackle on the goal line.

Barksdale tore a ligament in his right leg and may need surgery. The Cowboys open Sept. 4 at Pittsburgh.

Seattle Seahawks offensive tackle Ron Heiler missed practice Sunday with a sprained knee and his status was up in the air for Thursday's exhibition opener against Phoenix in the Kingdom.

Heiler acquired in a trade from Tampa Bay during the offseason, injured the knee in Saturday's practice. He underwent arthroscopic surgery on the same knee last season.

The Seahawks also practiced without linebackers Keith Butler and Rice Tipton, cornerbacks Terry Taylor and Melvin Jenkins, and center John McGary Sunday, but their injuries were labeled as the "usual bumps and bruises" by Coach Chuck Knox.

Vikings plot: Minnesota coach Jerry Burns hasn't decided who should start at quarterback this season, but Vikings fans apparently have.
