Jury picks starting in Fargo trial

By Brent Laymon
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Three years after their arrests, seven people linked to a Puerto Rican terrorist group go on trial this week in the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery — the second largest robbery in U.S. history.

The defendants and their lawyers appeared in U.S. District Court today for the scheduled start of jury selection, which Assistant U.S. Attorney Albert S. Dabrowski said he expected to last one to three weeks.

The trial itself, delayed by marathon hearings on the admissibility of hundreds of hours of FBI tape recordings and other evidence, could last five to eight months, Dabrowski said. The defense predicts a much longer trial.

Juan Segarra Palmer, a 38-year-old Harvard-educated Puerto Rican nationalist accused of masterminding the robbery, said last week that he will not take the stand in his own defense and doubts the other defendants will either.

"I don't recognize the legitimacy of the court or the whole proceeding," said Segarra, who spent 30 months in pretrial detention before his release in March on $1.5 million bail.

"All I am guilty of is opposition to colonialism, which is a crime against humanity like apartheid," he said.

The government contends that six of the seven defendants are salaried members of a militant nationalist group known as Los Macheteros, which has claimed responsibility for the 1983 robbery of a Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford.

Authorities say the group planned to use the loot to finance terrorist acts aimed at overthrowing the U.S. government of Puerto Rico.

U.S. District Judge T. Emmet Clarie, the judge who will preside at the trial, ruled last week that the jurors' identities will be kept secret. He cited the defendants' alleged ties to Los Macheteros and the barrage of postcards court personnel have already received from sympathizers of the defendants.

The defense denounced the ruling, saying it would poison jurors' minds against the defendants and make a fair trial impossible.

"The only message it sends to the jurors is that the defendants are so dangerous and so desperate that they would attempt to intimidate or harm a juror," said Ronald Kuby, a New York

REMEMBERING OLD TIMES - Paul A. Cervini, the oldest living member of the Eighth District Fire Department, explains what it was like to work for the fire department since 1925. The department will celebrate its 100th anniversary Sept. 18 with a gala parade expected to draw about 20,000 spectators.

A 'legend' of a firefighter recalls his career in the 8th

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

In 1925, Paul A. Cervini says he remembers having to manually unload a 400-foot water hose from a small fire truck during a fire and later carefully stretch the hose out in a parking lot to dry.

He remembers hearing stories about the infamous 1888 fire that destroyed the Moses Scott building, the drug store owned by Charles Rose, the first office of the Southern New England Telephone Co., the post office, and the plant of the then-weekly Manchester Herald.

That fire, Cervini said, was the direct cause of the formation of the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department, which will hold its 100th anniversary celebration Sunday, Sept. 18.

At age 89, Cervini said he probably knows just about every story there is to hear about the department. He is the oldest living member and has occupied every administrative office from clerk of the district's Board of Directors to president.

But this year, the department will be celebrating without him.

Due to health conditions and a bad knee, Cervini is unable to march in this year's parade. But he said he is somewhat disappointed that he wasn't asked anyway.

MHS visit by Dukakis is uncertain

By Andrew Yurkovsky
and Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

Presidential candidate Michael Dukakis may or may not make an appearance at Manchester High School Wednesday.

Preparations under way this morning for a Wednesday appearance by Democratic candidate Dukakis were called off when school officials learned that Dukakis had canceled the visit because of a scheduling conflict.

But workers in Dukakis' campaign headquarters in Boston said later this morning that the visit might still be on, a secretary at the high school said. The secretary, Pat Garoppolo, said that the Boston office was trying to contact advance people for the campaign, who had left the high school after the apparent cancellation.

Officials for Dukakis' campaign could not be reached this morning to determine for certain whether or not the Massachusetts governor would appear at the high school.

The school was in a flurry of activity this morning as school leaders prepared for Dukakis' visit. The officers of the Student Assembly had a sweatshirt made up for Dukakis, which read "Manchester High School" on the front and "Duke 88" on the back. James Ludes, vice president of the assembly, said the sweatshirt was given to Dukakis' aides instead.

"He's obviously a very busy man," said Mo Moriarty, co-president of the Student Assembly, after learning of the cancellation.

The Student Assembly had invited both Dukakis and his Republican opponent, Vice President George Bush, to address the students. An advance party from the Dukakis campaign was at the school this morning arranging details of the visit when word of the cancellation came along, apparently because of a change in schedule.

"I feel badly for the students because there was a good deal of genuine excitement," James Kennedy, superintendent of schools, said after learning of the cancellation.

Earlier today, Kennedy said the expected talk by Dukakis was characterized as "a major statement on education."

"He (Dukakis) wanted a high school because he wanted to make a statement concerning education," Kennedy said.

Theodore T. Cummings, a Manchester coordinator for the Dukakis campaign, said Dukakis was scheduled to arrive at Bradley International Airport at about 9 a.m. Wednesday and was to be escorted to the high school by a motorcade of Manchester Democrats, including Cummings and Dorothy Brindamour, a co-coordinator for the local Dukakis campaign.

Cummings said that after his appearance at the school Dukakis was to be escorted back to Bradley airport. He said no other stops in Manchester were planned.

Cummings had said he would know more details about the escort later today after discussing the visit with members of the Dukakis advance party.

Ludes said Dukakis had upon from a passing car. He fired

One dead, two wounded in Hartford shootings

HARTFORD (AP) — Four drive-by shootings and a brief gun battle between police and a fleeing suspect in a Hartford park have left one person dead and two others wounded, police said today.

The drive-by shootings occurred within two hours Monday night and police said they suspect that the incidents are related because witnesses to each reported seeing the shots fired from a passing, large white vehicle.

"We're pretty certain they are connected. They seem to be gang-related, probably drugs," said Lt. Frederick D. Lewis.

Irving Rodriguez, 19, was fatally shot in the head about 11:30 p.m. Monday in the last of the incidents, Lewis said. He said Rodriguez was standing on Park Street in the city's Frog Hollow neighborhood when he was hit by shots fired from a passing car.

Rodriguez, who was apparently an innocent bystander, was pronounced dead at 12:21 a.m. today at Hartford Hospital, Lewis said.

In the police shoot-out, an officer returned fire when one of three men who were being chased on foot through Keney Park turned and fired a gun at him, authorities said.

One of the suspects was shot in the back and was taken to Mount Sinai Hospital, where he was in critical but stable condition, Lewis said. He said police were still searching for the other two men.

The night of violence began about 9:45 p.m. Monday when a large, white car containing four or five men drove by the intersection of Greenfield and Enfield Streets in the city's North End and opened fire on a group standing on the corner, Lewis said. He said no one was injured in that shooting.

At about 10 p.m. a man standing in front of a house on Sigourney Street in the Asylum Hill neighborhood was wounded when shots were fired from a passing car, Lewis said.

Anthony Bremmer, 21, was shot in the side and taken to St. Francis Hospital, where he was in satisfactory condition, Lewis said.

Lewis' xat 10:15 p.m., a man and woman sitting inside a car on Putnam Street, also in the Frog Hollow neighborhood, were fired upon from a passing car. The man

BACK TO SCHOOL — First-year student Norma Feliciano of West Hartford waits for her first class at Manchester Community College to begin today. The college's 1988-89 school year began today with a slight drop in overall enrollment.

College opens year with enrollment drop

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Students mingled in the program center lobby of Manchester Community College this morning to renew old friendships and compare schedules as the college officially opened its school year with a slight drop in student enrollment.

The first student in line to register was 21-year-old Stephanie Walker of East Hartford. Walker was attempting to sign up for a math class so she would be able to meet her requirements and graduate with a degree in general studies at the end of this semester.

"I'm excited," she said. "Every school year I'm excited, especially this year because I'm almost out."

Walker said she hopes to transfer to a four-year university after graduating from MCC.

College officials said today that Walker was part of a slightly smaller overall enrollment. Manchester Community College's full-time student population has increased but the number of part-time students has decreased as the first day of classes began at the college, college officials said today.

Final figures will not be available until registration is completed on Sept. 13, said Harry Meisel,

Police Roundup

Cops arrest woman on drug charges

Police arrested a Manchester woman on drug charges Friday after the Tri-County Narcotics Task Force found evidence that the woman was operating a drug factory from her home, police said.

Patricia L. Morse, 123 Hilliard St., was charged with operating a drug factory, possession of marijuana, cocaine, and various drug paraphernalia after the task force searched her home on a search warrant, police said.

According to police reports, Morse was placed under arrest and charged with possession of marijuana after officers discovered a plastic container holding a small amount of marijuana and drug paraphernalia in her living room.

Upon searching the house further, officers seized a padlocked metal box from Morse's bedroom which contained a triple beam scale used for weighing marijuana, a hand scale, and a cocaine-use kit lined with residue, and a list of drug notes indicating first names and dollar amounts, police said.

Officers also found $4,320 in cash locked in the box, police said.

A stub of a marijuana cigarette was later discovered after officers searched Morse's car, which was seized for possible federal forfeiture proceedings, police said.

A small amount of the drug was also discovered in her brother's bedroom, police said.

Morse was held on a $5,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court, Sept. 14.

Half-way house resident charged in shoplifting

A resident of the Watkinson House, a half-way house for soon to be released prisoners in Hartford, was arrested and charged Sunday with sixth-degree larceny after attempting to steal a cassette tape from a department store in the Parkade only 3 1/2 hours after being released on a 12-hour furlough, police said.

According to police, Donald Frank Hecker, 34, was transferred in August from the Connecticut Correctional Center in Cheshire to Watkinson House.

He was granted a 12-hour furlough on Sunday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and was picked up for shoplifting in the Sears store at the Parkade at 12:35 p.m., police said.

Hecker was held on a $5,000 bond and is scheduled for arraignment today, police said.

Police arrested a local man Sunday on several charges after he attempted to drag his ex-fiance by her hair from his car into his apartment, police said.

Jeffrey W. Caplinger, 22, of 1025 Downey Drive, was charged with unlawful restraint, third-degree robbery, breach of peace, operating an unregistered motor vehicle, failure to return a license plate and operating a motor vehicle without insurance, police said.

According to police, Caplinger picked up his former fiancee in South Windsor after she agreed to meet with him. He then drove her to his apartment where a fight ensued and she began screaming from the car for help, police said.

After Caplinger failed to get her into his apartment by grabbing her by the hair and pulling her, he took her purse and ran inside, police said. According to his ex-fiancee, $27 was taken, police said.

Police said Caplinger is also wanted on a Manchester warrant for failure to appear in court and another warrant from South Windsor.

He was released on $5,000 cash bond and is scheduled to be arraigned today.

Thoughts

When asked, "Which is the great commandment in the law?" Jesus Christ replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Matthew 22:36-39)

It can be a great challenge to love others, especially if they have hurt us. But the commandment is clear: As the scriptures teach, charity, the pure love of Christ, means learning to truly love others, including those whom we may think of as different from us or difficult to love — the unkind, the unrighteous, the different, and the antagonistic. "To those who love and serve these people, the Lord has said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matthew 25:40)

This is a great promise and blessing from the Lord that all of us should constantly strive to be worthy of through our actions toward others.

No witch hunt on for AIDS violators

By Michele Noble Manchester Herald

Richard Ficks, the chief of public information for the state Department of Labor, said he doesn't want people to start fearing the agency is on a "witch hunt" to locate towns that are not complying with a policy that requires lifeguards to be trained in AIDS prevention techniques.

"I don't want people to start fearing that we are out there crawling around searching for violations of the AIDS prevention requirement," Ficks said last week. "That isn't how it's done. We look into everything, not just the debated policy issue."

Last month, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, a division of the state Department of Labor, fined several communities that face the possibility of fines are debating with the agency over the definition of the term "lifeguard," which the state considers to mean emergency medical response personnel. According to the state, all Connecticut towns were required by the agency to train lifeguards and other emergency medical personnel in a resuscitation technique to avoid contraction of the AIDS virus.

OSHA officials said the agency notified towns of the requirement in a directive mailed out earlier this year. The directive, however, did not specify that lifeguards had to receive the training.

Scott Sprague, director of recreation for the town of Manchester, has said he knew nothing about the requirement until the last week of August when he read about the $300 fine issued to the town of Coventry.

Sprague has said the town employs between 40 and 50 lifeguards. All have been provided with gloves, another AIDS prevention requirement, but all do not have masks and are not trained in the alternate resuscitation method.

Ficks said that he cannot guarantee that Manchester will not be fined for lack of training, adding that if the agency has such intentions, he could not comment. "We haven't had an inspection in Manchester and we don't announce when we do conduct one," he said.

"Our investigations are ongoing. Somebody from the department is out there doing something every day of the week. When we do an inspection, we don't announce when we do conduct one," he said.

Directors to get report on trash dumping probe

By Andrew Yurkovsky Manchester Herald

The administration is expected to make a report tonight to the town Board of Directors on the alleged dumping of out-of-town waste in the town landfill by a Manchester recycling firm.

Waste dumped by the recycling company, Recycled Fibers of Connecticut, 206 Tolland Turnpike, has increased from 158 tons in April, around the time it opened, to 2,200 in July. Town officials are concerned that similar recycling firms might open for business in town.

At least some of the material for recycling comes from out of town. Leo O'Connor, the superintendent of the town's landfill, said last week. Although town ordinances prohibit the dumping of out-of-town garbage in the town landfill, Town Manager Robert E. Weiss has said that state law requires the town to accept the material remaining after recycling.

Angelo Squillante, an official from Recycled Fibers, denied last week that out-of-town garbage was being dumped by the company. He declined to comment further.

Weiss said Friday that the town was looking at what options it had, but he would not reveal what they were. He said that a report to the board would be made tonight. Tonight's meeting is scheduled for 7:30 in the Lincoln Center hearing room.

Also on the agenda for tonight's meeting is a proposal to increase town funding for Visiting Nurse and Home Care of Manchester Inc. by $15,750.

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said today that he supported the proposal and that there appeared to be support for it from other members of the board.

The money is needed because of the visiting nurses' increased operating expenses and the cost of moving from the Highland Park School, which is to be reopened next year for school use.

The Board of Directors in May approved an allocation of $100,195 for the VNA to pay for health services provided by the non-profit organization to residents.

Town asks OPM input on best reval company

The town administration will consult with the state Office of Policy and Management before making a recommendation on which revaluation firm the town should hire to redo the botched 1987 revaluation, Finance Director Boyce Spinelli said today.

The town has notified the state OSHA that Cannon will be taking the training within the next few months, and the town will provide classes for the lifeguards.

Spinelli said a recommendation would not be made until next week, because Donald Zimbowski, the chief of the municipal division of the OPM, will not be in until then.

"We want to let him know where we are, and we want to make a recommendation on what we're doing," Spinelli said.

The 1987 revaluation was scrapped by the administration in March after questions were raised by the OPM and others, about whether it was done correctly.

Bolton slot attracting applicants

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The town has received more than eight applications for the recently vacated administrative assistant position, the first selection said today.

Today was the deadline for applications, but First Selectman Sandra Pierog wasn't sure of the exact number received.

Discussion on the applications is scheduled for tonight's meeting of the selectmen, scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Community Hall.

Hiring a replacement for former Administrative Assistant Karen Levine, who left in July to become assistant town manager in Avon, could be a sticky issue in light of changes in the town government proposed by the Charter Revision Commission.

The Charter Revision Commission has recommended that the form of government be changed to a town manager-council form, eliminating the administrative assistant position.

The board discussed writing applicants and explained the changes proposed by the Charter Revision Commission.

But the selectmen decided at the end of July to accept applications for the position until today because a referendum vote on the revision commission's proposal won't take place until at least January.

If approved, changes won't be implemented until 1989. But Selectman Michael Zizka said he didn't think it was a good idea to "scare" applicants off by telling them something they may not fully understand.

Meanwhile, the selectmen have taken over some of Levine's duties. At August selectmen's meeting, Pierog said she's been coming in every day after work and Selectman Douglas Cheney said he's been working some Sundays.

"We're barely keeping our heads above water," Pierog said at the meeting.

Board to eye dog ordinance

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen is scheduled tonight to discuss a request for an ordinance on the treatment of dangerous dogs.

The request came from the Ross family of 81 Volpi Road in the form of a letter to the selectmen. The Rosses whose dog was attacked by another dog last winter, asked for an ordinance similar to the one proposed in Manchester by Town Director Geoffrey Naab.

Current state law says people cannot own dogs that are a nuisance because of "obscure disposition." Violation of the law results in a $40 infraction for the first offense and up to a $100 fine or 30 days imprisonment or both for subsequent offenses, said Dog Warden Judy Virchow.

A judge may decide to have the dog restrained or disposed of, which can mean giving it away or destroying it, Virchow said. The law does not mention biting people or other animals.

The town uses the state law and also has a roaming law, which means dogs can be off the leash but must be under the owner's control, Virchow said. She said she hasn't heard of any other requests for dangerous dog ordinances from residents.

Virchow said the incident involving the Ross's dog, which occurred six to eight months ago, resulted in an infraction for Francis Fiano of Bolton, the owner of the dog that attacked the Ross dog.

Selectmen will meet at 8 p.m. in the Community Hall.

College kids drink heavily

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — The majority of Connecticut State University students use illegal drugs infrequently or not at all, but almost all drink and 20 percent could be characterized as heavy drinkers, according to a survey.

Twenty percent of the 1,168 students surveyed last spring on the four state university campuses said they regularly had six or more drinks a time at least once a week, a rate the survey committee classified as heavy drinking.

However, only 7 percent identified themselves as "heavy" or "problem drinkers."

Survey forms were returned by 1,168 students. 57 percent women, 38 percent men and 5 percent who didn't state their sex.

WALLINGFORD (AP) — Easy Street, Determination Drive and Freedom Boulevard in Wallingford aren't on the map, but they're three of the most popular streets in town for some people.

Easy Street is the name of a 1-year-old, 5,000-square-foot recreation of a town that has a grocery store, bank, theater, restaurant, beauty shop, garage, telephone and newspaper machine.

The streets in the town are called Easy Street, Determination Drive and Freedom Boulevard.

Located in Gaylord Hospital, Easy Street is designed to train people who have suffered debilitating accidents how to deal with their new handicaps and go back to the public world.

Gaylord, a 121-bed rehabilitation hospital that opened in 1983, treats patients for stabilization after spinal cord injuries, traumatic brain injuries, stroke and general rehabilitation, said Jerry Main, director of marketing.

"Look at these stupid plastic bags," Carolyn Morrone, director of occupational therapy, said pointing to bags that hang over fruit and vegetables in grocery stores. "Can you imagine getting these from a wheelchair?"

"We teach them to go the the front of the store and ask for bags. It gives them a preview so they're not sitting in the wheelchair wondering what to do," she said.

Gaylord Hospital is the only hospital in Connecticut to have an Easy Street. Sixteen hospitals around the country have Easy Streets, designed by Guynes Design Inc. of Phoenix.

Guynes, which originally designed the Easy Street Environment program for Phoenix Memorial Hospital, builds the program according to each hospital's measurements, according to David Guynes, company president.

Visitors to East Street in Gaylord Hospital can order meals in a restaurant, practice getting in and out of a real car and get their hair styled at a beauty salon.

At the grocery store, when a patient reaches into the freezer to pick up a gallon of ice cream, the package is wooden, but it is the true weight.

"If you're sitting in a wheelchair, you'd be surprised how hard it is to reach into the bottom of a freezer," Morrone said.

The East Street's bank doubles as the post office because the counter is the same height.

"We suggest to patients that they make eye contact when they're further back from the counter, so it's not just a little hand coming over the counter," Morrone said. "We're trying to take the edge off the first experience."

She said one patient worked at a bank prior to his injury and his job was opening the bank every day. But after visiting Easy Street, he realized it took him a long time to open the door from his wheelchair.

The patient decided he was too vulnerable and when he went back to work he asked someone else to take over that duty.

"To me, having someone make that decision makes this all worthwhile," Morrone said.

She said the hospital used to take patients downtown to help them, but there were problems.

"One time I was waiting for a patient to open her apartment door and a man walking by said, 'You're terrible,' and opened the door for her," Morrone said.

David Guynes said the Easy Street program has proven quite successful around the country.

"It increases the local awareness of the plight of the handicapped and the problems associated with becoming functional again," he said.

"It also produces a great amount of well-being for the staff and patients," Guynes said. "What it does is promote healing."

WASHINGTON — With uncharacteristic speed, Congress is expected in its final weeks to create a new law to combat what has become one of the biggest and most emotional problems of the summer of '88 — medical waste that has invaded and shut down some of America's favorite beaches.

Intense pressure from outraged citizens has driven Congress to hold a series of public hearings, including one this week on Long Island's Jones Beach. At least one measure and maybe more will be passed before the legislative year ends, lawmakers and environmental activists predicted.

Separate measures to create a waste tracking system and to establish specific criminal penalties for medical waste dumping passed the Senate before the August recess. Similar measures are pending in various House committees.

"With all the publicity this has gotten, these will sail right through," said John Catena, a science policy analyst at the Oceanic Society, a national environmental group that focuses on coastal problems.

"The fact that you had one of the hottest summers in 50 years and tens of millions of people... were unable to make use of the public beaches really drew the issue right home," said Andy Koss, a researcher at the Natural Resources Defense Council in New York.

Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, a Democrat who represents part of the Connecticut coast along the Long Island Sound, said another reason for the unusual speed on Capitol Hill is the clarity of the issue.

"There's no reputable other side of the issue," said Morrison. "No one can excuse the presence of medical waste in the ocean and the only way it can get there is from illegal dumping.... There's not a lot of technical debate here. We know what we do. Let's do it."

Environmentalists concede that the medical waste problem poses much less of a long-term health threat than other issues plaguing the nation's coastal waters, such as sludge dumping, that have languished in Congress for years.

"In terms of long-term survival of the ocean, it's not a serious problem. In terms of impact on people's lives, it is," said Andrew Palmer of the American Ocean Campaign, another activist group.

Catena said medical waste simply is "a much more visible issue. When it closes your beach down, that makes a lot more rumbblings."

Many environmentalists see a silver lining in the dirty syringes, vials, bandages and other hospital debris that has washed ashore from Massachusetts to the Gulf of Mexico.

Palmer said public outrage over medical waste has been transferred to other less well known but potentially more dangerous coastal pollution problems.

"We're seeing it already, and I think that's being translated to Congress," he said.

Catena said a bill banning sludge dumping off the New York-New Jersey shore was passed by the Senate last month because of the attention surrounding medical waste.

"It's helpful, no question about it," said Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., a leader in the medical waste fight in Congress. "It has probably been the best single item to draw attention to abuse of the oceans."

Since incidents of medical waste pollution began making headlines around the Fourth of July weekend, the Senate has passed a measure by Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., and Chafee to require hospitals, transporters and disposal companies to adhere to a manifest system that would give investigators a paper trail to find the source of illegal dumping.

The pilot program would cover New York, New Jersey and Connecticut — states where much of the dumping is suspected of taking place. A similar measure is pending in the House.

The Senate also approved amendments to a sludge dumping bill that would create criminal penalties of up to $250,000 in fines and five years in prison for illegal dumping. A House subcommittee has approved a similar measure.

Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, a Democrat who represents part of the Connecticut coast along the Long Island Sound, said another reason for the unusual speed on Capitol Hill is the clarity of the issue.

"There's no reputable other side of the issue," said Morrison. "No one can excuse the presence of medical waste in the ocean and the only way it can get there is from illegal dumping.... There's not a lot of technical debate here. We know what we do. Let's do it."

Lawmakers to act on medical waste

STATE & REGION

Officer sees shootings

ORANGE (AP) — Robert Kenny Jr. has witnessed more violence toward fellow officers during his 2 1/2 years on the Orange police force than most other cops see in a career.

While off duty, Kenny, 24, was the first person to administer medical aid to Milford Officer Daniel Scott Wasson, who was shot and killed on the Boston Post Road last year, 200 feet from the Orange border.

Three weeks ago Kenny saw rookie state Trooper John Kucan brought out of the woods in West Haven on a stretcher, with a bullet through his forehead.

"When I was going to the scene, I said, 'Oh, not again.... The chances of an officer seeing another officer shot are so remote,'" Kenny said. "It feels strange to have been at the scene of both incidences."

Kenny, a paramedic, treated both and accompanied both in the ambulance to the same trauma room at Yale-New Haven Hospital. Kucan is recovering from his injuries.

Shooting suspect nabbed

BOSTON (AP) — The FBI trailed one of its most wanted fugitives from Boston to Mexico before arresting the Texas native for allegedly shooting two Boston Police officers, one fatally, 11 months ago.

Authorities said Ted Jeffrey Otsuki, 36, was being extradited to Los Angeles late Monday after he was arrested a day earlier in Guadalajara, Mexico, as he returned to his condominium.

"Otsuki is a very violent and dangerous fugitive," said James F. Aborn, special agent in charge of the FBI's Boston bureau. "I characterized him... as one of the most dangerous I had ever encountered."

The Senate also approved amendments to a sludge dumping bill that would create criminal penalties of up to $250,000 in fines and five years in prison for illegal dumping. A House subcommittee has approved a similar measure.

Creating wetlands

LINCOLN, R.I. (AP) — The state Department of Transportation, which is an expert at filling in wetlands, is trying something new: creating swamps from dry land.

The experiment resulted from a compromise with environmentalists over the Woonsocket Industrial Connector project, a $28.5 million highway that will fill in 7.2 acres of wetlands.

An agreement that allowed the project to continue calls for DOT to create new wetlands areas just beyond the road's shoulders. "This is the first of its kind in Rhode Island," said DOT engineer Frank Corrao.

But the process is somewhat more complicated than simply pouring water on the dry earth.

Procedure inspires law

HARTFORD (AP) — Procedures used to protect a 6-year-old rape victim from being intimidated when she testified at her assailant's trial could be used in similar situations if a proposed state law is enacted, the co-chairman of the legislature's Judiciary Committee says.

Keith DePastino, 27, was found guilty Friday of raping a 3-year-old girl and her 1 1/2-year-old sister three years ago and faces up to 70 years in prison.

Assistant State's Attorney John Massameno says the conviction resulted in large part from the older girl's testimony. The girl, whom Massameno called "a courageous little girl," was identified only as "D" during the trial.

When the girl, now 6, testified two weeks ago, she was sworn in with an informal oath and allowed to sit with a female lawyer she had gotten to know well.

Fraud probe begins

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Allegations of contractor fraud at a $31 million federal construction project are being investigated after getting tangled in bureaucracy for more than 1 1/2 years, federal officials say.

The allegations, contained in a 74-page interview with an informant, stem from the troubled renovation of Pequotnick Apartments and Bearsley Terrace in Bridgeport.

The project to renovate and construct 68 low-income apartments has been plagued by contract disputes, years of delay, asbestos problems, vandalism, drug trafficking and accusations of shoddy construction.

On Dec. 18, 1986, the Connecticut Housing Authority, which administers the project, was told that the project's previous general contractor, Schnabel Associates Inc. of Pennsylvania, had submitted false invoices for payment.

INMATE HANGS SELF — A 21-year-old man arrested on disorderly conduct charges died Sunday when he apparently hanged himself with his shirt in his cell at a state police barracks, state police said.

Michael W. Colburn of Lakeville was found in his cell by a desk officer at 6 a.m. during a routine hourly check at the barracks in Canaan, state police spokesman Sgt. Scott O'Mara said.

O'Mara said Colburn was placed in a cell at 3:25 a.m. after he damaged an interrogation room where he was being held during processing on the initial charges for which he had been brought to the barracks.

Warehouse is home

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the teen-age prostitutes who walk the streets at night sleep during the day in a city Sanitation Department warehouse where salt is stored for the winter, according to a report published today.

More than 100 boys have lived at once in the rat-infested warehouse, which they call the Salt Mines, at Gansevoort and West streets in lower Manhattan, the New York Post reported.

Atop a garbage-ridden mountain of salt is a shantytown of mattresses and crates, where the boys cook, eat, sleep and play, the Post said.

Indians given tract

RAE EDZO, Northwest Territories (AP) — Two native groups in the Arctic will become the largest non-government landholders in North America under a historic agreement signed by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

The long-delayed agreement, signed in this tiny community 200 miles south of the Arctic Circle on the shores of Great Slave Lake, will give the Denes and Metis Indian nations nearly 4,000 square miles of land and special rights to an area the size of Oklahoma.

Mulroney said the signing marked a "day of justice" and heralds "new economic and political development" for the north. But native leaders say many specifics must be negotiated before a final pact is signed in two years.

Of wine and rip-offs

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I. Brezhnev's son-in-law peddled his influence to provincial officials looking for a Kremlin connection, taking huge bribes ranging from cash to cognac, wine and exotic fruit, prosecutors allege.

Soviet citizens were given an eye-popping glimpse of corruption and cronyism in the highest echelons of power as the sensational trial of Yuri Churbanov, 51, and eight co-defendants opened Monday.

But the reading of the lengthy indictment, a tapestry of high living and insider influence, caused a prosecutor and one judge on the three-member military tribunal to nod off in the courtroom.

Bakker short on funds

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — With the deadline today, PTL founder Jim Bakker was $1 million short in his bid to buy back the ministry he left in a sex-and-money scandal, but vowed to leave no stone unturned in coming up with the money.

Bakker and his attorney, Jim Toms, said Monday they're certain supporters will donate the money needed to satisfy PTL bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton, who wanted $3 million toward Bakker's $165 million bid by the end of the day.

"To come up with $3 million in a holiday weekend I had to pray and say, 'God help me,'" Bakker said.

He said friends and acquaintances contacted by word-of-mouth had contributed close to $2 million in cash and letters of credit toward the $3 million.

Explosion kills two

PERAMA, Greece (AP) — A blinding explosion split a Greek-owned oil tanker in two this port near Athens today, killing at least seven people and seriously injuring 12, harbor authorities said.

The 10:15 a.m. blast rocked the 86,000-ton Anagel Greatness while it was anchored off Perama undergoing routine repairs and "produced a blinding light in the sky," said a harbor authority official.

Police said the blast, which touched off fires, was apparently triggered in a fuel tank. The vessel immediately began sinking, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He said at least seven people were killed and at least 12 were hospitalized, some with severe burns.

Heading off fires

COOKE CITY, Mont. (AP) — Firefighters worried it would start "raining fire" today, bossed down houses and bolstered lines against blazes that have blackened nearly 1 million acres in and around Yellowstone National Park.

Southwesterly winds 20 to 30 mph were expected after relatively light winds Monday. The changing winds could send embers and flames into this community and nearby Silver Gate from the advancing 61,300-acre Storm Creek blaze and backfires set to deprive the fire of fuel.

"We have about a 25 percent chance of holding the fire out of these two communities," David Liebersbach, incident commander in Silver Gate, said on NBC-TV's "today" show this morning.

Resignation rejected

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Hussein Musavi submitted his resignation after seven years as Iran's prime minister, but President Ali Khamenei rejected it today, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

Musavi had tendered his resignation Monday, saying in a letter to Khamenei that he wanted to step down primarily because he believed as many as eight of his Cabinet's 21 members would fail to win a vote of confidence in the Majlis, Iran's 270-seat parliament, the agency said.

It was not immediately clear whether Musavi would accept Khamenei's action.

Accidents claim 400

CHICAGO (AP) — Traffic accidents during the Labor Day weekend killed nearly 400 people on the nation's streets and highways. By midnight PDT Monday, authorities in the 50 states had recorded at least 396 traffic deaths.

California, the most populous state, had the highest number of traffic fatalities at 45, followed by Florida with 27 and Texas with 25. Alaska, Delaware, North Dakota, Rhode Island and South Dakota reported no fatal accidents.

For counting purposes, the holiday began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ended at midnight Monday.

Flood waters recede; woes continue

By Eirian Fisher
The Associated Press

RAJBARI, Bangladesh — Flood waters receded today in some of the hardest hit parts of Bangladesh, but the country still faces massive problems in getting food, medicine and safe drinking water to millions of marooned people.

"We will have to feed the people for two months at least," President Hussain Muhammad Ershad said after a helicopter flight over villages and rice paddies swamped by flood waters that cover three-fourths of this impoverished nation of 110 million people.

The floods that started in June, then eased only to surge again last week, have killed at least 406 people by government count. But this figure is generally regarded as understated, and daily tallies reported by Dhaka newspapers put the death toll at 1,122.

The Health Ministry says more than 100,000 people are known to be suffering from diarrhea and 5,715 more from dysentery as a result of drinking contaminated water.

In Rajbari, a town of 50,000 people 45 miles west of Dhaka, people stood in chest-deep water as a motorboat carried Ershad past their flooded houses.

He disembarked at a relief camp set up in a government school and handed out new, bright pink 50-taka notes (worth about 1.55 cents) to people crowding around him. He plunged into the flood water that surged past his knees as small boys splashed and paddled in the muddy brown swirl around him.

About 800,000 people live in the Rajbari district, which includes hundreds of outlying villages. Munshi Abdul Latif, a member of Parliament from the district, estimated at least 500,000 were temporarily displaced by the flood and had sought refuge on higher ground.

He said at least 15,000 houses were destroyed.

The biggest problem at the moment, Abdul Latif said, was a virtual absence of fuel that has left people without any means of cooking rice or any other food they had managed to save from the flood.

The government has used boats and helicopters to ferry food, mainly rice, to people stranded on bits of high ground. But with only a dozen helicopters in service, the task is proceeding slowly.

The flood control center said 12 major rivers were still rising today, but three of the mightiest rivers — the Ganges, Brahmaputra and Meghna — have started receding.

This could be seen clearly in today's helicopter flight over four administrative districts west of the capital.

Bright green rice plants poked above the flood level in neatly defined rectangular fields. During a helicopter flight over the same area 24 hours earlier, the paddies were completely submerged.

Information Minister Mahbubur Rahman told reporters Monday that 50 of the country's 64 districts have been "directly affected" by floods and 21 million people rendered homeless.

He said 25 million people had lost relatives, a home or business, crops or other property.

The diarrhea cases primarily have hit the interior but were also reported today in Dhaka, a city of 6 million. Rahmat Ali, a municipal official, said flood waters had entered the city's drinking supply through leaky pipes.

LOOKING FOR SHELTER — A farmer whose home was destroyed by the floods that have inundated three-quarters of Bangladesh moves out on a boat to search for shelter with all of his belongings, including his cow. The death toll has reached at least 942 since June, when rivers began overflowing their banks in annual monsoon flooding.

Duke blasts GOP on economic views as Bush touts jobs

By Donald M. Rothberg
The Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis and Republican George Bush, offering starkly different views of the nation's economy, headed today into the decisive two months of the 1988 presidential campaign, with Dukakis saying "American workers first" and Bush saying "jobs, jobs, jobs."

In a speech prepared for delivery to Polish-Americans in a Chicago suburb, the Massachusetts governor saluted the Polish union Solidarity and went on to describe Bush as insensitive to American workers.

Bush was campaigning on the West Coast and President Reagan was hitting the campaign trail on his vice president's behalf.

Ending a vacation at his California ranch, Reagan was speaking in Nebraska and to the American Legion convention in Kentucky before returning to the White House.

During Labor Day appearances and again today, Dukakis recalled Bush's praise of Soviet tank mechanics during a European trip last fall.

"Send them to Detroit, we could use that kind of ability," Bush said after being told of a trouble-free Soviet tank maneuver. Later, he apologized to U.S. autoworkers, adding, "They give me a break, I didn't mean anything by it."

Dukakis said today, "Do you really believe we in America have anything to learn from a society where workers have no rights, consumers have no choices and even Mr. Gorbachev admits their economy is a shambles? Those Republicans in Washington love to blame American workers first."

At a Labor Day rally in Detroit, Dukakis said that during the nearly eight years of a Republican administration "the rich have gotten richer; the poor have gotten poorer."

He said millions of high-paying jobs have been replaced by low-wage positions, and asked: "Can we afford four more years of that?"

Republican rival Bush touted economic gains under the Reagan administration, saying the administration has created "17½ million jobs, more disposable income for the American people, lower taxes. ... And all my opponent can do is tell the American people how bad things are."

The vice president said the campaign is "about protecting the gains we've made in jobs and peace and it's about how to make new breakthroughs in both areas."

After full schedules on Labor Day, the symbolic opening of the fall campaign, the Republican and Democratic candidates — with the exception of GOP vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle — remained on the road.

Bush was on the West Coast for appearances in Oregon and Washington, while Dukakis had events scheduled in Illinois and Ohio.

Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, joined Dukakis at a Labor Day picnic in St. Louis and then headed back to the South.

Dukakis was back in Washington after Labor Day appearances at the Statue of Liberty and at an ethnic parade in Detroit.

Democrats appeared at several events.

About 125 anti-abortion activists, by police estimates, were at a Dukakis appearance in Philadelphia. They waved signs and chanted, "Life yes, abortion no. Duke of death must go. People carrying Dukakis-Bentsen signs stood at the back of the crowd at a Bush appearance in San Diego and shouted: "Where was George?"

Hecht, whose voting record is extremely conservative, has become known for his occasional verbal misuses, once referring to a "nuclear suppository" when he meant "repository." A recent survey of Senate administrative assistants ranked him as the least effective senator in Washington.

Hecht's only primary opponent in Larry Scheffer, 38-year-old owner of a graphics business in Henderson who said he would press for reprocessing nuclear waste brought to Nevada so that only low-level, less radioactive waste would remain.

Bryan's opponents in the Democratic primary are Mandor "Cave Rock Manny" Beals, Patrick Fitzpatrick, and Larry Kepler.

In Florida, a two-man Republican primary matched Rep. Connie Mack III, grandson of the legendary Philadelphia A's baseball manager, against former U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle, who successfully prosecuted Colombian cocaine kingpin Carlos Lehder Rivas.

Poliner says GOP trend will continue

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut, one of George Bush's "home states," has gone Republican in four of the last five presidential elections. For a couple of decades now, Connecticut has generally elected Democratic governors and Republican presidents.

This year, that trend should continue, says state GOP Chairman Robert S. Poliner.

"People have now started to focus on the presidential election ... and as I talk to people, more and more are coming back to the basic issues: 'We are doing well, this is a good economy, I have a good job,'" Poliner said.

"These are the issues people usually vote on," he said.

Jonathan Peto, political director of the state Democratic Party, said Bush has lately received "a bunch of positive publicity," including the fact that President Reagan has "said a lot of nice things about him."

The election, in Connecticut and elsewhere, he said, will turn on the Reagan Democrats — those Democrats who voted Republican by the millions in 1980 and 1984.

"If the Reagan Democrats go for Dukakis, Dukakis wins," Peto said.

Factors in Dukakis' favor in Connecticut, Peto said, include his regional popularity and the "ethnic factor."

"We are looking at the more ethnic, non-urban voters. That's where the battle will be fought, nationally and in Connecticut," he said.

"If Dukakis continues to be seen as (representing) Democratic values, including ethnic values, then I don't think he has a problem in Connecticut," Peto said.

Poliner said the fact that Bush grew up in Connecticut, went to Yale and is the son of a one-time U.S. senator from Connecticut "has a galvanizing effect on Republicans."

But "there are so many new people, so many new voters that one cannot depend on that" to carry Bush in Connecticut, he said.

"What it is that makes him acceptable to the voter in Connecticut is that he is a very steady individual and Connecticut voters tend to like steady individuals, people who stick to what they believe in, who stay the course, who are not necessarily flamboyant."

"Connecticut has a history of voting for people like that, Republican and Democrat," Poliner said.

Supreme Court that requiring a pupil who was a Jehovah's Witness to recite the pledge violated his rights.

Officials at Greenwich Day School could not immediately confirm or reject Riley's assertion.

"The answer is we don't know," said Peter G. Briggs, the school's headmaster.

Dukakis said he vetoed the measure after getting the story opinion from the Massachusetts Supreme Court that the bill violated teachers' First Amendment rights to freedom of speech and religion. The opinion was based on a 1943 ruling by the U.S.

Students at the Greenwich Country Day School in Greenwich, Conn., were not asked to recite the pledge, said William A. Riley, now a professor of history at Franklin Pierce College in Rindge, N.H. Riley, a Democrat, is also a member of the New Hampshire legislature.

"When Poppy and I were the two youngest kids in the first grade at Greenwich Country School Day, the pledge was never said," Riley, referring to Bush by his childhood nickname, said.

"Nor as Poppy and I wended our way through the years to the eighth grade did it occur to anyone that repeating the pledge would serve any useful purpose," Riley said.

Classmate says Bush didn't have to pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential nominee George Bush, who has made mandatory recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance a campaign issue, wasn't required to say the pledge when he attended a private grade school in Connecticut during the 1930s, a classmate says.

Students at the Greenwich Country Day School in Greenwich, Conn., were not asked to recite the pledge, said William A. Riley, now a professor of history at Franklin Pierce College in Rindge, N.H. Riley, a Democrat, is also a member of the New Hampshire legislature.

The issue of the Pledge of Allegiance has been the subject of a series of sharp exchanges between Bush and his Democratic opponent, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

In 1977, Dukakis as governor vetoed a measure that imposed lines on teachers if they did not lead their classes in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Dukakis said he vetoed the measure after getting the story opinion from the Massachusetts Supreme Court that the bill violated teachers' First Amendment rights to freedom of speech and religion. The opinion was based on a 1943 ruling by the U.S.

OPINION

Some aid to towns is 'pork'

Gov. William O'Neill has taken steps to reduce state spending in the face of projected budget deficits but his decisions leave doubts about whether the measures he has proposed will meet the need.

Among the areas within the $6.3 billion budget for the current year that are exempt from cuts is the $1 billion earmarked for aid to municipalities.

Those aid projects are closest to the hearts of state citizens and voters. To have suggested they be reduced in the economy drive would have been about as popular as suggesting an increase in taxes, something else O'Neill has vowed not to do.

But before an adequate solution is found for the deficit problem, which appears to grow with each new estimate, it may be necessary to eliminate or reduce some of the grants to towns and cities.

Robert Jaekle, leader of the Republican minority in the House, has accused O'Neill of using sleight-of-hand tactics to address the state's fiscal ills. And he suggests that the true deficit picture will not emerge until after the Nov. 8 election.

Between now and election time, Republican candidates have the opportunity to campaign on the issue of fiscal responsibility in state government.

It would be refreshing if some of those candidates, particularly challengers, took stands against some of the municipal pork-barrel provisions in the budget that were included to benefit the municipalities in their constituencies.

Aid to municipalities makes up almost one-sixth of the state budget. Surely there are some projects to be financed by that aid that are less beneficial to the state as a whole than others.

Victory for whistle-blowers?

By David Briscoe

WASHINGTON — A victory that could give $900,000 to a fired government whistle-blower sets precedents that he and his lawyers fear will make it riskier for other federal employees to expose waste and hazards.

Bertrand G. Berube, fired in 1983 after he accused the General Services Administration of becoming "the nation's slumlord," said he will take early retirement in a settlement with the agency.

Herb Koster, a spokesman for Gerald Carmen, a former GSA administrator who fired Berube, said Carmen would not comment on the settlement signed Aug. 18.

GSA spokesman Paul Costello said GSA officials also had no comment on the agreement.

A whistle-blower protection bill has passed the Senate. House leaders are discussing whether to consider similar legislation passed by a House committee.

David Briscoe writes for The Associated Press.

Spending to save money

Two years ago, the General Services Administration decided to sell some of its military stockpile warehouses and consolidate the inventory.

Recently, a subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee asked the General Accounting Office to take a second look at the figures.

When the GAO counted the cost of losing the Davisville depot, the money-saving plan to close New Bedford ended up costing $500,000.

Had any good stress lately?

Most of us have days when we would give anything to rid ourselves of the sources of stress in our lives.

But it's not really the people and events in our lives which cause our anxiety attacks, our insomnia, our tension headaches, our upset stomachs, our minor depressions.

In fact, stress itself can be a positive experience. It's what we feel when we are excited by a professional challenge...

It may also be reassuring to remember that not all stress is bad for us. Without some of it, life would lose its color and vitality, its ability to surprise and excite us.

Tot 'missing' on school bus creates nightmare for mom

It was every mother's nightmare. After her second afternoon of kindergarten, Kerry Lapworth didn't get off the school bus.

Her mother, Patricia, who had been waiting at the corner of Spring and Gardner streets for 10 minutes, looked up expectantly as her daughter's bus pulled up.

Lapworth wondered whether her daughter, 5, had taken the wrong bus home. So she hailed two other buses from Martin School as they pulled through the intersection.

Zinsser suggests budget amendments

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

The Connecticut Constitution should be amended to provide for a balanced state budget and to set limits on spending the "Rainy Day Fund," former Republican state Sen. Carl Zinsser said today.

Zinsser, seeking to recapture his seat in the 4th Senatorial District, issued a campaign statement today attacking Gov. William O'Neill and the Democratically controlled General Assembly for the budget deficit now facing the state.

In the news release, Zinsser said, "The O'Neill administration and many of the Democrats in the Senate and in the House have not been honest with the people over the last two years. Even when the Legislature was warned by one of their own, Rep. Ronald L. Smoko, D-Hamden, that the revenue estimates were overly optimistic, they would not listen."

Smoko is co-chairman of the General Assembly's Finance, Revenue and Bonding Committee.

O'Neill has ordered state agencies to cut spending by 3 percent to offset a projected deficit of $121 million in the current budget. But Kennedy said school officials had planned to arrange for about 100 parents to be present.

Bailey Auditorium holds 1,200 people and there are about 1,500 students in the school. Kennedy said he did not yet know which students would have to be excluded, but he said that closed-circuit television was available.

Ludes said the school learned of the acceptance by Dukakis from Gerald Tirozzi, Connecticut's commissioner of education, who dean of student affairs. Interim numbers, though, indicate full-time enrollment, compared to last year's opening day figures, increased from 1,545 students to 1,613 students, he said. Part-time numbers indicate a drop from 3,702 students to 3,546 students. But the total number of students, as of today, has decreased from 5,247 students to 5,159 students, he said.

"We won't know until the 13th of September where we stand," Meisel said.

Last year, MCC's total full- and part-time student population was 5,507. That rise in enrollment reversed a one-year trend where attendance dropped to 5,261 students during the 1986-87 school year from 5,352 students the year before, college officials have said.

Students waited in line to register for classes this morning in the Lowe Program Center. At 8:45 a.m., there were 13 students in line to register, but 15 minutes later, the number of students in line had grown to 29 students. Four minutes later, the number grew to 36 students.

who had been shot at chased the car and was fired on at least once more, but there were no injuries, Lewis said.

In the police shooting incident, an officer at 1:24 a.m. today to stop a car bearing a registration that didn't match the vehicle description in state motor vehicle records, police said.

Lewis said the car carrying three men refused to yield to Officer Christopher Hopkins' request to stop and headed for Keney Park in the North End.

In the park, the car stopped and the three men fled on foot, police phoned Kennedy Sunday to be sure the school was still interested in having Dukakis appear. Officers of the Student Assembly were to escort Dukakis to the stage.

"I think it's exciting," Kennedy said before getting word of the cancellation. "It's the first time I can remember a national candidate visiting our school. I think it would be a real copper if Vice President Bush would follow it up."

Cummings said area Democratic elected officials had been or were to be invited to join the motorcade, among them state Sen. Michael Meotti of Glastonbury, whose 4th Senatorial District includes Manchester, and Reps. James McCavannah and John Thompson of Manchester.

That office and the admissions

office, where advisers were stationed, became swamped with inquiries from prospective students early today.

Some students, including first-year student Robin McCartan of South Windsor, became lost in all the confusion and couldn't find their class.

McCartan also said she was taking general studies and hoped to transfer to a four-year school upon graduation.

"I'm just starting again," she said. "They have a good two-year program that can enable you to go to another school."

Another student, "Mohawk Mike" Koehler of Manchester was all smiles this morning. Koehler had had trouble finding a low-rent apartment close to the college, but once a story on his problem appeared in the Manchester Herald in July, he received six inquiries in apartments.

Monday, he spent his first night in his new place on Love Lane. "I don't know yet," Koehler said this morning about returning to classes. "It hasn't quite hit me."

Cervini

"They missed the boat on this one because I've really done a lot for the district," he said.

His wife, Mary, who answered many of the questions directed at Cervini because of his hearing loss, said she was surprised her husband wasn't "at least asked to ride in one of the cars." Her father, John Limerick, and a brother, Francis Limerick, also served as fire chiefs of the Eighth District department.

Tom O'Marra, the town's zoning enforcement officer and a spokesman for the Eighth District—who called Cervini "some what of a legend"—said a recently published public notice invited all former members of the department to contact the dispatcher if they wished to be included in the parade.

"Our problem is that there are so many former employees that there is no way we could personally contact each one individually," O'Marra said. "Cervini is certainly welcome to write us and we'd be glad to include him."

But Cervini, who joined the fire department in 1925 and participated in each of the department's four anniversary celebrations, said he would be content this time around to sit outside on the steps of his home at 71 Main St. and watch the parade with his wife.

"This is going to be the big one," he said. "People will be spilling into the front yard, across the street on the church steps, and just everywhere. This year is going to be it."

The celebration, planned as one of the largest parades in Manchester history, is expected to attract more than 20,000 spectators.

O'Marra said the parade will include more than 100 fire departments, 42 marching bands, 237 pieces of old and new fire apparatus, and many civic and school organizations.

Cervini said the parade will symbolize the public's gratitude for the services provided by the fire department and the dedication of the firefighters toward the protection of the town — an attitude he said has not changed in 100 years.

"In my years, all the young men wanted to join the fire department and use one of those trucks," Cervini said. "We didn't have any of today's modern equipment. We just went along with what we had to work with. Now they have everything and about 50 more men."

"I myself was never ambitious enough to learn how to drive one of those trucks. I was too busy doing other things," he said.

One of the projects that kept Cervini busy was the development of the department's Firemen's Club, which he furnished with a complete kitchen, a television set and a pool table with money obtained from parties, the slot machine, candy and soda sales and social events.

As a utility fireman, Cervini was in charge of opening fire hydrants, holding the nozzle of the 400-foot hose to direct the water, and loading, unloading and drying the hose outside on the department's parking lot.

Later, when Cervini was placed on the inactive list, he continued to help by covering the incoming dispatch calls when firefighters were at a fire. When the volunteers returned, Cervini was usually waiting for them with fresh coffee and donuts.

"I enjoyed every minute of the time I spent with the department," he said. "It feels good to be a part of a team of people who want to serve the town to the best of their ability for life and property. I'm looking forward to seeing the parade."

The parade will start at Brookfield and Center streets at noon on Sunday, Sept. 18. From there it will run west on East Center Street, north on Main Street to North Main Street, and will disband at Robertson Park.

attorney representing one of nine defendants who will be tried later.

Defense court convened today, before attorneys huddled in hallways. They said they had several motions to argue before Judge U.S. District Judge Jose A. Cabranes cleared the way for seven of 16 defendants to go on trial earlier this month when he refused to throw out 34 tape recordings made in Puerto Rico during the FBI's two-year investigation.

The government plans to try the other nine defendants separately after it appeals a decision to throw out 50 other tape recordings. Prosecutors claim the tapes are crucial to the case against the remaining defendants.

Among the nine is Filiberto Ojeda Rios, who allegedly helped Segarra Palmer plot the robbery. Ojeda, who the government claims is a Cuban agent, spent a record 32 months in pretrial detention before his release on $2.5 million bond in May.

He was re-arrested earlier this month and returned to Puerto Rico to face charges that he shot and wounded an FBI agent three years ago when he was first arrested.

Three other defendants remain at large, including Victor Gerena, the Wells Fargo security guard who authorities say was recruited by Los Macheritos to carry out the robbery. He allegedly fled to Cuba with $4 million.

Red Sox on top of the heap in AL East

DOUBLE PLAY — Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. forces Boston's Jody Reed at second base and fires to first to complete a double play in the second

BALTIMORE (AP) — The hidden ball trick that has been tried by every kid who has ever been a Little Leaguer has stayed with Marty Barrett.

The Boston second baseman pulled the play right out of the dreams of every 12-year-old Monday night in the Red Sox's 4-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

The victory marked the first time since June 21 that the Red Sox won back-to-back games on the road and it gave the Sox an undisputed claim on first place in the American League East Division for the first time since 1986.

"Now we don't have to score board watch as much," Barrett said. "If we keep winning, teams can't creep up on us. We've got half our games against Cleveland and Baltimore. We need to play well against them and break even against New York and Toronto."

Hanging tough just behind the 1-2 teams in the AL East are the New York Yankees and Milwaukee Brewers, who remained virtually tied for third, four games out. The Yankees were one percentage point ahead of the Brewers after their 9-2 victory over Cleveland on Monday. The surging Brewers, meanwhile, beat Chicago 5-2 for their seventh straight victory. The fifth-place Blue Jays, meanwhile, have won five straight and are 6½ games in back of the Red Sox.

Sure, there were home runs hit by Larry Parrish and Dwight Evans, and Mike Smithson won for the first time since July 23.

But all anybody wanted to do afterwards was talk with child-like glee about Barrett's deception.

"Marty has probably done that 10 or 11 times over the years and I bet I've been out there for eight or nine of them," said Smithson.

It came with the Red Sox leading 2-0 in the second inning.

Larry Sheets and Jim Traber opened the inning for the Orioles with singles. Sheets was forced at third on a hunt by Rene Gonzalez. The play ended with Boggs throwing to Barrett at first in an unsuccessful attempt to double up Gonzalez.

"Now we don't have to score board watch as much," Barrett said. "If we keep winning, teams can't creep up on us. We've got half our games against Cleveland and Baltimore. We need to play well against them and break even against New York and Toronto."

Barrett, still with the ball, walked to his position on second. When Traber took his lead off second, Barrett threw to shortstop Jody Reed who tagged Traber out.

"It's Jody's job if the guy comes off to go slowly over," Barrett said. "Traber had his back to me. I just lobbed it so Jody could just walk to him and tag him."

Smithson has been Barrett pull this sort of thing before.

"That's worked all the way back to Pawtucket," he said. "The key to the play was when Wade threw to first. Marty and I made 1 contact."

"Then I started faking signs to Wade. I was watching (Traber) out of the corner of my eye."

Lethargic Giants find way to upset Redskins

By Tom Conovan
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Some coaches say to never base a season on one game, but consider this:

During a dismal 6-9 season in 1987, the New York Giants never rallied from more than seven points down to win a game, and more often than not, the trademark of the then Super Bowl champions was finding ways to lose.

It was a far cry from 1986 when the Giants usually found ways to win.

The Giants on Monday night regained some of the 1986 championship form as Tom Flynn returned a blocked punt 27 yards for a touchdown and nose tackle Jim Burt scored on a 39-yard touchdown waddle with a fumble to rally New York to a season-opening 27-20 NFL victory over the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

"Last year, there were so many times when we fell behind and couldn't come back or we had a lead in the fourth quarter and just couldn't hold it," Giants safety Kenny Hill said. "We knew this year had to establish some things."

What the Giants established Monday night in this matchup of the past two Super Bowl champions was that they could come back and that their defense is still very capable even without Lawrence Taylor, who is sitting out a 30-day suspension for substance abuse.

New York fell behind 13-0 in the opening 18:42 as Super Bowl hero Doug Williams hit Ricky Sanders with a 29-yard scoring pass and rookie Chip Lohmiller added field goals of 26 and 25 yards.

The Giants did not score until the final play of the half with a 23-yard field goal by Raul Allegre. However, being down 13-3 at the half might have been a moral victory for New York which was held to minus 2 yards rushing in the opening 30 minutes and was frequently in bad field position.

"When we came in here at halftime we just stressed that we had to hang together, and not panic," Giants linebacker Harry Carson said. "Defensively, we just hung together and made the plays."

Actually there were a lot of plays made by New York in the second half and they come from the defense, the special teams are even occasionally the offense.

"This was an ugly win," said offensive tackle Karl Nelson, who played in his first regular-season game after missing all of last season with cancer. "Thank God special teams played lights out. The offense did it when we had to and the defense did it when they had to and that was enough."

The Giants closed their deficit to 13-10 midway through the third quarter on a 9-yard touchdown run by Joe Morris that was set up by a 20-yard punt by Steve Cox of Washington.

The defense stopped Washington on its next series and then the special teams took over breaking Phil McKinney on a 35-yard punt return to the Redskins 22. Allegre

HAPPY GIANTS — Tom Flynn has a big smile on his face as he is surrounded by New York Giants' teammates after blocking a punt for a touchdown in the fourth quarter of Monday's game with the Redskins at Giant Stadium. The Giants rallied for a 27-20 victory.

9:59 was left and again it was the Giants' special teams which turned things around when Gary Simms blocked a Cox punt and Flynn picked it up and scored.

"The ball just died and I scooped it up," said Flynn who has now scored three touchdowns on blocked punts in his last seasons with New York.

Turner thinking big-time with Connecticut football

By Chris Dohi
The Associated Press

STORRS — University of Connecticut Athletic Director Tom Turner would be happy to oblige football fans who want to see the school competing with big-time, Division I-A programs like those at Penn State, Boston College and Syracuse.

"But it has to happen naturally," Turner said last week after announcing that the Huskies will travel to North Carolina for a game at the Tarheels' $2,000-seat Kenan Memorial Stadium on Sept. 15, 1990.

"I can't make it happen. The president of the university can't make it happen. (Coach) Tom Jackson can't make it happen. The entire state of Connecticut has to want it to happen," Turner said.

The game with North Carolina will mark the first time UConn has played a Division I-A opponent since opening the 1983 season with a 22-5 loss to Rutgers.

It will also mark another big step in the direction Turner has been trying to aim the school's athletic program since he took over as former athletic director John Toner on July 1, 1987.

The 47-year-old Raleigh, N.C., native developed his philosophy about athletic programs as an undergraduate at North Carolina, a graduate at Ohio University and an administrator for 11 years at the University of Virginia.

"From a marketing standpoint, I see a corridor between West Point and Boston College without any Division I-A football and I wonder if it's in our destiny to fill that void. It's an exciting concept," Turner said.

There would be numerous logistical obstacle with which to contend if UConn eventually decides to make the move to Division I-A, including the size of its stadium, access to the stadium and funding.

Turner can also point to several other universities that are having a tough time making the transition, but thinks UConn would have a better-than-average chance to overcome most of the inherent problems, partly because it is a state university.

"(But) if the president of the university came to me tomorrow and said 'We want to be Division I-A,' it would take five to eight years for that to happen," he said.

Turner would like the Huskies to begin by playing one Division I-A opponent a year.

Meantime, he will also be listening closely for a mandate from state football fans to go for it.

Tyson a threat to himself

By Rick Hampson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, knocked out by a tree in a one-car wreck, will undergo more medical tests as his representatives debate whether he'll be able to defend his title next month.

Tyson, fresh from a unanimous decision over boxer Mitch Green on a Harlem sidewalk two weeks ago, was knocked unconscious for several minutes Sunday when the BMW he was driving skidded into a tree in a friend's yard upstate.

Physicians at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York said they were keeping Tyson in the hospital for more tests today on his head and bruised chest.

"Those tests should include an N.M.R., which is a state-of-the-art brain scan, and other tests for heart and chest," said Dan Klores, a Tyson spokesman. "The reason for this is that he did suffer a chest wall contusion and a blunt head trauma in the accident. Moreover, he did lose consciousness a brief period of time."

Doctors were scheduled to have a news conference today to clarify Tyson's condition.

"He's conscious," said Dan Klores, a Tyson spokesman. "He's still a little groggy because of the head trauma, but he's in stable condition and generally pretty alert."

Tyson's championship bout against British champ Frank Bruno was recently postponed until Oct. 22 because of the hand injury. Klores said it was not clear if the car accident would affect the fight, but Tyson manager Bill Cayton told the Daily News that "the early reports I've gotten lead me to be positive about his fighting... next month."

In London, a member of Tyson's managerial team said the fight was not in danger.

"He's been through worse things than this as a kid," said Steve Lott. "The fight is on, Mike will be fine. There's a reason they call him 'Iron Mike.'"

Tyson also has a broken bone in his right hand, the result of the lone blow landed in his brief encounter with fellow heavyweights Red outside an all-night clothing store.

Green, who lost to the undefeated Tyson in the ring two years ago, had the bridge of his nose split by Tyson. Green claims it was a sucker-punch; Tyson said he hit Green in self-defense.

Sunday's accident occurred around 11:20 a.m. in Catskill, a two-hour drive north of New York. Tyson had spent the night at the home of Camille Ewald, an elderly woman with whom Tyson lived when he was a teen-age protege of trainer Cus D'Amato.

Tyson continues to train in the area and frequently visits the Ewald home. The 22-year-old boxer keeps more than 100 pigeons in a large coop in her back yard, Ms. Ewald said.

Tyson seems to be at greater risk behind the wheel than in the ring.

Six months ago, when Tyson's Bentley sideswiped a parked car near the Manhattan entrance to the Holland Tunnel, he told police he was distracted by an argument he was having with his wife, actress Robin Givens. And last month Ms. Givens and Tyson ran out of gas on Fifth Avenue. Bystanders helped them push the car to the curb.

THE WINNER — New York Mets pitcher David Cone shows off his winning form on his way to his 15th win of the season Monday afternoon against the Pirates in Pittsburgh. The Mets won, 7-5, to stretch their lead to 10 games.

Mets like their chances, stretch lead over Bucs

By Alan Robinson
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The New York Mets have turned the race into a rout.

"It's never over 'til it's over," former Mets Manager Yogi Berra once said. But it's becoming obvious the National League East race is all but over.

"We made a major statement today," winning pitcher David Cone said Monday after the Mets rode Mookie Wilson's three-run home run in the eighth inning to a 7-5 victory over the fading Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Mets beat the Pirates for the 11th time in 15 games to hike their lead to a season-high 10 games with only 27 games to play. The Mets led the second-place Pirates by 3½ games just two weeks ago and by a half-game six weeks ago.

"I'm not going to say something stupid... like it's over, but I like the position that we're in," Cone said. "If we had come in here and gotten swept (in two games), that would have given them some hope. Now they've really got to battle to get back in it."

Focus on American kids at U.S. Open tournament

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Kids. What's the matter with kids today? Nothing. If they're teenage American tennis players. Or a 21-year-old on the comeback trail.

Andre Agassi, the 18-year-old from Las Vegas who's the hottest men's player in the world, and 16-year-old Michael Chang, advanced Monday to the fourth round of the U.S. Open. Tonight, they meet on the stadium court in what Chang called a "special" match.

Aaron Krickstein, who gained fame here as a 16-year-old in 1983, when he made it to the fourth round, is back. This time, after a dramatic five-set win over No. 3 Stefan Edberg in chilly, windy conditions, Krickstein is in the quarterfinals.

Agassi, who has surged to fourth in the world and has won six titles this year, stretched his winning streak to 21 with a 6-3, 6-1, 2-6, 6-0 victory over Johan Kriek. Chang, ranked 48th, came from two sets behind Tim Wilkison for a 4-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 win over Tim Wilkison.

"It isn't the first time I'm playing him," Agassi said. "I played him in New York (at the Tournament of Champions). Every week that goes by, your game takes new levels when you are so young."

"It's unbelievable how much your game can improve in such a short time. I'm sure he's better now than when I played him before."

"I think for me to go out there and concentrate on my game... if he can outdo me for three or four five sets, then he deserves to win."

Chang had never won a five-set match before doing it twice here — he upset No. 13 Jonas Svensson on Kevin McReynolds' double and Kevin Elster's two-out single before Darryl Strawberry tied it in the fifth with his 31st homer.

Cone doubled the seventh and scored on Wilson's single. The Pirates gained a brief 3-3 tie in their half on the inning on Ken Oberkell's RBI pinch single.

McReynolds and Carter greeted Robinson with consecutive singles in the eighth. Dave Magadan walked to lead the bases before Mazzilli's tie-breaking sacrifice fly and Wilson's sixth homer of the season, which gave him a career-high four RBI.

Randy Myers got the final six outs for his 22nd save following Bobby Bonilla's run-scoring single and Sid Bream's sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Schroeder warns he is not a 'savior'

By The Associated Press

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — The Los Angeles Raiders' fall from glory has been greatly precipitated by a fatal flaw — the lack of a quarterback.

Jay Schroeder cautions that he shouldn't be considered a "savior" for the Raiders.

"I'd like to think of myself as somebody that can play the game," the former Washington Redskins star said at a news conference Monday. "My style seems to fit with the style here, and we'll go with that. But it's not one guy out there. It's 11 guys on offense. 11 guys on defense and all the special teams."

Schroeder, who had asked out of Washington after losing his starting job to Doug Williams last season, cost the Raiders offensive lineman Jim Lachey and several conditional draft choices but they had to do something.

The Raiders slipped to 5-10 last year, their worst record in 25 years after finishing 8-8 the previous season. Coach Tom Flores retired after the 1987 campaign, and Mike Shanahan was hired to replace him.

Steffi Graf gets her wish with a tough match

NEW YORK (AP) — All week long, reporters at the U.S. Open had been asking Steffi Graf if she wanted tougher matches. And she did. Monday, she got her wish.

After losing only four games in her first three matches, Graf equaled that total in her first set against American Patty Fendick.

But the West German wonder went on one of her patented streaks and breezed into the quarterfinals with a 6-4, 6-2 victory.

"The first week went very easy," said Graf, who needs three more victories to complete the first Grand Slam since 1970. "Now comes the work."

Graf will probably be spared

Hurricanes blow into No. 1 position

By Herschel Nissenon
The Associated Press

The Miami Hurricanes aren't nearly as excited about being No. 1 in this week's Associated Press college football poll as they were when they won the 1987 national championship.

"We set our goals toward team success and working at getting better each week," quarterback Steve Walsh said Monday after the Hurricanes leaped from sixth place to the top of the poll following Saturday night's 31-0 posting of Florida State, which had been No. 1.

"We got off to a good start, but we didn't play anywhere near as good as we can offensively (Florida State 'held' Miami to 14 points). We want to continue to improve each week and get better," Walsh said. "If that happens, then all the rankings and all that other recognition will take care of itself."

Nebraska remained No. 2 while Florida State slid to 10th and Texas A&M and Tennessee dropped out of the Top Twenty.

Miami received 38 of 60 first-place votes and 1,149 of a possible 1,206 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Nebraska, No. 2 in each of this season's three polls, received 14 first-place votes and 1,113 points following a 63-13 rout of Utah State.

Miami's players apparently have taken their low-key cue from coach Jimmy Johnson.

"It's really too early in the season for a coach to be concerned about the rankings," Johnson said. "I wouldn't even address it one way or another. We have a very young team and a lot of difficult games to play. Our only concern right now is going up and playing Michigan (on Sept. 17) in a place that's very difficult to play in. All we've done is win one game."

Clemson, a 40-7 winner over Virginia Tech, climbed from fourth to third with three first-place votes and 1,003 points. Oklahoma, which opens its season this week at North Carolina, slipped from third to fourth with two first-place votes and 969 points.

LSU held onto fifth place by crushing San Diego State 59-6. The Bruins received two first-place votes and 941 points. The other first-place vote went to Southern Cal, which defeated Boston College 34-7 and rose from eighth to sixth with 678 points.

Auburn, which played away this week against Kentucky, remained seventh with 768 points while Georgia jumped from 12th to eighth with 705 points after beating Tennessee 28-17.

Michigan moved up from 10th place to ninth with 639 points. The Wolverines open this week at Notre Dame. Florida State rounds out the Top Ten with 600 points.

The Second Ten consists of LSU, West Virginia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan, South Carolina, Iowa, Penn State, Texas and Washington. Texas and Washington made the Top Twenty for the first time this season although neither has played a game yet.

Green's wait pays off

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Ken Green was standing in the 18th fairway, his hand resting on a 1-iron in his bag, watching and waiting.

He was watching Scott Verplank, on the green ahead, lining up a 20-foot birdie putt that could tie the Canadian Open.

Green was waiting to make a decision on whether to go for the water-guarded green on the par-5 finishing hole at the Glen Abbey Golf Club.

When Verplank's putt missed, Green dropped the 1-iron like a wriggling reptile and grabbed the 6-iron.

"If he'd made the putt, I'd have missed for the green. I'm glad he missed it," Green said. "It's a lot easier to hit a lay-up 6-iron and a wedge than a pure 1-iron."

Green's par at the 72nd hole on Monday gave him a final round of par 72 and a 275 total, 12 under par. The one-stroke victory in the rain-delayed tournament was worth $135,000 from the total purse of $750,000 and pushed his year's earnings to a career-high $413,087.

Verplank, who tied for second at 276 with Bill Glasson, had a closing 70 and was two under for the seven holes he played Monday. Glasson finished off a 67 with birdies on the three holes he played.

How to practice financial self-defense

A peddler of fraudulent foreign bonds was apprehended a few months ago. He was described as a French lawyer and no doubt appeared cultured with a delightful accent. He was a crook.

A bogus investment adviser who made off with millions of dollars belonging to his clients also was nabbed recently. He charmed his victims with an impeccable wardrobe and tales of glamorous living among the international jet set. He was still a con artist.

Anyone can be victimized by investment scams. The long list of Americans who have learned that expensive lesson includes prominent best-selling authors and stars of stage, screen and television. They didn't expect to be defrauded any more than you do.

Hustlers of worthless investments have a distinct advantage: their bad image. You may say to yourself, "I could recognize a film-fammer a mile off." Perhaps you expect a seedy little man in a plaid polyester jacket. Or a brassy woman wearing too much makeup.

But, education, business or professional success, a respected position in your community - none of these offers protection against being defrauded. It merely means that you will attract a better class of con artist.

When financially successful men and women are too busy or preoccupied to take control of the business of investing money, they create vacuums that con artists rush to fill.

"Taking control does not necessarily require that you become a professional investment manager. Rather, it calls for the following steps," says Bert Zahn, vice president of the National City Corp. in Cleveland, one of Ohio's largest bank holding companies.

1. Develop a coherent investment strategy tailored to your own circumstances. In the abstract, setting personal investment goals in terms of income, growth and safety sounds easy. In reality, it isn't. If you're a growth-minded investor, for example, certainly you would rather double your money in one year than in six. But you are willing to risk everything for the sake of a possible (but improbable) quick payoff? Income-oriented investors must make similar judgments. Should you go for broke, or is the highest possible return on your money less vital than the return of your money?

The development of realistic investment goals is worth the effort, not only for its own sake but also because the results promote a healthy skepticism that con artists dread.

Select investments to fit your goals. Don't settle for what someone wants to sell you. Even in times of economic uncertainty, solid investment opportunities exist. But they won't come knocking at your door. You must seek them out yourself or pay a professional adviser to research them for you.

Choose a professional adviser as carefully as you would select a million-dollar investment. If you can devote only limited time to the business of investing, good advice is the best buffer against making big mistakes.

Summing up, Zahn says the following eight habits are most useful for everyone's financial self-defense.

1. Keep your guard up. Be mindful that people who want to live well on your money may look and sound as respectable as anybody else.

2. The best defense is a good offense. By taking control of your investment program and using whatever degree of professional assistance you may require, you'll leave con artists little opportunity to practice their tricks.

3. Never send money to a stranger on the basis of a phone call.

4. Before investing in a new stock issue, read the prospectus - especially if the promoter tells you not to bother.

5. Don't take promises of extraordinary investment returns at face value. If the promoters knew an easy way to make a fortune, why would they share the secret?

6. Beware of hucksters who claim they're doing you a favor because you're a member of a certain organization, church or professional group.

7. Don't assume that state and federal regulators can protect you fully from investment scams and frauds. The perpetrators outnumber the watchdogs. By the time the law catches up to the person who took your money, they may be gone.

8. Don't be hustled by high-pressure tactics. The investment world is not going to run out of good opportunities in the next 20 minutes.

9. Beware of hucksters who claim they're doing you a favor because you're a member of a certain organization, church or professional group.

10. Don't assume that state and federal regulators can protect you fully from investment scams and frauds. The perpetrators outnumber the watchdogs. By the time the law catches up to the person who took your money, they may be gone.

Life with Willie difficult

NEW YORK (AP) - Mamas, don't let your babies grow up to be restless, says Willie Nelson, who blames his wanderlust nature for ruining three marriages.

The country music singer says in his autobiography, "Willie," due out next month from Simon and Schuster, that he prefers the road to matrimony.

Nelson met his third wife, Connie, in 1969. They married, had two children and lived in Westlake Hills on the shores of Lake Austin, Texas.

But they spent much of their time arguing, Nelson, whose hits include "Mama, Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys," and "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain," admits life as Mrs. Willie Nelson would be difficult.

No need for applause

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Pop balladeer Barry Manilow says he doesn't hunger for a applause like many of his fellow entertainers.

"But don't get me wrong. This is a great job that I've got. I enjoy it and I know there's a part of me that needs that love-me-love-me-love-me stuff," he said in a recent interview.

Philbin comes home

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Talk show host Regis Philbin took seven years to make a coast-to-coast round trip from here to New York and back to introduce a new, nationally syndicated show.

Philbin left Los Angeles and his KABC-TV "A.M. Los Angeles" morning magazine show in 1981 for a similar job in New York City, only to return for the Labor Day debut of a new celebrity talk show with Kathie Lee Gifford.

The format hasn't changed much from the early days in Los Angeles, with the obligatory how-to segments, cooking demonstrations and cozy celebrity chats.

This week "Live With Regis & Kathie" will feature an interview with Manhattan real estate tycoon Donald Trump aboard his luxury yacht and a talk with ageless funnyman Bob Hope at his Burbank mansion.

Royals shun film debut

LONDON (AP) - The Prince and Princess of Wales canceled an appearance at the premiere of a film about a daring British train robber because its star, singer Phil Collins, advised them not to go.

Collins, who plays train robber Ronald "Buster" Edwards in the film "Buster," said Monday he wrote Prince Charles and Princess Diana that they should shun the Sept. 15 premiere.

"Buster" does not in any way glorify crime" as critics have claimed, Collins said. But, he said, in light of the controversy, he wrote the royal couple "suggesting that it would probably be best if they did not attend."

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said the prince and princess were "aware of the contents of the letter that Phil Collins has written them and in the light of this they have decided not to go."

Winning the big title

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - Miss Arkansas, a blue-eyed blonde singer, has the best chances of winning the 1988 Miss America title, says a retired statistics professor.

Patti Thorn, 23, has a 7-1 chance over the 50 other contestants vying for the crown Saturday, said George L. Miller, of Bellevue, Wash.

For the past 10 years - to the displeasure of pageant officials - Miller has entered facts and figures about the contestants into his home computer and calculated their odds based on past winners and finalists.

Miller's statistics gained credibility in 1980 when he correctly predicted Cheryl Prewitt would take the title.

Doc choosy about patients

Dr. Gott Peter Gott, M.D.

Doctor's late? Try a change

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had a problem with doctors and dentists making me wait up to six hours to be seen. Don't they have a legal responsibility to provide service within a reasonable period of time?

DEAR READER: Not to my knowledge. In non-emergency situations, doctors (and dentists) have a humane, social obligation to see people on time; I am not aware of any legal obligation for perfectly valid reasons, such as emergencies. I find that most patients accept this unexpected inconvenience, providing they are told about it. I rant and rave about doctors who callously keep patients waiting without a word. I think that professionals owe their clients the courtesy of letting them know that something has come up. A professional can simply tell the office receptionist - by phone or in person - that he or she is running late, and that patients should have the option of coming back another time or waiting.

If your doctor has spells of lateness, try calling his office just before your appointment. Try calling the receptionist if Dr. X is running late; if he's hours behind, ask the receptionist if your appointment can be rescheduled for a later time that day.

However, lateness shouldn't be habitual. I can think of few situations in which the courteous physician cannot inform his patients that he is delayed. In some cases, the healer is too arrogant or inconsiderate to be kind to patients. A long waiting time does not necessarily mean that your doctor is smart, successful, busy, dedicated or involved in saving lives; more often, it means that he is insensitive and has overlooked his appointment calendar because he is greedy.

Neither you nor any other patient has to put up with long, unexplained waiting. Express your discomfort to the receptionist, walk out of the office and find a doctor who will treat you like a human being.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, "Choosing a Physician." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, Ohio 44101-3269. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: You had a letter from a mother who wondered why her 6-month-old woke up screaming at night. I'll bet the baby was hungry. Expecting a child that young to sleep through the night is unrealistic.

DEAR READER: You're probably right. Problems that seem complicated often have simple answers.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the physicians who told a patient with a serious respiratory condition that if she didn't stop smoking, she could find another doctor.

This is not only sad, it's scary. What can we expect next? Doctors who refuse to treat alcoholics, drug abusers or those who try to commit suicide? Maybe some doctors will drop patients who refuse to wear seat belts.

Is this really the "courage and professional integrity" you praised the physician for? I see it as just another form of discrimination. WARY IN SOUTHFIELD, MICH.

DEAR WARY: Did I get mail! Read on.

DEAR ABBY: I smoked for 30 years. I quit 12 years ago - cold turkey. I am tired of those crybabies who say they can't quit. There are only two things required to quit smoking - a sincere desire to quit, and never putting another cigarette in your mouth. People who say they want to quit but keep smoking are lying to themselves. They really don't want to quit.

Please notice that I use the term "quit" - not "stop." When you quit, it's over. When you merely stop, you usually start again. This may sound like semantics, but it helps. GEORGE SZILAGYI, LOS ANGELES

DEAR ABBY: I strongly disagree with the doctor who told his patient, "If you don't quit smoking, you can find another doctor. Would a real friend say, 'Stop smoking, or find another friend'?" Of course not.

I am a physician. Some of my patients smoke. I know that smoking is not good for them, and so they quit, but I'm their friend, and

DEAR DR. FRAZIER: I didn't realize how wrong I was until the critical mail started to arrive in significant numbers.

As Lynn Ashby, editorial page editor of the Houston Post, said in an address before his newspaper colleagues, "We all make mistakes. Doctors call theirs cadavers. Lawyers call theirs inmates. Diplomats call theirs wars. But in journalism, our mistakes are spread out there for all to see."

So, thanks to all of you who noticed my mistake and cared enough to let me know.

What teenagers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Conception of child a complicated process

By Robert C. Park

The development and birth of a baby is a wonderful thing. Part of the wonder is that a woman is able to conceive at all, given all of nature's requirements. There are at least six basic physical conditions that must be met for a couple to conceive a child, and, if there is a problem anywhere in this complicated process, infertility can result.

The man must produce a certain number of normal live sperm. His sperm must have an open pathway to pass from the testes out through the penis to conceive a child, and, if he must be able to ejaculate the sperm into the vagina.

His sperm must then travel up through the cervix, the uterine tubes, and into the fallopian tubes.

At the same time, the woman's ovaries must produce a healthy egg (ovulation) and release it into the tubes, where it must be fertilized by the sperm within 12 to 36 hours.

Once fertilized, the egg must migrate into the uterus, where it attaches itself in the rich lining of the womb, which nourishes it. The woman is now pregnant.

About 40 percent of the time, infertility is caused by a problem with the woman's reproductive system. Some women are infertile because they do not ovulate. For these women, "fertility drugs" can be given that will help release the egg. Most of the time, when these drugs are used, ovulation will occur within three months. Fertility drugs must be used with caution, though. Some of them can cause more than one egg to be released and fertilized, causing multiple births.

If ovulation does not occur after fertility drugs are taken, the doctor may increase the dosage. If the woman still releases no egg, then a drug known as human menopausal gonadotropin (hMG) may be recommended. Although it is more expensive and difficult to administer, the rate of pregnancy after using hMG is between 50 and 70 percent. The chance of twins, though, is two and a half times as likely with hMG.

If a couple suspects they have an infertility problem, they should see their doctor. A complete evaluation of both partners will help discover what is causing the problem and what steps must be taken. Talking to your doctor could be the first step leading to the arrival of a healthy bounding baby.

Single free copies of "Infertility: Causes and Treatments" (p-002) are available by sending a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 409 12th St. S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.

Church leaders, film studio cash in on 'Last Temptation'

By John Horn
The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — "The Last Temptation of Christ" has proven to be a blessing for conservative Christians.

Denounced by its critics as blasphemous and profane, the movie about a Jesus with human frailties not only has energized the Christian right, it has revived stagnant fund-raising, Christian leaders say.

The movie "has helped our ministry more than anything else before," said the Rev. Donald Wildmon, leader of the American Family Association. Said Don Bechler, director of communications for Campus Crusade for Christ: "This gives us a wonderful opportunity to talk about the real Jesus Christ."

At the same time, filmgoers are not avoiding the movie, as Christian leaders had hoped. In fact, the controversy seems to have prompted more people to see it.

That price, though, might be a small one for Christian activists. Beaten by negative publicity from the Jim Bakker and Jimmy Swaggart scandals, conservative Christians have used "Last Temptation" as a lightning rod around which to organize and raise money.

In addition to bringing together fundamentalists, Pentecostals, Protestants and Catholics, the controversy makes for a natural fund-raiser: It pits the conservative Christian organizations, which often depict themselves as small and struggling, against a Hollywood Goliath.

The Concerned Women for America, in a fund-raising letter, said, "Your gift of $100, $75, $50, $20 — or whatever amount — is sorely needed. We need your financial help to fight these rich Hollywood moguls."

Similarly, the American Family Association said that those "giving $15 or more to help AFA oppose the movie will receive a one year subscription to the AFA Journal."

"Jerry Falwell has been preaching about the movie for the last three weeks," said the Rev. Robert Hymers, a Los Angeles minister who has been one of the movie's most outspoken critics.

"Falwell's doing a tremendous fund-raising job through the film."

The American Society for the Defense of Tradition, Family and Property used a four-page, full-color attack on the movie to solicit small contributions. "People have put their money where their values are," said Raymond Drake, president of the organization.

Drake said that a phone campaign brought in $39,000, enough for a full-page advertisement in The New York Times against the movie.

It also may be true that some Christian-themed organizations are trying to exploit the controversy for less-than-noble purposes. "I've seen the fund-raising letters. The movie has become another hype button to raise funds," said Cal Thomas, a syndicated columnist and former communications director for the Moral Majority.

John, 41, singer, pianist and composer, is selling everything in the collection he put together over 20 years and kept at Woodside, his mansion near Windsor, west of London.

The buyer of the eyeglasses, like all the early purchasers, remained anonymous.

"I have been an Elton John fan for 15 years and keep trying to meet him, but with no luck yet," said Mitch Phillips, wearing a straw boater hat and glitzy, Elton John-style eyeglasses.

Hundreds of telephone calls from overseas bidders sent prices well above catalogue listings.

Sotheby's auction house predicted the 1,922 lots would bring in more than $5 million. The sale catalogue alone costs $67 and already is a collector's item.

Three signed photographs of the Apollo 15 astronauts dedicated to the "Rocket Man," one of John's biggest hit songs, sold for $3,549, far higher than the expected $304. A Wurlitzer jukebox expected to bring $11,830 went for $27,040.

Also for sale are John's stage costumes, Rembrandt etchings, Tiffany lamps, zany hats, beer advertisements, tartan baggies, soft toy gorillas, art deco vases and statuettes, walking sticks, pottery mugs of Queen Elizabeth II, fur coats and jewelry.

John, a millionaire many times over, rarely gives interviews but prepared a videotape to explain why he is selling his collection.

"I would rather people bought them and got pleasure from them than leave them sitting in cases... I am not too old to rock 'n' roll but I am too old to wear this lot again."

In the early 1970s, wildlife officials were concerned for a time that the birds would become established in the Northeast and flourish, potentially damaging crops. In Argentina, they are regarded as a pest because they eat many crops, including fruits.

"The birds are communal, with several families sharing a nest. They venture as far as six or seven miles, but have been seen at Milford Point — but return to their nests in groups late in the day."

Bull tracked down the nesting tree two years ago following birds along the coast at the end of the day. From afar, he saw the parrots fly to the tree. He hopped in his car and worked his way through local streets until he spotted the tree.

"As soon as I came in from the road and I looked up at the tree, I said, 'That's it.'"

The colony had dwindled several years ago with few of the birds making it through the winter, but has grown again in recent years, Bull said.

"We've had a few mild winters. That, plus there is a large increase in bird feeding. Everyone's feeding birds now. We sell birdseed up at Audubon by the megaton. It's the 'in' thing."

Bull counted 47 parakeets this spring. With those that hatched this year, the number may be about 60 now. The tree has 15 large nests, some of them 5 feet by 3 feet.

"This is the most that I have ever counted here. For a long time, there were 15, 16, 20," Bull said.

Elton John fans pay thousands for memorabilia

LONDON (AP) — Eyeglasses with blue and yellow lenses sold for $5,400 today as a four-day auction began of rock star Elton John's belongings — from diamond-encrusted platform boots to Rembrandt etchings.

Rare parakeet finds a home in Bridgeport

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Looking about 50 feet up a fir tree on Battery Park Drive is not quite like taking a journey to the forests of South America, but thanks to a rare parakeet it's close.

In that tree lives the only colony of monk parakeets in Connecticut and, quite likely, in all of New England.

"It's like being under a big fruit tree in Argentina," said Milan G. Bull, director of field studies and ornithology with the Connecticut Audubon Society.

The most popular story about the birds' arrival is that they escaped from a broken crate upon arrival at Kennedy International Airport 20 years ago and flew off throughout the metropolitan area.

The light green birds have a whitish-gray face and throat and some blue on the wings. They fly in and out of the tree busily all day long.

often returning with sticks in their beaks to build their large nests. Their call is a raucous, screech.

"Very, very few people know about this colony nesting here," Bull said. "Once in a while I'll bring somebody down here and they're like, 'Holy mackerel. What's this?'"

The tree is at the edge of the property where Susan and Mike Kuta live, in a neighborhood of larger, expensive homes with views of Long Island Sound.

"It's been a terrific experience having them here," she said. "It's like living in a jungle. Our visitors just can't believe it when we tell them we have a colony of wild parrots in our yard."

After the Kennedy Airport escape in the late 1960s, small colonies of the parakeets — small, slender parrots with tapered tails — appeared on Long Island and the southern Connecticut coast.

NOTICE TO COVENTRY SCHOOL EMPLOYEES AND COVENTRY PARENTS. The Board of Education will take action on September 8, 1988 on a recommendation to request a deferral to May 1, 1989 of the deadline for submitting an asbestos management plan pursuant to Section 3013 of the Toxic Substances Control Act for the following school facilities within our jurisdiction: Coventry Grammar School, George Hervey Robinson, Capt. Nathan Hale, Coventry High School and the Central Warehouse. Governor O'Neill requested a waiver of most of the provisions of the ASHERA regulations on February 17, 1988, based upon the implementation of Connecticut's asbestos abatement program. It has been recommended that each public school district in Connecticut apply for a deferral since the EPA will not have notified the Governor of its decision regarding the waiver request until late in the year. 018-09
