About Town

New course at hospital

The Manchester CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) Program will offer a new course this month at Manchester Memorial Hospital. A protection against choking course will be offered Aug. 29 and on a monthly basis in the future.

The 90-minute course is intended for the food service worker and covers the skills necessary to help an adult, a child or an infant choking victim. This course is being offered in addition to the adult CPR, child and infant CPR and infant and child safety and CPR courses which will continue to be scheduled monthly.

The new course is available to be given on location at a restaurant or food service site. It's sponsored by the hospital and the Town of Manchester Emergency Medical Services Council.

For more information or to register call 647-4738.

Support group to meet

The Hartford Area Support Group for people who stutter will meet Aug. 21 at 7 p.m. in conference room B at Manchester Memorial Hospital, Haynes Street.

Discussions are centered on such topics as telephone difficulties, self-confidence and mutual support.

For more information and directions call Debbie Roth at 875-8401 or Doris McConnell, 623-6176, after 7 p.m.

AARP plans trip

The American Association of Retired Persons No. 1275, Manchester, is sponsoring a trip Dec. 1 for members to Radio City Music Hall, New York City to see the Christmas show. The cost of the trip is $39. More details can be obtained from Peggy Kehler at 649-0157 or Dot Hughes at 647-8911.

Camp Rising Sun to open

The American Cancer Society will open Camp Rising Sun, for children with cancer, from Aug. 21 to 27 at the Hemlocks Outdoor Education Center in Hebron.

A meal a day is scheduled for Aug. 24 from 9:30 a.m. to noon. About 60 children from the UConn Children's Cancer Center and the Yale Cancer Center will attend the camp.

Library to sponsor films

Andover Public Library will sponsor a summer program ending Aug. 24 starting with the showing of two films at 2 p.m. The party will start at 3 p.m.

Two films, based on the books Rikki Tikki Tavi and The Velveteen Rabbit, will be shown. Certificates and prizes will be awarded to children who participated in the Mystery summer reading program. Refreshments will be served.

Children are encouraged to come dressed as their favorite storybook character. Children should also bring their reading logs. For more information call the library at 742-7428.

Deaths Elsewhere

FDR son dead of lung cancer

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Franklin Delano Roosevelt Jr., a former congressman and the third son of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, died today, his 74th birthday, of cancer at the Vassar Brothers Hospital.

Roosevelt, who lived in Millbrook, was admitted to the hospital on July 21, said Charles Gill, a spokesman. He died at 8 a.m.

Christopher Roosevelt said his father died of lung cancer. "It was a very late diagnosis and very fast moving."

A close friend and earnest campaigner for John F. Kennedy, Roosevelt served as Kennedy's undersecretary of commerce and was the first chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission under President Lyndon Johnson.

At the time of his death, Roosevelt was chairman of the executive committee of the Mickelberry Corp., and chairman of the board of the Park Avenue Bank in New York.

He was also on the boards of the United States Oil Company, the Wakefield National Corp., and chaired the executive committee of the Eleanor Roosevelt Institute, a foundation dedicated to the application of ideals practiced by his parents.

His last public appearance was June 4 when he visited the ancestral home of the Roosevelt family in the province of Zeeland in the Netherlands, which has been turned into the Roosevelt Study Center.

Police Roundup

Wanted man turns self in

A Manchester man charged with the third-degree assault of his pregnant girlfriend turned himself in on a warrant today, police said.

Cory Rankin, 23, of 225 Autumn St., turned himself in to police at around 8 a.m. today, police said. He is charged with the Aug. 8 assault of his 18-year-old girlfriend, who police said is eight months pregnant.

Rankin also faces charges of sexual assault in connection with a June 1987 incident in Manchester.

The Aug. 8 police report says police were called to investigate a fight at the girlfriend's home. Her mother told police her daughter had a bruised left eye from an incident that occurred at around 8:30 a.m., but Rankin and the daughter had left before police arrived, police said.

When the girlfriend and Cory Rankin returned to her home at around 3:30 p.m., her mother called police, police said. Rankin fled on foot to the Union Pond area and was pursued by police but not caught, police said.

The girlfriend refused to give a sworn statement, but told police Rankin had hit her in the eye, police said.

Rankin was charged with third-degree assault and is being held on a $1,000 cash bond. He is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court today.

He is awaiting trial in Hartford Superior Court on charges of first-degree burglary, first-degree attempted sexual assault, third-degree sexual assault, first-degree unlawful restraint and third-degree assault in connection with the June 1987 incident, court officials said.

Corrections

A story Aug. 10 on a workshop of the town Board of Directors inaccurately quoted a statement by Russell Smyth of 48 Strawberry Lane. Smyth said he had previously suggested locating a new municipal building at Center Springs Park and was happy that an administration proposal for a new building followed that recommendation.

A story on Tuesday on applications for the town assessor position contained incorrect information on one of the applicants. Deputy Assessor William Moon was not the one qualified applicant in June for the job. He is now qualified for the job.

Thoughts

Some good folks decide not to participate in religious organizations because they can't seem to find one that's perfect. In one place, there's too much emphasis on money, in another the people are too long-winded, in still another the bylaws are too old-fashioned, and yet another seems to be slanted in the wrong direction when it comes to social issues.

Guess what? Only God and Jesus Christ measure up to the standard of "perfection." Churches and synagogues and other religious bodies will always... always... fall short.

To experience the joy of belonging... the rewards of sharing with others in growing in faith... requires tolerance. The wide variety of choices among synagogues and churches nowadays assures us that out there somewhere is a household of God where just about anyone can feel comfortable. It simply involves looking for the right one, and then tolerating the few things that aren't quite perfect. This tolerance is one of the keys for many believers who are yearning to know again the joy of belonging.

Search for architect endorsed

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen Tuesday voted to approve a request by the Board of Education to hire an architect who will determine the cost and feasibility of school improvements suggested by a citizens' study committee.

"We're looking to you to work with the Board of Finance to appropriate funds for an architect," school board Chairman James Marshall said. "We need some architectural information."

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to select the Public Building Commission to select an architect for the project. The architect will help the Board of Education establish priorities for improvements.

Marshall said the board hopes the suggested improvements can go to referendum by early 1989.

Additions and improvements suggested in a report from the 23-member Bolton Facilities Study Committee include the addition of nine classrooms to deal with what Marshall called a "miniature baby boom." An increase of 128 students is projected for the elementary and center schools by 1997.

The study committee also suggested building an auditorium and gymnasium for the elementary and center schools.

"We know what we want," said Thomas Manning, a member of the Board of Education. "The question is how much are each of those items going to cost."

The Board of Education received estimates from five architectural firms for the work, ranging in cost from $17,000 to $95,000, Marshall said.

Manning said the low figure represents the actual cost to the architect. The high figure probably includes the cost to the town and rough drawings.

Cassano seeks to delay municipal building vote

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Town Director Stephen T. Cassano said today that he would recommend next month that the Board of Directors delay a referendum on a new, $13 million municipal building, possibly until sometime in the spring.

Cassano, who heads the space subcommittee that recommended the plan for the new six-story building, said he did not think it would be possible to get together information on how the existing office buildings would be used in time for a November referendum.

"I simply can't get all the answers necessary to put it on the ballot by November," he said. Cassano said he thought that all board members would agree to hold off on the referendum.

Last Friday, Mayor Peter P. DiRoosa Jr. said that he would recommend delaying the referendum for the same reasons, and three directors said they would support such a recommendation. Cassano said at that time that delaying the referendum might be necessary if the information could not be put together.

Cassano said that he wanted to have a spring referendum on the building proposal because every year the project is delayed could mean a 15 percent increase in the estimated cost.

Among other things, Cassano said, he wants to make sure that the estimated $13 million cost of the building is accurate. He also wants to get more information on alternate plans proposed by residents at a public hearing last week.

At that hearing, a suggestion was made to relocate the police headquarters from East Middle Turnpike to space in the current Municipal Building. Another suggestion was made to add floors to the proposed new building so the police department could be located there.

Cassano said that those proposals are not feasible, but he said he wanted to put that determination into a written report.

Firm stalls reply to PZC on affordable housing plan

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

The developer of 1,000 apartment units at the Buckland mall site said he can't consider a proposal from the town to set aside 5 percent of the units for affordable housing until his plans are more concrete.

Charles Berman, a partner in the Dallas-based Trammell Crow Co. said Tuesday he hasn't yet considered the proposal of the Planning and Zoning Commission, submitted to him in a July 6 letter from Planning Director Mark Pellegrini.

"I don't have any response at all," Berman said. "We're still planning our project."

Berman, who works out of the firm's New Canaan office, said it will probably be at least a few months before he's ready to submit final plans to the Planning and Zoning Commission for approval.

The commission approved Trammell Crow's preliminary plan of development on June 20.

Town Council is skeptical on UConn boathouse plan

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — The fate of the University of Connecticut crew house at Patriot's Park is uncertain because members of the Town Council are skeptical about it.

"This is not a recognized varsity sport. It's a club. It is not UConn we're dealing with, it's an enthusiastic group of kids. I see all the positives, but I have some reservations about dealing with this nebulous group of people," said Councilwoman Elizabeth Patterson during a meeting at the Town Office Building Monday night.

An update on the status of the boathouse which is not yet under construction was on the agenda for the meeting. The council later agreed by consensus to hold a special meeting Monday at the Town Office Building from 7 to 8 p.m., and asked representatives of the crew club and the town Parks and Recreation Commission to attend and present plans for the boathouse.

That commission supervises activities at Patriots Park. The meeting will be open to the public, however it is primarily for the purpose of listening to the presentation.

The crew team currently calls

Coventry Lake home and held its first annual regatta there last spring, a 2,000 meter race called the Coventry Sprint.

UConn crew is not a varsity sport. According to officials at the university, it is not likely the crew team will get varsity status in the near future due to the tight budget of the UConn athletic department.

In addition, university officials say crew does not meet the criteria for consideration of varsity status, which includes in the stipulation that the sport be in the school's competitive leagues (either the Big East or Yankee conference), which does not include crew. Tim Tolokan, the school's associate director of athletics for communications, adds that "Crew does not have revenue producing potential."

As a recognized club rather than a varsity sport, UConn crew does not receive financial support from the UConn athletic department, must negotiate on its own with government officials for use of facilities, and the university does not provide the team with

Liability insurance. Patterson said if something should happen such as an injury to one of the students while the boathouse is being built or later during use, "Ultimately, we wouldn't have anyone to hold responsible."

Councilman Richard Paton brought up another concern. "I have reservations about putting up yet another building at Patriots Park. A park should be open space and natural setting, not condo city."

In the past, council members Rose Fowler and Chairwoman Joan Lewis have voiced support for the boathouse proposal, saying the crew team's use of the town's resource could enhance Coventry's image and has potential for promoting tourism. If the council okay's the proposal, it still must be approved by the town Planning and Zoning Commission. That decision would come after a public hearing.

Lewis and Fowler also spoke in favor of the boathouse on Monday.

'Let's go get 'em!' shouts eager Dan Quayle

'A man of the future,' says Bush

By Eileen Purman
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Sen. Dan Quayle, the conservative baby boomer who will be George Bush's running mate, introduces himself today to a party stunned by the choice of an unknown quantity but hopeful his youth will electrify the ticket.

Bush aides already are inviting comparisons between the handsome, vigorous Indiana senator and John F. Kennedy, who galvanized young voters nearly three decades ago. Bush himself called Quayle "a man of the future."

The two men make a joint appearance at a news conference today and Quayle presumably will be working on his acceptance speech for Thursday night.

The choice of Quayle, 41, a legislative politician whose career rise has been meteoric, brought stunned silence and then applause from supporters who watched Bush make the announcement Tuesday after days of suspense. Conservatives said they were pleased by the choice.

Quayle bounced up and down on his toes at the riverfront area where Bush's tour boat had cruised to greet supporters, and could hardly contain his enthusiasm. "Let's go get 'em!" he shouted.

Sheila Tate, Bush's press secretary, said Quayle was Bush's "first choice, his only choice" for the ticket's No. 2 spot. He was picked over about a dozen hopefuls, whom Bush personally notified from Belle Chasse Naval Air Station before phoning Quayle at his hotel at 2:06 p.m., aides said.

Bush and Quayle enjoy a warm relationship and talk often by telephone or in Bush's office in the Old Executive Office Building, Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., who polled Senate Republicans at Bush's request two weeks ago, said Quayle was not among those they recommended for the spot. But when McConnell gave Bush the recommendations, Bush asked, "What about Dan Quayle?"

Quayle is relatively unknown on the national stage, but he quickly seized the moment at Tuesday's riverfront festivities, his right hand chopping the air in a gesture reminiscent of Kennedy.

"George Bush's America believes and has the commitment to the American family that is so important to all of us," he said, his voice rising to a shout. "George Bush's America understands the problems that confront us and can lead us to the future and the 21st century."

Quayle is married to the former Marilyn Tucker, a lawyer, and they have three children, the oldest 14. He comes from a prominent Indiana newspaper family and is the grandson of the late Eugene C. Pulliam, a multimillionaire publisher.

It is not clear how much, if any, of the family fortune Quayle himself has. He says his principal source of income is his Senate salary. He lists more than $250,000 in stock in a family-controlled newspaper group as his only substantial asset, but the figure may be understated because congressional financial disclosure forms require that holdings be reported only in broad ranges.

Quayle made no major marks in two terms in the House before his Senate bid, defeating incumbent Democrat Birch Bayh in 1980 and winning re-election handily in 1986. In the Senate, Quayle has not attained the stature of his senior Indiana colleague, Richard Lugar. But in choosing Quayle, Bush opted for someone with whom he felt comfortable rather than someone with instant name recognition.

Robert Teeter, Bush's pollster, said Quayle should strengthen the ticket in the Midwest, where Bush ran poorly in the primaries, and also help bridge the celebrated gender gap problem Bush has with women voters.

Teeter also called Quayle a "strong conservative." The senator has supported President Reagan's Star Wars missile defense system and defense spending measures. He was a chief Senate opponent of the legislation, which Reagan also initially opposed, that required companies to give employees advance notice of plant closings.

Republican political consultant Eddie Mahe said Quayle, unlike other potential running mates for Bush, "will not have to publicly change any position to be in complete agreement or substantial agreement with George Bush."

Quayle said earlier this week he had provided exhaustive information to the Bush campaign on his personal, medical, financial and tax history. Bush aides did not discuss whether their research turned up any negatives that might encumber the senator.

Quayle's name was raised in a sex-and-influence scandal when he was a member of the House in 1981, although he denied having an affair with the woman involved, lobbyist Paula Parkins. Said Baker: "That's been looked into and there's absolutely nothing to it."

But some Democrats said Quayle's conservatism may provide them with an opening to attack a record that includes his leadership this summer in a losing fight to defeat legislation requiring 60-days notice of plant closings and mass layoffs.

Democratic Vice Presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen, called Quayle's selection "good news."

Dan Quayle — his legal name is James Danforth Quayle — was born in Indianapolis on Feb. 4, 1947, a birthdate that makes him the first member of the "baby boom" generation on the presidential ticket of a major American political party.

Indiana's junior, Republican senator is a Presbyterian and a member of one of the nation's most prominent publishing families, the Pulliams. His grandfather was Eugene C. Pulliam, publisher of the Indianapolis Star and News, the Arizona Republic and the Phoenix Gazette.

Quayle's father, James C. Quayle, is publisher of the Hun-dington (Ind.) Herald-Press. Enrolling in 1969 at DePaul University, alma mater of many of his relatives, Quayle waited at tables at a sorority house for $40 a month.

Quayle met his wife, Marilyn, while attending the university's law school. He married her on Nov. 18, 1972, 10 weeks after their first date.

The couple has a 14-year-old son, Tucker; a 12-year-old son, Benjamin; and a 9-year-old daughter, Corinne. The two youngest children were born after Quayle began his first congressional campaign in 1976, winning election to the House where he was to serve Indiana's 4th congressional district for two terms.

Five months into his second House term, Quayle challenged Indiana's most prominent Democrat, Sen. Birch Bayh, a veteran incumbent.

On election day 1980, Quayle ended Bayh's political career, winning by a margin of 166,000 votes, 54 percent of the total.

Six years later, as Democrats were reclaiming the Senate majority they lost in Ronald Reagan's 1980 landslide, Quayle bucked the tide and crushed his poorly financed opponent, taking 61 percent of the vote.

He attended virtually all of the panel's exhaustive hearings into the details of the medium-range missile treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union, expressing great skepticism even though it had been negotiated by a conservative president.

Asked about the comparison this week, Quayle brushed his hair with an impatient sweep of his hand and said: "I've had that stigma ever since I first ran for the Senate. ... I'd rather talk about what I stand for than what I look like."

But in eight years in the Senate he has only rarely appeared at the edge of the national spotlight, never attaining the level of recognition and peer respect accorded his senior colleague, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

But he has made a mark on the three Senate committees on which he serves — Armed Forces, Budget and Labor and Human Resources.

On the Armed Services Committee, Quayle made himself a specialist in the NATO alliance. He strongly supported President Reagan's space-based missile defense system popularly known as Star Wars. A few weeks ago, he successfully urged the president to veto this year's defense authorization bill because of its restrictions on administration arms control policies.

Quayle does not shy from the intricacies of defense policy. He has mastered such matters as troop strength, weapons performance and Soviet military doctrine.

THE GOP TICKET — Vice President George Bush and Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle, his choice for a vice-presidential running mate, appear at a rally in New Orleans on Tuesday.

Who is Dan Quayle?

By Lawrence L. Knutson

NEW ORLEANS — Sen. Dan Quayle brings youth, wealth, golden good looks and a profoundly combative conservative view of the world to the 1988 Republican presidential ticket.

Quayle's age — 41 — was the factor George Bush stressed Tuesday afternoon as he stood on the bank of the Mississippi River and announced he would ask the Republican National Convention to nominate "a man of the future" to be his vice-presidential running mate.

But some Democrats said Quayle's conservatism may provide them with an opening to attack a record that includes his leadership this summer in a losing fight to defeat legislation requiring 60-days notice of plant closings and mass layoffs.

The Republican National Convention

Tightfisted delegates irk merchants

By Nancy Shulins
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The hotels are full and the taxis are taken. But economically speaking, little is trickling down to the French Quarter, where the Republican National Convention is turning the Big Easy into the Big Empty.

"Look out there, there's no parking!" There shouldn't be any parking, said Kerri Rock at the French Market Candle Shop. "The hotels are booked solid, so where are they? So far, the Republicans haven't bought dilly."

At the open-air Cafe du Monde, where a handful of conventioners lingered over their morning coffee, street performer Mustapha Hummouri was trying to tap-dance his way into Republicans' wallets. If not into their hearts.

He sang. He danced. He strummed a washbub festooned with anti-Dukakis bumper stickers. Finally, his pitch turned political. "To quote a great American, President Ronald 'Dutch' Reagan, you people in the private sector, pick up the slack, Jack! Don't be so mean with the green."

Rock, who moonlights at the Can-Can Cabaret on Bourbon Street, said the nights are no better than the days. "The cabaret isn't sleaze, it's a family show, and it's the only bar on Bourbon Street that allows children."

"We thought we'd be hopping, but business is terrible. Normally we do three shows a night. Last night, we barely made two."

The death of shoppers was an unexpected blow to some vendors at the open-air French Market, faced a similar prospect. Her elephants — 130 ceramic pendants that cost her $3 each — weren't going anywhere. "My prices are dropping by the day," she said.

At Aunt Sally's Shop, neat displays of jambalaya sauce, gumbo file, dirty rice mix, crab boil and other local specialties were largely untouched by Republican hands. It wasn't just slow there, either. It was very, very, very slow," manager Pat Gomez said. "Folks will see New Orleans on TV and want to come down for vacations."

But her clerks were frustrated by the obvious prosperity of the browsers. "They're not spending money," said clerk Edna Francis. "But they sure have a lot of big bills."

An old woman holding a dirty white dog and a sign that said "Hungry, homeless, can't feed dog," settled herself on a sidewalk bench. An hour later, she'd collected a quarter.

Meanwhile, the convention was buzzing about the selection of Quayle. Many called it a surprising choice, because Quayle lacks the congressional track record and high profile of some of the more prominent people Bush had considered. But Bush's new campaign chairman, James Baker, said Tuesday the selection of the 41-year-old Quayle "represents a bold stroke across generations."

"He's the first baby-boomer on a national ticket," Baker said. Bush said he decided on Quayle on Tuesday morning before coming to New Orleans. He announced the selection at a well-attended rally on the banks of the Mississippi River after a flashy arrival aboard a sternwheel riverboat.

The vice president had flown from Washington aboard Air Force Two to a naval base on the other side of the river.

The boyish-looking, light-haired Quayle then bounded to the stage to join Bush and proclaim, "Let's go get 'em."

Bush made the news public after telephoning the other potential nominees he had considered and sought personal and financial information about them. The word leaked as Bush was steaming across the river.

But Bush had held his counsel closely. Even on the riverboat, filled with more than 300 supporters and campaign contributors, Bush's own son, George Jr., held up a sign reading, "Dad, you can tell me."

Before crossing the river, Bush had a brief encounter with President Reagan at the Belle Chasse Naval Air Station as the president left New Orleans and Bush arrived.

When the two were about to go their separate ways, Bush whispered into the president's ear. Aides later said he was conveying that the choice was Quayle, and that Reagan was the first person the vice president told. The second person he told was Mrs. Bush, said campaign press secretary Sheila Tate.

At the rally, Dixieland jazz and the aroma of Cajun food greeted Bush, his wife and assorted family members as they trooped off the boat.

It's George Bush calling, but his news isn't good

By Harry F. Rosenthal
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — George Bush ruined lunch for a lot of people by calling to say they were not going to be his vice-presidential running mate.

He made the call soon after his plane landed at Belle Chasse Naval Air Station on Tuesday.

The last in the series was reserved for the one man who said "yes," — Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana.

Gov. Carroll Campbell of South Carolina said his call came about noon. He quoted the vice president as saying: "We've made a decision on this. I wanted to call you and let you know."

Other nearby, you're not it" calls went out to Bob Dole and his wife, Elizabeth; Jack Kemp; Pete Domenici; George Dukmejian; John Sununu; and the returns may not all be in. Bush went down the list of everyone who had been asked to submit a personal financial and biographical information.

His press secretary, Sheila Tate, said Bush made about a dozen calls in all and that Quayle's was the last.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who is resigning to lead the Bush campaign, told reporters that Bush thought it was important that there not be any suggestions that the process was not dignified or that the process was in any way demeaning to the people who might not be selected.

History will record the time of the call to Quayle as 2:06 p.m. convention time. For whatever significance may be attached to it, most of those calls were at lunch, but Quayle was in his hotel room. Ms. Tate said Quayle was the vice president's "first choice, his only choice," and that Bush told the senator so.

The other calls were of the let-them-down-easy variety.

New Mexico's Sen. Domenici was at Antonio's Restaurant when Baker reached him and put Bush on the line.

As Domenici remembers it — in one long stream: "He indicated to me that he wanted to get a bit of the suspense out of the air, and told me that I was not his choice, that he was going to go another way, that I was among the last few that he had to decide as far as his running mate and appreciated very much what I had done, the way I had conducted myself, and thanked me for all my effort, and asked if I would be helpful in his campaign, and I said 'yes, of course.'"

Kansas Sen. Dole and his wife, the former transportation secretary, were not in their hotel when the Bush call came at 1:45 p.m. Elizabeth Dole returned a few minutes later, reached Bush

Too easy to get guns in America

Polls show that more than 90 percent of the American people favor a waiting period in the purchase of handguns. Even President Reagan, whose anti-gun control credentials are impeccable, recently announced his support of a waiting period.

But the National Rifle Association, which automatically opposes even the mildest of gun regulations as an assault on the constitutional right to bear arms, is predictably fighting this amendment as well. And the NRA still has considerable clout in Washington.

Twenty years ago, in the aftermath of a series of political assassinations in this country, Congress passed a law prohibiting felons, minors, illegal aliens, drug addicts and those adjudicated mentally ill from acquiring handguns.

In states where there is a legal waiting period, hundreds of such persons are stopped from buying guns every year. Nobody really knows how many criminals, drug addicts or mentally disturbed persons easily arm themselves in states where there is no waiting period.

Clearly a national law is needed.

Washington still ignores Mexico

Despite its size, strategic importance and proximity, Mexico has for years been virtually ignored by whatever administration happened to be in office in Washington. The Reagan era obsession with Nicaragua has only served to underline the fact that the United States is largely ignorant of its nearest southern neighbor.

Mexicans have long suspected that Americans were conspiring against them politically, and some Americans, in their turn, have been concerned about the viability of Mexico's economic and political abilities. Underlying this has been the 60-year monopoly of power of the ruling PRI party.

Now, it appears that the monopoly has been broken by the results of the presidential election. Despite widespread charges of election fraud, two opposition candidates made strong showings in the popular vote and served notice that the PRI will no longer rule unchallenged. The change could be significant for both countries.

Although the Mexican political situation is far from settled, what is clear is that Washington will now have to exercise both attention and understanding of that neighbor. That issue will be of major importance to the new American president, whoever he may be.

Why Weicker's out of the gate so early

Lowell Weicker remembers the year at the outset of his political career when he confidently took it easy in a campaign and it nearly cost him. That was some 25 years ago in Greenwich and he vowed it would never happen again.

So Weicker's early start on this campaign to win a fourth term in the U.S. Senate is partly with that lesson in mind and partly, as campaign manager Jay Malczynsky of New Britain says, because Weicker won't concede the whole summer stage to conventions and a couple of guys named George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

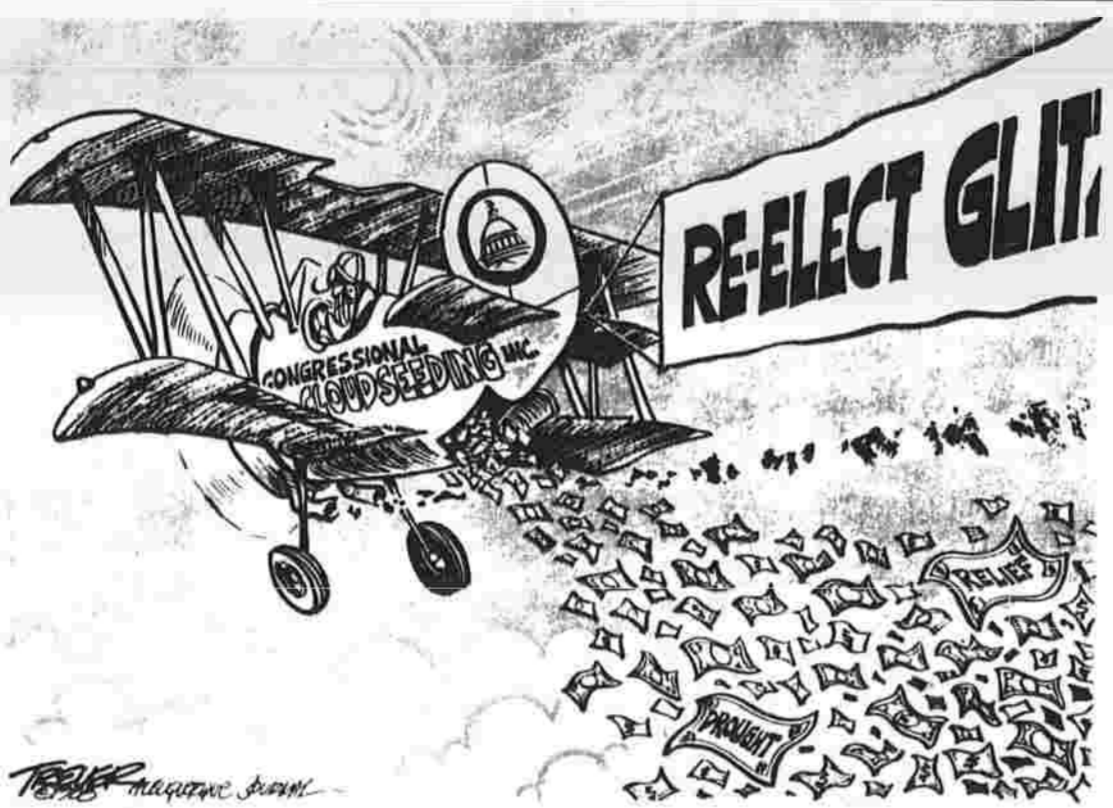

That is the official explanation behind the mid-summer push by the Republican veteran. Let me suggest a couple more.

In the first place, Lowell Weicker is a politician who loves combat. Hitting the beaches in July and August is hardly new for him. But he really wants this one to be his biggest victory, while he doesn't say so, to provide the kind of momentum that could propel him in another direction later.

And it must be said that Weicker is also aware of pressure by his Democratic challenger, Attorney General Joe Lieberman of New Haven. Lieberman has been sailing along with an equally early start on a campaign that can lift him to new heights in his career or cement him more firmly in the job he already has. Lieberman is trying to take it to Weicker, and the big guy knows it.

The two had one tense debate in which Lieberman, while admitting he's the underdog, clearly demonstrated that he won't roll over.

That aggressive, contentious demeanor by Lieberman was exemplified fortissimo in his television commercials. The ads dwell so much on Weicker that it is sometimes confusing as to who is paying for them. Malczynsky says he was

Quayle topped the list

Soon to be household name

By Walter R. Mears

NEW ORLEANS — Dan Quayle is not a household name, but it soon will be, because George Bush decided to make it one.

Reaching across the generation gap for a vice presidential nominee, Bush took charge with a stroke that symbolized the change in Republican command.

Tonight, the Republican National Convention formally in-stalls Bush as its nominee to succeed President Reagan.

In choosing his running mate, Bush bypassed more familiar names, defeated rivals, Republicans with power bases of their own. Quayle's constituents are back home in Indiana. He has a national constituency of one: George Bush.

Within hours after he arrived in New Orleans on Tuesday, Bush dramatized the passage of GOP power. He bid farewell to Reagan, then began telephoning about a dozen Republican leaders and officeholders to tell them he would not be asking them to join the ticket.

"I think we were all focusing on Kemp, Dole and Dornick, and the vice president pulled a fast one," said Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois.

Quayle's name had been on the vice presidential prospect lists, but not at the top — except on the only list that counted.

Bush called Quayle shortly after 2 p.m. to say he was the choice. Then, at a riverfront welcoming rally, Reagan's vice president introduced his own choice for vice president.

Quayle, 41, is two years into his second term in the Senate, after serving two terms in the House. He's trim, athletic, Hollywood handsome and a skilled television campaigner. His congressional record is staunchly conservative, and he is a specialist in national politics, and some Americans, in their turn, have been concerned about the viability of Mexico's economic and political abilities. Underlying this has been the 60-year monopoly of power of the ruling PRI party.

Now, it appears that the monopoly has been broken by the results of the presidential election. Despite widespread charges of election fraud, two opposition candidates made strong showings in the popular vote and served notice that the PRI will no longer rule unchallenged. The change could be significant for both countries.

Capitol Comments

pleasantly surprised to see that Lieberman's ad agency was such a "nice" picture of Weicker in the commercials.

The Lieberman campaign has invested some $250,000 in generally high-quality television commercials prepared by Squier and Askew of Washington. The Weicker people call them overtly negative. That is the risk Lieberman takes and he must live with the public's (i.e., voters') reaction. I think he takes a bigger risk in devoting that kind of time and space to his opponent.

Weicker has also been using television generously to promote his re-election campaign. Last Friday, the last in his recent series was aired, ending a month-long nearly saturation outlay of some $200,000. The ads were done by Saatchi and Saatchi of Madison Avenue, whose manager, Peter Saatchi, is a longtime personal friend of Weicker's.

Weicker's ads played to favorable reviews. Planned last spring, they represented a studied effort to be positive about Weicker. If they deserved a rap, it would be for the monotonous milking of the slogan about "nobody's man but yours."

The GOP candidate's commercials were, however, about Weicker and nobody else. His campaign people say neither the ads nor his style of campaigning will change much as they march into September.

Meanwhile, Weicker went into this week's national convention in New Orleans on the wings of an amazingly easy carry-over from his stint on the GOP platform committee. Determined from the start to keep the platform from going whole-hog conservative, Weicker won five battles and lost five. But along the way he convinced a lot of early doubters that he was not the wild-eyed, irresponsible liberal they expected. For him, that was a gratifying moral victory.

NRC probes cover-up in nuke incident

WASHINGTON — The Davis-Besse nuclear power plant near Toledo, Ohio, was pushing a deadline to go to full power on New Year's Eve 1986, when the plant manager stormed into the control room. Smelling of alcohol, he threw a temper tantrum and shouted obscenities according to employees who were on duty that night. The incident was serious because a nuclear disaster can be sparked by actions in the control room — the nerve center of any nuclear power plant.

But, the Toledo Edison power company covered up details of that night so the Nuclear Regulatory Commission would drop the issue.

The NRC shelved the matter until new allegations surfaced last year. Now our associate, Stewart Harris, has obtained the NRC investigative report that concluded that Toledo Edison's vice president for nuclear power, Donald Shelton, "concealed" information.

The episode is just the latest example of what happens when the NRC, the federal watchdog over the nuclear industry, leaves power companies to police themselves.

Shelton made an original inquiry into the incident in January 1987 at the request of the NRC. In his report, Shelton wrote that the plant manager, Louis Storz, arrived at work after drinking alcohol. But Shelton concluded that "the allegation that his behavior was a distraction is subjective and is not substantiated."

That might have been the end of the story, had not the NRC been prodded into launching an investigation later in 1987, when one of its own inspectors alleged that the plant manager ordered the plant to go to full power before it was safe, an allegation that was later disproved.

During the NRC probe, completed last month, Shelton admitted that he stopped his investigation after a senior vice president at Toledo Edison told him that Storz did not seem drunk when he talked to him by telephone that New Year's Eve. As Shelton told the NRC investigators: "If the senior V.P. says the wall is brown, why should I ask the cleaning lady what color the wall is?"

Shelton probably should have asked another question: Why were workers on duty in the control room that night told the NRC that Storz had alcohol on his breath when he arrived at about 10 p.m. Storz himself told the NRC that he had shared a bottle of wine with his wife over dinner. And a witness said Storz had two drinks at a party after dinner.

Another witness said he did not smell liquor, but suspected Storz had been drinking because his speech was slurred and movements were impaired.

NRC investigators could not determine if Storz was drunk. But nine people in the control room said he was disruptive. One of them told investigators Storz yelled obscenities when he got into the control room.

Storz was upset when he was called to the control room because the plant was having trouble meeting its deadline to go to full power that night, after nearly 18 months of repairs, according to the NRC's investigation.

One worker told NRC investigators that he wondered why Storz was "in the control room in the condition he was in." Another said Storz, usually a quiet study, failed to understand the technical problems that night.

Despite the fact that the NRC investigators could not conclude whether Storz was drunk, they had no qualms about saying in their report that he was "distracting and disruptive" in the control room.

Shelton defended his own inquiry into the incident saying he would not personally have been distracted by Storz's conduct.

The workers said that Storz did not order them to do anything unsafe that night. The plant missed the deadline, but went on line early the next morning when it was safe.

Now, the NRC must decide whether it will send its investigation to the Justice Department for further action.

Full steam ahead

President Reagan was more of a lame duck in the days after the Iran-Contra scandal broke than he is now, in the waning days of his administration. Reagan has served notice on his associates that he will push his programs until the day he retires.

That is a marked change of mood from the height of the Iran-Contra scandal. For several months, he seemed bewildered about the intensity of the attacks on him. He told us then that he just wanted to get the hostages home and "What's wrong with that?" For a while, his confidence seemed to wane. But now, his contacts in Iran are working with the United Nations to reduce tensions in the Persian Gulf. The economy is booming and our lame-duck president is not so lame.

The Republican National Convention

CONGRATS — George P. Bush, 12, talks on the phone at the Republican National Convention to his grandfather, Vice President George Bush, who called to congratulate him on a fine job of leading the Pledge of Allegiance at the convention on Tuesday night. Vice President Bush's references to his Mexican-American grandchildren drew a mixed reaction Tuesday.

'Little brown ones' remark draws fire

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George Bush's description of his three Mexican-American grandchildren as "the little brown ones" drew a mixed reaction among some Hispanic Americans. One Hispanic leader said the remark showed the vice president is insensitive.

Bush greeted President Reagan on Tuesday at Belle Chasse Naval Air Station, and the vice president told the president he wanted him to meet his grandchildren who had flown with him on Air Force Two from Washington.

"These are Jebby's kids from Florida, the little brown ones," the vice president said. "The three youngsters — Jeb Jr., Noelle, and George P. — are the children of Bush's son, Jeb, and his Mexican-born wife, Columba.

Roy Barrera Jr., a Hispanic delegate to the Republican National Convention from San Antonio, Texas, said Bush's comment was a "remark of sincere affection" that shouldn't be taken out of context.

"All my discussions with the Bushes has led me to believe that George Bush cherishes the uniqueness of his family, has an overwhelming love and affection for his grandchildren. Jeb's children," said Barrera, who accompanied the Bush family on their riverboat ride on Tuesday.

The former district judge said there is "nothing at all vulgar or insulting or disrespectful about being brown or being black. It is simply just a description."

In Los Angeles, Al Belmontez, vice president of one of the local labor chapters of the Mexican-American Political Association, said Bush's remark reflected insensitivity.

"Just saying that means he knows they're different. He didn't say 'those are my grandchildren.' He didn't just refer to the kids by their names," Belmontez said in a telephone interview. "That just shows that he's insensitive."

Belmontez said it was unlikely the remark would affect Bush's standing with members of his own party.

State delegates like Dan Quayle

By Brent Lovmon
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — If the selection of the vice presidential nominee were a lottery, vice Connecticut delegates to the Republican National Convention would have come up empty-handed.

No one from Connecticut named Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle as a vice presidential possibility in a pre-convention survey by The Associated Press.

"I'm surprised," Republican State Chairman Robert Polner said Tuesday after George Bush announced his choice for a running mate.

"I didn't expect him to go with one of the dark horses," Polner said. "I think it's a good choice. I like the idea of youth."

Connecticut Republicans in general said the choice of Quayle will bring vitality to the Republican ticket as George

Bush's running mate, but some expressed uneasiness about his conservative views and lack of national name recognition.

Several predicted Quayle wouldn't help Bush win additional votes in the state although they conceded the ticket is expected to do well in Connecticut anyway.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., who knows Quayle from their service together in the Senate, praised Quayle as a friend with whom he rarely disagrees.

"First and most importantly, I regularly beat Dan Quayle at tennis," Weicker quipped soon after Bush announced his selection of the 41-year-old Quayle.

"He's a solid conservative and by that I underline solid about three times," said the liberal Weicker. "So we disagree on the issues, but I'm very happy for him."

Connecticut Republicans said Quayle's youth should provide a tremendous boost to the possi-

Some advice for George Bush

By Brent Lovmon
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Connecticut Republicans say his acceptance speech on Thursday will give George Bush the chance to step out of President Reagan's shadow, sharpen his own image and pick up ground on the Democratic nominee, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

But they also say the vice president comes across stronger in small gatherings than he does on television and suggest he needs more effective media advisers if he is to change that.

"He has to be able to effectively communicate to the nation in the same way that he effectively communicates with small groups," U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. said Tuesday.

"There is not a person who hasn't been one-on-one with George Bush or part of a small group with George Bush that doesn't think this guy is gangbusters when it comes to his grasp of the issues and the passion within him," Weicker said. "That does not come across in his appearances where it is in large-scale settings. That is the problem pure and simple."

Fixing that, Weicker said, is that in his acceptance speech. "Although the speech is important, Mrs. Johnson said, it won't do so far as campaigns," he said.

U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., said Bush suffers a malady common among vice presidents: relative anonymity.

"As vice president, you are really doing the other guy's image," she said. "He's got to speak out on his issues. He'll do up to his media advisers. "That's what you pay people to do so far as campaigns," he said.

U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., said Bush suffers a malady common among vice presidents: relative anonymity.

"State woman as veep!"

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For a brief, comical moment, Adeline MacDermid thought George Bush was beckoning her to the podium when he announced his choice for a running mate.

But it turned out that Mrs. MacDermid, of Plymouth, Conn., just happened to be standing next to Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle, the man Bush named on Tuesday as his choice for the Republican nominee for vice president.

Bush made the announcement while standing on the banks of the Mississippi River after arriving in town by riverboat for the Republican National Convention. Mrs. MacDermid, an alternate delegate, was standing in the fenced-off section for delegates and guests.

"All of a sudden we saw Vice President George Bush and I think it was a Secret Service man pointing in our direction," Mrs. MacDermid said. "I thought he wanted me." Mrs. MacDermid said, "Then he started saying 'I have a very special announcement.'" It dawned on her what was going on when "we looked around and saw a young man who was trying to get through the crowd."

political risk in picking a relatively little known figure as his running mate.

"When you throw out a name like Quayle, you're taking a calculated gamble," Gaffney said. "I have faith in George Bush that over the long haul it will be a good name."

Bush hadn't been expected to announce his choice until Thursday after his own nomination, but Gaffney figured something was afoot when a meeting to which he's been invited by James Baker, Bush's campaign chairman, and Lee Atwater, his campaign manager, was abruptly canceled.

"The media was going to get to it before the day was out," he said. "Because he said that he was notifying those that it wasn't, it was only a matter of time before you answered the game '21 Questions' and found out who it was."

to improve how he comes across on television.

"Sharpen the word, so he has some strength and shows he is his own man," Gaffney said.

Frederick K. Biebel of Stratford, a former deputy chairman of the Republican National Committee, predicted that Bush will get a big boost in the polls from this week's convention.

"He has been in the shadow of the president," Biebel said. "That ended last night."

Mary Bontricht of Stonington said she was mystified by Bush's difficulty in conveying his strength of character to a large audience.

"They may say that Bush needs to sharpen his image," she said. "Bush is honest. Bush knows more about foreign affairs than anybody else; he's a perfectly wonderful man. The problem is going to be to put him across to the voters. If I knew (how), I'd be worth a million bucks."

Does your bank let you get quick cash almost anywhere in New England?

The Eagle does.

Our checking accounts come with the Eagle 24 card, which connects you to the Eagle 24 and YANKEE 24 ATM networks. And YANKEE 24 gives you access to your cash 24 hours every day, practically everywhere in New England. If your bank only has ATMs at local branches, then you should branch out with the Eagle.

The Great Debate Rages On!

Everyone is still debating whether to endorse Eagle Checking or NOW Checking. Eagle Checking is free with only a $100 minimum balance. NOW Checking pays 5 1/2% interest on balances of $10 or more, and is free with just a $500 minimum balance. And both come with great benefits.

So if you want a checking account that's free, and a bank that lets you get instant cash almost anywhere in New England, Connecticut to Portland, Maine, then choose Eagle or NOW Checking at the First Federal office nearest you. And help us settle The Great Debate.

Holdout juror lashes out at prosecutor and judge

PRESTON (AP) — The holdout juror whose belief in the innocence of murder defendant Richard Crafts led to a mistrial has lashed out at the prosecutor and judge in the case, calling each a "damn fool."

Warren Maskell, 47, of Preston, who said he has received numerous threatening telephone calls and letters since the trial ended July 15, said he is still angry by remarks made by State's Attorney Walter Flanagan and Superior Court Judge Barry Schaller. Flanagan "had the nerve to call me a coward" for refusing to continue deliberating in an effort to reach a unanimous verdict. Maskell said.

Other jurors were critical of Maskell's behavior during the deliberations. They said he appeared to have read and been influenced by news accounts of the trial, and also to have been swayed by his wife's opinions about the case. Maskell said he told the court during jury selection he could stand by his beliefs, even if he were in the minority. "I said, 'Yes,' then and that's exactly what I did," he said. "I think that was one of my biggest faults. I thought they meant what they said."

Trash contractor receives notice

HARTFORD (AP) — The Connecticut Resources Recovery authority has declared Combustion Engineering Inc. in default of its contract because of delays and design deficiencies at a trash-to-energy plant in Hartford.

The default notice, approved Tuesday, gives the company 10 days to cure the deficiencies cited by the CRRA. If the company fails or refuses to remedy them, the authority can turn over the project to another contractor, according to William R. Darcy, the authority's president.

The Mid-Connecticut Plant, which serves 44 Hartford-area communities, was to have been in full operation by June 21. Since then, CRRA and Combustion Engineering Inc. have been at odds over whether the plant is ready to operate.

Darcy said the default declaration is intended to force the company to comply with the authority's requests.

"It's not just a simple matter of a contract dispute. It's a serious environmental matter," Darcy said. "What are we going to do with the trash?"

The default action came a day after Combustion Engineering sought arbitration to resolve its disputes with the CRRA.

The plant is supposed to take 2,000 tons of trash a day and Combustion Engineering says it has been performing close to that level since June 8 with a few exceptions.

source Recovery Systems unit, wrote a letter Monday to CRRA president William R. Darcy seeking arbitration.

"It's time to listen to reason, to reason with one another and to call in arbitrators designated in our contract to bring reason to the process of resolving disputes," Torrence said in his letter.

"What they have done by filing for arbitration is to put a gun to the head of the authority and to the towns," Darcy said.

"This default is an equally serious action... We think this will create a sobering atmosphere, one in which both sides realize the consequences of not coming to a reasonable settlement," Darcy said.

The main issue is an April 22 decision by independent engineer Ernest M. Baker, who ruled that the plant was still in its start-up period and not ready for the final tests that must be done before CRRA will accept the plant.

CRRA is seeking $3.5 million from Combustion Engineering for expenses caused by delay in operations after the June 21 deadline. It also seeks $3.5 million a month to be held in escrow to protect the authority from delays.

Male professor missing

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Coast Guard helicopters and boats resumed a search today of Long Island Sound for a Yale University cardiology professor, whose sailboat was found washed up on the eastern end of New York's Long Island.

Dr. Allan Goodyer, 69, of Guilford, was reported overdue by his wife Monday night, and his 18-foot sailboat was found at 9 a.m. Tuesday at Greenport, Long Island, said Lt. Ken Burgess, Coast Guard operations officer here.

Greenport is south of Old Saybrook, which is about 20 miles east of Guilford. The boat was found beached with its sails up.

A search was called off early Tuesday night, Coast Guard officials said.

Court upholds limits
HARTFORD (AP) — State law properly limits the rights of mobile home park owners to decide which homes can be sold on their property, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

The unanimous ruling published Monday in the Connecticut Law Journal, the state's highest court upheld a Superior Court decision in favor of the owner of a mobile home who was being forced by the park's owner to sell the home for less than it was worth.

The home owner, Stephen Eamiello, bought the 1971 model home from the owner of Liberty Mobile Home Sales in Prospect in 1980 for $12,500. He lived for four years in a park owned by Liberty before deciding to sell the home.

Eamiello sued in Superior Court and won an order requiring the park owner to allow the sale. The park owner appealed to the Supreme Court, which ruled that the park owner should not be able to profit by forcing the owners of mobile homes to remove them if they want to sell.

Two indicted in scam
NEW HAVEN (AP) — Two men have been indicted on federal charges in connection with a loan application scam, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said.

The two, Louis A. Savage, 32, of New York, and John C. Ellsworth, 42, of Groton, are accused of a scheme in which they allegedly solicited loan application fees of up to $25,000 without providing loans or refunds, Twardy said Tuesday.

Savage and Ellsworth each face up to 60 years in prison on mail and wire fraud charges, Twardy said.

The men allegedly worked through Groton-based businesses including Savage Associates and Savage Mortgage and Guarantee Co. as well as Ramsey III Trust, which supposedly had headquarters in Luxembourg.

Champion of the elderly

HARTFORD (AP) — State Commissioner on Aging Mary Ellen Kinck says Republican Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. hurt Connecticut's elderly by voting against cost-of-living increases in Social Security benefits.

Kinck and other advocates for the elderly said in a statement about what caused his cruiser to crash while he was pursuing a speeding car. Vermont police Chief Gary Kology said.

Officer James Treres resigned Monday amid accusations by South Windsor police that he lied in a statement about what caused his cruiser to crash while he was pursuing a speeding car. Vermont police Chief Gary Kology said.

Hartford County State's Attorney John M. Bulley said he signed a warrant for Treres' arrest Monday in connection with the Aug. 2 incident.

Case of bank robbery
NEW YORK (AP) — Connecticut U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. says the Wells Fargo case is nothing more than a bank robbery, despite allegations by supporters of defendants in the case that it's an attempt to intimidate the Puerto Rican independence movement.

Fifteen defendants have been charged in the 1983 robbery of the Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford, Conn., which involved the alleged theft of about $7 million.

Supporters of the defendants said the federal government is trying to break the independence movement by calling at least 400 witnesses to testify during the trials, the first of which is expected to begin in September.

Vernon officer resigns

VERNON (AP) — A state prosecutor has signed a warrant for the arrest of a Vernon police officer for allegedly making a false statement to police, authorities said.

Officer James Treres resigned Monday amid accusations by South Windsor police that he lied in a statement about what caused his cruiser to crash while he was pursuing a speeding car. Vermont police Chief Gary Kology said.

Hartford County State's Attorney John M. Bulley said he signed a warrant for Treres' arrest Monday in connection with the Aug. 2 incident.

Vessel makes progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first U.S. research vessel in a decade to steam through the waters of a restricted Soviet economic zone is making scientific and diplomatic breakthroughs, say officials involved.

"It's going well. All the equipment is working and the weather is fine," said Peter Lonsdale, chief scientist aboard the Thomas Washington, owned by the U.S. Navy and operated by the Scripps Institution of Oceanography of the University of California at San Diego.

Lonsdale, in a telephone interview Tuesday from the ship, said the expedition was using a range of measuring and sampling techniques "to understand a period of volcanic activity on the sea floor 100 million years ago."

Miners ignore orders

JASTRZEBIE, Poland (AP) — Workers occupying a coal mine in southwestern Poland defied government orders to end their day-old strike, and witnesses said police surrounded the colliery where nearly half the work force had shut up.

About 600 police took up positions around the July Manifesto mine Tuesday after about 4,000 workers demanding reinstatement of Solidarity and better working conditions put down their tools, the witnesses said.

The strike marks the eighth anniversary of the birth of the Solidarity independent labor federation, which Communist authorities crushed in a 1981 military crackdown and banned a year later.

Rebels kill soldiers

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas claimed today that they killed 500 Soviet soldiers in an attack on a garrison and ammunition dump near the Red Army's evacuation route in northern Afghanistan.

Masood Khalili, spokesman for the Jamiat-Islami Moslem Revolutionary, said 200 other Soviet troops were wounded when guerrillas fired eight rockets into the Khalaylagh base in Baghlan province at midday on Friday.

Western diplomatic sources in Islamabad said they had conflicting reports of attacks on the garrison, by different groups on different days.

Rival guerrilla groups had reported last weekend that they started a fire at a fuel storage facility at the base.

Races highlight Wyoming

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — State Sen. John Vinich led two opponents in a hotly contested Democratic primary for the nomination to oppose Republican U.S. Sen. Malcolm Wallop in November.

Wallop coasted to his third Senate nomination Tuesday, amassing 30,161 votes, or 83 percent, with 291 of Wyoming's 474 precincts reporting unofficial returns.

With the same 81 percent of the precincts reporting, Vinich had 12,458 votes, or 45 percent, to University of Wyoming law professor Pete Maxfield's 8,938, or 33 percent. State schools Superintendent Lynn Simons, who entered the race late, was running third with 6,078 votes, or 22 percent.

Pollution hits Antarctica

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Science Foundation says it is working to clean up its act in Antarctica, where an environmental group says the federal agency's research bases are polluting the frigid environment.

"We're making progress," says Jack Talmadge, head of NSF's polar coordination and information section. "Nobody here wants to rape Antarctica. We want to preserve it."

Talmadge made the comments Tuesday after the Environmental Defense Fund released a report alleging that the agency's bases in Antarctica are violating U.S. environmental laws and an international agreement governing use of the frozen continent.

Mandela's health an issue

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The minister of justice said he is disturbed by reports that imprisoned black leader Nelson Mandela is suffering from tuberculosis and that his condition is deteriorating.

The reports about Mandela's health have renewed speculation in South African newspapers that the government might consider releasing the 70-year-old African National Congress leader from prison. But there was no official response to questions on the subject.

Mandela, who has been in prison since 1962, is serving a life term for sabotage and conspiracy to overthrow the white-led government.

Wetlands threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal and state agencies should start now to find ways to protect America's coastal wetlands from the rising sea level predicted for the next century, says the Environmental Protection Agency.

The agency makes the recommendation in a study warning that the nation could lose from 30 percent to 80 percent of its coastal wetlands by 2100 if emissions of greenhouse gases continue at present rates.

EPA said in the study released Tuesday that wetlands, especially in Louisiana, could be flooded by ocean waters because of rising global temperatures and melting glaciers and polar ice.

Palestinians start walkout in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians boycotted their jobs in Israel today, and Arab-owned businesses across the occupied lands were closed in observance of a general strike called by leaders of the Palestinian uprising.

In the West Bank, witnesses said protesters blocked roads with burning tires, waved Palestinian flags and scribbled anti-Israeli slogans on walls in the cities of Bethlehem and Nabulus.

Soldiers sealed off the occupied Gaza Strip, confining 650,000 Palestinians to their homes for a third straight day following an upsurge of violence.

Troops and police were on high alert in Jerusalem and the occupied lands after calls by underground leaders for confrontations with Israeli forces.

Many of the 110,000 Palestinians who work in Israel boycotted their jobs. Arab-owned shops and businesses were closed in at least a dozen towns and cities in lands Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

The strike came in response to a leaflet issued this month by underground leaders of the uprising. It said the strike was "in honor of Jerusalem, the capital of our Palestinian state and to protest oppressive measures and arrests."

Israel says about 5,000 Palestinians have been jailed since the revolt began, about half without trial.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has said it plans to declare a state or set up a government-in-exile for the occupied lands in response to Jordan's decision to sever administrative ties with the territories. Israel opposes a Palestinian state.

Tensions were high following a riot Tuesday afternoon in the desert prison of Ketziot, 20 miles south of the Gaza Strip, by hundreds of Palestinian prisoners.

The army said two Palestinians were shot to death in the melee and a third was wounded.

Israeli settlers in Gaza dig in their heels

NEVE DEKALIM, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Jewish settlers are digging in their heels, determined to stay in this seaside strip even in the face of resurgent Palestinian violence that led the army to clamp an indefinite curfew.

They say they are drawn by an improved quality of life in their tiny, close-knit communities and a pioneering spirit. But heightened violence in the Israeli-occupied territory has taken its toll.

Six Israelis leaving Neve Dekalim after a visit this week were injured in a firebomb attack. From the settlement, Israelis can often see tires burning and hear gunfire in the nearby Khan Yunis refugee camp.

If the Gaza Strip is a hurricane, then the Jewish settlements are its eye. Neve Dekalim could be a pleasant suburb if one forgot its location.

Some families in this settlement about a mile from the Mediterranean live in homes with manicured lawns and palm trees.

Whereas the Arabs have been confined round-the-clock to their homes during a curfew that began Sunday night, the small community of Jewish settlers in Gaza can come and go as they please.

Security concerns, however, are prevalent. Neve Dekalim is circled by barbed wire fences and regularly patrolled by Israeli troops. An armed soldier rode in the front seat of a bus bringing settlers home.

Elyada Yovel, a 14-year-old from Neve Dekalim, also opposes moving. He said he never thinks of the rebellion on busy schooldays.

Some Soviet public libraries remove pre-Gorbachev books

MOSCOW (AP) — Public libraries in some Soviet cities have been ordered to remove from their shelves all political and economic literature published before Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to power, a librarian says in a letter published by Izvestia.

In a brief letter appearing in the government daily on Tuesday, I. Zavgordnyaya said authorities also ordered the removal of works by Leonid I. Brezhnev and other former leaders now in disgrace.

The librarian said the directive to library workers suggested they tell people asking for the removed materials that they are all on loan.

Within the past few days, we, workers of city public libraries, were summoned to an irregular seminar and they, relying on the distribution of high-standing orders, demanded that we remove from the funds the works of Brezhnev, Grishin, Suslov, Chernenko and a series of other authors."

Zavgordnyaya, whose library is in the Crimean region of the Ukraine.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadiy I. Gerasimov said he was surprised by the letter and had heard of no such order.

In a telephone interview, he said the action sounded like a "local initiative" by officials who were "doing more than necessary" to set the country on the right course.

He also cited a Russian proverb to point to incompetence of some local officials: "Make a fool bow and he will be sure to knock his head."

It is not clear whether the order affects public libraries throughout the Soviet Union, and the letter didn't mention specific cities. The letter did not say who issued the order, although regional officials have the power to do so.

Viktor V. Grishin was the Moscow party leader under Brezhnev, who ruled from 1964 until his death in 1982. Mikhail A. Suslov was Brezhnev's ideologist. Yuri V. Andropov replaced Brezhnev, died in February 1984 and was succeeded by Konstantin U. Chernenko.

Chernenko died in March 1985, and Gorbachev was named party chief.

Brezhnev's rule has been criticized as plagued by corruption, cronyism, nepotism and economic stagnation.

Thousands rally in Burma capital

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — About 3,000 people staged an anti-government rally today in Rangoon, an Asian diplomat said. It was the largest such protest reported in the Burmese capital since last week's bloody riots.

The diplomat said protesters rallied in front of Rangoon General Hospital, a gathering spot for demonstrators after security forces allegedly shot doctors and nurses there during last week's unrest.

The diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, had no details on the rally. He said the city was otherwise quiet.

Student leaders called for demonstrations today to press for an end to 26 years of authoritarian, one-party rule in the Southeast Asian nation, where economic woes borne of isolationist policies have triggered widespread public resentment.

A Western diplomat said about 1,000 people gathered in front of the hospital Tuesday to hear speeches by student leaders and read anti-government leaflets and posters that demanded the dismantling of the government and the country's sole political party, the Burma Socialist Program Party.

There were no reports of any attempt by security forces to interfere with the peaceful demonstration, he said.

Student leaders have distributed leaflets and put up posters throughout the city calling for demonstrations to press for further change following the ouster of hard-line leader Sein Lwin.

On Friday, Sein Lwin resigned as president and chairman of the ruling party after just 17 days in power. He had replaced Ne Win, whose 1962 military coup ended democracy and instituted one-party rule.

The party and legislature are holding emergency sessions Friday, presumably to choose a new leadership.

State-run Radio Rangoon said at least 95 people were killed and 240 wounded in last week's demonstrations, the largest since Burma achieved independence from Britain in 1948.

Sovs eye nuke test in Nevada

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear test explosion conducted in the presence of Soviet scientists will mark a milestone in superpower relations and could ease the way for a nuclear test ban between Moscow and Washington, officials say.

The blast scheduled for today would be the first ever monitored by Soviet scientists at the super-secret Nevada Test Site.

Diplomats who reached the agreement late last year planned to gather today at a remote control point 30 miles from ground zero, joining scientists who direct the nuclear weapons programs for the United States and Soviet Union.

The nuclear explosive, with a blast nearly 12 times more powerful than the one that devastated Hiroshima, was buried 2,020 feet into the belly of a secluded, picturesque mesa 130 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The weapon set for detonation was encased in a steel canister, painted red, white and blue by workers who planted the device three weeks ago.

The test was designed to measure the ability of each country to monitor the size of other's nuclear tests, a requisite in preventing cheating on treaties signed in 1974 and 1976 limiting the size of nuclear tests to 150 kilotons.

Both sides have accused each other of exceeding the limits.

President Reagan first suggested such a verification test during a United Nations speech four years ago.

The test, code named Kearsarge, would be the ninth at the site this year and the 64th announced blast at the Nevada site since testing began here in 1951.

Party-five Soviet nuclear scientists, engineers and diplomats were on hand to witness today's blast. A like number of American scientists will witness a test at the Soviet site at Semipalatinsk next month.

Some of the Soviet scientists were in the nearby town of Mercury when six of the previous U.S. tests were conducted this year, but today's test was the first one in which they were present.

One possible hitch was eliminated Monday when a patrolling Department of Energy helicopter picked up two anti-nuclear protesters in a remote desert canyon.

A spokesman for the anti-nuclear American Peace Test said the two had planned to hike to Pahute Mesa to delay today's test.

Technicians set to seal shuttle leak

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians moved into Discovery's cargo bay to begin plugging a tiny gas leak that threatens to delay the first post-Challenger shuttle launch.

With the shuttle poised on the launch pad, the technicians today were to drill into the cargo bay wall and an engine compartment to repair the tiny leak discovered a month ago.

The leak in a steering engine compartment must be stopped before Discovery can be launched in late September or early October.

The plan was to use a routing tool to cut two holes in the rear bulkhead of the 80-foot-long cargo bay and two more in the adjoining aluminum hull of the steering engine compartment.

The dual openings would allow a technician to reach about 12 inches into the compartment to clamp a clamshell-shaped device over the leak and fill it under pressure with a sealant. The device measures 4 inches by 1 inch and should fit easily over a fitting that is slowly leaking nitrogen tetroxide gas from a vent line.

Because Discovery is poised vertically on the launch pad, the technicians would have to do much of the work on their hands and knees or lying on their stomachs on the cargo bay's rear bulkhead.

On Tuesday, workers opened the bay's doors and erected a tent-like structure over the work area to prevent debris from getting into the rest of the shuttle or into a nearby enclosure where Discovery's payload is waiting to be loaded. The payload, a communications satellite, would be placed aboard once the repairs are complete.

The line with the leak services a steering engine system that is separate from the three main engines test-fired on the launch pad last week.

Heat continues elsewhere

By The Associated Press

Air-conditioned government buildings were opened for the elderly in two states, state fair exhibitors packed livestock in ice and band members sweated in a scorching stadium as record heat covered much of the nation.

Record highs fell Tuesday from the eastern Plains to the Ohio Valley, but the Northeast got a break.

"It's great." 25-year-old New York City sanitation worker Frank Nahodyl said while sweeping a street.

"We've been sweating like hell the last few weeks. I start at 6 in the morning. I'd be dripping wet by 7 and dying by 10. But now there's a breeze."

The temperature in New York City "only" reached 85 Tuesday, after 32 days of 90-degree and above temperatures.

The heat continued elsewhere.

Temperature records for the date were reached in more than a dozen cities, with the temperature an estimated 130 degrees on the playing field, said Joe Clark, the stadium's security manager.

"As I was walking off the field, sweat was just pouring into my eyes," said Robert Muller, of the Americanos Drum Corps from Appleton, Wis.

Four chickens at the Indiana State Fair became heat victims when the owners left the contest-bound fowl in their cars with the windows up in the 101-degree heat, said fair spokesman Jeff Fisher.

Livestock exhibitors were taking extra precautions in the fair barns. "They're packing some (animals) down with ice. They're putting ice in front of fans to blow cool air," Fisher said.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad authorized the use of some air-conditioned government buildings for the elderly and others to escape the heat.

By ones and twos, the poor and elderly are succumbing to the heat, which overtaxes their bodies, he said. But most of these tragedies will pass with little notice, being recorded in government statistics as heart attacks or strokes, rather than heat-related fatalities.

In the end, Avery warned Tuesday, this summer's stifling temperatures threaten to exact a higher death toll than the 1980 heat wave that killed an estimated 15,000 Americans.

"I had in my hand right now the number of people that have died this summer (from heat) it would be front-page news all over the country, but I don't have that number," said Avery, whose non-profit center researches the effects of heat and cold on humans for government agencies and other clients.

He has argued for a reporting system to record heat deaths, but statisticians must depend on comparing deaths during heat wave years with "normal" years and calculating the excess fatalities. That was the system used to determine the 15,000 extra deaths in 1980.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising temperatures across America are overwhelming vulnerable people and could kill thousands, according to an authority on health and the environment.

"This will probably emerge as one of the largest natural disasters of this century... and it will have just whispered its way by," said W. Moulton Avery, executive director of the Center for Environmental Physiology in Washington.

Schools

F. Lindgren said today. With work still going on and classes less than two weeks away, teachers, students and parents have begun to wonder what shape the schools will be in once classes begin Aug. 30.

Leslie Belcher, an English as a Second Language teacher at Waddell, echoed some of the fears heard in the stories circulating on the grapevine by teachers and parents. Some of the rumors include talk that there will be Saturday sessions or double sessions caused by the construction, she said.

Paul Phillips, chairman of the town Building Committee, said that is not true. But he adds that although all the schools will open on time, there will be disruption to classes. At Manchester High School, Waddell and Bowers, students will have to bring cold lunches since renovations to kitchens are not complete.

Construction on Verplanck and Nathan Hale will be finished by November, while work on the high school will be completed around the first of December, Phillips said. Bowers and Waddell construction should be completed in March, 1988, he said.

Since not all construction will be completed by the time school begins, two classrooms each at Waddell and Bowers will have to be shifted to temporary classrooms in the school while work is completed, said John Lareau, project manager for the building committee. "They're going to have to work in a few classrooms at a time," he said.

"It's going to be an inconvenience," Phillips said. "But you're going to have to make allowances."

During the 1987-88 school year, there were 450 students each at Bowers and Waddell schools, 470 at Nathan Hale School and 435 at Verplanck School, said Wilson E. Deakin Jr., assistant superintendent.

A Tuesday tour of the schools revealed that they were in different stages of construction. While Verplanck and Nathan Hale only need finishing touches such as painting and redecorating, the same cannot be said for the other elementary schools.

At Waddell, a large cavity exists where work has been begun on an elevator, and the administrative offices and some of the classrooms have yet to be completed. Cinder blocks and lighting fixtures line the hallways.

Work also is far from complete at Bowers. On Tuesday, workers demolished a wall in the downstairs cafeteria so the room can be enlarged. Since the demolished wall was a support wall for a portion of the building, temporary supports were inserted on the floor above, said Richard Lawrence, president of The Lawrence Associates, architects of school renovations at Bowers, Waddell and Manchester High.

What is holding up the construction at Bowers and Waddell, besides the fact that work on the two schools started about four months later than the other elementary schools, is a delay in shipment of materials, Lareau said. For example, not all of the windows have been delivered to Waddell and none have been shipped to Bowers. The delay has exasperated workers and delayed the project since most workers could be on the job if there was work for them, he said.

While the windows are scheduled to be shipped to Waddell any day, Lareau said he has heard the windows will not be installed at Bowers until the end of the month at the earliest.

"That's about the worth of these cigarettes," he said of the possible window installation date, as he held a crumpled pack of cigarettes in his hand.

Francis Maffei Jr., chairman of the Board of Education's building-sites and transportation committee, said how long classes will be disrupted depends upon when the shipment of new windows arrives. "It's in the manufacturer's hands," he said. "It's out of anyone's hands locally."

Anthony Spino, principal of Bowers School, said his office is in the midst of preparing a newsletter to detail to parents how construction will affect the school's reopening. He said he wants to put to rest any untrue stories about the reopening.

Spino, whose office is temporarily located in a trailer outside the school, also said there will be disruptions.

Manchester High School also needs some ceiling and lighting work, and sprinkler installation at the auditorium will not be completed by the end of the month, Phillips said.

"It's really a project," he said. "A monstrous amount of work." Work completed at Nathan Hale and Verplanck includes cleaning outside bricks, paving parking lots, adding doors and walls to separate classrooms, and installing carpeting and cabinet work, said school and building committee officials. But even though there is still much work to be done, Phillips said the schools will be safe for students.

Patrick Flynn/Manchester Herald

WATCH YOUR STEP — Renovations at Waddell School were far from complete on Tuesday. Work at Bowers School and Manchester High School also won't be completed in time for the start of the school year.

"If it wasn't safe, the state wouldn't allow anyone past that threshold," he said. "They are going to be safe. They don't have to worry."

Bolton man says town unfair on driveway bond requirement

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — A resident who put up a $500 bond for driveway improvements required by the town wants his money returned because he feels he's being singled out on his street.

But the Board of Selectmen Tuesday told Howard E. Lappen of 56 Shoddy Mill Road the town would not return his $500 deposit because he hasn't done the work required for a driveway permit. Lappen posted the $500 bond when he applied for a driveway permit in April 1987, which is required in order to get a building permit.

The case raised questions about communications among zoning and building officials and the procedure for issuing driveway permits which require that gravel driveways provide protection against ponding and breakage on town roads.

Lappen is required to install a paved apron at the end of his gravel driveway, which he hasn't done yet. Lappen argued that no other Shoddy Mill Road residents have complied with permit requirements.

"There's not an apron to be found," Lappen said. "Selectman Douglas Cheney told Lappen at least three other Shoddy Mill Road residents have asked to comply with the driveway permit requirements. Selectman Michael Zizka said that for the past year, residents have been 'uniformly' required to install aprons on gravel driveways."

way was not causing any damage to town roads and asked that the $500 cash bond be returned.

"You'll get your cash bond when the apron goes in," Cheney said.

Cheney, a retired engineer, has been handling the driveway permits as an agent for the selectmen. A town ordinance says specifications for the aprons must be approved by the selectmen.

Lappen also argued that he hadn't been given any specifications for the apron, asking Cheney, "Is this a whim?"

Cheney said the ordinance is general, requiring only that the roads be protected. He makes recommendations for improvements on a case-by-case basis.

Cheney said previously Public Works Foreman Donato Rattazzi Jr. was handling driveway permits, but now Cheney is inspecting the sites and establishing specifications.

Under zoning law, the driveway permit must be applied for with the building permit, and the builder has one year from issuance of the driveway permit to make improvements. But, Cheney said, the town has been issuing building and zoning permits before driveway permits.

As a result, the town has difficulty enforcing the law and is seeing damage on its roads. Zizka said.

ELEGANT PICNICS

With Style!

A warm, summer's day, fresh air and a relaxing atmosphere provide the perfect setting for a picnic. This season, picnics are more sophisticated but still easy to plan. With a little innovation and imagination, dining al fresco will be the ideal beginning to a sunny day at an arts festival, community or family event, or a starry night at the symphony.

For a new twist to this summer's picnics, serve festive make-ahead foods which eliminate the hassle of grill and charcoal. With these easy to prepare recipes and a few added touches of your own, you can create an elegant picnic. Woven baskets, fine china and sparkling wine glasses enhance the unique style of a contemporary meal outdoors.

Versatile, time-saving ingredients such as bouillon, sweetened condensed milk and bottled lemon juice bring out the flavor of your favorite summer foods and make picnic preparations a breeze.

Apricot Ham Loaf Supreme and Confetti Rice Ring are two excellent recipes that are delicious served cold. Prepared and garnished at home, both dishes are easy to transport and serve. Assorted fresh vegetables with a creamy tarragon dipping sauce are the perfect complement.

Make your own Strawberry Wine Cooler by combining a sweetened mixture of pureed strawberries, chablis and lemon juice with club soda and ice. Substitute white grape juice for the wine to make a non-alcoholic version of this refreshing beverage.

For dessert, indulge in moist, rich Chocolate Almond Brownies, made with creamy sweetened condensed milk, cocoa, almonds, amaretto and chunks of white candy bars. These luscious brownie wedges even have a buttery crust. For ambitious picnickers, take turns cranking out delicious homemade Peach & Raspberry Ice Cream. Whichever you prefer, you can't beat the scrumptious taste of homemade brownies or ice cream made with sweetened condensed milk.

Apricot Ham Loaf Supreme

(Makes 6 to 8 servings)

- 1 (16-ounce) jar apricot preserves (about 1-1/2 cup)
- 1/4 cup bottled lemon juice
- 3/4 cup chopped dried apricots
- 1 pound lean ground ham
- 1 cup fresh bread crumbs (2 slices bread)
- 2 eggs, beaten

In small bowl, combine preserves and lemon juice. In skillet, cook nuts and celery in margarine until celery is tender, stirring occasionally; remove from heat. Add apricots and 1/4 cup preserves mixture. In large bowl, combine ham and pork; add bread mixture, eggs and 1/2 cup preserves mixture. Mix well. Divide meat mixture into 2 equal portions. In 15x10-inch jellyroll pan, shape 1 portion meat into 14x4-inch loaf. Spoon nut mixture onto center of loaf; top with remaining meat, sealing edges. Bake at 350° for 1 hour, basting frequently with remaining preserves mixture during last 30 minutes of baking. Serve warm or chilled. Refrigerate leftovers.

Tarragon Cream

(Makes about 1 cup)

- 1 (8-ounce) container sour cream
- 2 teaspoons tarragon vinegar
- 1 teaspoon chicken-flavor instant bouillon
- 1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves or 1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh tarragon leaves
- Dash pepper

In small bowl, combine ingredients; mix well. Cover and chill 1 to 2 hours. Stir before serving. Serve with assorted fresh vegetables. Refrigerate leftovers.

Strawberry Cooler

(Makes about 1-1/2 quarts)

- 1 10-ounce package frozen strawberries in syrup, thawed
- 1 (750 mL) bottle chablis or white catawba grape juice
- 1/2 cup bottled lemon juice
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1-1/2 cups (12 ounces) club soda

In blender container, puree strawberries. In pitcher, combine strawberries, chablis, lemon juice and sugar; stir until sugar dissolves. Chill. Just before serving, add club soda; serve over ice. Garnish as desired. Refrigerate leftovers.

Chocolate Almond Brownies

(Makes 16 brownies)

- 1-1/4 cups unsifted flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/2 cup cold margarine or butter
- 1 cup chopped almonds, toasted
- 1 (14-ounce) can sweetened condensed milk (NOT evaporated milk)
- 1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons amaretto or 1 teaspoon almond flavoring
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 6 (1-1/4-ounce) white candy bars with almonds, broken into small chunks

Preheat oven to 350°. In medium bowl, combine 1 cup flour and sugar; cut in margarine until crumbly. Add 1/4 cup almonds. Press on bottom of 9-inch round or square baking pan. Bake 15 minutes. In large mixer bowl, beat sweetened condensed milk, remaining 1/4 cup flour, cocoa, egg, amaretto and baking powder until smooth. Stir in candy chunks and 1/2 cup almonds. Spread over prepared crust. Top with remaining 1/4 cup almonds. Bake 30 minutes or until center is set. Cool. Cut into wedges.

Peach & Raspberry Ice Cream

(Makes about 1-1/2 quarts)

- 3 medium peaches, pared, seeded and mashed (about 1-1/2 cups)
- 1 cup fresh or thawed frozen red raspberries, pureed (about 1/2 cup)
- 2 cups (1 pint) whipping cream or coffee cream
- 1 (14-ounce) can sweetened condensed milk (NOT evaporated milk)
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 1 teaspoon almond flavoring
- Few drops red food coloring

In 1-1/2-quart pitcher, combine peaches, raspberries, condensed milk, vanilla extract, almond flavoring and food coloring. Return leftovers to freezer. Recipe can be doubled.

ELEGANT PICNICS

With Style!

A warm, summer's day, fresh air and a relaxing atmosphere provide the perfect setting for a picnic. This season, picnics are more sophisticated but still easy to plan. With a little innovation and imagination, dining al fresco will be the ideal beginning to a sunny day at an arts festival, community or family event, or a starry night at the symphony.

For a new twist to this summer's picnics, serve festive make-ahead foods which eliminate the hassle of grill and charcoal. With these easy to prepare recipes and a few added touches of your own, you can create an elegant picnic. Woven baskets, fine china and sparkling wine glasses enhance the unique style of a contemporary meal outdoors.

Versatile, time-saving ingredients such as bouillon, sweetened condensed milk and bottled lemon juice bring out the flavor of your favorite summer foods and make picnic preparations a breeze.

Drying favorite garden herbs and flowers

One of the unique uses for a microwave is to dry herbs and flowers. This depends on the kitchen appliance which so many of us rely upon for daily meal preparation can also perform some amazing feats.

Microwave Kitchen

Marge Churchill

You can use your microwave to dry many of your favorite herbs. Drying in the microwave takes literally minutes, rather than days or weeks. The microwave has moved an ancient craft and skill into the 20th century, so that the results can be enjoyed by even the busiest of families.

Fresh herbs may be grown in your garden, or in pots on the windowsill in winter. They also are available in increasing abundance and variety in the produce section of several large local supermarkets. If you buy fresh herbs, that are sold in the bunch or clump, chances are you will have much more than a recipe for your favorite dish requires. What should you do with the remaining herbs? Why, dry them in your microwave, of course.

Using your microwave to dry herbs will yield outstanding results. The herbs will retain their color and full-bodied flavor. In fact, when using herbs and spices in microwave cooking, reduce by about 1/2 the amount of seasonings called for in conventional recipes that you may adapt for microwave use. The microwave tends to intensify flavors.

This method of drying herbs can be successful for parsley, basil, chives, savory, thyme and marjoram. Do not remove the leaves from the herb stems. They dry more uniformly and are easier to handle this way. Wash herbs and dry thoroughly. Let them air-dry in the kitchen for several hours before drying in the microwave. If moisture remains on the herbs, they will "cook" and not dehydrate.

Place 3 paper towels on a glass plate and arrange on the top layer five springs of parsley (or about 1/2 cup of chopped parsley or other herbs). Place the stems with the stems in a wreath configuration. Cover with one paper towel. Microwave on high power for 3 to 3 1/2 minutes, rotating the plate mid-way during the drying time. Remove top paper towel and let dried herbs cool. Then remove from plate and store in an airtight jar or container in a cool place. (Refrigerator or freezer is best). If you have dried a large quantity of one kind of herb, keep the majority of it in a jar and transfer some to a smaller jar as needed. By not opening the large jar all of the time, the flavor will be retained longer.

Caution: Although herbs can be successfully dried in the microwave, the microwave is not a dehydrator, and can be used on rubber gloves are recommended to protect your hands from the drying agents.

Select fresh flowers or leaves. Flowers should be just at the peak of bloom. Flowers which are past their prime will continue to turn brown. Clip stem of flower to 1/2 inch long.

Select a glass or paper container large enough to hold the flower and deep enough so that the drying agent covers the entire bloom. Small flowers may be dried individually in small bowls; up to 3 may be dried in the oven at once. Use a casserole for larger flowers.

Spread 1/4 inch layer of drying agent in the bottom of the container. Place the flower in agent, bloom up. With a spoon, carefully sprinkle drying agent between and over the petals, making sure that each petal is covered, but not bent out of shape by the weight of the agent.

Place a 1 cup full of water and 2 containers with the flower both in the microwave oven. (Note: Flower and water containers are placed separately in the oven, do not add the cup of water to the container with the flower. The separate container of water adds moisture to the air in the microwave and keeps the flowers from becoming too dry.)

Microwave on high, see chart for amount of time for various flowers.

Fall leaves dried in the microwave retain their beautiful color. Select a branch of 3 leaves, with the largest leaf about 4 inches wide. Clean leaves carefully. Invert a 12 x 8 inch Pyrex baking dish on the oven floor, cover with a paper towel. Place the branch on the towel. Cover with another paper towel. Microwave for 1 1/2 minutes on high. Turn branch over and cover with a towel. Microwave 1 1/2 minutes on high. To dry larger branches, increase oven time by 30 seconds for each time period.

Microwave-drying of flowers requires a drying agent to absorb the moisture and hold the flowers in a natural shape. You may use any of the three different agents listed:

1. Silica Gel, available in most hobby shops, is the best for drying smooth petals, such as orchids.
2. An equal mixture of borax and corn meal can be used.
3. Kitty Litter is inexpensive and the easiest to use.

All three drying agents can be used over again. Plastic or

Sorbets are a seasonal dessert

More flavor from fewer calories is the goal for me and millions of other Americans interested in healthful eating.

Vanilla strawberry sorbet
2 cups sliced fresh strawberries
1 cup sugar
1/4 cup sugar

1 1/2 cups orange juice
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 teaspoon finely shredded orange peel

In a blender container or food processor bowl, blend or process strawberries until smooth; set aside.

In a medium saucepan bring water and sugar to boiling, stirring just until sugar dissolves.

Cook, uncovered, 5 minutes. Remove saucepan from heat; cool to room temperature. Stir in orange juice, vanilla, orange peel and strawberry puree. Pour into 8- by 8- by 2-inch baking pan. Freeze 3 to 4 hours, stirring twice. Cover and freeze until serving time or up to 2 days. Serve with assorted fresh fruits, if desired. Makes 9 servings.

Supermarket Shopper

Neighbor hoarding samples

By Martin Sloane
United Feature Syndicate

DEAR MARTIN: One of your readers wrote to ask you why her supermarket never seemed to stock the small-size and sample products she had coupons for. I know the reason — at least in regard to my own area.

There are people here who get many newspapers, clip out the coupons for new products and buy up all the small and sample merchandise in the supermarket.

My neighbor does this. One day I saw him in a store that offered double coupons, and he was buying four cases of detergent — that's $6 boxes! He got them all for free because the store doubled his $1 coupons on the packages priced at $1.99.

This man fills his garage with these freebies and, once every few weeks, holds a garage sale with the merchandise marked down to half price. He sold these packages of detergent for $1 each. People in the neighborhood flock to his sales.

Please tell your readers to complain to the store managers if they see this sort of thing happening. It isn't fair for my neighbor, and isn't fair for me, either.

clean the shelves bare of coupon items.
A VIRGINIA BEACH READER

DEAR READER: Supermarkets occasionally run out of certain items when coupons appear. We don't see this happen more often because the manufacturers and the companies that publish coupon inserts tell supermarket product buyers far in advance to expect increased demand.

Of course this does not solve the problem of shelves that are left bare, and sample-size displays that are wiped out by a few shoppers who get access to large quantities of coupons.

The supermarkets themselves can solve this problem because they are in a position to make and enforce reasonable rules for coupon redemption.

Supermarkets receive only a limited supply of sample products, so it makes sense for a store to limit purchases to one, or no more than a few, per person and indicate as much on a sign on the display. This allows the maximum number of customers to try a new product — which is the manufacturer's objective and should also be the supermarket's objective.

But buying a lot of small products is frequently the coupon clipper's objective when a high-value coupon is distributed and especially when stores are also offering double coupons. A high-value coupon, when doubled, is usually worth enough to get a small product free, as your neighbor has discovered.

There is technically nothing wrong with this, but it is incongruous for a couponer to buy several copies of an item and exhaust the store's supply. Thoughtful shoppers who want several cases of a product should call the store manager in advance and arrange to pick the cases up.

We wish everyone were thoughtful, but since everyone is not, store managers should seize the initiative when they see shoppers taking every item off the shelf. For example, they can offer to supply a case of the item, at the same price, to the customer on his or her next trip to the supermarket.

Stores should not be shy when enforcing policies that protect the legitimate interests of their customers.

Turkey pizza made on your grill

You've probably never heard of a grilled turkey pizza. But the chefs from Al Forno and Lucky's, two well known restaurants in Providence, R.I., recently created such a dish for a barbecue hosted by Frank Perdue in New York City's Central Park.

Perdue asked five chefs to come up with innovative summer turkey recipes. Johanne Killeen and George Germon brought a pizza with an international flavor. Along with the all-American turkey, there were Mexican peppers, French cheese and Greek olives.

Here is a recipe that's been cut down to at-home quantities. Use the outstanding pizza dough recipe given here, or use a third of a one-pound package of frozen pizza and bread dough.

oil and salt. Beat to combine. Gradually add all-purpose flour, stirring with a wooden spoon until dough is stiff. Turn dough onto board; knead until smooth and elastic. Place in an oiled bowl; brush surface of dough with remaining olive oil, prevent skin from forming. Cover bowl with plastic wrap or clean towel. Let rise, away from drafts, until doubled in bulk.

Punch dough down; knead until smooth. Let rise again until doubled; punch dough down. If dough is sticky, knead in a bit more flour.

Yield: About 24 12-inch pizzas, or enough for 32 ounces dough. Excess may be frozen.

Grilled turkey pizza
1/2 recipe pizza dough (below)
6 ounces turkey breast steaks
1/4 cup olive oil, divided
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 garlic clove, minced
2 tablespoons grated Bel Paese cheese
1/4 cup tomato sauce (recipe below)

1 fresh jalapeno pepper, seeded and chopped
2 tablespoons pitted, quartered calamata olives

Prepare pizza dough as recipe directs; let rise.

Prepare outdoor grill or pre-heat broiler. Brush both sides of turkey steak lightly with oil. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Grill or broil 5 to 6 inches from heat source for 15 to 20 minutes, turning two or three times. Leave until meat is no longer pink and juices run clear. Remove and cut into 1/2-inch slices and set aside.

Meanwhile, flatten pizza dough on an oiled surface into a 10- to 12-inch approximation of a circle. It should be about 1/4-inch thick. With both hands, gently lift dough and drape over grill surface, just above heat source. Within a minute, the dough will puff slightly and the underside will solidify. As soon as the underside is cooked and grill marks appear, use tongs to flip dough over onto the edge of the grill, as far from the heat as possible. Quickly brush cooked surface with olive oil.

Scatter the minced garlic on top, and put grated cheese over that. Spoon tomato sauce over cheese, place grilled turkey slices over tomato sauce. Scatter on the jalapeno peppers and olive pieces.

Drizzle surface with an additional 1 to 2 tablespoons olive oil. Slide pizza back onto grill, very close to the hot coals. Grill, rotating frequently with tongs to prevent hot spots from cooking dough unevenly. Cook until the underside is slightly charred and the topping is bubbly hot.

Makes 1 pizza, about four luncheon servings.

Good old basic junk food

Royal Marshmallow Pies, Chocolate and banana. 59 cents for a 3.5-oz. box of eight individually-wrapped cakes.

Carolyn: In these days of 100 percent fruit juices, gourmet ice cream and all-natural potato chips, it's good to know there are still companies interested in making good old basic junk food. These are a low-budget version of Scooter Pies — that chocolate-coated marshmallow and cookie sandwich that was packed into every second-grader's lunch box in the sixties.

The good news is that these don't taste low-budget — at least not any more so than the original. On the other hand, they don't taste high-budget either, at least not compared to the deliciously decadent and disgustingly large Marshmallow Twirls.

Bonnie: Like most other snack cakes, these are high in empty calories. In other words you get little nutrition for your calories, most of which come from sugar.

They're also made from highly saturated fats and contain preservatives, artificial flavor and artificial color. Reason enough for me not to recommend them. But if you eat other brands of packaged snack cakes, these are no worse.

Keebler O'Boisles Potato Snack Chips. Original, and sour cream & onion flavors. $1.39 a 6.5-oz bag.

Carolyn: Thick. Crunchy. Light. Thin. Natural. Does America really need another potato chip? Ready or not, here Keebler comes with a new one along the lines of Pringles. I like them even if I don't need them.

Bonnie: Generally speaking, potato chips are potatoes that have been sliced, deep-fried, then salted. That's why potato chips are generally high in saturated fats and sodium.

O'Boisles are high in fats and sodium, but are made with dried Idaho potatoes and a potato starch instead of sliced potatoes. Nutritionally this makes no significant difference.

The original flavor of this new snack contains no questionable ingredients. It is preferred to the Sour Cream & Onion with its artificial flavor and MSG. But if you're looking for a low-fat snack, pretzels or plain popcorn would be much better.

Polander All Fruit Spreadable Fruit. Peach and pineapple. $1.49 per 10-oz. jar.

Bonnie: I'm glad that jam and jelly manufacturers have begun making spreadable fruits sweetened with natural fruit juices rather than added sugars. Those made by Polander have no preservatives nor artificial color or flavor, and are more affordable than those in gourmet stores.

Carolyn: I'm disappointed with these spreadable fruits. The labels say "sweetened only with fruit juice concentrates." What they don't mention is that the juice concentrates might not be from the same fruit as the one on the label. The result is that their two newest fruit spreads don't taste very much like pineapple or peach.

Johnson, Lewis in title race

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — For nearly a year, Ben Johnson and Carl Lewis have been reduced to dueling with words, not flying feet.

But tonight, the two fastest sprinters in the world are due to have their first 100-meter showdown since Johnson set a world record in beating his American rival in the title race of the 1987 World Track and Field Championships.

It is expected to be the only meeting between the rivals until the Seoul Olympics, in which they hope to peak in five weeks' time. Johnson is "at or near peak form" after recovering from a hamstring injury in February.

Last week, Johnson said he felt "100 percent ready for an Olympic title and for a new world record" that would better the 9.83-second mark he set in winning his last race against Lewis.

In that test, Lewis, the 1984 Olympic champion at 100 meters and in three other events, equaled the old record of 9.93.

Since then, the two have avoided each other, running in different events on those occasions when they showed up at the same meet.

Could Johnson, the 26-year-old Canadian powerhouse known for his lightning start, make history again on the record-prone Letzigrund track?

"You can never predict these things," Heidebrecht said. "It's a fast track, but the last three years there's always been a headwind."

Lewis, 27, has run the fastest 100 this year, 9.96 in the U.S. Olympic trials over a very fast track at Indianapolis. Johnson pushed himself to 9.98 last Thursday at a high-altitude meet at Sefton, Italy, where Lewis ran the 200.

Two weeks ago, the world champion showed he was revving up, posting a wind-aided 9.90 in the Canadian track championships.

And Johnson has a streak to defend. He has beaten Lewis in their last six meetings, dating back to 1985. Lewis holds an overall 10-8 edge.

A group of Olympic medal hopefuls could set sparks flying in other events, too.

The men's 400 meters features the three fastest runners in the U.S. Olympic trials, Butch Reynolds, Danny Everett and Steve Lewis.

Other American heavyweights include long jumper Larry Myricks, hurdler Roger Kingdom and a resurgent Mary Decker Slaney, who faces a strong field in the women's 3,000.

In the women's 100, competition for former world record holder Evelyn Ashford includes fast Jamaican Grace Jackson.

Middle- and long-distance ace Said Aouf of Morocco will run the mile with an extra clocking at 1:50 meters.

Shot put world champion Werner Gunther of Switzerland, seeking his first season heave above 72 feet, will be cheered by at least 20,000 home fans.

Also, the Outdoor Store dumped Glenn Construction, 10-4. Jim LaFento led the winners with three hits while John Taylor, Mike Pinkin, Spencer Moore, Clyde Fox and Mark Okrant had two each.

B DIVISION: At Nike Field, Tierney's rallied for three runs in the fifth inning to defeat Highland Park Market, 9-7. Mike Falowski led Tierney's with three hits while Jeff D'Angona, John Butler, Brian McAuley and Matt Kipkowski added two apiece.

For Highland Park, Bill Frattaroli had three hits, including two homers while Kevin Schaffer added two hits. Todd Mozer had a two-run homer.

No softball teams eliminated in tourney winner's bracket

No teams were eliminated Tuesday night as action continued in the double-elimination Town Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at the state of winner's bracket games.

A DIVISION: At Fitzgerald Field, Sportsman's Cafe defeated Manchester Cycle, 11-5. Rich Doherty cracked four hits for the winners while Russ Shea, John Gustafson, Mike Gile and Scott Dougan added three apiece.

Chris Dumas, Mark Lambert and Paul Martino chipped in with two each, with the latter homering. For Cycle, Peter Zimmerman, Tony Zimmerman and Rick Costello had two each. Bob Francois clubbed a homer.

Also, the Outdoor Store dumped Glenn Construction, 10-4. Jim LaFento led the winners with three hits while John Taylor, Mike Pinkin, Spencer Moore, Clyde Fox and Mark Okrant had two each.

Allied Printing hung up Telephone Society, 18-8. Chris Green ripped five hits for Allied while Doug Leonard, John Pierson and Kip Colpitts added four each.

Don Leonard, John Sommers, Tom Powers and Mike Fluharty chipped in with two each.

Sparky Laggis and Rich Conway had three apiece in defeat while Bill Hill, Dave Edwards and Tom Moriarty added two each.

Very seldom do you get to hear two ex-jocks in the booth together. We can add a little more insight. "The Hawk and I both played a lot of years. We've been in almost every (game) situation."

One of the things Murcer had to get used to when he became a broadcaster, however, was learning to be candid and objective without becoming overly critical.

Murcer demonstrated that ability when he assessed the Yankees' chances in the AL East divisional race.

"The Yankees can't afford to slide back any further than they are now. Pitching is the key to whether they finish in the No. 1 spot or the No. 4 spot and the pitching staff is not solid right now."

Like most baseball followers, Murcer was perplexed by Dave Righetti's struggles out of the bullpen this season. But he said the Yankees must stick with Righetti if they are to win.

"Righetti has been unreliable this year... He gives you an heart attack every time he's out there," Murcer said. "But he's the type of player I would want to have in this situation. He's a competitor every time he gets into the game. He doesn't quit trying."

Early barrage lifts the Mets

Only one run was unearned, coming in when second baseman Robby Thompson dropped a pop fly to infielder...

The Giants had what, on most nights, would be considered a big inning, scoring four runs in the eighth off reliever Bob Mauer.

"When we've played them in close games, it seems like they always end up winning," Mookie Wilson said Tuesday night after one that was anything but close.

A nine-run first, second biggest inning in Mets' history, got the National League East leaders going in the opener of a West Coast road trip and they won 13-6 in the refreshingly cool weather at Candlestick Park.

The Giants were 5-1 against the Mets this season before Tuesday night.

Everyone was cognizant of the fact they swept us the last time we played here," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said, looking back to May.

"When the Giants were nine runs down, they didn't quit. When they were 11 down, they didn't quit. That's the kind of club they are," said Wilson, who scored twice and had two of the eight hits in the first.

Allee Hammaker, 6-5, took most of the abuse, retiring just one batter and being charged with seven runs in his first start since a shutout at Houston last week. Joe Price got the last two outs but, because of shoulder pain, didn't come out for the next inning and was scheduled to go on the disabled list today.

"This is the kind of game you just want to forget," Giants Manager Roger Craig said.

"The temperature was great. It's good to get away from the heat back East," Strawberry said.

Johnson said, "I'm fine." Strawberry, leading the league in homers, reached 30 for a second consecutive season with his shot in the eighth off Craig Lettlers. He and Wilson had three hits apiece.

NASCAR's 'King' ready for his 500th straight start

By Hal Beck
The Associated Press

Consider the implications of starting 500 consecutive auto races.

Think about being there week after week, hands squeezing the steering wheel, eyes darting to the left and right, looking for danger and deciding how to avoid it. You barrel around the corners into the straightaways for a couple of hours, then do it again the next stop, sometimes finishing, sometimes crashing, sometimes winning, sometimes losing.

Richard Petty, the man they call "King" on the NASCAR circuit, weighed the number for a moment and then grinned broadly. "Five hundred," he said slowly, drawing the number out. "Most don't run that many in a lifetime."

Petty not only has run that many, but he's done it consecutively. When he lines up for Sunday's Winston Cup race at Daytona, he will be his 500th straight start. The last time he missed a race was 18 years ago.

That is Petty's philosophy. Bandaged up the bumps and bruises and get back in the car. "It's not a goal or anything like that," he said. "It's just my job."

It is a rough and tumble job, perhaps best evidenced by the crash Petty came through in February at Daytona.

"It was the most spectacular wreck I've ever been in. I got crumpled in the rear of a corner and the car got sideways. A.J. (Foyt) hit the left front and it turned over."

And over, and over again.

Then Brett Bodine blew a tire and careened into Petty's car, sending it up in the air. It hit on its nose and did some Baryshnikov pirouettes from that precarious position, spilling pieces of twisted metal all over the track.

Inside the machine, Petty's mind raced.

"I didn't know I had turned over until later," he said. "I remember getting sideways and thinking, 'Richard, hold on to the wheel.' You're going 180 mph. It takes for me to tell you about it, remember it hitting three times."

When the car finally stopped, Petty climbed out. "I put my hand up to the windshield. But the windshield wasn't there."

Miraculously, he came out of that adventure with nothing more than a bruised ankle. That was no threat to the streak. The broken neck at Pocono in 1980 was another matter, though.

"It wasn't the first time I broke it," Petty said. "Just the first time I knew I broke it. The doctor looked at the X-rays and asked me when I broke it before. I just looked at him and said, 'Hub?'

"That scared me enough to win a record 200 races. Now I'm winless for four years.

that stuff, you might just mangle 'em up more, but a broken neck ... phew."

Petty is a matter-of-fact about crashes, accepting the premise that if you are going to race, sooner or later you are going to wreck. He learned that lesson the first time he started a Winston Cup race 30 years ago.

His father, Lee Petty, and Cotton Owens were dueling for the lead. As they were about to lap Richard, the new kid on the block found himself massaging the wall. "Daddy put me there," he said, his eyes dancing at the memory. "He told me later I had to learn to get out of the way quicker."

"I don't think of myself as a daredevil. I calculate everything. I try to weigh the odds. It's not a death-wish situation. You tempt fate when you walk out the door. You tempt it all the time. You don't challenge it, though."

The agreement Petty has with his wife, Lynda, is that he will quit racing when he no longer enjoys it and doesn't find any fun at the track.

"At Daytona, she looked at me on the examining table and said, 'Tell me you're having fun.'"

"I said, 'Not right now, but I was until I wrecked.'"

Hawks land Malone, fueling title dreams

ATLANTA (AP) - The Atlanta Hawks finally landed the center they had been seeking by signing deal with Moses Malone to a three-year contract that is fueling dreams of an NBA championship.

Despite his age - 33 - Malone made the All-Star squad for the 11th consecutive year last season, averaging 20.3 points and 11.2 rebounds.

The Hawks declined to release details of the agreement during a news conference Tuesday, but the 6-foot-11 Malone reportedly signed a deal worth a minimum of $4.67 million over the next three years, averaging 20.3 points and 11.2 rebounds.

"He's a winner. Moses is a guy that you can rely on," Malone said. "I work hard and prepare myself to be in shape. People don't understand."

"But I think the Lord is taking care of me ... My name is Moses, isn't it?"

Malone may be in his 30s, but I still will get my 20 points and 10 rebounds a game. People just don't realize I can still do it," he said.

Malone said he has been playing for 14 years of professional basketball. In 12 NBA seasons, he has been selected Most Valuable Player three times.

"My goal is to win, to bring a championship to Atlanta," Malone said. "I'm not a superstar. I'm just a player, but I'm a better player with a good team and the Hawks are a good team. Now that I'm here, they (other teams) will have to pay attention to me and the other players. I will create problems for other teams."

Malone's signing was a surprise. He's a winner. Moses is a guy that you can rely on. Malone said. "I work hard and prepare myself to be in shape. People don't understand."

3 of the top seeds ousted in ATP play

MASON, Ohio (AP) - Jimmy Connors and Mats Wilander are stepping into the spotlight at center court of a tennis stadium, but they seldom enter the glare.

But all three shone Tuesday in advancing to the second round of the $602,500 Association of Tennis Professionals' Championship at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

The second-seeded Wilander, a three-time winner of the event, advanced to the second round by beating Andrew Castle, 6-3, 6-1.

Connors, the tournament's third seed, got stronger as his match progressed in defeating Dan Cassidy, 6-4, 6-1.

But it was Rive, Carl Limberger and Michael Chang - who entered the tournament ranked 86th, 233rd and 66th in the world, respectively - who made the big headlines in upsetting three of the top eight seeds.

Rive, an 18-year-old from Puerto Rico who played at Florida State called the victory the biggest of his short career.

"I was playing against a guy who doesn't miss a lot of balls and I thought I'd get tired," Rive said of the oppressive humidity and 85-degree temperature during his midday match. "Instead, I thought he got sluggish and he got tired."

Limberger, a 24-year-old Australian who beat Wilander in the first round, said he was surprised when he could fall asleep out there. "He's so cool on the court. But I didn't take it too much to heart."

Race car driver injured

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Chris Harris of New Zealand was seriously injured when his car flipped over while he was attempting to set a speed record on the Bonneville Salt Flats.

Harris, 39, was taken by air ambulance to the University of Utah Health Sciences Center in Salt Lake City where he was treated for cervical fractures, a nursing supervisor said.

"He was going 175 mph and went a little sideways. He flipped six times," said Larry Rosa, a worker at Bonneville Speedway in Utah's western desert.

"I was thinking about (McClure) while working up. He's so casual that it looks like you could fall asleep out there. He's so cool on the court. But I didn't take it too much to heart."

Nicklaus' future uncertain

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) - Jack Nicklaus, who has won a record 18 professional golf titles, said Tuesday he is not sure whether he wants to keep on playing.

The 48-year-old Nicklaus has cut back his playing schedule in the last two years, but said he is not satisfied with the results.

"I'm not playing as well as I should, and I don't like it. I don't like it at all," said Nicklaus, who has missed the cut in four of eight starts this year.

"I've been trying to cut back five or 10 tournaments, and I just can't do it. I can't get there."

"Next year, because of commitments to friends and promises I've made, I'm committed to 10 or 16 tournaments."

Whalers' golf tournament

GLASTONBURY - The fourth annual Glastonbury Lions/Hartford Whalers Charity Golf Tournament, featuring the entire Hartford Whalers team, several former Whalers and other sports celebrities, will take place Tuesday, Sept. 6 at the Glastonbury Hills Country Club. Proceeds from the tournament will benefit the Vision Immunology Center at the University of Connecticut Health Center and the Lions' Fund for charitable services.

Home run spree not enough for Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) - Willie Fraser knows the drill - get a lead early and throw strikes. He just hasn't perfected his execution.

"Throwing what he described as "nothing" fastballs and too many pitches over the middle of the plate, Fraser set a California Angels' record by allowing five home runs in 6 1/3 innings Tuesday night, but the Angels still routed the New York Yankees 15-6.

"Imagine hitting all those homers and losing," Yankees pitching coach Clyde King said.

Fraser, 30, was coming off the best start of his career, a one-hitter against Seattle in which the Mariners' only hit was a home run by Alvin Davis.

The 24-year-old right-hander allowed 24 home runs - tied for the major league lead - in 139 2/3 innings.

"I'll be mad all tonight and tomorrow," he said. "I should have been able to close that game out with no problem. I got a win out of it, but I'm not real happy. I kicked myself all over the place when I got out. My teammates just laughed at me, but I was angry."

"I'm learning to stay away from the big homers," he said. "And believe me, that helps. I'm not putting the team in a hole that often."

Bankhead cashes in on Sox

BOSTON (AP) - As far as the Boston Red Sox are concerned, Seattle right-hander Scott Bankhead was in the wrong place at the wrong time.

"That was rather a quiet night, wouldn't you say?" Boston manager Joe Morgan said Tuesday night after Bankhead pitched the Sox to a 7-0 victory for his first major league shutout.

"You gotta give Bankhead credit," Morgan added. "He was popping those homers all night. I scouted him in college and he was high on my list way back then."

Both raised his record to 4-4 with the win in the first game.

Red Sox starter Dan Garetaker took the loss in the first game to drop 1-1.

Hawks land Malone, fueling title dreams

ATLANTA (AP) - The Atlanta Hawks finally landed the center they had been seeking by signing deal with Moses Malone to a three-year contract that is fueling dreams of an NBA championship.

Despite his age - 33 - Malone made the All-Star squad for the 11th consecutive year last season, averaging 20.3 points and 11.2 rebounds.

The Hawks declined to release details of the agreement during a news conference Tuesday, but the 6-foot-11 Malone reportedly signed a deal worth a minimum of $4.67 million over the next three years, averaging 20.3 points and 11.2 rebounds.

"He's a winner. Moses is a guy that you can rely on," Malone said. "I work hard and prepare myself to be in shape. People don't understand."

"But I think the Lord is taking care of me ... My name is Moses, isn't it?"

Malone may be in his 30s, but I still will get my 20 points and 10 rebounds a game. People just don't realize I can still do it," he said.

Malone said he has been playing for 14 years of professional basketball. In 12 NBA seasons, he has been selected Most Valuable Player three times.

"My goal is to win, to bring a championship to Atlanta," Malone said. "I'm not a superstar. I'm just a player, but I'm a better player with a good team and the Hawks are a good team. Now that I'm here, they (other teams) will have to pay attention to me and the other players. I will create problems for other teams."

Malone's signing was a surprise. He's a winner. Moses is a guy that you can rely on. Malone said. "I work hard and prepare myself to be in shape. People don't understand."

"But I think the Lord is taking care of me ... My name is Moses, isn't it?"

Malone may be in his 30s, but I still will get my 20 points and 10 rebounds a game. People just don't realize I can still do it," he said.

3 of the top seeds ousted in ATP play

MASON, Ohio (AP) - Jimmy Connors and Mats Wilander are stepping into the spotlight at center court of a tennis stadium, but they seldom enter the glare.

But all three shone Tuesday in advancing to the second round of the $602,500 Association of Tennis Professionals' Championship at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

The second-seeded Wilander, a three-time winner of the event, advanced to the second round by beating Andrew Castle, 6-3, 6-1.

Connors, the tournament's third seed, got stronger as his match progressed in defeating Dan Cassidy, 6-4, 6-1.

But it was Rive, Carl Limberger and Michael Chang - who entered the tournament ranked 86th, 233rd and 66th in the world, respectively - who made the big headlines in upsetting three of the top eight seeds.

Rive, an 18-year-old from Puerto Rico who played at Florida State called the victory the biggest of his short career.

"I was playing against a guy who doesn't miss a lot of balls and I thought I'd get tired," Rive said of the oppressive humidity and 85-degree temperature during his midday match. "Instead, I thought he got sluggish and he got tired."

Limberger, a 24-year-old Australian who beat Wilander in the first round, said he was surprised when he could fall asleep out there. "He's so cool on the court. But I didn't take it too much to heart."

Race car driver injured

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Chris Harris of New Zealand was seriously injured when his car flipped over while he was attempting to set a speed record on the Bonneville Salt Flats.

Harris, 39, was taken by air ambulance to the University of Utah Health Sciences Center in Salt Lake City where he was treated for cervical fractures, a nursing supervisor said.

"He was going 175 mph and went a little sideways. He flipped six times," said Larry Rosa, a worker at Bonneville Speedway in Utah's western desert.

Ward will stop claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission says Montgomery Ward has promised to stop making claims about home appliances that the government charges were false.

The commission said in an announcement Tuesday that the giant retailer has signed a consent agreement to stop making reliability claims for products unless it has evidence to support them and to stop making contested claims relating to maintenance of products.

The FTC said Ward misrepresented the need to buy a service contract that would cover routine maintenance when it sold some products, such as televisions, washing machines, dryers and refrigerators.

Boise strike near end

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Boise Cascade Corp. reached a tentative contract settlement Tuesday with 2,000 striking union woodworkers, paving the way to resume production at 15 mills in Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

Mike Draper, executive secretary of the Western Council of Industrial Workers, said the union was recommending acceptance of the agreement. Draper declined to discuss the details pending a vote on Thursday.

The union members walked off their jobs at Boise Cascade in mid-June, shortly after the beginning of a regional timber strike that eventually idled about 7,900 workers in five states.

The regional strike by the Western Council and by the International Woodworkers of America-U.S. began June 6.

Housing construction climbed 2.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction climbed 2.4 percent in July, but building permits for future construction fell at the sharpest rate since January, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said new homes and apartments were being built at an annual rate of 4.49 million units in July. It was the second consecutive monthly increase following a 4.4 percent rise in June.

However, building permits dropped 5.4 percent last month, the biggest decline since a 9 percent fall in January.

Since building permits are considered a good barometer of future activity, analysts said the report was signaling that housing activity, after a brief rebound in June and July, was headed lower.

Much of the pessimism stems from the fact that mortgage rates have been rising again following efforts by the Federal Reserve to tighten credit as a way of dampening inflationary pressures.

Many economists are predicting that 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages will soon top 11 percent. They have already risen to a national average of 10.57 percent, according to a weekly survey by the

Group challenges merger of 2 Detroit newspapers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of newspaper readers and advertisers is seeking a court order to block the partial merger of Detroit's two daily newspapers under an agreement approved by former Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

The Michigan Citizens for an Independent Press contends that Meese illegally overruled an administrative law judge's recommendation against allowing the Detroit News and Free Press to merge their commercial and production operations.

The formation of the joint operating agreement under the Newspaper Preservation Act is scheduled to take effect Thursday and is expected to result in the loss of 500 jobs.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green scheduled a hearing today on the plaintiff's bid for temporary restraining order to stop the merger from taking place.

The News, which is owned by Gannett Co., Inc., and the Free Press, owned by Knight-Ridder, Inc., plan to maintain separate editorial staffs and publish combined newspapers on Saturday and Sunday.

The suit, joined by a state senator, charged that Meese's order allowing the joint operating agreement "is arbitrary and capricious, contrary to law, and not supported by substantial evidence" that either daily qualified as a "failing newspaper" under the Newspaper Preservation Act.

The merger "will remove the beneficial effects of competition on the quality in terms of editorial coverage, diversity, and news reporting, and is likely to cause a rise in the prices of newspapers in the Detroit areas," the complaint said.

The suit also said the combined operation will result in increased advertising rates.

The plaintiffs say Meese violated Justice Department regulations by meeting with members of Michigan's congressional delegation in June to discuss the newspaper merger.

The One Election Where Everyone Wins

Vote for Your Favorite Dunkin' Donuts Product and See What You Win.

It may be hard to choose, but in this election, every choice is right. Simply cast your vote by rubbing off the box next to your favorite Dunkin' Donuts product. Underneath, you'll see what you'll win. Vote for one product only, and bring this ballot into any participating Dunkin' Donuts shop. Come in today and don't forget to vote for your favorite.
