Thoughts

It is difficult to like yourself in a healthy way and feel a sense of worth because the world constantly gives negative messages. This causes people to desperately look for their value in counterfeit places. We need to be aware of how our world's system operates. It is a given fact that not everyone will like you. From time to time you will deal with someone who simply does not like you. No matter what you do they will not respond positively to you. This affects our self-worth when we care about how this person feels. We begin to question our identity and value. Jesus is our prime example of how to deal with this negative feedback. Not everyone liked him no matter how innocent he was. The Bible records, "When they hurled their insults at him, he did not retaliate; when he suffered, he made no threats. Instead, he entrusted himself to Him who judges justly." (1 Peter 2:23). He did not allow "not being liked" to color his view of Himself. Instead he gave himself to God who confidently reassures us of our worth. Whenever you are not liked by someone, put your trust in God and remind yourself that He loves You.

MARC work in town hall called superior to others

Manchester Herold
Town Manager Robert B. Weiss on Thursday voiced support for the janitorial work done in town buildings by the Manchester Workshop, despite criticism by some town employees. Weiss said that the work done by the workshop, which is run by the Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens, is superior to janitorial work that had been done by private contractors in the past. "I'd say that we get maybe 10 percent of the complaints we used to get," he said. Weiss confirmed that he had received a petition from town employees complaining about janitorial work performed in the Municipal Building a few weeks ago. He said the complaints contained in that petition were being taken care of by MARC. "They've been referred to the Sheltered Workshop and they're being responded to," he said. Under a contract with the town, the employees of the workshop do janitorial work in three town buildings — the Municipal Building, Lincoln Center and Probate Court. That contract also includes the handling of mail addressed to the town. The workshop has been carrying out those services for the town since 1985. Barbara Armentano, secretary to the Board of Directors, said Thursday that the quality of janitorial work had improved since the petition was submitted to Weiss. She said the past problems might have resulted from a turnover in the supervisors who direct the workshop clients who do the work. Laurie Prytko, executive director of MARC, said Thursday that turnover of supervisory workers is not unusual, but she said she doubted that was a problem in the maintenance of the town buildings. "Anything we have been asked to do we have done," she said. The workshop is seeking a new contract for the janitorial services that would call for increasing the fee charged the town from $29,000 to $42,000. Prytko has said that the hike is due to increases in the cost of labor and supplies.

Weapons maker found, search on for shipper

Manchester Herold
COVENTRY — Authorities have found the manufacturer of military explosives that were discovered on the banks of the Willimantic River on Monday but say it could take as long as a week to track down where the weapons were shipped. Jack Killorin, the resident agent in charge of the Hartford office of the federal Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms, said that investigators are still trying to find out how the explosives got from their original destination to the river. Killorin would not disclose any information about where the items were made. "It's not relevant," he said. The explosives are being tracked down by serial numbers, which indicate the lot number the explosives belong to and the date of manufacture. A Coventry man found the explosives Monday night while walking along the banks of the river. Some of the explosives were missing when state police returned to the site Tuesday, and authorities are still trying to find out where the missing explosives are. The explosives are considered extremely dangerous. State police divers searched in vain for the missing explosives on Wednesday. Killorin said that investigators

Panel delays OK on plan to lop off mill chimney

Manchester Herold
The Chepey Historic District Commission postponed on Thursday votes on whether to permit the removal of about 30 feet of the high chimney at the Clocktower Mill Apartments and the construction of a tool shed at the historic Cheney Homestead. Members said they wanted more information on the plans. The commission approved a change in the color of signs at the Velvet Mill Apartments and the Clocktower Mill Apartments and a change in the style of windows to be used in the weaving mill on Elm Street. The weaving mill is being converted to apartments. The caretaker of the Cheney Homestead asked permission to build a 10-by-30 foot tool shed just south of the garage at the homestead so that he can store maintenance equipment in it. But the commission members voted to table their decision until the commission chairman, William E. Fitzgerald and a member, Edward Kloehn, can discuss the location of the shed with the Manchester Historical Society. The society maintains the home as a museum. The commission members agreed that they can store maintenance equipment in it but questioned locating it close to the home itself as planned. They want to consider locating it somewhere else on the property if possible. Before they met in the Probate Court, the commission members looked over the homestead site, and chimney at the Clocktower Mill, and saw an example of the type of window the Brophy Aern Development Co. plans to use in the weaving mill. Michael Kolakowski, a representative of the Konover Construction Co., which owns the Clocktower Mill, told the commission members the owners are concerned because bricks have fallen from the top of the chimney. He said that has caused the owners to close off the courtyards to tenants. He said contractors' prices indicate it will cost about $11,000 to remove the topmost section of the chimney and about $100,000 to remove the top section and rebuild it. Kolakowski agreed, however, that he will get an independent engineering study done to determine the cost and feasibility of three options: repairing the chimney, removing and reconstructing the top section, and removing it without rebuilding it. In any case the chimney, which does function, would be capped to prevent further damage. The commission members also want some kind of graphic representation of what the chimney, now about 190 feet high, would look like if 30 feet were cut off. And Kloehn wants to know the terms of an agreement by Konover to maintain the chimney for historic reasons. FitzGerald said that while he did not recall the exact language involved, Konover did make such a commitment. Martin J. Staur, architect for Brophy Aern, said the firm has decided on a type of window that opens by sliding sideways as the chimney and the top of the weaving mill. Floors will be added to the mill at the midway point of the windows, which will be almost 12 feet high. As a result, Staur said, there is no room for windows that slide up and down. Commission members agreed with Staur that the difference will not be apparent from outside the mill. And they agreed that the signs at the Clocktower Mill and the Velvet Mill are hard to read. They have gold letters on a natural wood background. They will be changed to have gold letters on a background of deep green, similar to the green used for exterior trim in the Cheney Historic District.

Bolton Board supports study of long-range school needs

Manchester Herold
EDUCATION — The Board of Bolton on Thursday reelected a plan to support construction of two classrooms to handle swelling elementary enrollments in favor of supporting a study that would determine long-range school space needs. By a 4-3 vote, the school board decided to ask the Board of Selection to give authority to the Public Building Commission to hire an architect to study the costs as well as make schematic drawings of proposed long-range needs at the elementary school. The board also recommended that School Superintendent Richard E. Packman, K-8 Principal Anne L. Rash, and K-8 Assistant Principal Steve Bent push for the building of two more classrooms at the elementary school for the 1989-90 school year. A report by the school board's Facilities Study Committee predicted that a total of nine additional classrooms would be needed at the elementary school and Bolton Center School to handle a projected increase of 158 students by 1997. A $255,000 two-classroom addition is currently being built at the elementary school. The study will focus on how much it will cost to build a gymnasium, additional lunch room space and additional classrooms. Among other concerns, as proposed in the committee's report, said Packman, the citizens' committee, which released its report in June, was formed earlier this year by the school board to look at long-term school space needs. Packman said he hoped to have the study completed by the end of the year, so the board can seek

State unveils its housing partnership program

HARTFORD (AP) — The state will offer support and incentives for municipalities' efforts to devise affordable housing plans that fit their individual needs under a program unveiled by the Department of Housing.

"Our hope is that we'll allow each of our communities to develop its own plan... so that we do not destroy the concept of home rule but implement it," Housing Commissioner John F. Papandrea said Thursday.

The housing department held a seminar for community leaders, zoning and planning officials at the Legislative Office Building Thursday to fill them in on details of the Connecticut Housing Partnership Program.

Under the program, the housing department will provide municipalities with technical assistance in the areas of needs assessment, zoning, land use and finance as well as priority funding under existing programs.

Communities which participate in the program will also get primary consideration for open-space grants and water-quality projects and a 25 percent increase in road grants for as long as four years after the completion of an affordable housing project.

"Once the towns and cities across Connecticut realize the opportunities that are there to provide housing on a local basis, I think they'll come forward, try to understand the problem, and try to resolve it," said Gov. William A. O'Neill, who gave the keynote address at the seminar.

To gain initial designation, a local housing partnership must include the town's top elected official and have the commitment of sufficient resources, including financial support and land.

Noting Yonkers, N.Y., where the town was being held in contempt for defying a court order to desegregate housing, Papandrea said he believed communities would be eager to participate because "there is now a real appreciation for how serious the problem is."

"It's time that our local communities come up with their own plans and if it takes 100 different tailored plans, that would make me the happiest commissioner in the world," he said.

Mail fraud indictment

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A former Mystic businessman who allegedly bilked consumers out of thousands of dollars through an advertising agency has been indicted on 45 counts of mail fraud.

A federal grand jury sitting in New Haven returned an indictment Thursday accusing Danny C. Leonard, 46, of converting the revenues and assets of Labor Advertising into his personal use and not providing refunds to people who mailed in checks in response to television advertisements.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Peter A. Clark said Leonard joined the advertising agency in mid-1982 and acquired it from its California-based owner in March 1983.

Among the items that were advertised for sale through a mail order campaign were sharpeners, saw guides, drill guides and saw blades, ranging in price from $9.95 to $29.95.

Official is released

NEW HAVEN (AP) — William T. Donohue, New Haven's former development chief, has been released from prison after serving nearly seven months of a two-year sentence for embezzlement.

Donohue, 53, was freed Monday under a home-release program which requires him to report at least once a week to a parole officer, correction officials said.

His prison sentence was cut short because he had no prior criminal record and because he was deemed to pose a low criminal risk.

Todd Fisk, the correction department's director of classification, said Wednesday.

Donohue was in charge of the city Redevelopment Agency for 18 years.

He was suspended without pay April 15, 1987, after money was found missing during a routine agency audit. He submitted his resignation on April 23, four days before he was charged with larceny.

Worker falls to death

ENFIELD (AP) — A construction worker was killed when he fell from the fourth floor of the former Bigelow-Sanford carpet mill building converted into luxury apartments, police said.

The worker, identified by police as Daniel B. O'Keefe, 38, of West Yarmouth, Mass., fell through newly cut floor boards onto a dirt floor about 40 feet below, his co-workers said. He was flown by helicopter to St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center in Hartford, where he was pronounced dead, police said.

Police have determined the death Thursday was accidental. Deputy Police Chief Herbert Foy said.

Man charged in murder

HARTFORD (AP) — A 19-year-old Hartford man was held on $300,000 bond in the shooting death last week of a man police say was hit by a bullet intended for someone else.

Morris Carter was charged Wednesday with murder, conspiracy to commit murder, criminal use of a firearm and reckless endangerment, police said. Bond was set Thursday and he was scheduled to appear in court Aug. 22.

Information on a 15-year-old boy who faces the same charges was not available because of his age, court officials said. His case was referred to juvenile authorities, court officials said.

Murder conspiracy charged

TRUMBULL (AP) — Police have charged a former Board of Finance member with conspiring to murder a local man with whom he owns a shopping center under construction in Monroe.

Burton Schwartz, 51, of Stratford was arrested Tuesday night after an investigation, according to Detective Capt. Frederick Nacovitch.

Nacovitch said Schwartz "tried to make arrangements with a party to have someone killed." Nacovitch identified the intended victim as Paul Vazzano, 25, and said the matter stemmed from a "business venture."

New Milanus contract

HARTFORD (AP) — The state Department of Transportation has awarded a $53 million contract for the third phase of the replacement and widening of the Milanus River bridge on Interstate 95 in Greenwich, the department announced.

The successful low bidder on the project was the Guy F. Atkinson Co. of San Francisco, doing business as the Walsh Construction Co. Division of Trumbull.

The department's decision to upgrade and modernize the bridge deck and structural steel followed the collapse of a 100-foot span of the bridge in June 1983, in which three people were killed.

1 of quadruplets dies

FARMINGTON (AP) — One of the quadruplets born to a Waterbury woman at the University of Connecticut Health Center on July 20 has died, a hospital spokesman said.

The second-born of four baby girls, Stephanie Marie Torres, died of complications. She had some complications she had at birth, hospital spokesman Ivan Robinson said.

The three other Torres babies were listed in stable condition at the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, Robinson said. They were born about three weeks premature to Elizabeth Torres, 27. She and her husband, Pedro, also have a 9-month-old son.

Another set of quadruplets, born four days after the Torres babies, were listed Thursday in stable condition at the hospital, Robinson said.

Tough penalties supported for medical waste dumping

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is backing a congressional move to stiffen prison terms and fines for the kind of medical waste dumping that has left coastlines from Massachusetts to Maryland littered with syringes, dirty bandages and other hospital throwaways.

Legislation drafted by Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., would make medical waste dumping at sea a federal crime punishable by up to $250,000 in fines and five years in prison.

A hauler dumping hospital debris less than three miles from shore today could face up to 15 years in prison and $250,000 in fines under the Clean Water Act, but violators outside the three-mile limit would face a maximum of $50,000 in fines and one year in prison.

Hughes, chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime, said he hoped the measure would act as a deterrent. And he said he would consider adding a provision to allow federal agents to claim the vessels and trucks used by illegal dumpers and another to extend coverage to land dumping.

Gambler's wife wins $6.4 million lottery

NEWINGTON (AP) — A 41-year-old New Britain woman who a law enforcement official said is the wife of a convicted gambler and extortionist has won $6.4 million in the state's "Lotto" lottery game.

Elizabeth Zimmitti, an office clerk at Embark Corp., claimed her prize on Thursday, when she picked up a check for $256,472, the first of 20 annual after-tax installments she will receive for being the only winner in Tuesday's drawing.

Her husband, Frank Zimmitti, has been linked by investigators to members of the DeCavallaro organized crime family based in New Jersey.

He may be best known for a November 1982 incident in which his Lincoln Continental was sprayed with automatic-weapon fire. Authorities said the bullets were intended for Zimmitti, but he was not in the car. His son, Gino, 17, and a friend, who were in the car, were not injured.

Frank Zimmitti was convicted by a federal jury in Hartford in August 1987 of two counts of conspiracy to collect extensions of members of the DeCavallaro family. A videotape shown the jury shows a co-defendant boasting of his and Zimmitti's use of violence or threats of violence.

York-New Jersey region, told the subcommittee that the agency supports the measure.

"Clearly it is the feeling of most people that up to a year (in prison) is insufficient," Muszynski said.

Last year, the problem of medical waste washing up on beaches was relegated to New Jersey and Connecticut. But in the month, syringes and other hospital debris have been reported extensively on New York beaches and sporadically in Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Late Wednesday, Maryland reported its first case of medical waste.

"The sad fact is, there seems to be so much secrecy of persons willing to dump these wastes anywhere and everywhere in order to avoid the cost of proper disposal or to reap the profits of improper disposal procedures," Hughes said.

The congressman said it costs hospitals $50 to $60 a ton for disposal of non-infectious trash, but up to $2,000 a ton for "red bag" materials that must be handled by private incineration companies. An estimated 25 percent of the 150 million pounds of waste produced annually by hospitals is considered infectious, Hughes said.

The increasing incidents of medical waste washing ashore over a growing geographic area has prompted congressional action in recent days.

The Hughes bill was introduced Tuesday. On Wednesday, the Senate passed a measure by Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., that would mandate a "cradle-to-grave" manifest system in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut to help officials track medical waste.

First deaf juror is chosen

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Two years after the General Assembly passed legislation making it illegal to discriminate against jurors on the basis of deafness, the first deaf juror has been selected.

Mary Pat Hoffmeister, a spokeswoman for the state Commission on the Deaf and Hearing Impaired, said Connecticut is one of the first states in the country to actually select a deaf person to be a juror.

"We've had people on jury duty before but no one was selected for a case," Hoffmeister said. "We're very excited. We've fought long and hard for deaf persons to be included as jurors."

Protesters to go free if they avoid Fonda

WATERBURY (AP) — A prosecutor says he will recommend dismissal of charges against nine protesters arrested during the filming of a movie starring Jane Fonda provided they aren't arrested in the next two weeks.

The protesters, including a former major general in the Connecticut Army National Guard, were arrested on disorderly conduct and breach of peace charges as they picketed the filming of "Stanley and Iris" last week.

Fonda angered veterans when she visited Hanoi in 1972 during the Vietnam War.

State's Attorney John A. Connelly said his decision Thursday to recommend the charges be dismissed was based on the First Amendment, which governs the right of free speech.

"I think this is the most appropriate thing to do," Connelly said. "I think it's satisfactory to all involved and I don't expect to see them (the protesters) again."

On Wednesday, Robert Steele, a Stratford resident and branch accountant for Hewlett-Packard Co., was selected to sit with five other jurors and two alternates on the trial of Alfred Moore of Bridgeport, who is accused of committing a robbery. The trial will be in Bridgeport Superior Court.

Steele assured Judge Jerrold H. Barnett through a state-appointed sign-language interpreter that he would have no problem communicating with the other jurors.

The General Assembly passed the legislation in 1986. Deaf people previously could not sit on juries because judges wouldn't allow an interpreter to be in the deliberation room with the jury, Hoffmeister said.

State lawmakers accepted the change after being assured that the presence of an interpreter would not change the outcome of the trial, Hoffmeister said.

Moore's attorney, assistant public defender Erskine McIntosh, said he had some reservations at first, but he does not oppose Steele's sitting on the jury.

"My initial concern was that the nuances of the spoken language would not be totally understood by him," McIntosh said.

But after questioning, McIntosh said, "I believe he will be able to understand everything."

Assistant State's Attorney Stephen Sedenski III said his concern is that the other jurors would be distracted by the presence of the interpreter.

OPINION

Everyone loses in 8th dispute

It is going to be very difficult for the majority of Manchester citizens to accept the idea that the governments of the town and of the Eighth Utilities District have failed to come to an agreement on important questions because they are 14 cents apart on a fee schedule.

Relative newcomers to town must certainly be puzzled by the strange division of the town into two constantly bickering factions.

And those residents who have lived with the situation for a long time are surely tired of it.

Since town and district negotiators have been working on the agreement for months and have spent weeks trying to resolve the one remaining problem among a host of problems, it appears unlikely now that there will be any last minute reprieve.

Instead, the town and district governments will apparently be headed into the courts for long and costly litigation. And no matter who wins, everyone will lose, because the animosities will deepen.

Wage woes for Bolton

The minor flap in Bolton that results from the vote by the Board of Selectmen to raise the town's minimum wage can probably be resolved rather easily without long-range implications.

But the problem does illustrate the pitfalls of fragmenting the government in a kind of fragmented way without the benefit of an administrator on the scene to provide needed coordination.

The selectmen raised the minimum wage to $6 an hour, obviously because they thought it was unfairly low. No doubt they were right.

But they fell into a common wage-setting trap because they failed to take into consideration the fact that the $6 standard would put some workers at the same pay level with their supervisors, the registrars of voters.

If the responsibilities of supervision are to count for anything, supervisors have to be paid more than those they supervise.

For the time being, Bolton, which is considering significant changes in its form of government, is operating without any administrative coordinator. And problems like the one over the minimum wage vote are likely to occur until that situation changes.

Liberals block progress in South Africa

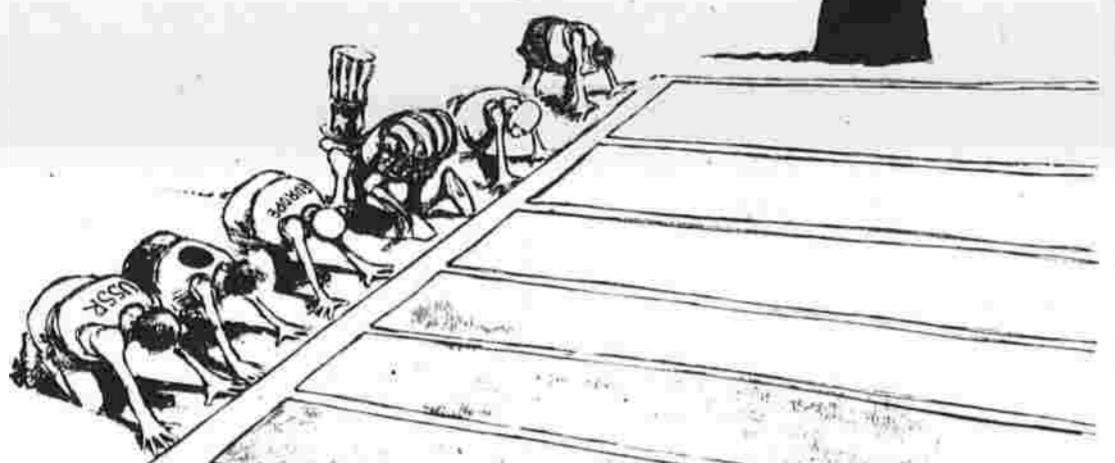

To someone who knows what is really going on in South Africa, current developments often resemble a macabre race between a South African government determined to make steady progress toward a just multi-racial society and the forces of world liberalism, which seem equally determined to block any internal compromise.

In furtherance of their campaign, the liberal media regularly suppress or distort all news of progress toward racial justice. Not one American in a hundred realizes that the white-dominated Botha government has instituted a whole series of reforms in race relations, and proposes to institute many more. In the teeth of formidable resistance from the large and bluntly racist opposition parties of its right.

How many Americans know that, just within the past seven years, the Botha government has legalized black and multi-racial trade unions, repealed the hated pass laws and the influx-control laws, repealed the laws preventing blacks from owning real estate in the townships, or working at certain occupations, or marrying people of other races, created a new national legislature in which whites, Asians, and Coloureds participate, and called for a multi-racial national forum to discuss political rights for the black majority?

Far from crediting the South African government with these major steps and encouraging them to take still others, their foreign critics seem bent on making further progress difficult if not impossible. This gives rise to the

Let Postal Service compete

By Vincent Carroll

The U.S. Postal Service, in a gesture of noble obligation typical of bureaucratic monopolies, has promised to restore window service it cut in March in order to save money.

How very kind of it. If you're like many people, you probably considered window service — even before March — to be scandalously inadequate. What private company fighting to attract customers would offer such limited evening and weekend hours at the majority of its outlets?

But, then, the Postal Service doesn't have to fight for customers. If someone can't take time off work to visit a neighborhood post office that closes at 5:30 p.m., or if that person cringes at the prospect of standing in a long line during the modest Saturday hours typically offered, tough luck.

As far as most classes of mail are concerned, the Postal Service remains the only game in town. It's time to introduce the Postal Service to additional competition. The agency won't like it, of course, and no wonder. As the President's Commission on Privatization pointed out this year in its report: "As with any monopolist, the U.S. Postal Service faces few incentives to provide high-quality, innovative service. Even in the area of parcel post, where the Postal Service faces competition in the form of UPS, it has failed to compete — instead, it has virtually ceded the market to its competitor."

The same could be said of overnight mail, another rare arena where the Postal Service clashes with hungry rivals. The next obvious candidate for private delivery? Third-class mail. Regulated third-class consists mostly of junk mail; direct-mail advertising, catalogs, that sort of thing. In short, not a single Social Security check, bill or letter to Grandma would fall into the hands of private carriers if third-class delivery were opened to competition. Universal first-class service would remain intact.

Meanwhile, the reform would have two important uses: first, whether private carriers can deliver yet another category of mail more efficiently than the Postal Service (any bets?); and second, whether private firms would limit their attention to urban areas or extend service into every town and hamlet (and thus demolish the most powerful argument against competition in first-class delivery). If private carriers succeeded on both counts, the economy would benefit and further deregulation could be contemplated. If they failed, nothing would be lost, and defenders of the Postal Service could brandish iron-clad proof that mail delivery is a "natural monopoly" that shouldn't be tampered with.

Predictably, Postal Service die-hards resist even this carefully targeted reform. They argue that the agency saves money on each unit of mail by handling each a large volume, and that an erosion of its third-class mail could boost services costs across the board.

Yet here is the evidence of these economies of scale? Postal service has declined and costs risen during the very years mail volume mushroomed — just the opposite of what should have occurred.

Perhaps the real reason the Postal Service opposes competition in any sphere is the nagging suspicion it will be outperformed. Private firms already deliver packages and overnight mail with humming efficiency. What might they accomplish if given the green light for third-class mail as well?

It's high time we found out. Vincent Carroll is a syndicated columnist.

suspicion that what they want is not progress at all, but racial confrontation and social collapse.

How else can one interpret the current demand in Congress for truly Draconian economic sanctions against South Africa? The sanctions that were passed two years ago (over President Reagan's veto) have, as predicted, injured South Africa's blacks far more than its whites. Yet the cry goes up to double and, if possible, quadruple the pressure. As Helen Suzman, perhaps the single most prominent and longest-standing white opponent of apartheid in all South Africa, warned recently, "Isolation and a wrecked economy may give moral satisfaction to some of those who oppose apartheid, but this course of action should surely be weighed against the unintended consequences that are likely to result."

It is hardly surprising that the outlawed and communist-controlled African National Congress,

Shultz takes a last try to oust Noriega

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz is making a last stand to get rid of Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega, who has proved to be as intractable as a tick on a dog. And while we're on the subject of dogs, Noriega is getting a little help from the "Mad Dog of the Middle East," Moammar Gadhafi. While Shultz was trying to freeze Noriega out by economic sanctions, intelligence sources tell us Gadhafi sent him at least $20 million to pay his troops and keep them in line.

In spite of the setbacks, Shultz is determined — even more determined than the president — to oust Noriega. The secretary of state was a key player behind the covert action finding that Reagan secretly signed last month bolstering opposition to Noriega. Reports leaking out say the finding is a anti-Noriega faction in Panama. And it was a mild sop to Shultz, who refuses to relent.

The White House was anxious earlier this year to let Shultz take the lead on some issues. Shultz had complained during the Iran-Contra hearings that he had been robbed of his foreign policy leadership role. He was circumvented by the Defense Department and the National Security Council and humiliated by the White House.

Shultz staked out two issues to settle before Reagan leaves office — a Middle East peace plan and the ouster of Noriega. The former has been a bust. The latter, a disaster.

Our sources say Shultz's efforts to get rid of Noriega reached their nadir during a bitter debate at a top-level meeting in the White House situation room March 31.

All along, Shultz had pitted himself against the Defense Department and the Central Intelligence Agency. The Pentagon likes right-wing peace-keeping dictators and figured Noriega could keep things calm in the Canal Zone. The CIA liked its tight relationship with Noriega, never mind the evidence of drug running, collusion with Fidel Castro and sundry indiscretions.

But here was Shultz, in a meeting of the National Security Planning Group, demanding Noriega's head on a platter. He was advocating a CIA-sponsored coup, but Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci and the CIA said it would be too easy to trace a coup to the CIA.

OK, Shultz said. Then let's kidnap Noriega and bring him to Miami to stand trial on drug-trafficking charges. No way, said Carlucci and the CIA staffers at the meeting.

Shultz then suggested building a massive U.S. troop presence in Panama, ostensibly to protect U.S. citizens there. But Carlucci said the job would take as many as 20,000 men, and that was too many to send. It would aggravate our "Big Brother" reputation in Latin America. Reagan leaned toward Carlucci and agreed to a scaled-down proposal — a military presence of 1,300 troops.

But Shultz is no quitter, so he continued to turn the screws on economic sanctions. He was thwarted by the mischievous dictator of Libya, Gadhafi, who secretly backed Noriega with cash funneled through a series of banks, via Hong Kong to Panama City. Castro chipped in, too, and Noriega dipped into his own cache — believe to be billions of dollars — to hang on during the economic squeeze.

In spite of Reagan's covert action finding last month, Shultz is one of the few people left in the administration who still thinks the United States can get Noriega's thumb out of Reagan's eye. A resolution of the Noriega mess would not hurt presidential candidate George Bush, either.

People's advocate

A Waycross, Ga., businessman, noting that the Japanese are investing heavily in America, asks us, "What is your assessment of the potential danger to the national security?" He also raises another question: Could this be deliberate Japanese strategy to subvert the United States? Americans owe their current prosperity, largely, to foreign investments which have bolstered the economy. Foreigners are drawn by attractive interest rates and a stable government. They will pull out if a better opportunity beckons elsewhere. Of all the foreign investors, the Japanese are the most cautious. In international investment parlance, they are LIFOs — last in, first out. They're looking for profits, not revenge for World War II. Airstrips being built BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz brought his Latin American tour to Brazil after acquiring the Soviet Union of building airstrips in Nicaragua that threaten the United States.

Shultz arrived in the Brazilian capital Thursday night after a half-day visit to Uruguay, where he portrayed the leftist government in Nicaragua as a "cancer" in Central America.

"Nicaragua is a threat to the United States, not for what it might do, but because of the power of the Soviets who are building airstrips there which could pose a problem," he told a news conference in Montevideo, the Uruguayan capital.

Drought aid next week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both houses of Congress are expected to act next week on a $3.9 billion drought aid compromise calling for a three-month dairy price-support increase but limiting feed assistance for livestock producers.

The bill we have compiled seeks to ensure the future for our farmers and ranchers," Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., said Thursday night after a conference committee agreed to the measure.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, said floor action would come Thursday at the latest but that he would try for accelerated handling and final approval Monday or Tuesday.

Blaggi may be ousted

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Mario Blaggi was convicted of racketeering in a far-reaching bribery and extortion scheme used to transform a tiny South Bronx machine shop into the multimillion-dollar defense contractor known as Wedtech.

After Blaggi's conviction by a federal jury Thursday, the leadership of the House of Representatives set Sept. 7 as the date for considering a recommendation from its Ethics Committee that it expel the 10-term Democrat.

"The overwhelming likelihood is that the recommendation will be followed," Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said in Washington.

Iraq cool to plan

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iran and Iraq would simultaneously halt their bloodshed and begin peace talks under a compromise solution proposed by the U.N. chief, but sources say Iraq is cool to the idea.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar received a report Thursday from a U.N. military team that visited both nations on arrangements for a U.N.-supervised cease-fire. The contents were not disclosed, but the U.N. chief said he would make a report to the Security Council today.

Perez de Cuellar has been trying to resolve a standoff between the two nations over the timing of a truce and the start of cease-fire talks in their 8-year-old war.

No hero's welcome

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Matthias Rust, facing possible criminal charges in West Germany for flying an airplane to Moscow's Red Square, is getting less than a hero's welcome in his homeland after he was freed from a Soviet prison.

The 20-year-old Rust was in seclusion on Thursday, the day after the Kremlin cut short his four-year prison term he received for buzzing the Kremlin spires on May 25, 1987.

He said in a brief television interview from Hanover that he was glad to be home after more than 14 months in prison. But he also faces two investigations, one of them by licensing officials in Hamburg.

"We are now investigating whether he is trustworthy enough to be flying. That's the question," spokesman Wolfgang Heldenreich told The Associated Press by telephone from Hamburg. "He still has the right to be heard, so no final decision has been made."

Hurricane loses punch

HONOLULU (AP) — Hurricane Fabio kicked up some high waves before it was downgraded to tropical storm status as it veered away from the Hawaiian Islands, the National Weather Service said.

The weakening storm system was expected to pass 300 miles to the south of Hawaii Island this afternoon, bringing a chance of rain and cloudiness to the southern tip of the Hawaiian chain, forecaster Clarence Lee said Thursday.

"The center is so far away, I don't think it will have any significant impact," Lee said. The National Weather Service canceled a tropical storm watch that had been in effect for the island. However, a high surf advisory remained posted for its eastern and southeastern coasts.

Personal data due on Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security Commissioner Dorcas R. Hardy is hoping new, individualized financial statements for workers of all ages will demystify the program and encourage people to plan ahead for their retirement years.

The personalized earnings and benefit statements will give people an approximate idea of how much Social Security will pay them each month when they retire or become disabled, or pay their families if they die.

It will be available free by mail to anyone who fills out a form requesting the "Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statement," which President Reagan promised in his last State of the Union address.

Those interested can call a toll-free number — 1-800-937-2000 — to request copies of the disclosure form, SSA-7004.

Hardy told a news conference Thursday that once the request forms are received, it will take her agency two weeks to three weeks to send back a lucidly written, computer-generated statement with a wealth of data on what that person has paid in and what he or she can expect to draw out.

Hardy embarked on the project after taking the helm of the agency two years ago, convinced that Social Security was not only the government's largest program but "probably the most misunderstood."

Social Security pays out more than $200 billion a year in cash benefits to 38 million retirees, disabled workers and their families. Its payroll tax also pays for the $70 billion Medicare program.

"By putting a precise dollars and cents value on those benefits, and individualizing it for the person making the request, Social Security will no longer seem so mysterious and complex," she said.

Hardy said her hope is that "this one sheet of paper" will give Americans "a far greater understanding of the Social Security system" and encourage them to recognize the need for private pensions, adequate insurance and personal savings.

Some private companies charge people for making the kind of estimates that Social Security now will be doing free.

10 indicted in Medicaid $3.6 million blood scam

NEW YORK (AP) — A physician and his father ran a scam that bought blood from poor people and AIDS-infected addicts, performed unnecessary tests on it, then charged Medicaid at least $3.6 million for the work, authorities said.

The scheme was "perhaps the largest and most nefarious fraud ever perpetrated on this country's health care system: the illegal trafficking in human blood for millions of dollars in profit," State Deputy Attorney General Edward J. Kurlansky said.

The operation was detailed in an indictment handed up Thursday, naming 10 people and three laboratories.

State Department of Social Services Commissioner Cesar A. Ferrales said the abuses outlined in the indictment prompted him to suspend total or partial payments to 30 labs and bar at least 35 physicians and 14 labs from the Medicaid program.

Dr. Surinder Singh Panahi, 39, and his father, Gurdial Singh Panahi, 68, ran their operation either by making up addresses of labs or by taking over clinical labs that were approved by Medicaid, Kurlansky said.

They "established a vast network of associates to procure and supply human blood along with the names and numbers of random Medicaid recipients and doctors," he said.

"Blood collectors" set up blood-drawing centers in unsupervised and unlicensed offices and tenement apartments and combed ghetto neighborhoods in search of drug users and others willing to sell their blood for cash — usually $10 for every 20 vials of blood.

Investigators discovered that identical services were sometimes billed by the same lab for the same person on three consecutive days. One patient's name had been used to generate $50,000 of lab services during a 12-month period. Among the fictitious addresses used in the scheme were those of a police station, a vacant lot and a funeral home.

Four people, including the son, have been arrested. Five others, including the father, are fugitives, said Kevin Ryan, a spokesman for Kurlansky. The fugitives are thought to have fled to their native Pakistan. The 10th person being sought is not considered a fugitive.

Authorities said there was no indication that any of the blood found its way into the blood supply for transfusions.

Surinder Singh Panahi and Zubair Aziz, 35, of Brooklyn were arrested Thursday in Queens Supreme Court. Panahi was held in lieu of $50,000 bail and Aziz on $50,000, Ryan said. Two others, Muhammed Usman Irfan, 37, of East Brunswick, N.J., and Zasar Siddique, 34, of Brooklyn, were scheduled for arraignment today.

The indictment said the group and the three labs were paid more than $3.6 million in 1986-88 for testing blood, much of which Kurlansky said was AIDS-infected.

In the 127-count indictment, the defendants were all charged with grand larceny, offering a false instrument for filing, falsifying business records and fourth-degree conspiracy.

Any business will fall with neighborhood

DEAR BRUCE: I own a coin-operated laundry in what was once a middle class neighborhood, but it is now deteriorating rapidly. This is particularly troublesome because the majority of my customers are women and, while I keep my place up, it is difficult to encourage them to come into the neighborhood after dark.

The business was worth almost $30,000. This is not a number I'm picking out of the sky. I turned down an offer of that amount a little more than a year ago. Now I am unable to get an offer of $50,000, and I've advertised extensively. All I see is business getting worse. What do you suggest?

Smart Money

you some sort of Pollyanna answer, such as "get involved in a civic organization," but that would not be realistic.

Instead, cut your losses. If the business will only bring in $40,000, take the $40,000. The strong likelihood is that it will only depreciate further in the foreseeable future.

As I write these words, I realize many would say this only accelerates the decline of a neighborhood, which may be the case. However, you are making a business decision. And clearly it is in your best personal interest not to stand by and watch the situation continue to hemorrhage.

DEAR BRUCE: How much auto insurance is enough? When I was growing up 35 years ago, "10 and five" — meaning $5,000 for each individual, $10,000 for accidents, and $5,000 for property damage — was all my state required.

Most prudent people felt that was enough insurance. Then it became 10, 20 and 10. Now I'm carrying a $250,000, $250,000 and $250,000, and still people are telling me I'm underinsured.

If you hung me upside down, shook out my pockets and took my home away, you wouldn't find a quarter of a million dollars in worth given this.

Why do I need more insurance? I'm insurance poor and getting poorer by the moment.

A.B., UNION CITY, N.J.

DEAR A.B.: I can appreciate the fact that you resent paying high insurance premiums. I guess we all do, but, when an accident occurs, we're also very happy that insurance is in place.

What is enough? I'm not sure I know the answer, but I do read the newspapers and listen to the reports. Unquestionably, awareness of a million dollars or more are common.

Given this situation, it would seem to me that $1 million worth of liability insurance is not an excessive amount. You can accomplish this through a simple umbrella policy that can be attached to the existing liability policy on your home or car, at a very modest premium.

While you say you're not worth $1 million or even a quarter of a million, that does not preclude someone from suing you for that amount of money. They would have to come after some of your assets, or, indeed, all of your assets. Why in the world, for the few dollars involved, would you remain insured for less than at least $1 million?

In this same space four or five years from now, chances are you'll be talking about $4 million or $5 million. It's the society we live in.

PEOPLE

RADIANT AT 88 — Britain's Queen Mother Elizabeth, better known as the "Queen Mum," smiles at the crowd that greeted her Thursday outside Clarence House, her London residence, as she went for a walk to celebrate her 88th birthday. She collected cards and flowers and stopped to chat with people as she walked.

Jackson too popular
KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Michael Jackson is so popular here that the government has decided he cannot come for a concert in December, an official said today.

Syed Zainal Abidin, secretary general of the Welfare Ministry, told reporters the Cabinet decided recently the concert could not be held because it would be too difficult to control the crowd.

He said the ministry had wanted the American singer to perform here to raise money for the Welfare Fund, from which money is given out periodically to orphanages and charities.

The ministry will appeal to the Cabinet to reconsider its decision, he added.

Down-to-earth hobby
SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Jeana Yeager, who flew to space as the co-pilot of Voyager, is experimenting with a more down-to-earth craft that uses only one horse power.

Ms. Yeager has taken up amateur harness racing.

"I like trying things that are new, and this is very exciting," said the 38-year-old woman, who went from the cockpit to the sulky after her record-breaking round-the-world flight with Voyager co-pilot Dick Rutan.

Ms. Yeager, who at 5-foot-4 and 100 pounds is about the right size for harness racing, recently that the sport enables her to indulge her passion for horses and her fiercely competitive spirit.

She first participated in a celebrity harness race in April, and has since competed in a number of races as part of the Billings Amateur Trot Series.

Jaw surgery for Brown
ATLANTA (AP) — "Godfather of Soul" James Brown was admitted to a hospital for oral surgery today to mend bone damage in his lower jaw, a spokeswoman said.

The 2½-hour operation was necessary because the 45-year-old singer has suffered degeneration of his jawbone, said Debra Bloom, a spokeswoman for Crawford Long Hospital.

In the procedure, an impression will be made of the singer's lower jaw. An artificial support made from the impression will be implanted when Brown returns to the hospital in three to four weeks, Ms. Bloom said.

Madden picks driver
WOODBRIDGE, Va. (AP) — Greyhound bus driver Jerry Knick says being picked to take the wheel of football color commentator John Madden's 40-foot-long, customized "Madden-cruiser" has left him "kind of numb."

"It's still all a shock," Knick said from Oakland, Calif., where he was chosen Wednesday from among 10 Greyhound drivers to be Madden's chauffeur during the pro football season. "I don't know what to expect."

Madden, a color commentator for CBS-TV, says he's afraid to fly to games. The former Oakland Raiders coach travels in the Madden-cruiser, a bus whose equipment includes an oversized shower, a queen-size bed and a satellite dish. It seats 10 and sleeps seven. The vehicle was built for Greyhound last year, said company spokeswoman Kristi Neal.

For Knick, a 36-year-old Woodbridge man with a spotless 15-year record with Greyhound, the selection process included an interview with Madden.

Burns, Loy, Alley cited
WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor George Burns, actress Myrna Loy and choreographer Alvin Alley are among five prominent Americans chosen this year to receive the Kennedy Center Honors for lifetime achievements in the performing arts.

The other winners announced Thursday were violinist Alexander Schneider and Roger L. Stevens, founding chairman of the Kennedy Center.

President Reagan will pay tribute to the medalists at a White House ceremony Dec. 4. That evening, they will be honored at a gala Kennedy Center performance that will be taped for later broadcast as a CBS television special.

Stevens, 78, retired as the center's first chairman July 1. He was succeeded by former Time Inc. executive Ralph P. Davidson.

The center's board of trustees, who approved the 11th annual Kennedy Center Honors list, also voted Stevens the title of founding chairman.

Hemorrhoids concern reader

DEAR DR. GOTT: Many people suffer from hemorrhoids, but very few talk about it. Please answer some questions. Can they be left untreated? Can they become malignant? Do any over-the-counter medicines help? Are they the sole source of rectal discharge?

DEAR READER: I've found that people are all too willing to talk about their hemorrhoids. In fact, a lot of TV advertising time is developed to this common disorder. However, here goes:

"The lining of the lower rectum and anus is amply supplied with blood, which drains back into the body through a system of veins. These veins are usually unobtrusive; they carry out their business without making much of a fuss. At times, due to irritation or injury — such as constipation or diarrhea — these hemorrhoidal veins become inflamed and sore. They stretch and dilate, swelling to several sizes beyond normal. At this point, we become aware that something is not right. The hemorrhoid — now a purple, squishy lump — causes discomfort.

As the vein enlarges, however, other changes take place. Bloodflow within it is slowed and clotting takes place; this is a thrombosed hemorrhoid. If the swollen vein leaks blood externally, it is a bleeding hemorrhoid. In some cases, when the dilated/thrombosed vein is inside the rectum, it can be pushed by the stool through the anus, and appear on the outside; a prolapsed hemorrhoid results.

Unless the hemorrhoids are bleeding, they are not treated, except for comfort. Hemorrhage from a hemorrhoid can be a serious problem, requiring surgical intervention. However, for the most part, hemorrhoids are uncomfortable nuisances that will shrink with time. Once the acute phase is over, the hemorrhoid tends to shrivel, becoming a small protrusion of pink tissue, a hemorrhoidal tag.

Medical treatment — in the form of suppositories and creams — is designed to alleviate discomfort (pain and itching), facilitate bowel movements and reduce inflammation so that the hemorrhoid can be allowed to shrink normally. Sitz baths (sitting in about five inches of hot water several times a day) often will provide relief of symptoms.

Diarrhea and constipation may need to be treated as separate issues. Further injury to the hemorrhoid — such as might result from sitting on cold, hard surfaces — should be avoided.

Several types of surgery are used to treat problem hemorrhoids that are chronic or large. The distended veins can be injected (to aid shrinkage), removed, ligated (tied off to encourage shrinkage) or treated with lasers (to destroy them).

Those over 65 should know tax changes

One more step has just been taken in a long series of actions that penalize prudent people who have been carefully putting money away for the future. This is especially true as the new legislation relates to taxpayers over the age of 65.

Sylvia Porter

According to Eli J. Warach, tax attorney and vice president of Prentice Hall Professional Newsletters, the new twist is merely the latest in tax amendments that actually hurt those who saved money for a "rainy day." For these taxpayers, Warach notes, those rainy days may have arrived.

For example, there is the so-called "kiddie" tax. That's the little gem in the tax law that taxes investment income (dividends, interest and the like) of children under 14 at their parent's tax rate. Believe me, this does not encourage Mom, Dad, Grandmother or Grandpa to help little Bob or Jane build a nestegg for college. It is an anti-saving measure. In the opposite extreme, one finds the law now taxing a retiree's Social Security benefits if he has more than a certain amount of income. Not only does this retiree pay tax on income, he also is hit by an added tax on half of his Social Security benefits.

The latest is a real bombshell. While it comes in the guise of a helping hand to retirees, it applies with a drastically uneven impact. In short, a few will bear a giant burden for the many, instead of vice versa.

What it all adds up to is a dramatic need to keep your taxes at an absolute minimum. Shouldn't you always have been doing that? Of course! But the plain fact is that millions of Americans simply don't take all the tax breaks to which they are entitled.

While all taxpayers should be looking for ways to cut their tax bills, those over 65 should be especially alert. One good example is the standard deduction versus itemized deductions. Prior to 1987, taxpayers over 65 taxpayers were entitled to double the standard deduction whether they itemized or they took the standard deduction.

No more. Today, if you itemize and are over 65, you get no extra tax breaks whatever.

What do you do? Medicare-eligibles (those 65 or over) have to figure things both ways. That is, use the standard deduction and itemize, then pick the one that yields the best benefit.

Here's an example of how some money could be saved.

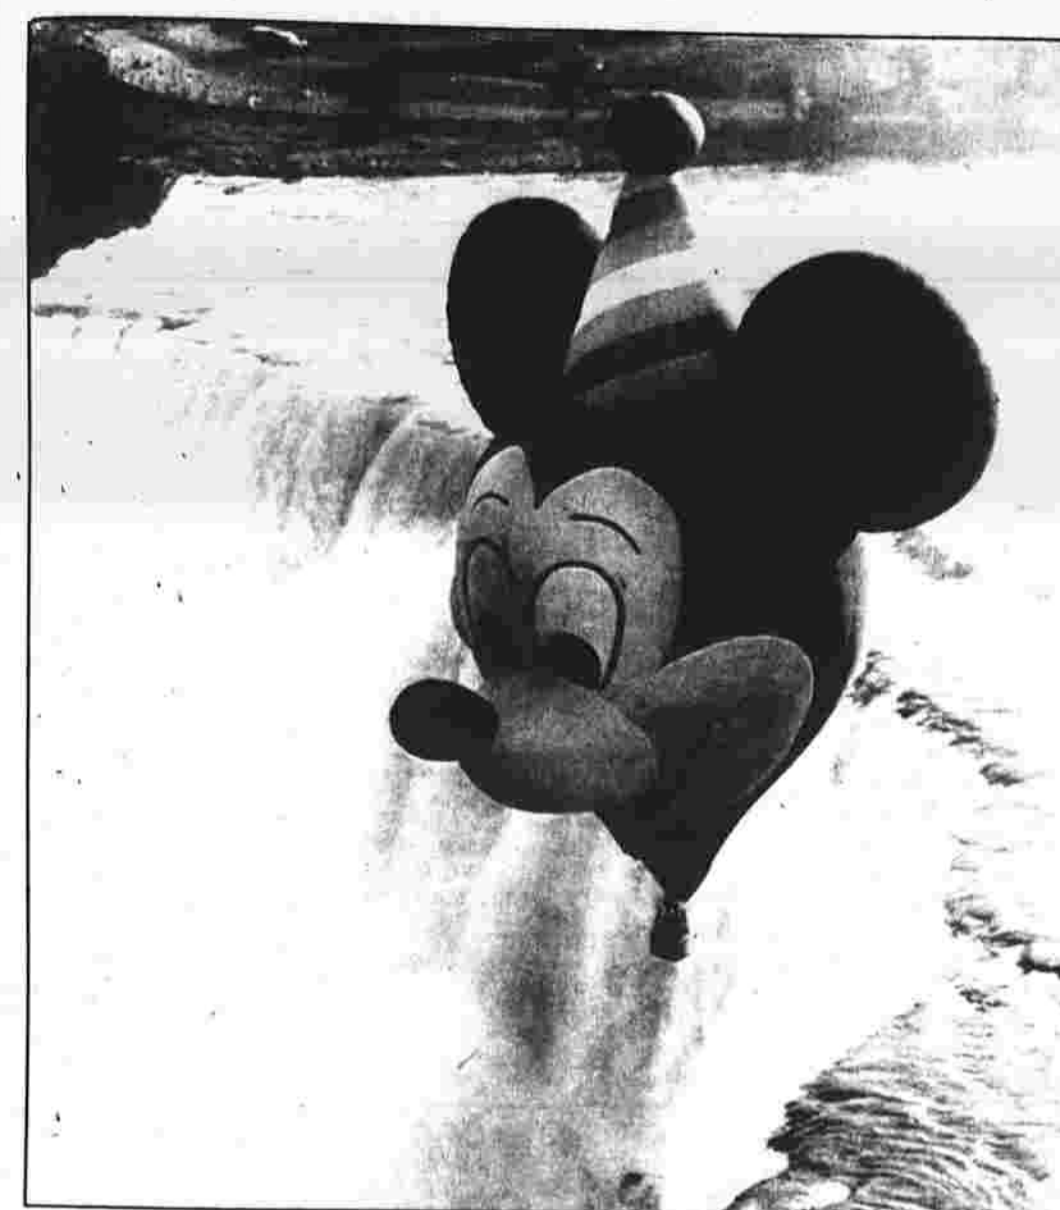

Assume that in 1989, in the middle of the year, you and your mother review her tax set up. As you see things, she will have a tax bill of $155. That means she will have to pay an additional $22.50 tax on those income taxes. Now $22.50 may not seem like a lot — but if you save it, it's $22.50 more for your mother; $22.50 less for the tax collector.

You and your mother go over her anticipated deductions for the year. You figure her itemized deductions will total about $3,700 for 1989.

Immediate action: Tell your mother to switch to the standard deduction. Since she's a widow, filing a single person's return and she's over 65, her standard deduction comes to $3,750. She also now has increased her deduction by $50 and cut her immediate tax bill by $7.50. (She's in the 15-percent tax bracket.) Even better, she has just knocked out that $22.50 surtax for the new Medicare tax.

Suppose though, her itemized deductions total $4,000 and she still shows a potential tax bill of $155. Check her expenditures. You may find that she averaged $1 a week in charity — to be honored at the Cancer Society, Red Cross, etc. That comes to about $50 more in deductions. It also means a lower tax bill — and a ZERO surtax for the new Medicare tax.

Take nothing for granted. Don't let higher tax bills lower your bank account. It's your money and you should be taking every tax break the law allows.

MICKY ON PARADE — A hot-air balloon shaped like Mickey Mouse floats over Niagara Falls on Wednesday as part of Disney celebration of Mickey's 60th birthday, which occurs in November.

The balloon flew over the falls again on Thursday before heading off to finish its tour of North America. The tour began in May and will end in New Orleans later this month.

Payments to end 'sad chapter'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to sign legislation providing more than $1 billion in payments to Japanese-Americans who were held in World War II detention camps, bringing to a close what he calls "a sad chapter in American history."

Relief for dislocated Aleut Indians also was included in the package. Payments of up to $12,000 will be made to surviving members of the Aleut Indian tribes who were removed from the Aleutian Islands during the Japanese attack on those islands in 1942.

Once signed by Reagan, the attorney general will have one year to compile a list of the estimated 60,000 surviving internees. Those eligible then will be able to claim the $20,000 payments, providing they agree to drop any other interment camp claims pending against the government.

The oldest of the internees will be given priority on receiving the payments, which will total about $1.25 billion. The payments will be made over a 10-year period to lessen the impact on the federal budget, with the first payments likely about January 1990.

For Japanese-Americans, the money is an apology from the U.S. government for having forced the estimated 120,000 people — both citizens and resident aliens — from their homes and jobs following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on Dec. 7, 1941.

In a letter earlier this week to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, Reagan said the bill will "close a sad chapter in American history in a way that reaffirms America's commitment to the preservation of liberty and justice for all."

For Rep. Norman Y. Mineta, D-Calif., passage of the bill was especially important. He was 10 years old when he and his parents were sent to a camp at Santa Anita racetrack in Southern California in 1942.

"Though this is a deeply personal issue for myself and a comparatively small number of Americans, this legislation touches the heart and soul of what it means to be an American."

Bush's VP list narrowing thanks to recent dropouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The list of Republican vice presidential candidates is narrowing, with California Gov. George Deukmejian becoming the latest dropout as Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and others actively court an invitation to join George Bush's ticket.

Deukmejian notified Bush by letter on Thursday that he "cannot be considered" for the No. 2 spot on the ticket. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas said last weekend she wasn't interested, and sources say Sen. William Armstrong of Colorado has told Bush privately he doesn't wish to remain in contention.

But Kemp, who sharply attacked Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis on Thursday, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico and others are making clear their interest.

Sen. Bob Dole, Bush's one-time presidential candidate, appears to associates to be ready to accept an offer to be vice presidential parter" in which politicians' names were floated with the objective of making them feel important — and raising their stature in the eyes of the home state voters.

In all, Bush aides have listed about 16 contenders, from the well-known Dole and Kemp, to less visible ones such as Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana to governors such as John Sununu of New Hampshire and Carroll Campbell of South Carolina.

Still, where there is smoke there might be fire. So agents of one candidate spend their time helping their own choice and undercutting rivals.

Deukmejian joined the ranks of the officially uninterested Thursday because he said he could not contemplate turning over the statehouse to a Democrat, which would happen if he won. He made his withdrawal one day after a poll indicated he would do little to help Bush close a double-digit deficit in the largest state in the country.

But there is no shortage of those who would say so. If the Republicans win, being vice president isn't such a bad job, for thinking goes.

And if Bush loses, strategists on all sides agree that being his vice presidential running mate would be a huge advantage when the battle begins for the 1992 Republican presidential nomination.

None of the 21 speakers commented directly on independent counsel James C. McKay's investigation of Meese's personal financial dealings or on claims by two former Justice Department officials — Arnold I. Burns, the former deputy attorney general, and William Weid, former head of the criminal division — that a deep malaise had overcome the agency as a result of Meese's legal troubles.

Later in the day, Meese invited several hundred Justice Department officials and others to a drop-in party where he stood in a receiving line as people sipped white wine and punch and ate hors d'oeuvres.

Indictments signal U.S. getting tough with Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — A grand jury delivered the first-ever racketeering indictment against securities traders, including a former trader for Drexel Burnham Lambert, the firm at the center of Wall Street's insider trading scandal.

The 35-count indictment returned Thursday by a federal grand jury signaled a toughened attitude by authorities, marking one of the biggest outgrowths of the massive insider trading investigation that snared speculator Ivan Boesky in 1986.

The indictment charged a multimillion-dollar racketeering, conspiracy and mail and wire fraud scheme, naming five top partners and employees of Princeton-Newport Partners, headquartered in Princeton, N.J., and Newport Beach, Calif.

It also named Bruce L. Newberg, a former trader in the high-yield bond department of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., as a racketeer.

The indictment charged there was a scheme involving the bogus sale of securities between Drexel and Newport to create more than $12 million in phony tax losses and avoid regulatory disclosure requirements. The indictment also alleged stock manipulation from July 1, 1984, to the present.

Drexel Burnham, which was not named as a defendant, has been the focus of intense government scrutiny stemming from the insider trading investigation.

U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani declined to say whether any other Drexel officials or the firm itself would be indicted. There has been persistent speculation that Drexel soon would be charged with securities law violations. The firm has denied any wrongdoing.

"Obviously, today's indictment of Bruce Newberg, a former employee of the firm, is deeply

$950 million offer OK'd for Insilco

MERIDEN (AP) — Insilco Corp.'s directors have approved a management group's $950 million leveraged buyout offer for the maker of Red Devil paint, Rolodex rotary files and other products.

Under the buyout agreement reached Thursday, ISC Holdings Inc. will pay $29 for each of the company's 25.6 million shares. ISC Holdings, a group that includes senior Insilco management and certain affiliates of First Boston Inc., also will assume Insilco's debt, giving the deal an indicated value of $950 million.

A cash tender offer will begin within five business days.

Insilco officials would not say whether there had been any outside offers for the company.

"It's certainly in the ballpark of what's reasonable," said Arthur M. Stupay, an analyst with Prescott, Ball and Turben of Cleveland. "It's a good offer."

Stupay said he doubted a better offer would be forthcoming.

"I don't think too many people can understand this company," he said.

In recent years, Insilco, once known as the International Silver Co., has restructured itself into an industrial holding company with operating companies that make products for high-technology industries and specialty consumer markets.

Besides Rolodex files and Red Devil paint, Insilco makes metal cartridges and other projects for the defense industry and Dual-Lite emergency lighting equipment.

Of management's decision to lead a buyout offer, Stupay said: "They were frustrated that good earnings did not lead to higher stock prices. They said if stockholders would not pay higher values, we would."

For shareholders, he said, "It's time to break open the champagne."

In trading on the New York Stock Exchange, Insilco jumped $2 to $29.25 at midday.

On Wednesday, Insilco soared $6 to $27.25 a share in heavy trading following an announcement that management might attempt a leveraged buyout.

In making the announcement on Tuesday, Insilco said there were no assurances an offer would be made or completed. In a leveraged buyout, investors borrow heavily to buy out a company and then pay off the debt with the target company's cash flow or the sale of its assets.

The management group has obtained commitments totaling $950 million to finance the purchase, including $430 million from affiliates of First Boston.

In the second quarter, Insilco earned $11.7 million, or 56 cents per share, compared with $11 million, or 52 cents a share, in the same period a year earlier. Revenue rose to $196.4 million from $154.3 million.

In a presentation to regional analysts last winter, the chairman and chief executive officer, Donald J. Harper, said most operating subsidiaries had above-average growth and he projected strong increases for most of them.

Hertz Corp. admits overcharging

NEW YORK (AP) — Hertz Corp. was fined a record $6.85 million for overcharging insurers and thousands of consumers for repairs on rental cars, in a scandal the company blamed on low-level managers placed in the driver's seat.

A federal judge slapped the auto rental giant with the fine Thursday and ordered restitution that brings Hertz' total bill to more than $20 million, after the company pleaded guilty to billing customers and insurance companies with fraudulently inflated repair charges.

Hertz overbilled more than $13 million between Jan. 1, 1978, and the summer of 1985, when it learned that a federal grand jury was investigating the company, Andrew J. Maloney, the U.S. attorney in Brooklyn, told a news conference.

Those who paid Hertz for period may be eligible for a refund ranging from a few dollars to several thousand dollars, according to assistant U.S. attorney Jonny J. Frank, who led the investigation.

Maloney said the $6.85 million fine was believed to be the largest ever imposed in a consumer fraud case.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Nickerson imposed the penalty during a proceeding in which the company pleaded guilty to mail fraud and agreed to make restitution.

Nickerson said that within the next 15 days Hertz must deposit $13.7 million into a fund to be disbursed to individuals and insurance companies that were overcharged. Hertz will have to pay even more if the fund is insufficient, the judge said.

"Today's action by the United States attorney's office is deeply disturbing to me and everyone at Hertz," Frank Olson, chairman of the company, said. "We regret that improper practices took place and are fully committed to making full refunds of all overcharges."

John Martin, a lawyer for Hertz, said low-level managers in the company were responsible for the overbilling and top executives were unaware of the practices. Everyone responsible for the problem has been fired, he said.

The investigation began when a woman filed on another matter from a Hertz office in Massachusetts reported the billing practices to the Insurance Crime Prevention Institute, an organization funded by the insurance industry.

Maloney and other officials declined to identify her.

In a related state case, New York Attorney General Robert Abrams said Hertz had agreed to make an additional $2 million in restitution to some 10,000 customers who paid for repairs between June 1, 1985, and May 31, 1986.

The company consented to the order in an agreement with New York and 40 other states.

In that case, the company admitted no wrongdoing but agreed to make the refunds. Abrams said that during the period, Hertz charged "prevailing retail prices for repairs" when the actual repair cost was about 22 percent less.

Frank said that after Hertz admitted in 1985 that it was the subject of a federal grand jury

Efficiency measure down

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. businesses' efficiency in producing goods and services decreased in the second quarter, its first decline since 1986, the Labor Department said Thursday.

Preliminary data show productivity among non-farm businesses, responsible for three-fourths of the nation's economic activity, falling 1.7 percent from April through June compared with the first three months of the year, the department said.

Productivity had risen at an annual rate of 3.4 percent from January through March.

Reflecting the continuing strong economic expansion, output of goods and services by non-farm businesses rose at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the second quarter.

More jet engines ordered

EVENDALE, Ohio (AP) — General Electric Co. has announced that Japan Air Lines has ordered an additional 15 Boeing jetliners powered by GE jet engines, in an order worth $400 million to GE.

General Electric said Thursday that Japan Air Lines has exercised options for 15 additional Boeing 747-400 aircraft to be powered by GE's CF6-80C2 engines.

Japan Air ordered five GE-powered aircraft in January. Until then, the Japanese airline had used for its fleet only engines made by GE's biggest competitor, the East Hartford-based Pratt & Whitney division of United Technologies Corp.

GE officials have said they have lobbied Japan Air vigorously for years to win its business. The Japanese airline has the biggest fleet of 747 jets in the industry, GE officials said.

Campaign

Dukakis' West Coast foray followed a trip into Mississippi, a traditionally Democratic state that helped send President Reagan and Richard Nixon to the White House. Dukakis lost the state to Jesse Jackson in the Democratic primary.

Dukakis spoke at the Neshoba County fair near where the bodies of three slain civil rights workers were found 24 years ago Thursday. Reagan began his campaign as the 1980 nominee at the fair.

Dukakis failed to mention the killings when addressing the almost entirely white crowd, and referred only once to civil rights. "I talked about economic opportunity because that's the most important single thing that concerns people," he explained.

Bush, speaking to a Hispanic veterans group in Corpus Christi, Texas, criticized Dukakis for his support for a nuclear freeze and opposition to a new MX missile, the Midgetman missile and the Reagan administration's proposed Star Wars nuclear defense system.

"His positions ... amount to a rejection of America's role as a world leader and a repudiation of the Truman doctrine and the vision of John Kennedy," Bush said, referring to bipartisan foreign policy that evolved after World War II and focused on containing communism.

Dukakis, when asked whether he still supports a nuclear freeze, said, "Sure, and a comprehensive test ban treaty."

Later aboard his plane, Dukakis said he originally supported a freeze "because we wanted to stop the administration from expanding the arsenal."

"I'm for reductions now," he said. Dukakis struck back when questioned again in Los Angeles, pointing to what he called Reagan's "very, very regrettable" veto a day earlier of the $299.5 billion defense bill. He said the bipartisan backing of the measure was proof the veto was a blatant attempt to help the Bush campaign at the expense of national security.

He said Bush was running a "losing campaign" with his attacks.

Bush stabbed at the Democratic platform, calling it "the black hole of American politics."

"Issues get sucked into it and lost, never to reappear again," he said.

Accident

reports of customers with power losses. Cheryl Ducey of the community relations department said that the downed wires were for street lights, so no businesses or residences were affected.

Lloyd Boutillier, owner of Sunny Side Up, a luncheonette at 1095 Main St., said he called in the accident.

"The pole went over right in front of my store," he said. "I'm just real lucky that the pole fell toward the street, rather than toward my shop."

From his window, Boutillier said that he could see barricades across Main Street, preventing motorists and pedestrians from entering the block bounded by Forest and School streets. "I guess I'm not going to have much of a lunch trade today," he said.

Meanwhile, about 26 employees of the Keebler Co. had to evacuate their building at 115 Progress Dr. shortly after 11 a.m. today when a gas leak was discovered. Firefighters from the Town of Manchester Fire Department went to the scene. The employees returned to the building within minutes after the gas had been turned off. At noon, Keebler officials were waiting for the Connecticut Natural Gas Co. to repair the leak.

No agreement

The town has brought suit against the district, asking the court to decide whether the town or the district should determine where a trunk sewer to serve the Pavillons at Buckland Hills will be connected to town lines.

The district, meanwhile, has sued the town over the sewer rates, claiming the rate set by the town at $1.26 cents per 100 cubic feet is arbitrary.

Both suits have been in abeyance while negotiations were in progress.

Attorney John D. LaBelle Jr., the district's legal counsel, said today of the town and district litigation, "It will start."

He said the rate suit will go forward in its normal process.

Town Director Geoffrey Naab said today that he still hopes, "We do reach agreement."

"But meanwhile we ought to get on with both legal cases," he said.

Naab, an attorney, said that while he is not involved with the legal aspects of the matter, he feels it might be well to combine the cases.

LaBelle rejected that idea, however, saying they are separate matters.

Both LaBelle and O'Brien said the disagreement over rates stems from a philosophical difference. The town maintains that the district rate should be set according to the amount of money the town saves because the district has its own sewage collection system.

The district maintains it should pay for no services that benefit only the southern part of town and not the district.

O'Brien, Penny, and LaBelle were at the meeting Thursday along with DiRosa, Longest, and Frank Jodaitis, a former water and sewer superintendent for Manchester now employed by Lombardi Associates, a consulting engineer for the district.

Asked what effect failure to reach agreement might have on plans for sewerage the Pavillons at Buckland Hills, General Manager Robert Weiss declined to comment. He said he has not been involved in the negotiations.

"I want to see what happens in the next few days," Weiss said.

Officials of the Homart Development Co., the developers of the Pavillons, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Penny said, "There is nothing to talk about when you spend two or three months talking about sewer rates and they (district leaders) never move."

But Tripp said, "I think we have bent over backwards to come to an agreement."

He said his understanding is that DiRosa and Longest had made great progress but that Penny was making the decisions about the rates.

Jobless

Economists are increasingly relying on the business payroll information rather than on the household survey — from which the jobless rate is calculated — as a better indicator of the health of the economy.

Over the last year, employment growth has averaged 200,000 a month in the household survey, but 325,000 a month in the payroll report.

"One reason for the more rapid employment growth in the business survey may be a possible increase in multiple job holding, which often occurs when the demand for labor is very strong," Ms. Norwood said.

The payroll survey counts each job a person holds while the household survey counts only the number of employed respondents.

Skateboard

every place we went," said Tom Noonan, 14, of 180 Welles St.

Manchester police spokesman Gary J. Wood said that police do not single out skaters. Wood said that it's all right for skaters to use sidewalks, though an officer may warn a skater if he or she is creating a hazard for pedestrians. Skaters are not, however, allowed to use roadways, he said.

Town Recreation Director Scott Sprague said that no areas are set aside by the town for skateboarding. "I think there is a liability question, and it's not something I'm looking into right now," he said.

Bernard Apter, co-owner of Regal's Men's Shops on Main Street and the president of the Downtown Merchants' Association, said that skateboarding on Main Street sidewalks is "not a major problem, but it can be a nuisance."

Ursin said that skaters average in age between 14 and 15. But there aren't many of high school age.

"Many people think it's childish," he said.

Skateboarding came back two or three years ago, according to local merchants who sell skating equipment. Its popularity is fading slightly or just about holding steady depending on who you talk to.

Jim Farr, president of Farr's, 2 Main St., said that sales of skateboards are "going along even or even diminishing." He said skateboarding was a big fad two or three years ago.

Kay Corl, the owner of Water-Wise, 250 Broad St., said sales of skateboarding equipment at her store are about the same this year as they were last year.

Marion Arolan, a clerk at Nassiff Sport Co., 991 Main St., said that demand had tapered off.

But if there is a decline, the skaters see it as a good sign. It means that those who are skating are serious about the sport.

"All the trends are out," said Jeff Artiacco, 15, of 150 Birch St.

Skaters talk in a language that the uninitiated may have difficulty understanding. Words with specialized meanings include "shredding" (skating hard) and "slamming" (falling off a skateboard). If you've ever seen a skater jump a curb, you've seen an "ollie."

For the totally naive, "rad" means radical — which means admirable.

Skaters take a light-hearted view of the risk and injuries involved in the sport. That light-heartedness is reflected in the term they use for the scab that develops after a skating injury. They call it a "beef jerky."

Artiacco said that he once had to be treated for a wrist injury after falling from his board.

"It's just a part of what you do," he said.

Words with specialized meanings include "shredding" (skating hard) and "slamming" (falling off a skateboard). If you've ever seen a skater jump a curb, you've seen an "ollie."

For the totally naive, "rad" means radical — which means skater-like.

Skaters take a light-hearted view of the risk and injuries involved in the sport. That light-heartedness is reflected in the terms they use for the scab that develops after a skating injury. They call it a "beef jerky."

Artaleo said that he once had to be treated for a wrist injury after falling from his board.

"It's just a part of what you do," he said.

No agreement

The town has brought suit against the district, asking the court to decide whether the town or the district should determine where a trunk sewer to serve the Pavilions at Buckland Hills will be connected to town lines.

The district, meanwhile, has sued the town over the sewer rates, claiming the rate set by the town at $1.26 cents per 100 cubic feet is arbitrary.

Both suits have been in abeyance while negotiations were in progress.

Attorney John D. LaBelle Jr., the district's legal counsel, said today of the town and district litigation, "It will start."

He said the rate suit will go forward in its normal process.

Town Director Geoffrey Naab said today that he still hopes, "We do reach agreement."

"But meanwhile we ought to get on with both legal cases," he said.

Naab, an attorney, said that while he is not involved with the legal aspects of the matter, he feels it might be well to combine the cases.

LaBelle rejected that idea, however, saying they are separate matters.

Both LaBelle and O'Brien said the disagreement over rates stems from a philosophical difference. The town maintains that the district rate should be set according to the amount of money the town saves because the district has its own sewage collection system.

The district maintains it should pay for town sewer lines that benefit only the southern part of town and not the district.

O'Brien, Penny, and LaBelle were at the meeting Thursday along with DiRosa, Longest, and Frank Jodanis, a former water and sewer superintendent for Manchester now employed by Lombardi Associates, a consulting engineer for the district.

Asked what effect failure to reach agreement might have on plans for sewerage the Pavilions at Buckland Hills, General Manager Robert Weiss declined to comment. He said he has not been involved in the negotiations.

"I want to see what happens in the next few days," Weiss said.

Officials of the Homart Development Co., the developers of the Pavilions, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Penny said, "There is nothing to talk about when you spend two or three months talking about sewer rates and they (district leaders) never move."

But Tripp said, "I think we have bent over backwards to come to an agreement."

He said his understanding is that DiRosa and Longest had made great progress but that Penny was making the decisions about the rates.

Ozone

of 240 in Middletown and Stafford, Yansoy said. Ozone is measured on a scale of 0 to 500, with 100 considered unhealthy.

"We hadn't seen readings like that since 1983," Yansoy said.

The high readings came at a time when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is under pressure to revise its ozone standards downward because of new research indicating ozone affects people more than previously believed.

Ozone is a blue gas with a pungent odor, irritating to the mucous membranes of the nose and throat and toxic to humans. It is present naturally at concentrations from 0.02 to 0.03 parts per million. The EPA standard for outdoor air is 0.12 parts per million.

Ozone levels in Connecticut have, on occasion, approached levels reached in southern California, long considered one of the worst areas for smog in the country, according to Cynthia L. Greene, an environmental analyst with the EPA.

Yansoy blamed the ozone problem on the weather. Hot, slow moving air causes the ozone to concentrate in industrial areas. In July, there were 17 days when the temperature hit more than 90 degrees.

Mel Goldstein, director of the Weather Center at Western Connecticut State College in Danbury, said a 40,000 foot column of stagnant air has stalled over the east, from New England as far south as the Carolinas, and as far west as the Great Lakes.

Goldstein said he expects the air to remain unhealthy until the weather breaks.

"That's not going to be for a while," he said, predicting temperatures will stay in the mid-90s through Saturday. The temperature might drop to 90 on Sunday, but will climb above 90 through most of next week, he said.

Doherty and Treacy after gold in Seoul

I recently returned from a glorious vacation in Ireland where the native sports enthusiasts have been galvanized by the propitious efforts of two athletes with strong ties to the 'Silk City'.

Four-time winner and course record-holder (21:26) of the Manchester Thanksgiving Day Road race, John Treacy, and two-time defending champ John Doherty, are collectively blazing a golden trail toward Seoul, South Korea — the site of the Summer Olympics.

A native of Leeds, England, the 27-year-old Doherty will represent the 'Emerald Isle' in the Olympics as both his parents hail from Ireland. Doherty has been a dominant force on the American road race circuit for the past several years. Doherty has smoothly shifted his enormous talent to the track where he turned in the fastest 5000 meter time (13:17) in the world this year last month in Stockholm, Sweden.

On my last day in Dublin on July 24, I attended the Irish National Track and Field Championships at Morton Stadium in Santry, just outside the capital city. The 5000-meter race that day was more like an 'All-Star' Manchester Road Race.

Stepping up to the starting line for the 5000 included Doherty, three-time Manchester winner and world indoor mile record-holder Eamonn Coghlan, two-time champ in the Christie McCormick Invitational Mile Gerry O'Reilly, Richard O'Flynn and two-time winner of the Four-Mile MCC Road Race Brian Roche.

Coghlan, 35, whose brilliant career is tarnished by that he's never won an Olympic medal, has yet to make the 5000 Olympic qualifying standard of 13:33 in this, his last chance for a medal. Coghlan led in the early stages of the race and tossed a two-bitter cut through a raging headwind. Midway through, Doherty shot past Coghlan and instantly opened up a substantial margin of more than 100 meters and won handily in 13:43. Coghlan took second far back in 14:00 followed closely by O'Reilly.

Doherty, who attributes much of his track success to his altitude training in St. Moritz, Switzerland, will be a solid medal favorite in Seoul.

Meanwhile, the 31-year-old Treacy, a silver medalist in the marathon in the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, has his eyes set on escalating one more rung on the medal ladder. A native of Villers-sur-Mer, County Waterford and two-time world cross-country champ, Treacy has only raced two marathons since Los Angeles — both in Boston.

After achieving meteoric success in his initial tour over the 26.1-mile distance in Los Angeles, Treacy finished a dismal 17th in Boston in 1987 before rebounding with a strong third-place finish behind Kenyans Ibrahim Hussein and Juma Kibkwan four months ago.

While Ireland adopted a new 'Son of Erin' at the National Championships in Doherty, on the same day Treacy also had his countrymen bursting after his superb victory in the Great North Run Half Marathon which began in Newcastle and finished in South Shields, England. Treacy decimated his rivals, including former marathon world record-holder Steve Jones of Wales. Treacy clocked a blistering time of 61 minutes flat for the 13.1 mile distance — the third fastest time ever in the event. Treacy left Jones 58 seconds behind.

Treacy will, undoubtedly, be one of the Irish favorites in Seoul. For a country which collected its only medal in 1984 in the final event, Ireland already has medal hopes in Doherty and Treacy.

As Dublin is in the midst of its millennium celebration for the city's 1000th birthday, this legendary country will unite behind Treacy and Doherty.

THE WINNERS — Manchester pitcher Jim Kitcock, left, gets a hug from one of his teammates after pitching Post 102 to a 5-3 victory over East Hartford Thursday night at Moriarty Field to even their best-of-three Zone 8 playoff series at 1-game apiece. Game 3 is today at 5:15 p.m. at Southwest Park in Windsor Locks.

Post 102 evens Zone 8 playoff

Deciding Game 3 tonight in Windsor Locks

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

As Manchester Post 102 stood on the brink of elimination from this best 2-out-of-3 Zone 8 American Legion playoffs, southpaw Jimmy Kitcock knew what his mission was to even this series at one game apiece.

Following a heart-wrenching 8-7 loss Wednesday night at McKenna Field, it was imperative for Manchester to post a victory in order to force a third and deciding game tonight. The winner of the playoff will represent Zone 8 in the State Legion Tournament beginning Tuesday in East Lyme.

Relying on his excellent control and effective off-speed pitches, Kitcock consistently kept the East Hartford batters off balance and tossed a two-bitter en route to a 5-3 win Thursday night at Moriarty Field.

The deciding Game 3 will be played today at 5:15 p.m. at Southwest Park in Windsor Locks. East Hartford, unable to use McKenna Field because of the Twilight League playoffs, chose the Windsor Locks field as the alternate site. Southpaw Jeff Allen will get the starting nod for Post 102 while right-hander Paul Caccavale will assume the mound duties for Post 77.

Kitcock did not allow a hit until a Jim Bidwell one-out single in the fifth. Post 77 starter and loser Marc Mangiafico broke up Kitcock's shutout bid with a two-out, three-run blast over the left field fence in the seventh.

"The whole day I was nervous," Kitcock said. After he set down the first three Post 77 batters of the game all on groundballs, Kitcock was over his battle of nerves.

"I was in a groove," Kitcock, who walked four and struck out none, explained. "I was just placing the ball."

Manchester immediately supported Kitcock with two quick runs in the bottom of the first. Dave Price and Rob Stanford led off with back-to-back singles. Dom Laurintis then laid down a sacrifice bunt down the first base line and evaded the tag of Tylon Crump. Cleanup hitter Keith DiVeso followed with a two-run double up the gap in right center field.

"Jimmy (Kitcock) was really good," Morency said. Kitcock didn't strike out anyone but the defense behind him was alert at all times and responded in fine fashion. Second baseman Keith Hobby was the defensive star for Manchester, fielding six chances flawlessly. Hobby perfectly positioned himself behind second base in the fourth for Crump who grounded out right to Hobby's location.

"I thought Hobby did an excellent job," Post 77 Coach Jim Bidwell said. "He got in the way of everything." Morency knew his defense was a vital ingredient in the win.

Legendary country will unite behind Treacy and Doherty.

walked to load the bases. Jimmy Penders then ripped a single up the middle scoring DiVeso. Hobby then grounded to Tierini at third who forced Schackner at home, but catcher Jim Bidwell's throw to first went over Crump's head allowing Sauer to score. Kitcock drove in Penders with a single down the left field line.

Price and DiVeso had two hits each for Post 102. "It boils down to the best of one," Morency said. "We had no intensity whatsoever," Bidwell said.

"Tomorrow's another day. It's for all the marbles."

Sparky's tinkering pulls plug on Red Sox

By Harry Atkins
The Associated Press

DETROIT — Detroit manager Sparky Anderson doesn't mind that crunch time has come early in the American League East.

He's still tinkering with the Tigers' lineup and vows to continue moving the pieces around right to the very end of the season.

Anderson made major lineup changes Thursday night and it worked to perfection as the Tigers beat Boston 11-4 to snap the Red Sox' seven-game winning streak and reclaim sole possession of first place in the AL East.

Red Sox, making their first appearance at the top since winning the division in 1986, were tied with the Tigers for only a day.

Faced with the prospect of playing the surging Red Sox five games in four days over the weekend, Anderson returned Lou Whitaker to the leadoff position and had Alan Trammell bat third. Dave Bergman, hitting 388 since June 8, replaced Trammell in the cleanup spot.

Whitaker lasted only one inning, succumbing to a sore back, but Trammell came up twice with bases loaded and delivered a pair of doubles that drove in five runs.

"Aw, it was nothing," Anderson said. "He could just as well come up with nobody on."

The move, with Trammell at least, might last through the remainder of the stretch run. Trammell has batted cleanup in every game he's started since the beginning of the 1987 season.

"What I want to do is get our best hitter the most at-bats in the next 50 games," Anderson said. "I'll try to keep our hottest hitter behind him. Maybe over the long haul he'll win us one game."

No amount of button-pushing, however, could have anticipated the sub-par performance of Boston ace Roger Clemens. But the record shows that the Tigers have handled Clemens as well as anyone can. He's 4-3 in 10 starts against Detroit.

Clemens, 15-6, was 5-0 in his previous seven starts this season, was a perfect 10-0 on the road, had pitched into the seventh inning in 23 of 24 starts and was averaging almost 11 strikeouts per nine innings pitched.

But Clemens was gone after 5-1-3 innings, having allowed four of Detroit's nine walks and seven runs on nine hits.

"We've got a long way to go yet," Clemens said, talking tough. "We'll see them four games at our place next week. We still got four more games here, too, so we'll see."

Nobody in the Detroit clubhouse was gloating, but neither were they apologetic. This is the way the Tigers have won all season long, with luck and pluck. Boston led 3-0 early after home runs by Dwight Evans and Jim Rice, but Detroit scratched around, took advantage of some breaks, and got back in the contest.

Almost everything has been working for the Red Sox lately. They are 19-2 under Joe Morgan who took over from fired John McNamara after the All-Star break. Both defeats under Morgan have come on the road.

"Getting beaten 11-8 feels just like losing 1-0," said Morgan, who was rewarded with a new contract Wednesday. "We got beat, that's how it feels."

Detroit starter Walt Terrell, 7-8, wasn't exactly overpowering, but he was good enough to post his third victory since the All-Star break.

Clot discovered

BOSTON (AP) — A small blood clot was found in a main artery of pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd's right arm, the Boston Red Sox reported Thursday.

The clot, about two centimeters long, was found in the main artery into the arm in front of the right shoulder following two days of tests conducted by team physician Dr. Arthur Pappas at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

Dr. Pappas said the clot is recent since Boyd pitched without problems until a week ago.

In an effort to dissolve the clot, doctors began treatment with an enzyme, urokinase.

Boyd will be examined again Friday to determine how long the enzyme treatment would continue.

Mersereau making the Jets on his own merit

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — It took a while, but Scott Mersereau took the label. He is no longer a scrub. He isn't a longshot, either. Mersereau, a 6-foot-3, 275-pound free agent from Southern Connecticut State University in New Haven, played on the New York Jets' replacement team during last year's NFL playoffs. This year, he should make the team on his own merits. "He plays the way the only question," Coach Joe Walton temporarily answered that one by saying Mersereau would start over Gerald Nichols at nose tackle on Saturday's exhibition opener at Philadelphia.

Suddenly, the disappointment of being waived by the Los Angeles Rams last fall in the final cut, and of being alienated from the veteran Jets after the strike, is history.

"Any ill feelings about the strike are pretty much gone," Mersereau said. "All I care about is proving I can contribute. If I do that, I'll have their respect." Most of the veterans had little to do with the replacement players. A few said they understood it was the replacement players' only chance to play pro ball of their career. "I was splitting, name-calling and egotistical," was directed at veteran Mark Gastineau.

"It wasn't that bad for me," Mersereau said. "Nobody was going out of their way to be nasty to me. Then again, nobody went out of their way to pat me on the back, either."

Rephrase that, corrected Mersereau. Ironically, the veteran was kicked off the team by the one being kicked — Gastineau.

The controversial Gastineau, who doesn't have a job locked up this year, offered advice and encouragement. Mersereau said, "A week before the strike ended, he added, Gastineau offered him a room at his Long Island home. "He asked me if I wanted to stay with him rather than live in a hotel," Mersereau said. "He said he had an extra room and I was welcome to use it. "Mark told me to ignore people. They were resentful toward me. He said I had to make playing football my primary focus, and if I contributed — it might take a while — but they'll come around."

Gastineau was right. The road to peace was paved with Mersereau's participation in the off-season conditioning program. Without the outside pressure from games, coaches, fans and the media, he cultivated friendships with the teammates who picked him in October.

He told them he understood their position, but he never apologized for doing what he thought was right.

"I did what I had to do," Mersereau said. "I was tired of waiting for things to happen. I couldn't wait another year to be called. No doubt, being on the replacement team was my ticket here."
