Young man killed when car collides with train

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

A young man was killed late Friday night when his car collided with a train at what may have been an unlighted railroad crossing off Tolland Turnpike near the J.C. Penney warehouse, police and fire officials said.

The Manchester Police Department refused to release information on the man pending notification of his next of kin. Officials at the scene described the victim as a young man.

Police at the scene said the driver of the 1988 Honda was apparently attempting to race the train before it crossed the railroad crossing when his car collided with the train head-on at 9:43 p.m.

The driver was pronounced dead at the University of Connecticut Medical Center in Farmington at 11:50 p.m. The state medical examiner's office is located at the UConn Medical Center.

The lights at the crossing were covered because Conrail is in the process of replacing them, according to Eighth District Fire Department spokesman Thomas O'Marra. Attempts to reach ConRail officials for comment were unsuccessful.

Police refused to answer questions over whether the lack of lighting contributed to the accident.

But O'Marra said, "To my knowledge, they (lights) probably weren't working at the time."

The train was traveling east toward the J.C. Penney complex. The front end of the Honda was crunched towards the rear of the vehicle from the impact.

More than 25 firefighters from the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department responded to the scene with two engine trucks, a rescue truck and a utility truck.

A crowd of more than 50 watched from an open field off the street as police blocked off the area. Police turned away traffic beginning at the Burr Corners shopping center on Tolland Turnpike.

Good man, drink kept her going

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — Callie Young, an avid baseball fan and a woman who was outspoken about her independence, has died at the age of 112.

Ms. Young's prescription for a long life wouldn't sit well with medical professionals. "She told me a good man and a good drink always kept her going," said her grandson, Booker T. Young of Lebanon. "And she smoked up until two or three years ago."

Miss Young died Thursday at the Lebanon Nursing Home, where she celebrated her 112th birthday last week.

She had three children, all deceased, but never married.

"She just said she didn't ever want to be. She moved around all the time and didn't want to have a husband to tie her down," her grandson said.

Miss Young, an avid Cincinnati Reds fan, was just seven years younger than the ball club itself. Until a few years ago, she hadn't missed an opening day in almost 50 years, her grandson said. And she wasn't the kind of fan to take a game sitting down.

"She liked to shout and scream and holler," Young said. "She'd call them her boys."
She last attended a game four years ago when her grandson took her to opening day.

Manchester police assist FBI in biggest drug bust

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

Federal investigators used information supplied by Manchester police to seize more than $1 million worth of cocaine in a drug bust Thursday that is rated among the most successful in state history, authorities said.

At least some of the high-quality cocaine seized in the West Farms Mall in West Hartford Thursday night was believed headed toward Manchester, according to Manchester Police Department spokesman Gary Wood.

A Federal Bureau of Investigation Drug Task Force including detectives from Manchester, New Britain, and Hartford police departments worked together with agents from the Hartford office of the FBI to arrest Michele P. Mariano, 22, of 203 Oakdale Ave., New Britain, on federal drug charges, police said.

Wood said the drug investigation which led police to Mariano began in 1987 after police arrested several minor drug traffickers in Manchester and New Britain. In late 1987, the New Britain Police Department developed information that Mariano was trafficking cocaine, FBI detectives said.

In the spring of 1988, the FBI joined the New Britain Police Department investigation of Mariano's drug sales operation, according to the FBI.

"We started out by getting the little guys and then going for the big fish," Wood said.

Police said Mariano was arrested following a brief struggle with the arrest team after he sold an undercover FBI agent over 3 pounds of cocaine at the parking lot at West Farms Mall.

After the arrest, police seized another 7 pounds of the illegal drug from Mariano's rented vehicle along with 27 empty plastic cases used to store kilos of cocaine. One kilo of cocaine is the same as 2.2 pounds, police said. Also found were scales and $23,000 cash.

Later in the evening, additional amounts of cocaine, cash and other evidence was seized from a Corvette and Cadillac owned by Mariano. These vehicles, a motorcycle and a speed boat were also seized.

"This was an extremely significant drug bust in Connecticut," said Brian O'Keefe, supervisor of the Hartford FBI office. "But, unfortunately, it will only very temporarily disrupt the market, maybe 48 hours worth."

Wood said the seizure would also not disrupt the selling of the drug in Manchester.

In addition to the charges he faces in Connecticut, Mariano is also wanted by Italian authorities for the 1987 sale of one-third of a kilogram of cocaine in Venice, Italy, authorities said. A warrant based on that charge is held by the U.S. Marshals Service and will be lodged against Mariano, according to police.

Mariano appeared Friday before U.S. Magistrate F. Owen Eagan in Hartford and was ordered held in federal custody until a bond hearing next week. An investigation is continuing.

State must 'wait in line' for Merrill

By The Associated Press

A Connecticut state police detective prepared Friday to head to Toronto to interview the state's most notorious escapee, whose life on the lam ended this week in an apple orchard in the Canadian province of New Brunswick.

Detective Louis Lacapruca said he would be armed with an arrest warrant charging Frederick Merrill, 41, of Tolland with first-degree escape. Merrill escaped more than a year ago from the state's maximum-security prison at Somers, where he was awaiting trial on sexual assault charges in connection with an attack on a South Windsor woman.

But, Lacapruca said, it could be sometime before Merrill is returned to Connecticut because Toronto authorities have a warrant for his arrest on charges stemming from a house burglary.

He is also a suspect in several other burglaries and sexual assaults in the Toronto area and in Peterboro, Ontario, a Toronto suburb, state police said. In addition, Canadian immigration authorities are prepared to charge Merrill with violating work laws, Lacapruca said.

"So I think basically we're going to wait in line," the detective said.

He said Merrill was scheduled to be transported Friday from Fredrickton, New Brunswick to Toronto.

Merrill was captured Thursday afternoon by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in the orchard where he worked in Hampstead, New Brunswick, state police said.

Police said Canadian authorities were called to the orchard around 1:45 p.m. Thursday after receiving reports of an argument between a man later identified as Merrill and his foreman, who said he had fired Merrill for showing up drunk and refusing to work.

Authorities checked the name — John Sisam — Merrill was using through crime computers. They found that it was the name of a man whose wallet was stolen in the Toronto housebreak in which Merrill is a suspect, police said.

Corporal Timothy LeDrew donned an apple picker's apron, went into the orchard and sidled up to Merrill. Jeffery Adam, an officer who assisted in the arrest, said he and LeDrew pointed a shotgun and a .38-caliber revolver at Merrill's head when they surprised him.

Bush, Duke prepare for first debate

By David Espo
The Associated Press

George Bush took a turn at bat as Reagan administration diplomat and Michael Dukakis played catch with a member of the Boston Red Sox on Friday as they loosened up for Sunday's high-stakes debate in the race for the White House.

Neither candidate did much heavy lifting in public, preferring to spend most of the day with aides preparing for the nationally televised 90-minute confrontation in Winston-Salem, N.C. The debate begins at 8 p.m. EDT.

Each candidate staged an early morning, made-for-television scene before repairing to the privacy of his debate class. The vice president goes into the debate holding a modest lead in most public opinion polls, although the same surveys show that a substantial percentage of the voters remain either uncommitted or only loosely committed to a candidate.

Bush invited reporters over after his breakfast meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Secretary of State George Shultz. "We had a substantive discussion on where things stand on the bilateral relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union," said the vice president, who stressed his involvement in U.S.-U.S.S.R. diplomacy.

"It is a pleasure for me to see Mr. Shevardnadze once again," said Bush, who occasionally has used diplomatic backdrops for his campaign. "We have met several times."

Shevardnadze said they had a "very interesting, a very substantive and a very profound discussion on problems of concern to both our countries."

He said Bush has "been involved in all high-level discussions here in Washington and our talks with the president."

Dukakis arranged a media event of a different order outside his house in Brookline, Mass., playing catch in the street with Boston outfielder Ellis Burks. "A little warm-up here. Warm up for the series," said Burks, whose Red Sox were opening an important three-game showdown with the New York Yankees Friday night.

"Burn one in there," a reporter shouted to the governor.

"Not 'till Sunday," he replied.
After 10 minutes, Dukakis repaired to his house. "What are you going to do to get ready today, governor," he was asked.

"I just warmed up," he replied.

Not that that was the end of it.
Dukakis had an entire roster of Democratic politicians and strategists assembled to help his preparations, including New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley.

Shuttle preparations A-OK

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Launch preparations for space shuttle Discovery proceeded without a hitch Friday as, 1,000 miles away, the five men who will fly the first post-Challenger mission rehearsed re-entry procedures while wearing their new, uncomfortable flight suits.

The suits, made necessary by a new escape system, are so cumbersome that NASA officials have reduced the time period in which the shuttle can be launched from three hours to 2 1/2. The launch is scheduled for 9:59 a.m. EDT Thursday and the "window" will close at 12:29 p.m.

"We launched in the past in cotton flight suits and a launch escape helmet which is easy to take off and hold in your lap while lying on the launch pad and then put it on just before liftoff," said mission specialist George Nelson.

"In the pressure suits that we're wearing now, you can't take them off, you can't unstrap and sit up in your seat," said Nelson. "So you're going to be lying on your back the whole time inside your pressure suit and that's fairly hot."

Built into the suits are an emergency oxygen system, three types of parachutes, a life raft, emergency drinking water, flotation devices and survival vest pockets containing a radio beacon, signal mirror, shroud cutter, pen gun flare kit, sea dye marker, smoke flare and beacon.

Nelson and his fellow crew members on the last flight before Challenger suited up and climbed into the cockpit five times only to be disappointed by postponements.

The countdown has an extra day built in to give the launch team time to resolve any problems that may occur.

College sets convocation

Manchester Community College will hold a convocation for new students on Thursday at 5:30 p.m. in the Lowe Program Center.

The purpose of the convocation is to encourage new students to take full advantage of their college opportunities.

Jonathan M. Daube, MCC president, said, "We hope to communicate to our students a sense of what the community college can mean in their lives, how to make it theirs, and how to dream confidently while keeping one foot on the ground."

The convocation will begin with a procession of faculty and staff. Roland Chirico, professor of English and a professional musician, will perform a trumpet rendition of the National Anthem.

The welcome to new students will be given by Daube. Speakers include David Bartley, graduate and president of Holyoke Community College and former Speaker of the House of Representatives in Massachusetts, and Attorney Nancy Kelley, a 1982 MCC valedictorian who is serving as a White House fellow.

Teachers featured in art show

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

Elaine Agnew can turn a lump of clay into a graceful vase, beat a nugget of metal into a stunning piece of jewelry and cut glass into flowers which fairly beg to be fingered.

Yet when sixth grade students around Manchester see her, they think of "the art lady," a woman whose role is primarily that of an instructor, rather than a creative artist.

That's precisely why Donna Fitzgerald, manager of The Lindgren Art Gallery at Iling Junior High School, chose to open the year with an exhibit called Art Teachers in Perspective. The small gallery, just off Iling's front lobby, is filled with paintings and prints, bracelets and necklaces, blown glass bottles and ceramic jars, all done by Manchester's art teachers.

And among those works are a large ceramic umbrella stand, a silver and brass ring and a stained glass floral piece by Agnew.

It is the first time that work by the town's 16 instructors has been showcased in this manner, said Fitzgerald, who teaches art at Iling.

"We were hoping to promote a better understanding among students that their teachers are not just classroom personalities," said Fitzgerald, at the hursday afternoon opening reception. "They are artists who teach. They are artist/educators."

Unfortunately, most students will not see the show unless their teachers take them over for a mini-field trip. The gallery, now in its second year, is open only from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The exhibit is open through Oct. 14.

"We had hoped to have evening hours, but it turns out to be a real security problem," Fitzgerald said. The show will, however, be open from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, during Iling's parent open house. And Fitzgerald hopes to have the gallery opened at least one weekend during each of the year's subsequent shows.

The first piece to catch the visitor's eye is the wistful pastel portrait of a child, titled "Ruth," by Lucille Glaeser, a longtime art teacher in town. It is at the gallery entrance, and was of particular interest to several Iling students who dropped in on Thursday afternoon, who pointed to its realism.

Ellen Clayton, 16, and Kendra Freeman, 17, who take art classes at Manchester High School, were among approximately 75 visitors who stopped in at the gallery opening for cider, cheese, and a chance to see the works. Clayton said she had expected the teachers' work to be excellent. What surprised, and pleased her, she said, was the fact that the school system would celebrate and honor the work in this way.

"I think it's neat that they get a chance to show their work here," she said. "It shows the teachers that we know they're real people, real artists, too."

UConn names Manchester woman

Ann Huckenbeck of Manchester, a special assistant to University of Connecticut President John T. Casteen III and a former assistant dean of the School of Business Administration, will head UConn's admissions office on an interim basis as of Dec. 1.

UConn announced that in October, Huckenbeck will begin working with Admissions Director Ann G. Quinley, who is leaving UConn Dec. 1 to become dean of academic support services at the University of Massachusetts.

Carol Wiggins, UConn vice president for student affairs, said a search committee will be appointed soon, with the hope of filling the admissions director position by Sept. 1, 1989.

Huckenbeck began working at UConn in 1970 as an assistant director of admissions. During her four years in admissions, she helped establish transfer admissions standards, and interviewed and counseled students wishing transfer to UConn from other institutions. She also developed articulation policies with Connecticut community colleges, which set guidelines for guaranteed transfer based on grade point averages.

In 1972, she served on the Transfer Policy Committee for the state's Master Plan on Higher Education.

From 1974 to 1985, Huckenbeck served as assistant dean for undergraduate programs in the UConn School of Business, and from 1985 to April 1987 she was assistant dean for administration in the business school.

Since April 1987, Huckenbeck has been a special assistant to Casteen.

Huckenbeck earned her bachelor's degree in English from UConn in 1970, graduating magna cum laude and with distinction. She also earned her bachelor's and doctoral degrees from UConn, both in education administration.

Huckenbeck is a member of the Athletic Advisory Committee and is second vice president of the UConn Alumni Association.

Checks focus on cancerous items at dump

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

Manchester is working to comply with a request by the state Department of Environmental Protection to set up check stations for the removal and storage of capacitors found to contain cancer-causing agents from junked appliances.

The DEP is asking every solid waste disposal area to create a pre-1979 "white goods" check station to ensure removal of capacitors before they're shredded so the metal can be recycled.

Capacitors in pre-1979 appliances contain polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, which have caused cancer in experiments with animals.

Lee O'Connor, superintendent of the Highway and Sanitation Division, said Wednesday he attended a workshop last week and is setting up a check station at the Manchester landfill that he hopes to have ready in about a month.

To help alleviate the problem of junked cars, the DEP has done tests that show "fluff," non-metallic materials used in cars, is not a hazardous material and can be dumped at municipal facilities.

Fluff includes plastic, upholstery and other materials, but the DEP's findings won't help Manchester too much because fluff also contains metals and cannot be accepted at the Manchester landfill, O'Connor said.

"We decided because of the metals that were in it, it wasn't in our best interest to take it," O'Connor said.

The number of junked cars and "white goods" has been growing in Manchester because facilities they were previously sent to no longer accept them, O'Connor said.

The DEP also clamped down on operations that shred old appliances because fluff containing PCBs is a federally designated hazardous material. As a result, the Waterbury company that accepted the recyclable metal from Manchester was prohibited from shredding appliances containing capacitors more than seven months ago, O'Connor said.

Environmental laws also closed down the facility that accepted most of the state's junked cars. The facility closed in July right after the West Haven landfill that accepted the fluff closed.

The problem of junked cars resulted in a six-point proposal in July from the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities to deal with the cars. CCM, which consists of representatives from the state's 169 municipalities, asked that the six points be considered as legislative initiatives.

Town officials said the proposals, which included increasing fines to people who abandon cars and creating regional facilities to temporarily store junked cars, should be considered despite flaws.

O'Connor said even with the recent DEP findings, that proposal may still be necessary. "I'm sure it would be beneficial for all communities to work together to get rid of them (junked cars)."

The DEP has listed five facilities in Connecticut and Massachusetts that will accept cars. Because fluff has been found non-hazardous, other towns with facilities permitted to accept municipal solid waste can dispose of it.

Contractor charged with fraud

A Colchester home improvement contractor whose business once was based in Manchester is facing a state lawsuit accusing him of defrauding customers.

The suit, filed by Attorney General Joseph I. Lieberman, accuses John Perkins, owner of Family Home Remodelers, of taking money as deposits and not performing or finishing work. The suit seeks $54,000 in civil penalties — $2,000 for each violation — and more than $30,000 in reimbursements to customers. The suit involves 27 Perkins customers in numerous towns in the Manchester area, according to Neil Fishman, the assistant attorney general prosecuting the case.

Perkins, whose business was formerly located in Manchester, has moved to Colchester, where similar customer complaints have begun "cropping up," Fishman said.

A machine answered the telephone at the company Friday, and Perkins didn't return a message seeking comment. The state is accusing Perkins of "shoddy workmanship" and of scheming to take money from customers for work never begun or completed, Fishman said.

He said the allegations involve instances in which Perkins accepted between $500 and $5,000 in deposits from customers for work he never began or in which he finished only portions of jobs.

Fishman said the lawsuit accuses Perkins of violating Connecticut's Unfair Trade Practices Act, the Home Improvement Act and the Home Solicitation Sales Act.

Max celebrated his birthday at a fabulous place.

Chances are, Max won't remember what a great time he had at The Family Birthing Center at Manchester Memorial Hospital. But his parents will never forget the wonderful experience.

From the moment they arrived, they enjoyed the special attention and personal care that are so hard to come by in some of the bigger hospitals. Throughout labor and delivery, Max's parents had the support of their own nurse in the privacy of their own birthing room, using the prepared child-birth methods they learned at the Center. After Max's arrival they celebrated with photo-taking, a champagne toast and hugs all around. All with the security and confidence that Max and Mom were getting the expert medical attention of Manchester Memorial's top-notch doctors and nursing staff.

After delivery, Mom was settled into her comfortable room where Max was welcome to "room-in" anytime. Dad even spent the night! The next day, Mom and Dad shared a special "Stork Club" gourmet dinner and got instructions on how to care for their little birthday boy.

If you see a "birth day" celebration in your future, The Family

Birthing Center would be delighted to show you their facilities and offer you more information. After all, doesn't your baby deserve as warm a welcome as little Max?

I-84 disruptions to start Monday

HARTFORD — The state Department of Transportation announced that several changes to entrance and exit ramps along I-84 in downtown Hartford are scheduled to take place next week as part of the $88.5 million I-84/I-91 interchange modernization project.

These changes, including the re-opening of the High Street ramps on I-84 and the temporary closure of the Trumbull Street ramps, will occur over a three-day period between Monday and Wednesday, weather permitting. In addition, temporary lane closures will occur on I-84 eastbound on Monday and Tuesday nights.

Beginning at approximately noon Monday, the High Street entrance ramp to westbound I-84 and Walnut Street will reopen to traffic.

In conjunction with these changes, it will be necessary to temporarily close North Chapel Street between Ann and High streets from 9 a.m. to noon Monday. Once traffic has been shifted on High Street, North Chapel will reopen. However, the shift of traffic will prohibit left turns from High Street onto South Chapel Street until construction of the remainder of the bridge is completed.

On Tuesday at 7 a.m. the eastbound exit from I-84 to High Street will be re-opened to traffic. The High Street entrance and exit ramps were originally closed in January for reconstruction and realignment as part of the interchange project. The High Street bridge over I-84 is also being replaced as part of the project.

The final ramp changes on Wednesday include the temporary closing of the Trumbull Street exit on eastbound I-84. These closings will occur by 6 a.m. to allow for reconstruction of the Trumbull Street ramps and the adjacent retaining walls along I-84.

The eastbound and westbound Trumbull Street ramps are scheduled to reopen to traffic in December 1989. Until then, motorists should plan to use the ramps at Asylum and High Streets as alternates. Motorists will be directed to the Columbus Boulevard entrance to I-84 eastbound as a permanent alternate to the Ann Street ramp, which is being eliminated.

For more information on these changes, contact the I-84/I-91 Interchange Hotline at 528-4023.

Kinder Care worker charged in sex abuse

Police arrested an employee of the Kinder Care day-care facility on West Center Street Friday on charges of sexual abuse to a minor, police said. William F. Reale, 35, of 113 Standish Road, Coventry, was arrested on a warrant charging him with second-degree assault and risk to a minor, according to police.

The charges resulted from an investigation prompted in February 1988 by a parent whose 2-year-old child attended the day-care center.

Reale was placed on administrative leave in March. None of the children attending the day-care center were withdrawn at that time, according to police.

Reale was released on a $25,000 bond and is expected to appear in Manchester Superior Court Sept. 28.

Kelley is one of about 1,100 MTC workers out of 10,200 who have crossed picket lines and returned to work.

A FULL DISPLAY — The Rev. Kim-Eric Williams of Concordia Lutheran Church puts out a display of Russian Orthodox icons, which his church is hosting this weekend. This weekend was chosen for the display to honor the 1000th anniversary of Christianity in Russia.

Rare icon exhibit at church brings Russia to Manchester

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

A bit of Russia is visiting Manchester this weekend.

A rare collection of more than 35 hand-painted icons, or scenes of Christ and the saints, will be on display at Concordia Lutheran Church at 40 Pitkin St. through Sunday. They are done with egg-based tempera paints on wood, and are an important part of the worship by those who follow the Russian Orthodox, explained the Rev. Kim-Eric Williams, pastor at Concordia.

"The Orthodox are more concerned than we are with the mystery and the power of religion," Williams said. "There is more of a sense of the creative side of Christ. It's a side of religion which is often missing in the Western, or Roman, side of Christianity."

These icons, with their lush colors and textures, are used to evoke that sense of mystery, said Williams.

Several months ago, Concordia Lutheran's worship committee decided to work on establishing an understanding of East-West relations, as they pertain to the Christian community, Williams said.

Coincidentally, the display of icons was available for display in a small number of churches across the United States, Williams said. These paintings, which are based on ancient originals, are painted by monks in Greece who must fast 30 days before working on their art. In Russia, work of this sort is no longer produced.

This particular weekend was chosen to honor St. Sergius of Russia, whose name day falls on Sept. 25, and the 1,000th anniversary of Christianity in Russia.

Last Sunday the confirmation classes visited the All Saints Russian Orthodox Church in Hartford. This weekend, a lay member of that church will address the public at the Manchester church, explaining Orthodox spirituality.

"This provided a way for us to address East-West rivalries and tensions, some of which are deeply influenced by the split between Western Christianity and the Eastern Orthodox faiths," Williams said.

The Sunday worship services at Concordia, at 8 and 10:30 a.m., will include Russian prayers and choral themes, under the direction of David Almond. In his sermon, Williams said, he will address the tensions in the contemporary scene.

"It's even more important than ever that we understand what motivates the Russian people," Williams said.

The exhibit of icons will be open to the public today from 10 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 5 p.m. On Sunday, some of the icons will be used in the services, while others are displayed in the lounge.

IN GLOWING COLOR — This icon, titled Virgin Mother of God, is one of the paintings being displayed this weekend at Concordia Lutheran Church. The original was painted in the 17th century, while this one was done several years ago by monks in Greece.

Government maze is hit

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — The city government has "so many checks and balances, it makes the federal government look like a joke," according to a consultant hired to review city operations.

Jacob Ukeles, of Ukeles Associates Inc., pointed out to the Common Council in his "reconnaissance report," that there are 75 boards, commissions or departments running things in the city, all with different responsibilities, lines of authority and sources of power.

He said the surplus of power groups, combined with failed attempts to update the city charter, hinder managerial advancement.

Further complicating clear identification of power bases in the city is the state-mandated Financial Review Board, he said, which was instituted after Bridgeport received approval from the legislature to sell municipal bonds to cover an estimated $34 million multi-year accumulated deficit.

While Ukeles identified the state's Financial Review Board as a constraint, he said it will be helpful in solving city fiscal problems.

Ukeles said that through the board and other efforts of the city, the community is more aware of the city's fiscal crisis than it was when he began his 14-month project.

Ukeles' presentation was the first before the Common Council. In the coming weeks, he plans to make similar presentations in a series of five neighborhood meetings for the public.

Wet T-shirt vlew costs state cops

HARTFORD (AP) — Gov. William A. O'Neill said Friday he was pleased that the state police union had agreed to pay for repairs to state police cruisers damaged when troopers reportedly stood atop them to get a better view of a wet T-shirt contest among female officers.

O'Neill said he found the incident at a state picnic embarrassing.

"No question about it, it's an embarrassment," the governor said. "It should not be repeated, certainly not in the state of Connecticut. If there's going to be functions such as that, they don't belong in the state of Connecticut."

The picnic, hosted by the Connecticut State Police Union, was held Sept. 14 in Wallingford and attended by troopers from several states. State police are still investigating and have not released a firm estimate of damage to the cruisers. The wet T-shirt contest reportedly involved female troopers.

When the contest was announced, several troopers scrambled to the tops of their cruisers to get a better view, according to published reports. O'Neill said paying for repairs with union funds had not been suggested by his office, but that he did think it was appropriate.

"I think that's no more than right; certainly the state taxpayers should not pay for damage to those cruisers when it was done on private time," the governor said.

2nd death probed

WEST HARTFORD (AP) — A second death at a nursing home is being investigated for possible links to an outbreak of salmonella poisoning, state health officials said.

Investigators have confirmed 18 cases of salmonella poisoning at the home and are awaiting test results of 13 other residents of West Hartford Manor, authorities said.

Although the outbreak is over, two of the 18 residents who contracted the sickness have died. The second person died on Wednesday.

HELLO — Barbara Bush greets Jessica Genarelli, 2, being held by her mother, Dana, during a visit to the Easter Seals Rehabilitation Center in Waterbury on Friday. Mrs. Bush made campaign and fund-raising stops for her husband's presidential campaign in Waterbury and

New Britain. She admonished the media for concentrating too much on issues like patriotism and the Pledge of Allegiance, at the expense of news-worthy speeches by the candidates on serious issues like drugs and the environment.

Bush, Dukakis fans hopeful

HARTFORD (AP) — With a new poll showing George Bush and Michael Dukakis locked in a dead heat for Connecticut's votes, Republicans said Friday that they're perceiving a national trend toward their candidate while Democrats predicted the presidential debates would be key.

"We expect our numbers to grow. The trend's definitely going with the Bush-Quayle ticket," said Anne Scherr, a spokeswoman for J. Brian Gaffney, who heads the Republicans' campaign in Connecticut.

"I pleased to see that what was my gut feeling about what was going on in the state was scientifically proven in their polling," said GOP State Chairman Robert S. Poliner.

Democratic Gov. William J. O'Neill said he thought the numbers would take another turn after the debates between the presidential contenders.

"Mike Dukakis is very good on his feet and the issues will start to take hold and I think you're going to see the numbers start to turn around again," said O'Neill.

In the debate, O'Neill said, Dukakis "has to do more than hold his own."

"I expect he'll do that, plus, I think you'll find him a very forthright person on television and I think he will appeal to the American public."

The Hartford Courant/Connecticut Poll showed that state voters, who favored Dukakis by 17 percentage points in July, now prefer Bush by 39 percent to 27 percent for Dukakis, with 24 percent undecided.

But because the 2 percentage point edge for Bush is within the poll's margin of error of 5 percent, it is impossible to determine which candidate is in the lead.

Also, about 20 percent said they might change their minds between now and Election Day.

"The evidence is pretty strong it could go either way," said G. Donald Ferree Jr., director of the poll.

The poll was taken by telephone from Sept. 12 to Sept. 18.

Prof's formula says its a tie

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A Yale professor has found some success predicting the outcome of presidential elections by using a mathematical formula based on the premise that "people vote their pocketbooks."

Economics Professor Ray C. Fair has been developing and honing his formula since 1976, but in putting it to the test for the past 20 presidential elections, it proved wrong only three times, in 1960, 1968 and 1976.

After inserting several economic variables into this political season's equation, the numbers indicate the race between Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis is a tossup, said Fair, who emphasized his interest was purely academic.

According to the Fair formula, which is designed to yield the predicted percentage of voters who will cast their ballots for Democrats, Dukakis will receive 48.2 percent of the popular vote.

But because the formula is accurate only to within 3 percentage points, Fair said it is inconclusive this year.

"This says the election won't be moot. Both candidates should try hard. It's going to be a squeaker," he said Thursday.

There are three keys to the Fair formula: the growth rate of the economy in the six to nine months before the election, the rate of inflation two years before the election and the head start of the incumbent.

The equation leaves about 3 percentage points of room for everything else, such as foreign policy, environment, defense.

"This is not physics. There are errors. It's not deterministic by any means," he said.

No clues in baby's death

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The state medical examiner was unable to determine the cause of death of a newborn girl found in a garbage bag outside a firehouse Aug. 28, and police also say they have no leads in the case.

The official cause of death has been listed as undetermined. Dr. James Luke, the chief state medical examiner, said this week. The body's decomposition hindered efforts to determine the cause of death, Luke said.

The child was less than 2 weeks old and her umbilical cord was still attached.

The body will be turned over to welfare officials for burial, the medical examiner's office said.

Large resort planned

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A Connecticut developer has unveiled plans for a proposed $1.2 billion resort on the south end of the Las Vegas Strip.

The project, dubbed the Pharaoh's Kingdom, is being proposed by Anthony Silano of Silano Development Group of Prospect, Backers say the project would include the world's largest resort, 5,000 rooms, plus some of the tallest buildings in Nevada and a giant casino.

The project would also feature an 80-acre family theme park, golf course, and a retirement community, according to plans announced Thursday.

The proposed 710-acre site is located on the old Los Angeles Highway, an extension of the Strip on the southern edge of Las Vegas.

Pollution case settled

STAFFORD (AP) — Two Massachusetts companies accused in 1982 of polluting a commercial water supply have agreed to a $300,000 settlement of a suit filed by a Stafford couple, an attorney says.

The two companies, F.L. Roberts and Company Inc., and a related company, RPC Corp., both of Springfield, Mass., this week agreed to settle a suit filed by Bruno and Alice Warchol, charging that fuel from an underground storage tank at the companies' Route 190 gas station had contaminated their well.

The Warchols well supplied a small commercial plaza in the late 1970s across Route 190 from a BP gasoline service station, one of 70 stations throughout New England operated by the F.L. Roberts, said the Warchols' attorney, Robert B. Cohen of Hartford.

Cohen said the settlement came after two weeks of testimony in a trial on the suit in Vernon Superior Court. He estimated that the cleanup may cost F.L. Roberts between $450,000 and $750,000.

Long strike predicted

HARTFORD (AP) — The first strike in six years by the Hartford Symphony Orchestra forced the postponement of the start of the 1988-89 season and with no negotiations planned, the only thing both sides agreed on Friday was that the battle has just begun.

"I'm saddened to say we're still quite a bit apart," said Morton Handel, the symphony's president. "I wouldn't dare venture to guess as to how long it will last."

William D. Steinberg, president of the American Federation of Musicians Local 400, said the musicians are prepared to stay out as long as it takes for them to get better wages and benefits.

"Let me tell you the mood of the orchestra," Steinberg said. "Last night, members of the orchestra stood up and said, 'Please don't vote for strike if you're not willing to stay out as long as it takes to get what we need.'"

"The final vote was 71 to 2. ... They're willing to stay out as long as it takes."

The union represents about 85 musicians who perform with the Hartford Symphony Orchestra, the Connecticut Ballet and the Connecticut Opera.

Guilty plea in fraud scheme involving P&W engine parts

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The president of a Pennsylvania airplane parts distributor who sold defective jet engine parts pleaded guilty Friday to conspiring to defraud the federal government, authorities said.

Joseph H. Wilkens, 53, president of American Support and Service Co. of Line Lexington, Pa., entered the plea before U.S. District Judge Ellen B. Burns and has agreed to cooperate in an on-going investigation, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said.

Twardy said that Wilkens conspired with two other businessmen, who have not been identified, to refurbish defective second stage metal vanes and offer them for resale to distributors. The vanes are used in Pratt and Whitney-produced JT8D jet engines which power 727s.

The metal vanes — about 3 inches long by 1 inch wide and a half-inch thick — are designed to direct air toward blades on a revolving wheel inside a jet engine which powers the airplane, according to Michael Ciccarelli, spokesman for the New England office of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Twardy said that the defects centered on the strength of the vanes. He said defective vanes could have caused an engine to shut down.

"We know of no accidents that have been attributed to those parts thank God," Ciccarelli said. "Everybody moved fast."

Twardy said that the Turbine Component Co. of Branford reported the scheme to FBI agents last fall and the FAA notified airlines it believed had purchased the parts.

Those airlines that bought the defective parts included Air Lingus, Air Canada, Air Mexico and U.S. Air, Twardy said.

Twardy said Turbine employees are also being investigated on allegations they refurbished defective parts at home.

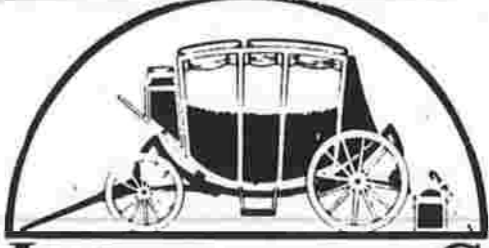

Twardy said that during 1986 and 1987, Wilkens met with individuals and agreed to send the vanes to their business to have welding work done. Twardy declined to identify the individuals involved or their company.

Ciccarelli said the company was not approved by the FAA. Twardy said used vanes are required to be worked on, in FAA-operated or FAA-licensed repair shops.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Douglas A. Lavine said some of the vanes were welded in Connecticut and were returned to Wilkens' Pennsylvania company where their appearance was altered to disguise defects.

Wilkens then had his company send the vanes to an FAA repair station for approval and certification, Twardy said.

Twardy said many of the vanes were approved and returned to Wilkens. Twardy said Wilkens made about $150,000 by reselling the vanes to at least eight distributors.

90-day term in drowning

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A Navy rescue-swimmer instructor was found guilty Friday of negligent homicide and sentenced to 90 days in the brig in the drowning of a panic-stricken recruit forced under water during a training exercise.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Michael Combe, 28, of Tempe, Ariz., also was convicted of conspiracy to commit battery by a five-officer court-martial panel. The panel rejected a more serious charge of involuntary manslaughter.

In addition to the confinement, Combe was reduced in rank one grade to petty officer third class and reprimanded.

At the hearing, Combe testified that he has had sleepless nights, received hate mail and threatening phone calls. He also owes $12,700 to his civilian lawyers.

"We are compared to the Germans who burned Jews," Combe said of the letters and calls.

Others, he said, called him a murderer and a killer, and one suggested his family should be drowned in front of his eyes so he would know how the victim's relatives suffered.

Marine Capt. James Royce, Combe's military counsel, urged no punishment, saying Combe already had suffered enough because of the publicity, threats and cost of the court-martial.

Combe was found guilty of repeatedly dunking 19-year-old recruit Lee Mirecki in a swimming pool at Pensacola Naval Air Station while other students were ordered to face away and sing the national anthem.

"Each time I hear 'The Star Spangled Banner' played for a gold medal winner at the Olympics, my joy is overshadowed by my thoughts that my brother, Lee, heard the same song as he fought for his life," said the victim's sister, Lynn Johansen, in a telephone interview from Appleton, Wis., the Mireckis' hometown.

Combe faced up to a year in prison on the negligent homicide count — compared to three years for manslaughter — along with a bad conduct discharge and loss of pay and allowances. The battery count carries a six-month maximum.

Study suggests 'hold' on death

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have found evidence that Jewish deaths decline just before Passover and increase afterward, supporting the folk wisdom that some people near death can cling to life to reach an important event.

In analyzing deaths over 19 years in California, researchers found evidence for that ability in people with cancer or diseases of the heart or brain blood vessels.

Results suggest that some people can "hang on until occasions that are important to them, which is something that has been speculated on for thousands of years," said researcher David Phillips, a sociology professor at the University of California at San Diego.

The work suggests death can be postponed about a week, said Phillips, who reports the study with graduate student Elliot King in Saturday's issue of The Lancet, a British medical journal.

In interviews, experts said similar effects have appeared in other studies and in treatment of dying patients, but one suggested the new finding may reflect anticipation before the holiday and emotional letdown afterward.

The study included deaths three months before and three months after the large family meal that occurs on Passover eve. Deaths among Jews and non-Jews were compared for 1966 through 1984.

Researchers said the strategy let them compare death rates of one group for whom the event held great meaning with other people for whom it did not. And because the date of Passover varies annually, its impact would stand out from unrelated chronological trends, researchers wrote.

KIDNAPPED EDUCATORS — Three U.S. and an Indian hostage in Lebanon hold a poster in a photo released by their kidnapers on Friday. The kidnapers warned they may resort to violence if the United States fails to support Palestinian rioting against Israel. Hostages are Alann Steen, 49, left, Mithileshwar Singh, 60, a legal resident alien of the U.S., Robert Polhill, 55, and Jesse Turner, 41. They were kidnapped Jan. 24, 1987 from the campus of the U.S.-affiliated Beirut University College by gunmen posing as police.

Soviet troops, tanks move to halt unrest in provinces

MOSCOW (AP) — Troops and tanks Friday blockaded the capital of Armenia and flooded the streets of a disputed city in Azerbaijan to try to quell ethnic unrest in two southern Soviet republics.

Tass said police and soldiers arrested people suspected of burning down homes in Nagorno-Karabakh, where the majority Armenian population wants Armenia to annex the region from Azerbaijan. Troops confiscated guns, knives and other weapons.

The official news agency said a general strike continued in Stepanakert, main city of the mountain enclave, but that a curfew and a ban on public meetings and marches imposed Wednesday were lessening the tension.

In Yerevan, "there are troops and tanks. I don't want to say the whole city is surrounded, but at Lenin Square and other areas where there are government buildings there are hundreds of soldiers," said a man who identified himself as the deputy editor of Armenia's official news agency.

Deputy Interior Minister N.I. Demidov said in an interview on television that extra troops, from the Interior Ministry and the regular army, had to be brought into Yerevan to prevent violence.

For the second night in a row, the television news showed film of armored vehicles and police blocking streets in Yerevan.

American visitors returning to Moscow from Yerevan said they saw transport planes at the airport, and tanks, armored personnel carriers, and roadblocks in the city.

"All night for the past two nights we heard planes coming in," Wisconsin Lt. Gov. Scott McCallum said in an interview in Moscow. He said 1,200 soldiers were stationed near central Lenin Square.

Soldiers and police set up roadblocks on roads leading into the city and were searching the trunks of cars headed into Yerevan, he said.

An employee of the state broadcasting agency Gostelradio said "many kinds of soldiers" carrying machine guns were patrolling the streets and central square of Stepanakert. Asked how many soldiers were on the streets, she responded: "There are more of them than us."

Weekly Health Tip

HYSTERECTOMY RISK

Each year over 300,000 women undergo surgical menopause, usually at an earlier age than natural. Surgical removal of a woman's ovaries prior to menopause abruptly cuts off her major source of estrogen, which is essential for adequate calcium absorption to maintain strong bones. Women who do not begin estrogen replacement therapy promptly are at very high risk for osteoporosis (weakened bones).

Major AIDS bill OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Friday passed a major AIDS policy bill that would expand testing and counseling, protect the confidentiality of test results and speed up research into the fatal disease.

The vote on the AIDS Federal Policy Act was 367-13.

The centerpiece of the bill is a $400-million-a-year grant program for voluntary testing and counseling, aimed at people with a high risk of exposure to the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome. States and health facilities would have to comply with a number of conditions to get the money.

Textile curbs approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved and sent President Reagan on Friday tightened curbs on textile, apparel and shoe imports, inviting a pre-election trade clash with the administration but falling short of a veto-proof margin.

"I'd like to take this opportunity to remind you that half of the flags we are pledging allegiance to were made in Asian rim countries — that is about the amount of the textiles and apparel we have lost," said Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., as the House approved the measure 248-150.

Drenched in warnings against new trade protectionism, however, the House balked at providing the two-thirds support that is needed to override a presidential veto in the House, which has 435 seats, three of them vacant.

Arms proposals offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have exchanged proposals designed to further nuclear arms control but an agreement to place interim limits on their long-range nuclear warheads is not imminent, senior U.S. officials said Friday.

"I don't want to lead you to believe that something like that is imminent," Charles E. Redman, the State Department spokesman, said as two days of intensive U.S.-Soviet talks neared an end.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "We don't think we'll get a formal agreement before the end of the administration, but it's something we'd sure like to make progress on."

Army gets support

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Opposition leaders backed the new military government Friday, crediting Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril with leading the country toward democracy by seeking to rid the army of its most repressive commanders.

"There is a democratic revolution going on in the army," said Serge Gilles, co-leader of the Patriotic Unity Bloc, a coalition of three center-left political parties. "We're on the road to democracy."

Avril, the army's former adjutant general, assumed the presidency after a coup by rank-and-file soldiers Saturday ousted Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, who was sent into exile in the Dominican Republic.

United front declared

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — The opposition declared on Friday it will form a united front of pro-democracy groups after the new military government of Gen. Saw Maung cracked down on street demonstrations.

The military intelligence chief, Brig. Gen. Khin Nyunt, said that by Wednesday 263 people, including 238 civilians, had been killed since Sunday's coup, a foreign military attache said.

The opposition's announcement marked the first formal attempt by Aung Gyi, Tin Oo, and Aung San Suu Kyi to unite the numerous student, worker and other groups seeking an end to 26 years of autocratic military rule and ruinous economic policies.

Teen says she took the rap for dad in stepmom's killing

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A teen-ager imprisoned after confessing to her stepmother's murder has told authorities a new story, leading them to charge her father and his sister-in-law with committing the crime to collect $1 million in insurance.

Authorities now say that Cinnamon Brown, 18, who has spent three years in a California Youth Authority facility, was persuaded to take the blame by her father, who told her she was too young to be kept in prison.

Orange County Deputy District Attorney Jeffrey Robinson said Miss Brown began cooperating with investigators when she became fed up with her plight while her father lived in luxury with his former sister-in-law, Patricia Ann Bailey, 20.

Acting on her story, authorities Thursday arrested David Arnold Brown, 36, and Ms. Bailey at their home for the slaying of Linda Marie Brown, 23, who was shot to death as she slept March 19, 1985.

The complaint against Brown alleges 11 overt acts of conspiracy to commit murder, including discussing the killing with Ms. Bailey beforehand and recruiting his daughter by telling her that his wife was planning to kill him.

Brown, owner of Data Recovery, a computer service, also allegedly persuaded Miss Brown to take the blame and instructed her what to do.

Robinson also filed a special circumstance charge of committing murder for financial gain, which could lead to a death sentence if Brown is convicted.

Brown was being held on a no-bail warrant, said Lt. Dick Olson, a spokesman for the Orange County sheriff's department. He did not know which attorney would represent Brown at arraignment.

Prosecutors said Brown took out four life insurance policies on his wife during three years of marriage. Two were purchased in the two months before her death. The four promised a total payout of more than $1 million, but police said Brown got only $835,000 because of incomplete paperwork on one policy.

The night of the murder, Mrs. Brown was sleeping alone in her bedroom in a rented Garden Grove home. Shot twice in the abdomen at close range, she died at Fountain Valley Hospital trauma center.

Several hours later, detectives found Miss Brown in a doghouse in the back yard. Police reports said she had taken an overdose of a prescription drug and was clutching a note that read: "Dear God, please forgive me. I didn't mean to hurt her."

Despite the teen-ager's confession, Jay Newell, a district attorney's investigator, was not satisfied with the outcome of the case and continued to look into it, staying in contact with Miss Brown.

About hoaxes on talk shows

By Sarah Overstreet

I turned on my favorite Saturday-morning radio program, "What Do You Know? With Michael Feldman," and what do you know, there were the television industry's latest devils-darlings, Wes Bailey and Tani Freiwald.

Bailey and Freiwald are the part-time actors who scattered impersonations of a sex surrogate, a 35-year-old male virgin, an impotent man and a woman who doesn't like sex among three syndicated TV talk shows — Geraldo Rivera's, Oprah Winfrey's and Sally Jessy Raphael's.

Feldman's show is a wonderful Saturday-morning antidote for those of us for whom the world is too much. He and his studio audience don't take very much too seriously, and spend two hours poking the vulnerable underbellies of current events. Bailey and Freiwald were the perfect interviewees.

It's not that I think it's a good idea to get on national television and lie — as a matter of fact, I think Bailey and Freiwald are taking their fakery too lightly. A lark, it's not. But Freiwald makes a good point, taken in perspective of the shows she "acted" on: Hey, those shows are just entertainment.

I'm afraid I have to agree, at least in part, because of the way the shows operate. One of them will get a titillating guest or topic, and producers for the others will break their necks trying to book the same people within the week, before viewer interest wanes. Their top priority seems to be titillation, rather than providing thought-provoking information.

When you behave as they do, you put your toe right up to the line between information and entertainment. Bailey and Freiwald just crossed over it. They saw themselves as actors in the newest soap-opera genre on TV.

The would-be actors aren't far from right, and it's a shame. What an opportunity these talk shows have! Not everyone at home in the daytime wants to watch old sitcoms or the preposterous story lines that pass for "fiction" on soap operas. We want information, we want our horizons enriched, and some of us even want our safe borders challenged. We don't want a continued, frenzied search for something to shock and titillate us.

That's not to say that some of the topics won't shock and titillate us by their very nature; it's just that when you make those qualities your first priority, you sacrifice any higher purpose. A newspaper becomes a scandal sheet, a novel becomes a potboiler, a talk show becomes what these have become.

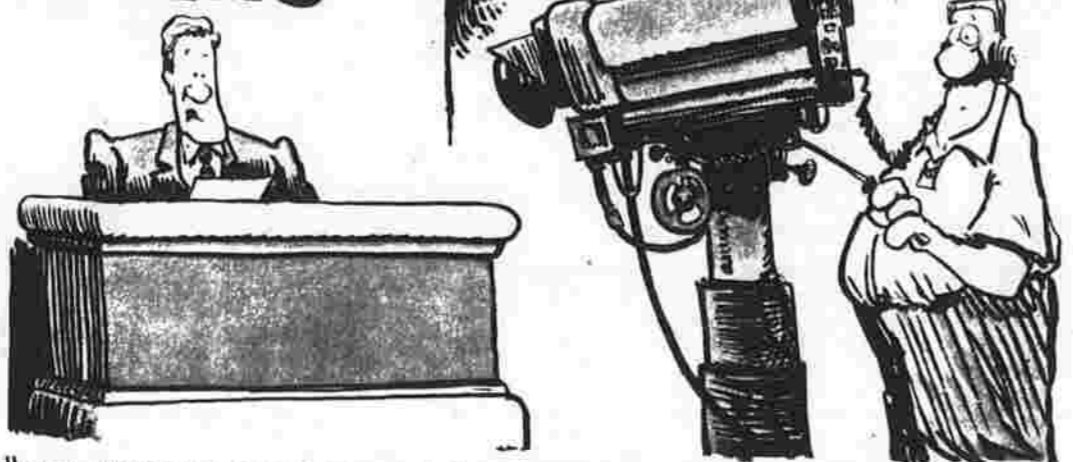

The producers of these shows argue they have no choice, that by improving the quality of their shows they risk losing viewers, rating points, sponsors and money. I believe they're wrong, but I won't argue the point with them since I'm not a television-ratings expert.

But when told of the hoax, the three hosts reacted with varying degrees of outrage, feelings of betrayal and phone calls to their attorneys. Given some of the trumped-up inflated topics the shows have presented us lately, their sputterings of outrage lose some of their oomph.

It's not that large a step from making something appear much more than it is, just to get viewers to tune into your television show and get a piece of that bottom-line pie, to making up a fake persona to get your face on television and share in that pie, too.

"OUR LATEST POLL SHOWS THAT 68% OF THE VOTERS THINK THAT 91% OF THE POLLS ARE INACCURATE 71% OF THE TIME -- PLUS OR MINUS THREE PERCENTAGE POINTS."

1988 election: the big yawn

By Chuck Stone

In just one week, the polls flip-flopped more times than an Olympic gymnast.

First, a USA Today poll showed George Bush leading Michael Dukakis by 2 percent. Then, a New York Times-CBS News poll had Bush leading Dukakis by 8 percent. Finally, a Washington Post-ABC News poll put the Duke ahead of King George by 3 percent.

Is anything constant? Indeed, yes. As summer faded, the New York Mets and Oakland Athletics were securely entrenched in divisional first places, and U.S. sprinters were guaranteed to run up and down the Russians' backs in Seoul.

I've always considered myself the consummate Aristotelian political animal. But I wouldn't hesitate if I were forced to choose between watching Duke and George go forensically mouth to mouth or watching Florence Griffith Joyner and Evelyn Ashford tear up the track from start to finish.

NBC doesn't share my emotional predilection. That's why it reversed itself and decided to carry the first presidential debate instead of the Olympics. I'll give 20-to-1 odds a national referendum would have chosen the Olympics.

The Dukakis-Bush presidential race is generating all of the excitement of a senior citizens quilt-making contest during a North Dakota snowstorm. I may be talking to the wrong people, but everybody with whom I've discussed the presidential race is either (a) bored, (b) uninterested, (c) barely interested, or (d) all of the above.

A passionate young Republican college student described himself as disillusioned. "Do I have to vote this year?" he asked.

A staunch middle-of-the-road Irish friend who voted for Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan lamented, "These two guys are so dull they depress me."

With just weeks to go before the election, it isn't exactly a national malaise. But very few are singing, "Joyful, joyful, we adore thee."

Still, the current near-tie in the polls may perversely stimulate a large turnout, although the percentage of eligible voters who turn out has been declining since 1960.

In the 1960 Kennedy-Nixon election, the percentage of eligible voters who turned out was 62.9, the highest since 1932 — and it hasn't been equaled since. Despite Ronald Reagan's vaunted personal popularity, only 52.6 percent and 53.3 percent of those eligible to vote did so in 1980 and 1984, respectively. That ain't a whole lot of electoral affection for the Gipper.

And there seems to be much less for the Duke and King George.

With the exception of the mental-institution escapees who show up at rallies for both candidates with their screaming imprecations, voters are about as interested as the fans of a last-place team.

Ironically, Bush and Dukakis differ substantially on foreign policy, Third World issues, domestic issues and economic policy. But you can't get past the trivia of the Pledge of Allegiance, the meanness of mental-health reports, the irresponsibility of flag-burning rumors and the witch-hunting of bigoted workers.

Time may be the great catalyst for an honest dialogue. The longer the two candidates remain almost tied in the polls, the faster voter interest will escalate. In addition, the total turnout seems destined to increase. Although the percentage of eligible voters who exercise their right hasn't been equal since 1960, the total number of votes cast has increased every presidential year since 1968. As many as 95 million Americans could vote on Nov. 8, if that trend continues.

So far, neither candidate excites me, although ideologically I'm probably closer to Dukakis' positions.

Right now, I'm far more interested in how decisively my country's Olympians in Seoul will, as they say in the ghetto, kick butt and take names.

Army base has money for plants, not people

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — A U.S. Army base in South Carolina had plenty of money this year for junipers but not for jobs.

Workers at Fort Jackson, S.C., have labored under the shadow of a hiring freeze since May, but when they look out their windows, they see the fruits of an expensive landscaping makeover that went on in spite of budget cuts that pruned personnel.

A spokesman at the base gave us the predictable explanation — the landscaping upgrade was planned before officials learned that they would have to restrict hiring to meet budget constraints. But a face lift, no matter what the timing, looks questionable in an era of clamor over military spending and at a time when presidential candidates are promising that jobs are a priority.

The Fort Jackson beautification project cost the taxpayers more than $235,000.

A partial civilian hiring freeze was imposed at the base last January at the direction of the Fort Jackson chief of staff. The 1988 fiscal year budget for the base had been cut from $35.9 million to $34.2 million. Under the order, only one out of every three job vacancies would be filled and one-third of the temporary employees would be let go. In May, the base imposed a complete hiring freeze.

But some new hires were allowed and each vacancy was considered on a case-by-case basis. Fort Jackson officials shifted money from other accounts to the personnel budget so they would not have to lose permanent employees. "We didn't hire anybody, but we didn't take anybody's job," said Doug Cook, public information officer at Fort Jackson. The restrictions are expected to be lifted at the end of this month, assuming no more budget cuts occur.

At least through the financial hardships, Fort Jackson was able to show a pretty face to outsiders.

Contracts for the landscaping project were signed last September as the fiscal year drew to a close. Officials at the base learned about the budget cuts in October, according to Cook. Still, the project didn't begin until last spring to take advantage of South Carolina's best planting season.

Our associate, Scott Sleek, has obtained purchase orders on the project showing that the base bought everything from marigolds to red maples for the upgrade. Cook said the project included landscaping the front entrance and an area around the base hospital. The money also paid for a new park to commemorate the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. That included the purchase of 25,000 pine seedlings and replacement of dead trees and shrubs.

Senate salaries

The Senate has long been known as a millionaires' club. One-fourth of the members of the current Senate are worth more than $1 million each. In reporting their assets, most senators said they received ample payments for speeches and they often traveled at the expense of special-interest groups. They regard their salary of nearly $90,000 as small change.

But the Democratic senators lined up to succeed Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., as majority leader are not members of the millionaires' club. The three top candidates are men of relatively modest means.

The likely successor, Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, reports that he has just over $600,000 in savings. The next likely choice, George Mitchell of Maine, has cash assets of $65,000. The third, Louisiana's Bennett Johnston, lists assets of up to $700,000.

Inouye will get Byrd's job if political promises mean anything. Mitchell is counting on youth and popularity. Johnston is the dark horse.

We reported a year ago that Byrd had secretly guaranteed the job to 64-year-old Inouye. But Inouye had his moment to shine as chairman of the Senate Iran-Contra hearings and his leadership style rankled some Democrats.

Mitchell, who is 55, was chairman of the Senate Democratic Committee in 1986. He piled up some chits in that job and was very popular among the younger senators. He is also the most articulate of the three men in line for the job.

Tucci slanders nurses

To the Editor:

A local periodical, in a recent issue, reported on the contract settlement between the Manchester Board of Education and its school nurses. In the report, board member John Tucci was quoted as describing the school nurse's job as "cushy." I would like to respond to this remark.

My wife is a school nurse, and I have gotten to know the other school nurses in the town of Manchester and the duties they perform. They are extremely dedicated, well-trained nursing professionals. They constantly evaluate their level of expertise, always keeping pace with advances in the nursing profession by attending classes and training seminars offered throughout the state. They are always aware of the enormous responsibility to which they have been entrusted. To label their job as "cushy" is slanderous, an insult, and totally irresponsible. Coming from a member of a governing body, I find this comment to be rather alarming. This kind of innuendo should not be tolerated by the people of Manchester.

I suggest that Mr. Tucci put aside his prejudices and take a serious look into the duties and responsibilities of the school nurse and discover the facts!

To the people with children in our schools, you can be assured that a well-trained nursing staff is ready and able to assist your children in their time of need. If you don't believe me, look into it yourselves. You be the judge!

Volunteers deserve thanks

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr

Since all MACC services and programs are volunteer based (with the exception of Project Reentry, which significant volunteer support from the people of Emanuel Lutheran), we have the happy task of recognizing those reaching out to support their neighbors.

Our 1988 Volleyball marathon has now raised almost $1,000 for the Shelter. Our thanks to Tierney Funeral Home, to Jeff Maron and the Wickham Park Rangers who were most supportive, to Robert and Sally Albert for their help and for raising a son like Mark who master minded the whole marathon, to Manchester High School Principal Jacob Ludes, Paul Jeanne and Luis Johnson, Drs. Judy and Alan Krupp.

Thanks also to Girl Scout Troop Number 2 who have been making the Shelter/Soup Kitchen beautiful. The girls have committed themselves to planning and maintaining the garden in front of Samaritan Shelter. Aureen Cyr, who is working on her gold award, has planned the plantings so that there will be something blooming almost all year round starting with bulbs in the spring. The Manchester Garden Club gave the girls a grant of $15 and a local nursery donated some plants. When I drove up the girls were planting pink rhododendrons, vincas and getting an assist from a volunteer landscaper. It's great.

Thanks to recent contributors to Samaritan Shelter: Dynamic Metal Products, St. James Church and John and Connie Bertrand and the American Association of Retired Persons No. 604. And to the Shepherd's Place, the seventh grade class of Rabbi Leon Wind Religious School Temple Beth Shalom, St. James Christian Involvement Committee, South Methodist Church, George and Margaret Kania from Marlborough and a very generous donation from Albert Peterson and Abba and Dvora Caspi.

Our thanks also to those who have sent in contributions to be used where most needed: Barbara and Joseph Louzon, Walker and Ginny Briggs, Winifred McCormick and very generous gifts from the Sunday School children at North United Metho-

MACC News

Recent memorial gifts include donations in memory of Philip Finley from Jacqueline and Glen Mirtl, Richard and Carol Bennett, Arthur and Shirley Holmen, in memory of Carl Trant from Winifred Burham, Veronica Sheridan and Helen Sheridan; in honor of the ordination as deacon of Dr. Thomas Conklin from Anne Cole and in honor of the ordination of William Brown from Chet and Marion Thomas.

Memorial gifts to the Interfaith Day Camp include donations in honor of Althea MacLean for Mother's Day and Roderick MacLean (Father's Day), from Dale and Bruce McCubrey in honor of their new grandson Philip Sky Rubins. John and Kathleen Rubins sponsored a child for a full two weeks at camp. Additional donations to Interfaith Day Camp have been received from Israel and Shirley Snyder, Lucille Finnegan, Martha Adams, Stanley Gworek, Prestige Printing, and the Women's Christian Fellowship of Second Congregational Church.

Two donations to the Emergency Pantry have been received from South Methodist. The Human Needs Fund has received monthly support from Walter and Grace Helman, Howard and Carol Rovegno, George W. Ripley, the Chai Group (designated for youth) and additional gifts from Ruth Morrison, Bolton Congregational and a very substantial gift from an anonymous benefactor.

CALLING ALL VOLUNTEERS: Volunteers to staff the Emergency Pantry (ground floor, back entrance Samaritan Shelter) are needed each day between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. starting Oct. 3. Call 646-4114. Volunteer to act as consultants and/or practitioners with plumbing, carpentry, electrical problems at Samaritan Shelter.

There are some encouraging signs of late. Neutral commissions and research groups are decrying our ethical morass and widespread student ignorance of the religious underpinnings of western civilization. School administrators and textbook publishers are being pressed to correct these inadequacies. The demand for a more disciplined approach to study and living is heard, if ever so faintly. "Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not turn from it," Prov. 22:6.

Volunteers with small trucks, vans or station wagons who can help pick up donated foods locally and at Food Share in Hartford.

Volunteer to type, answer phones, generally help out on Monday from 1 p.m. on in the Main Office, St. Bartholomew.

NEEDED — Large men's sweaters, jackets, sweatshirts for colder weather. Also urgently needed at Samaritan Shelter T-shirts, socks and underwear (used OK but please make sure they are clean and repaired), toothbrushes. (Please call 647-8003 to make sure someone is there to receive your donation).

Soup Kitchen needs dishcloths, towels, refrigerator, washer and dryer.

Ohio 9th in nation in tourism revenue

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio may not be Hawaii or Florida but its travel and tourism industry is a $6.4 billion business and employs 132,000 people.

Government statistics rank it ninth in the nation in tourism revenue.

A sort of homecoming

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Liga Jahnke's visit to the Soviet republic of Latvia earlier this summer was a homecoming. She had not stepped foot in her native land since she left in 1944 when she was a year old.

But there will be a homecoming of another sort three years from now if Jahnke's dream comes true. The Manchester resident wants to return to Latvia again and make contact with her relatives, something she was unable to do this time.

Jahnke, 44, of 36 Porter St., spent 10 days in Latvia during a 2 1/2-week tour of the Soviet Union this summer that also included visits to Moscow and Leningrad. Her husband, Leonard, and 15-year-old daughter, Kristina Harrison, accompanied her on the trip.

Since the outbreak of World War II, Latvia has been one of the 15 republics that make up the Soviet Union.

Jahnke said that her first impressions of Latvia were positive ones. "I found it to be a beautiful country, beautiful countryside," she said.

But there was also evidence of decay and backwardness, she said. Scaffolding covered historic buildings that were being restored, and construction tools seemed behind the times. Old women swept the streets with twig brooms.

In addition, Jahnke said, sewage dumped in the Baltic Sea made beaches unswimmable this summer.

There were signs, however, of the government's increased responsiveness to the demands of the public, she said. The authorities seemed to be listening to complaints about pollution, and they decided to hold off the construction of a subway in Riga, the capital of Latvia, because of public concern that it would damage buildings in the medieval city.

The effects of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of increased openness, or "glasnost," were being felt, too. This year, for the first time, the authorities allowed people to place flowers at the Freedom Monument in Riga, which symbolizes the autonomy Latvia enjoyed between the two World Wars. Previously, the authorities had immediately removed any flowers placed there.

One of the most memorable moments for Jahnke during her stay in Riga was when she placed her own flowers at the base of the monument. She was unaware of it, but a Latvian television crew was filming her at the time. An interviewer later approached her and asked her about herself and her reasons for being at the monument and visiting Latvia.

The interview was supposed to have been aired at the beginning of this month.

Jahnke found the residents of the Russian cities of Moscow and Leningrad to be more outgoing than those in Latvia. This, she said, could probably be attributed to the tension between the ethnic Latvians and the Russians who have settled in the Republic since the end of the war.

"There's that sense of hurt and distrust toward the Russians," she said.

Jahnke, who speaks Latvian, said she decided to return to her native country in order to "fill in the puzzle pieces of my own background." Unfortunately, however, she was not able to get in touch with her relatives during her visit this summer.

Her father, who was a former official in the government of Latvia before the Soviet takeover, had cut his ties to family members in Latvia because he was afraid that the Soviet authorities might mistreat them, Jahnke said.

But during her visit, she became acquainted with a fellow teacher who may help her to rediscover her roots. Jahnke, who is herself a teacher in Columbia, met the woman during a musical performance in a church in Riga.

"There was just this immediate pull," she said of the relationship that developed between the two.

She plans to ask her friend for assistance in finding her relatives. "She is a friend I feel I can now ask to help with that process," Jahnke said.

Before Jahnke left Latvia, the woman gave her a candelabrum and 36 candles. The woman told Jahnke that it would be time for her to return when all the candles had been burned.

Jahnke figures that it will take her three years to burn the candles if she uses one every month.

Put a roof on your patio

By Andy Long
The Associated Press

A patio that is provided with a roof is likely to get far more use than one which has no protection from the sun and the rain. The end of the summer is a good time to work on the construction of such a roof because the work need not be done in hot weather.

There are many building materials which will make a satisfactory roof for a patio. Fiber glass panels are a good choice when it is desired to filter the sunlight but not block it.

Regardless of the material used for the covering, the framework that supports it is basically the same. Although there are some minor differences, it usually is best to support the main part of the structure with 4-by-4 wooden uprights or vertical posts. It is advisable to use wood that has been treated in some way with a preservative, whether or not the wood is a type that naturally resists decay and insects.

When the patio floor is concrete, the bottoms of the posts can be secured to noncorroding metal bases. A masonry bit will be needed to drill into the concrete for the setting of noncorroding screws. If the patio has a wooden deck, the posts can be anchored directly to the wood. If the floor is brick, enough bricks must be dug out to seat precast concrete blocks for the anchoring of the posts. Concrete footings must be used below the frost line in areas where the problem of frost exists. Where there is no such problem, the posts can be set into the dirt at least 2 feet deep, but the soil must first be impacted to make it very firm.

Remember that some communities provide specifications for the construction of a patio roof. Check with local authorities to see where there are such restrictions and what they are. For instance, local codes often specify the size and type of the fasteners that must be used to anchor part of the roof framework to the side of the house.

For most roof frameworks, the 4-by-4 posts will support 4-by-6 beams which, in turn, will support the outer ends of 2-by-6 joists usually 8 feet long. Remember that the joists must have a slight pitch to allow for drainage.

Select the fiber glass panels you plan to use before you begin putting up anything. The width of the panels will determine how to space the rafters, 2-by-4s running from the house to the front end of the framework. If the panels are 24 inches wide, for example, space the rafters so that the panels exactly overlap over them. The joints then will be easier to make, stronger and hidden from view. These joints are held together with special mastic as well as nails. The nails are equipped with leakproof washers. If you are very careful, you can nail into the fiber glass directly. But because of the possibility of chipping or cracking the panels, it is best to predrill holes in them to accept the nails. These holes should be just a fraction of an inch smaller than the diameter of the nails. When you buy the panels, you should purchase special flashings and other materials to insure tight fits and prevent the passage of water under the seams.

There are many other interesting roofs that can be used for patios, including those made with plywood, hardboard and almost any other material. One very interesting patio roof recently seen had overhead wooden slats with spaces between them to provide partial shade. Some roofs made of boards decorative farther apart give a special decorative appearance to patios. In one case, a homeowner constructed such a roof, then decided that too much of the sun's rays were coming through. At first, he planned to add extra boards to cut down on the size of the spaces, but after some thought, he placed hanging plants on the structure. Not only did it give a landscape effect to the scene, it provided enough additional shade to accomplish the main objective of blocking some of the sunlight.

Do-it-yourselfers will find helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Long's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to the Manchester Herald at P.O. Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

'Minnesota Tip' helps roses

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

The "Minnesota Tip" sounds like the name of a dance. It's a method of protecting roses against early freezes in the fall, the bitter cold of winter, and the dangers of thaw-freeze in the spring.

Many states experience such climate. Experts at the Minnesota Landscape Arboretum say protecting roses for winter really begins with the work you do in the summer. Bringing your roses into the fall season in the best of health is the first step in winter protection. Soon after mid-October, preparation can begin for tipping the roses.

Here are the "Minnesota Tip" steps for protecting roses in winter and early spring:

1. Water generously one or two days prior to tipping the plant to keep the soil in a moist, workable condition.
2. The day before tipping give your plant a good dormant spray such as a liquid lime-sulphur material.
3. Tie the rosebush canes together to allow easier handling.
4. Avoid pruning bushes because open wounds on the canes may not heal properly, as cold weather can inhibit formation of a protective callus.

5. Dig a trench, starting away from and working toward the base of the bush. The trench should be as long as the bush is high. The width and depth should be enough to easily accommodate the bush or bushes. Pull the soil away from the shank (the root stock area between the bud union and the main branching of the root system) to facilitate tipping the rose. Use a spade or shovel for digging the trench and a spading fork for loosening the soil around the roots.

6. When the trench is ready and the roots of the bush are loosened, use a spading fork to push the bush into the trench. Use the spading fork to hold the bush down while you cover it with 2-3 inches of soil. If the soil you removed in digging the trenches is not enough, add soil from your annual garden or elsewhere.

7. Cover the soil with about 18 inches of loose leaves or other mulch such as marsh hay.

Next spring, start uncovering the rose bushes about April 1.

RECENT GARDEN BOOKS — "Hillier's Manual of Trees & Shrubs 5th Edition" (Van Nostrand Reinhold Co., $29.50) describes more than 8,000 plants. "The Garden and Farm Books of Thomas Jefferson" (Fulcrum, Golden, Colo., $20), is a reproduction of Jefferson's horticultural thoughts on gardening and horticulture through almost 60 years, some never before transcribed.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: I read an article you wrote recently about providing extra storage space inside a garage. Which is fine if you have a garage. We don't, but would like to build a carport. It's a job I am sure I can handle. Am I correct in believing that it will cost less than a garage?

ANSWER: Yes, assuming it will be a simple extension of the house roof. Of course, it is possible to build a spacious carport with all kinds of extras that will make it almost as costly as a garage. If the carport is meant mostly to keep your car out of the sun and rain, with perhaps a portion of it devoted to storage and occasional use as an entertainment area, it definitely will not cost as much as a garage.

QUESTION: I once repaired a garden hose, but it was made of rubber. The two hoses I have in this house are plastic. One of them looks as though it may need a repair soon. There is a tiny damaged section that I would like to cut out and then bring together the two ends with a coupling. Is this done the same way as with a rubber hose?

ANSWER: The same way, but not with the same coupling. Tell the dealer where you buy the coupling that it is to be used on plastic and he will sell you the proper type. There are several different kinds, so you will have to make your own choice after you receive his assurance that it will work on plastic.

QUESTION: We have an old dining room table we would like to paint. Is it necessary to remove the old varnish finish?

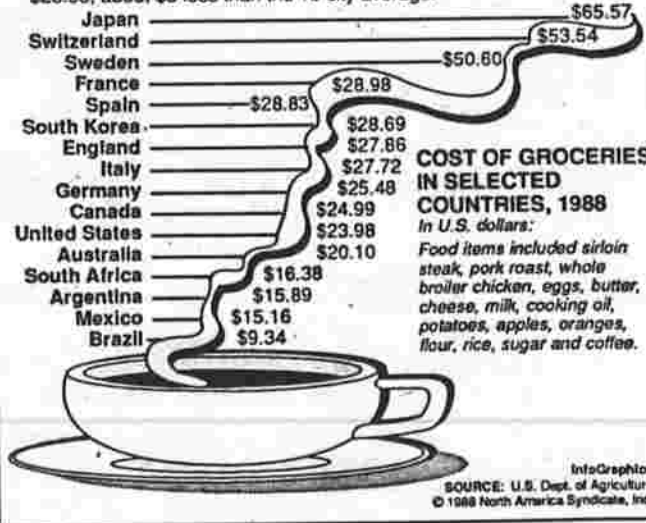

ANSWER: You can paint over varnish only if the remaining sheen is removed. This can be done by sandpapering or steel wooling the varnish or using a liquid chemical that accomplishes the same thing. Paint does not grip properly when applied to a glossy surface.

Comparing food prices around the world

A 1987 survey by the Foreign Agriculture Service in 16 capital cities around the world showed food prices in Tokyo to be the most expensive. Selected food items cost $65 in Tokyo, while the same items cost just over $9 in Brazil. In the U.S., the grocery bill was $23.98, about $5 less than the 16-city average.

Tax Adviser

QUESTION: Recently, I received one of those cash rebates when I bought my new car. The car dealership gave me a choice of either applying the rebate toward the purchase of the car or keeping the money. I kept the money. Is it taxable?

M.W.
MEMPHIS, TENN.

ANSWER: If you receive a cash rebate from a manufacturer or dealer on an item that you purchased, it is not considered income for Internal Revenue Service purposes. You do not have to report it on your tax return. Spend it without worry.

QUESTION: My husband and I are separated. We both work and have kept our incomes and expenses separate. Will we be able to file separately and use the short form?

G.S.
TULSA, OKLA.

ANSWER: Yes, both of you will be able to file separately and use the short Form 1040A. However, keep this in mind: If your husband files the long Form 1040 and itemizes his deductions, then you must also file Form 1040 and itemize your deductions. If one spouse itemizes, the other is also required to do the same. Let me alert you that you may be paying the most tax if you file "Married Filing Separately."

QUESTION: My job requires a lot of traveling and entertaining. Under the new law, can I still deduct business expenses incurred when I travel from one branch office to another?

M.U.
CHICAGO

ANSWER: If you are an employee and have ordinary and necessary travel, transportation, meals, entertainment and gift expenses related to your work, you certainly may deduct these expenses on your income tax return. But there is a catch and a limitation. First, you must be able to itemize these expenses on Schedule A, Form 1040. Second, some of the meals and entertainment expenses may be subject to an 80 percent limitation. Last, the amount deductible is limited to the total of your miscellaneous deductions that are in excess of 2 percent of your adjusted gross income. Be sure and keep detailed records.

QUESTION: Our neighborhood maintains a common area for the use of its residents. Once a year we are assessed a tax for the care, upkeep and maintenance of this area. Although the assessment is labeled a tax, it is recorded separately from our property taxes. Will this tax be deductible on our income tax return?

J.W.
BLOOMINGDALE, ILL.

ANSWER: I'm afraid not. The IRS said in a recent ruling that these assessments are essentially user fees and not taxes. They were not imposed and collected to raise revenues for the benefit of the general public, but are rather for the exclusive purpose of benefiting the property owners of the neighborhood.

Here's the bad news about that catastrophic coverage

Sylvia Porter

Will our elderly really benefit from the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act? Most people do not realize that the act is law, much less what it means.

First, the new law covers more than just Medicare. It delves into a whole grab-bag of issues, including Medicaid. And while the law has been widely publicized—particularly about the increased hospitalization and prescription-drug benefits it offers—it also has negative aspects. It also covers several vital issues about which most of you are unaware.

To be specific, the elderly who are not sick will be paying for those who are. While the new law provides increased hospital benefits and prescription-drug allowances under Medicare, there are new charges that private citizens will be paying.

According to John J. Regan, health care professor at Hofstra University Law School and author of "Tax, Estate & Financial Planning for the Elderly" (Matthew Bender & Co.), in the past Medicare Part A only had to be paid for "as needed" only those who were hospitalized were asked for money.

Now, everyone over 65 must pay for a Supplemental Part A premium that covers many new features of the law, such as unlimited hospital days and nursing home days.

The figure individuals will pay will be calculated according to their tax returns. In 1989, there will be an $800 ceiling for the about (a 15-percent tax increase), but by 1993 the rate will go up to a $1,070 ceiling (a 28 percent tax increase). All of this doubles for a couple. In addition, should a person enter a hospital, he or she will be required to pay an additional $54.

Says Regan, "You can expect an uproar next year when everyone will be billed for Medicare Part A, which all of you will have to pay. Despite popular belief, the government is not picking up the tab. Citizens are."

Out-of-pocket expenses were out of control. But there's some improvement. Through the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act, people over 65 who are involved with Medicare's Part B supplemental premium will benefit by the cap that has been put on how much they must pay for Part B during a given year.

In the past, people were expected to pay a $75 deductible, 20 percent of doctor bills, plus whatever expenses could not be assigned. They also had to pay the entire bill for outpatient prescription drugs.

Now in a given year, if out-of-pocket expenses exceed $1,370 for charges such as the deductible, the 20 percent, plus the person's share of prescription-drug costs, the government will pay the balance of "a reasonable amount." The government will also pay 80 percent of the costs of prescription drugs beyond $550 starting in 1991.

The bottom line is that people over 65 with Medicare Part B can believe it will be unlikely that they must pay more than $1,370 per year.

Respite care is available, but not custodial. The good news is that, for the first time, respite care is available to pay a worker to come into a home to take care of a dependent elderly person. Of course, there are limitations to this, including the fact that only 80 hours a year of this care is provided. The bad news is that most services that people require in a nursing home (called custodial care), such as help with dressing, washing and eating, are not covered by the new act under Medicare. (Custodial care is available under Medicaid.)

However, provisions for skilled nursing care at home under Medicare have become more liberal. In the past, people who needed full-time nursing care could not qualify under Medicare. They could only receive part-time nursing care. Under the new benefit, a person could get as many as 38 days of continuous care in his or her home.

"Transferring assets" is clarified. It's like tax sheltering. Transferring assets is a method the elderly have used to protect their estates for future generations. If someone puts all of his or her assets in a relative's name, then that money is not available for nursing home care, and the elderly person would be entitled to Medicaid.

"Some people look at transferring assets as a way of cheating the government," Regan says. "It is not. It's like tax sheltering. Transferring assets is a method that is legal, do it. This is a dollars-and-cents issue—not a moral one."

Social Security

QUESTION: Is it true that not all people will receive the new version of the Social Security earnings and benefit estimate statements?

ANSWER: Yes, it is true. The new Social Security statement cannot be provided for people who:

- Have no Social Security covered earnings on record.
- Have only Medicare qualified government earnings on record.
- Have 120 or more months of railroad service.
- Already receive Social Security benefits, have a benefit claim pending, or are age 65 or older.

QUESTION: I get SSI payments because I'm disabled. I work part time, and one of my co-workers told me that Social Security may deduct some of my work expenses before determining the amount of my income. What does that mean?

ANSWER: Certain impairment-related work expenses can be deducted from your income when figuring your SSI payment. Each expense must be approved by Social Security. Some examples include medical devices, such as wheelchairs, respirators, or braces; attendant care services; work-related equipment, such as a one-handed typewriter or braille device; and some transportation costs. You should check with your Social Security office if you think you might have an impairment-related work expense. The expense may be deductible even if you need the item or service for daily living.

QUESTION: I run a small grocery store with my wife and my son works for me. Recently, someone said I would have to start paying Social Security taxes on his earnings even though he's only 18. Is this true?

ANSWER: Yes, it is. A recent change in the Social Security laws extended coverage to include the services of a child 18 or over working in a family business. Previously, only children 21 or over were included. The change went into effect the beginning of this year. Remember, also, that any Social Security taxes you pay are deductible as business expenses for income tax purposes.

FOCUS / Advice

Partners need to be told

DEAR DR. REINISCH: As a formerly sexually active female, I was diagnosed as having genital herpes about seven years ago. I have fewer and less frequent outbreaks as time passes. I have been afraid to inform sex partners of my affliction, as I fear their reaction and immediate rejection. Also, I am rarely inflamed at this time, so disclosure is unnecessary.

Kinsey Report
June M. Reinisch, Ph.D.

How can I inform a partner without causing alarm? And, can I be reinfected if I have intercourse with another herpetic, or am I now immune to further infection?

DEAR READER: Your letter provides an excellent example of how sexually transmitted diseases continue to spread. No one who has an STD enjoys having to inform new partners or taking extra precautions, but it is the moral, ethical and perhaps legal responsibility of each sexually active individual to do so before having intimate contact.

Do you remember how you felt when you found out that you had herpes? Didn't you wish that the person who transmitted it to you had told you about it, so that you could make an informed decision as to whether to have unprotected sex with him?

It is understandable to worry about rejection and wish to avoid disclosure, but (as many people with herpes will tell you) when a potential partner continues a relationship after hearing about herpes, one is more certain that the partner is interested in you as a whole person and not just for sexual reasons.

You must also expect disclosure from potential partners, because you can still become infected with different strains of the herpes virus or in new locations. Having one herpes infection does not make you "immune."

Because having herpes can complicate forming new relationships, a number of groups offer information about how to manage this process. One is the American Social Health Association's Herpes Hotline (800) 328-7710 noon to 4:30 PST, or write ASHA P.O. 13827, Reserach Triangle Park, N.C. 27709.

Also, many local communities offer group counseling sessions where people with herpes can practice ways to include information about herpes in conversations with potential sexual partners. Ask your local department of public health about local groups.

Social advice from such groups include tips such as: Choose a time when the two of you are alone and there are no distractions.

avoid using words like "herpetic" or "incurable," and be factual about risks and precautions throughout the discussion. Remember, there are many people with herpes who have established solid relationships with a non-infected partner. A key point is to be honest before you have sex together.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I'm a 17-year-old male and was wondering if you could please recommend a safe condom, one that wouldn't come off during sexual intercourse. I understand that reservoir-tipped condoms are designed just for this purpose. Is this true?

DEAR READER: A reservoir-tipped condom has a small space built at the end of the condom to catch the ejaculate. Theoretically, this prevents ejaculate from leaking along the penis shaft, causing the condom to slip.

The same effect can be achieved with a blunt-ended condom by leaving a quarter inch of empty space between the end of the condom and the head of the penis as you unroll the condom over the penis. Studies have shown that one of the major reasons for condom failure or breakage is not leaving this space in regular condoms.

If you still have trouble with condoms slipping after following these instructions, look for a style that advertises having a tighter or snugger fit. And, regardless of the style of condom you decide to buy, read the package information about proper storage and use.

Treatment for 3 diseases

DEAR DR. GOTT: My father, 64, was diagnosed as having thalassemia anemia. He's a heavy drinker, but has been on the wagon for seven months. He's also a diabetic, and his hemoglobin fluctuates between 7.5 and 8.6. What is the appropriate treatment for this problem?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Your father appears to have three diseases: all are incurable, two are treatable.

Thalassemia is a genetically carried anemia characterized by shortened lifespan of red blood cells due to defective hemoglobin synthesis. The severe form, thalassemia major, appears in infancy and is marked by profound anemia and massive enlargement of the spleen, the abdominal organ that filters out deficient red corpuscles. Because children with the disorder often require transfusions in order to survive, they tend to develop hemochromatosis (iron overload), a dangerous disease of iron excess.

The mild form, thalassemia minor, is associated with chronic anemia that causes fatigue. Hemoglobin levels of eight (normal 13-16) are common. I suspect that your father's low hemoglobin values reflect his thalassemia. Because it is a genetic defect, thalassemia is not treatable or curable by present methods.

You mention that your father was a "heavy drinker" and that he has been sober for seven months. I think that he deserves a lot of credit for taking such a courageous step in handling what I assume to be alcoholism. Despite the recent Supreme Court ruling that alcohol is willful abuse, most medical experts believe that it is a disease. The only treatment is abstinence. The condition is incurable; once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic. However, it is treatable and your father is on the right road toward controlling it. His health and his life will improve — and so will his diabetes — as he continues to enjoy sobriety.

Diabetes is a complex metabolic disorder characterized by the body's inability to produce enough insulin — or, in some cases, to use the insulin that is available. For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Diabetes Mellitus." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, Ohio 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title. Diabetes is incurable. However, it is readily controlled by a variety of means, including diet, weight loss, blood-sugar-lowering pills, or injections.

Therefore, the answer to your question is as follows: your father needs to follow his doctor's advice regarding diet and other therapy for diabetes; he should remain abstinent because of his alcoholism; no treatment is available for thalassemia.

Mother's loose lips have daughter upset

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I was very unhappily married and had an affair. My husband found out about it, kicked me out of the house and sued for divorce. (Our son was 1 1/2 years old at the time.)

Abby, I know that having an affair was wrong, and I have suffered for it greatly since. I was in such a state of despair at the time, I confided in my mother. Three months later, I visited my parents and found out that my mother had told all the relatives and even some of my friends about my affair! I was just devastated. I felt betrayed by my own mother. When I confronted her and asked her how she could do such a thing to me, she said, "Well, you don't just get a divorce for nothing, and when people asked me what was behind it, I didn't want to lie."

Abby, I would have just let them wonder. Nobody had to know the details. I am having a hard time trying to forgive my mother. Do you think it was necessary for her to have told everybody who asked her the reason for my divorce? I believe in being totally honest, but aren't there times when people don't have to tell everything they know?

BETRAYED BY MY MOTHER

DEAR BETRAYED: Your anger is justified. Your mother betrayed you. She was not on a witness stand under oath, so she wasn't obligated to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Perhaps she was so angry with you for having messed up your marriage, she was in no mood to protect you. In any case, please let go of your anger and try to forgive her. Life is too short to harbor this grudge.

DEAR ABBY: We hear so much these days about how careful we should be with our credit cards, etc., as dishonest people may get a hold of them.

I would like to warn people to carefully dispose of personal papers, business letters, bank statements cancelled checks, etc. My husband has a bad habit of throwing such items into the trash. I have pointed out to him that anyone who goes through our trash could find out everything about us — our names, address, Social Security numbers, IRA numbers, bank balance, holdings and even our telephone number! He shrugs it off while I try to tear up as much as I can.

I wish someone would bring out a small shredder for use on home desks. It would make a good gift for someone like my husband. In the meantime, warn others to tear up everything before trashing it.

CALIFORNIAN

DEAR CALIFORNIAN: Good advice, but don't be so sure there aren't desktop shredders. Inquire at your local stationery shops and places selling office equipment.

DEAR ABBY: The letters about people whose family name is Hogg caught my attention, because I also have a name that causes people to comment. My last name is Nutt. It is not uncommon in the United States, but in the city where I live, there are only six Nutts in the telephone directory — my father-in-law, my husband and his three brothers. (One is named Paul, so he is referred to as "P. Nutt.")

I am not embarrassed by my name, but strangely enough, it is often misunderstood, and people think I'm "Mrs. Nutt," which is just as bad, or worse. (I'd rather be considered "crazy" than an unpedigreed dog.)

My mother-in-law has a sign hanging on her front door made by one of her sons. It reads: The Nutt House. You can imagine how much fun some people have with that.

Anyway, no matter how dull life gets, I can always depend on my name to live things up.

WHAT A GUY by Bill Hoest

Astrograph

Sept. 25, 1988

Usually you do well in your partnership arrangements, but in the year ahead your greatest successes are likely to occur independently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you're an open-minded person who is able to see and appreciate the other guy's point of view. Today this splendid virtue may be inoperative. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91426, Cleveland, OH 44101-3426. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) People who admire you for being a problem solver might try to dump their woes on you today. The load could be even too heavy for you to handle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You can have a good time today at affairs involving a small number of people. However, if the crowd grows larger, you might not fit in too well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The aspects indicate you may get caught in a situation today where you do all the work and another guy gets all the credit. Don't let yourself be cast in the "patron" role.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) In conversations with others today, especially people you don't know too well, try to avoid heavy topics such as politics or religion. The talk could get out of hand.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be careful in your financial transactions today, particularly if you do business with an unfamiliar firm. Don't take what the salesperson says as gospel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your one-to-one dealings could be a trifle testy today, especially in situations where there are major issues at stake. Be prepared to make compromises.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A failure to keep up with your present responsibilities could begin to create a serious log jam. You may see the first signs of it today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're not apt to be very comfortable in situations today that hamper your mobility and independence. Steer clear of group involvements that could be binding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful today that you and your mate don't work at cross-purposes. Neither will accomplish what each desires by pulling in different directions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may have to deal with someone today whose philosophy diametrically opposes yours. Don't let this individual get you all steamed up over issues neither can resolve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you go shopping today, it's best you leave your credit cards at home. There's a possibility you might be tempted to buy something you cannot afford.

didn't just bid three no-trump and make his easy nine tricks? Is it possible that four hearts is the final contract just so that declarer can work out an unusual, elegant way to make it? Surely you know by now that not everybody bids perfectly, so let's forgive declarer for arriving at a contract that is a little difficult.

When the defenders took three club tricks ending in the East hand and then East played back the 10 of spades, it was apparent that West held the Q-J of spades, as well as the A-K of clubs already played. Declarer won the king of spades and cashed the A-K of hearts. When West showed up with the jack of hearts, one thing was certain — West absolutely did not hold the queen of diamonds or he would have opened the bidding as the dealer. So declarer played to dummy's 10 of hearts and led the jack of diamonds from dummy. East naturally played the queen. South won, played back to the king, noting the fall of the nine from West. He now ran the eight of diamonds from dummy, taking the ruffing finesse when East played low. That was 10 tricks. Now isn't that more fun than playing three no-trump?

If you're storing lots of data new device will help

By Larry Blasko
The Associated Press

Those familiar with personal computing know that one of the unadvertised purposes of the machines is the rapid, organized loss of important data.

If you wanted to destroy 40,000 words of written work manually, you'd have to feed something like 250 typewritten sheets into a paper shredder or incinerator. A computer can do it with a simple command error and sometimes the machine takes the initiative and doesn't even wait for an error: it has an accident.

That's why backup gets elevated to almost religious status among those who use their computers to store important data, whether that's the records of a club, the Great American Novel, the records of a small business. But there's been a problem.

The growth in technology made mass storage in the 20-million character range small, convenient and cheap, with a "hard card" or "hard disk" able to store 20 million characters of information costing around $350 and fitting neatly inside the machine. The problem has been that the backup facility for a hard drive has been the traditional floppy drive, storing 360,000 characters, twice that with the introduction of 3.5-inch disks.

The math works against you. If you wish to store the contents of a full 20-meg hard drive on 3.25-inch floppies, better have 55 or so on hand — and maybe a sack lunch, because it'll take some time. The 3.5-inch disks make it a bit better, requiring only 28 disks to do the job.

Now, there's something new — removable mass disk storage in the millions-of-characters range. The Sept. 13 issue of PC Magazine (Ziff-Davis Publishing, $2.95) reviews 13 removable mass storage devices ranging in price from $505 to $2,810, with six of them costing less than $1,000.

The idea is that you make a backup copy of the data just as you would make a backup copy of a floppy disk — and then store the backup somewhere else. That gives you unlimited storage (as long as you keep supplying blank disks).

The article walks you through the three basic ways of making the mass storage removable: flexible cartridge systems that are essentially vastly improved floppy disks and drives; removable disk drives, where an earlier drive is put in a sealed and removable unit, and removable hard cartridges, where only the disk part of the Winchester technology drive is removable. There are tradeoffs, and reading the article is the best way to get a handle on them, but if you're storing lots of data you'd be sorry to lose, it's worth a look.

The history of photography and sex in ads

By Randolph Picht
The Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The photograph that started the barrage of pouty poses and suggestive glances that have made sex the mainstay of modern advertising probably wouldn't even turn heads today.

It's a 1922 advertisement for a Japanese port wine that discreetly shows a nude woman from the waist up, smiling demurely and holding a glass of wine. Airbrushing has left only her bare shoulders and arms exposed.

"It really does not matter that she is enticing us to purchase Akadama brand port wine," wrote Robert Sobieszek in his new book on the history of advertising photography.

"What ... matters is that she is the origin of every subsequent advertisement that has used a provocative, sexually charged female as the vehicle for selling any product."

And the stream has been endless. Scantily clad women, and recently men, can be found in ads selling everything from shaving cream and underwear to power tools and auto parts. Sexual innuendos abound.

Sobieszek has a sexually suggestive photograph on the cover of his book, "The Art of Persuasion," and several others inside. He admits he could have filled up more books with similar pictures. "It's ubiquitous," says Sobieszek, who is director of photographic collections at the International Museum of Photography at the George Eastman House.

Carla Vaccaro-Lloyd, a professor who teaches advertising at Syracuse University's Newhouse School of Journalism, says the American public is clearly "hung up" on the subject. "It's a titillating topic, but it's really overdiscussed," she says.

"It's just one more device that can be used by advertisers. There are good uses and there are bad uses just like anything."

She said it would be nice if Americans could adopt a more worldly view and realize that sex belongs in some ads, for such things as perfume or cosmetics, and just accept it like Europeans do.

It's a point that Sobieszek also mentions in his book with a 1931 quote from Mehemed Agha, art director for Conde Nast Publications: "When a French advertiser wants to advertise fire insurance all he has to show is a match.

Whereas, in America you must show a skyscraper, flames, fire engines and somewhere in the background, sex appeal."

That's why it's important for consumers to become "educated," said Richard Zakia, a photography professor at Rochester Institute of Technology.

For example, he says, the new sexually suggestive cigarette advertising that shows couples in playful poses holding cigarettes is trying to sell a fantasy, not a product.

"We don't even realize it half the time. We hardly take a second look," said Zakia.

Brenda Starr's career is on the rise

By Elissa M. Vecchione
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Like the title of her current hit single, Brenda K. Starr says she still believes that with a little patience stardom will be hers.

"I believe in myself but I know it takes time," says the 21-year-old singer, whose first hit single, "I Still Believe" has climbed the charts to the Top 40.

She recently talked about her career in an interview at the offices of MCA Records. She compared herself to a long list of contemporary artists, including Janet Jackson, Anita Baker and Diana Ross, before actually calling herself a "young Donna Summer."

Starr has been heavily influenced by rhythm and blues and Latin sounds, and she likes her music to have those elements.

However, she doesn't like to be compared to other young artists such as Tiffany or Debbie Gibson. She says they're too "pure," she prefers being thought of as sexier.

Her self-titled LP contains the popular love ballad, "I Still Believe," as well as more upbeat tracks, including the hit "What You See Is What You Get." Most of these danceable tunes portray love and happiness, with one pop tune that warns against drunk driving.

name Starr because "that's what I've always wanted to be, a star."

She started singing in choirs in grammar and junior high school. She dropped out of high school to put out her first album, "I Want Your Love," on Mirage Records. She later realized there was a lot more involved in the music business than singing, so she went back to school to get her diploma.

Her first big break came when she appeared in the movie "Beat Street," a 1984 dance film, as an auditioning singer. She also co-wrote the songs "Shadows of the Night" and "Vicious Beat" for the soundtrack.

Her other appearances were with an all-girl break-dancing group called The Dynamic Dolls, who once performed for President and Mrs. Reagan.

Though her father, Harvey Kaplan, sang with the pop group Spiral Staircase, Starr credits her mother as her main influence.

"She always told me I would be successful and if I wanted to do something I could do it," she said. "My father? I was happy that he was my dad and he had a record out, but I wanted to show him that I could do just as he could so he would be proud of me. Now I'm doing it for me."

What's does Starr see in her future? "I want to be married by 24 and have a baby by 25," said the singer, who already has names picked out for the five children she wants. "They'll be my audience in case there's not enough of one. I want to be like my mom, who had seven. It's like camp."

Another movie appearance isn't on her agenda, though. "I've been asked to do movies but haven't taken anyone up on their offer because I'm so into my music right now," she said.

Denver irks astronauts

HOUSTON (AP) — Some NASA astronauts are reported angry over a briefing they were required to attend to hear singer-actor John Denver talk about his plans to fly on a Soviet space mission.

Various sources, including astronauts who requested anonymity because of fears they may endanger their flight status, described the meeting with Denver as ranging from "hostile" to "cool" to "dynamic," the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

One veteran astronaut angrily condemned the Sept. 6 briefing as "a waste of time and an insult to the astronauts who had better things to do," the Chronicle reported.

Griffith stars as Benjamin Matlock, a Atlanta defense attorney. Knotts will join the cast as a recurring character, Les Calhoun, a retiree who moves into Matlock's neighborhood. The show is beginning its third season.

BUSINESS

Highlights of the week

- The government said the gross national product grew at an annual rate of 3.0 percent in the April-June period, compared to the earlier estimate of 3.3 percent. An accompanying report showed inflation accelerated to an annual rate of 5.5 percent during the quarter, up from a previous estimate of 5.1 percent. Corporations, meanwhile, reported an 8.9 percent surge in profits for the second quarter, the biggest increase in nearly five years.
- Consumer prices rose at a 5.2 percent annual rate in August as a result of higher food, shelter and gasoline prices. Other government reports for the month showed Americans' personal income increased only half as fast as inflation, while orders for "big ticket" durable goods soared 6.0 percent.
- Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., predicted the next Congress will have to appropriate at least $20 billion to bail out the troubled savings and loan industry.
- Multimillionaire brothers Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt each filed for personal bankruptcy protection to avoid posting a $225 million bond required for appealing a federal jury verdict against them. The jury had ordered the two Hunts and brother Lamar to pay more than $130 million in damages for conspiring to corner the world's silver market in the late 1970s.
- Minorco SA, a South African mining conglomerate, launched a $4.9 billion offer for Consolidated Gold Fields PLC, the largest takeover bid in British history. But Consolidated quickly rejected the bid.
- The prospect of a bidding war over Kroger Co. loomed as the investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. offered $4.6 billion for the supermarket operator, topping an offer from Dart Group Corp.
- Intero Inc. rejected a revised $2.66 billion takeover offer and said the furniture and apparel maker will pursue a major restructuring instead.
- Lafarge Corp., one of North America's biggest producers of cement and building materials, rebuffed an unsolicited $1.47 billion cash takeover offer from a group of private investors.
- Macmillan Inc. withdrew its support for a $2.36 billion buyout offer from a prominent investment firm but declined to take a position on the competing $2.41 billion bid by British publisher Robert Maxwell.
- CSX Corp. said it will buy back up to 60 million of its common shares and sell off two natural gas units in a billion-dollar restructuring.
- Pillsbury Co. announced the sale of its Godfather's Pizza unit to the restaurant division's management.
- Polaroid Corp. advised its stockholders to reject a sweetened $2.6 billion takeover bid from Roy E. Disney's Shamrock Holdings Inc. and filed suit in federal court to block the offer.
- Eastern Airlines renewed calls for federal mediators to declare an impasse in contract talks with its Machinists union, after 98 percent of the union's voting members rejected the carrier's latest contract offer.
- The government of India approved a joint venture to market Pepsi-Cola in the world's second most populous nation.
- Brazil signed an unprecedented $82 billion financial package with its international commercial bank creditors officially ending a moratorium on its debt payments.
- The Senate approved a landmark free-trade agreement with Canada, clearing the way to phase out tariffs on merchandise that crosses the border.

'Big ticket' orders up 6% to give economy a boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for "big ticket" durable goods jumped 6 percent in August, the government reported Friday, suggesting to analysts that recent signs of sluggishness in the economy are probably temporary.

The Commerce Department said orders jumped to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $123.1 billion last month following a huge 7.4 percent decline in July and an 8.7 percent increase in June.

The volatility in the month-to-month total reflects wide swings in demand for transportation and military goods, but economists said the underlying trend portends a vigorous U.S. manufacturing sector.

"The 6 percent overstates how strong the economy is, but it's still in pretty good shape," said Maury Harris, chief economist of PaineWebber Inc. "Even if you exclude transportation, orders were still up 1 percent and that's pretty good, an annual rate of 12 percent for just the one month."

Other government reports for August have pointed to some softening in the economy's robust rate of growth through midyear. Unemployment rose from 5.4 percent to 5.6 percent, retail sales fell 0.2 percent and housing activity dipped 3.3 percent.

However, the strong demand for durable goods, coupled with a 1.2 percent rise in unfilled orders, indicates factories will be humming in the months ahead, analysts said.

"This throws some cold water on the view that the economy slowed down dramatically in August," said John Hagens, an economist with The Wafa Group, a Bala Cynwyd, Pa., forecasting firm.

"There are signs of weakness on the consumer demand side of the economy, but this is really the first sign that counterbalances some of that by suggesting that business spending and exports remain strong," he said.

Manufacturing has been the strongest area of the economy this year because a weaker dollar has spurred a boom in sales of U.S. goods overseas. That, in turn, has sparked businesses to increase spending to modernize and expand the capacity of factories.

Orders in the key category of non-defense capital goods, a good barometer of business expansion plans, were up 5.4 percent in August to $38.2 billion, following gains of 2.2 percent in July and 12.5 percent in June.

However, the very strength of the economy has raised concern

Dems fail to break filibuster on wages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats failed on a second attempt Friday to break a GOP filibuster on raising the minimum wage, but they picked up support from five more Republicans and vowed to try again next week.

Eight Republicans joined 48 Democrats in the 56-35 vote — four short of the 60 needed — to restrict further debate on a bill by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to raise the wage floor to $3.75 an hour in January, $4.15 in 1990 and $4.55 in 1991.

The minimum wage has been frozen at $3.35 since 1981. In the seven and one-half years since then, proponents of the increase argue, inflation has dropped its purchasing power by 30 percent to about $2.60, measured in uninfated dollars.

Action on the measure has been stalled for more than a week because of a parliamentary move by Kennedy that, with majority support, would preclude Republicans from getting a direct vote on their demand for a 90-day, 80 percent subminimum wage for newly hired employees.

Both sides, meanwhile, were waiting to see what the two presidential nominees, Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis, had to say about the issue in their first debate Sunday night.

"Let us have some national debate on this," said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas. "Maybe it will be brought up when Gov. Dukakis and Vice President Bush have their first debate."

Dukakis has endorsed Kennedy's bill. Bush in the past week has said he would support a more modest increase in the minimum wage — never specifying how much — but only if it is coupled with a subminimum.

The eight Republicans breaking Friday from what Kennedy said were White House instructions to support the filibuster were Sens. John Chafee of Rhode Island, Mark Hatfield and Bob Packwood of Oregon, John Heinz and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, William Roth of Delaware, Robert Stafford of Vermont and Lowell Weicker of Connecticut.

"I wouldn't read too much into that," said Dole. "It's Friday and some people are confused. By Monday they'll realize what's at stake."

Three Democrats continued to support the filibuster — Sens. James Exton of Nebraska, Richard Shelby of Alabama and David Boren of Oklahoma.

Three other Democrats — Sens. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, Bill Bradley of New Jersey and Lawton Chiles of Florida — were absent Friday.

Big obstacles remain in the market's path

By Chet Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hopes have faded lately on Wall Street for any development soon to restart the stalled stock market.

The end of summer and its traditional torpor haven't done it. And analysts say the next several weeks hold some serious obstacles to any revival of enthusiasm for stocks.

First of all, there is the impending first anniversary of Black Monday on Oct. 19, a milestone unlikely to whet investors' appetites for taking new risks in the stock market.

"We're going to be bombarded from all sides with rehashings, recapitulations and backward-looking forecasts," said Justin Mammis, an analyst at Cowen & Co.

Secondly, there is the Nov. 8 election, the outcome of which is hard to predict or anticipate.

No matter whom the voters choose, brokers note, investors will be contemplating the first change of presidents since 1980, with all the questions about future economic policies that implies.

Of course, as the mood of caution and apathy deepens, analysts say there is always a chance that the market will pull off a surprise.

The stock market is notorious for its ability to catch the majority off guard, especially when there is widespread agreement that a trend is firmly established — in the present case, a neutral "trading range" trend.

But if some sudden surge of energy is going to hit the market, many analysts say, it's hard to see where it's going to come from.

As Edward Nicoski at Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. put it in a recent commentary: "We'd like to be able to say that the end to this 'random rallies and reactions' bit is just around the corner, but neither the conviction nor the technical evidence is at hand ... yet."

The activity in the market during the past week certainly seemed to bear out that assessment. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged down 7.47 to 2,090.68.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index dropped 41 to 152.38; the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 1.08 to 384.99, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up .89 at 299.11.

Volume on the Big Board averaged 140.23 million shares a day, down from 165.38 million the week before.

The market has had many long sluggish spells in the past. But the wild action that has occurred for much of the 1980s has obscured them in many investors' memory.

"This market is really doing a number on both professionals and the public alike," said Stan Weinstein in his investment advisory letter The Professional Tape Reader.

"As it gyrates in its wide trading range and ends up going nowhere, more and more players are becoming convinced that this is the way it will be for months or even years to come."

Weinstein calls this thinking a "trap." While he's not predicting any immediate selloff, he argues that "there are still plenty of problems" in the market outlook.

As investors await the elections, James Stack, editor of the InvestTech Market Analyst advisory letter, offers these "fun facts to know and tell:"

—In the past 12 presidential election years, the Dow Jones industrial average has fallen more than 5 points from Oct. 1 through Election Day only once, in 1976.

—"In recent history, four out of the five past elections have seen a new bear market strike within five months of the election. The exception was 1984."

Johnson sets world mark in taking 100 dash

RACING FOR THE TOP — Carl Lewis of the U.S. looks at the scoreboard during a semifinal heat in the 100-meter dash at the Olympics Friday night in Seoul.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Canada's Ben Johnson broke his own world record with a time of 9.79 seconds, beating American arch rival Carl Lewis in their heralded 100-meter showdown at the Olympics Saturday.

Johnson was one of four runners to break 10 seconds — the first time in history that has happened. Lewis, attempting to become the first man to win two Olympic gold medals in any sprinting event, took the silver in 9.92, an American record.

Linford Christie of Britain was third in 9.97, setting a European record. Calvin Smith of the United States, who held the old American record of 9.93, was fourth in 9.99.

Hawkins hurt

Hersey Hawkins, the college player of the year last season, has a strained right knee and is expected to miss the remainder of the Olympic basketball tournament.

The U.S. team had already clinched the top spot in its pool before Saturday's game against Egypt and will play its quarterfinal game on Monday against the fourth-place team from the other pool, either Puerto Rico or Australia.

Hawkins, the first-round draft choice of the Philadelphia 76ers, was injured about midway through the second half of the 108-57 victory over China.

"Jeff Grayer collided with me after one of the Chinese players hit him and Jeff fell on my knee," Hawkins said after the game. "It feels fine now because it has been on ice. I'll see how it feels later."

Team spokeswoman Chris Plonsky said Saturday that the injury apparently is more serious than originally thought.

Hawkins, the first college player in 11 years to average more than 30 points per game for a season, averaged 8.8 points in the four Olympic games.

Bulgarian expelled

Jackie Joyner-Kersey set a world record for the heptathlon long jump Saturday at the Seoul Olympics, where the drug-related loss of another Bulgarian weightlifting victory cut into the Eastern bloc's gold collection.

On Friday, swimmer Kristin Otto of East Germany won her fourth gold medal, leading the Soviet bloc to a big day in Seoul. Saturday promised to be a big one for the West.

Boxer Kenneth Gould of Rockford, Ill., won his second bout and America's seventh straight with a 5-0 decision over Alfred Addo Ankamah of Ghana in the 147-pound division.

Weightlifter Angelov Angelov Guenchev, meanwhile, became the second Bulgarian to lose a weightlifting gold when urinalysis found evidence of a banned diuretic, used to lose weight. Guenchev set three world records in winning the 67.5-kilogram division.

Also banned from the Seoul Games was Spanish modern pentathlete Jorge Quesada, bringing to four the number of athletes disqualified for drugs. Quesada finished 33rd in the event.

Otto won the 100-meter butterfly in Olympic record time Friday, when teammate Uwe Dassler set a world record in capturing the men's 400 freestyle and East German Ulf Timmerman wrestled the shot put title from American Randy Barnes with his last throw of the day.

"I'm not a great heroine at home because we swim as a team," Otto said. "We're doing well as a team, not as individuals. We fought together, and we're going home together."

In all, the East Germans won three gold, three silver and three bronze, giving them nine gold and 28 total medals.

Biondi 5-for-5; U.S. swimmers struggling

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Matt Biondi is 5-for-5. Janet Evans is waiting to go 3-for-3. The rest of the U.S. swim team, however, is struggling.

Biondi anchored his second world-record relay of the Olympics Friday night. Earlier in the day, Evans put herself in position for a third gold, this one in the 800 freestyle.

American swimmers, however, did not win a medal in the four finals before the relay, while East Germany's Kristin Otto picked up her fourth gold.

"It was, maybe, an off night for us, but we've got some great days coming up at the end of the meet," said Biondi, who now has three golds, a silver and a bronze, with two events left.

"The relay teams always seem to come through for us. When you're swimming for your country and your team, there's something a little extra. We plan on dominating relays for a long time," he said.

Biondi swam the final 100 meters of the 400 freestyle relay, turning a close race into a rout. The U.S. team was timed in 3:16.53, breaking the world mark of 3:17.06 set by Americans in 1985.

His clocking of 47.81 was the third-fastest relay split in history and he now has the top eight relay times ever. His leg was 1.71 seconds faster than Vladimir Tkashenko, who anchored the Soviet Union to a silver-medal time of 3:19.82.

Tom Jager of Topanga, Calif., who swam the third leg on the relay and is favored to beat Biondi in his next race, the 50 freestyle, said the U.S. team is not discouraged by its setbacks.

"We're fighting as hard as we can and we'll come up again," Jager said. "I'm not worried about U.S. swimming. We'll learn from our mistakes."

Otto won her fourth gold by capturing the 100 butterfly, thrashing former butterfly queen Mary T. Meagher and six others in the final.

Meagher, swimming's "Madame Butterfly" since setting two world records in 1981 that still stand, finished seventh.

Otto was timed in 59.00, just missing becoming the only swimmer besides Meagher to break 59 seconds. Meagher's world record is 57.93.

Otto probably will win another gold in the 400 medley relay and has a chance to win the 50 freestyle — "a small chance," Otto said through an interpreter.

Biondi can equal Mark Spitz's 1972 feat of seven swimming medals in one Olympics, although all of Spitz's were gold. Otto can win six golds, which would be unprecedented for a woman swimmer.

"I didn't think of Mark Spitz," Otto said. "I'm not going for as many medals as him. But I did want to win one or two. I'm delighted that things are going so well."

Otto led a 1-2 East German sweep in the butterfly as teammate Birte Weigang captured the silver in 59.45. Hong Qian was third in 59.53.

Janel Jorgensen of Ridgefield, Conn., finished fifth in the butterfly ahead of Meagher's seventh, which means Jorgensen will swim for the United States in the medley relay. Meagher won three gold medals in the 1984 Olympics, two in butterfly plus the medley relay.

"It just wasn't there," Meagher said. "I wouldn't be human if I wasn't feeling upset."

She said former track star Harvey Glance, now a member of a U.S. athletes advisory council, told her that if she did her best, she would; x x x look back and wonder about herself.

"I feel good about that, but I'm still disappointed," Meagher said.

Earlier Friday, Evans, a double gold medal-winner already, easily reached the final of the 800-meter freestyle, which will be held Saturday night.

Evans, who set a world record in the 400 freestyle and an American mark in the 400 individual medley, lost her heat in the 800 by six-hundredths of a second, but still finished second overall in 8:28.13. That was 11 seconds slower than her world record in the event.

Astrid Strauss of East Germany was the top qualifier for the final in 8:28.07.

U.S. swimmers finished fourth twice and sixth in three other finals Friday night.

Uwe Dassler of East Germany, Duncan Armstrong of Australia and Artur Wojdat of Poland all bettered Wojdat's world record in the 400 freestyle, with Matt Cetlinski of Lake Worth, Fla., fourth.

Dassler was timed in 3:46.95, Armstrong in 3:47.15 and Wojdat in 3:47.34, all ahead of Wojdat's 1988 mark of 3:47.38.

Jozsef Szabo of Hungary captured the men's 200 breaststroke in 2:13.52, followed by Nick Gillingham of Great Britain, Sergio Lopez of Spain and Mike Barrowman of Rockville, Md.

Canseco first in 40-40 club

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics became the first player in major league history to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in one season when he stole two bases Friday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Canseco stole his 39th base in the first inning after reaching on a single off Milwaukee's Juan Nieves.

In the fifth inning, the 6-foot-3, 230-pound Canseco bunted for a base hit and then stole second on an 0-1 pitch to teammate Mark McGwire.

The game was stopped and Canseco was given the second base bag at County Stadium. The 24-year-old Canseco set the 40-40 goal for himself in April, not realizing at the time that no major leaguer had ever achieved it.

Ten players have hit at least 30 homers and stolen at least 30 bases in one season, including Eric Davis of the Cincinnati Reds, who had 37 homers and 50 steals in 1987.

Bobby Bonds, who had five 30-30 seasons, had 43 steals and 39 homers for the San Francisco Giants in 1973.

Mets' win skein is snapped

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ozzie Smith singled home the tying run in the ninth inning and came in to score on Pedro Guerrero's sacrifice fly, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 2-1 victory over New York Friday night that snapped the Mets' winning streak at eight games.

Dwight Gooden, 18-8, pitched a three-hit shutout through the first eight innings for New York. But Gooden's lone walk of the game, to Vince Coleman, started St. Louis' winning rally in the ninth inning.

Coleman followed the walk by stealing his 80th base of the season and beat center fielder Len Dykstra's throw to the plate on a close play after Smith singled on an 0-2 pitch up the middle.

Smith took second on the throw home and stole third base with Guerrero at bat. Guerrero's sacrifice fly came on a drive to medium center field.

John Costello, 5-2, picked up the victory for the Cardinals, whose comeback snapped their scoreless streak of 21 innings.

NL Roundup

A walk led to the Mets' run in the sixth, when Joe Magrane issued a base-on-balls to rookie Keith Miller.

Cubs 5, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mark Grace doubled, his third hit of the game, and scored the winning run on Vance Law's single in the 10th inning to give the Chicago Cubs a 5-3 win over the Pittsburgh Pirates Friday night.

Grace hit his second double of the game off reliever Bob Kipper, 2-4, and moved to third on Damon Berryhill's flyout to right. Jim Gott relieved and Law grounded his first pitch up the middle.

After Jamie Moyer's sacrifice, Law scored on Darrin Jackson's single.

Moyer, 8-15, won despite allowing Barry Bonds' game-tying homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth.

Reds 5, Braves 4

ATLANTA (AP) — A three-base, two-run throwing error by third baseman Ron Gant fueled a four-run third inning for Cincinnati, allowing the Reds to beat Atlanta 5-4 Friday night and deal the Braves their 100th loss of the season.

After Eric Davis' 26th home run tied the score 1-1 for the Reds in the second inning, the Reds scored four times in the third to hand the Braves their fourth straight loss. The Braves became the first team in the major leagues this season to lose 100 games.

Tim Lincecum, 2-3, the second of six Reds pitchers, got the victory. John Franco pitched the ninth for his 36th save in 38 save opportunities, one short of the Cincinnati club record.

Slaney has a scary moment

By Tim Liotto
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — It couldn't possibly happen again.

Mary Decker Slaney's collision with South African runner Zola Budd at the 1984 Olympics was just too freakish.

It couldn't possibly happen again.

With less than two laps to go in the second of two 3,000-meter heats Friday, Annette Sergent of France clipped Slaney's heel on the straightaway.

Slaney, obviously startled, moved quickly to the side, but didn't break stride and went on to finish with the fourth-fastest qualifying time, 8:44.15.

"It just made me think of LA for a second there," she said. "It was a little scary."

But there were no tears and no bitterness after this race. Slaney seemed cheerful, relaxed and didn't point an accusatory finger. "I can't say (who it was)," she said. "All I could see was a blue uniform."

In the heat, she ran just hard enough to qualify, she said.

Joyner-Kersey breaks mark

By Tim Liotto
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Jackie Joyner-Kersey broke the world record in the women's heptathlon long jump, leaping 23 feet, 10 1/4 inches Saturday as she led all Olympic competitors in the final day of the two-day event.

Joyner-Kersey's long jumper performance smashed the heptathlon mark of 23-9 1/4 she had set at the 1987 U.S. Track and Field Championships at San Jose, Calif. She also holds the American long jump record of 24-5 1/2, set during the 1987 Pan American Games.

Her jump Saturday was the fourth-best performance ever by an American. Joyner-Kersey holds at least the top 14 marks ever by an American.

Her latest performance put Joyner-Kersey within only 11 points of her world record pace in the heptathlon, with two events — the javelin throw and the 800 meters — remaining. At that point, she had 5,528 points.

On Friday, Joyner-Kersey injured the knee she uses on her takeoff in the long jump.

It was a minor injury that cleared up by the time she competed in the 200-meter dash. Nevertheless, she lowered her expectations for a world record in the heptathlon, setting her sights instead on just winning a gold medal.

"I am concentrating on winning," Joyner-Kersey said after the first day of competition. "Coming out winning is the only thing. The world record is not important."

In spite of her brief battle with pain, the 26-year-old from East St. Louis, Ill., was far in front. She had the fastest times in the 100-meter hurdles and the 200-meter dash, equaled the top high jump mark, and turned in the second-best mark in the shot put.

Joyner-Kersey finished the first day of the seven-event competition with 4,284 points, the second-highest one-day total of her career. She had a total of 4,367 at the same point when she set the world record of 7,215 points in the U.S. Olympic trials in July.

Behind Joyner-Kersey at the end of the first day of competition were East Germans Sabine John and Anke Behmer.

Joyner-Kersey, the only woman ever to surpass the 7,000-point plateau — she's done it several times — posted her first personal best on the first day as she appeared certain of clearing 7,000 again.

Even John and Behmer had shots at the magical 7,000-point mark.

The high jump proved the biggest reason Joyner-Kersey came up short of her one-day total at the Olympic trials.

She cleared 6-1 1/4 on her second try.

NFL teams look for help at QB

By Hank Lowenkron
The Associated Press

The NFL season reaches the one-fourth mark this week with only three teams undefeated and general managers scrambling for quarterbacks like line-backers with incentive clauses for every sack.

Defending Super Bowl champion Washington, along with defending divisional champions Cleveland and Indianapolis, have had to replace their starter with a backup. Houston and Seattle, both AFC wild card playoff participants in 1987, have also had their starting quarterbacks trade their jerseys for a spot on the injured reserve list.

Washington's Doug Williams, last season's Super Bowl MVP, joined Cleveland's Bernie Kosar, Houston's Warren Moon and Seattle's Dave Krieg on the growing list of wounded quarterbacks after having appendectomy surgery on Wednesday.

Mark Rypien, a sixth-round draft pick out of Washington State in 1986, takes his first NFL snap for Washington in regular-season play Sunday when the Redskins 2-1, take on Phoenix, 1-2. Rypien, 25, has spent his first two years as a pro on the injured list.

Rypien moves into the spotlight one day before Jay Schroeder, who was traded to the Los Angeles Raiders Sept. 5, makes his first start with his new club. The trade was made after Williams got the starting job and an unhappy Schroeder demanded to be traded.

Rypien knows the wisdom of granting Schroeder's demand will be measured by his performance.

"A lot of people have been questioning whether the Redskins will regret trading away Jay Schroeder," Rypien said. "That's a bad rap and unfair shake. You can't answer those questions until Sunday is over, and if I do go out and do well, then everyone will say it was a great move to get rid of him."

Rypien, who completed 30 of 57 passes for 399 yards in preseason play this year, will be backed up by veteran David Archer, who signed with the Redskins Thursday.

Mike Pagel, who made his first NFL start since 1985 and threw for two touchdowns and 255 yards in Monday's 23-17 victory over Indianapolis, will be at quarterback when the Browns, 2-1, travel to Cincinnati, 3-0. Pagel became a starter when Kosar and backup Gary Danielson went on the injured reserve list on successive weeks.

Kosar began throwing a softball this week. The elbow he injured in the season opener Sept. 4 was expected to keep him out from four to six weeks.

"I'm just tossing it lightly about five yards," said Kosar this week. "I am keeping the brace on my elbow and I throw the softball with only one motion, so it's not realistic compared to what my passing motion is. The only motion I'm using is one that doesn't put stress on the ligaments."

Indianapolis, meanwhile, is giving rookie Chris Chandler his first NFL start at quarterback. He'll be backed up by Gary Hogeboom, who was demoted to the No. 3 spot on the depth chart after the Colts lost their opener 17-14 in overtime to Houston.

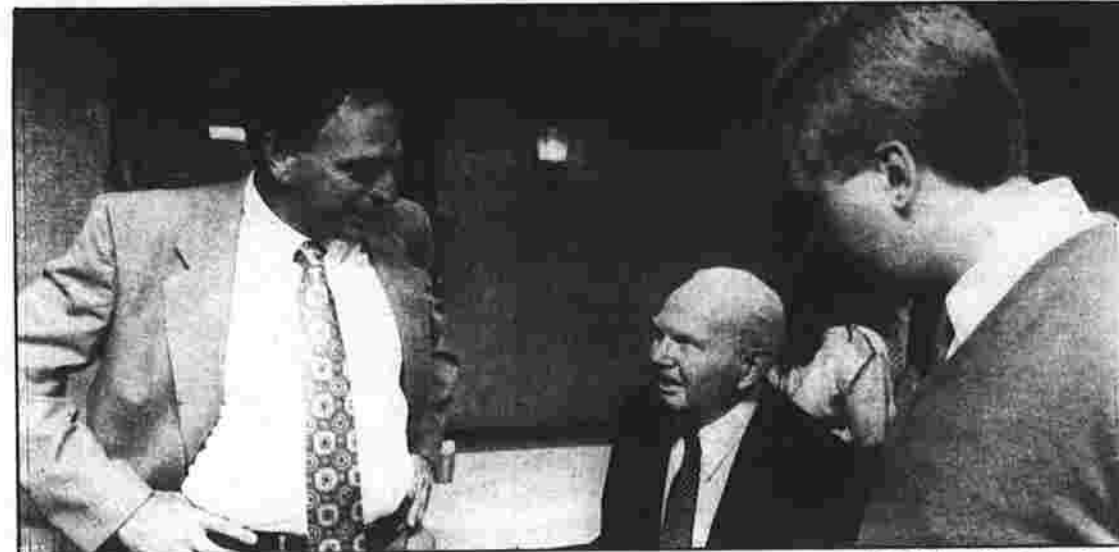

Jack Trudeau, forced to run for his life the past two weeks while working behind an offensive line wrecked by the holdout of Pro Bowler Ron Solt and injuries to Pro Bowler Chris Hinton and Kevin Call, is listed as doubtful for the AFC East game between the Colts, 0-3, and Miami, 1-2.

Houston, 2-1, hosts New England, 1-2, with Cody Carlson starting in place of Moon for the Oilers. Moon injured his shoulder in the season-opener against Indianapolis.

A shoulder injury sent Krieg to the sidelines Sunday and Jeff Kemp starts in his place with the Seahawks and 19102co matching identical 2-1 records in the Kingdom.

Hall of Fame ranks grow

More than 240 people clad in black-tie apparel crowded the Army and Navy Club Friday to honor seven sports figures at the Manchester Sports Hall of Fame's ninth annual induction dinner.

"I've been with this Hall of Fame for nine years and I've never had the pleasure of knowing more outstanding recipients than these men," said Bob Dagan, master of ceremonies for the evening.

Only three of the sports figures honored were able to attend the dinner. Two of the men, Guido Giorgetti and Jim Leber, were not able to attend because of illness. Two others, Dave Hayes and Alex Hackney, were honored posthumously.

One of those honored who was able to attend the event was 28-year-old Eric Hall, the current

United States professional archery champion and the man who held the world title in 1988.

"I've won a lot of tournaments overseas and have been given a lot of attention there, but it's especially nice when people in my own town recognize me," Hall said. "To me it feels like a really big thing when they do it in your hometown."

Another Hall of Fame inductee who was able to attend the dinner was Pat Mistretta, the athletic director at Manchester Community College. He was honored for his outstanding career in baseball, basketball and football in both high school and college.

"This feels like Coopers town to me," Mistretta said. "To be honored by the people you work with and live with is overwhelming."

Honored posthumously were Hackney, a man who served for 27 years as head golf professional at the Manchester Country Club, and Dave Hayes, who played football under Coach Knute Rockne at Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana.

Giorgetti, who was not able to attend due to illness, was inducted into the Hall of Fame because of his top position on the New England horsehoe pitching competition for more than two decades. He was also honored for his outstanding standings as a baseball and softball pitcher.

A special awards went to 80-year-old Stanley "Lefty" Bray as the 1988 Friend of Sport for his contributions and guidance for many Manchester athletes for 50 years.

"This is the most wonderful thing that ever happened to me," Bray said.

Another special award, the Unsung Award, went to Jim Leber, a prominent figure in Manchester Little League and in midget football circles for many years. He, too, was also not able to attend.

Manchester dominated the initial 45 minutes and took a 2-0 lead at 28:12 on a beautiful play. Senior Mike Sardo fed senior Kevin Boyle on the left wing and the latter carried the ball before placing a perfect pass to senior Jeremy Dieterle in front of Archambault. Dieterle tapped the ball into the net for the score.

"We came out really intense," McCarthy said. "We're putting more pressure in the penalty area." Manchester outshot Windham, 6-0, in the first half and 12-2 for the match.

Dopslaff was not pleased with his team's effort. "I credit Manchester with making us look bad."

At 11:55 of the second half after a handball violation, Windham's Shane Giblin converted a penalty kick to trim the Indian lead to 2-1. In a more evenly played half, Manchester broke Windham's back at 23:25. Senior Mo Moriarty boomed a left-footer off Archambault, with the ricochet coming back to Moriarty who made no mistake this time for a 3-1 lead.

"That third goal was unfortunate. We were still in the game," Dopslaff said.

With 4:43 left, Dieterle beautifully fed junior Dave Campbell in front of the net and the latter guided the ball past reserve goalie Chris Michaud. "They (Manchester) had good opportunities. They're a good side," Dopslaff said.

McCarthy feels good about his Indians. "We're pleased," he said. "We're off to a good start and it helps. They're working together real well."

Fine play for Manchester was turned in by seniors Dan Kelsey, Doug Harvey, Sardo, Moriarty, Boyle and sophomore Nigel Cooper.

Manchester 2 2-4
Windham 0 0-1
Scoring: M-Stephenson, Dieterle, Moriarty, Campbell, W-Giblin.

MHS girls soccer extends league streak to 40

H.S. Roundup

It was a frustrating afternoon, a winning one nevertheless, for the Manchester High girls' soccer team as it squeezed out a 1-0 victory over Windham High in CCC East Division play Friday at Memorial Field.

The win lifts the Indians to 4-0 overall, 3-0 in the CCC East. It was the 40th consecutive division outing without a loss for the Indians who've gone 38-0-2 in that span. Their one, and only loss, in league competition came against South Windsor in 1985, a 3-2 overtime setback. Manchester, four-time CCC East champion, is 48-1-2 in league play since its inception in 1984.

Manchester will be tested Tuesday when it visits unbeaten South Windsor for a 3:30 p.m. clash.

"We dominated the match, but couldn't finish. It was one of those days," said Manchester Coach Joe Erardi. "As the match progressed, we did everything but put the ball in the net."

The Indians outshot the Whippets, now 2-2 for the season, by a 38-5 margin.

Manchester's one and only goal came at the 7:40 mark of the first half. Shelly Dieterle fed a through ball to Jessica Marquez, and the freshman forward found the twine to the right of Whippet keeper Karen Schwander. It was Marquez's third goal of the season.

Senior captain Amy Gates and sophomore Jen Brindisi at outside fullbacks had outstanding games defensively for Manchester.

BOLTON — The Bolton High girls' soccer team put it in high gear and never looked back in stopping East Hampton High, 3-0, in the COC opener Friday for both schools.

The Bulldogs are now 3-1 overall while the Bellingrings fall to 0-3-1. Bolton's next game is Monday at 3:30 p.m. against Bacon Academy in Colchester.

Jessica Brahaney made it 2-0 at the 28:26 mark of the opening half with assists from Jen Maneggia and Amber Alleman.

"We controlled the ball and moved it around and did a lot more running. We didn't slow it down. I also put the younger kids in and that gave the older ones some rest. And when they played, they were able to play harder," Landolphi said.

Depold, assisted by Stacy Beyor, closed out the scoring for the Bulldogs, who owned a 26-11 edge in

East ties Sacred Heart

HAMDEN — Goals in the first and last minute of regulation enabled East Catholic to deadlock Sacred Heart, 2-2, in All Connecticut Conference girls' soccer action Friday.

Each team is now 1-2-1 overall for the season. East's next game is Monday at Norwich Free Academy.

"We're shooting but they're not going in," East Coach Ron Palmer said. East outshot the home club, 30-18, but Heart goalie Kim Cyganik came up with 24 saves, several of the stellar variety. "She prevented the loss for them," Palmer noted. East also had the unfortunate luck of hitting the crossbar three times in the overtime.

BOSOX RALLY, TOP YANKS

AL Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, boosted by a critical misplay by the New York infield on Spike Owen's grounder, rallied for three runs in the ninth inning and stunned the Yankees 10-9 Friday night to maintain control of the American League East race.

A crowd of 51,511, cheering on every pitch throughout a tense evening, suddenly sat in silence as the Red Sox stormed back and dealt the Yankees a crushing loss that pushed them 5½ games behind. Milwaukee began the night four games back while Detroit also slipped 5½ behind after losing to Baltimore.

The Red Sox, trailing 9-5 after six innings, took advantage of New York's beleaguered bullpen. They scored single runs in the seventh and eighth and Mike Greenwell's lead-off double in the ninth finished Dave Righetti.

Dale Mohoric, 4-8, walked Ellis Burks with one out, putting the tying runs on base and Jodi Reed followed with an RBI single. Pinch-hitter Jim Rice's single loaded the bases and Owen, batting for Ed Romero, bounced a grounder up the middle. Shortstop Wayne Tolleason and second baseman Willie Randolph, both were playing in, but neither could have made the play at second base. Instead, each backed off thinking the other would take the ball and it went between them for a two-run single that put Boston ahead.

Dennis Lamp, 7-5, got the victory, and Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his 29th save. Smith gave up a lead-off single to Dave Winfield but retired Jack Clark. Claudell Washington and pinch-hitter Ken Phelps to end the game.

Mike Boddicker and Roger Clemens will pitch the next two games for Boston, opposed by Richard Dotson and Rick Rhoden.

White Sox 2, Royals 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Jerry Reuss, Barry Jones and Bob Thigpen combined on a four-hitter Friday night and the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals 2-0.

Steve Lyons hit a sixth-inning RBI double and the second run scored on a wild pitch in the ninth by Jerry Don Gleaton after Dan Pasqua tripled.

Reuss, 12-9, won for the sixth time in his last eight decisions, striking out a season-high six and walking none.

Orioles 5, Tigers 4

BALTIMORE (AP) — Matt Nokes's throwing error on a potential double-play grounder allowed the winning run to score in the ninth inning Friday night as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Detroit Tigers 5-4.

Blue Jays 4, Indians 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — George Bell homered and Kelly Gruber hit an RBI double as the Toronto rallied for two runs in the seventh inning Friday night and beat the Cleveland Indians 4-2, the Blue Jays' eighth victory in 10 games.

WHERE IS IT — Bolton High's Jessica Brahaney (14) has her eyes close as does East Hampton's Ellie Braun as they fight for the soccer ball during their match Friday afternoon. Sandwiched between the pair is Bolton's Lauren Clark. The Bulldogs won, 3-0. High school roundup on page 47.

MHS soccer gets revenge

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

WILLIMANTIC — Revenge was the key motivating factor for the Manchester High boys' soccer team in its CCC East Division match with long-time nemesis, Windham High School.

This veteran Indian group — 10 seniors started the match — hadn't beaten Windham since it entered Manchester High with the last Indian victory in 1984.

Until Friday afternoon. Scoring two goals in each half from four different players, Manchester dumped the Whippets, 4-1, to remain unbeaten at 3-0 in the league. The Indians are 3-1 overall and will host South Windsor High Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. at Memorial Field. Windham falls to 1-1-1 in the CCC East and 1-2-1 overall.

"Gary has had tremendous teams down here the last couple years," Manchester Coach Bill McCarthy said of Windham coach Gary Dopsloff. "This is the last time the seniors were able to come down and do a good job. And they did."

Windham was the 1986 Class LL state champions.

"They (the seniors) wanted revenge," Dopsloff said. "This group hadn't beaten us since they've been here."

Wasting little time, junior Dave Stephenson got Manchester on the board 1:34 into the match when he collected a loose ball and deposited it in the lower right corner past Whippet goalie Tim Archambault.
