Thoughts

Started small
A prisoner condemned to the electric chair blurted out on his way to the final earthly chamber: "This all started when I stole a nickel from my mother's purse. Then I stole two nickels. I began taking things at school, the grocery store, the drug store. A couple of kids and I started breaking in. The haul got bigger and bigger. We decided to rob a bank. That's when I shot the cop. It all started with a nickel."
That is the progressive mode of crime. That is the usual story of sin and bad habits. A nickel, a puff of marijuana, a sniff of cocaine, impure curiosity, when not checked, lead to robbery, drug abuse, and sexual sins of all kinds.
Don't let a nickel throw you.

Deaths Elsewhere

Luis W. Alvarez

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Luis W. Alvarez, a Nobel Prize-winning physicist who helped develop the atomic bomb and a controversial theory that asteroids wiped out the dinosaurs, died Wednesday of cancer at 77. Alvarez was noted not only for physics, but for his work in other, widely varied fields, including archaeology, paleontology and astronomy. During World War II, he was credited with inventing a number of radar systems and an effective bomb sight. He also played a significant role in developing the atomic bomb during the Manhattan Project, invented several types of atom smashers and did a personal analysis of evidence in the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in physics in 1938 for his development of the liquid hydrogen bubble chamber and for the numerous elementary particles of matter that his team discovered using the device. But in the last decade, he was catapulted into headlines by the dinosaur-extinction theory.

Police Roundup

Police charge man in area burglaries

A 21-year-old Hartford man was arrested Thursday in connection with burglaries in the Bolton and Andover areas, police said. Florencio Muniz, of 155 Charter Oak Terrace, was charged with seven counts of third-degree burglary, two counts of second-degree larceny, two counts of third-degree larceny, two counts of theft of a firearm, and one count each of first-degree, fourth-degree, and fifth-degree larceny, state police at the Colchester barracks said. The charges resulted from an investigation of numerous burglaries of private residences in Bolton and Andover during July and August, police said. Approximately $30,000 worth of items, including jewelry, televisions, videocassette recorders, money and guns, were stolen from the homes. Police said they are looking into whether Muniz may also have been involved in burglaries in Manchester and Glastonbury. Muniz was held on $50,000 bond Thursday and is scheduled to appear in the Superior Court in Rockville today, police said.

Police arrest man after finding drugs in home

Police said they arrested a man Thursday on illegal drug possession charges after they found home he once lived in. Police said they found cocaine, marijuana, unprescribed medicine and drug paraphernalia at the home while accompanying firefighters checking the home after a report of heavy smoke coming from the house's chimney. Eric Behr, whose address was not immediately available, no longer lives in the house, police said. He was arrested Thursday and charged with possession of marijuana, cocaine, drug paraphernalia, illegal possession of prescription drugs, and cultivation of marijuana, police said. According to police reports, officers entered the home along with firefighters from the Eighth District Fire Department to check on the furnace, which was identified as causing the smoke. On top of a coffee table in the living room, officers said they discovered two smoking pipes, an ashtray containing marijuana, and a Scretts box filled with cocaine. After obtaining a search warrant, officers discovered more drug paraphernalia, cocaine, marijuana, and material for cultivating marijuana, according to the report. Officers also found a prescription bottle made out to another party containing the drug Percocet, police said. Behr was released on a $10,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Wednesday.

The 1,000 homes that would be part of the recycling program are in the area north of Middle Turnpike, bordered on the west by Main Street, on the north by North Main and Woodbridge streets, and on the east by Princeton Street. The administration's ultimate goal is to have all residents participate in a recycling program by January 1991, the deadline by which all municipalities in the state will no longer be allowed to dump recyclables in landfills. For disposal of newspaper and paper, Lydall & Foulds of Manchester Recovery Corp. of Manchester would pay $20 per ton for paper delivered to its plant and $12 per ton for paper picked up at the landfill. Only one company bid on disposal of metal containers and glass containers. Connecticut Container Recovery Corp. of Manchester would pay about 42 cents per pound of aluminum and $15 per ton for tin depending on market conditions. For glass containers, the company bid $25 per ton for clear glass, $20 for amber and $15 for green. For disposal of paper from town offices, Lydall & Foulds would pay $15 per ton for delivery to the plant and $10 per ton if the company provided a trailer. Recycled Fibers of Connecticut, based in Manchester, bid $20 per ton for collection and disposal of the paper and $30 per ton if the paper were delivered to the plant. When the pilot recycling program was proposed to the town Board of Directors in March, the start-up date had been the beginning of September. But O'Connor said Thursday that he hoped to start the program in early October. He said it had

State ambulance order debated

By Nancy Conclimom
Manchester Herald

The state Attorney General says that 6 of 201 ambulances in the state that have been repaired under a Ford Motor Co. recall are in Manchester, but the owner of one of the ambulance companies said today the work was done about three weeks ago. Both Scierka and Roger Taibot, owner of the Ambulance Service of Manchester, said today they haven't received notice from the state on the recall. Taibot said he had all 12 of his ambulances fixed several weeks ago. Taibot said only eight of the ambulances are needed for his service, but Ford also took the three he had stored. "We sent in the whole batch," Taibot said. The recalled ambulances are built with a 1983-87 Ford Econo-

line chassis. Repairs include replacing high-temperature heater-compartment hoses, radiator caps and high-temperature mufflers and adding new engine coolant. The repairs will make vehicles more resistant to heat and pressure, which can cause bursting or leaking that leads to fires, Lieberman said in his statement. The recall is a result of investigations after several states reported fires under the hoods of ambulances that involved burning engine coolant. Taibot said he never had trouble with fires in his ambulances, but occasionally fuel leaked when the vehicles were left idling for a period of two or three hours. "The problem was never when we were driving," he said. Capt. Rudy Kissmann, deputy fire marshal with the Town of Manchester Fire Department, said East Hartford fire officials reported that fuel was boiling in two of Taibot's ambulances, but the ambulances had been repaired. The Manchester Fire Department's emergency vehicles are different models than those that were recalled, Kissmann said. Ambulance operators who have not complied with the recall are posing a risk to the public, Lieberman said in his statement. Other towns named in the statement include South Windsor, East Hartford, Vernon and Windsor Locks. Lieberman also asked operators to better maintain the vehicles to make ambulance rides safer for the public and operators.

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

Campaign managers for Republican Carl Zinsser and Democrat Michael Meotti met Thursday and agreed on formats for debates to be held in towns of the 4th Senatorial District. Vivian Ferguson, campaign manager for Zinsser, said in a press release that she met with Paul Haas Jr., Meotti's campaign manager, and that the two had established specific guidelines for debate format and agreed that there should be at least one debate in each of the five towns of the district. The towns are Manchester, Glastonbury, Bolton, Hebron and Columbia. Ferguson declined to comment on details of the agreement, saying they had not yet been presented to Zinsser and Meotti for approval. Zinsser has objected to a format proposed by Haas in a letter Zinsser received Aug. 22, largely because he said the three-minute limit for answers to public questions and a half-hour limit for questions is too short. However, Zinsser has already agreed to a debate to be taped by cable television Oct. 5 for broadcast later and to a debate under the auspices of the Grange in Columbia Sept. 15. Haas had also proposed a debate in Glastonbury Oct. 26 sponsored by the League of Women Voters under a format that had not been determined. It was formats Haas proposed for other debates in Manchester and in Hebron at unspecified dates that drew criticism from Zinsser. Ferguson said she has phoned Haas and invited him to a luncheon meeting to discuss the debates. On Aug. 26, Zinsser wrote a letter to Meotti saying that he had asked Ferguson to contact Haas to discuss debate formats and times.

Marlow attacks 'bubbles'

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

Downtown merchant George Marlow remains adamantly opposed to plans to include curbside "bubbles" — he calls them "bubbles" — in plans for the reconstruction of downtown Main Street despite the fact that the Downtown Manchester Association and town public works officials approve of them.

"I'm livid," Marlow said Thursday about plans to include the devices in the reconstruction process.

The bubbles are sidewalk-level extensions from the curbline into the street at each intersection along Main Street where angle parking will be permitted. Marlow, who has detailed his objections in a letter to the editor of the Manchester Herald, argues that the bubbles will add to the cost of plowing snow and sweeping the street because they'll damage snowplows and trap freezing water at sidewalk ramps for wheelchairs.

Town public works officials and members of the Downtown Manchester Association concluded after visits to Putnam and to Southbridge, Mass., where similar devices are part of downtown reconstructions, that the curb ends work well in Southbridge from an aesthetic point of view and for pedestrian safety.

But in his letter, Marlow said Southbridge officials reported an annual increase in the cost of plowing and sweeping and that storm water does not drain properly because of the bubbles. Manchester Public Works Directors Peter P. Lofis Jr. said Thursday that the bubbles would make plowing somewhat more difficult, but it is "nothing we feel we can't live with."

"We will have to try it in the first couple of storms. If we need some special equipment, we will ask for it," he said.

But he said no added personnel would be needed. The plan is being designed by Fuses and O'Neil, a Manchester firm of consulting engineers.

William Ginter is an engineer with the firm and project manager for the Main Street reconstruction. Ginter said a primary purpose for the curbline extensions is to make the walk across Main Street shorter and thus safer for pedestrians.

Attitude toward change key to Bolton's charter rewrite

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The attitude of residents toward change will determine whether the town ever adopts a recommendation by the Charter Revision Commission to go to a town manager style of government, said Commission Chairman Robert Young Thursday.

Meanwhile, some leading town officials have not determined whether they support the concept of a town manager. Currently, the Board of Selectmen is the main decision-making body in town.

The commission will meet Tuesday to discuss the suggestions made at last Tuesday's public hearing, said Young. A final report will go to the Board of Selectmen, but it has not been determined when it will be forwarded, he said.

Young said it is too early to determine whether there will be support for the change, but he did say the public would have to know exactly what they were voting for and the cost of the change before it could pass.

The commission also would consider whether to hold question-and-answer sessions about the proposed changes, Young said. At the hearing Tuesday, the commission refused to answer specific questions, saying it was not the time and place.

Raymond Ursin, chairman of the Board of Finance, said he has not made up his mind whether to support a town manager. He said the town does need more professionalism in government, but he is not sure a town manager is the solution.

"I agree we need more professionalism," he said. "I'd rather have a hungry administrative assistant than a town manager that's mediocre."

Suggestions by residents that the commission look into a full-time first selectman also has raised some doubts in Ursin's mind. He said no one would want the job if every two years they may lose it.

Another town official who is unsure about the town manager position is First Selectman Sandra W. Pierce. She said there needs to be a full-time person who has the authority to make decisions, but, like Ursin, she is not sure whether to hold

Titanic survivors recall the tragedy

By Ian Donnis
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Eva Heart was 7 years old when she and her parents traveled aboard the $7.5 million luxury passenger liner Titanic on its maiden voyage across the Atlantic Ocean.

"My mother didn't go to bed at all because she had a premonition of danger," Heart, 62, recalled. "She woke up my father and we got up on the deck very quickly. At first, there wasn't any sign of panic."

Her father "said they were going to launch the lifeboats, but just as a precaution," said the Romford, England, resident. She and her mother got into one of the lifeboats, "but my father didn't follow us into the boat and we never saw him again."

The Titanic struck an iceberg at 11:40 p.m. on April 14, 1912, its fifth night on a seven day crossing and sank nearly three hours later about 360 miles off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland.

"It's all so horrible," Heart said Thursday, reflecting on the 1,512 lives lost. "It's been with me ever since. I never forgot a moment. I think the most horrible thing was the sound of people drowning. It got very silent after a while."

Heart recalled getting picked up by the British-registered Carpathia the next morning, "after we'd been in the lifeboat watching all the horror of the ship sinking. I was thankful that I was still alive."

Heart was one of the survivors who regaled Titanic buffs with chilling tales of the ill-fated trip as the largest gathering of Titanic enthusiasts.

surviving passengers in 30 years got under way Thursday.

The Springfield-based Titanic Historical Society's four-day convention is expected to draw 11 people who were passengers on the ship and hundreds of enthusiasts, whose interest has swelled in recent years with the discovery of the legendary wreck, said Edward S. Kamuda, the group's president.

Society historian Don Lynch said the gathering of survivors is the largest since a 1958 meeting in Southampton, England. The ship, nearly as long as three football fields, was the most expensive ship of its day, said Lynch.

Kamuda said the ocean liner sank with its lifeboats half empty because people thought the Titanic was unsinkable and did not want to leave the warmth of the ship.

Survivors, who were saved from drowning or freezing to death in the icy waters by scrambling into lifeboats, are expected to gather at the Copley Plaza Hotel from France, Sweden, England and the United States, Kamuda said.

The ship had left from Southampton, England, and made stops in Cherbourg, France, and Queenstown, Ireland, before departing for New York.

About 20 of the original 705 survivors are still living, Lynch said. He said the Titanic's infamous record as the worst maritime disaster in history was eclipsed by the sinking of a ferry in the Philippines last year.

The survivors hold dual status as witnesses to a spectacular catastrophe and celebrities to Titanic enthusiasts.

Carothers raps Bush

NORWALK (AP) — While Vice President George Bush was touting his environmental record, a former member of the Reagan administration criticized it, calling it "voodoo environmental protection."

State Environmental Protection Department Commissioner Leslie Carothers, a former deputy regional administrator in the Reagan administration's Environmental Protection Agency, ridiculed Bush's promise to protect the environment.

"Where was George during the last eight years when his administration set out to destroy the EPA?" Carothers demanded Thursday. "It's Bush is a closet environmentalist. I wish that he has come out a lot sooner."

"Bush's brand of voodoo environmental protection will do as much for the Long Island Sound as voodoo economics has for the federal deficit and trade deficit," she said.

Teen jailed in death

HARTFORD (AP) — A 17-year-old Hartford youth has received a 26-year prison term for the random "drive-by" shooting death of a state Correction Department guard last year.

Judge Salvatore F. Arena imposed the plea-bargain sentence on Eddie Ramirez Thursday in Hartford Superior Court. Ramirez pleaded guilty to manslaughter and first-degree assault in July.

He was convicted in the killing of Matthew Cauley, 27, an off-duty guard who was standing on a Hartford street corner when gunned down Sept. 17, 1987.

Happy ending near

ANSONIA (AP) — A Connecticut congressman has joined the fight to bring a happy ending to a love story pitting pregnant Polish woman against the federal government.

Elizabeth Piechocki, who is expecting her first child Oct. 3, has enlisted the help of U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr. in trying to convince U.S. officials to allow her husband, Andrzej, to join her in the United States before she gives birth.

"America is a country that cares about its people," Mrs. Piechocki, 27, told The Evening Sentinel of Ansonia on Wednesday. "I ask, why, when I want to be one of its people, I cannot easily have a normal life?"

Hank Price, a spokesman for U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., said that part of the problem is that Piechocki is applying for permanent resident status, which takes longer than a temporary visa to obtain.

Man shoots co-worker

WALLINGFORD (AP) — A 22-year-old New Haven man was shot twice by a co-worker at Cir-Tek Inc. in Wallingford and police say they are still searching for a motive.

The victim, Rodolfo Tapia of New Haven, was listed in critical condition at Hartford Hospital early today.

Wallingford police said Tapia was leaving the Cir-Tek building around 11:30 a.m. Thursday on lunch break when he was shot twice by a man identified as Raul Ramon Sr., 41, of New Haven.

Kelly wants 'no-knock'

HARTFORD (AP) — The chief state's attorney wants to protect police and evidence by asking the legislature to authorize police with search warrants not to knock before entering dwellings while investigating drug cases.

Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly said Thursday that he doesn't want an across-the-board policy of no-knock searches.

"We are saying (legislators) should carve out an exception in drug cases because of the potential risk to police officers and easy destruction of evidence in these cases," Kelly said.

Yonkers fines remain

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has refused to halt a mounting daily fines against the city for blocking a federal housing desegregation plan, a decision the mayor says could cause Yonkers "to plummet to bankruptcy."

But in a ruling issued Thursday night, the court temporarily spared the four city councilmen who oppose the plan from going to jail until they have time to ask formally that their cases be fully reviewed.

U.S. Supreme Court spokeswoman Toni House said.

The justices stayed a lower court ruling that had upheld contempt citations against the four councilmen, who had faced a restitution of $500-a-day fines and the start of jail terms this weekend.

House arrest changes

MONTEPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Vermont no longer will let convicted drug dealers take part in a house arrest program under which John Zaccaro Jr. is spending his four-month cocaine trafficking term in a $1,500-a-month luxury apartment.

"Hallelujah!" said Addison County States Attorney John Quinn upon learning of Gov. Madeleine Kunin's announcement Thursday.

State troopers say Merrill in Toronto

HARTFORD (AP) — State police say they are closing in on one of the state's most notorious criminals, who has eluded them since escaping from state prison last year, authorities said.

Merrill, 41, is living and working in the Toronto, Canada area. Merrill, who escaped from Somers State Prison on August 22, 1987, had been awaiting trial on numerous charges, including charges in the sexual assault and beating of a 55-year-old South Windsor woman.

The first substantial lead in locating Merrill resulted from the July 10 broadcast of Fox Television's "America's Most Wanted," which also airs in Canada. The show provides details of Merrill's background, alleged crimes, and sightings.

Toronto authorities notified state police in mid-August that Merrill was tentatively identified in Toronto, state police said. A follow-up investigation confirmed that Merrill was living and working there. Toronto authorities, who say Merrill is a suspect in the slaying of a Toronto and the Peterboro of the province of Ontario, have obtained an arrest warrant for him, police said.

Merrill so far has eluded a police dragnet that extended from Canada to Mexico. State police and Toronto authorities, who are conducting a joint investigation, expect to arrest him soon.

Merrill was questioned last year about the March 7, 1987, killing of Bernice B. Martin in Manchester, but he was ruled out as a suspect. Life as an escapee is not new to Merrill. He first escaped on Christmas Day 1967. After placing a dummy in his bed, he scaled the fence at the former state prison farm in Enfield and went to his mother's home in Tolland, where he was wounded and escaped.

In 1968, he escaped from three prison guards by using a handgun and handcuff key his mother had smuggled him in a jar of peanut butter, authorities said.

State police out in force for weekend

HARTFORD (AP) — State police say motorists may see more of them this weekend because of a nationwide program designed to stop drunken driving and speeding.

The program, called Operation CARE, for Combined Accident Reduction Effort, is designed to promote safe driving by making police more visible across the country, state police said.

The Labor Day weekend officially begins at 6 p.m. today and runs until midnight Monday.

State police said that over the Labor Day weekend last year they made 2,015 motor-vehicle arrests.

Motorists traveling state highways and byways can also look for lower gas prices, according to Michael D. Klein, a spokesman for AAA Automobile Club of Hartford.

He said the average price per gallon for regular gasoline will be $1.66 this year, down a nickel from last year. The average price for unleaded gas will be $1.16, down 3 cents from last year.

The average price for premium or super unleaded will be $1.27, down 4 cents and diesel fuel will be $1.24 per gallon, up 5 cents from last year.

Forecasters say Connecticut residents can expect a mixed bag weather-wise over the weekend. Showers are possible for late Saturday and Sunday before fair weather returns Monday.

Temperatures Saturday should reach 85 degrees, and remain between 75 and 80 degrees on Sunday and Monday, forecasters said.

420-520 deaths estimated
CHICAGO (AP) — The three-day Labor Day weekend could result in 420 to 520 traffic deaths, the National Safety Council says.

For counting purposes, the holiday begins at 6 p.m. local time, today and ends at midnight Monday.

Last year, 441 people died during the Labor Day weekend. The highest toll for the holiday was logged in 1968, when 688 people were killed.

State education chief fears sharp cuts in school funding

HARTFORD (AP) — As the state struggles to balance its budget, state Education Commissioner Gerald N. Tirozzi is hoping to prevent sharp cuts in school funding.

Tirozzi called on the state General Assembly on Thursday not to destroy recent gains in education by sharply reducing school funding.

Gov. William A. O'Neill said later in the day that was unlikely because "the state has commitments to the children of the state."

At his annual back-to-school news conference, Tirozzi said Connecticut had made "a solid investment" in education and that as the state's financial picture changes, 1988-89 is the year to "make it work."

Derby scrambles to pay teachers

DERBY (AP) — Derby officials are scrambling to find means to pay seven school teachers who were ordered reinstated by a Superior Court judge.

Judge Norris L. O'Neill issued a temporary restraining order on behalf of the state Board of Education after the local school board laid off 11 of the system's 97 teachers and eliminated classes in art, music, home economics and industrial art.

The local school board contended the cuts were necessary because it was unable to get the $7 million it needs to run the system from the town's Board of Apportionment and Taxation.

But school officials say there still isn't enough money available to meet their expenditures.

"That is really a question not within the responsibility of the board of education as we view the court order," Superintendent of Schools Michael S. Ippolito said.

Tax board member William Conlon said: "It won't come from the taxpayers."

Attempts during this year's session to put an outright ban on busing to achieve racial balance were unsuccessful.

Public hearings are planned before any change in the law is approved.

"We are committed to promoting equity for each and every child, and we want to continue to address the problem of racial isolation and advance quality integration programs," Tirozzi said.

He said teacher salaries in Connecticut rank fourth in the nation, with the average salary now $36,701. By the end of the 1988-89 year, he said Connecticut may be ranked third.

The highest minimum salary in the state is now $27,500 in New Britain, the commissioner said.

The situation might be clarified during a Sept. 22 court hearing when O'Neill determines whether the own has complied with a temporary restraining order he issued.

The state Board of Education could also decide to intervene, calling for specific changes and improvements in the system.

School budgets have risen sharply in Derby partly because of increases in teachers pay.

ties have said the major sticking point is over the union's demand for lifetime Blue Cross coverage.

Talks were scheduled in Little Compton between representatives of the School Department and the town's 31 teachers at 4:30 p.m. today. Their last session broke off about 3:20 a.m. Thursday with no settlement.

In Cranston, where 8,000 students are set to begin school Sept. 7, a bargaining session began Thursday about 4 p.m. Authorities, who say Merrill is a suspect in the slaying of a Toronto and the Peterboro of the province of Ontario, have obtained an arrest warrant for him, police said.

Merrill so far has eluded a police dragnet that extended from Canada to Mexico. State police and Toronto authorities, who are conducting a joint investigation, expect to arrest him soon.

OPINION

Aging IOUs would slice U.S. deficit

WASHINGTON — By collecting some aging IOUs, the U.S. government could shrink the budget deficit by half, without raising taxes or cutting spending. All it would have to do is sell old war bonds, some dating as far back as World War I.

The United States is owed a gargantuan $91 billion in debt from foreign countries — ones that are unlikely to ever be fully recovered. That broke the record for the largest amount of debt.

Foreign governments borrowed $12.4 billion from the United States during World War I. Accrued interest on those loans is $17.8 billion for a total debt of $30.2 billion from that war. But some of the debtors have made payments amounting to $2.8 billion, leaving $27.4 billion still owed and most of it delinquent.

The nations owing us the most are Great Britain ($12.5 billion), France ($9.1 billion) and Italy ($2.7 billion). Other nations of $2.2 billion or more are Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Greece and Liberia.

The national advisory council on international monetary and financial policies summarizes the problem. Germany's repayment is tied to the money Germany owes other countries stemming from the war. The amount was dictated by the victorious nations in the Treaty of Versailles.

The Lend-Lease Act of 1941 gave the president the power to assist another country in its defense. If the defense seemed vital to U.S. security, that act is the source of most of the World War II debt.

The five biggest foreign welfare cases have been Iraq, Egypt, Turkey, India and Pakistan. The debts range from Israel's $8.5 billion to Pakistan's $1.9 billion. Together, those five nations account for about 62.3 percent of the $33.4 billion of the principal owed under the various foreign assistance legislation.

America has been a generous banker to the world but has not been a very thorough collection agent, especially when extraordinary political circumstances get in the way. For that reason, the government will always find it easier to go back to the taxpayers for more rather than lean on foreign countries to pay their debts.

Another problem we have not discussed concerns a local tradition more than half a century old. It is different for the thousands of runners, competing each year in Manchester's famed Thanksgiving Day Road Race?

Over the years, pictures of the road race show up to 7,000 runners jamming Main Street from (existing) curb to curb in a group hundreds of feet long as they begin the race in front of St. James Church, also the finish line. Will they be able to swerve around the baubles as they strive to win? Will the "flat" road race develop into a "hurdle" competition as runners try to pass those in front of them who may be obscuring the view? If so, it seems a pity.

Why does Manchester's government avoid a referendum on the Main Street project? Could it be because its advocates know it is full of flaws and suspect the voters may know this? It will involve millions of dollars. Whether they are federal, state or local, they all come from the taxpayers. The taxpayers deserve better planning.

What's the matter with kids today?

"What's the matter with kids today?" asked Mr. McAlfee in "Eye Bye Birdie." The question is not a new one, of course, but the answers do change from time to time.

This year, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has conducted a survey, and the results are disheartening. Kids today know how AIDS is caught, but they don't know how to avoid other sexually transmitted diseases. Many drink too much, consume illegal drugs, eat an unbalanced diet, neglect to wear seat belts and ride as passengers with drivers who are drunk.

McAlfee was worried about them as now, parents themselves. Indeed, the Department of Health and Human Services may console itself with the thought that today's kids are likely to turn out as well as today's parents have done — you know, those older folks who never drink too much, don't take drugs, drive only when sober, wear their galoshes, say "sir" and "ma'am," and have never considered suicide.

Fortunately, time can work wonders, and yesterday's delinquent may be today's ophthalmologist. "Eye Bye Birdie," after all, was produced 28 years ago, and the kids Mr.

Those bubbles are 'baubles'

To the Editor:

After spending much of this long, hot summer researching key aspects of Manchester's plan to rebuild Main Street from Center Street to the Charter Oak Street/Hartford Road intersection, I can report that there are costly flaws in the plan. Most of what I will say is based on experience in other communities: East Hartford, Middletown, Putnam and Southbridge, Mass. We also have information from the National Main Street Center in Washington, D.C.

Two major points are these: Manchester plans to install more than 25 "bump-outs," "bubbles" or "neck-downs" — curved, curbed units jutting about 20 feet from either side of Main Street's sidewalk curbing, at side-street intersections, into the traveled portion of Main Street roadway. They will cut the traveled area of Main Street from its present 30-30 feet to about 48 feet. They will cost thousands of dollars to install and may cost additional thousands to remove. All the communities having them report serious problems with the bubbles. The problems are costly, continuing.

When informed that Manchester plans to have one-way traffic on Main Street during most of the reconstruction period — up to three years by my estimate — municipal officials in all these communities said they could not understand this. One summed it up when he said, "They are likely to do permanent injury to the businesses located along that section of Main Street." Their consensus was that potential customers for those Main Street businesses will avoid Main Street during reconstruction — because of one-way traffic for seven years of a mile and during those years would become accustomed permanently to buying elsewhere.

Here is the experience of other towns with the "bubbles," which I call "baubles." (Webster's New World Dictionary defines baubles as "showy but worthless or useless" things.) You might visualize these as being like a Tishhook, or the letter "J," with the straight section extending from the side-street curb and the curved part intruding about 20 feet into the Main Street roadway. These baubles would define parking areas, bus stops and the like.

An official at the National Main Street Center said towns have used these bump-outs to provide space for planting trees where sidewalks are narrow and/or to effectively narrow a wide Main Street to shorten the distance a pedestrian must cross. But that same person said she had never heard of any bump-outs as big as the 20-foot-wide baubles planned by Manchester. And an East Hartford official said, ironically, that even with their bump-outs (only 8 feet wide) pedestrians are reported feeling threatened and isolated when standing on a bump-out within a moving stream of traffic flowing around them.

LET'S CONSIDER their experience, town by town: East Hartford. That town had nine bump-outs installed some years ago on the east side of Main Street south of its intersection with Burnside Avenue. Because of bad experience, the baubles have just been removed, and the straight sidewalk curbs are to be re-installed. Removal cost: $2,000 so far, with an estimated $4,000 to $6,000 more to come. Prone to leading to removal, and cancellation of plans to install similar bump-outs on the west side of Main Street, were: snowplows, water trapped by the bump-outs which freezes to dangerous ice in winter; inability of mechanical sweepers to negotiate the bump-out areas so hand sweeping has to be used; snowplow damage from hitting hidden bump-outs in deep snow; and car accidents. An East Hartford official said, "I'd like to remind you that problems such as plowing, sweeping, accidents, etc., lead to added annual costs for maintenance. These can amount to thousands of dollars every year."

Middletown. That town had planned, some years ago, to install baubles on both sides of a three-block section of the northern end of the Main Street business district. Wisely, the town denied to rely instead on painted lines and other measures for signifying or protecting parking areas and pedestrian crosswalks. Outspoken opposition at a public hearing brought this change, sparing Middletown the headaches reported by other communities. One Middletown official said of bump-outs: "They may be great in Florida or California, but not in the Northeast." This same comment was echoed in East Hartford, Putnam and Southbridge.

Putnam. This town installed a few "bubbles," as they called them, on that section of Main Street. (Cause and effect may be hard to demonstrate but there are empty stores and a large empty building on that section of Putnam's Main Street.) The mayor says the bubbles on the west side of Main Street will be removed and two-way traffic restored. Cost: at least $10,000 for removal. And the mayor offered to send the bubble rubber to Manchester if this town wants it. Added snowplowing costs — in time, and damage to plows from bubbles hidden in snow — added sweeping costs and storm water drainage problems were reported in Putnam as related to the bubbles. Southbridge. That community has had bubbles/bump-outs extending about 10 feet into a section of downtown Main Street on both sides at several side-street intersections for several years. Nearly every one of the baubles has a vertical, foot-square block of granite about four feet high anchored on a concrete base marking it; these are to keep autos and trucks from impinging on the bubbles. Young macho males find the blocks a challenge and work on breaking the granite loose, often successfully. Loose blocks of that size can be a hazard, since they weigh hundreds of pounds and can fall anywhere.

Southbridge also found that storm water may not drain properly because of the baubles and sometimes freezes on the sidewalks intended to give access for wheelchairs. The baubles can increase pedestrian hazards rather than heightening safety. Southbridge reported the added annual costs for snowplowing, sweeping, etc., mentioned in other communities with baubles.

I witnessed another bauble-caused problem in Southbridge. Since the baubles jut into the roadway, they force trailer trucks to swing wide to the left just before making a right-hand turn. An official at the National Main Street Center said this "increase in truck turning radius" problem has been a general one with bump-outs or "neck-downs" reported by many communities. Thus, they can make traffic problems worse, not better.

Most officials in the towns I'm discussing agreed that the baubles, designed to delimit parking zones, also cost parking spaces. In Manchester I estimate these baubles will result in the removal of about 80 parking spaces from Main Street. Manchester officials say there will be that many fewer when Main Street reconstruction is finished; they will be located elsewhere but no longer as conveniently for shoppers as the ones being replaced.

LET'S NOW CONSIDER the one-way traffic plan during reconstruction. Officials in other towns were unanimous; they avoided having one-way traffic on Main Street during reconstruction at all costs. Middletown, which already had a wide Main Street, as does Manchester, drafted requirements to permit two-way traffic at all times during reconstruction, working on one side or the other and shifting two-way traffic to the opposite side.

One town I don't know of is Middletown spokesman said, "that traffic shifted to other streets resulted in development" around the "detour" streets. Often this was unplanned and caused unforeseen problems. Middletown

GATOR BY THE TAIL — The Smith brothers, from left, Howie, Bryan and Norman, use a "catch pole" to snare a six-foot alligator in the Miami Canal in Florida's western Broward County late Thursday. Florida's first alligator hunt in 26 years began at sundown Thursday. The Smiths caught two alligators in the first day of hunting.

Lieutenant cleared in death

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A "gun-bo" Navy lieutenant accused of dereliction of duty in the drowning of a rescue-swimmer trainee was acquitted in a court-martial he sought in an effort to exonerate himself.

"All I can say is the military (justice) system worked," a smiling Lt. Thomas Torchia said after the verdict Thursday night. "The system that charged me found me innocent."

A four-officer panel found the 32-year-old Princeton, Ill., man innocent of two counts of dereliction of duty after deliberating 3 1/2 hours in the weeklong trial. Torchia was in charge of the Navy Rescue Swimmer School at the Pensacola Naval Air Station when Airman Recruit Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis., died March 2 in a training pool.

Sasso to rejoin Dukakis

Democrat Michael Dukakis, trying to regain momentum for his presidential drive, today planned to bring back into his staff the campaign manager who admitted helping torpedo the bid of party rival Joe Biden, a campaign source said.

A Dukakis source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Dukakis plans to announce that former campaign manager John Sasso will return to the campaign as vice chairman. Sasso, who engineered Dukakis's successful campaign to recapture the Massachusetts governorship after a term out of office, directed Dukakis's presidential campaign until resigning in September 1987.

Protesters take over towns

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of anti-government protesters marched today through major cities, and demonstrators took over dozens of towns across the country, sources said. Students and Buddhist monks led the protesters in Moulmein, 50 miles east of the capital of Rangoon, a Western diplomat said. He said some protesters occupied local government buildings.

Walesa mets striking miners

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa met today with striking miners in southwestern Poland to persuade them to return to work, and hundreds of port workers in Gdansk protested a management decision to fire strikers. Five other enterprises remained on strike after Walesa appealed for an end to the work stoppages that began Aug. 16. Walesa said ending the strikes would open the way for talks with the government on workers' demands, including legalization of Solidarity.

Secret satellite launched

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A Titan rocket today propelled into space a secret military payload that a civilian expert identified as a satellite capable of eavesdropping on Soviet military and diplomatic communications. The powerful, 16-story Titan 34D, scoring its third straight success after being grounded for 18 months, thundered from its launch pad at 8:35 a.m.

The Air Force did not announce the launch in advance, which has been its practice on military space flights, and afterward said only that the Titan 34D, "carrying a classified military payload," was successfully launched.

Delta jet's flap handle in wrong place

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Investigators are pointing to possible "flame or vapor" coming from the left engine thrust and wing flaps before it crashed on takeoff, and they hope to get answers from the crew and their recorded cockpit conversations.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators said Thursday a flap indicator handle in the wrecked cockpit was found in the wrong position for most takeoffs, raising questions whether the plane's wing flaps were set properly.

Incorrectly set flaps led to the fatal crash of a Northwest Airlines flight last summer. The Delta Air Lines flight's indicator handle, however, could have been accidentally jarred during or after the crash, investigators said.

The Boeing 727 got no more than 30 feet off the runway at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport before it crashed Wednesday, witnesses told the NTSB. Thirteen people were killed.

The plane's flight engineer, Steven M. Judd, told investigators that right after the plane took off the crew "began experiencing problems keeping the plane stable and in the air." The New York Times reports in today's edition.

"Just before the crash, there was some talk of engine problems," Judd added, according to the Times, which attributed the pilot's statement Wednesday to an anonymous source.

Judd and the two other members of the cockpit crew remained hospitalized today. Investigators said they had not recovered sufficiently to undergo full-scale debriefings, but that they hoped to interview First Officer Wilson Kirkland today.

Control tower personnel said the jet may have taken longer than usual to become airborne and that it may have lifted off at a sharper angle than is considered normal, the investigators said.

The flap handle, on the console between the pilot and the first officer, indicates whether the flaps are in the proper position to provide the lift needed for takeoff. Dickinson said the handle was found in the up position, opposite where it should be for most takeoffs.

But he said the handle could have been pushed into the wrong position by the impact or during the evacuation of the crew. "It could have been kicked. It could have been moved. It could have been any number of things," Dickinson said.

Flight crews of nearby planes told investigators they had "no clear indication of the flap or slat positions," he said. The same flight Thursday from Dallas-Fort Worth to Salt Lake City was aborted when the pilot detected a problem with his plane, another Boeing 727. Most of the 462 passengers, including six survivors of the crash Wednesday, left about two hours later on another jet, Delta said.

Industry respects P&W's JT8D engine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators examining the Pratt & Whitney JT8D engine as a possible cause of Wednesday's Delta Air Lines crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the government had named the JT8D as contributing to two major accidents that occurred in 1985.

On Thursday, National Transportation Safety Board member Lee Dickinson said recordings of cockpit conversations on Flight 1141 before the accident revealed discussion of engine problems and noises indicating a stall may have been in flames.

Witnesses reported seeing flames streaming from an engine just before the crash. Pratt & Whitney officials said they are also used on many Boeing 737s and McDonnell Douglas DC-9s.

Even before Delta Flight 1141 plunged to the ground Wednesday shortly after takeoff from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the government had named the JT8D as contributing to two major accidents that occurred in 1985.

On Thursday, National Transportation Safety Board member Lee Dickinson said recordings of cockpit conversations on Flight 1141 before the accident revealed discussion of engine problems and noises indicating a stall may have been in flames.

Witnesses reported seeing flames streaming from an engine just before the crash. Pratt & Whitney officials said they are also used on many Boeing 737s and McDonnell Douglas DC-9s.

addition, McDonnell Douglas MD-80s use JT8D-200s, an advanced model of the engine.

Pratt & Whitney estimates that in all, the engines have flown more than 400 million hours in nearly a quarter-century of service.

"For an engine to be around for 25 years is a lot of things," he said. "But problems with the JT8D have been blamed by government officials as contributing to two major air accidents in 1985.

In Manchester, England, in August of that year, the engine's combustion chamber cracked and burned through on a British Air-Tours jetliner during takeoff. Fifty-five people died when the plane caught fire.

Little chance of rain to ease fires in West

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Meteorologist Milo Radulovich crawls out of his pup tent each morning at 4 to see if the weather will bring any relief to firefighters working in the second phase of Yellowstone.

But the prognosis, here and across much of the tinder-dry West, is bleak on the eve of Labor Day weekend after a drought-plagued summer that has produced the most devastating fires in the park's history.

"We're dead in the water through the 10th of September," Radulovich said Thursday. He picked up a national weather chart and pointed toward the Pacific. No major storms were in sight to bring moisture to the parched forests of Wyoming and Montana, and temperatures were expected to be above normal, perhaps in the 90s, for at least the next five days.

The only bright spot: Calm winds were expected, which could limit the spread of flames. The weather outlook means more long days for firefighters battling six major blazes in Yellowstone, which have charred more than a half-million acres of the 2.2 million-acre park this summer.

Yellowstone reopened its south gate Thursday for the first time in almost two weeks, meaning all five park gates were usable. All park roads also were open, though officials said worsening fire conditions could cause temporary closures.

Elsewhere in the West, fires continued to burn woodland and brush in Montana, Utah, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and California. Weather determines if a fire will crackle quietly along the forest floor or rage explosively through the tree tops. Forecasters like Radulovich try to keep firefighters a few steps ahead of Mother Nature.

He is one of about 20 National Weather Service forecasters who specialize in "meso-meteorology" — the art and science of making pinpoint predictions based on broad-brush weather charts. "We take those, together with observations in the field, and bring it down to the scale of 100,000 acres," he said.

Based in Sacramento, Calif., Radulovich, 60, is assigned to western Yellowstone's North Fork fire, which has burned more than 109,000 acres since it entered the park July 23. His early start each day gives him a chance to review the latest national weather map, which comes in via a small satellite dish next to his tent.

His office, a few steps away, is the cab of a rental truck parked in the drop of a budding firefighters camp at Yellowstone's Madison Campground. Radulovich makes his predictions after checking instruments that monitor temperature, humidity, wind speed and direction. He and his assistant, Jeanne Hoadley, work closely with Dave Thomas, a U.S. Forest Service fire management officer who compares weather conditions with what he knows about the forest's dryness. They brief firefighting officials at 6 a.m., then return to the van to prepare the next forecast.

FCC OKs rules for enhanced TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The broadcast and electronics industries are praising the Federal Communications Commission's endorsement of advanced television systems with enhanced sound and picture quality.

The FCC on Thursday declared the new systems in the public interest and approved some preliminary rules for bringing them to American homes. But the commission said many technical and procedural problems still must be ironed out.

The "high definition" TV systems will be designed to have the clarity of movie film and the sound of compact discs. They probably will not be available from the U.S. broadcast industry before 1993, according to an official of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Michael Rau, the NAB's vice president for science and technology, said the FCC made a "strong commitment to bring advanced TV to the public. They seem to reaffirm support for free, over-the-air broadcasting."

"But the commission must solve the difficulties of delivering the system over broadcast outlets."

In a series of preliminary rulings, the FCC said: "Existing broadcasters and stations are best equipped to bring the new system to viewers. Advanced television programs must be received on existing television sets so viewers won't have to replace their equipment."

"If additional frequency space is needed, it should be found within existing VHF and UHF television bands. The FCC found that looking for frequencies outside those bands would delay the service, and noted that bands now suitable for the systems are in use for other purposes."

Mark Rosenker, spokesman for the Electronics Industry Association, said his group of electronics manufacturers is "pleased that the FCC's decision... has begun to define the complex issues regarding high definition television so that the American public will be able to enjoy the benefits... within a relatively short period."

The FCC sought public comment on three options for using the airwaves for high definition TV. There would be a 60-day comment period and 30 days for replies.

FCC Chairman Dennis R. Patrick and Commissioner Patricia Diaz Dennis supported all the commission's findings and proposed options. Commissioner James H. Quello dissented on grounds the commission acted prematurely.

Quello said the FCC based its preliminary findings on computer projections and should have waited until the technology was tested and developed.

His view was supported by Ms. Dennis, who said: "Some urge us to move more slowly, to wait for more evidence before acting. That is tempting... but delay creates significant costs."

Although Patrick said the preliminary rulings would "put the U.S. in the forefront of the international quest for new TV technology," the Japanese have been working on an advanced system for two decades.

They plan to offer a preview with broadcasts of the summer Olympics in high definition TV sets in about 50 big-city department stores throughout Japan.

The picture on a standard television set in the United States is produced by a signal that scans more than 200,000 dots on 525 lines. The Japanese system has 1,125 scanning lines.

UI's investors to cover Seabrook readiness cost

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Seabrook nuclear plant officials say a major owner's plan to come up with $30 million to cover monthly plant maintenance costs shows that the project's joint owners remain committed and innovative.

United Illuminating Co., Seabrook's second-largest owner, said it has "assembled investors" who will cover monthly costs from November until 1990 that will be owed by the Massachusetts Municipal Wholesale Electric Co.

The monthly expenses are the cost of keeping the $5.6 billion plant ready to operate. Though completed, Seabrook lacks an operating license due to evacuation planning problems.

"This is another effort by the joint owners to continue funding past this year," Ron Sher, spokesman for New Hampshire Yankee, Seabrook's builder, said Thursday. "It's good for the project."

The names of the investors will not be revealed until the documents are filed with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission by Sept. 15, said Margaret Melady, a UI spokeswoman at the company's Bridgeport, Conn. headquarters.

Melady said Thursday that UI is not one of the investors and has no intention of increasing its 17.5 percent Seabrook share.

MMWEC, a Ludlow, Mass.-based public corporation comprising 36 utility companies — and Seabrook's fourth-largest owner with 11.6 percent — decided in June not to provide additional support to Seabrook.

Earlier this week, Northeast Utilities announced that its subsidiary, Connecticut Light & Power, will make $5 million worth of monthly payments through November for MMWEC.

UI's initiative was noted in a document filed with the NRC by Public Service Company of New Hampshire, Seabrook's lead owner with 36 percent.

Public Service said UI's investors "will provide the project with up to $30 million of additional funds as MMWEC's payments fall due between November 30, 1988 and December 31, 1989."

The document was part of an answer from Public Service to the NRC, which had requested Public Service to show that Seabrook's joint owners are financially capable of operating Seabrook at low power, or permanently shutting down the plant and maintaining the plant safely following low-power operation.

Public Service in January filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection after being buried in its $2.1 billion Seabrook investment.

Report knocks OSHA record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has failed to enforce laws protecting the nation's workers, a failure contributing to thousands of workplace deaths, a critic of the federal agency says.

A report being released today by the Chicago-based National Safe Workplace Institute concluded that OSHA's ineffectiveness and unwillingness to be tough with violators has resulted in more than 9,000 avoidable workplace fatalities since 1981.

However, statisticians and the federal agency disputed the figure and said on-the-job deaths have declined sharply during the 1980s.

"This report represents a selective use of statistics," OSHA's chief spokesman, Terry Mikelson, said.

Big retailers in a slump

A hoped-for August recovery failed to materialize for the nation's biggest general retailers, according to sales figures released Thursday.

Wall Street analysts differed on what caused the disappointing results, with some blaming hot weather and others citing women's continued uncertainty about fashions.

The nation's largest retailer, Sears, Roebuck and Co., said its sales for the four weeks ended Aug. 27 totaled $2.45 billion, up from $2.3 billion.

K mart Corp. reported sales for the four weeks ended Aug. 24 of $1.97 billion, up from $1.85 billion.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. reported sales of $1.69 billion for the month of August, up from $1.36 billion.

J. C. Penney Co. said sales for the four weeks ended Aug. 27 totaled $1.03 billion, down from $1.05 billion.

Tom Curley has big plans for Pro Stock in 1989

Southern New England Pro Stock Late Model competitions could be in for a Pro Stock 1988 season if Tom Curley of the ACT Coors Tour has his way. Curley's Waterbury, Vt.-based club announced it will sanction five major Pro Stock races in 1989. The victory surfaced at the Leo USA Speedway in New Hampshire last weekend. Part of the announcement centered around a $150,000 point fund for the series which we think is overly ambitious and Curley could go with a lot less money in the initial year. He's got a knack for overextending himself.

Motorsports

Lou Modestino

Speculation is that the five tracks will be the Thunder Road Speedway in Vermont, Beech Ridge in Scarborough, Me., Clearmont and Leo USA in New Hampshire and the Seakonk oval in Massachusetts. All are part of Curley's ACT tour circuit and are solidly in the Curley camp while the other New England ovals are affiliated with NASCAR.

Madison's Robbie Moroso turns 20 years old September 26 and is well on his way to a successful career on the NASCAR scene. He's already won a Bunch pole and a Beach Grand National race. He's the youngest driver to accomplish that feat. Moroso is being eyed by '89 Winston Cup, too, and could be steering an Olds Cutler on that circuit which will be backed by his dad, Dick Moroso, and the family firm, Moroso Racing Products of Guilford.

Riverside Speedway and the New London-Waterford Speedway both go with Modified events on Saturday night. Pro Stocks also headline the card at Seakonk Speedway that same night. Seakonk comes back with a Crasharama show on Sunday at 6 p.m. featuring a Demo Derby. Figure 8 races, Skydivers and Fireworks. Friday's action at the Thompson Speedway has their Family Fun night starting at 6 p.m. Late Model Stockers, a Demo Derby and Fireworks are on the card there. On Monday afternoon, at 1 p.m., the Stafford will be a 100-lap race for the Small Block Modifieds and a 50-lapper for the Late Model Stockers. Mike and Ted Christopher of Plainville, Ho Gunning of Bethlehem, and Bob Potter of Bradford are favorites to take the Small Block Modified event.

Lou Modestino, based in Stoughton, Mass., writes a weekly syndicated column about auto racing in New England.

Locals on Eastern teams

WILLIMANTIC — Eastern Connecticut State University men's and women's soccer teams have a local favor to them in 1988. Manchester High graduate Jen Faber and Coventry High grad Anna Werfel are freshmen members of the women's team. The men's team includes junior tri-captain Pat Lonergan, an East Catholic high grad, freshman goalkeeper Ron Gardner from Coventry High and Manchester High graduates Nick Caccese and Joe LaRosa. The latter is a freshman defender and Caccese a sophomore forward.

King, Smith suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals linebacker Emanuel King and cornerback Daryl Smith were suspended for 30 days by the NFL for violating the league's substance abuse policy. King was suspended for 30 days and Smith for 15 days. Both were notified that they have been placed on the club's non-football illness list for at least 30 days.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Pitchers Dan Schatzeder and Les Straker, two members of the Twins' World Series champions, joined the club Thursday from the Twins' top farm club in Portland, Ore.

Becker, Mac in early exits

By Barry Wilner, The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Bye-bye Boom Boom. Hit the road, Mac. Boris Becker, who never has won a U.S. Open, and John McEnroe, who looks like he might never win another one, were ousted from the tournament Thursday by a pair of Australians.

Darren Cahill, ranked 33rd in the world, and Steve Foster did it. Becker, the fifth seed from West Germany, who hasn't won a Grand Slam title since Wimbledon in 1976, was ousted from the tournament Thursday by a pair of Australians.

Anyone could see that he was pretty injured," said Cahill, who has worked with Becker in England before Wimbledon. "He gave me a little bit of a stink. I chose (Pat) Cash to win Wimbledon, and (Becker) said that I wasn't that good a player."

"I was very keyed up to play this match. I wanted to win very much. Mark Woodforde, ranked 36th, took care of four-time Open champion McEnroe, 7-5, 4-6, 6-7 (3-7), 6-3, 6-1. McEnroe, who lost to Woodforde in the Canadian Open last month, looked very ordinary.

"Of course, when Darren won, it lifted me up," Woodforde said. "We grew up together. I thought he could beat Becker, but when I found out, I still was surprised. I felt it Darren can do it. I can do it."

Becker and McEnroe weren't the only seeds ousted. Myself in a five-set match at the Open after nine wins.

"I expected more out of myself in a five-set match at the Open after nine wins. McEnroe's defeat was his first in a five-set match at the Open since 1976. He had lost to Ivan Lendl, the top-seeded man who is seeking an unprecedented fourth consecutive Open crown.

VA makes home loans, not promises

DEAR BRUCE: We have just agreed to buy a home and the Veterans Administration is guaranteeing our loan. We were told that the VA would inspect the house to be certain that it is in good condition and that it is worth what we're paying for it.

Smart Money

Bruce Williams

In view of this, it is necessary to follow your advice about hiring an attorney and having the house inspected by a professional? Since the VA is handling this matter, my husband feels that there is absolutely no reason to spend money on these things.

I know you feel very strongly on this issue, and I have agreed that if you can provide a good reason why we should use inspectors and an attorney, we'll follow your advice. Otherwise, we'll save the money. — R.N., Dallas

DEAR R.N.: I guess you must think that since the government, the almighty government, is a part of this transaction, there is no way you can get strung up. But nothing could be farther from the truth. The VA will inspect the property — that's true — but it only makes a cursory examination of the building and property to determine if it is valuable enough to support the loan. This is in no way meant to supplant an inspection by an engineer or a similarly qualified individual of your choice and at your expense. Such a person would make an in-depth inspection of the physical characteristics of the building — the plumbing, the heating and so forth — and report its condition to you. And clearly you need to hire an attorney competent in real estate law.

as you would if you were getting a conventional mortgage. Buying real estate is a complex proposition, and most attorneys know are themselves represented when they buy or sell. The costs are not excessive, but the grief these expenditures can obviate is considerable.

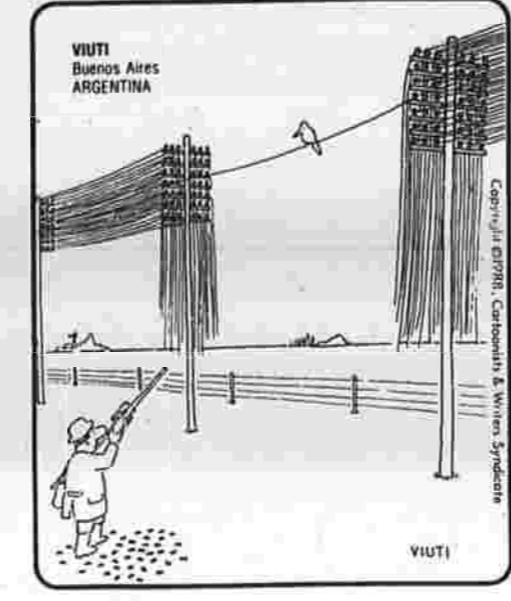

DEAR BRUCE: My husband has worked for the same firm for 11 years. He has moved right along and, although he only has a high-school education, he is now a supervisor. Recently he received another promotion with a good deal more responsibility — but no more money. The company says if he does a good job, his salary will be reviewed in six months. Is that fair? — A.S., Longview, Texas

DEAR A.S.: "Fair" is a subjective term, and no one can accurately determine what is fair and appropriate in a given situation. I believe the company has the right to offer your husband whatever salary it chooses.

In turn, your husband has the right to say "yes, I will accept this at the current salary" or "no, I will not." recognizing that if he declines the opportunity, there is a distinct possibility that they'll find a way to do without him. The company seems to be saying that it wishes to see how well your husband can perform, and it will fairly re-evaluate his situation six months from now. In the event that the re-evaluation is not done in six months, I think your husband should have a serious discussion with his supervisors.

Giving up the ghost
NEW YORK (AP) — "Phantom of the Opera" star Michael Crawford is giving up the ghost, and the lead role in the hit Broadway show will be taken over next month by the singer Timothy Nolen.

Crawford, who hangs up his mask and cape Oct. 8, won the Tony Award for his portrayal of the deformed composer in Andrew Lloyd Webber's lavish musical. He played the Phantom in London and New York, and may star in the Los Angeles production opening next spring.

Ticket won't be claimed

Glanville left the ticket at the Hoosier Dome for James Dean, whose 1955 death in a car crash made the moody, 24-year-old movie star a cult hero.

Eastwood plans 'Bird'
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Clint Eastwood's movie about the life of Charlie "Bird" Parker will have its U.S. premiere in a Kansas City suburb, and two men who performed with the late saxophonist plan to be there.

Clint Eastwood
with Max Roach and Dexter Gordon, organizer Della Young said Thursday. Gordon and Roach played with Parker, a Kansas City native who helped create bebop and died in 1955 at age 34. Gordon himself starred in a jazz movie, "Round Midnight."

WEEKEND

New England Calendar

New London hosts O'Neill centennial

By The Associated Press
Eugene O'Neill, the actor's son who grew up to become one of this country's greatest playwrights, was born Oct. 16, 1898, in New York City. But it was in New London, Conn., that the dramatist spent many summers and where his genius flourished. The quiet seaport will be the setting soon for a myriad of events marking the centennial of O'Neill's birth.

Productions of his works, staged readings, lectures, exhibits and symposiums are among the events planned starting Oct. 2. But there is no need to wait until October to pay homage to the gifted writer. There will be those who want to make a pilgrimage to see the house where O'Neill lived, the O'Neill family summer cottage that was designated a national landmark in 1971.

Weekend regatta at Winnepesaukee
The second annual Grosse Pointe Club Labor Day Weekend Regatta is expected to draw 100 sailing vessels and more than 500 sailors to the regatta on Lake Winnepesaukee today through Monday.

Short takes
These art works whir, click, bonk and whoosh they give off light, conduct water and are electric. And they are fun to watch. It's called "Interaction: Light, Sound, Motion," an exhibit at the Aldrich Museum of Contemporary Art in Ridgefield, Conn. The museum is open Wednesday to Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Information: 203-438-4519.

Mattauk shows 'The Way It Was'
These pictures in a show called "The Way It Was" show a world a half century ago as the nation pulled out of the Great Depression and went off to war in foreign lands. The exhibit through Sept. 11 at the Mattauk Museum in Waterbury, Conn., is from a collection of Connecticut pictures taken chiefly by four photographers between 1937 and 1943.

Turkey season coming in Vermont
Vermont's wild turkey restoration project is a success. The harvest in the Green Mountain State was a record 871 gobblers in the spring season last May. State officials say the fall season will be good also.

Wart virus can cause diseases

DEAR DR. GOTT: Could you tell me about HPV (human papovavirus)? I'm being treated with Eufudex (5 percent). My doctor tells me this virus is new or newly diagnosed.

DEAR READER: Papovavirus is one of a group of viruses that can infect human tissues. The virus is believed to be the cause of common warts, such as in some instances, papovavirus can cause cancer and other serious diseases. For example, patients whose immune systems are depressed may develop a rare neurological disease called progressive multifocal leukoencephalopathy, an untreatable condition marked by rapid nerve malfunction leading to weakness, dementia and death. However, most people who contract papovavirus simply suffer from benign warts — both regular and genital — that are a cosmetic nuisance spread by human-to-human contact. Diagnosis is made by the appearance of the warts or by biopsy.

Data Bank
Approximately 75% of all retirees end up depending on family, friends, and Social Security as their only source of income or support.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have dark skin, enjoy outdoor activities and tans easily, but in the last three years I've developed a puzzling problem. When in the sun for even half an hour, I break out in little bumps under the skin. They itch terribly and last for several days. I use sunscreen and take no medications. What causes this problem?

DEAR READER: You seem to have developed extreme sensitivity to sunlight. This is an allergy in which solar rays cause release of histamine in your skin, resulting in hives and itching. You may be helped by taking an antihistamine to neutralize the reaction in your skin.

Speed reading course an investment

If you're an average reader, it will take you three or four minutes to read this column, reading at the rate of 200 words a minute. But with the use of your mastered techniques of speed reading, you should be able to zip through the column in as little as a minute, or even less, while increasing not only your speed but also your understanding and recall of what you've read.

Fussy hubby should vacuum before he pans wife's work

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 and recently married a 42-year-old divorced man with two children, ages 18 and 20. My husband told me that he and his ex-wife have had a very good relationship since their divorce. Knowing this, I have tried not to let any feelings of jealousy or insecurity cause problems in our marriage. He told me that he had asked his ex-wife to call him for emergencies only. Well, I think she calls here often. He calls me not only to talk about the children, but mainly because she feels they should have the same closeness as before.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR MR. PETERSON: Shucks, you stole my answer. But now that you've shown a sincere interest in improving the efficiency of the domestic routine, why don't you take over the vacuuming and dusting yourself? Then you can do it your way, and you'll have nothing to argue about.

DEAR ABBY: I really would like to have an answer to a dumb question: What is leap year, and how often does it come? Thank you.

DEAR CHRIS: There are no "dumb" questions in my book, so please, don't apologize. Leap year is a year in which there are 366 days, instead of the usual 365. The extra day is added to the month of February, giving it 29 days instead of the usual 28 days.

with Max Roach and Dexter Gordon, organizer Della Young said Thursday. Gordon and Roach played with Parker, a Kansas City native who helped create bebop and died in 1955 at age 34. Gordon himself starred in a jazz movie, "Round Midnight."

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 and recently married a 42-year-old divorced man with two children, ages 18 and 20. My husband told me that he and his ex-wife have had a very good relationship since their divorce. Knowing this, I have tried not to let any feelings of jealousy or insecurity cause problems in our marriage. He told me that he had asked his ex-wife to call him for emergencies only. Well, I think she calls here often. He calls me not only to talk about the children, but mainly because she feels they should have the same closeness as before.

Dear Abby

DEAR MR. PETERSON: Shucks, you stole my answer. But now that you've shown a sincere interest in improving the efficiency of the domestic routine, why don't you take over the vacuuming and dusting yourself? Then you can do it your way, and you'll have nothing to argue about.

DEAR ABBY: I really would like to have an answer to a dumb question: What is leap year, and how often does it come? Thank you.
