BRIGHT FUTURE — Leonard Yost examines a diamond ring in his jewelry shop on Spruce Street. Yost, who celebrated his 40th year in business last month, says he has no retirement plans.

40 years later, his clocks still tick

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Forty years have passed, and the clocks are still ticking at Leonard Yost's jewelry shop on Spruce Street.

And those clocks will probably go on ticking for a while longer. Yost, who opened his shop on Aug. 16, 1948, says he has no plans to retire.

Things have changed since the 1940s. Electronic watches have almost entirely replaced the mechanical ones. But Yost reports that his business is growing. In an age in which everything is disposable and repairmen have become an endangered species, his longevity is noteworthy.

Yost, 66, says that the trick is really quite simple. "We service what we sell and guarantee all our work," he said.

The small storefront in which Yost started his business is the same one he occupies today. A small sign outside the shop at 129 Spruce St. reads, "Leonard W. Yost, Jeweler." Inside, clocks line the wall, and watches and rings are displayed in a glass case.

During a recent visit, Yost's 30-year-old son, Tom, who is also a watchmaker, was working on a mechanical clock. A man who knew Yost by name stopped in to drop off a necklace for repair. "I'm going to be here a good long time," Yost said. "I enjoy being here. I have a lot of good customers. I made a lot of good friends in the last 40 years here."

Yost said he does not get much call for mechanical watches anymore. He sells electronic watches, such as Pulsars, which he said are more accurate. But people still come in to have mechanical watches fixed.

Unlike their electronic counterparts, mechanical watches need regular maintenance every two to three years. That means taking the watch completely apart, cleaning it, lubricating it, and reassembling it. All that work costs $30, if no parts have to be replaced.

"If you don't take it apart, it's like taking a shower with your clothes on," Yost said. "It takes only a few minutes to take a watch apart ('You get into a routine,' Yost said), but once it's put back together, he keeps the watch for about a week to make sure it's running properly. He works on four or five watches at a time.

On the other hand, routine maintenance for an electronic watch is simpler. You take the old battery out, clean the contacts, and put a new battery in, Yost said.

Yost, who lives in South Windsor, grew up in Manchester and attended Manchester High School. He decided to become a watchmaker after he left the Navy in 1946. "I wanted to get into something I could do on my own," he said.

He finished a two-year course in 1½ years at a watchmaker's school in Pittsburgh, Pa., and opened his Spruce Street shop in 1948. Business was slow at first but gradually picked up. His wife, Ethel, helps with the bookkeeping.

"We're always busy. We never have a lull, because there are not that many people repairing watches," he said. "He knows of only one other local person still repairing watches, Bill Bray of Bray Jewelers on Main Street."

Just as Yost has no plans to retire, he has no plans to move his shop to a more visible location.

"I've been very happy here," he said. "This place has been good to me, so I wouldn't make a change."

NLRB could open hospital to unions

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Proposed new regulations of the National Labor Relations Board could result in the unionization of more employees at Manchester Memorial Hospital and higher costs to patients, a hospital spokesman says.

"The answer would be that there is a great potential for increased costs if these regulations became official," said Andrew A. Beck, hospital spokesman. The proposed regulations, which would clarify exactly which employees could be included in union bargaining units, also could lead to problems in the hospital because of more labor disputes, he said.

He was unsure whether the regulations would make it easier for the United Food and Commercial Workers Union to organize non-union hospital employees.

The UFCWU has twice withdrawn petitions to unionize the hospital.

"The proliferation of units can jeopardize patient care and disrupt a sense of stabilization which is important (to patient care)," Beck said.

The NLRB released a 153-page set of proposed regulations today. The proposed changes will make it impossible for hospitals to lump unrelated groups, such as licensed practical nurses with technical employees, together. That may make it easier for unions to win an election of workers in one category, which would force hospitals to recognize the unit.

There are eight groups listed in the NLRB proposal as specific bargaining units in hospitals. The units are: registered nurses, physicians, professionals except for nurses and physicians, technical employees such as lab technicians, skilled maintenance employees such as plumbers, business office clerical employees, guards, other non-professional employees.

"Eight different groups organized (could mean) eight different contracts," Beck said. "The negotiating process is a difficult process. It could be very, very hectic."

Only registered nurses are unionized at the hospital. The hospital's 218 registered nurses belong to the Federation of Nurses and Health Professionals union.

The UFCWU withdrew its second petition to unionize non-unionized hospital employees about a month ago. NLRB officials said the petition was voluntarily withdrawn, meaning the UFCWU can refile at any time.

Since the second withdrawal, the UFCWU has not refiled, said John Sauter, NLRB assistant regional director. "We have not heard from them," he said.

UFCWU officials said after the second petition was withdrawn that it was told by the NLRB it did not have an "appropriate unit" to file.

UFCWU officials could not be reached for comment as to what is an appropriate unit or on the proposed changes in regulations.

Though only licensed practical nurses were named in the petition, the UFCWU had said it would try to include X-ray technicians, lab technicians and nursing assistants.

The hospital and the UFCWU were scheduled to meet with the NLRB on what groups would be included when the petition was withdrawn a second time.

In May, the UFCWU withdrew its original petition after being informed by the NLRB that they did not have the required 30 percent of interested employees.

Survival in crash miraculous

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) —

Nearly 100 people, many leaping through thick smoke and blazing jet fuel, miraculously survived the crash of a Delta jet that broke apart and burned during takeoff from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, killing 13 others.

The survivors, many suffering burns, crawled or jumped through gaping holes in the fuselage of the Boeing 727 and clambered over red-hot wings to safety Wednesday morning as black smoke billowed three stories high, witnesses said.

"You heard the thing crumple, so you knew you were going to crash the whole time," said passenger Penn Waugh, a lawyer from Dallas. "You were just looking for a way to get out of the plane. You're hoping you weren't going to die."

Ninety-seven passengers and a crew of seven were listed aboard the aircraft, Flight 1141 en route to Salt Lake City, but the exact count was uncertain because babies were not included on passenger lists. The flight originated in Jackson, Miss.

Delta released names of 95 survivors, while hospitals who treated victims counted at least 96 people, many suffering from burns, smoke inhalation and broken bones. Some walked away unscathed and flew to their destinations.

Thirteen fatalities were confirmed, including an infant and two flight attendants, Delta spokesman Bill Berry said in Atlanta. All were from Texas, the airline said.

Sixty-one people were treated and released from seven hospitals, officials said.

Survivors said the 15-year-old jet appeared to lose power immediately after leaving the

The same Salt Lake City-bound Delta flight involved in a crash that killed 13 Wednesday taxied out for takeoff today but turned back, apparently because of an incorrect instrument reading, a spokesman said.

Flight 1141 let off its passengers after returning to the terminal at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The flight, which originated in Jackson, Miss., had been scheduled to leave here at 8:31 a.m.

The plane, its hull burned and tail-section broken, came to rest in a grassy field dotted by sunflowers. One of the three engines lay several hundred yards away.

Investigators had no immediate indication of the cause of the crash, said Michael Benson, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington. One Delta spokesman said there had been an apparent engine problem, and a passenger on another plane said

Town won't try for block grant

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

The town will not apply for a Community Development Block Grant for fiscal year 1988-89, making it the only community in the state not to apply for about the 10th year in a row, the town manager said today.

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss said today the result has been the loss of "many millions of dollars." Voters in three referendums since 1979 have voted not to apply for the funds.

"The decision not to apply comes just months after the release of a report from the state Central Housing Committee, that shows nearly 2,400 inadequate housing units in Manchester. Funds from Community Development Block Grants are used in part to renovate such housing."

State housing committee officials could not be reached for current figures on inadequate housing this morning.

Criteria for inadequate housing includes inadequate plumbing, more than 1.01 people per room and rent that takes up more than 30 percent of the family's income, according to the committee.

Asked if the grant could help alleviate the shortage of adequate and affordable housing in town, Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said, "Whether it could or it couldn't is irrelevant. The town voters rejected it three times."

Voters feared that if the town participated and failed to meet HUD goals, it would be forced to build low- to moderate-income housing using town money, Weiss said. But there was no indication from the federal government that those fears were founded, he said.

DiRosa said he was tired of the issue.

"It's an issue that we've dragged through for several years," DiRosa said. "I don't think we want to go through it again."

The amount of the grant Manchester could have received this year wasn't calculated by the regional office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban

Police are mum on FBI profile of Martin killer

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Manchester police plan to keep mum about an FBI psychological profile of the killer of Bernice B. Martin until they have made an arrest in the case, Capt. Joseph H. Brooks said Wednesday.

A profile of Martin's killer or killers was submitted by the FBI to the Manchester Police Department about two weeks ago, Brooks said. The profile, based on the circumstances of the killing, provides information on the type of person who may have committed the crime. That information will be used to help police in their search for a suspect.

Police have said they have no suspects in the killing.

Brooks said that police were reviewing the profile, which they requested from the FBI in January. He would not say whether it pointed to any suspects.

"We're evaluating the contents of the profile right now," he said. "We're working with the FBI to make sure we thoroughly and completely understand what they're saying to us."

Frederick R. Merrill, who was charged four days after Martin's death in connection with a sexual assault in South Windsor, was questioned about the killing by Manchester police but has been ruled out as a suspect. Merrill escaped from Somers state prison in August and remains at large.

Few details have been made public about the circumstances of Martin's death. Police have said that she was strangled with a "ligature" — a string or rope.

profiling, said that the Martin profile was "accurate" but might not be very useful if there were a lot of people who matched the profile. The profile was prepared by the FBI's behavioral science unit in Quantico, Va.

Profiles are only as good as the information that goes into making them. Thiel said. He complimented the Manchester department on the investigative work it had done in connection with the Martin case.

Last year the FBI attempted to do a psychological profile of the death of 17-year-old Michael S. Linders of Ellington, but the agency determined that there was not enough information to put one together.

Linders was found dead behind an apartment building at 125 Spruce St. on Nov. 14, 1986. His death was originally ruled a homicide, but the state medical examiner reclassified it last year as "indeterminate."

No change in Main St. curb plans

No major changes will be recommended in plans for the design of curb endings on the reconstruction of downtown Main Street despite concerns by Georgetown Mayor, one downtown merchant, that the design will cause problems in plowing snow.

General Manager Robert Weiss has sent a memorandum to the Board of Directors saying he will not recommend any major changes in the planned curb endings which resemble "bubbles."

He included with the memorandum a newsletter of the Downtown Manchester Association which describes a visit snow members of the association made to Putnam and to Southbridge, Mass., where curbs of somewhat similar design have been used.

In Putnam, some installations are being removed, but, according to the newsletter, "the situation in Putnam bore little resemblance if any" to the plan for Manchester.

Dan Donigan may be best in the nation

Dan Donigan

Spanning collegiate soccer circles across the country, the mere mention of Connecticut's multi-talented forward Dan Donigan invokes fear in the hearts and minds of opponents and demands respect from the nation's coaches.

A two-time All-America performer out of Hamilton Square, N.J., the 5-10, 155-pound Donigan kicks off his senior season at UConn this afternoon at 4 as the Huskies host Philadelphia Textiles. Donigan's pure wizardry with the soccer ball has reaped several honors during his illustrious career at UConn.

Heading into this season, he is eighth on the all-time Husky scoring list with 77 points (24 goals, 29 assists). He led the Big East Conference in scoring last year with 34 points (11 goals, 12 assists).

The list of honors which have been bestowed upon Donigan is endless. The ultimate honor — the Robert R. Hermann Trophy — is well within his reach as he embarks on what promises to be a banner senior campaign. The Hermann Trophy is annually awarded to the country's outstanding Division I soccer player. Donigan finished fourth in the balloting a year ago.

Husky Coach Joe Morrone's son, Joe Jr., won the prestigious award in 1981, the same year UConn garnered the national championship.

Besides being able to view the best soccer in front of the best crowds anywhere in the country, UConn soccer fans can enjoy an amazing athlete in Donigan. It isn't just his flair for offensive exploits which excites any soccer fan, but rather it is each and every one of his deft, seemingly effortless, European-style maneuvers with the ball which leave spectators breathless.

By no means is Donigan's final season at the perennial Top 20 soccer school dominated by the quest for the Hermann Trophy. The Huskies finished 13-7-3 last year and were ranked 16th in the final national poll. UConn also qualified for the NCAA tournament for the 14th time in the last 16 years, an astounding feat.

An captain of the 1988 Huskies, Donigan will be the main offensive threat up front with possible double and triple-team defenses likely against him. If last Saturday's 2-2 exhibition tie with two-time defending Big East champion Seton Hall was any indication, Donigan seems prepared for the task. With UConn trailing, 2-1, with nine minutes left, Donigan literally split three Seton Hall defenders and lurched inside the penalty area. He slipped a pass to forward Brian Parker who easily deposited it in the back of the net for the tying goal.

First-year Seton Hall Coach Manny Schellscheid, the 1984 U.S. Olympic coach, said "It was a great individual move by Danny Donigan."

It is a shame if sports fans around the area don't take the opportunity to travel to Storrs to take in the finest soccer along with one of the finest players in the land. Acadolades go hand in hand with Donigan and coming from a program steeped in rich tradition and excellence, Coach Morrone had a lofty compliment for him at the preseason luncheon last week.

"Dan is one of the greatest soccer players ever to play at Connecticut," Morrone said.

As years go by, UConn soccer will dearly remember one of its shining stars — Dan Donigan.

HAMMERING YANKEE — Dave Winfield punches a double down the left field line to score two runs in the first inning for the Yankees against Seattle Wednesday night at the Kingdome. The Yanks snapped their six-game losing streak.

Rhoden to rescue as Yanks triumph

SEATTLE (AP) — Whatever New York Yankees starting pitcher Rick Rhoden was going with the ball, the Seattle Mariners couldn't hit it.

The Mariners complained that Rhoden, 8-10, was scuffing balls after he held them to six hits in a 4-1 New York victory Wednesday, ending a six-game skid by the Yankees.

Rhoden struck out five batters and walked two in his third complete game, first victory after five consecutive losses and first triumph by a New York starter since Aug. 14, but he got only a Bronx cheer from Seattle manager Jim Snyder.

"He cheats," Snyder said. "Three balls we had were all scuffed in the same way. I think he uses sandpaper."

Jay Buhner, acquired from the Yankees on July 24, agreed. "He's definitely a scuffer," Buhner said. "I played over there (New York) and I'm positive he scuffs it, but as long as he can get by with it without getting caught, more power to him."

The last player caught tampering with baseballs was Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Kevin Gross, who was suspended for 10 days on Aug. 10, 1987, after sandpaper was found in his glove.

Snyder accused Rhoden of tampering with the ball and having a scuffing device on the mound Aug. 21, when the Mariners won 4-2 in New York.

"We found a lot more scratched balls and actually saw something drop to the ground in New York," Snyder explained. "The first three balls we took in today were scratched. (Home plate umpire Larry) McCoy said he would look for it, but after that we didn't see too many."

The victory kept the Yankees from recording the most losses in August in club history. The current squad went 9-20 in the month, tying the club record for most losses in August.

Dave Winfield opened the scoring with a two-run double in the first inning off Seattle starter Scott Bankhead, driving in Willie Randolph and Don Mattingly. Bankhead, 7-9, gave up four runs on seven hits with two strikeouts and a walk in 4 1-3 innings before being replaced by Bill Swift.

Rickey Henderson led off the fifth inning by going to second when shortstop Rey Quinones fielded his grounder and threw high to first. Henderson then boosted his major league-leading stolen base total to 74 by racing to third, his 24th theft of that base in 26 attempts this season.

Randolph doubled Henderson home and scored on Winfield's single. The Mariners got their lone run in the first inning as Mickey Brantley singled, stole second, advanced to third on a single by Harold Reynolds and scored on a single by Darnell Coles.

"I was throwing pretty good in the first inning. They just hit the ball well," Rhoden said.

The three RBI boosted Winfield to No. 11 on the all-time New York list with 797, two more than Tommy Heinrich during his Yankee days. Wally Pipp, known mainly for being replaced at first base by Hall of Famer Lou Gehrig, is No. 10 with 825.

"Mattingly and Winfield produced and Rhoden did the rest," Yankees manager Lou Pinella said. "Rick threw a good breaking ball and changed speeds well."

Nicolau rules for the players

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baseball owners continued their conspiracy against free agents into 1987, engaging in a "patent pattern" of bid-rigging that defied fair play and a free market.

Arbitrator George Nicolau, in a harshly worded 81-page opinion delivered Wednesday, found "there was no vestige of a free market" between the 1986 and 1987 seasons. It was replaced, he wrote, "by a patent pattern of uniform behavior" in "deliberate contravention" of baseball's collective bargaining agreement.

He found that communications between clubs were designed to further the free-agent boycott.

Damages involving such stars as Montreal's Tim Lincecum, Detroit's Jack Morris, Philadelphia's Lance Parrish and the Chicago Cubs' Andre Dawson will be determined after this season, avoiding any disruption of the pennant races.

Nicolau's decision will precipitate another round of multimillion-dollar damage hearings and will allow several of the free agents in the case the opportunity for "new-look" free agency.

Seven players from the first case were made free agents again in January and Kirk Gibson left Detroit to sign a three-year contract with Los Angeles.

Another arbitrator, Thomas Roberts, ruled last Sept. 21 that clubs conspired against free agents between the 1985 and 1986 seasons. Nicolau's opinion was much more expansive and, among other things, accused baseball officials of making offers "for public relations purposes" and of having "remarkable lapses of memory" in their testimony.

He also found that American League president Bobby Brown and two AL club owners pressured Philadelphia Phillies owner Bill Giles not to sign Parrish, one of the two premier free agents who switched teams by taking pay cuts.

Donald Fehr, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, called it "a story of deceit, dissembling and conspiracy

Futures worries Lawrence Taylor

WEST HARTFORD (AP) — New York Giants All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor isn't concerned about what will happen to him immediately after his suspension for failing a drug test.

"But I'm worried about what's going to happen to me the rest of my life unless I get myself straight. That's what I'm worried about."

Taylor said Wednesday night in an interview with WVIT-TV sportscaster Beasley Reese, a former teammate.

They were Taylor's first public comments since Monday when he was suspended for a minimum of 30 days by the NFL and ordered to undergo rehabilitation.

"Hell, I'll still be alive 30 days from now, hopefully. I'll still be able to walk out here and breathe the fresh air and hold my head up," Taylor said in the emotional live interview.

Taylor, a seven-time All-Pro who has been one of football's dominant players this decade, said he weakened as training camp wore on and gave in three weeks ago to the urge to take drugs again.

"God, I didn't mean for it to happen. I wish it hadn't, but I did make a bad decision and I'll pay the price for it."

"I really worked hard this off-season to get myself physically ready to play, mentally ready to play ball. I wasn't drinking as much. I wasn't going out as much. During the beginning of training camp, if I went out I would have Perrier and stuff like that."

"But as training camp lingered on, I found myself going out and I had a couple beers and the beers turned into mixed drinks. I guess it was one Wednesday I made a bad decision."

Taylor will miss the Giants' first four games, beginning with the season-opener Monday against the defending Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins. If he completes his treatment in 30 days he will be eligible to return for the fifth game, also against Washington.

"Prior to 1985, I felt I was a casual user," Taylor said. "God, I hate to admit it, but I became an addict in 1985."

The NFL has not said what substance Taylor was abusing, although published reports have said it was cocaine. Taylor underwent rehabilitation for a cocaine problem at Methodist Hospital in Houston in February 1986, before the NFL drug policy was in effect.

In the interview with WVIT, Taylor did not mention what drug he used and he was not asked.

Taylor said he found it "a lot easier" to stay away from drugs during the past two seasons when he was being monitored closely by the league "because I knew the consequences of getting caught."

"I found myself slipping a little bit this year. I guess around January or February," he said.

Taylor said he sought help from a doctor in Houston who had helped him before and who gave him "medication where I wouldn't have the urge to, you know, mess with drugs."

While Taylor said the treatment worked well until he finally succumbed to his urges three weeks ago during training camp, he did not pinpoint that date as his downfall.

"I messed up six years ago when I first tried the drugs," he said. "I didn't mess up 21 days ago in the bar."

Taylor said he would comply with the league's drug rehabilitation guidelines.

"Right now ... I have no choice," he said. "It's something I've gotten myself into and I'm trying my best to work it out so I'm not sick for the rest of my life."

Giants owner Wellington Mara said Tuesday that Taylor would not be allowed to play until the doctors running his rehabilitation program are satisfied he has successfully completed it.

Taylor said last year in his book, "LT: Living on the Edge," that he conquered his addictions by playing a lot of golf and did not feel therapy helped him. But Wednesday night, he said he now regrets not having cooperated.

"I really wasn't allowing the Giants to help me. I wasn't allowing my wife to help me. I was doing it by myself and trying to make it happen by myself because I wanted to say I could do it my own," he said. "It don't work like that. Boy, I found that out."

Utility man Lyons getting rousing send off

By Ted M. Nott Jr.
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Billy Lyons, given the proverbial "cup of coffee" in the major leagues by the St. Louis Cardinals, will get a champagne exit from baseball tonight, courtesy of the Louisville Redbirds.

Lyons, the ultimate utility player for the Cardinals' Class AAA farm team since 1982, will play all nine positions in the last game of his professional career.

The nine-in-one-game idea was discussed earlier in the year with Lyons, Redbirds part owner and general manager Dale Owens said. But it was never handed about in public, which made it ironic when Owens recently received a petition signed by 400 fans asking that Lyons, who has played the other eight positions this season, be allowed to pitch in the last game of the season.

"They didn't even know what we were doing," Owens said. "It's a situation that's really once in a lifetime. It's a nice way for Billy to bow out."

Of course, it is a different ending than the 30-year-old Lyons might have envisioned a few years ago. He was called up briefly by the parent Cardinals in 1983 and 1984, but failed to earn a job and was dropped from the major league roster in 1985.

So Lyons had to be content playing in the American Association. He is known as "Mr. Redbird" by the fans and media because he is the only remaining member of the team that moved to Louisville in 1982. He said he has appreciated the support, and was looking forward to his final game.

"I thought it was kind of neat," he said of the petition sent to Owens. "I didn't know that many people realized that pitcher was the only position I hadn't played this year. I guess they'll get their wish."

"As far as being moved around a lot, it won't be anything new for me. It's just a matter of doing it all in one game."

Lyons, who will use four different gloves during the game, said the reaction of his teammates has been mostly laughter.

"We're just trying to figure out who's going to play where as I'm moving around. I just don't want to have my catcher's mitt on when I go out to play first base."

The plan, Owens said, is for Owens to be the starting pitcher and, after playing every infield and outfield position, finish at catcher.

With Lyons on the mound, scheduled starter Derek Botelho will be in right field.

The worst situation would be for Billy to breeze through the first inning," Owens said. "Derek will be warmed up just like if he were starting the game. Then if Billy gets into trouble, he goes out to right and Derek pitches. We're not going to let the game get ridiculous."

Lyons, a 270 career hitter, will leave Louisville as the organization's all-time leader in games played, at-bats, runs scored, walks, strikeouts, stolen bases, total bases and extra-base hits. He is second in hits, doubles, triples and runs batted in.

Lyons, holder of a marketing degree from Southern Illinois University, signed with the Milwaukee Brewers in 1980 and was sent to Butte, Mont., of the Pioneer League.

The next year he became a free agent and was signed by the Cardinals, who sent him to Erie, Pa., of the New York-Penn League. In 1982, he played at Springfield, Ill., Louisville and Arkansas before settling in with the Redbirds for good in 1983.

Now, he wants to move on and spend time with his wife, Marty, and sons Andrew, 2, and Timothy, 5 months.

"I've had some people talk to me about staying in the game as a coach or manager," Lyons said. "I haven't got a job yet, but I'd just like to try something different."

Living is just delightful for athletes in training

By Bert Rosenholtz The Associated Press SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — "Summertime, and the living is easy..." That refrain from "Porgy and Bess" aptly describes the atmosphere of the U.S. Olympic track and field team's training camp at the University of California-Santa Barbara.

It's summertime, and the Olympic competition for the track and field athletes is three weeks away. By that time, the seasons will have changed, and it will be autumn.

But now it is summertime, and the living is easy. "I'm trying to make this as much fun as possible," said decathlete Gary Kinder.
