Hospital is part of probe

State investigates 17 hospitals for fund transfers

By Andrew J. Davis and Alex Grirell
Manchester Herald and the Associated Press
Manchester Memorial Hospital is one of 17 hospitals being investigated by the state for transferring funds from their operating budgets to different corporate entities, including parent companies.

gating the transfer of $127.7 million by 17 of Connecticut's 34 general hospitals. The commission is obligated to find out whether the fund transfers affect the hospitals' financial positions and the rates they charge patients, Chairman Gardner Wright Jr. said Wednesday in announcing the investigation.

needed because the funds were earmarked for the development fund when they were donated by private contributors. "We wanted to reflect that the development fund was a separate corporation," Beck said of the transfer. "It made a great deal of sense to keep it (there)."

The commission said it became concerned when a consultant earlier this year reported the unexplained $127.7 million. The investigation will begin with Greenwich Hospital, which moved $38.9 million — the largest single transfer — to its corporate holding company, GHA Corp., in 1985 and 1986, the commission said.

Scientists discover 17 strains of AIDS

NEW YORK (AP) - Up to 17 closely related, quickly evolving variants of the AIDS virus have been found in blood samples from infected individuals, scientists reported today. Variants differed in the type of blood cells they attacked because some variants manage to slip by each time, and that "any treatment has to knock out a cocktail of viruses," not just one virus, said researcher Beatrice Hahn. Identification of the variants is reported in today's issue of the British Journal Nature by Hahn, associate professor of medicine at the University of Alabama,

It's hazy, hot, humid through the weekend

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald
Manchester area residents who have been sweltering for four straight days under a heat wave cannot expect relief until at least the weekend, the National Weather Service reported today.

Results of that investigation, which is being carried out by the Army's 146th Explosive Ordnance Detachment in Newburgh, N.Y., are expected to be available Tuesday or Friday.

Duley said that state police divers found nothing while searching the river Wednesday and called off the search at about noon. The explosives that had been recovered - including a 60mm mortar shell and a 27-pound mortar packed with 8 pounds of TNT - were destroyed Wednesday by the Army.

Lt. Ronald Doughty of the Coventry Police Department said that Coventry police had evacuated the homes around the area of the river Wednesday but had turned up nothing.

Duley has said that the explosives, a type of ammunition used during the Vietnam War "for close ground support," were probably stolen then dumped at the river in an effort to get rid of them. The weapons were found in a remote area near an abandoned steel bridge that crosses the Williamstown River near Routes 185 and 32.

SHUTTLE'S test-firing called off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - NASA aborted the test-firing of space shuttle Discovery's engines a fraction of a second before ignition today when computers reported a valve problem, marking another disappointment for the space program. Engineers hoped to ready the shuttle for another attempt on Saturday, said launch control center commentator Hugh Harris.

It was the fifth such postponement in two weeks. The test is considered crucial for qualifying Discovery for the first shuttle flight since the Challenger explosion 2 1/2 years ago.

"That's why we have flight readiness firings, to work the bugs out of equipment before we launch," said NASA administrator James Fletcher. Discovery's three main engines, generating total thrust of 1.1 million pounds, were to fire for 20 seconds in a test of the entire shuttle system. Steel bolts were to hold the propulsion firmly on the pad during the firing.

The engines were to have begun firing six seconds before the zero mark. The shutdown came just after the "go" for starting the engines was issued but before ignition actually began, Harris said.

Harris said the shuttle's master computer "did not see that the engine bleed valve had fully closed" and automatically sent a shutdown signal. Engineers were trying to determine if there was a faulty valve or if the sensor had given an incorrect reading, he said. Immediately after the shutdown, the launch team remotely began to make the vehicle safe as it sat on the pad. Its 154-foot-tall tank loaded with 525,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen and 143,000 gallons of liquid oxygen, Harris said.

He said the propellants would be drained from the tank, and the igniters in each engine would have to be replaced before another attempt.

Engine No. 2, where the problem occurred, is one of two brand new engines on Discovery. Engine No. 1 has been flown on three shuttle missions. Program managers have been grooming Discovery for the first shuttle flight since the loss of Challenger and its crew of seven in an explosion 73 seconds after liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986. The mission is scheduled for late September, but even before

Adopt a pet: Dundee found

By Barbara Richmond
Manchester Herald

This week's featured pet from the dog pound has been named Dundee by Dog Warden Richard Rand because he has a face like an Australian sheep dog and a tail like an Afghan hound.

Whatever mixture Dundee is, he is cute. His fur, which is a sandy beige with some black, is as soft as a ball of cotton.

Dundee was found roaming on Foster Street on July 31. If not claimed by his owner he will be ready for adoption next week.

The only other dog at the pound this week is the female Chow, mentioned in last week's column. She's being held until she is adopted by a family and was found on Birch Street on July 25. Rand said she looks like a pedigree. She has rusty red fur and a black tongue. He said she seems very easy going.

Last week's featured pet, Tara, a 9-week-old shepherd cross, has been adopted by a Manchester family. The chocolate Labrador retriever was adopted by an East Hartford family.

Rand said he had to have four of the dogs, that had been at the pound for some time, euthanized.

The dog pound is located on town property near the landfill area off Olcott Street. The dog warden is at the pound weekdays from noon to 1 p.m. there is someone at the pound from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Mondays through Fridays.

The phone number at the pound is 643-6642 or call the police department, 646-4555 and they will get in touch with the dog warden.

There is a $5 fee to adopt a dog and the new owner must have the dog licensed. Before being licensed the dog must have its rabies shot.

Aid to Helpless Animals Inc. has many cats and kittens waiting to be adopted. This week three little kittens are being featured. It's difficult to believe, but the kittens had been abandoned in a dumpster. They were rescued by another animal advocacy group, Protectors of Animals.

The cats and kittens put up for adoption by Aid to Helpless Animals are given their shots and, unless they are too small or too young, are neutered.

Police Roundup

Man charged with assault

An East Hartford man was charged with third-degree assault after being accused of assaulting his girlfriend, police said.

George A. Tjundis, 72 Connecticut Blvd., was charged Wednesday after his girlfriend said he assaulted her, police said.

The couple was walking down East Center Street when they got into an argument, police said. Tjundis allegedly knocked the woman to the ground and dragged her by her feet on her stomach and back over the pavement, police said.

She ran to a nearby gas station, and called police, police said.

Police later found Tjundis, who said the couple got into an argument, according to the report. Police said that Tjundis denied assaulting the woman.

He will appear in Manchester Superior Court today, police said.

Thoughts

The greatest need in every life is to feel good about yourself. Daily we involve ourselves in activities that either try to enhance self-worth or to earn it. However, we must be careful to like ourselves for the right reasons. Secular self-esteem movements have often measured self-worth by performance, intellect, or appearance. These are invalid constructs of self-esteem.

True self-worth comes not because we can ever be good enough by ourselves, but because God loves us and attaches great worth to us. God has invested every ounce of His being in us. Not only has He created us and provided our earthly dwelling, He has also provided the necessary "re-creation" needed through Jesus Christ. You see we have made a mess out of life because of our rebellious actions toward God. We have no right to "feel good about ourselves." But God has given that right back to us by forgiving us through Christ. All we must do is obediently trust His perfect love. What a difference that makes in how we feel about ourself.

Vote gives selectmen more clout

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The Charter Revision Commission voted officially to recommend the elimination of the Board of Finance during a review of its report Tuesday that calls for major changes in town government.

The commission hopes to hold a public hearing on its report at the end of the month or in early September, said Robert Young, commission chairman. Before the change can be implemented, it also has to be approved by the Board of Selectmen and by voters at a town meeting, he said.

The majority of Tuesday's meeting consisted of discussion about what government officials and agencies would take over finance board duties if it is eliminated. Through the commission has discussed eliminating the finance board before, an official vote was taken because the commission began reviewing parts of the charter that deal primarily with the board, said Thomas Manning, commission member.

Preparing the town report and approving supplemental appropriations will become the responsibility of the selectmen, he said. The commission hopes to finish reviewing the report at another meeting scheduled for Tuesday, Manning said.

During its meeting last week the commission voted to recommend that the town's form of government be changed to a town manager style. The change would probably make the selectmen the major governmental body in town, Manning has said.

The duties of the first selectman and administrative assistant will be handled by the town manager under the new form of government.

Rec merger OK is tabled

The town Board of Directors voted unanimously Tuesday to table action on a proposal to create a new position to head a combined recreation and parks department after some residents criticized the plan. A consultant recommended last month that the town's Recreation Department and Parks and Cemeteries Division be combined under one department head for greater efficiency. The parks division is now a part of the Public Works Department.

Some residents questioned why the board was being asked to approve a job description for the new position when a final report from the consultant was not done. In light of the questions, Director Stephen T. Cassano, who heads a recreation subcommittee of the board, said that it would be a good idea to table action on the job description until after the interim report is discussed by board members next week.

8 are named to park board

Eight people were named Tuesday to a committee to decide how to spend money for improvements to the Hockanum River Linear Park.

The town Board of Directors unanimously approved the appointments during its meeting Tuesday night.

Those named are: Director Barbara B. Weinberg, Joel Janenda of 42 Timrod Trail, William O'Neill of 525 Gardner St., Douglas Smith of 467 Woodbridge St., Joyce Trainor of 588 E. Center St., Arthur Glaeser of 124 Broad St., William Bellock of 62 Oak Grove St. and Judith Shane of 34 Garden Drive.

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. last month proposed the formation of the committee to decide how to spend money for improvements to the Hockanum River Linear Park.

Parents, friends debate needs of retarded people

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

A man from Manchester said he hopes a group home can be found for the retarded son he and his wife are caring for "before we pass on."

A woman from Glastonbury said mentally retarded people with younger parents are not given priority consideration in finding placements because a higher priority is given to the retarded with aging parents.

The two were among those who spoke Wednesday night at a meeting called by State Rep. John W. Thompson, D-Manchester, to hear comments on services for retarded people.

The Glastonbury woman said her adult retarded daughter, living at home, has reached a plateau in development and that she and her husband can no longer help her advance. She said her daughter needs an independent placement in the community.

The woman said she understood the plight of the elderly parents, but she said, "I strongly resent having to fight for my daughter's needs over those of elderly parents."

Town hall's employees fault MARC's maintenance work

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Town employees have been unhappy with the quality of janitorial services provided by the Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens Workshop, which is seeking higher fees for its services.

Barbara Armentano, the secretary to the town Board of Directors, said today that 24 employees in the Municipal Building have signed a petition submitted to Town Manager Robert B. Weiss complaining that the cleaning being done in the building by MARC crews has not been adequate.

A MARC official today defended the work done by the crews.

MARC is seeking a new contract for its services, asking for a nearly 50 percent increase, from $25,000 per year to $42,000. Those fees cover the cleaning of the Municipal Building, Lincoln Center and the Probate Court.

The work is performed by supervised clients of the Manchester Workshop, which is run by MARC.

Armentano, who signed the petition, said that the problems, including the cleaning of a bathroom in the Municipal Building, may have been due to what she called a turnover of supervisory staff of the Workshop. She said that the cleaning had improved in the past week.

Betsy Lenihan, coordinator of MARC's job placement program, was not immediately available for comment but MARC executive director Laurie Prytko defended the work of the clients.

"I will say that the we've done an excellent job in the town hall, but as far as we're concerned, I believe the organization is doing a fine job," Prytko said. She said that MARC addresses any problems that are brought to its attention.

Assistant Town Manager Steven B. Werber said that while there have been complaints about the cleanliness of some facilities in the three buildings, those complaints have been taken care of when brought to the attention of MARC officials. He said there had been complaints about the cleaning of bathrooms, but as far as he's concerned, those problems have been addressed.

Werber said he had no knowledge of the petition, which could not be reached for comment this morning.

Prytko said that the increase in janitorial fees is a large one because past increases have been based on the Consumer Price Index, not the cost of labor. She said that labor costs and the cost of supplies accounted for the increase.

Plan limits first-time homebuyers

By Linda Stowell
The Associated Press

STAMFORD — A new plan designed to help first-time homebuyers get into the price-conscious housing market is welcomed by housing officials and real estate agents, but many say the plan may not work because its limits on how much people can spend on a house are too low.

"There are not many family homes in any of those counties that would sell in that price range except condominiums," said David Walker, first vice president and corporate economist at People's Bank in Bridgeport.

Officials for the Connecticut Housing Finance Authority who announced the plan said the sales price limits are a result of the federal Tax Reform Act of 1986, and the CHFA has to comply with that act. And, they said, their research shows there are houses available in those price ranges.

"The problem is, many say, that the average price of an existing house in Connecticut is about $180,000, and sales price limits in the CHFA plan range from $97,000 to $144,000.

"I think it's a farce," said Larry Gagnon, a real estate agent with Compass Realty of Greater Hartford Inc. "It's not going to work. There aren't any homes in that price range."

The CHFA announced it will release $100 million in 8.375 percent fixed rate mortgage loans, a plan officials said would allow more than 1,000 moderate income households get into Connecticut's price housing market.

Consumers hoping to participate in this plan must be first-time buyers who meet certain income and sales price limits, be good credit risks, and plan to occupy the house as their principal residence.

Funding for these mortgage loans comes from the first Mortgage Revenue Bonds issued by the CHFA under the provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Carol Montesi, a spokeswoman for the CHFA, said the sales price limits dropped about 20 percent as a reflection of the new tax laws.

First-time buyers trying to get into the wealthy Fairfield County area, are especially affected by the sales price limits.

The average price of an existing house sold so far this year is about $160,000 in Hartford, $145,000 in Bridgeport, $352,000 in Stamford and more than $700,000 in Greenwich, real estate agents say.

"Maybe somebody could find something in inner city Bridgeport or inner city Norwalk, but it's not going to help in Stamford or Greenwich," said Peter Helic, chief operating officer at William Pitt Inc. in Stamford. "I think it's making that big of a difference."

The sales price limit for an existing house in Stamford, according to the CHFA plan, is $129,000, although in some portions of Stamford, it is $144,000.

Helic says a one-bedroom condominium will sell now for about $120,000 and a small house sells for about $225,000.

He and other real estate agents said the plan will enable more people to at least buy condominiums, because there is a glut of them now.

"I think it will help people in Connecticut, but not necessarily in the Fairfield County area," Helic said.

Montesi said, "There has always been a tension between our goal to provide financing for moderate income buyers and the realities of a high cost real estate market as we see here in Connecticut."

"We remain confident we will continue to be able to lend to moderate income first-time homebuyers because recent lending activity has shown that sales prices have been on par with the new sales price limits for most areas of the state."

Walker said buyers may be able to find condominiums within the sales price limits.

"The first-time buyers are effectively shut out of the house market," Walker said. "There is no question Fairfield County is among the highest (for cost of housing) in the nation."

In Greenwich, Douglas Stevens, branch manager of William Pitt Inc. said for the first six months of this year, the average price of an existing single family house was more than $700,000.

"The CHFA money that has been available really has had no impact on our market here in Greenwich," Stevens said. "The ceilings are just too low."

"It's a great idea, it's a nice idea, but it's not germane to Greenwich, Connecticut."

Small quake shakes areas near Norwich

NORWICH (AP) — Scientists say the tremors felt by some Norwich area residents earlier this week was a small earthquake.

The earthquake hit the Norwich area early Tuesday and was strong enough to generate reports as far away as Groton, scientists at the University of Connecticut and Boston College said Wednesday.

Police in Groton apparently received the most reports, with several people calling in that there had been an explosion or some type of accident that had shaken their houses.

The quake, which hit at 12:25 a.m. Tuesday, registered 2.6 on the Richter scale, said university seismologist Vernon F. Cormier, not enough to be classified as serious.

"Even if you're sitting right on top of a 2.6 it's not going to cause much damage, although it could shake things off a shelf," Cormier said.

"This was a typical size for an earthquake in Connecticut," said John E. Ebel, assistant director of the Weston Observatory at Boston College, where he is an assistant professor of geophysics.

Ebel said Weston has sensors in North Stonington and Moodus, which charted the epicenter of the quake as three miles east of downtown Norwich. He said he was not surprised there was some confusion about what might have caused the tremors that rippled through the region.

"An earthquake of 2.6 is typically about the smallest that can be felt," Ebel said.

An earthquake measuring 6 on the Richter scale is the equivalent of an underground 150 kiloton nuclear bomb test, or blowing up 150,000 tons of TNT, Cormier said.

Man gives up after kidnap

PLAINVILLE (AP) — A man allegedly abducted his former girlfriend in an effort to rekindle their relationship but later released her unharmed and surrendered to police, authorities said.

Keith A. French, 24, of New Britain, surrendered Wednesday at police headquarters and was held on $50,000 bond pending arraignment today in Bristol Superior Court on a charge of second-degree kidnapping, police Lt. Joseph Alivaz said.

Alivaz said French broke off a relationship with the 29-year-old woman two weeks ago but went to the bank where she works Wednesday morning to seek reconciliation.

Ex-teacher on probation

MERIDEN (AP) — A former teacher has been sentenced to three years on probation and ordered to surrender his teaching certificate after pleading no contest in a misdemeanor assault charge connected to three female students.

John Albinger, 44, of West Haven, was arrested in March and accused of "improper written communications" with the three pupils at the Hamden Middle School.

In addition to probation and loss of his teaching certificate, Albinger last week received a one-year suspended sentence and was ordered by a Superior Court judge to donate $500 to a hospice after being convicted of third-degree assault, a misdemeanor.

Two teens held in slaying

HARTFORD (AP) — Two city teen-agers have been charged in the shooting death last week of a man who police say was hit by a bullet intended for someone else.

Morris Carter, 19, and a 15-year-old minor whose name was not released, were charged late Wednesday with murder, conspiracy to commit murder, criminal use of a firearm and reckless endangerment, police said. The youth was also charged with accessory to murder.

Both were being held on $300,000 bond.

Richard Wiggins, 26, of Hartford was shot in the chest and killed about 1:30 a.m. July 28 as he stood in front of an Enfield Street residence. Police said the shots fired from the driveway of a house across the street were intended for someone else and that Wiggins was an innocent bystander.

Man robs Stamford bank

STAMFORD (AP) — The FBI and the Stamford police are investigating a bank robbery that occurred at about 10 a.m. Wednesday, where authorities say one man escaped with an undetermined amount of cash from the Stamford Savings Bank.

Stamford police said a man entered the bank, pulled his shirt over part of his face and announced the robbery.

Inmate escapes from clinic

PRESTON (AP) — A Norwich man serving a prison sentence for assault who escaped from an alcohol treatment clinic on the grounds of the Norwich State Hospital remained at large today, state police said.

Dennis M. Stiggle, 22, bolted from the Bonooki Clinic Tuesday after he was told he was being discharged from the treatment program and being sent back to prison, clinic staff members said.

State police from the Montville barracks were called to the scene at 5 p.m. after Stiggle escaped. Using tracking dogs, police searched the woods around the clinic for several hours while cruisers patrolled the highways in the vicinity all night.

Bill to create system to track hospital wastes

By Christopher Callahan
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate, disgusted with used syringes and other medical waste floating up on beaches from New Jersey to Massachusetts, easily passed legislation designed to track the debris and hold dumpers accountable with stiff fines and jail terms.

The measure would require the Environmental Protection Agency to track hospital waste disposal in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut through an elaborate paper trail, mandating detailed manifests of medical items from "point of generation to point of disposal."

It also would require the EPA to monitor beaches in New York, New Jersey and New England for the type of trash that has littered the shoreline since 1980. An estimated beach closings into a summer of '88 ritual.

"We need to track this material from cradle to grave, make sure it doesn't find its way in the water and on our beaches," Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., author of the bill, said Wednesday. "We've had enough of the assault on our oceans."

Lautenberg and Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., criticized EPA officials for not taking the action on their own, but the agency's top official said the legislation is necessary.

The bill passed on a voice vote. A similar measure, sponsored by Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., is pending in the House.

The proposal is a response to medical debris that has been washing up on the New Jersey shoreline in the last year. Moments for legislative action built as more syringes, blood vials and other hospital waste appeared on Long Island beaches in New York just after the Fourth of July weekend, and later along the New England coast as far as northern Massachusetts.

Officials in New England have found dozens of needles, syringes, catheter bags, rubber tubing, a colostomy bag and respirator parts in recent weeks, believed to have floated up from the New York area. Harder hit beaches in New York and New Jersey have been forced to close regularly this summer, devastating the tourism industry.

The Lautenberg proposal carries criminal penalties for illegal hospital waste dumping, ranging up to $50,000 for each day of violation and five years in prison. A violator who dumps the materials and knowingly endangers the public faces up to $250,000 in fines and 15 years in prison.

"Our beaches have been ravaged," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. "When we think of our beaches today, we think of syringes, sewers and sludge."

Earlier in the day, EPA Administrator Lee Thomas endorsed the legislation after meeting with Chief and Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. He said such special legislation was needed to install waste tracking system in the tri-state area.

The measure would give the agency "far more specific and direct authority than I currently have," Thomas said.

Officials 'unresponsive' to lifeguards' complaints

MADISON (AP) — Lifeguards at Hammonasset Beach State Park say officials have been unresponsive to their complaints of becoming ill since medical wastes began washing ashore three weeks ago.

Chuck Raudat, captain of the 30 lifeguards at the state's most popular beach, said the guards reported suffering from gastrointestinal ailments including nausea and diarrhea, and are ready to quit.

Raudat said the guards reported the illnesses at least a week ago to Gary Thomas, recreation manager of the park. Thomas said Wednesday he heard for the first time on July 16 that medical waste had washed ashore at Hammonasset. He said he notified someone at the state Department of Health Services, and was told to collect the medical trash and have it disposed of by a hospital.

He said he brought about 10 items to the Shoreline Clinic in Essex on Wednesday.

State officials said Wednesday they would test the waters off the shoreline at Hammonasset, which has remained open since numerous beaches were closed from New Jersey to Massachusetts after reporting medical waste washing ashore.

He said shareholders deserve an opportunity to make a profit on the portion of their Millstone investment that they agreed not to recover from Connecticut consumers.

The company says the remaining $2.5 million it wants to go to shareholders would offset some of the $17.5 million penalty regulators imposed on the utility earlier this year. Regulators belong to customers to be because, they said, NU did not demand a high enough price in its previous sales of power to other utilities.

But NU officials, who are suing the state to overturn the penalty, argue that this latest sale, at a higher price, responds to regulators' complaints. Therefore, they say, NU shareholders should be able to keep most of the 1988 profits from the deal.

Also, they say NU shareholders are earning profits below the level approved by regulators, 10.9 percent compared with 12.6 percent for the 12 months.

NU officials said that its Connecticut subsidiary, Connecticut Light & Power Co., agreed in 1986 not to charge its customers for $196 million of its $1.99 billion investment in the Millstone 3 nuclear power plant in Waterford.

They argue that because NU customers are not paying for about 10 percent of the Connecticut investment in the plant, they are not entitled to 10 percent of the profits from sale of Millstone 3 power to the four power companies. That accounts for $1.4 million of the $3.9 million that NU wants to give shareholders.

Also, he said, NU in 1987 declared the $199 million to be for Millstone 3.

He said shareholders deserve an opportunity to make a profit on the portion of their Millstone investment that they agreed not to recover from Connecticut consumers.

But NU officials, who are suing the state to overturn the penalty, argue that this latest sale, at a higher price, responds to regulators' complaints. Therefore, they say, NU shareholders should be able to keep most of the 1988 profits from the deal.

Also, they say NU shareholders are earning profits below the level approved by regulators, 10.9 percent compared with 12.6 percent for the 12 months.

NU officials said that its Connecticut subsidiary, Connecticut Light & Power Co., agreed in 1986 not to charge its customers for $196 million of its $1.99 billion investment in the Millstone 3 nuclear power plant in Waterford.

They argue that because NU customers are not paying for about 10 percent of the Connecticut investment in the plant, they are not entitled to 10 percent of the profits from sale of Millstone 3 power to the four power companies. That accounts for $1.4 million of the $3.9 million that NU wants to give shareholders.

Also, he said, NU in 1987 declared the $199 million to be

State consumer counsel says NU 'stealing' from customers

HARTFORD (AP) — The state consumer counsel pledged to fight Northeast Utilities' profit-dividing proposal, charging the utility is trying to "steal" $1.9 billion that belongs to its customers.

The $3.9 million, which the utility wants to distribute among shareholders, is part of a $17.5 million in profits that NU expects to earn from the sale of electricity to four New England utilities this year and in 1989.

But State Consumer Counsel James T. Meehan said the entire $23.2 million belongs to NU's customers. NU filed a profit-dividing proposal with the state Department of Public Utility Control on July 28.

"NU is trying to steal back the money. It's outrageous. There's no better way to say it," Meehan said. "What they are doing is taking $3.9 million that normally would be allotted to ratepayers and giving them to shareholders."

NU officials, however, argue that shareholders deserve the $3.9 million.

NU officials said that its Connecticut subsidiary, Connecticut Light & Power Co., agreed in 1986 not to charge its customers for $196 million of its $1.99 billion investment in the Millstone 3 nuclear power plant in Waterford.

They argue that because NU customers are not paying for about 10 percent of the Connecticut investment in the plant, they are not entitled to 10 percent of the profits from sale of Millstone 3 power to the four power companies. That accounts for $1.4 million of the $3.9 million that NU wants to give shareholders.

Also, he said, NU in 1987 declared the $199 million to be for Millstone 3.

He said shareholders deserve an opportunity to make a profit on the portion of their Millstone investment that they agreed not to recover from Connecticut consumers.

The company says the remaining $2.5 million it wants to go to shareholders would offset some of the $17.5 million penalty regulators imposed on the utility earlier this year. Regulators belong to customers to be because, they said, NU did not demand a high enough price in its previous sales of power to other utilities.

But NU officials, who are suing the state to overturn the penalty, argue that this latest sale, at a higher price, responds to regulators' complaints. Therefore, they say, NU shareholders should be able to keep most of the 1988 profits from the deal.

OPINION

Permit fee meant for inspections

Town officials made a public relations error when they said that inspection costs for the construction of the Pavilions at Buckland Hills would be borne by the Homart Development Co. and not by the town.

When the town later hired its retiring building inspector to become a special building inspector for the mall construction, to be paid from the public payroll, the earlier claim was cited by opponents of the tax incentives offered to Homart as evidence of double talk by town leaders.

Actually, the provision under which Homart would pay directly for inspections was in connection with road and utility improvements, not building construction, but that subtle distinction does not help the town's image in the eyes of critics.

In fact, the salary of the special building inspector, hired to inspect the mall construction, will be offset by the building-permit fees to be paid by the developers.

Admittedly, the money does go into the General Fund, and thus is one of the town's sources of revenue. But the purpose of building-permit fees is to pay for building inspections.

Because the fees paid under ordinary circumstances are supposed to pay for inspections under ordinary circumstances, it makes sense to have the fees paid for vast mall construction pay for the extra ordinary inspection services that such construction demands.

Welcome news for downtown

The decision by the U.S. Postal Service to maintain service downtown when it moves out of the central post office is welcome news.

In retrospect, it seems like the only logical decision that could have been made. But it is unlikely that it would have come about if town officials and the business community had not mounted a vigorous campaign.

There are apparently no specific plans for how and where the downtown service will be provided. With the move from the central post office to a new building on Sheldon Road three of four years off, it would be premature to make a specific plan.

But one sentence in a letter from the Postal Service to the state's Office of Policy and Management is reassuring. It says simply, "All customer services will be provided by this facility."

In an April letter to OPM, the town's planning director, capsulized the argument against the Postal Service's earlier plan to eliminate all downtown-based service. He said the strategy proposed "would force the urbanized area to function more like a suburban area."

Indeed, it would not have made any sense to have a downtown without a post office.

Drunks on road? Deregulate cabs

To the Editor:

It's easy to say you're against drunken driving and even easier to say you're for tougher laws. But it's hard to understand the problem as a whole and to find a true solution to it.

Nobody wants to live next to a bar. This is why our zoning regulations have taken bars away from the neighborhoods where people live and moved them into commercially zoned areas. This means people must find a way to get to the bars and find a way home afterward.

If you take people's driving licenses away you're just going to have more people driving without licenses and no insurance. Any reasonable solution to the problem must be accompanied by a program to find alternative transportation.

As someone who owned a tavern for three years I found it was not that hard to get people to give up their keys. But it was very hard to get any taxicab service in Manchester. Waiting 45 minutes to two hours is normal, and sometimes they just never show.

It is therefore my belief that any drunken driving bill should be accompanied by a bill that would deregulate the taxi business. And the lively business as a whole. Allow mini-buses to establish their own route to provide a service to the non-driving public. Using the free market principles, a new service business would come into place which would provide better service at a lower price.

Just taking people's licenses away is not the answer. These people still have to get back and forth to work. The taxi business is a government-protected monopoly. Free competition always works better. The deregulation of the cab business will be but one step toward solving the drunken driving problem.

We must look at these problems as a whole then understand the different parts and apply the principles of freedom to as many of these parts as possible. A free society uses the property of human energy to solve the ills within that society. Over 200 years has proven this theory to be correct. We must not abandon the Bill of Rights and the principles of America. We must apply these principles to come up with the best moral solution.

Rain, not aid; talk, not arms

To the Editor:

You know, Mr. Reagan, when you finally went out to see the drought, a little boy came up to you and said, "I want to be a farmer." Your response was, "Well, little boy, you need rain, not federal aid."

That was terrible. When Iran asked for arms to fight for peace for their country, why didn't you respond, "You don't need arms, you need to talk for peace, not arms."

Why did you send arms? Why? Think things over before you give your answers.

I read the verse on Aug. 3 by Sol R. Cohen. I have written a verse in response:

The Manchester Fair Rent Commission, in its now famous first time decision, must take the hard line position, because they now have the information, to make an intelligent summation.

It is very easy to criticize, when you think other people are being penalized. But it isn't fair to be unjustly critical. Just because other people are more knowledgeable and analytical.

Anderson article misleading, false

To the Editor:

A recent article by Jack Anderson is completely misleading and largely false. Before addressing the errors, let me outline a number of key facts.

In the early 1980s, the Army, Navy and the Air Force each started separate cruise missile programs that were designed to attack enemy radars. A proposal to consolidate the programs into a single joint service program because of duplication and cost was, first made by the House of Representatives in the spring of 1984. In the summer of 1984 the Senate agreed to the House proposal.

In November 1984, Department of Defense officials selected the Tacit Rainbow program as the joint service program because of duplication and cost. The program was designed to meet the requirements for each of the military departments. Since that decision was made, the military services and Department of Defense have asked for money every year to continue development of Tacit Rainbow. The other cruise missile programs, including the Seek Spinner program cited in the Anderson-Van Atta article, were terminated by DoD, and DoD has not requested any money for these programs since 1985. In the summer of 1986, the Northrop Corp. decided to locate its plant to build Tacit Rainbow missiles in Georgia.

Now let me address some of the errors in the story. First, Mr. Anderson and Mr. Van Atta call Tacit Rainbow "an Air Force missile program that the Air Force didn't want." The facts show just the opposite. The Tacit Rainbow program was started by the Air Force. DoD evaluated all three of the cruise missile programs under development in the Army, Navy and Air Force, and, with the agreement of the military services, selected the Air Force's Tacit Rainbow program as the single joint service program to perform this mission.

Second, the article implies that the Air Force would have terminated Tacit Rainbow and developed Seek Spinner if I had not forced them to fund it because it is being built in Georgia. Again, this is not supported by the facts. During the early 1980s I supported both Tacit Rainbow and Seek Spinner. In 1984 the House Armed Services Committee recommended consolidation of three programs into a single joint service program. The Senate Armed Services Committee agreed with that recommendation. The military services and the Defense Department then decided that Tacit Rainbow should be the services' joint cruise missile program. It was not until two years later that Northrop Corp. decided to locate a production facility in Georgia.

A nightmare in Ghana for U.S. citizen

WASHINGTON — Darrell Alexander's true story is the nightmare of every American traveler overseas.

The 46-year-old Los Angeles man has been in a jail in Ghana for two months since officials of that West African country yanked him off an airplane that would have taken him home. No charges have been filed against him, but authorities in Ghana claim he was illegally exporting African gray parrots.

His family in the United States says Alexander, a bird dealer, had all the proper U.S. and Ghanaian permits and that he had carefully gone through the legal hoops on both sides of the ocean. But being right is of little comfort when someone else has the key to the cell.

In diplomatic jargon, Alexander is not a hostage. No one from the State Department will negotiate for his freedom. There are no yellow ribbons. In the eyes of the United States, he is simply a man who is in jail for something he may or may not have done, and that's a personal problem.

Alexander's family sees it as a matter of life and death. On May 7, another American, Alton Sawyer of Lafayette, La., died after six months in a Ghanaian prison. He had been charged with a crime, but Ghanaian officials made vague references to illegal exporting and involvement with the Central Intelligence Agency. An autopsy showed Sawyer probably died of malaria. He was malnourished and had lost all of his body fat.

Once, he spoke into a live microphone and jested about bombing the Soviet Union. Another time, he joked that he sometimes withheld information from Congress. Now he's called Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis an invalid, and then said he was only kidding and shouldn't have said it.

Actually, what he said was, "I think I was kidding." Dukakis said no apology was needed. His running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, called the president's remark "outrageous and laughable." Vice President George Bush declined to comment.

Reagan is no stranger to this kind of problem. The most recent time he said something that he immediately had to regret was on March 15 when he was meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in the Oval Office.

A reporter asked him to comment on his former national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, pleading guilty to misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress.

"He just pleaded guilty to not telling Congress everything it wanted to know," said Reagan. "I've done that myself."

As reporters left the room, he told Shamir, "Oh, boy, just for that careless remark they'll go wild about 'Reagan wants to tell to Congress' or something."

Then there was the time, on Aug. 11, 1984, that the president was doing a voice test for his weekly radio broadcast. Although his words weren't going out onto the air, they were fed into the White House press room where reporters were preparing to cover his remarks.

"All right, my fellow Americans, I am pleased to tell you today that I have signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes." The president hasn't heard the last of that one yet.

It wasn't the only time he used his sound tests for some humor that didn't get on the air, but did get reported.

Once, he opened up with "Welcome to Death Valley Days." — the television program he used to host.

On another occasion, while warming up by reading his prepared text for a speech about the economy, he added, "And I am prepared to tell you, it's a hell of a mess."

Another time, in a prebroadcast warmup at his California ranch in 1982, he referred to the leaders of Poland as "a bunch of no-good, lousy bums."

Wednesday's fracas arose when a reporter asked the president, as he prepared to leave the White House briefing room after a question-and-answer session, whether he didn't think Dukakis should release his medical records.

Grinning, the president replied, "I'm not going to pick on an invalid."

A few minutes later, meeting with news executives for a briefing on Central America, he opened his remarks by saying, "A short time ago, I was down in the press room and I attempted a joke in response to a question, and I think I was kidding — but I don't think I should have said what I said."

As Dukakis said, "We all occasionally mispeak."

Some of us just do so more often than others.

W. Dale Nelson covers the White House for The Associated Press.

Westport has Newman; we've got ...

When you go to a political convention where a roll-call vote is taken, you can learn a lot about Connecticut towns. When the chairman of a delegation reports a vote to the convention, there's often a mention of something distinctive about that town. Custom permits hyperbole and occasional irony.

Some examples: Norwalk, which, with a new aquarium, has more sharks per capita than any other town.

Westport, the home of the amicable partnership between Paul Newman and Julius Gold.

Ansonia, the city of the valley, and Naugatuck, the hub of the valley.

Cheshire, the bedding plant capital of the world.

Reading, beautiful and bucolic. Prospect, the town with the extended view. Wilton, where nothing much happens because you can't buy a drink there.

Plainville, the town without the dog track. Wethersfield, the first town in Connecticut. Windsor, the true first town in Connecticut. East Windsor, birthplace of the dinosaur.

But what about Manchester? At the Democratic State Convention, Manchester's Ted Cummings passed up the opportunity to put a label on the town. But at the 1st Congressional District convention, he could not resist.

Manchester, he said, is the home of the biggest swamp and the largest sewer plant problem.

NOISY MEETING — Members of Bolton's Charter Revision Commission discovered Tuesday that the town firehouse is a noisy place to have a meeting. The fire department radio was left on during the meeting, though no firefighters were in the building.

The meeting was constantly disrupted by the voice of dispatchers barking orders, static crackling, and police and fire signals screeching.

Commission members tried to turn off the loudspeaker, but it was locked in an office. One commission member remarked that having a meeting at the firehouse was like meeting inside a video game.

NO APOLOGIES NECESSARY — Republican Town Director Terry Werkhoven told the Board of Directors last month that he meant no harm when he revealed the location of land the town was looking at as a possible site for a new police station.

He had the same message for the Republican Town Committee. But another

Republican, Betty Sadloski, said Werkhoven had nothing to be sorry about.

"You should not apologize," Sadloski said. "Any information belongs to the public."

Sadloski has been a longtime critic of the town administration.

FARM FACTS — Most people think of Hartford County as an urban area, but it has more farms than any other county in the state, according to the Hartford County Soil and Water Conservation District.

There are 715 farms in the county, covering about 67,000 acres of active farmland. There are 82,000 acres rated as prime farmland, and another 41,000 acres rated as farmland of statewide importance.

FIFTY YEARS AGO — From the Manchester Evening Herald on Aug. 3, 1938: Manchester received nationwide publicity this week when a full-page advertisement in Collier's Weekly magazine featured a testimonial on spark plugs by a local man, H.M. Eaton of 200 E. Center St., a salesman for the Norfolk Paint & Varnish Co. of North Quincy, Mass. The ad also carried a photograph of Mr. Eaton.

Park Superintendent Horace Murphey, at the request of residents in various parts of town, sent men employed in the park department to pools and ponds in town to spray oil on the water in an effort to kill mosquitoes, which seem to be greater in number and size this summer than ever before.

Reagan's glib tongue is trouble again

By W. Dale Nelson

Washington Wire

WASHINGTON — There you go again, Mr. President. Ronald Reagan, the great communicator, the man who is seldom at a loss for words, has gotten himself into trouble once more with his glib tongue.

Once, he spoke into a live microphone and jested about bombing the Soviet Union. Another time, he joked that he sometimes withheld information from Congress.

WASHINGTON — There you go again, Mr. President. Ronald Reagan, the great communicator, the man who is seldom at a loss for words, has gotten himself into trouble once more with his glib tongue.

Once, he spoke into a live microphone and jested about bombing the Soviet Union. Another time, he joked that he sometimes withheld information from Congress.

Now he's called Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis an invalid, and then said he was only kidding and shouldn't have said it.

Actually, what he said was, "I think I was kidding." Dukakis said no apology was needed. His running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, called the president's remark "outrageous and laughable." Vice President George Bush declined to comment.

Reagan is no stranger to this kind of problem. The most recent time he said something that he immediately had to regret was on March 15 when he was meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in the Oval Office.

A reporter asked him to comment on his former national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, pleading guilty to misdemeanor charges of withholding information from Congress.

"He just pleaded guilty to not telling Congress everything it wanted to know," said Reagan. "I've done that myself."

As reporters left the room, he told Shamir, "Oh, boy, just for that careless remark they'll go wild about 'Reagan wants to tell to Congress' or something."

Then there was the time, on Aug. 11, 1984, that the president was doing a voice test for his weekly radio broadcast. Although his words weren't going out onto the air, they were fed into the White House press room where reporters were preparing to cover his remarks.

"All right, my fellow Americans, I am pleased to tell you today that I have signed legislation that will outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes." The president hasn't heard the last of that one yet.

It wasn't the only time he used his sound tests for some humor that didn't get on the air, but did get reported.

Once, he opened up with "Welcome to Death Valley Days." — the television program he used to host.

On another occasion, while warming up by reading his prepared text for a speech about the economy, he added, "And I am prepared to tell you, it's a hell of a mess."

Another time, in a prebroadcast warmup at his California ranch in 1982, he referred to the leaders of Poland as "a bunch of no-good, lousy bums."

Wednesday's fracas arose when a reporter asked the president, as he prepared to leave the White House briefing room after a question-and-answer session, whether he didn't think Dukakis should release his medical records.

Grinning, the president replied, "I'm not going to pick on an invalid."

A few minutes later, meeting with news executives for a briefing on Central America, he opened his remarks by saying, "A short time ago, I was down in the press room and I attempted a joke in response to a question, and I think I was kidding — but I don't think I should have said what I said."

As Dukakis said, "We all occasionally mispeak."

Some of us just do so more often than others.

Wrangler not comfortable people-mover

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

The Jeep Wrangler is a four-wheel-drive runabout that appeals to the younger, adventurous buyer. Unlike the larger Jeep Cherokee or the Isuzu Trooper II, the Wrangler doesn't pretend to function as a comfortable people-mover or a capable cargo-carrier.

Recently, Consumer Reports' auto engineers road-tested a dynamic model. In general, they found it to be crude, very noisy and hard-riding, but it does what it is supposed to do as a simple on- and off-road utility vehicle.

The test car had the standard four-cylinder engine and five-speed manual transmission. Major options included power steering, stereo radio and a hard top with full doors rather than the convertible. List price was over $12,000.

The Wrangler always started and ran well, although the engine cranked slowly. Acceleration was just adequate, and the transmission shifted stiffly when cold. Four-wheel drive is activated at the tug of a lever when driving at any legal speed; the front hubs lock and unlock automatically.

Fuel economy was comparable to that of larger, heavier vehicles with automatic transmissions. Expect to average about 19 mph in two-wheel drive.

In routine handling, the Wrangler exhibited oddly sensitive power steering, combining abrupt response with virtually no road feel. While it stayed very level in turns, the Jeep was quite vulnerable to wind on the highway.

Its emergency handling was tricky. Consumer Reports' test drivers said unskilled drivers could find the Wrangler difficult to handle in an emergency. It fishtailed easily. In all the tests, however, the vehicle stayed level, showing no tendency to lift two wheels or roll over. Braking was unimpressive.

The Jeep's ride ranged from annoying on the smooth roads to punishing on rough roads. The vehicle can snap and jerk occupants painfully. As for noise, be forewarned: A half-hour ride on the highway, with ceaseless road, wind and engine noise, was an exhausting safari. The bare fiberglass top and bare metal rear floor amplified the noise.

Seat comfort is less than ideal. The driver's seat is low, and the steering wheel is high. The pedals are crowded to the left. The front seats provide little support, and the rigidly straight seat backs aren't adjustable. The tiny bench in the rear barely accommodates two average-sized men, and makes no pretenses about providing

Queen awaits grandchild

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II reportedly joked that she is tired of waiting for her daughter-in-law, the Duchess of York, to give birth.

"I'm fed up with all this waiting," the British monarch told a crowd of well-wishers outside St. Christopher's Hospice here Wednesday, according to the domestic news agency Press Association.

"These wretched babies don't come until they are ready," she was quoted as saying. "They don't come to order."

The first child of the former Sarah Ferguson, 28, and the queen's second son, Andrew, is due next year, Press Association said, but speculation has been rife in London's tabloid press that the birth could come sooner.

The queen's comments came as the queen helped the hospice, which cares for advanced cancer patients, celebrate its founding 21 years ago.

Tyson enters new career

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The entertainment career of boxer Mike Tyson, who crushed Michael Spinks' bid to take away his heavyweight title crown last month, will be guided by Norman Brokaw, the agent says.

"He is today's newest American hero," Brokaw, co-chairman of the board of the William Morris Agency, said Wednesday.

"I think he's a winner. I like everything that I see in Mike Tyson. He's a marvelous young man," said Brokaw. "In the entertainment industry, I see the writing of a book, television, commercials and personal appearances."

Tyson, 22, defeated Spinks in 91 seconds in Atlantic City, N.J., on June 27. Brokaw's client roster includes Bill Cosby, Andy Griffith, diver Greg Louganis, former President Gerald Ford, industrialist Armand Hammer and ex-Reagan administration cabinet officials Alexander Haig, Donald Regan and Casper Weinberger.

Propeller beats Norris

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — Action movie star Chuck Norris was beaten by a propeller in his attempt to set an ocean speed record from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

A chipped propeller took 41 minutes to repair at sea Wednesday, preventing Norris and his crew of four from racing their 46-foot Scarab from the Golden Gate Bridge to Marina del Rey in less than seven hours, two minutes, 32 seconds.

The boat, under reduced power because a second propeller was causing problems, arrived here in 7:41:19, said Joe Hice, spokesman for Wellcraft Marine, which made the hull.

Norris did set a record for a diesel-powered craft because this was the first time a diesel boat attempted the 440-mile run, said Hice. The record was set in 1984 by a gasoline-powered boat.

A country bumpkin

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — He's been a song and dance man, Davy Crockett's sidekick and a TV detective, but actor Buddy Ebsen says he expects he'll always be remembered as a rich bumpkin in Beverly Hills.

"The Beverly Hillbillies" will be around as long as there's a planet. It's a piece of Americana," said Ebsen, one of the actors invited to this year's Memphis Film Festival, an annual four-day showing of old movies.

"I still have 4-year-old kids come up to me and say, 'There's Uncle Jed,'" the 80-year-old Ebsen said recently.

On the Hillbillies, with 287 episodes made between 1962 and 1971, Ebsen played Jed Clampett, a likable rural resident who struck it rich and moved his family to California.

Oprah takes control

CHICAGO (AP) — Talk show host Oprah Winfrey says she has obtained ownership and control of her show from Cap Cities-ABC.

The arrangement is similar to that of Johnny Carson, whose Carson Productions owns and produces "The Tonight Show" as well as other shows.

"That's exactly what I'm going to do. Eventually I'm going to buy a studio and produce things for other people," Winfrey said Wednesday.

"The Oprah Winfrey Show," the second highest-rated syndicated show, is distributed by King World and is carried in 190 TV markets.

Peter Gott, M.D.

Growth disorder occurs in males

DEAR DR. GOTT: My son, 14, is 53 inches tall. The doctors in West Germany said he has Noonan's syndrome, a growth disorder. Could you tell me more about this?

DEAR READER: Noonan's syndrome is a hereditary abnormality in males, marked by short stature, low-set ears, webbing of the neck, mental retardation and bone malformations. These children have normal X chromosomes, unlike the female variant (Turner's syndrome) which is characterized by an absence of one of the two X chromosomes. The cause is unknown; treatment is primarily supportive. However, your son probably can lead a normal life with supervision and special training.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Does anyone really know what causes a person to sleep?

DEAR READER: Actually, sleep is our natural condition. The really interesting question is what keeps us awake. Our wakeful state appears to be under the control of a complex nerve pathway, which bombards our brains at appropriate times with electrical stimuli. Scientists are trying to learn about this fascinating subject. The wonder is that we are not asleep all the time.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, "Sleep/Wake Disorders."

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been told by my doctor that I have a spur on my heel, but he has given me no hint as to curing the pain. Can you suggest anything?

DEAR READER: A heel spur is additional bone (exostosis) that originates in the weight-bearing portion of the heelbone (calcaneus) and grows forward horizontally in the dense covering (fascia) of the heel. The spur probably results from chronic strain that injures the fascia where it attaches to the calcaneus.

Many spurs cause no symptoms. However, once irritated by pressure or injury, they can cause severe discomfort, rather like having a stone in one's shoe. Spurs are diagnosed by X-ray examination. Treatment consists of orthotic devices (worn in the shoe to alleviate strain), injection of cortisone and novocaine or, in rare cases, surgical removal of the calcium deposit. If your doctor has not been able to help your pain, see a podiatrist or an orthopedic surgeon for further recommendations.

Parents worried about son's development

DEAR DR. REINISCH: We are concerned about the small penis size of our 3-year-old. He's smaller than any other same-age boys we've seen. Even his grandmother has expressed concern.

Even though we find it embarrassing when even points this out to us, we're even more concerned about him ending up with some sort of inferiority complex.

Is there anything we can do to correct the situation? He's medically normal in every other respect.

DEAR READER: Even quite normal boys differ greatly in development of the genitals, so that comparing by age is not very useful. In general, each boy has some growth in penis size between birth and around age 5, little further growth until age 10 or 11, and then growth to adult size between years 11 and 17.

Micropenis, the medical term used to designate an extremely small penis, does occur, but this birth defect is rare.

Try to have your son evaluated by a pediatric endocrinologist (a specialist in children's development). Most medical schools and large hospital centers have such a staff member or can recommend a physician qualified to do such evaluations.

Chances are that your son's penis size is within the normal range and no medical treatment will be necessary. However, you are right to be concerned about his psychological development and self-esteem. Specialists can provide or refer you to a qualified source for the counseling necessary to help both your son and yourself handle any future comments or problems.

If a problem with hormonal levels or other physical characteristics is found, a specialist can often design and monitor a treatment program in cooperation with your family physician, so that frequent travel to a distant medical facility is not necessary.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: It's been six years since I have had a full total erection and nearly two years since I've had an erection firm enough for intercourse. I also have had retrograde ejaculations for about four years.

I'm 58 and have sugar and poor circulation to my legs and feet. Even though I can't have intercourse and my wife and I have sexual satisfaction by hand and oral means, I still have strong desires for intercourse.

Can the erection problem be corrected by surgery? Isn't there a way to increase the flow of blood into the penis? I've heard of some kind of pump that does this. I surely hope that my sex life is not over.

DEAR READER: When you say "sugar," I'm guessing you mean that you have diabetes, and such problems are not unusual among diabetic men. However, you still must see a specialist in diagnosing sexual dysfunctions because the erection and ejaculation changes could be caused by something other than the diabetes.

It you can't find such a specialist listed under "Physicians and Surgeons" in the Yellow Pages of your telephone book, ask your local medical society to explain how to locate such a physician. Or call the nearest medical school or large hospital and

Aid package for rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats are proposing a new aid package for Nicaragua's Contra rebels that defers a decision on whether to resume the flow of U.S. weapons, giving their party its first show of unity on the issue in seven years.

But the step taken Wednesday gets only halfway to the goal Majority Leader Robert Byrd is seeking: a bipartisan accord that will break Central America that the United States favors a peaceful solution, and at the same time blunt the issue's political impact throughout the fall election season.

Iran also said Iraqi military aircraft bombed two industrial targets in western Lorestan province and injured a number of workers. It did not give details.

Vietnam stops aid

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam's foreign minister today said his country will no longer help account for missing U.S. servicemen or cooperate on other humanitarian issues until Washington ends its "hostile policy against my government."

Vietnam announced Wednesday that it has temporarily halted plans for joint efforts to account for missing Americans and for resettling former political prisoners in the United States.

Agreements on the issues had been reached last month.

More flights on time

WASHINGTON (AP) — More flights by the nation's 13 biggest airlines in June arrived and departed on time than in any month since the government began compiling the statistics last year, the Department of Transportation says.

The department said 84.9 percent of the airlines' operations were on schedule in June, bettering the 82.6 percent on-time rate recorded in April. The government began issuing the figures last September.

America West Airlines reported that 92.8 percent of its flights operated on schedule, the best record by any airline. Southwest Airlines was next best at 90.8 percent, and American Airlines took third place with an 88.2 percent record.

Bringing up the rear were Pan American with an on-time figure of 72.2 percent, USAir at 78.6 percent and Trans World Airlines with 79 percent.

Residents protest leader

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — About 10,000 people demonstrated today in downtown Rangoon against Burma's new hardline leader, Sein Lwin, just one day after he imposed martial law to quell unrest, western diplomats said.

Soldiers fired warning shots into the air during the demonstrations in the capital, the Rangoon-based diplomats said.

They said crowds comprised mostly of young students had gathered around the Sule Pagoda near the heart of the city and troops moved into position and fired volleys of warning shots, but no further details were available.

Reagan prepares to sign trade bill

By Mike Robinson The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is preparing to sign a landmark bill designed to reduce U.S. deficits in trade, ending three years of skirmishing between the White House and Capitol Hill over the trade issue.

"While this is still not perfect — no bill 1,128 pages in length ever is — on balance it will strengthen America's international competitiveness," Reagan said Wednesday after the Senate approved the measure 85-11.

Fifty Democrats joined 35 Republicans in voting for the bill while it was opposed by 10 Republicans and one Democrat — retiring Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who objected to changes in the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

Reagan had vetoed an earlier version of the trade bill on May 24 because it included a provision that companies give employees 60 days' notice of plant closings or major layoffs. That provision later was approved as a separate bill that Reagan reluctantly allowed earlier this week to become law.

Major provisions of the new bill would authorize U.S. negotiators to reach agreements in the current Uruguay Round of international trade talks. They also would streamline the system under which the government imposes import curbs to protect American business and retaliate against trade violations.

Provisions also include repeal of the 1980 windfall profits tax on oil industry earnings — which has not produced any revenue since oil prices plunged three years ago. The bill contains funds for retraining of those left jobless by foreign competition and a potential $2.5 billion in export subsidies for agricultural products.

In a change in the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, the bill would make it easier for American executives to defend themselves against bribery charges arising from payments by their agents overseas to foreign officials.

The bill also would impose sanctions on Toshiba Corp. of Japan and Kongsberg Vaapenfabrik of Norway and two of their subsidiaries for the subsidiaries' action in selling submarine-silencing equipment to the Soviet Union.

"This is a strong bill but it is not a protectionist bill," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., who played a major role in shaping the measure over the last three years of trade debate.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen of Texas — the Democratic vice presidential candidate — told reporters: "What we have here is the most important piece of trade legislation in 60 years."

"We've told the world that America can govern," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont. "We've put our house in order."

Hastings vows to remain despite his impeachment

MIAMI (AP) — Judge Alcee L. Hastings, impeached despite his acquittal on bribery charges, vowed to remain on the federal bench, and said his U.S. Senate impeachment trial will show "who framed Roger Rabbit."

"I'll be here tomorrow just like I was here today," Hastings said, jumping up to touch his name on the outside of the federal courthouse, after the U.S. House voted 413-3 for impeachment Wednesday.

In an impromptu news conference on the courthouse steps, the 51-year-old judge called the 17 articles of impeachment approved by the House "bald-faced lies."

The vote marked the first time the House has impeached a federal official acquitted of similar charges in a criminal trial and the first time a black official has been a defendant in impeachment proceedings.

The House sent the case to the Senate, where conviction by a two-thirds majority is required for removal. The Senate has not announced a trial date.

Hastings said he believes the Senate will find legal and procedural flaws in House Judiciary subcommittee hearings that preceded Wednesday's vote. "We will then find out who framed Roger Rabbit," he said, referring to a motion picture about a cartoon rabbit framed for murder.

"During the last three weeks, America has witnessed a bizarre situation that led to my impeachment," he said. "We have seen the blind — the subcommittee — mislead the blinder, Congress."

"I never did anything wrong," Hastings insisted. "I know it, and they know it. We are witnessing the thrashing of the American system of justice."

"We will win," he added. "And with the help of the American people, I shall put this Mickey Mouse horror show behind me."

If convicted by the Senate, Hastings would be removed from the $89,500-a-year job he has held since he was appointed by then-President Jimmy Carter in 1979.

"The vote today, in my humble opinion, is a disgrace," said Hastings. "Many congresspersons voted with no knowledge of the voluminous record that it took seven long years to compile."

Flight was only the beginning, Rust says

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Mathias Rust, who spent 14 months in a Soviet jail for flying a small plane into Red Square, says the stunt was worth the price and only the beginning of his efforts to improve East-West relations.

But the step taken Wednesday gets only halfway to the goal Majority Leader Robert Byrd is seeking: a bipartisan accord that will break Central America that the United States favors a peaceful solution, and at the same time blunt the issue's political impact throughout the fall election season.

Human error cited as cause for jet downing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Human mistakes in the midst of combat and not malfunctioning equipment apparently led to the downing of an Iranian passenger jet by a U.S. Navy warship last month, defense officials say.

"There were no problems with Aegis," one official said in reference to the sophisticated radar system aboard the USS Vincennes.

"The biggest question when this started was whether Aegis worked properly," another official said Wednesday. "And the inquiry has found no evidence of a malfunction."

The defense officials agreed to discuss the preliminary findings into the July 3 tragedy only on condition that the U.S. Navy not identify the crew members who were involved.

The sources stressed that the findings of the investigative team that just returned from the gulf had yet to be accepted formally or "endorsed" by military brass or Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci.

"But this (explanation) is very plausible," one source said. "People underestimate the human factor and stress. You can't replicate that in exercises and training."

The Vincennes, one of the Navy's newest and most sophisticated ships, fired on the Iranian airliner after concluding it was an Iranian jet fighter. The Vincennes' crew classified the approaching radar "contact" as hostile and when the plane failed to respond to radio warnings, the ship's skipper gave the order to open fire.

The classification and that radar contact as hostile appears to have been made by crewmen in the heat of battle without adequate technical justification, one official said. There is no evidence the Aegis radar system malfunctioned or that it presented technical data to justify the "hostile" classification, the source explained.

The ship was on high alert; Iranian fighters had been detected operating from the same area. Very quietly, almost upon takeoff, the plane was classified as hostile, a source said.

"Here you had a bunch of people believing that the inbound was hostile and thought to be a threat," the official said. "So here you've got a minute or two. As you've got something (in contact) that obviously was not responding to warnings, which further suggests that it might be hostile. It's not as simple as just saying human error. They didn't purposely shoot down an airliner."

East Hartford takes postseason opener

Game 2 in Zone Eight playoff scheduled tonight at Moriarty Field

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

EAST HARTFORD — Baseball games don't get any better than Game 1 of the Zone 8 American Legion clash between archrivals East Hartford and Manchester Wednesday night at McKenna Field.

In this best 2-out-of-3 series to determine the Zone 8 representative to the State Legion Tournament, East Hartford and Manchester staged the initial battle of an impending war in Game 1.

The score was tied at 7-all with the bases loaded and two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning with East Hartford leadoff hitter Bob Stefanik at the plate against southpaw reliever Jeff Allen. Stefanik lifted a seemingly harmless fly ball to center field which, suddenly, became enveloped in the black night and floated over the head of Dave Price scoring pinch-runner Rick Repeta with the winning marker.

The 8-7 loss suffered by Post 102 was a heartbreaker, but Manchester Coach Dave Morency saw nothing but positive things from his courageous ballclub which rocked winning pitcher Tim Cain for seven runs on eight hits. Cain, who completed his freshman year at UConn, was one of the outstanding freshman pitchers in the Big East.

Game 2 will be played today at 5 p.m. at Moriarty Field with two southpaws on the mound, Marc Mangiafico for East Hartford and Jim Kitsack for Manchester.

ever been involved in as a coach," Morency said. "I think they (East Hartford) were a little bit surprised. We take the premier pitcher (Cain) in the state of Connecticut and tack seven runs on him. They can't throw anything better. I don't think anybody hit him that hard at UConn."

Post 102 jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the second inning highlighted by Jimmy Penders' two-run triple and an RBI-single by Dave Price. A sacrifice fly by Joe Leonard in the third extended Manchester's advantage to 4-0.

"They (Manchester) are very aggressive hitters," East Hartford Coach Jim Bidwell said. "Most of the teams in this league wouldn't have hit him (Cain) as hard as they did. I give them a lot of credit."

Trailing 4-1 in the fourth, East Hartford chased Post 102 starter Pat Maguire from the mound after loading the bases with one out. Reliever Ken Gancarz surrendered back-to-back RBIs-singles by Mangiafico and Dave Sgino making it 4-3. Post 102 second baseman Marcus Mateya made a beautiful play forcing Stefanik at second to end further damage.

"Everybody said we can't hit. We showed tonight we can swing the bats," Bidwell explained. "Tonight, we got a lot of back-to-back hits."

Four hits, two throwing errors and a stolen base produced three Post 77 runs in the fifth putting them ahead for the first time, 6-4. Allen replaced Gancarz to start the sixth. Stefanik reached first on a third strike which got past Penders. Stefanik stole second and third and scored on a sacrifice fly by Cain for a 7-4 cushion heading into Post 102's last at-bat.

After Rob Stanford grounded out, Dom Laurinitis, named the Zone's top hitter before the game, singled to center. Keith DiVeso then lined sharply to Paul Caccavale in center and Manchester was down to its last gasp. Neal Schackner responded with an RBI-double down the right field line scoring Laurinitis.

Pinch-hitter Don Sauer drilled an RBI-double down the left field line scoring Schackner. A passed ball moved Sauer to third and Penders beat out an infield hit to shortstop Kevin Lawrence which scored Sauer to tie it at 7-all. Penders had two hits and three RBIs for Manchester while Tylon Crump led East Hartford with three hits while Stefanik added two.

"This isn't over by a long shot," Morency warned. "We're going to be playing Friday night."

Changes make man in Verplank's case

By Owen Confield
The Associated Press

EDMOND, Okla. — Scott Verplank's decision to take off his game face during competition had nothing to do with saving his golf game. It has everything to do with saving himself.

"I just got fed up with being hard on myself," Verplank said Wednesday at Oak Tree Golf Club. "It was a matter of recognizing that I needed to make a change in the way I was going on with my life."

"I said, 'I've got to change or I've got to quit.' I decided that either the game was going to crack or I was, and I knew the game wouldn't."

No, the chances of Verplank's golf game cracking were remote. His smooth swing and soft putting touch led him to fame at the junior and collegiate levels, and he piled up a warehouse full of trophies.

In 1985, while still in college, he won the PGA Tour's Western Open and many expected Verplank to meet the same success when he joined the Tour in 1986. When it didn't happen — he eventually lost his Tour card and had to go to qualifying school to regain it — Verplank began to press.

He practiced as hard as ever, and concentrated just as hard while on the course, but he didn't shoot the same low numbers.

The idea of changing his approach, however, was a bit scary.

"It's hard to argue with success," he said. "I played pretty damn well in '85, winning the Western and all the amateur events. It was hard to say, 'I need to be different now.'"

So he continued to practice hard and play hard, but the more he tried to improve his game, the less fun golf became. And the less fun it became, the more Verplank worked. And on and on.

Finally, he decided prior to the Buick Open last week to wear a smile instead of a frown on the golf course, and to truly play for the fun of it.

"When I play out here (at Oak Tree), we like to take our shirt off, wear shorts and tennis shoes and have fun, and we play pretty good," Verplank explained. "I decided why should I be any different off the golf course than on the golf course? Off the course, I love to go out and have fun, laugh, play practical jokes and have them played on me.

"My goal off the golf course is to have fun. Why should it be any different on the golf course?"

Last week, Verplank decided, it wasn't going to be. He didn't hit a practice ball in the days prior to the tournament, and when he stepped up on the first tee on Thursday, he felt like playing golf again.

He shot a 6-under-par 66 on Thursday, followed that with another 66 on Friday and on Saturday carded a 70 to finish three rounds at 14-under par, tied for the lead.

The 17th hole on Saturday is a fond memory. Trailing Howard Twitty by one shot, Verplank had a 25-foot downhill putt for birdie on the par-3 hole.

"As I was lining up the putt, a guy behind me said, 'Hey Scott, you make this and I'll buy you a beer,'" Verplank said. "I didn't turn around, but I gave him a thumbs up sign over my shoulder and then I made the putt. It was the most exciting shot I've ever made."

Prior to last week, Verplank likely would not have acknowledged the fan, and may not have even heard him. Intense concentration was always the name of his game.

"That's the way I grew up and the way I was trained in college," he said. "I'd been that way forever. I don't need to be like that."

On Sunday, Verplank smiled all the way to the bank. He shot another 66 to win the tournament by two strokes and picked up $126,000 for the victory. More importantly, it qualified him to play in the PGA Championship at his home course, Oak Tree.

"I needed to finish in the top three to qualify," he said. "Going in I said, 'To hell with that, I can't finish in the top three.' I had given up hope."

Now hope springs eternal. "What I did last week was something I'd never done before in a tournament," he said. "But it wasn't something new for me. I just did what I like to do at home."

HAPPY WINNER — Scott Verplank, shown in a file photo, raises his arm after winning the Buick Open last Sunday. Verplank says changes he's made have made a difference.

GAME WINNER — Jody Reed follows through on a two-out single scoring Ellis Burks in the eighth inning Wednesday night at Fenway Park, giving the Boston

Red Sox a club-record 22nd consecutive home victory, a 5-4 verdict over the Texas Rangers.

Morgan's Marauders ride into tie for AL East lead

By Dave O'Hara
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Morgan's Magic continues. And the Boston Red Sox have charged into a tie with Detroit for the American League East lead.

In less than three weeks under new manager Joe Morgan, the Red Sox have made up nine games on the Tigers, going 19-1 since John McNamara was fired two days after the All-Star Game.

With Morgan, their former third base coach, rewarded with a new contract that will pay him a reported $190,000 in 1989, the Red Sox pulled out a 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers Wednesday night.

Rookie Jody Reed's two-out single scored Ellis Burks from second base to lift the surprising Red Sox to their 22nd consecutive home victory, tying the AL record for consecutive home victories set by the 1931 Philadelphia Athletics.

So, just how tough is it to win 22 games in a row with the home field advantage?

The best indicator is that only two other major league teams have accomplished the feat in this century. The New York Giants won 26 in a row at the old Polo Grounds in 1916 and the 1978 Pittsburgh Pirates had a 24-game streak in Three Rivers Stadium.

Few of the Red Sox, though, think much of the Fenway Park winning string, begun under McNamara on June 25. They're more concerned with the 19-1 record under Morgan and moving from virtually nowhere into contention for the division title.

"I haven't heard one player say, 'Wow, we've won 22 games at home,'" outfielder Mike Greenwell said. "All we've been talking about is winning a game tomorrow."

"We've played good enough baseball to pick up nine games in three weeks. We've won 19 out of 20. That's a tremendous streak. And we've done what we wanted to do — we got ourselves back in the race. Now we have to stay there."

The Red Sox learned of the Tigers' 2-1 loss to Kansas City just before they left friendly Fenway Park for a flight to Detroit and a five-game showdown for the division lead.

"Our adrenalin is flowing, and everything is going our way," outfielder Ellis Burks said. "It should be a great series in Detroit."

Virtually all of the Red Sox conceded that luck, along with Morgan's Magic, played a key role in the Red Sox victory over Texas, completing a sweep of a sixth consecutive series at home.

"You have to have a little luck in this game," said Burks, who was hitless Wednesday night but made contributions on the basepaths and in center field.

"We were lucky tonight, no question," Morgan said. "They hit a few line drives that were caught, and if they got one more hit in that seventh inning, it would've probably finished us for the night."

"Now we'll go into Detroit tomorrow (Thursday) night and try to keep going."

Morgan said the Red Sox "got lucky" when Pete Incaviglia slipped and fell while waiting to catch a routine fly ball to left in the seventh. Wade Boggs got a gift triple and scored the tying run on Marty Barrett's grounder to second.

The Red Sox got another break, Morgan said, when Jim Rice was nearly tagged out after rounding second on Reed's single, which scored Burks from second.

"I thought he was safe, but if he were out, that run wouldn't have counted," Morgan said. "Burks would never have got to the plate before that."

"It seems to be all in this big ball of wax we're in, I guess. What can you say?"

"I thought we had them, but they just find ways to keep coming back." Texas starter Bobby Witt, 3-7, said. "I wouldn't have been surprised if Boggs got up the next time and hit one off my head, and it went over the Green Monster" in left.

The Rangers took a 4-3 lead in the seventh on Incaviglia's RBI single after a two-run throwing error by reliever Bob Stanley. "I don't know if teams can hold us to three or four runs," Barrett said. "I can't imagine a guy pitching a much better game than Bobby Witt did, and we ended up getting five runs off him."

Burks walked with one out in the eighth, and one out later stole second, his 16th theft of the season.

Red Sox reward Morgan

By Dave O'Hara
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Joe Morgan, who replaced John McNamara as manager of the Boston Red Sox on July 14, was rewarded Wednesday with a new contract through the 1989 season.

"Joe has rekindled the enthusiasm and optimism of the players and fans," said Red Sox president and principal owner Jean R. Yawkey in a statement.

"We believe he deserves the opportunity to manage the Red Sox in 1989," she added.

"It means I can eat," quipped Morgan, who earned about $40,000 a year as a coach and will go to a reported $190,000 in 1989 as manager. "This is a great feeling and I'm thankful to the Red Sox for this great opportunity."

Veteran second baseman Marty Barrett summed up the players' feelings, saying: "This is great for Joe and we're all happy for him. He's worked a long time in baseball and he's finally getting long overdue recognition."

Morgan, who will be 58 in November, was promoted from third base coach when Mrs. Yawkey fired McNamara over the objections of co-owner Haywood Sullivan and General Manager Lou Gorman.

Named interim manager at first, Morgan was given a contract through the 1989 season one week later after the Red Sox, nine games out of first place in the American League East at the All-Star break, did a turnaround.

The Red Sox won their first 12 games under Morgan and were 18-1, just one game behind division-leading Detroit, going into Wednesday night's game with the Texas Rangers.

"We are delighted with the great job Joe has done turning around the Red Sox's season," Gorman said. "His outstanding performance to date has well earned Joe this one-year extension of his contract."

"Hopefully, this is just the beginning of many years of success for the Red Sox under Joe Morgan's leadership."

"We are elated with the manner in which Joe has directed the team," Sullivan said. "He has the club in the pennant race and the contract extension will allow Joe to concentrate on 1989 without any worries about next year."

Morgan got his first major league managing opportunity in his 37th season in professional baseball.

A lifelong resident of nearby Walpole, Morgan starred in baseball and hockey at Boston College before signing with the Boston Braves in 1952, the year before their move to Milwaukee.

In 15 years as an infielder, he played parts of four seasons with Milwaukee, the Kansas City A's, the Philadelphia Phillies, the Cleveland Indians and the St. Louis Cardinals.

He managed in the Pittsburgh farm system from 1966 through 1973, except for 1972 when he was a coach with the Pirates.

He managed Boston's top farm club at Pawtucket in the International League from 1974-82, then became a Red Sox scout for two years.

One of the players he scouted and recommended drafting was Roger Clemens, now the ace of the Boston staff.

Fine debut by Eiland is wasted

By Rick Gono
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Dave Eiland, a rookie pitcher for the New York Yankees, had a 5-1 lead against the Milwaukee Brewers in his major league debut but he also had leg cramps.

After seven innings when he allowed only three hits, Eiland was out and Dave Righetti was in, ready to wrap up another night at the old ball park.

But if Eiland's cramps were uncomfortable, the Yankees were really in pain Wednesday night after the Brewers roughed up Righetti and Cecilio Gante for five eighth-inning runs and a 6-5 victory.

"We haven't had a whole lot of those. We had no luck with their starter. He did his job at 5-1. It was one of those nights where we were fortunate enough to get into a world series and score enough runs to snatch one back. It doesn't happen very often," said Brewers Manager Tom Trebelhorn.

"It was up to those guys who are getting paid a heck of a lot more than him (Eiland) to finish it up and we were fortunate enough to prohibit them from finishing up."

Righetti's downfall started when he allowed B.J. Surton to beat him to first on a grounder to Don Mattingly.

Dave Slem and Paul Mottler singled to load the bases and Robin Yount doubled past third for two runs. Greg Brock hit an 8-2 pitch for a two-run single to finish Righetti. Gante then gave up a single to Jeffrey Leonard and a game-winning RBI double to Rob Deer.

"I've seen this before here," said Righetti, who had given up only one earned run in his nine previous appearances.

"The craziest things seem to happen in this park. I let them get the leadoff hitter on and everything seemed to snowball after that. I didn't feel any different. There's no excuse for what happened."

Deer's hit came after he'd struck out twice and hit into a double play and brought down from the upper deck and elsewhere.

"We were pretty terrible for a while but when we needed it, we got it. It was 'Boom, boom, boom,'" said Deer.

"I was sitting there thinking, 'Forget everything that happened the last couple of nights and try to do something before they boo you out of the park,'" he said.

"I just saw the ball and it was concentration or what. I just saw the ball and hit it."

Mattingly and Jack Clark had two RBIs each — one of Clark's on his 20th homer — and Ken Phelps hit his 18th to give the Yankees a 5-1 lead before the comeback.

SALT LAKE CITY — Charles Lakes is about to become a standard bearer, and Scott Johnson a survivor.

Lakes, a black athlete in what has traditionally been a white man's sport, holds the lead going into Friday's final round of competition at the men's U.S. Olympic Gymnastics Trials.

If the 23-year-old from Chatsworth, Calif., makes the six-man American team, he will be the first black to compete on an American gymnastics team in the Olympics.

Ron Gallimore, son of former National Football League player Willie Gallimore, made the 1980 gymnastics team, but the Americans stayed home that year in the U.S.-led boycott of the Summer Games that year in Moscow.

Johnson, meanwhile, is making an improbable comeback from a broken bone in his right hand, and is on the verge of earning his second straight Olympic berth. He was on the U.S. team that captured the gold medal in Los Angeles four years ago.

Both Lakes and Johnson put on solid performances in Wednesday's optional competition.

Lakes holds the All-Around lead with a score of 81.250 entering Friday's optional routines.

Johnson, who sat out the national championships last month in Houston to give his hand more healing time, moved closer to making the team with a 9.90 score in the still rings and a 9.80 in the parallel bars.

Lakes, who attributes his late start in gymnastics (at age 12) to an opposite field single by pinch hitter Mookie Wilson.

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitching well enough to win hasn't been good enough for Rick Sutcliffe this season.

"You need runs to win games," he said, stating an obvious baseball fact. "When your team gets shutout, there's just no way you can win. And I've had to deal with that."

Given a rare lead Wednesday night, Sutcliffe scattered six hits in pitching the Chicago Cubs to a 3-1 victory over the New York Mets. Ryan Sandberg, one of four players with two hits, provided the decisive runs with a two-run single in the fifth inning.

But the Mets maintained their four-game lead in the National League East, as the second place Pittsburgh Pirates lost 6-4 to the Montreal Expos.

Mets manager Davey Johnson, who kept his clubhouse closed for five minutes after the game, said, "Sutcliffe is always a tough competitor but I think he had some help tonight. We hit the ball hard enough for four or five runs."

In his last nine starts, Sutcliffe, 33, has been supported by only 22 runs, and during a recent four-game losing streak he scored of 4-2, 1-0, 3-1, and 2-1. In his nine losses, the Cubs have scored 12 runs.

"The nice thing about being around in the majors for 10 years is I've learned not to get upset about what I can't control," he said. "When the game is over, it's over. I don't look back, whether I pitch well or badly. But a three-run lead sure makes pitching easier."

Sutcliffe, completing his seventh game in 21 starts this season, walked one, struck out four and allowed his ERA to 3.70. He allowed only one run in the ninth. Kevin McReynolds started the uprising, nicking the right-hander for a one-out infield single to short. McReynolds went to second after Gary Carter was hit by a pitch, and then came home one out later on an opposite field single by pinch hitter Mookie Wilson.

Rare support lifts Sutcliffe

GETTING HIS BACK UP — New York Mets Manager Davey Johnson holds back an irate Wally Backman after Backman was ejected by home plate umpire Ed Montague in the eighth inning for arguing a called third strike in Wednesday's game against the Cubs at Shea Stadium. The Cubs won, 3-1.

HIGH MARKS — Charles Lakes of Chatsworth, Calif., goes through his routine on the rings during opening night competition at the U.S. Olympic Gymnastics Trials in Salt Lake City Wednesday night. Lakes scored highest on the rings.

Hambletonian oddest place for trotter to get first start

By Ed Schuivler Jr.
The Associated Press

Talk about hope springing eternal.

Rule The Wind is a sore-legged trotter who has earned $2,107 and has yet to start this year.

So what better spot for his 3-year-old debut than the $1,150,000 Hambletonian, harness racing's showcase event, Saturday in the Meadowlands at harness trainer, N.J.

"He's the best horse I've trained without a doubt as far as ability and heart," said Richie Silverman, who drives Rule The Wind and trains him with his father, Jerry.

Sure, Richie, but there's got to be a softer spot for a colt who will race without rear shoes to alleviate a joint problem in his right hind leg.

Suddenly it dawned on the listener that the 23-year-old Silverman didn't enter Rule The Wind just to have a horse in the Hambo or to prove a point.

"Right now he's as good as I can ask him to be," Silverman said.

If the colt is as good Saturday as he was in a qualifier July 30 at the Meadowlands, well ...

Rule The Wind, owned by Val d'Or Farms, made his last start as a 2-year-old last Nov. 15, closing out his campaign with two wins in eight starts.

"Ever since we broke him as a yearling he has shown some soreness in the right hind leg," Silverman said. "So we gave him some time off for Mother Nature to heal him, but he came back into training still sore."

In April, the son of Speedy Crown underwent orthopedic surgery for the sore joint in the stifle, which is near the hip. He was given a lubricant to treat the problem, and his shoes were changed to relieve the pressure.

The Silvermans also were told by a veterinarian that it was unbelievable the colt had raced as a 2-year-old and it would be a miracle if he went under 2:40 for the mile as a 3-year-old.

In his second race as a 2-year-old, Rule The Wind won in 1:59 2/5. "I say he's 90 percent that day," Silverman said. "L. and he wound up getting sorer and sorer and getting other ailments that all horses go through."

Under harness racing rules in New Jersey, if a horse hasn't started in 30 days, he must qualify before he can start again. A qualifier is a non-betting race, which does not count on a horse's record. A 3-year-old trotter must qualify in 2:01.

Rule The Wind tried to qualify on the Meadowlands one-mile track July 16, but broke stride. He tried again a week later and broke stride again.

Adventures in Yellowstone

"One of the cardinal rules of fishing out here, is that you have a rain jacket stashed in the back of your fishing vest." This, from my son who had worked summers in Yellowstone Park for three years. "Heavy thunderstorms can roll in quickly. Just like now. Have you yours?"

"Nope," I said.

"I don't either. Mine is back at the motel," came from Bill Senecal.

"How about you? Where's yours?" I queried Scott.

"Back in the motel," he answered.

Great. Our infamous guide pontificates, and doesn't practice what he preaches and with that Senecal and I continued to work Scott over until the threatening thunderstorm broke and we raced to the car, a quarter mile away.

The conversation took place on the banks of the West Fork of the Madison River. We were huddled low against the bank of the river watching the thunder cloud approach over the mountain. The cracks of thunder following the flashes of lightning dashing all over the sky, and to the earth, were awesome. One bolt hit the top of a mountain nearby, and the whole top of the mountain flamed a fiery red for just a few seconds. "Was something new of us will ever forget."

Fishing in Yellowstone Park, and the environs around the park, has surprises, and excitement, that we will have mental images of, for the rest of our lives.

The fishing in itself is great, and lots of fun. Catching and releasing trout from 10 inches up to 20 inches, and all wild; browns, rainbows, and cutthroats, is quite different from back East. Because of the dry, hot weather the rivers are all down, so we had to work hard to get fish every day. But the extras, the rewards, of the ambience of our surroundings, almost made the fishing incidental.

For instance, fishing the Yellowstone River in the park one evening, a yearling moose crossed a channel I was fishing, and trotted up the shore toward the riverbank where Chris Senecal (Bill's wife) was seated on a blanket. The moose came up to within 10 feet of Chris, saw her, turned and trotted back on my side to within 10 feet of me. All this time, auto traffic along the river had stopped, and the moose decided he'd had enough of people. Looking me right in the eye, he wheeled himself up the bank, and dodged between the photographing tourists. I'm sure someone took home photos of Chris and yours truly, almost nose to nose with a young moose.

That same night, just at dusk, as we were driving through the park, to return to the motel, we hit a traffic jam. Approximately 200 bison were crossing the road to another area. Close to 200 bison is quite an awesome sight, as they take their time meandering across a highway. Included in the lot of huge bulls, cows, yearlings, and calves, was one calf that couldn't have been more than two days old.

Fishing on the Gallatin River one day, we were intrigued watching a coyote "mousing." Trotting along and stopping to check for field mice, and small rodents, every so often he would hit the air, and come down front feet first trying to snag his quarry out of their burrows.

One of the most memorable sights, though, was to see a herd of elk crossing the Firehole River at dusk. The moon was out, and we could just see silhouettes of the herd as they forded the stream. Cows with young trailing behind, yearlings intermingled in the herd, with the moon backlighting the animals, and the river sparkling with moonlight, made a picture we talked about for days.

And then, of course, was the day the ranger had all the fishermen leave the Yellowstone River, because a large grizzly bear had come down from the hills and was ambushing along the far side of the river. Wow. That was something to see.

Brooks' hike heeded advice

By Dick Brinster
The Associated Press

Although he didn't realize it at the time, Montreal's Hubie Brooks was taking the advice Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland had offered his Pirates for dealing with beanballs.

"I've told my players that if they believe they're being thrown at, either go to first base or the mound," Leyland said in discussing a visit Brooks paid Pittsburgh pitcher John Smiley after being hit in the back. "If Hubie Brooks believed he was being thrown at, he did what he should have done."

That he did, setting off the first of two bench-clearing incidents in the third inning of Montreal's 6-4 victory Wednesday night over the Pirates.

"He hit me in the back because one guy (Andres Galarraga) hit a home run," Brooks said. "I don't like being anybody's target. I didn't hit the home run."

After Galarraga gave the Expos a 4-2 lead with a 1:59 2/5. "I say he's 90 percent that day," Silverman said. "L. and he wound up getting sorer and sorer and getting other ailments that all horses go through."

Under harness racing rules in New Jersey, if a horse hasn't started in 30 days, he must qualify before he can start again. A qualifier is a non-betting race, which does not count on a horse's record. A 3-year-old trotter must qualify in 2:01.

Rule The Wind tried to qualify on the Meadowlands one-mile track July 16, but broke stride. He tried again a week later and broke stride again.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Moriarty's in action

Moriarty Brothers, the 1988 Greater Hartford Twilight League regular season champ, caps its regular season today at 4:45 p.m. against Herb's in a matchup clash at Bloomfield High School. The MB's will begin the Jim Gallagher Playoff starting Friday at McKenna Field in East Hartford against an opponent to be announced.

Johnsons world champs

Tricia Hall Johnson, formerly of Columbia, and her husband, Richard Johnson, won the world field archery championships in the five-day tournament held in Washington state on July 23-30.

The event is held every two years and draws the top field archers from around the country and the world. Close to 900 archers competed in the tournament held in Darrington. The next world championships will be in 1990 in Australia.

She works at Hall's Arrow Indoor Archery Range in Manchester where she is in charge of bow production and coaches in the Junior Olympic Development Program. The Johnsons live in Webster, Mass.

Detrick to be honored

NEW BRITAIN — A testimonial dinner honoring retired Central Connecticut State University basketball coach Bill Detrick will be held Sunday, Sept. 18, at the Aqua Turf Club in Southington.

Detrick coached the Red Devils for 29 years, compiling an overall mark of 465-266.

The dinner starts at 6 p.m. and will be preceded by a cash-bar cocktail hour at 5 p.m. Tickets are $40 and checks should be made out to the Newman House, CCSU. Tickets are available from the following committee members: C.J. Jones, Dr. Brenda Reilly, Rev. Robert Lord, Ed Rosemarin, Dr. Joseph Dunn, Bart Fisher, Don Clerkin, Chuck Roby, "Fudgy" Vojtila and Rico Santoro.

Early start planned

LOS ANGELES — Monday night football games will begin at 8 p.m. EDT, one hour earlier than previously scheduled, for the first four weeks of the NFL season, ABC Sports president Dennis Swanson said.

Swanson said the competition of the Olympics, being televised on NBC, as well as the season opener being on Labor Day played a part in the decision.

"Two of the games, Sept. 19 and 26, go head-to-head with the Olympics, which start at 7:30 p.m.," Swanson told the New York Daily News. "The feeling was we just didn't want NBC to have an hour-and-a-half jump on us."

The four games that will start at 8 p.m. EDT feature the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins in the New York Giants; Dallas at Phoenix; Indianapolis at Cleveland; and the Los Angeles Raiders at Denver.

Browns return Turner

MENTOR, Ohio — The Cleveland Browns on Wednesday rescinded the trade that brought wide receiver Darryl Turner from the Seattle Seahawks, because Turner failed the Browns' physical examination.

Turner has a congenital problem in his lower back that might keep him from playing or practicing in the future, Browns coach Marty Schottenheimer said.

Cleveland acquitted Turner on Monday for an undisclosed future draft choice. The trade, as are all NFL trades, was conditional upon Turner passing his new team's physical, the Browns said.

Turner, 26, played in 59 games over four seasons at Seattle, catching 10 passes for 1,872 yards and 36 touchdowns. He scored 13 touchdowns in 1985.

"The back is something we understand he was having a little bit of trouble with in Seattle's training camp, so we wanted to take a look at it ourselves," Schottenheimer said.

The physical exam was conducted by Dr. John Bergfeld at the Cleveland Clinic.

Turner was about to be introduced to Cleveland reporters late this morning when he was suddenly called out of the room and informed that he had failed the physical.

"Darryl was obviously disappointed, as were we," Schottenheimer said. "He understood our position."

Ashford triumphs

VIAREGGIO, Italy — Evelyn Ashford won the women's 100-meter dash, leading a streak of five American victories at an IAAF track and field meet Wednesday.

Ashford won the 100 meters in 11.23 seconds, nearly three-quarters of a second off the world record set by Florence Griffith Joyner, who figures to be her toughest rival at the Seoul Olympics in Seoul next month.

Other American winners included Antonio McKay in the 400 meters, Mark Deady in the 1,500 meters, Dave Kenworthy in the pole vault and David Patrick in the 400-meter hurdle.

McKay won his race in 45.08 seconds, ahead of fellow Americans Mark Rowe and Michael Franks.

Kenworthy cleared 18 feet, 11 inch. Deady was clocked in 3:39.65. Patrick won the hurdles event in 50.76 seconds.

AND A CLOUD OF DUST — Denver linebacker Steve Bryan (95) pounds on the ball after Randy Thornton (94) sacked Ram quarterback Steve Dilis (not shown) in the fourth quarter of Wednesday's exhibition game at Anaheim Stadium. The Broncos won, 40-31.

NCAA studies hoop field

MISSION, Kan. — Maintaining a 64-team bracket of not more than 30 automatic qualifiers and not less than 34 at-large teams through the 1998 championship has been recommended by the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee.

The NCAA Executive Committee placed a moratorium on the size of the tournament field through the 1990 championship in August 1984. The basketball committee, which met Sunday and Monday in Dallas, recommended extending the moratorium with added stipulations.

"The committee has no interest in expanding the bracket or the number of automatic qualifying berths in the bracket," said Cedric W. Dempsey, incoming committee chairman and director of athletics at the University of Arizona.

"In 1991, there will be more conferences eligible for automatic qualification than there are available positions in the bracket," Dempsey said in a news release.

The committee will continue to refine the criteria that will be used in its selection of the 30 conference champions that automatically will be placed in the tournament field. The criteria primarily will be based on basketball excellence," he said.

Kimball admits drinking

BRANDON, Fla. — Olympic diver Bruce Kimball told police he had been drinking before his sports car crashed into a group of teen-agers, but officials said Wednesday they have not concluded the accident that killed two and injured six was alcohol-related.

While the Hillsborough County sheriff's department continued its investigation of the accident, speculation about the cause centered around an arrest affidavit in which Kimball, 25, admitted to drinking four beers earlier Monday evening.

Kimball, a silver medal winner in the 1984 Olympics, was charged with two counts of vehicular homicide and released on $10,000 bond. The former University of Michigan star was given a blood-alcohol test, but authorities said it might be several days before the results are returned from a state laboratory.

"We said originally it was possibly (alcohol-related)," Hillsborough County Sheriff's spokesman Jack Espinosa said. "But how much is the question. That's what the blood-alcohol test will tell us. How much, and whether alcohol was the cause."

Police estimate Kimball was traveling between 70 and 80 mph when his car hit at least three parked cars and plowed into the teen-agers who were sitting on the cars or standing in the street.

Gwynn player of month

NEW YORK — San Diego outfielder Tony Gwynn, who batted .406 and drove in 17 runs last month, was named National League Player of the Month for July.

Gwynn went 43-for-106 during the month, with three doubles, two triples and three home runs. He also scored 16 runs and stole six bases.

Cincinnati's John Franco, who had 13 saves and an 0.61 earned run average, was voted Pitcher of the Month.

Henri Lecointe advances

KITZBUHEL, Austria — Top-seeded Henri Lecointe of France defeated West Germany's Markus Rackl 7-6, 6-3 in a last first-round match in the $290,000 men's Austrian Open Grand Prix tennis tournament Wednesday.

The match had been suspended by rain Tuesday after the first set.

In second-round matches, third-seeded Kent Carlsson of Sweden eliminated Massimo Marderi of Italy 6-1, 6-1; No. 8 Thomas Muster, Austria's top tennis player, ousted unseeded Thomas Haldin of Sweden 6-1, 6-0; and 10th-seeded Jordi Arrese of Spain downed Andreas Maurer of West Germany 7-5, 6-4.

It was a bad day for West German players. Maurer's countryman, 12th-seeded Erik Jelen lost to unseeded Claudio Panatta of Italy 6-3, 6-4, and another West German, Ricky Osterlund, bowed to Argentinian Alberto Mancini, seeded 15th, 7-6, 6-3.

Hears after fifth title

NEW YORK — Thomas Hearns, the only fighter to win four world titles, will seek a fifth when he challenges Fulgencio Obelmejias of Venezuela for the World Boxing Association super middleweight championship in Las Vegas in late October, promoter Bob Arum said Wednesday.

The exact site will be announced later. Two other title fights also will be on the card. One of them will be Michael Nunn's first defense of his International Boxing Federation middleweight title against Juan Domingo Roldan. The other will be announced later.

BACK IN ACTION — Tracy Austin slams a shot during a doubles match Wednesday in San Diego at the Virginia Slims Tournament. Austin, and her doubles partner, Robin White, lost to the No. 1 seeds in straight sets.

China viewers will get World Series

By Rick Warner
The Associated Press

NBC's World Series coverage will be beamed to Baltimore to Beijing this year.

The network announced Wednesday that the Series will be shown in China for the first time. The play-by-play and commentary by Vin Scully and Joe Garagiola will be dubbed into Mandarin Chinese.

The games will be shown on a delayed basis in Beijing, Shanghai, Guangzhou and Fujian. NBC estimates that from 60 million to 80 million of the 1.1 billion people in China will watch the telecasts.

Baseball has been popular in the Far East for many years, particularly in Japan and Taiwan. It will be a demonstration sport in the Summer Olympics at Seoul in 1988 and a medal sport in the 1992 Games at Barcelona, Spain.

The World Series is now shown in about 45 countries as well as American military bases throughout the world.

Baseball is becoming an international sport," Bryan Burns, head of broadcasting for the major leagues, said. "We're getting more and more inquiries from other countries. I think you'll see us expanding our international operations in the next few years."

"Monday Night Baseball" will become "Thursday Night Baseball" next season. The network is switching days in an attempt to cut losses during the last year of its six-year, $570 million baseball contract.

"It makes sense from an overall network standpoint," Bob Iger, vice president of programming for ABC Sports, said. "Mondays will be stronger for the network for entertainment ratings and financially while we think there will be minimal erosion from baseball ratings against NBC's Thursday lineup."

Because baseball is such a money loser on ABC, the network did only eight regular-season telecasts this season even though it was entitled to 20.

ABC may drop baseball altogether after 1989 unless it gets a better financial deal. NBC's baseball contract also expires after next season, but the network is expected to continue its Saturday afternoon telecasts.

Broncos figuring Dorsett an asset

By Ken Peters
The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Tony Dorsett took the handoff and found the inside clogged, so he scooted outside and reeled off a 11-yard pickup.

It was his longest gain of the night, in fact the only noteworthy run of his 10 carries. But he and his new coach figure there are many more of those yardage-producing runs ahead.

"I thought Tony showed some explosiveness," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said Wednesday night after the Broncos opened their exhibition season with a 40-31 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

"He's still not caught up with our offense, but as long as he keeps working hard like he has, he will help the team."

Dorsett, 34, acquired from the Dallas Cowboys during the off-season, can give the passing-rich Broncos a new running threat.

The 34-year-old Dorsett, fourth on the NFL's all-time career rushing list, made an inconspicuous debut as a Bronco, gaining just 27 yards against the Rams.

"This game was nothing to be overly satisfied with, like most preseason games," Dorsett said. "I'd give myself about a C."

Big names in tennis set for the Olympics

LONDON (AP) — Ivan Lendl won't be there. Neither will John McEnroe. Pat Cash or Martina Navratilova.

But most of the other big names in world tennis are competing in Seoul next month, when the sport renews its acquaintance with the Olympic Games as a medal event after an absence of 64 years.

And the top brass of tennis can't hide their delight at the quality of the draw.

"For over 10 years, the International Tennis Federation has been in the forefront in the struggle to return tennis to the Olympics," ITF president Philip Chatrier said after the final entry list for the Seoul tennis tournament was announced Wednesday.

The chief rivals for Edberg, the world's second-ranked men's player, will be countryman Mats Wilander and West Germany's two-time Wimbledon champion Boris Becker.

The ITF said 11 of the top 20 male players in the world and 11 of the leading 20 women in the rankings would be competing for gold, silver and bronze medals in singles and doubles.

The list of players includes reigning Wimbledon singles champions Stefan Edberg of Sweden and Steffi Graf of Germany, who won the heaviest men's and women's events at Los Angeles four years ago when tennis was a demonstration Olympic sport.

Astronomers wage war against the 'frivolous' in space

BALTIMORE (AP) — Now that people and machines go regularly into space, an advertising and art war is being waged. That's what worries astronomers who want to keep the nighttime skies from becoming a background for orbiting billboards or burial grounds for the dead.

"Once we let it get started, the next thing you know there'll be Golden Arches up there," astronomer David Crawford said Wednesday. "We have to keep an eagle eye out for this type of thing."

Astronomers gathered for the 20th assembly of the International Astronomical Union are concerned that what Crawford calls "the unproductive uses of space" will block observations of the universe by ground-based telescopes and possibly damage astronomy instruments that will be launched into Earth orbit.

Crawford, a Kitt Peak National Observatory astronomer, and Sidney van den Bergh, an astronomer for the National Research Council of Canada, are on an international committee that is attempting to keep space free of "frivolous uses."

It would be like building cemeteries in wilderness areas on Earth," Crawford said. "Once that happens, you don't know where it will stop."

"That would have been the first advertisement in space," he said. "Once that happens, you don't know where it will stop."

Protect your animal from effects of heat

With a summer as hot as we are having, it's not surprising that we're seeing cases of heat stroke, which occurs when a pet's body temperature goes up to 102-110 degrees Fahrenheit. Normal is 101.0 to 102.5 degrees.

The increase is due, of course, to hot weather conditions but may be aggravated by excessive exercise, excitement, lack of water or by stress. During these extremely hot days provide shade, a fan, plenty of cool water or even air-conditioning for your animal. Long-haired, short nosed and heavily coated pets are at greater risk. So are obese ones and those stressed by chronic illnesses such as heart conditions, kidney problems, arthritis, etc. If you see your pet panting excessively, tiring easily, or acting very dull — consider heat stroke. A pet will be hot to the touch, with a high rectal temperature.

Here's what to do: Cool your overheated pet, take him/her into the shade, hose down with cold water, pack with ice cubes, and above all get the victim to a veterinarian as soon as possible. Unless caught very early, a hyperthermic pet needs IV fluids, corticosteroids, monitoring of body temperature (it shouldn't fall too low) and oxygen for starters. Afflicted pets need medical supervision.

Be sure your pet has shade when outdoors, beware of closed cars where the temperature can skyrocket within minutes, slipper cubes into his/her water bowl. It's important to get your overheated pet to your veterinarian

Turning 12 into 13
By James Jacoby
My father always said to me that if he had 12 top tricks to take, he could manage to work out a way to take all 13. That philosophy is shared by most top players, and Neil Chambers is no exception.

Strike ends, Hollywood rejoices

By John Horn
The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — Scriptwriters say they can probably start work on a delayed fall TV season by next week, giving the industry relief from reruns after a tentative agreement to end the 22-week strike by 9,000 writers.
