Adopt a pet: Big Red ready

By Barbara Richmond
Manchester Herald

Big Red, a handsome and friendly golden retriever in this week's featured pet at the dog pound. Big Red is 1 year old and is reddish-gold in color. He was found at the corner of Center and McKee streets on Sept. 16. Dog Warden Richard Rand said he may be part Irish setter. When found he was wearing a wide orange collar and another narrow collar. He will shake hands with anyone who will pay attention to him. The only other dog at the pound, as of Tuesday, was Britt, the dog featured in last week's column. Britt is a 6-month-old female mixed breed. She was found on Virginia Road on Sept. 5. She's very gentle and Rand said he believes someone has spent time training her as she sits on command.

The dog pound is located on town property off Olcott Street near the landfill area. The dog warden is at the pound weekdays from noon to 1 p.m. and there is someone there from 6 to 9 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. The phone number at the pound is 646-6542 or you can call the police department, 646-4500, and they will get a message to the dog warden.

There is a $5 fee to adopt a dog and the new owner must have the dog licensed. Before being licensed the dog must have its rabies shot. The Glastonbury unit of Proctors of Animals is especially seeking a good home for a pair of puppies that were apparently abandoned and are temporarily being kept at the home of a member. They are about 9 months old and are dachshund-terrier cross. They are small and won't grow any larger. The league member who is keeping them said they are excellent house pets. They are house broken and very good about walking on leashes. The female has been spayed and they have been named Hansel and Gretel. They've even been given bubble baths. Anyone interested should call 653-2164.

The group also has many other dogs, cats and kittens in need of homes. Among them is a beautiful young calico cat, left locked up in a house when the owners moved away. She has been spayed. Anyone interested should call the above number or 659-3106. Aid to Helpless Animals Inc.,

The league, made up of volunteers, needs good homes for the many other cats, kittens and dogs that are rescued. Such as a bag of 3-day-old kittens thrown into the Connecticut River to drown, a starving dog wandering the streets, and kittens left up in a box and left by the side of the road to starve. The league uses the money donated by members, to buy food, and pay for veterinary care for the animals. Anyone wishing to join the league or donate should call any of the following numbers: 242-2156, 623-0489, or 742-3768.

Police Roundup

Man charged after crash

A man was arrested Wednesday after his car, which was left unattended with the engine running, crashed into a railing fence at the Wetherell Village Condominiums on Wetherell Street, police said. William Berger, 23, of South Windsor, was charged with evading responsibility and operating a motor vehicle under suspension, police said. According to police reports, Berger's car apparently jumped a curb and crashed into and tore out two sections of a stockade fence before running into a tree. Berger apparently started screaming at a resident there, saying that someone had "done this to him" by starting up the car without his knowledge, police said. He told the resident he was going to pick up his sister and left the scene, police said.

Police found him at the home of a friend. Berger is also wanted on a warrant in Coventry for failing to appear in court for charges of taking a motor vehicle without the owner's permission, police said. Berger is being held at Brooklyn jail on a $1,000 bond. No court date has been set.

Thoughts

In the middle of this busy time of year, it is easy to become consumed with ourselves. It is important to also make time for family and friends. Take the time to listen to your children, your parents, those people you care about the most. Take the time to really listen to what is most important, not scheduling, but hopes and dreams, hurts, and fears. Take the time to share moments of quiet conversation and fun, to remember your connections with others.

Alternate teacher gets her chance

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Joanna Guinan is in a class by herself. Guinan, 28, of Manchester, is the only teacher in town who became a teacher through the state alternate teaching certification program, said Wilson E. Deakin Jr., assistant superintendent. She teaches French at Manchester High School.

The state program was designed to attract bright liberal arts graduates or people in successful careers to teaching by removing the normal requirements for certification. Normal certification leads to years of taking education courses in college and four months of student teaching. The program was started in response to a lack of teachers, according to state education officials. The program offers instruction in teaching grades 4 through 6, and the teaching of English, foreign languages, mathematics, science and social studies on the secondary level. "It probably would have taken me more time to become a teacher through the traditional route, Guinan said. "It was definitely a good opportunity for changing a career at that point."

Visit to Manchester educates Germans

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Twenty-two German students bit into a piece of Americana this week as they were introduced to an American favorite: pizza. "It's good," he said about the pizza. He added about Manchester: "It's good for cycling. The streets are bigger and larger."

Wannamacher said the most interesting part of visiting Manchester was identifying the differences between American and German students. He said Manchester High was not as "free" as his high school. "Americans, I'm just not sure what are more variable," he said. "The way of life is different. I think... we got the impression the school isn't as free. If you don't go to a number of lessons, you have to repeat the year." Another student, 16-year-old Malke Wirtz, also agreed that Manchester was worlds apart from Germany. "It's nice," she said. "The scenery, the houses are different than the Germans."

Once people become more familiar with the program, Guinan said its graduates would be accepted more easily. "If it's endorsed by the state, there must be a need. We're responding to a genuine need in this state," she said.

Before being accepted into the program, students had to have at least a 3.0 grade point average and a bachelor's degree from an accredited institution with a major in or closely related to the intended area of teaching. Manchester school officials received about 10 applications and interviewed three to four program graduates, said Deakin. He said this year the number of people hired may be low because many school systems hired most of their teachers before the program concluded. In upcoming years, he said he expects more program graduates to teach locally. "We're fairly confident these people are coming into our schools and will have an (important) effect," Deakin said. "I think they're going to be strong contributors."

There were 107 people accepted into the program, and only one failed to graduate, program state education officials said. The visiting students had to study English for six years before they became eligible for the trip, said Dieter Lehmann, vice principal of the German high school. However, the students only study English three times a week, he said. Lincoln said the students are attending Manchester High during their stay and will visit such places as Hartford, Boston, Mystic and Stratford, Mass. The group recently visited New York City, she said. On Oct. 5, the group will attend a farewell party where they will be named honorary citizens of Manchester, she said.

Cheney bond review slated

A $400,000 state bond issue to help pay for restoration of historic Cheney Hall will be considered by the State Bonding Commission when it meets Friday at 10:30 a.m. in the Legislative Office Building. State Rep. James McCavanagh, D-Manchester, said Tuesday he had urged Gov. William O'Neill to put the issue on the commission's agenda. McCavanagh said he told the governor that the hall is of historic importance to the entire state and that people who visit the state to see historic sites will want to see the restored hall. The Cheney Hall Foundation plans to use the funds for some preliminary interior work. The renovation has already been exterior. At a meeting last week, Donald Kuehl, vice chairman of the foundation, said tentative plans call for using the grant for basic electrical work, modernization of the sprinkler system, installing a heat pump which will be the main component of the heating system, and insulating the space above it.

Landlords complain about rent board, may band together

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

A landlord who was ordered by the town Fair Rent Commission to delay a planned rent increase says she and several others may form a "landlords' commission" to make sure they are fairly represented. Annette G. Kelehan also said several landlords are planning to show up at tonight's Fair Rent Commission meeting to complain about what they believe is an unfair treatment of landlords by the commission. Kelehan, an owner of a North Street apartment who was ordered by the commission last month to phase in a rent increase, said today that she, her husband, and five or six other landlords plan to attend tonight's meeting to watch the proceedings and to complain about the treatment of landlords.

She criticized the commission, which held its first meeting in June, for not being organized and said that "a couple of members were very inconsiderate of landlords." Tonight's Fair Rent Commission meeting is scheduled for 7:00 p.m. in the Lincoln Center hearing room. Ronald Kraatz, the town health director, said earlier this week that no new complaints had been received by the commission. Kelehan and her husband, Charles P. Kelehan, own East Hartford residents, who are apartments at 65-67 North St. Last month, the Fair Rent Commission ruled that the Kelehan could increase rent for the upstairs apartment, 65 North St., from $550 a month to $675 a month, but with a three-month phase-in and only if code violations were corrected. Kelehan has said that the tenants of the apartment, Rita E. Kelsey and Raymond E. Krueger, have failed to pay water bills for the apartment. She has accused them of being evicted and promised to leave the apartment by Sept. 1. "I'm going to thank (the commission) for giving me the encouragement to stay there," Kelehan said when asked what comments she would make to the commission. "Neither Kelsey nor Krueger could be reached for comment this morning. She said that five or six other landlords had told her Wednesday that they would also attend tonight's meeting. Kelehan said that she and her husband are seeking to have Kelsey and Krueger evicted from the apartment because they have no lease and because they have failed to pay the September rent. She said that two of the housing code violations cited by town officials — the lack of heat in an enclosed porch and a loose electrical outlet there — would be appealed to the town's Housing Code Board of Appeals."

MARC will relocate bakery, thrift shop

By Nancy Concelmon
Manchester Herald

The bakery and thrift shop operated by the Manchester Association for Retarded Citizens will move to new locations next month and will open longer hours with larger staffs. Laurie Prytko, executive director for MARC, said the thrift shop, Secondhand Rose, is scheduled to open Oct. 4 at 257 Spruce St., the former location of the Bike Shop, which has moved to Main Street. The thrift store is currently located at Bentley School at 57 Hollister St.

The bakery store, currently located on Fumell Place, will move to 846 Main St. around Oct. 19. The date isn't definite yet, but Prytko said she hopes to complete the move within a couple of days. The baking facilities will stay at Bentley, but new baking equipment will be purchased, Prytko said. Secondhand Rose is moving because of plans by the town to reopen the Highland Park School in September. Under that plan, the town Recreation Department would be moved from Highland Park School to the west wing of Bentley School, currently occupied by the offices of the Manchester Workshop run by MARC. The workshop offices would be moved to the part of the school now occupied by the thrift shop. The bakery is being forced to move from Fumell Place because of the reconstruction of Main Street. Other businesses on Fumell Place and Oak Street will be forced to move by spring 1989, when the Department of Transportation will take them to build a bypass road needed during the reconstruction.

James Lewis, director of rights for MARC, said today that most of the properties needed for the bypass road are still being appraised and no eviction dates have been set. Other properties that will be taken for the road are Allstate Business Machines and Yale Typewriter on Fumell Place and the Oak Street Packaging Store. The Sinnamon Shop Restaurant and Manchester Shoe Repair on Oak Street.

Cars damaged in contest

HARTFORD (AP) — A wet T-shirt contest among female state police officers from seven states earlier this month caused a stampede that resulted in damage to six police vehicles, according to a report published today.

The vehicles were apparently damaged as some of the 1,800 active and retired officers attending a picnic scrambled for vantage points for the contest, officials told The Hartford Courant.

State police said their internal affairs unit was investigating the incident. No firm estimate of the cost of the damage at the Sept. 14 picnic has been made, but it is believed to be less than $10,000, state police said.

"We now have started six separate investigations to determine the exact circumstances. We'll have to take it from there," said Sgt. Scott O'Mara, a state police spokesman.

IN THE HOLE — Skip Ziegler, an employee of a Bristol service station, looks under a garbage truck after it sunk into an old cesspool at the rear of a home in that city on Wednesday. It took about an hour to raise the truck and free the tire. The accident happened in a narrow dirt driveway not much wider than the truck.

Ammonia levels high

WATERBURY (AP) — A survey shows ammonia levels in the Naugatuck River have quadrupled near sewage treatment plants in Waterbury and in Naugatuck, according to the state Department of Environmental Protection.

"The ammonia levels are about four times the (federal) Environmental Protection Agency's criteria for recommended maximum levels for a healthy stream environment," said Art Mauger, senior sanitary planner for the DEP.

The one-day survey was conducted in June at 20 checkpoints from Waterbury to Shelton, where the Naugatuck and Housatonic rivers merge.

Researchers tested for the presence of dissolved oxygen, ammonia, nitrates, heavy metals and organic waste.

Police to use pistols

WINDSOR (AP) — Windsor Police are trading in their .357-caliber Magnum revolvers for more powerful Smith & Wesson .45-caliber semiautomatic pistols.

Police say the new guns are lighter, easier to fire, and will give them an edge in fighting criminals.

"They've served us well," Lt. Nicholas Riccio, the department's spokesman, said of the old revolvers.

Union, officials differ

GROTON (AP) — Union and Electric Boat officials failed to see eye to eye on the defense giant's plans to subcontract work at the strike-bound plant.

The union, the Metal Trades Council, represents about 10,000 workers, who walked off their jobs July 1 after failing to reach a settlement with Electric Boat on a new three-year contract.

The union struck over Electric Boat's demand that employees accept lump-sum bonuses instead of wage increases in a new contract.

Postalism is serious

STAMFORD (AP) — An education official from the University of Beijing in China, who was poisoned when he mistakenly ate dangerous mushrooms on Friday, remains in critical condition at Stamford Hospital, officials said.

Zhangjian Chen, 37, has not shown signs of recovery, but his condition did not seem to be worsening, said Yang Shiqi, a spokesman for the Consulate-General of the People's Republic of China.

Weicker holds commanding lead

HARTFORD (AP) — Republican U.S. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. holds a 14-point lead over his Democratic challenger, Joseph I. Lieberman, although more than a quarter of those surveyed are still undecided, according to a new Hartford Courant/Connecticut Poll.

The poll, released today, was based on a telephone survey taken between Sept. 12 and Sept. 18 of 512 registered voters, or those who said they would register.

It showed 44 percent supported Weicker, 30 percent backed Lieberman and 27 percent didn't indicate a preference.

According to the survey, Weicker continues to lead Lieberman among Democrats, 41 to 39 percent, and among unaffiliated voters, 40 to 27 percent. He leads among Republicans, 51 to 22 percent.

Despite Lieberman's attempt to differentiate his record from Weicker's, relatively few of those polled see major differences between the two men on the issues. Two-thirds of those polled said they saw either no appreciable difference or didn't know enough about the candidates' positions to cite any.

"What the figures are noteworthy for is the relative lack of complaint about the well-known Weicker," said G. Donald Ferree Jr., the poll director. "Such discontent is often thought to be an important factor in successful challenges of incumbents."

"The questions so far discussed suggest that much of the electorate may see the Weicker-Lieberman choice as between two goods," Ferree said.

As for the voters think will win, the poll found that 68 percent believe Weicker will be returned for a fourth term, while 14 percent believe Lieberman will unseat him. About one in five, 18 percent, had no clear-cut preference.

The poll, was conducted by the Institute for Social Inquiry at the University of Connecticut and has a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

Ann urges readers: Vote for Weicker

STAMFORD (AP) — Sen. Lowell Weicker Jr. has found a powerful ally in advice columnist Ann Landers because of his stance on abortion.

Weicker, R-Conn., endured satirical barbs last month by well-known conservative William F. Buckley Jr., who said he would distribute bumper stickers reading, "Don't abort your child, he might grow up to vote against Weicker."

But unlike Buckley, who endorsed Weicker's Democratic opponent in the ongoing Senate race, Landers lauds Weicker, R-Conn., and fellow Republican Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming for defending a woman's right to have an abortion on a recent segment of NBC's "Meet the Press."

"As long as we keep sending men like Weicker and Simpson back to the Senate, democracy and freedom will be alive and well in this country," Landers writes in a column scheduled for publication on Oct. 4.

Landers was responding to a Denver woman who thanks the advice columnist for supporting the right to abortion. The woman wrote to say she identified with a letter writer who signed as "Gully in Connecticut," and told how she felt her baby's death from a rare blood disorder was God's punishment for an earlier abortion.

"I don't feel that I deserve any medals for courage, but I can tell you two people who do," Landers begins in response.

She went on to describe the Aug. 14 broadcast of "Meet the Press" when Weicker and Simpson stood up to pro-life Sen. Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire (also a Republican) and made it abundantly clear that they thought women should have the right to decide this issue without government interference.

Crime rate up by 3.8 percent

HARTFORD (AP) — State police report that motor vehicle theft was up 18.8 percent in 1987 compared to the year before, while the overall crime rate was up 3.8 percent.

Police reported a total of 16,832 vehicles stolen, including 4,788 cars, 882 trucks and buses, 1,262 motorcycles and other vehicles. About two-thirds of the stolen vehicles were recovered.

Police also handled more murders, rapes, aggravated assaults, burglaries and larcenies, but fewer robberies and arsons, according to figures compiled in the state police report. "Crime in Connecticut,"

Wilton Police Chief Angelo Toscano, president of the Connecticut Police Chiefs Association, said Wednesday he's not surprised by the increase in car thefts and larcenies. He said certain crimes become popular for a time, and larceny is now popular due to the "crack epidemic."

He said addicts of crack, a powerful form of cocaine, often need a quick fix, and larcenies and motor vehicle thefts provide a quick route to easy money. A stolen car, for instance, can be broken down into parts and sold for three times its book value, he said.

Burglaries increased 2.2 percent to 39,028 incidents with $27.3 million worth of property stolen. Seventy percent, or 27,628, were residential burglaries. Non-residential burglaries declined 1 percent while residential burglaries climbed 4.9 percent.

Larceny, theft of any property except motor vehicles, increased 2.9 percent to 90,531 incidents.

As for the overall increase in crime, Toscano blames repeat criminals and a system that isn't tough enough on crooks.

"I think police are doing a fairly decent job," he said. "Recidivism is a problem. How many of the crimes are committed by the same people?"

He said legislators, judges, prosecutors, police and prison officials must work together to set definite jail terms for criminals and then work to keep convicts behind bars.

In particular, Toscano said

Mystery grass continues to baffle experts

DARIEN (AP) — Several clumps of ornamental grass growing along Interstate 95 has caught the eye of botanists, who are uncertain of its species and watching to make sure it doesn't become a nuisance.

"We know it's a miscanthus, but we don't know its species," Kurt Bluemel said Wednesday, referring to the plant's genus. Samples have been sent to the Smithsonian Institution, the New York Botanical Garden, Connecticut College and Yale University. All agree that the grass is either a miscanthus sacchariflorus or miscanthus floridulus.

Making the identification difficult is that the grass, which is native to Japan, has not yielded a single flower, which could be used to determine its species. It also hasn't sprouted up anywhere else in Connecticut.

Bluemel, an ornamental grass expert who runs a nursery in Baldwin, Md., is the person who has come the closest to discovering the identity of the grass. This spring, he grew a flower sprout on a sample of the grass he has at his business. But when the plant was transplanted from his greenhouse to outdoors, the sprout was broken off and no flower bloomed.

He expects to get a flower next year.

The grass is growing in about 10 colonies along the Interstate highway. Some of the patches are a few feet long, while others are 100 feet long and 20 feet wide, said Wendy R. Dreyer, an amateur grass specialist from New London.

"It hasn't shown itself to be a nuisance plant," said Dreyer.

Springfield inmates stage a short protest

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Sheriff Michael J. Ashe Jr. headed for a meeting today with three of the 150 inmates who had staged an hour-long sit-in at the county jail packed at twice its capacity.

"It was just a sit-in. There was no real disrespect. They obviously just wanted to talk to me," the sheriff said Wednesday as he emerged from a brief meeting with the protesting prisoners.

The inmates in the recreation room returned peacefully to their cells at 4:15 p.m. Wednesday after Ashe promised to listen to their complaints. He said the prisoners gave no specifics, but he attributed the unrest to overcrowding. The century-old, four-story brick jail, built to hold 312 prisoners, houses 688.

"We are, to me, the most overcrowded of any urban jail in the state," Ashe said.

The sit-in came without warning after a two-hour exercise break. The prisoners refused to budge from the recreation room when Ashe sent word he would talk only with three representatives.

"To show my good faith, I personally went to the yard and delivered the message," he said. "With that, they returned to their cells."

Cheers, applause and whistles could be heard outside the prison during Ashe's visit.

There were no injuries during the disturbance and no property was damaged, Ashe said.

Police ringed the jail during the disturbance, and state police closed off one exit of Interstate 91, which runs alongside the jail. The Connecticut River borders the other side of the prison.

Ashe said the reasons for the protest were unclear, but he was told by guards that the prisoners wanted so-called contact visits, more changes of clothes and other privileges he said were indications of their frustration with the packed jail. Prisoners are allowed visits from friends and family, but have to sit across a table.

"Quite honestly, I think overcrowding is the key issue," Ashe said.

Of the inmates, 410 are serving sentences up to 2½ years and 288 are awaiting trial.

Fonda's exercise tapes back on store shelves

GROTON (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda's exercise videotapes were put back on the shelves of a Naval submarine base store after the commanding officer reversed a decision to remove them, a base spokesman said.

Declaring that the tapes are not prejudicial to good order and discipline, Capt. John Cox ordered that the store could again sell them. Lt. Cmdr. John Ward said Wednesday.

The tapes had been removed from the military store's shelves after complaints about Fonda's anti-Vietnam War activities, Ward said.

Ward said while Cox was on leave, another officer ordered that the tapes be removed from the shelves. When the captain returned, he ordered that the tapes be put back on the shelves.

John W. Pillar, a member of the Groton Representative Town Meeting, who complained to Navy authorities about the sale of the tapes, said he was "very, very disappointed" by the decision.

"We don't feel she (Fonda) should be making money on the bodies of the men who were lost over there, that is what it

Directors wise to get citizen help

Manchester's town directors were wise to decide not to take upon themselves alone the responsibility for selecting a new town manager.

The task facing the town is to pick a manager who will do the job well and continue to do it well. The expectation should be that the new manager will remain in office as long as his performance is satisfactory to the members of successive boards of directors, which means ultimately to the majority of citizens those directors represent.

Directors are elected for terms of two years. Many serve for several terms, of course, but their tenures do not compare with those of town managers in well-run council-manager governments.

If it is not assumed that a manager will serve for an extended period, answering to a number of boards of directors, one of the greatest benefits of council-manager government — continuity in administration — will be denied.

Because the selection of a manager has such long-term implications, it is fortunate that the directors have decided to include non-directors on a search committee.

The makeup of the committee should be bipartisan. The committee's approach to the search should be non-partisan.

The final decision, including the negotiation of a contract if there is to be a contract, rests with the directors. They should not delegate that responsibility, but they can and should seek the advice of leading citizens in the initial stages of making a choice.

Keep Welcker in Washington

To the Editor:

Sen. Lowell P. Welcker Jr. has admirably served our state and the nation for 18 years. He is our senior senator as well as a senior member of the U.S. Senate. Sen. Welcker understands the plight of handicapped people and their families. I personally had the experience of meeting with him in the 1970s regarding various repressive attitudes and conditions faced by blind and disabled people in the United States. After careful review of the issues, he took action. Today, housing, education, employment and public access are greatly improved. Connecticut — and all of us who live and work here — are Sen. Welcker's No. 1 priority. His votes and actions truly reflect what is in our best interest.

When the campaign season began, I decided to be an advocate for the senator. His opponent has served the state well in his current role. I voted for him as attorney general and would do so again. It is my feeling that he would not do a better job than Sen. Welcker in Washington. Negative campaigning has always offended me. There are numerous issues of great importance to be campaigned upon — such as the economy, the environment, public health and safety concerns, social problems, etc. Why can't we see some positive outreach in the Democrats campaign rather than the negative style currently observed?

I am writing to urge your support of Sen. Welcker on Nov. 8. We need to keep him in Washington on behalf of all of us as he is Connecticut's best.

My name is Fannie Hewitt Kiebish. I was born and raised in Manchester 82 years ago. I watched Manchester grow into a village and then into a city. My favorite song is "I Love Those Dear Hearts and Gentle People Who Live in My Home Town."

Fifteen years ago I came to Arizona to take care of my sick brother. Then we ran out of money and I had to stay. I will be 82 on Sept. 24. I would like to hear from old friends back east.

Mr. Atkinson's wonderful story

To the Editor:

I read the "Growing up in Manchester in the '20s and '30s" by Mr. Atkinson at least several times now, and what beautiful, peaceful memories came back to me. Although I was born June 1937

I do remember much of what the story spoke of. My family goes back to the early 1800s, especially on my dad's side. In fact, Hillstown was named after a great-great grandfather. My dad (Willard Brewer Hills) worked almost four decades for Pratt & Whitney (1937 to 1971), many of the later years in the "wind tunnel" as a foreman. My mom, Josephine S. Hills, raised three sisters Barbara, Brenda and Laura, plus my brother, Alan, and me. We attended the older elementary and high school of Manchester.

Relatives that still live in or around Manchester are Mr. and Mrs. Ed Fielz of Wapping and my aunt, Rose Abratis, of Doane Street. My dad's early homesteads were across from Manchester Green School back around 1900. When they moved to the corner of Spruce and East Center streets, Mr. Kemp's house was across the street, and Watkins Funeral Home on the other side of the house. I could go on and on. Thanks to your beautiful writing of memories of Manchester.

After serving 24 years in the U.S. Air Force and having been stationed in South America and Germany plus numerous other places, many of which had many beautiful sights, I still yearn for Manchester like salmon returning to its original stream. To me, Manchester was, is and always will be the absolutely most wonderful place on earth. I know it has changed the tremendously since I left for the Air Force in 1956, but the memories from 1937 to 1956 will forever be vivid in my mind.

Thank you kindly, Mr. Atkinson, for having written such a heartwarming story.

White House rustled into cowboy deal

WASHINGTON — When Wyoming's "Cowboys on Everest" climbing expedition ran into financial trouble, Wyoming's cowboys in Congress rustled up deal with the White House.

Perhaps never before has a mountain-climbing team had the president's signature on its backpacks. But out in Wyoming where the state's conservative senators and congressmen have been Reagan loyalists for almost eight years, anything is possible.

The 34 members of the expedition are now ascending toward the 29,028-foot peak in the Himalayas. But unlike climbers before them, this expedition arrived at the foothills of the Himalayas in an Air Force C-5 jet.

Why is the Air Force rolling out the red carpet for civilian mountain climbers? "We were given orders to provide transportation for them," an Air Force spokesman told our associate, Jim Lynch. Those orders came down from top brass at the Pentagon, which gets its orders from the White House.

Wyoming Sens. Alan Simpson and Malcolm Wallop, along with Rep. Dick Cheney, all Republicans, jointly sent a letter to the White House earlier this year urging presidential support for the "Cowboys on Everest" expedition.

Reagan's top science adviser, Dr. William Graham, took a liking to the expedition and endorsed it. With his backing, the expedition was vaulted to the status of White House sponsorship. Everest climbs are costly and teams normally raise money from corporate and individual sponsors. The White House credentials helped the cowboy climbers trim $36,000 in transportation costs from their $1 million budget.

"I've never heard of anything like this before," said a spokesman for Citizens Against Government Waste. If the expedition is a precedent setter, what will we see the White House sponsor next? Could a pack of powerful California conservatives get the Air Force to fly a band of Californians to Cape Town for a "Surfers in South Africa" competition? As far-fetched as that sounds, the climbing expedition is just as far-fetched. Everest climbs are a personal challenge for climbers, but the public benefit is questionable. A climb holds nowhere near the interest generated by Olympic athletes who compete without the benefit of Uncle Sam's largess.

"Cowboys on Everest" emerged as a promotional brainchild for the 1990 Wyoming centennial celebration. The climbers plan to scale Mount Everest's East Rongbuk glacier and the Northeast Ridge. Only six of the 34 members of the team will attempt the summit. Two female climbers hope to be the first American women to reach the top of Everest.

Scientists on the expedition will do medical research with a new high-altitude breathing apparatus and geologists will study the terrain. The climbers approached Everest from Tibet, and that is where the Air Force came in. Boeing had already leased the C-5 flight to carry a helicopter to Tibet for a demonstration, so the Air Force arranged to have the cowboys dropped off in Lhasa, the capital. An Air Force spokesman noted that Boeing, not the taxpayers, paid for the flight to Lhasa. But free flights have a way of irritating commercial airlines. China Airlines was so disgruntled with the American failure to fly on its planes that it charged the expedition a $25,000 landing fee in Beijing.

When the Everest adventure is over in late October, the climbers will probably leave China on the Chinese airline and fly to Japan. But from Japan to Travis Air Force Base in California, they will fly a commercial plane chartered by the Air Force Military Airlift Command. That expense — $12,000 — will come out of the taxpayers' pockets. The military rarely uses its Military Airlift Command for civilians. Members of Congress on official business are the exception.

The climbers won't even have to flash their cash to make the last leg of the journey. The Wyoming National Guard has orders to pick up the climbers in California and take them home.

User-friendly taxes
The Internal Revenue Service is sponsoring a pilot program to test electronic filing of tax returns. Certain professional tax preparers have been authorized to file computer-written returns using telephone lines. The IRS likes the system because it cuts down on paperwork and because it improves existing programs, help create new computer-based learning technologies and build workplace literacy programs.

He adds, "We need a Citizen Literacy Corps — an army of well-trained, effectively supervised volunteers. Funded with an investment of $25 million, the corps would work in concert with adult education professionals to inject new enthusiasm and vitality into volunteer literacy programs."

That's a brilliant idea, and one that is not expensive. As we have reported, the number of literacy volunteers has doubled in two years, mainly due to ABC-TV, PBS-TV and newspaper ad campaigns.

The numbers are still not large — only 100,000 volunteers now. And contrary to a widespread impression, 90 percent of adult literacy training is conducted today by paid staff, not volunteers. But if one had the prestige of being a "Citizen Literacy Corps" member, and some training — perhaps a million volunteers could be enlisted. In literacy improvement, Dukakis has shown more competence than Bush.

How to deal with hot air at government meetings

When the directors of the Eighth Utilities District walked into the community room of Mayfair Gardens Monday night to conduct their monthly meeting, the room was a bit stuffy from being closed for a while.

It was hot from the lingering high temperatures of the waning summer, so the directors turned on a couple of air conditioners.

That solved the temperature problem, but it created another one. The air conditioners made so much noise it was difficult for the few non-directors at the meeting to hear what was being said. A couple of newspaper reporters kept shifting positions according to which director was speaking at any given time.

It must be hard to carry on dignified deliberations with a reporter gaping into your face and trying to read your lips.

Director Willard Marvin called attention to the auditory inadequacies of the situation, and prompted a discussion about finding the lost components for the district's public address system. Somehow they were misplaced.

District President Thomas Landers is going to look for them. If he can't find them, or if he learns the system isn't adequate, he has the authority to spend up to $500 to get something that will do the job.

Over South, when members of the Cheney Historic District Commission or the Cheney Hall Foundation meet in the Probate Court, the air conditioner would drown out their words if it were left on.

Judge of Probate William FitzGerald has a solution. He turns on the air conditioner early to cool the place and turns it off when the meeting begins. With the air conditioner off, it's possible to hear what's being said — and to hear the sirens when firefighters dash out of the central fire station across the street.

We wonder if there's any relationship between the length of Probate Court meetings and the time it takes the room to get warm after the air conditioner is turned off.

FitzGerald controls a powerful parliamentary weapon there.

THE CAT'S MEOW — The pupils in Pat Cleary's kindergarten classes at Martin School are delighted to find they've got a new classmate. Especially because this one has four legs.

Cleary's morning kindergartners found a small, white and tan cat on the playground Tuesday, and brought her in to spend a few hours in their classroom.

Both morning and afternoon classes petted the cat, and encouraged their teacher to keep her as the class mascot. Cleary took the cat home overnight, then brought it back to Martin on Wednesday and Thursday. "Thinking it might be claimed by its owner. If the cat isn't claimed by Friday, then Cleary and her husband will have a new pet. It will be their fourth, she said.

WET WEDDING — It was a normal wedding, a regular at-home reception, until the groom, his father-in-law and members of the wedding party ended up wringing out their tuxedos.

On Sept. 16, Prudence Malone, sixth child of John and Beverly Malone of 64 Prospect St., married Robert Lange, a former college swimmer. The reception, held in the Malone's backyard, began at 2 p.m.

At about 6 p.m., the men in the wedding party, many of them also former college swimmers, decided it was time for Lange to take a dip in the backyard pool — tux and all.

"I saw about eight of the ushers pop the groom in the pool," Dr. Malone said. "Before long, all eight of them were in the pool. I ended up in there, too."

The next morning, Dr. Malone headed out the back door and saw the tuxes hanging on a clothesline with a row of black shoes underneath. "I have a feeling that some of those 45-long tuxes ended up as 39-shorts," he said.

BEFORE — This was St. James Church on downtown Main Street before the September 1938 hurricane took down the steeple. The rescued bell is now on the church's front lawn.

A great '38, then the hurricane came

1938 was a big year for many of us. We were seniors at Manchester High. That fall brought us the Manchester High School basketball championships. Our team won the Connecticut and New England high school basketball titles. I played off at Brown University in Providence, R.I. The fall also brought us the infamous Hurricane of 1938.

In the 1930s, the U.S. Weather Bureau didn't have the sophisticated weather computers and satellite photos we are blessed with today.

One Sept. 21, 1938, the bureau only predicted a "tropical disturbance."

The low pressure system funneled its way straight through Long Island and, of course, into Connecticut and New England.

On the 21st they warned us at Manchester High School to head straight for home at 2:30 p.m.

I hurried through my Manchester Herald route. I left my last customer, the Mary Cheney Library at Center Park, at 3:30 p.m. I didn't have to pedal my bike — the wind and rain pushed me right down Main Street to my front door at Cottage and Maple streets.

The ground in Manchester had been soaked by rain by recent storms. By 4 p.m. giant elms, maples and oak trees were swaying and twisting violently. They gradually started to crash to the ground. Goodbye, electricity and telephones! My father's house on Cottage Street was a three-decker. I shot right up to the third floor, where we had a ringside seat. My mother and I were getting a little "shook." We mopped and swabbed where the rain was forcing its way through window and door casings.

Manchester Yesterdays

What really frightened us was that we had been watching the St. James Church steeple, in plain sight from the third floor. Finally, the swaying stopped and we could see and also hear the bell, belly and all crash to the front steps.

At 17, I was starting to think this is the end of the ball game, for good.

St. James has been without a steeple ever since. The original bell is suspended from the pylon at the corner of Park and Main streets, near the church rectory.

After the storm, for two weeks, Manchester at sunset looked like a Carrier & Ives print. Each home in town had candles and oil lamps for light. Chain saws hadn't been invented. For weeks, two-man bucksaws and one-man power axes were the tools of the day.

More misery: The Connecticut River, as usual, had flooded out our only bridge, the Bulkeley. Large parts of Hartford and East Hartford were under water.

My father, a working foreman for the Connecticut Trolley and Bus Co., had to room in Hartford for two weeks, until all of the trolleys were rolling again. Manchester and the rest of Connecticut were only one-fourth in density and population the state is today. Can you imagine what a Category 5 hurricane would do in damage in 1988?

Reagan as friend of U.N.

By W. Dale Nelson

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, a sharp critic of the United Nations during much of his administration, is being pictured by his aides as one of the world body's stoutest champions as he prepares to say his U.N. farewells.

Reagan will make what is expected to be his final appearance before the international forum in a visit Monday and Tuesday for the opening of the annual General Assembly session in New York.

Aides say he will deliver a major speech that may outline new proposals designed to deal with world trouble spots.

It will be his sixth speech to a regular U.N. session, or his seventh counting a 1982 appearance at a special session on disarmament.

It has been heralded with unaccustomed hoopla — a press briefing Tuesday by Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgeway and another one Wednesday by Reagan's national security adviser, Colin L. Powell.

"Well, it's an important two-day event, and we know you'd like to have as many briefings as possible," White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater explained. Powell told reporters that Reagan's involvement in General Assembly activities has been "unprecedented for an American president."

"As a result of the president's involvement, I think it is fair to say that our relations with the United Nations are excellent, better than they have been for a long time," the national security adviser said.

In his previous appearances, however, Reagan often had criticized the U.N., calling for reforms in its budgetary and hiring practices.

On Sept. 13, the White House announced that Reagan would release $188 million that the United States had withheld from the U.N. because of U.S. misgivings about the way the organization was run. The president also said he would seek full funding for the next fiscal year.

Powell said these payments have begun.

The national security adviser also said, however, that more than just budget reform is involved in the president's new warmth toward the international organization.

"The United Nations has started to play a more important role around the world in helping to deal with regional conflicts," he said. "They are really doing what we always hoped they would do."

Powell said the president's address Monday would be "a major foreign policy speech, broad in scope. ... It will be forward looking even as it reflects on past accomplishments."

"We have a couple of new initiatives under consideration to help deal with some of the regional conflict issues around the world," he added.

He also said he expects that the issue of chemical warfare will come up in some of Reagan's discussions with foreign leaders and that the issue might also be covered in the speech.

On Monday night, Reagan will be host at a reception for heads of state and other dignitaries.

"It will be sort of a farewell to U.N. members," Powell said.

"His criticism has produced results," he said, "and he is acknowledging that there have been results. He's essentially taking a snapshot, in what he has done last week and the speech, of where the U.N. is now and where the U.N. can go in the future."

W. Dale Nelson covers the White House for The Associated Press.

Dukakis has better way to fight illiteracy

WASHINGTON — "As a nation we are moving into a record 6th straight month of economic expansion. Unemployment is at a record low. Inflation is in check. ... Is there a dark cloud on the horizon?"

"Yes. The future of U.S. strength is dimmed by reports of coming employee illiteracy."

Says who? The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which often fights programs to help!

Yet both George Bush and Michael Dukakis propose new federal action.

"A joint study by the Departments of Labor, Commerce and Education reports that today's young workers lack basic skills for tomorrow's jobs," the chamber said. "Two-thirds of the 134 employers surveyed said their new employees lacked basic skills in writing, communication and arithmetic."

About 25 million adults have less than fifth-grade skills. And the low-skill labor pool is growing. A million working-age immigrants with low skills join the job market yearly. Another million are high school dropouts.

Four-fifths of adults have modest levels of literacy. That is, they are able to read simple memos at work, for example. But when the National Assessment of Educational Progress tested young adults, aged 21 to 25, the results were alarming:

• Only 10 percent can shop comparatively in the grocery store.

• Only 9 percent can read and summarize a newspaper column like this.

Clearly, these more sophisticated skills are what American businesses are looking for, and are not finding. Even factory jobs require "a higher level of math, problem-solving and communication skills," says the chamber.

Northern Perspective

What can be done? Steps are needed with both school kids and adults. Bush, in his book "Man of Integrity," rightly says, "Only one federal program measures student achievement on a regular basis: the National Assessment of Educational Progress. For a small amount of additional money we can test on more subjects and compile state-by-state data."

Only one state uses the NAEP tests to measure quality of local schools — Massachusetts, under Gov. Michael Dukakis. Its students scored above the national average at each grade tested: 3, 7 and 11.

For example, on 74 math questions given to 11th-graders, Massachusetts students did better than their national counterparts on 68 of them.

Although Massachusetts students reported that their parents' educational level was the same as national averages, 50 percent more Bay State students take chemistry, physics and honors English than nationally.

Not all comparisons made Massachusetts look good. Two-thirds of the state's students say they "hardly ever or never" do lab experiments vs. only half in the national scale.

But the point is that this sort of information is what parents need to press for higher-quality local

Violence threatens peace

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Occasional gunshots and scattered violence threatened a fragile peace today in an impoverished neighborhood where rioting by hundreds of blacks was triggered by an interracial, drug-related killing.

The almost exclusively black area known as Cedar Grove became the province of rioters and looters for about five hours Tuesday night and early Wednesday after a black man was killed by a white woman shopping for cocaine, according to police and witnesses.

Less intense violence surfaced again Wednesday night despite pleas for calm by black ministers and politicians.

Cathedral usher killed

NEW YORK (AP) — A deranged man who ran naked into St. Patrick's Cathedral ripped an iron prayer bookstand from the floor, bludgeoned an usher to death and seriously wounded a police officer before police shot him dead, officials said today.

The 250-pound attacker, identified as Jorge DeGado, 32, of Manhattan, had attended morning Mass celebrated by Cardinal John O'Connor prior to Wednesday's attack and stood directly before the cardinal as he administered the Holy Eucharist, O'Connor told reporters.

That evening the man tore off all his clothes down the street from the historic midtown cathedral, walked one block to the church, chanting under his breath and carrying red carnations, according to witnesses.

Poison may help AIDS

NEW YORK (AP) — A modified version of a natural poison kills AIDS-infected cells in the test tube while ignoring normal cells, offering a possible strategy to help treat AIDS, scientists reported today.

The specialized toxin may be able to kill infected cells in people before the cells produce more viruses, said researcher Bernard Moss of the National Institutes of Health.

SHREVEPORT RIOT — Firefighters walk past a burned car as a store burns in the background in Shreveport, La., Wednesday. Rioters, sparked by a shooting, burned the building and two cars before police restored order.

Moss, Ira Pastan and five other NIH scientists describe experimental results in today's issue of the British Journal Nature.

The poison research involved Pseudomonas aeruginosa, a bacterium produced by bacteria called Pseudomonas aeruginosa. It is so strong that a dose about the size of a salt grain can kill a human.

Deadlock prompts fights

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fighting broke out along the city's dividing Green Line today after Parliament failed to elect a new president, and state radio said gunmen killed two senior commanders of the mainstream Shiite Muslim Amal militia.

Parliament sources said President Amin Gemayel would announce a caretaker Cabinet later today led by a Christian as prime minister in a move that could spark renewed conflict between Muslims and Christians.

The two groups have been fighting a civil war for the past 13 years, ravaging the once prosperous economy of this nation and dividing the country into factions.

U.S. sets diploma record

WASHINGTON (AP) — More Americans have high school diplomas and college degrees than ever before, reflecting a continuing emphasis on education in society, a new Census Bureau study shows.

"The entire post-World War era has been characterized by an expansion of educational opportunities and structures in the country," Census demographer Robert Kominski commented.

GOP wants probe of Wright's leaks about CIA effort

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans formally asked for an investigation into whether House Speaker Jim Wright improperly disclosed a covert CIA operation in Nicaragua.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., and Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., chairman of the House Republican Conference, asked for the inquiry in letters late Wednesday to the House ethics and intelligence committees.

The letters referred to Wright's assertions to reporters Tuesday that the CIA was stirring up civil unrest and promoting anti-government demonstrations in an effort to provoke the leftist Sandinista government and to sabotage peace talks.

"Because of the possibility such a disclosure (of classified information) may have occurred, we are writing to ask your committee to promptly and thoroughly investigate the circumstances surrounding these events and to recommend appropriate action to the House of Representatives," Michel and Cheney said in a letter to ethics committee chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif.

In a separate letter to Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the House intelligence panel, they asked for an immediate meeting of the committee "to discuss these matters, to ascertain whether any unauthorized disclosures have in fact occurred and to decide on an appropriate course of action."

House Republicans were meeting today to discuss the Wright matter and in particular to weigh its implications for legislation that would tighten congressional control over the CIA's covert activities.

The Reagan administration opposes the bill, which is scheduled for floor consideration next week. A version already has been passed by the Senate.

"The fact he has made (the disclosure) is serious," said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., the senior Republican on the House Intelligence Committee. "I am astounded to read Sandinista propaganda coming out of the speaker's office."

But a spokesman for Wright said the affair was overblown and that the Texas Democrat had revealed no classified information.

Wright on Tuesday said he had received "clear testimony" from the CIA that the agency had fomented opposition demonstrations in Nicaragua to provoke the leftist Sandinista government. He said a reporter later that CIA officials had made the admission under congressional questioning.

The spokesman, Wilson Morris, said CIA activities inside Nicaragua were well documented. "It's all in the public domain," he said. "Any member of Congress is free to draw his own conclusions."

Asked during a photo session Wednesday about Wright's comments, President Reagan said, "The reaction I have, and I think it should fit the speaker also, there is no way we should talk publicly about intelligence operations of any kind."

He declined to confirm or deny the substance of the speaker's disclosure, adding, "If I start going down that road, then I'm creating the same violation that he did."

"We simply cannot comment on covert operations or intelligence matters of this kind," White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said.

IN BRIEF

Browning in new SBM post

The Savings Bank of Manchester has appointed Tod R. Browning to the newly created position of executive vice president.

Bank President Richard P. Meduski said Browning will make recommendations concerning the bank's commercial loan portfolio. He will report to Charles L. Pike, executive vice president.

Before joining SBM, Browning was banking officer and senior auditor with CityTrust in Bridgeport. He is a graduate of Western New England College, earning a bachelor's degree in business administration. He also has completed many American Institute of Banking courses and is a member of that organization.

He lives in South Windsor.

Office building planned

A $5 million, 45,000-square-foot office building is under construction at 360 Tolland Turnpike.

The building, to be called East Point Business Center, is one of two planned for the site, located near the new Economy Electric Supply Inc. building. It will be a three-story brick building with a two-story atrium lobby and a parking garage.

Parking for 185 cars will be provided in addition to 24 covered executive spaces. A four-story elevator will run from the garage level.

The offices are being built by the Manchester-based Orlando Annulli & Sons Inc., which is a partner with MBI II, a Glastonbury investment group.

Groundbreaking for the building was held Sept. 14.

Jobless benefits increase

WETHERSFIELD (AP) — The maximum payment for unemployment insurance will rise $18 in October to $234 a week, state Labor Commissioner Betty L. Tianti said Wednesday.

The increase comes under legislation passed last session raising the previous $12 limit, Tianti said.

The new rate applies to claims for unemployment benefits after Oct. 2. The $10 dependency allowance and $50 maximum for five eligible dependents will remain the same.

Annual increases in maximum benefit rates are based on average production wages for each fiscal year ending June 30.

The number of claims for unemployment benefits averaged over 22,000 during the last two weeks.

Housing starts decline

HARTFORD (AP) — The number of new housing units authorized in Connecticut in August fell 5.2 percent from July, a state housing official said.

During August, local building officials issued building permits for 1,684 new housing units, 82 fewer than July, state Housing Commissioner John F. Papandrea said Wednesday. The August figure also fell below any figure for the month since 1,576 authorized units were recorded in 1984.

In the first eight months of 1988, the number of units authorized throughout the state has dropped 28 percent, or 5,183 fewer units.

Most corporations feel bigger tax bite

WASHINGTON (AP) — The landmark 1986 tax overhaul boosted the bite on 250 giant, profitable corporations by about $9 billion last year but still left 16 of them legally paying no federal income tax, a private research group said today.

The number among the 250 that paid no tax was down from 40 in 1986 and from a high of 72 in 1982, according to Citizens for Tax Justice, a labor-financed organization whose reports were credited with helping win passage of the new tax law two years ago.

The 1986 law cut tax rates for most individuals and corporations but took away or reduced several deductions and credits. One result was to shift about $125 billion of the federal tax burden from individuals to corporations over a five-year period.

"Tax reform has passed the most critical test of its effectiveness," Citizens for Tax Justice said in its report. "By putting most of the largest tax-avoiding corporations back on the tax rolls, it has struck a blow for fairness."

"Tax reform may not have made things less complex. Tax reform may not have cut everyone's tax bill. But tax reform has made great strides toward a system that puts all profitable corporations back on the tax rolls. And that should, over time, help restore public confidence in our tax system," the report stated.

The annual survey of corporate taxes is based chiefly on stockholder reports filed by the nation's 250 largest, profitable corporations. The report deals only with taxes paid to the U.S. government during a given tax year and does not account for deferrals that could fall due in a future year.

"Thus, an international company with large tax payments to foreign governments could be listed as paying no U.S. taxes, as could one that bought a large amount of equipment last year, resulting in a deferral of liability."

The 250 paid $9 billion more in federal income last year than they would have paid under the old law.

As a group, the 250 companies last year paid $27 billion in taxes on profits of $123 billion, a 22 percent rate. Five years earlier, they paid less than 12 percent on $87 billion net earnings.

The 14 largest corporations that paid no taxes in 1982 through 1985 paid at an effective rate of 30 percent last year. This list included AT&T, DuPont, Boeing and Dow Chemical.

The 128 corporations that were off the federal tax rolls in at least one year from 1981 through 1985 paid an average rate of 19.5 percent last year. Their average rate in 1981-85 was 3.7 percent.

The combined effective tax rate on the 250 corporations in the survey rose from 14.9 percent in 1981-85 to 22.1 percent in 1987. Their combined profits averaged $102 billion in each of the earlier years and $123 billion last year.

The number of giant profitable companies paying a tax rate of less than 10 percent has been cut in half, to 55.

About 60 percent of the 250 companies are paying a higher tax rate than before the new law was enacted. About one-third are paying a lower rate.

Inequities among industries remain under the new law. The chemical industry and services-trade industry paid an average 38 percent tax last year; textiles, 37 percent; telecommunications, 20 percent; oil, gas and mining, 17.5 percent; airlines and utilities, about 15 percent; and automobile and computer companies paid 10 percent or less.

The survey said the following 16 corporations, whose profits ranged from $42 million to $2.9 billion, paid no federal tax last year: General Motors, IBM, Aetna, Baxter Travenol Laboratories, Carolina Power & Light, Illinois Power, Corning, Hewlett-Packard, Ashland Oil, Greyhound, Ogden Seawax Corp., Penzoil, Goodyear Tire & Rubber, Consumers Power and Gulf States Utilities.

In Nevada, Senate campaign is bitter

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — As Republican Sen. Chic Hecht struggles to hold his seat against a strong challenge from Democratic Gov. Dick Bryan, their battle has turned bitter with party and campaign officials making accusations on usually untouchable subjects such as Bryan's sex life and Hecht's intelligence.

On the surface, Bryan and Hecht have been debating one another on familiar themes — a possible nuclear dump in Nevada, defense spending, conservative vs. liberal philosophies and balanced budgets.

Hecht, 59, has sought to link Bryan to organized labor in this state of legalized gambling as well as tie the Democrat to the liberal views of presidential nominee Michael Dukakis. He also has accused Bryan of deserting voters who elected him to a second four-year term as governor in 1986.

In turn, Bryan, 51, has attacked Hecht for flip-flops on the nuclear waste dump, for voting against Social Security increases, and for being generally ineffective. He also points to poll after poll showing him way ahead in the lead over the one-term incumbent.

And both have been publicly critical of another level of the campaign in which top party officials and key campaign staffers have accused one another of "dirty tricks."

Bryan blasted Clark County Republican Chairman Charles Ivy for "a despicable campaign tactic" in mentioning on a radio talk show that there have been rumors about Bryan's "little extramarital hobbies" since he was first elected to the state Assembly in 1984.

"This kind of crap kind of discourages people from putting their names on the line," said Bryan, adding that there is no truth to the rumors of infidelity and he would consider legal action after the election.

Hecht insisted his campaign staff had nothing to do with the comment, and any staffer would be fired immediately if involved.

Hecht also has complained about recent news accounts citing his verbal misuses, including a reference to a nuclear repository that unintentionally came out as "nuclear suppository." He also

Poll: Bush's gains come within GOP

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bush has gained in the presidential race more by solidifying his support among Republicans and Republican-leaning independents than by poaching Democrats, a poll suggested today.

Bush has advanced his cause by painting rival Michael Dukakis as ideologically out of step, the Gallup poll suggested, and he has benefited from increased satisfaction with the nation's course and confidence in the economy.

But while Bush has drawn some conservative Democrats to his side, he has lost ground among other Democratic groups, said an analysis of the poll, conducted by Gallup for the Times Mirror Corp.

It said the more significant movement was Bush's greater support from Republicans in general, and particularly from Republican-leaning, blue-collar conservatives identified in the survey as "disaffected" voters.

Space shuttle launch just one week away

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The signs today read "7 Days to Launch" as NASA prepares for Discovery to lift off with five astronauts on a flight the space agency hopes will restore credibility to America's manned space program.

The signs, at entrances to the Kennedy Space Center, greet the 13,000 workers here who have prepared for 32 months since the Challenger tragedy to return the shuttle to flight.

White House candidates cram for Sunday debate

By The Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis promised to institute a program of basic health care for poor women and children as the White House contenders debated the final days before their presidential debate, crammering for the face-to-face encounter.

While Vice President Bush spent Wednesday engaging in a mock debate and briefings with advisers, Dukakis conferred with Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey on the Sunday night faceoff that was still dogged by logistics problems over lectern heights and the composition of the panel.

The Democratic nominee, according to campaign sources, scheduled his own mock debate on Friday and planned to meet with two governors well-versed in the successes and pitfalls of public speaking — Mario Cuomo of New York and Bill Clinton of Arkansas.

Bush, who has limited campaign appearances this week to concentrate on the debate, was making a special exception today for two events: an appearance with President Reagan in Houston and an endorsement from an unusual source.

The Boston Police Patrolman's Association used an old-model nozzle inlet ring as was used in the final test of Morton Thiokol's redesigned space shuttle booster rocket.

However, NASA doesn't believe the finding will delay next week's launch, spokesman Ed Medal said.

Medal said it had not yet been determined conclusively if out-dated rings were used in the two boosters attached to Discovery, but a preliminary investigation showed they had not.

Kennedy Space Center has adopted the slogan "America's pride... The Journey Continues" for Discovery's mission, as proclaimed on a banner at the launch pad entrance, in offices and on thousands of pins worn by employees ranging from engineers to secretaries.

At the launch pad today, technicians were set to purge Discovery's fuel cells and external fuel tank with gases to remove possible contaminants, install batteries in the communications satellite in the cargo bay, and complete other last-minute preparations for the start of the countdown at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

Lack of funding may force Bolton to put pound on hold

By Nancy Conzelmann
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Bolton may have to wait for a much-needed dog pound because funds aren't included in this year's budget to cover the cost, selectmen said. The cost for the pound is estimated at about $6,000 by a builder who attended Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting. But there is no money in this year's town budget earmarked for that purpose. The board told Dog Warden Judy Virchow that it was in a "Catch-22" situation because a pound is needed. The project will likely have to go out to bid. First Selectman Sandra Pierog said.

If estimates for the project come in under $7,500, the Board of Finance could appropriate the money, providing it's available in the miscellaneous fund, Selectman Michael Zizka said. Virchow told selectmen last month that occasionally she has to cage roaming dogs for a couple of hours until owners are found because there's not enough room at the Applewood-Yankee Kennel on Route 44 in Bolton, the kennel town rents space from. But the new owners of the kennel, renamed Connecticut Trails Kennel, have offered the town a five-year renewable lease on land next to the facility at no cost. Virchow said at Tuesday's meeting.

The town would pay about $8 a day to board stray dogs there, which would cover the feeding and care of the dogs and utilities, Virchow said. But if the town decides to accept Connecticut Trails' offer, it would have to add three kennels to the existing kennel to house the dogs. Virchow said the owners don't want sick dogs in their existing kennel. Until estimates become available, Virchow said she would try to get the kennel's offer in writing. In the meantime, Pierog said she would ask the town attorney to draw up a lease for the kennel. Virchow said she requested by kennel owner Rocky and Jan Smith.

Interviews slated to replace Levine

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen will begin interviewing the nine applicants for the now-vacant administrative assistant's job this month. Applications for the position, vacated in July by Karen Levine, have come in from Maryland, Ohio, Wisconsin and towns within the state, including Bolton, Coventry, East Hartford, Glastonbury and New Britain. Of the nine applicants, five received positive recommendations from three or more selectmen, while the other four received recommendations from two or more selectmen. There are five members on the Board of Selectmen. Despite changes proposed by the Charter Revision Commission that call for the elimination of the administrative position, the selectmen decided at the end of July to accept applications. A referendum vote on the new charter probably won't be held until July, and an assistant is needed to help handle a workload that has forced some selectmen to come in on weekends and after work. Levine left the position after six years to become Avon's assistant town manager. Her salary was $28,500 when she left Bolton.

Selectmen plan talks on charter

BOLTON — The Bolton Board of Selectmen will hold an open meeting with members of the Charter Revision Commission next Wednesday to discuss changes that will be coming to residents at a public hearing scheduled for Oct. 5. First Selectman Sandra Pierog said Tuesday she wanted the selectmen to discuss suggested changes, including changing Bolton's form of government from a selectmen form to a council-town manager form. At a public hearing Aug. 30 on the proposed charter changes, residents voiced both approval and opposition to a new form of government and other changes proposed, including eliminating the Board of Finance and administrative assistant position and combining the Planning Commission with the Zoning Commission. Selectman Michael Zizka said he didn't think a pre-hearing meeting with charter commission members was necessary and he wanted to "speed the process along." Pierog said she didn't feel she could properly conduct a public hearing without first exchanging thoughts on proposed changes with commission members and on suggestions made by voters at the previous hearing.

Coventry bridge plan OK'd

COVENTRY — A plan for permanent repairs to the Hop River bridge was approved by the Town Council this week. The council Monday night authorized Town Manager John Elisser to sign an agreement with the state Department of Transportation for an additional $200,000 project with a partial grant and loan from the state under the local bridge program. The bridge connects Coventry to Columbia. Most of the structure is within Coventry, so the town will pay 70 percent of the $205,000. The other 30 percent will be paid by Coventry. Elisser said Wednesday the amount of the state grant has not yet been determined. He also said the $205,000 figure does not include engineering or bonding fees. After a routine inspection in May 1987, the bridge was cited by the state Department of Transportation under orders from the state, the town closed the bridge. Residents were forced to use a single-lane, dirt portion of the road because the bridge closing blocked access to the paved section of Hop River Road that leads to Route 6. With winter nearing, residents pleaded with the council to wait to repair the bridge. They said they feared emergency vehicles and school buses would not be able to use the narrow, rocky road in bad weather. Soon after, the two towns cooperated to make temporary repairs to the bridge. The bridge was reopened with DOT approval on Oct. 16, 1987. Permanent repair work will be done by Overhead Construction Co. of Columbia. The project is not expected to begin until spring.

Blitz targets court backlog

HARTFORD (AP) — The wheels of justice will be put into a higher gear starting Oct. 3 at Manchester Superior Court, where officials will assign extra manpower in a month-long attempt to reduce a backlog of more than 900 criminal cases. Fifty cases a day will be scheduled for pretrial hearings in the first week, with officials working under the assumption that once trials are imminent, some cases will be settled through plea bargains. An additional judge and two prosecutors will be assigned to the court to clear the backlog. The blitz will mark the first major assault on a criminal case backlog since a string of them took place in 1981 and 1982. The current backlog is considered severe, said Chief Court Administrator Aaron Ment. He said Wednesday that pending criminal cases have increased 18 percent statewide in the past two years. The backlog in Manchester is due in part to an onslaught of new cases, particularly drug and drunken-driving offenses, and to the prosecuting office's hard-line policy on plea bargains, said Hartford State's Attorney John Bailey.

Anniversary Unrest

Dr. Robert Butterfield Sr., who headed the EMS Department at Manchester Memorial Hospital for about 13 years, was the council's first chairman when it was formed five years ago. The service plans to honor Butterfield at the reception. Keynote speakers attending the invitation-only reception will include state EMS Director Chris Gentile, Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr., Town of Manchester Fire Chief John C. Rivosa, and Town of Manchester Fire Department paramedic Danny Hippe. The Town Board of Directors and many members from the EMS agencies serving Manchester will also be present. 'Friends Nights' to begin tonight — COVENTRY — The Family Support Committee and Department of Mental Retardation will hold "Friends Nights" tonight at 7 in Coventry High School and on Oct. 6 in Hampton. The events last from 7 to 9 p.m. and include an open forum called "Life Bridges" to discuss transitions and life planning for families with developmentally disabled members. The Oct. 6 meeting will be held at the EastConn administrative offices on Route 6 in Hampton.

GOP, Dems have quarters

The Manchester Republican Party will set up election headquarters on the second floor of a downtown Main Street building, GOP Town Chairman John Gorside said Wednesday. Gorside said an opening ceremony will be held next week, probably Thursday. He said the Republicans chose the site primarily because of its central location. The building at 843 Main St. is on the south corner of Purnell Place. Manchester Democrats have set up their headquarters at 192 Main St., the same location as last year, and will hold their opening at 7:30 tonight with state Attorney General Joseph Lieberman as a guest. Lieberman, who is challenging incumbent Republican U.S. Sen. Lowell C. Weicker, is expected to arrive at about 8 p.m.

Chamber backs Carberry

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce endorsed Glenn T. Carberry of Norwich, Republican candidate in the 2nd Congressional District, at a breakfast news conference in Norwich Tuesday. Steven Woolley, executive director of the Northeast region of the national chamber, said that to win endorsement, a candidate must agree that private solutions are better than public solutions and that federal spending is a bigger problem than federal taxes. He said Carberry met those qualifications. Carberry is a challenging incumbent Democrat Samuel Gejdenson of Borrah, who is seeking his fifth term. The 2nd Congressional District in eastern Connecticut includes Andover, Bolton and Coventry.

Herbst wants road studies

State Sen. Marie Herbst, D-Vernon, has met with state Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns to discuss deteriorating road conditions and the impact of superhighways on towns in her 85th Senatorial District. In a news release, Herbst said an assessment should be made of road-bed conditions and safety factors, such as stop lights, signs and dangerous curves. She said an impact study should be made of I-94, I-395 and I-84. "These two steps should be followed by initiation and implementation of a specific plan and strategy to cope with rapid growth," she said. She said older roads do not handle the present traffic and need more than minimal repair. Herbst, who is seeking re-election, is being opposed by Republican James D. Giulietti of Vernon.

TV anchorman brings laughs to MCC group

Television reporter and anchorman Gerry Brooks charmed a group of about 150 older adults at Manchester Community College Wednesday with a personal style just as disarmingly glib off-camera as on-camera. Brooks was the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the MCC Older Adult Association. He was introduced by Katie Franzosa, president of the association, as "every mother's adopted son." Brooks evoked laughter from the crowd that filled the Program Center at the Lowe Building by poking fun at the fact that many of his female colleagues at WFSB, the Hartford TV station, have become pregnant and given birth during the time they have worked with him.

Games get black eye in brawl in the ring

SEUL, South Korea — Peace, harmony, progress — the theme of the 1988 Olympic Games now being held in Seoul — lost meaning Thursday when enraged Korean boxing coaches punched a referee and gave the Games a nasty black eye. The chaos and disgrace at the boxing arena cast a shadow over a day of perfect lies by Soviet men's gymnasts, speed and lusty by American women in a basketball shootout, and a dramatic comeback victory by the defending gold medal U.S. men's volleyball team. Even Libyan leader Col. Muammar Ghadhafi chipped in from afar with some criticism, citing bullying as one of the Olympics' violent and brutal sports. The only bull at these Games was the excuse offered by Korean boxing officials to justify a melee in the ring after one of their fighters lost. The coaches and a Korean Olympic official stormed the ring and threw several punches at referee Keith Walker of New Zealand, hitting him at least once, after a 4-1 decision by 116-pound Bulgarian Alexander Hristov over Korean Byun John-il. "The Korean man, he should win," said S.H. Yoon, a Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee official who was one of those who defended Walker. Yoon and the coaches claimed Walker unfairly deducted two points from Byun for butting. That excuse didn't win much support from higher Korean authorities. "It was very disgraceful behavior," said Shin Hyon-ung, spokesman for the organizing committee. "Necessary action will be followed by the authorities concerned after a full investigation." Hristov and Byun were thrown into the ring, but police restored order quickly and the fight resumed.

CHAOS IN THE RING — Chaos reigns in an Olympic boxing ring in Seoul today as South Korean officials and spectators protested South Korean boxer Byun Jong-il's loss by a decision to a Bulgarian boxer. Korean officials attacked the referee and debris littered the ring.

NEW YORK — The New York Mets found out the hard way that winning, even if it means a division title, doesn't mean everything. The Mets arrived at Shea Stadium Wednesday night with the knowledge they could win the National League East if they beat Philadelphia and Pittsburgh last to St. Louis.

Bosox are not panicking — yet

TORONTO — There's no sign of panic, but with 10 games left the Boston Red Sox are still looking over their shoulders at three challengers in the American League East. Just a few days ago, the Red Sox appeared to have a lock on the division title after taking three games in a row from the New York Yankees and opening a six-game lead over Milwaukee and Detroit. But things changed in Boston's three-day visit to Toronto. The Blue Jays, now 7 1/2 back, picked on their cousins from Boston. With Mike Flanagan, a 37-year-old left-hander, allowing just four singles in eight innings, the Blue Jays edged the Red Sox 1-0 Wednesday night in the rubber of a three-game set. The eighth loss in 10 games with Toronto trimmed Boston's lead to 4 games over the Milwaukee Brewers, 4 1/2 over the Yankees and 1 over Detroit. The Red Sox flew to New York for an off day before a three-game series with the Yankees Friday night. "We still control our own destiny, boys," Boston Manager Joe Morgan said. "It's been that way since April 1 or whatever. We're still out in front and

UConn pulls off major upset

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — This was exactly what the youthful University of Connecticut men's soccer team has been looking for, a turning point which will propel the Huskies to new horizons. The Huskies, 3-4-1 entering Wednesday night's match, desperately needed a victory against the heavily favored Crimson, the No. 1 ranked team in New England and No. 4 nationally, to alter their collision course with mediocrity. They got it behind the sensational play of freshman forward Rob Lindell, stunning Harvard, 2-1, in a tension-filled match at Ohri Field. The loss broke the Crimson's 18-game win streak (16-3) at home. Harvard's last home loss was a 1-0 decision to Boston University last year. Despite being outplayed for the majority of the match, the Huskies' heart and desire proved and withstood a vicious Harvard onslaught during the last 10 minutes of the match to register one of the biggest victories in the program's history. UConn is now 4-1 and 2-0-1 in New England play. The Huskies will host the University of San Francisco Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium. "It was a great win on our part. I feel this is a great thing for us," Husky Coach Joe Morrone said. UConn starting goalie Tom Donigan led Lindell along the left sideline at midfield. With Harvard sweeper Robert Bonnie on him, Lindell perfectly flicked the ball with his right heel over himself and Bonnie and raced down the sideline. Lindell then led sophomore Brian Parker, who beat Crimson goalie Stephen Hall for the score. "It was a well-earned goal," Morrone said.

LEONARD LEE RUE III appears Saturday in Manchester

Rue comes back to Manchester

Leonard Lee Rue III is coming back to Manchester on Saturday, and can be seen and heard at 7:30 p.m. at Manchester High School. I know what's coming from the people who didn't attend his show last year. Who the heck is Leonard Lee Rue III?

Rue is probably the most published wildlife photographer on this continent today. His photographs have appeared in National Geographic, Audubon Magazine, National Wildlife, International Wildlife, Newsweek, Natural History, Outdoor Life, Sports Field, and Field & Stream. His photos have also appeared in many encyclopedias, school textbooks and conservation magazines.

Rue is also an accomplished author, writing monthly columns for the American Hunter, Outdoor Photographer Magazine, Turkey magazine, and Deer & Deer Hunting Magazine. He is also the author of 19 books on wildlife and photography.

Rue has been described as a "walking encyclopedia of natural history and wildlife." This is not just a publicity blurb but fact. The man has spent practically all his life observing and researching wildlife around him. Working as a guide, 14 years as a game warden, 17 summers in the Canadian wilderness guiding people through really remote areas.

Joe's World

Most of his life work has been concerned with studying deer, their habits, their environment, birth, breeding, etc. Practically living among the deer of North America he has photographed them from every conceivable angle, and in every phase of their lives. Over 60,000 photographs of these animals, all taken by him are part of his files.

And that's what Saturday's lecture is all about. Last year when he gave his slide show, and lecture at the high school, everyone I talked to thought it was great, and hoped Rue would return again this year.

This year's seminar, again sponsored by the Manchester Sportmen's Association, will have as its subject White-tailed Deer. The show should last 2 1/2 to 3 hours and promises to be quite interesting with a multi-media presentation of two slide projectors, and Rue commenting during the show.

Following the program, Rue will autograph books, door prizes will be awarded and a question and answer period will be held "for as long as it takes."

Tickets, which are $10 each can be obtained locally at Hall's Archery on West Middle Turnpike and A&B Sport Shop and Win-Sum Sports in Vernon.

If you need additional information, contact in Manchester, Robert Tubbs (875-5017) or Joseph Cataldi (649-5438).

If you really want an enjoyable evening, don't miss it. This man as a photographer, conservationist, and lecturer is well worth seeing.

Joe Garman, a Manchester resident for many years, is a recognized authority on the subject of bamboo fly rods, and the sport of fly fishing.

U.S. booters ousted

TAEGU, South Korea (AP) — The United States put up a valiant fight Thursday before bowing to the Soviet Union 4-2 and being eliminated from the Olympic soccer tournament.

The Soviet Union and Argentina, which beat South Korea 2-1, advanced from the Group C pool to the quarterfinals.

American coach Lothar Olander said he thought his team nonetheless did quite well in the Olympics, where they managed to tie Argentina and South Korea before the loss to the Soviets.

"We had weak moments here and there but we are getting better," he said.

"We will rearrange our priorities and get ready for 1994" when the United States hosts the World Cup, he said.

Whalers deadlock Devils

HARTFORD (AP) — Hartford center Ron Francis scored on a rebound with 4:16 remaining in the second period to lift the Whalers into a 2-2 tie against New Jersey.

Francis, netting his second goal of the preseason, scored from 10 feet after New Jersey goaltender Chris Terreri had stopped point-blank shots by Stewart Gavin and Lindsay Carson.

Gavin added a short-handed goal for the Whalers, 1-2-1. The Devils, 0-2-1, had goals from Randy Veltschek and Troy Crowder.

New Jersey outshot the Whalers, 36-27.

Hartford went ahead 1-0 on Gavin's tally at 11:47 of the second period but the Devils struck for goals by Veltschek and Crowder within a 29-second span to claim a 2-1 lead.

Veltschek scored on the power play at 12:03 and then Crowder connected from the right post off a series of passes from Jim Korn and Neil Brady.

Hartford rookie goaltender Kay Whitmore had a strong game, stopping 20 of 21 shots during his 32-minute stint.

Whitmore allowed Veltschek's goal at 12:03 before being replaced by Peter Sidorkiewicz, another rookie.

New Jersey went 1-for-0 on the power play while Hartford failed in five chances.

Redskins' Williams out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins quarterback Doug Williams will be out for at least four weeks after undergoing surgery for appendicitis, a team spokesman said late Wednesday night.

"He's expected to be in the hospital for five to seven days, and is expected to be out for at least four weeks," spokesman Marty Hurney said. "That's four games at minimum."

Mark Rypien, who has never played in a regular-season NFL game, will start against the Phoenix Cardinals on Sunday.

Williams was taken to Arlington Hospital in suburban Washington for tests, complaining of abdominal pain after the team's regular practice Wednesday.

Hurney said.

"He was experiencing some slight abdominal pain," Hurney said. "He practiced and took every snap."

Williams went into surgery, which lasted about 1 1/2 hours, at 10:20 p.m. It was performed by Dr. Todd Arcomano of the Arlington Hospital staff, according to Hurney. Hospital officials declined comment.

McEnroe a winner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Third-seeded John McEnroe defeated Paul Annacone 6-1, 6-2 Wednesday night in a first-round match in the $415,000 Volvo-Los Angeles men's tennis tournament.

In second-round matches played earlier, Jim Pugh upset sixth-seeded Dan Goldie 6-2, 6-4 and amateur Jeff Tarango surprised Christo van Rensburg of South Africa 6-3, 6-3.

Second-seeded Kevin Carruth breezed to a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Jim Courier and fifth-seeded David Pate needed an 8-6 tiebreaker in the second set to beat Pete Sampras 6-3, 7-6.

McEnroe and Annacone, the 1985 Volvo-Los Angeles winner, held serve in the second set for a 2-2 tie before McEnroe won the last four games.

McEnroe will face 16-year-old Michael Chang in a second-round match Thursday.

"I expect him to play better (than Annacone), but I need to stick to my game, and if I do I'll win," McEnroe said.

Bruins trim Islanders

HAMILTON, Ontario (AP) — Cam Neely scored twice as the Boston Bruins defeated the New York Islanders 4-2.

The 11,300 fans at the Copps Coliseum barely had a chance to find their seats when Neely scored with a wrist shot to the corner of the net behind Islanders goalie Billy Smith at the 48-second mark.

Then New York's Derek King drilled a wrist shot past Boston netminder Reggie Lemelin to tie the game at 14:23 while the Bruins' Keith Crowder was off for holding.

In the second period, Neely scored again at 4:36 after taking a pass from Bob Cimetta.

NBC ratings improve

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Bolstered by U.S. victories in basketball and water polo, NBC got its second-highest ratings for the Olympics Tuesday night. But the numbers remained far behind those ABC got at the 1984 Summer Games.

NBC's prime-time telecast Tuesday in the United States received a 16.9, second only to the 17.7 for Sunday night's show.

However, the latest rating was 32 percent lower than ABC got for its fifth prime-time show from Los Angeles in 1984. Tuesday's show featured a U.S. victory over Brazil in men's basketball and a last-second U.S. win over Yugoslavia in water polo.

Both events occurred Wednesday morning in Seoul, which is 14 hours ahead of Eastern Daylight Time.

So far, NBC's prime-time Olympic telecasts are averaging a 16.4, five points lower than projected. Network officials predict higher ratings after track and field competition gets under way Friday.

A ratings point equals 886,000 households.

Schroeder to start at QB

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Coach Mike Shanahan of the Los Angeles Raiders made official Wednesday what he had implied two days earlier — Jay Schroeder will be his team's starting quarterback against Denver next Monday night.

"We will start with Jay Schroeder, he will get 80 to 90 percent of the reps in practice," Shanahan said at his weekly meeting with reporters. "Right now, our intentions are to go with a normal game plan. I feel like Jay can handle a whole game plan."

"He does have experience. He's 24-7 as a starter. We would not trade (standout offensive tackle) Jim Lachey to get a backup."

Schroeder, 27, was traded to the Raiders by the Washington Redskins in exchange for Lachey and two draft choices on Sept. 1.

"We will start with Steve Beuerlein in the starting lineup."

Mitch Green arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — Boxer Mitch Green was arrested for disorderly conduct Wednesday after police found him "ranting and raving" and "acting irrationally" on a Hollywood street corner, a department spokesman said.

Sgt. Ed Burns, a police spokesman, said officers had to use an electronic stun gun to subdue Green after a woman complained to officers around 1 a.m. that a man was "ranting and raving" and "acting irrationally" at 125th Street and Park Avenue.

Last month, Green was involved in a street scuffle with heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson. The two argued over a previous, scheduled boxing bout that Green had lost.

In another swimming final, Matt Biondi of the United States set an Olympic record of 48.63 seconds Thursday night in winning the gold medal in the men's 100-meter freestyle.

Biondi, the world record-holder at 48.42, finished ahead of fellow American Chris Jacobs, who won the silver in 49.08.

Stephen Caron of France won the bronze in 49.62.

Biondi held the old Olympic mark of 49.04, set earlier Thursday in the preliminaries.

Lewis and Johnson ready to battle

By Bob Boun

SEOUL, South Korea — With the title of "World's Fastest Human" at stake, Carl Lewis and Ben Johnson renew their intense rivalry as the long-awaited track and field competition begins at the Olympic Games.

The showdown between the ebullient American and the shy Canadian is among the first of a series of headline events in what should be the best Olympic track competition at least since 1976.

This is the first time in three Olympics that all of the world's top three track and field powers — the Soviet Union, United States and East Germany — are entered.

The Jamaica-born Johnson finished third behind Lewis and American Calvin Smith. Johnson said he was suffering from a hamstring injury then but is fine now.

"I haven't felt better since Rome," he said. "I'm ready."

Lewis isn't the only big-name American who will compete early in the eight-day track and field competition.

Edwin Moses will try for another gold medal in the event he has long dominated, the 400-meter hurdles. If he succeeds, he would be the first person to win three Olympic gold medals in the same running event.

Preliminary heats are scheduled for Friday, with the semifinals Saturday and the finals on Sunday.

Moses, 33, said the chance for a third Olympic gold "is what's been keeping me going for the last four years."

"I'm in great shape," he said. "My training times are faster than ever before in my career."

Jackie Joyner-Kersey, considered virtually a sure bet to win the heptathlon and possibly break her own world record in the process, competes in her first four events Friday, with the final three set for Saturday.

Mary Decker Slaney, the preeminent American women's distance runner who has never won an Olympic medal, runs in the 3,000-meter preliminaries Saturday.

BOXER REBELLION — South Korean boxer Byun Jong-il sits on the canvas of an empty ring beginning a protest after losing a decision today to a Bulgarian boxer. Byun held his sitout protest for over an hour before leaving.

Ruling costs gymnasts medal

SEOUL, South Korea — The comparisons with Munich are inescapable.

Sixteen years after the U.S. men's Olympic basketball team lost the gold medal to the Soviet Union on a controversial last-second basket, another group of U.S. athletes has been floored by ideological warfare.

The American women's gymnastics team lost the bronze medal Wednesday to East Germany in a dispute that ranks with what happened at Munich in 1972.

The Soviet Union edged world champion Romania for the gold medal in the team competition, but it was the battle between the East Germans and Americans that drew most of the attention from the world's media.

Officially, the United States lost the bronze by three-tenths of a point — 390.875 to 390.575. But the figure most Americans will remember is the five-tenths of a point penalty imposed on the U.S. squad in Monday's compulsory competition.

The U.S. team was penalized because alternate Rhonda Faehn was on the podium during teammate Kelly Garrison-Stevens' uneven bars routine.

The half-point deduction ultimately cost the U.S. gymnasts the bronze medal, much like Sasha Belov's basket sank the American basketball team in Monday's final.

accused Berger of using her influence to sway the judging in East Germany's favor, thus denying the young American team the bronze.

"She has destroyed a lifetime of work by these kids," Karolyi said.

Jacki said the East Germans — bronze medalists also in Montreal in 1976 and Moscow in 1980 — benefited more from their reputation rather than their performance in Seoul.

"Because of the nature of the DDR (German Democratic Republic), everybody expects them to be good," Jacki said. "No one expected us to be this good. We had to fight for every point."

Virtually lost in the controversy was the fact East Germany defeated the United States despite being a gymnast short.

Martina Jentsch twisted her ankle in warmup and did not compete. That left the East Germans with less margin for error, since the scores of the five competing gymnasts all counted.

With six gymnasts, a country can throw out its worst score in each routine.

Dagmar Kersten and Doerte Thunemann scored 9.975 and 9.950 respectively on the uneven bars as East Germany overtook the Americans on the final rotation.

American Hope Svingo fell from both the bars and balance beam in her final two routines to further hurt the U.S. bid.

The Soviet Union won the gold medal with 395.475 points during the two nights of team competition. The Soviets, led by former world champion Elena Shushunova's three perfect scores, averaged its loss to Romania at the world championships in Rotterdam last October.

Three Americans, Phoebe Mills, Brandy Johnson and Garrison-Stevens, qualified for the all-around finals by finishing among the top 36 scorers in the team competition. Mills is tied with Dobro for sixth place. Johnson is 11th and Garrison-Stevens 30th.

Glamour girls hit Seoul

By Wendy E. Lone

SEOUL, South Korea — Pity the Plain Olgas, with limp hair and nails untouched by the manicurist's art, who'll be competing with those American glamour girls of track and field for the spectator's eye.

Sprinter Florence Griffith Joyner and heptathlete Jackie Joyner-Kersey are a fashion-forward pair who'd almost rather false start than hit the track with uncoiffed hair and unpolished nails.

Griffith Joyner's inches-long talons were deemed too clumsy to handle a baton in the 1984 Olympic relay, while her sister-in-law, Joyner-Kersey, has been seen around Seoul in a bouffant wig and vibrantly colored lips.

Appearing recently in all their muscular glory on the covers of national magazines, the two, along with Valerie Brisco and Evelyn Ashford, are leading a new breed of woman track stars, renowned for their clothes and hairstyles as well as their athletic ability.

"I don't think being an athlete is unfeminine," said Joyner-Kersey, who starts running the heptathlon's seven-event gauntlet Friday. "I think of it as a kind of grace."

Wilma Rudolph, the winner of three gold medals in 1960, remembers a time when runners wore their hair short and their running clothes baggy.

Nevertheless, she sees progress in the recent flaunting of femininity.

"It's a good thing to see that female athletes, especially black female athletes, can be on the cover of Time and Newsweek," she said.

And the strides made don't mean substance is giving way to style, she said. The stress is still on sport.

"Florence was wearing those clothes a long time," Rudolph said. "But that wasn't picked up on until she set a world record."

The 100-meter wonder with a penchant for running in what seems to be lingerie, Griffith Joyner says she will leave her individuality in the closet when the 100 meters is run Sunday, opting for the U.S. team's mundane two-legged running suit.

Yawn.

Unshackled from conformity, what a wonder she can be.

In 1984 at L.A., she was as bright as the lights of Hollywood in a rainbow of Lycra tops. And at the 1986 World Championships in Rome, she looked sleek in a hooded bodysuit.

Koreans turn ugly in boxing dispute

By Tim Dohberg
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Frustration over a boxing loss shattered the harmony of the Olympics as outraged South Korean officials and spectators assailed a referee who they said "robbed" one of their fighters of victory.

International boxing officials called for the disqualification of South Korea's team coach who, with an assistant, began Thursday's melee by storming the ring and attacking referee Keith Walker of New Zealand.

Scores of South Koreans angered by the refereeing called the New Zealand Embassy and some shouted obscenities about Walker, who penalized bantamweight Byun Jong-il and cost him a shot at the gold medal against Alexander Hristov of Bulgaria.

"We're again robbed of our victory in our own hometown!" New Zealand Embassy spokesman said.

Students' Gymnasium by 10 p.m. on Monday.

Byun, the Korean boxer who lost the decision, refused to leave the ring after it was cleared. In a bizarre scene of protest, Byun sat in the ring for more than an hour, forcing boxing organizers to move the remaining fights to a second ring.

The fracas overshadowed a fine opening performance by American Kennedy McKinney, who knocked out Erick-Giovanni Perez of Guatemala in the opening fight of the day.

McKinney, a bantamweight, knocked Perez to the canvas with a big right hand only seconds into the fight, then floored him with another right midway through the round. Perez was still on the canvas when the fight ended at 1:31 of the first round.

The win was the fourth in a row for the U.S. team, which has 10 of its 12 fighters still in the competition.

Korean officials huddled with officials of the International Boxing Federation (IBF) after the morning fights, but there was no immediate word on what action, if any, would be taken against the Korean coaches.

Dragoslav Petrovic of Yugoslavia, an AIBA official, said the Korean coaches would probably be kicked out of the Games.

"If you attack the referee, you are disqualified," said Petrovic. "The rules are quite clear about that."

Kim Sung-hyun, president of the Korean Boxing Association, apologized for the brawl and said he would "resign from all boxing posts after the Olympics to take responsibility."

Kim said he had no plans to punish any South Korean officials involved in the brawl.

"I have no intention to hold anybody but me responsible for the incident. My resignation would be enough," he said.

The incident came midway through a 119-pound bout between Byun and Hristov that was frequently interrupted by Walker cautioning the two fighters for head butts and holding.

Mounties pluck Merrill from orchard

By Andrew Yurkowski Manchester Herald Connecticut State Police plan to extradite career-criminal Fredrick R. Merrill, who was captured in Canada Thursday after eluding police for 13 months following his escape last year from the state prison in Somers, police said today.

Mounties, posing as an apple picker, took Merrill, 41, into custody Thursday afternoon in an orchard in Gagetown, New Brunswick, Stamm said. She said Merrill was armed with a bowie knife at the time of the capture and was taken into custody without incident.

Police were called to the orchard to investigate a dispute between Merrill and an orchard foreman, Stamm said. Merrill, a Tolland native with a charge of first-degree escape in connection with his escape from Somers last year. In connection with South Windsor assault, he faces the following charges: first-degree sexual assault, first-degree burglary, first-degree unlawful restraint, threatening and sixth-degree larceny.

Merrill is to be transported this weekend from New Brunswick to Toronto, where police have a warrant charging him with breaking and entering in connection with a break-in there, Murray said. He said that Toronto police have information linking Merrill to two break-ins in that city and consider him a suspect in break-ins and sexual assaults both in Toronto and in Peterborough, Ontario.

Murray said that Merrill would probably be arraigned in Toronto on Sunday.

Police believe that Merrill, who was arrested in Toronto on Sunday. See MERRILL, page 12

Bolton aims 'to grow old gracefully'

Growing pains clash with farming roots

By Andrew J. Davis Manchester Herald

BOLTON - Continuing growth has put the future at stake as the town struggles to "grow old gracefully."

The Charter Revision Commission wants to change from a selectmen form of government to a town manager style. There's a two-classroom addition being built at Bolton Elementary School. The Board of Education wants to hire an architect to figure out costs for long-range school additions.

The Board of Selectmen is desperate for more space in the town hall.

But how much will the town grow over the next few years, and what does that mean for government, schools, industry and the residents' way of life?

To town officials, change is inevitable, and it is up to the town to meet the challenges of growth directly. Robert Young, chairman of the Charter Revision Commission, is one who believes the town will continue to grow.

"I don't see any reason why it should stop growing," he said. "It's like saying you'd like to be a young forever. You have to grow old gracefully. You have to mature."

The growth in population - from 3,800 to 4,200 residents in 10 years - is one reason for the commission's suggestion to change the form of government, said Thomas Manning, member of the charter commission and the school board.

"We're anticipating that the changes will continue," Manning said. "That's the reason for the need for professionalism (in government)."

The transformation of Bolton from a farming community to a bedroom community for Hartford professionals has become dramatically

CHANGES - Farmer Richard Rose of 266 Bolton Center Road, Bolton, says his town is becoming too large. He says clear since the opening of an interstate highway link in 1971, Manning said.

"That cut the time down so much (to Hartford), Bolton became a commuter town," he said. "It's no longer (a) farming community."

But not all townpeople like the growth, especially one farmer who remembers when the town was built on agriculture.

"When I started first grade, there were 40 farms in town," said Richard Rose, owner of Valleyview dairy farm, who was in first grade in 1944. "Eighty percent of the kids were from a farm. Now there's a dozen farms total in town."
