Court rejects Fortin's appeal for accelerated rehabilitation

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

A Hartford Superior Court judge on Friday denied a request for accelerated rehabilitation for Walter "Wally" J. Fortin, a former employee of the town's Youth Services Bureau, who is charged with the sexual assault of young boys.

Fortin, 67, of 33 Eldridge St., the retired director of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center, was charged on April 15, 1987, with six counts of fourth-degree sexual assault and seven counts of risk of injury to a minor. He was arrested again on May 12, 1987, and charged with second-degree custodial interference and risk of injury to a minor.

According to an affidavit related to the second arrest, police detectives compiled a list of more than 26 boys in the Manchester area who were possible victims in the case.

On May 4, Fortin pleaded innocent to all charges. He applied for the accelerated rehabilitation program on Aug. 10. The program, which is for crimes considered "not serious in nature," would have allowed the charges to be erased if Fortin completed a period of probation determined by a judge.

In denying the request, Superior Court Judge Thomas O'Keefe said that the charges against Fortin are "very, very serious" and added that the percentage of repeat offenses by people charged with sexual assault to a minor is relatively high.

"Growing up is difficult enough without a person of trust and authority making sexual advances at you," O'Keefe said. "The impact this can have on the future of young boys is hard to predict."

Fortin's attorney, Hubert Santos, of the Hartford law firm of Buckley and Santos, listed Fortin's contributions to the town of Manchester. Santos said that because of Fortin's high status in the community, he has "suffered greatly" from the adverse publicity. Santos said the senior citizens' center's auditorium is named for Fortin, who has never before been charged with a crime.

"The public humiliation — if there ever was a punishment that would be considered severe — is the type that's been visited on Wally Fortin," said Santos.

Fortin worked as a part-time attendance investigator for the Youth Services Bureau for four years. His job was to check on children who were skipping school. He resigned after his first arrest. He lives with his 90-year-old mother.

When O'Keefe asked Fortin for a closing statement, the defendant stood up and told the judge he was too nervous to speak. Later, when the judge said he was ready to make his decision, Fortin spoke.

"Of the specific things I've been accused of I feel that I'm innocent of them," Fortin said. "I feel sorry that it's caused so much confusion to all concerned."

O'Keefe called decisions concerning accelerated rehabilitation "one of the most difficult any judge can make." He said that while Fortin's contributions to the community were "extremely relevant," if the crimes are likely to be committed again, the contributions become irrelevant.

"You've helped a lot of people, but apparently you've also hurt a lot of people," O'Keefe said. "Your dark side, Mr. Fortin, is that you have difficulty controlling your sexual impulses to make advances towards young boys."

Fortin and his attorney declined to comment on the judge's decision.

Endorsed like it, others dismiss it

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Democratic candidates for the Legislature on Friday welcomed endorsements from Manchester teachers' union, but Republicans dismissed them as insignificant.

The Manchester Education Association, which represents most public school teachers in town, announced Thursday that it endorsed the candidacies of the three incumbent Democrats. They are Sen. Michael P. Meotti, D-Glastonbury, and Reps. James R. McCavanagh and John W. Thompson, both of Manchester.

Meotti represents the 4th Senatorial District. McCavanagh represents the 12th Assembly District and Thompson represents the 13th Assembly District.

Former Sen. Carl A. Zinsser, who is challenging Meotti to regain the 4th District seat he lost to Meotti two years ago, dismissed the importance of endorsements. He noted that in the last election he was endorsed by four newspapers but was defeated.

"So much for endorsements," he said.

Zinsser said that the MEA didn't endorse him "because I'm not one who's going to give in to every single demand they're going to make."

who is challenging Thompson said that the endorsement of Thompson was not important, but she wouldn't elaborate.

"I would prefer not to say. I'm not too concerned about that," she said.

She said that it's "a given" that the MEA supports Democrats and incumbents.

Meotti said that the endorsement is important because "education is a very important issue to most people."

About Zinsser, Meotti said, "He has never distinguished himself on educational issues."

McCavanagh, who is running unopposed, said that "any endorsement you can get is important."

He added, "I worked hard for the educational system and supported legislation that dealt with the educational system, so I'm sure that had a lot to do with my endorsement."

Thompson said that as a result of laws on education recently enacted by the Legislature, state funding to Manchester schools would increase by about $1.5 million in the coming year. Over the five years through 1993, state education funding to the town would increase about 66 percent.

When asked about the significance of the MEA endorsement, he said that the teachers have the best interests of students in mind.

Educators skunked by emergency

ENID, Okla. (AP) — Students were sent outside. An office was barricaded. And officials throughout the Eisenhower Elementary School walked with a light step.

The emergency? A sleeping skunk.

When school counselor Noama Barnard arrived at her office Thursday, she encountered the skunk, which was curled up for a quiet nap.

"I heard some rustling in some papers and saw it move," Ms. Barnard said. "I decided I'd get out of there — very slowly."

Next door to the counselor's office is the school lunchroom, and officials led students outside.

Folding chairs were used to barricade the counselor's office until Enid animal control officers arrived and removed the animal.

School Principal Mary Butler said the skunk may have entered when the custodian left the door open during evening cleaning.

The doors will be shut at night from now on, she added.

WITHHOLDS BLESSING — Archbishop John F. Whealon meets with Vice President George Bush Friday in Hartford. Whealon, who recently registered as a Republican, did not endorse Bush. Whealon's office said Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis is welcome to visit.

Bush meets with archbishop but doesn't get endorsement

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Republican presidential candidate George Bush met briefly with one of Connecticut's newest Republicans Friday, Hartford Archbishop John F. Whealon, who last month quit the Democratic Party over its acceptance of abortion.

But after the meeting, Whealon's office was quick to put out a statement saying that the session, which had been requested by the Bush campaign, "in no way was to endorse (Bush's) candidacy" and said Democrat Michael Dukakis would also be welcome to meet with Whealon.

"Archbishop Whealon took this opportunity to express his concerns about the moral fabric of our American society and the future of our nation," Whealon's office said. "He spoke of issues involving life and the quality of life in the United States of America."

After the meeting with Whealon, Bush traveled to the street to an outdoor rally under warm, sunny skies at St. Joseph College in West Hartford, where he was greeted by 3,000 to 4,000.

During a 12-minute speech, Bush attacked Dukakis as naive in foreign affairs and cautioned the audience that this was "no time to turn the foreign policy of this country over to a rank amateur in that field."

Bush, who grew up in Connecticut, did not mention abortion during his speech on the Catholic school campus.

He did sound several familiar familiar themes: he said he wants to be the "education president," that the president should have line-item veto power when dealing with federal budgets and that he favors the death penalty for "drug kingpins" involved in murders.

He ridiculed Dukakis' plan to collect delinquent taxes, saying there was no need to beef up the IRS and that the U.S. tax system should continue to be "based on the honesty and integrity of the American people."

He also said a Dukakis proposal to have student loans repaid during lifetime payroll deductions could cost those students a fortune; he said an $8,000 loan would cost a student $104,000 by the time it was paid back, under the Dukakis plan.

"My opponent, the only way that he can win is if he convinces the American people that everything is wrong," Bush said. "The way I am going to win is to tell 'em we are doing well."

"When you change horses ... let's change to one that's going where you want to go," he said.

After the speech, Bush moved off the stage and shook hands and picked up a baby girl as the crowd strained forward.

Earlier in the day, Bush had traveled to Springfield, Mass., to receive the endorsement of two police organizations and he mentioned that in his St. Joseph speech.

He told the St. Joseph audience that Dukakis represented a "soft-on-crime policy."

The Dukakis campaign tried to counter that by staging a news conference across the street from the college to announce that the Hartford Police Union had endorsed Dukakis.

John Dukakis, using a familiar line from his father's campaign, said police officers "want a candidate with a record, not a resume."

The endorsement was accepted by Dukakis' son John, who said his father had helped reduce crime by 13 percent during his years as governor of Massachusetts while the national crime rate had gone up by 4 percent.

John Dukakis, using a familiar line from his father's campaign, said police officers "want a candidate with a record, not a resume."

Dukakis knocks Bush ag policy

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis and George Bush raided each other's home states on Friday, Dukakis accusing his Republican rival of pursuing an agricultural policy of "the fewer farmers the better" and Bush swooping into Massachusetts to collect more endorsements from police who serve under the Democrat.

Dukakis told a farm rally in Idalou, a small community in Bush's adopted state of Texas, that the vice president "doesn't see the pain in rural America." He vowed to devote $100 million for investment in rural areas if elected.

Campaigning in Texas at a time when polls show him trailing, the Democratic presidential candidate asserted that some 250,000 farm families have left the land since Bush became vice president in 1981.

Standing in front of a cattle pen on a dusty family farm, Dukakis claimed Reagan administration farm policies had idled farmland and depressed farm prices.

"My friends, Mr. Bush's farm policy can be summed up in just five words: the fewer farmers the better," the Massachusetts governor said. "And his rural development policy can be summed up in two words: Tough luck."

Dukakis also poked fun at Bush, whose legal Texas residence is a hotel room in Houston. "Since I rented a hotel room in Dallas last night, I guess I qualify as a Texan," Dukakis said.

Dukakis received an unexpected newspaper endorsement as well. The Seattle Times, which almost always endorses Republicans, announced Friday that it would carry an editorial Sunday supporting Dukakis.

The editorial said Bush must share responsibility with President Reagan for "the potentially catastrophic federal deficit ... (and) the widening financial gap between the well-off who've gained handsomely and the tens of millions of middle-class and poor Americans who are today relatively worse off."

The Dukakis campaign also aired a new, 30-second ad Friday night during NBC's coverage of the Olympics. The ad, called "The Packaging of George Bush," showed actors portraying Bush aides who say he must wrap himself in the American flag because he has no issue that appeals to the middle class.

Bush still troubled by the gender gap

STORRS (AP) — Republican presidential candidate George Bush is doing a better job attracting support from women voters, but his campaign is still troubled by a significant gender gap, say experts at the University of Connecticut.

"We've seen many reports that say the gender gap for Bush is gone," John Barry, a survey analyst at the university's Roper Center for Public Opinion Research, said earlier this week.

But the gap still exists and those who say it is gone are misinterpreting the polls, Barry said. "Those reports have used the term to explain the margin which separates women in their support of the candidates, and that's not what the gender gap describes," Barry said.

"In describing the gender gap in voting, we compute the percentage point difference in support for the candidates separately for men and women, and then compute the gap," said Everett C. Ladd, director of the Roper Center and political science professor.

Barry said Bush is beginning to experience the same polling patterns that President Reagan did in 1984.

A CBS-New York Times poll in June showed support for Bush among men was 1 percentage point behind Dukakis and support for Bush among women was 18 points behind Dukakis. That's a gender gap of 17 points, they said.

Campaign Notebook

Thompson OKs debates

Democratic State Rep. John W. Thompson has written his Republican challenger, Susan Buckno, accepting her challenge to debates, and he has suggested some possible topics.

The candidates are seeking election in Manchester's 13th Assembly District.

Buckno had proposed debates that would focus on issues ranging from "the current budget crisis to the future of our young people and crime."

In his letter Thompson said, "In addition to the issues you mentioned in your letter, I look forward to discussing issues affecting the mentally retarded, the elderly, the nursing shortage, the environment, and other similar state issues and our respective experience and qualification to deal with these issues."

Thompson said he would be able to meet Buckno in public debate in appropriate forums and at mutually convenient times and places.

Buckno had suggested at least four debates and had written Thompson that her campaign workers would contact his campaign staff to work out the logistics.

Giulietti raps Herbst

Republican James Giulietti of Vernon, candidate for state senator from the 35th Senatorial District, has charged that when his opponent, Sen. Marie Herbst, D-Vernon, had an opportunity to take a strong stand against busing of students she declined.

In a news release, Giulietti said Herbst voted against an amendment prohibiting busing under any circumstances as well as the use of tax dollars to promote or implement a busing plan.

Giulietti said he supports the amendment and will fight to keep school children in neighborhood schools.

"Busing is not the answer to educational equality throughout our state," Giulietti said.

He said he believes problem schools should be targeted for improvement by the state Department of Education. He said the department has not reviewed such hurdles to quality education as poor administration of urban schools, drug use, the absence of decent housing, jobs, and transportation.

Corrections

An item published Tuesday about testing next week at Manchester High School incorrectly reported who would be tested. The Iowa Test of Achievement and Proficiency will be for 10R and 11th-grade students. It will be given on Monday and Wednesday from 7:50 to 10:15 a.m. School will open at 10:20 a.m. those two days for other students.

A story published Friday incorrectly identified the man charged with shooting Giovanni Cusano of Bolton at Heublein Inc. in Hartford on Wednesday. Ismael Laureano Reyes of Hartford has been charged with attempt to commit murder, first-degree assault and criminal use of a firearm, according to Hartford police.

The Manchester Herald strives to be accurate and fair in its reporting. If an error is made or information is misinterpreted, we want to make corrections. The Herald's phone number is 643-2711.

Jobless claims down

Weekly claims in Connecticut for unemployment benefits declined by over 3,100 to a weekly average of 19,410 for the two-week period ending Sept. 17, said Betty L. Tiant, state labor commissioner.

New claim filings decreased from 2,946 to 1,889, while continued claims decreased from 20,173 down to 17,521. New and continued temporary (seasonal) claims were lower by 625, down from 1,549 to 924 for the most recent two-week period.

All of the local offices recorded lower filings, and 305 claimants exhausted their unemployment benefits.

LAST DAY — Gerry McNamara puts away records Friday during her last day as a secretary in the town Planning Department. She started work in November 1964.

Gerry McNamara's retirement leaves a 'big gap' at town hall

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

Gerry McNamara has been among the first to learn about the town's biggest projects, including the Buckland Industrial Park, the Cheney Mill conversions and most recently, the Buckland mall.

McNamara, a secretary in the town Planning Department, said the work has been interesting, but 24 years and four town planners later, she's ready to retire.

McNamara, whose last day was Friday, joined the department in November 1964 and has worked for the town longer than any other secretary there now, according to payroll records. All 24 years were spent with the Planning Department.

"I think the work is fascinating," she said. "I love to see the changes."

For her co-workers and Planning Department customers, McNamara's leaving won't be easy. More than 150 of them showed up at a farewell luncheon Wednesday to let her know.

"Gerry hasn't had a job for 24 years, she's been a public servant for 24 years," said Planning Director Mark Pellegrini, who's worked with McNamara for four years. "Gerry was always willing to drop whatever she was doing to be courteous and helpful. It's that quality that will be missed the most."

Pellegrini's comments were echoed by others who had worked with McNamara, including Alan Lamson, who worked in the Planning Department from 1975 to 1983 and still deals with the department as a private architect.

McNamara also worked for Planning Directors Joseph Tamsky and Eric Potter.

"Each one of them is different," McNamara said.

"She's really been helpful to the public," Lamson said. "There's going to be a big gap there when she leaves."

Friday at the department was a little bit crazier than usual, as McNamara attempted to prepare it for her absence by straightening files, gathering information for Monday's Zoning Board of Appeals meeting and trying to leave behind little bit of the knowledge she's gained about what's where and how to find it.

"Because she's been around so long...and taken such a great interest in things, she's sort of the institutional resource of the department," Pellegrini said.

Pellegrini said McNamara's knowledge of procedures, legal requirements and deadlines has "kept me out of a lot of trouble."

"I could fill a book with the things I've learned," McNamara said.

But, McNamara admits, it wasn't easy when she started. "It takes awhile to learn the difference between variances and special exceptions and everything that goes along with them," she said. "There are so many regulations."

For Kathy August, also a secretary in the Planning Department, McNamara is a "mom away from home."

August remembers her first day nearly two years ago.

"I was glad that Gerry was here because she's so knowledgeable about everything that concerns the town of Manchester," August said. "I'll be calling every day until she leaves."

"Gerry has an incredible amount of patience," said Stuart Popper, who joined the staff as senior planner in July. "People can be gruff, but Gerry's always very even-keeled with everybody."

But for McNamara, dealing with unhappy "customers," as she calls them, was simply a matter of gritting her teeth. It was the amount of work that resulted from a boom in development that she sometimes found hard to deal with.

The Planning Department has received approval from the Board of Directors for an increase in this year's budget that would have allowed it to hire a third secretary. Now, Pellegrini said, he'll have to hire two.

In the meantime, McNamara will be able to watch the town grow from the outside. Although she plans to travel during retirement, McNamara said she'll stay in town, play a little golf and spend time with her two granddaughters.

McNamara said Friday she had "mixed feelings" about retiring.

"If you've done the same thing for 24 years, it's kind of hard to say 'I'm leaving,'" she said.

Main Street merchants praise work of downtown coordinator

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

The resignation of the downtown coordinator and membership services coordinator for the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce surprised some co-workers and downtown business owners, who praised her work.

Veronica Pastorelle, former downtown coordinator for the Downtown Manchester Association and membership coordinator for the chamber, submitted a letter of resignation to chamber president Anne Flint and Downtown Manchester Association President Bernard Apter on Sept. 23, the same day she left the job.

In the letter, Pastorelle wrote, "I have very much enjoyed my past six months with the Chamber and getting to know the members of the business community. However, personal circumstances necessitate a career change."

Pastorelle has an unlisted phone number and could not be reached for comment. The chamber would not give her address without her permission.

Flint said Thursday she isn't sure exactly why Pastorelle left. "I assume (she left) to pursue other career opportunities," Flint said.

Flint said the chamber will soon begin advertising the position.

"I don't think it'll be a short process," Flint said.

"It'll be hard to replace her," said Apter, who owns Regal

VERONICA PASTORELLE
...work is praised

Men's Shop on Main St. Since she was hired by the chamber in March, Pastorelle worked hard for both the chamber and downtown, Flint said.

"She brought a large number of new (chamber) members," Flint said. "She was quite enthusiastic about Main Street. The merchants know a lot more now about what they need than they did six months ago."

Pastorelle worked especially hard to help Main Street move forward with its marketing strategy and promotional events, Apter said. Previously, downtown business owners were having trouble organizing and holding events because they were busy running their businesses.

Asked if Pastorelle's leaving would put merchants back to square one, Apter replied, "Maybe square two. She's put us beyond square one."

But Alan Cashman, vice president of the Downtown Manchester Association and owner of J. Garman Clothier on Main Street, said Thursday he felt Pastorelle's leaving would be a "major setback" for downtown.

Cashman said he was surprised and "very disappointed" that she quit and also isn't sure why she did.

"There were a lot of pressures in this job," Cashman said.

Pastorelle started the job March 1. She was an English major in Smith College and has worked in music publishing and as a choir director. She is formerly of Long Island.

During her six months with the chamber, Pastorelle created a nine-member steering committee to help downtown business owners to work with the Planning Department on an economic survey of Main Street customers and business owners. She also helped put out a downtown business directory.

She also helped plan and participate in promotional events such as the July sidewalk sale and the annual Feast Fest.

Merchant Marines get benefits

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

Merchant Marines who served during World War II have been granted veterans status by the Department of Defense and should contact the local Job Service office in Manchester to find out what employment benefits they're entitled to.

Vivian E. Ladabouche, manager of the local Job Service office, said among other benefits, veterans are contacted first when the service gets a job listing.

"A lot of them (veterans) don't realize what they have coming," Ladabouche said.

Veterans status is open to Merchant Marines who served in active ocean-going service under any branch of the military between Dec. 7, 1941 and Aug. 15, 1945, said George Merrithew, veterans services officer with the regional office of the Veterans Administration in Hartford.

Merchant Marines, who carried supplies across the ocean in military or private vessels during the war, previously were not considered veterans by the Department of Defense because they were civilians, Merrithew said.

Merchant Marines may contact the Veterans Administration for forms needed before they can receive veterans status, he said.

Veterans are entitled to various benefits, including pension, medical care and home loans, in addition to employment benefits, he said.

At the local Job Service office, there is a veterans' unit staffed by a veterans' employment representative and assistant, who handle all veterans' applications and interviews, Ladabouche said. The representative and assistant may refer veterans for counseling, job training or apprenticeship programs, she said.

The local Job Service office, located at 806 Main St., serves Tolland, South Windsor, Ellington, Bolton and Vernon as well as Manchester.

For more information, call the Job Service at 649-4558 or the Veterans Administration Hartford office at 278-3230.

In addition to the Academy training, the officers will complete an 80-hour in-service training with an assigned field training officer from the department.

The new officers bring the number of patrol officers to 50, four below authorized strength.

15 stores damaged in East Lyme fire

EAST LYME (AP) — A fire tore through the roof of Flanders Plaza Friday severely damaging second-story offices and forcing about 15 stores to close, fire officials said.

The six-alarm fire raged for about three hours before being brought under control around noon Friday, according to Raymond A. Gardner, a paid driver for the Flanders branch of the East Lyme Fire Department. The plaza is located on the corner of Route 161 and Route 1 in East Lyme.

Gardner said fire officials believe the fire began in the roof area. He said the blaze spread rapidly along the space between the office ceilings and the roof. He said fire officials are still trying to determine where the fire started.

Coventry school board ponders how to handle study of AIDS

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — Board of Education members are wrestling with the question of how best to teach children to avoid the threat of AIDS.

The board will vote whether to adopt a policy that an AIDS curriculum be developed at its Oct. 27 meeting.

Because AIDS is primarily transmitted sexually, board member Robert Christie said parents may resist instruction that would involve discussion of sex.

"You'll likely get more resistance because AIDS is primarily sexually transmitted," he said at a meeting of the board Thursday. But he said young people should be made aware of how the disease is transmitted because that could impact the choices they make as they mature.

Board member Ellen Sullivan asked what approach would be used at the early elementary level. "I think it is important not to make them too fearful," said

Sullivan.

Superintendent of Schools Nathan Chesler replied, "To kindergartners we would probably say something like 'It is dangerous, you can die from it, but you can't catch it by sitting next to someone. Don't stick your fingers in blood or any other kinds of body fluid,'" he said.

AIDS, a fatal disease which attacks the body's immune system, also is transmitted through blood, saliva or contact with other body fluids.

Currently some instruction in AIDS is given in biology and health classes at Coventry High School and to seventh and eighth-graders in family life classes at Captain Nathan Hale School.

Chesler said on the elementary level, instruction "will likely be given by the classroom teacher who will use the school nurse as a resource once the curriculum is in place.

To date, there are no reported cases of students with AIDS in town.

In February 1987, the board adopted a policy on AIDS that would allow a student with AIDS to remain in school. The policy states that the diagnosis of AIDS or ARC (Aids Related Complex) "shall not be the sole grounds" for exclusion, expulsion, or restriction of a student's education program.

At that time member Judy Halvorson was chairwoman of the board and voted for the policy. Lawrence Mickel, the current board chairman, also served on the board at that time and opposed the policy, saying "there are too many ifs... to possibly put large numbers of students and teachers at risk."

Medical research, he had said, is not definitive enough to confirm ways AIDS is transmitted.

The policy makes exceptions in high risk conditions such as "open wounds, biting behavior, or frequent incontinence." In such cases, a student may be assigned a restricted program or expelled. Parents could appeal such action.

All cases would be reported to the superintendent, but confidentiality would be protected.

Enrollment up at MCC again

Manchester Community College's total enrollment this year, at 5,500 students, is up 27 students from last year, said Harry Meisel, dean of student affairs.

The number of full-time students increased from 1,526 to 1,612 students during this year, Meisel said. The part-time student population decreased by 59 students to 3,868 from 3,947, he said.

Last year, the college had 5,473 full- and part-time students, he said.

Meisel said he was unsure the reason for the increase in full-time enrollment, and for the drop in the number of part-time students.

"I can't account for either one of them," Meisel said. "Don't ask me to explain it, I can't."

This is the third year in a row that full-time enrollment has increased at the college, Meisel said.

Full-time enrollment was 1,514 in 1986 and rose to 1,526 in 1987. Part-time enrollments also increased from 3,756 students in 1986 to 3,947 in 1987.

Wage hike among laws effective today

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

Connecticut's minimum wage will jump to $4.25 an hour — making it among the highest in the country, hazing will be prohibited on college campuses, and cat and dog buyers will have new protections as 174 new laws go into effect today.

Another new law prohibits the brandishing of realistic-looking toy guns.

Still another is designed to help ease the shortage of nurses by allowing nurses moving into Connecticut to practice in the state for up to 120 days under a temporary permit while their licenses are being transferred.

One other prohibits videotape rental stores from disclosing what tapes a person rents. The measure provides fines of up to $500 and the person injured by such a disclosure can sue for damages under the bill. The 1988 General Assembly passed 444 bills. Many took effect when signed into law by Gov. William A. O'Neill. Others were effective July 1, the start of the state's fiscal year, and most of the rest are effective Saturday, the first of October.

The minimum wage increase is part of a schedule approved in 1987 that boosted the minimum wage from $3.37 to $3.75 an hour on Oct. 1, 1987, and to $4.25 this year.

A U.S. Department of Labor official said this week that California is the only other state with a $4.25 minimum wage; he said the District of Columbia's minimum wage is $4.85 for some occupations.

The hazing law establishes fines of up to $1,500 on organizations and up to $1,000 on members participating in hazing.

The toy gun law prohibits people from brandishing in a threatening manner toy guns that look like the real thing. The measure also prohibits the drawing of look-alike guns in the presence of a police officer, firefighter or a paramedic.

The so-called "pet lemon law" requires pet shops to provide a refund or replacement at no charge to anyone whose newly purchased dog or cat dies or gets sick within 15 days of sale from an illness existing at the time of sale. The bill also requires pet shops to have their pets regularly examined before they are sold.

Other new laws taking effect Saturday will:

- Make it illegal to charge for human organs to be used in transplants.

- Prohibit the intentional alteration of any work of art worth at least $2,500 after it is sold, and for 50 years after the artist's death.

- Require police officers to provide crime victims with immediate assistance and a card informing them of their rights and available services.

- Give a homicide victim's representative the right to be present in court during all prosecution proceedings.

- Require the Division of Criminal Justice to investigate any incident in which a police officer's use of deadly force in the line of duty results in a death, and determine whether the use of deadly force was lawful.

- Require hospitals to give the state Department of Environmental Protection the name of the person in charge of disposing of the facility's biomedical wastes, the amount of waste and the disposal site.

- Prohibit towns from imposing zoning and subdivision requirements for mobile and modular housing that are substantially different from those applying to traditional homes.

- Prohibit discrimination based on mental disability in housing, restaurants and other areas of public accommodation.

Sales frauds by telephone are expanding

Telephone sales frauds are so successful they're expanding. Here are some typical scams and some advice from "Modern Maturity" magazine.

Investments: If you're interested, ask to see a prospectus.

Ideal vacation certificates: You'll pay lots extra for the vacation.

Charitable causes: Check them out with the Better Business Bureau.

Gold-silver-platinum deposits in Arizona-New Mexico-wherever: A new twist on the "dirt pile" theme.

Be cautious about unsolicited phone pitches: Never give out your credit card number, even for "verification purposes," unless you're initiating the phone order; don't allow yourself to be pressured into buying NOW. Just say "no" — and if you can't get a word in edgewise, hang up.

Cops nab 24 in drug sweep

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — At least 24 people throughout central Connecticut have been arrested this week in a police crackdown on narcotics sales in a city housing project, police said.

For several days, vice squad officers have set up observation posts near the Mount Pleasant housing project, watched buyers come in for heroin and arrested them as they drove away. Most of the suspects were charged with purchasing heroin, police said.

Detective William Kilduff, a police spokesman, said the Mount Pleasant area was targeted because of the large amount of narcotics sold there. This week's police action will be continuing, he said.

State, Mobil announce deal

HARTFORD (AP) — The state of Connecticut and Mobil Oil Corp. Friday announced a 15-year agreement under which Mobil will operate 23 service stations on three highways and double the state's annual revenues.

The contract, effective Saturday, covers 10 stations on Route 15, 10 stations on Interstate 95 and three on Interstate 395.

Mobil operated the service stations on Route 15 and I-95 under a previous contract.

The contract will guarantee revenues of $56 million over the next 15 years. That breaks down to $3.7 million annually, or nearly double the current $2.1 million a year, the Department of Transportation said.

Mobil will invest almost $10 million in the first year to renovate the stations, the company said. The improvement will include canopies, new lighting, improved restrooms and modern equipment.

Man faces 100 years in jail

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A New Britain man arrested with nearly 9 pounds of cocaine is facing up to 100 years in prison and $5 million in fines after being indicted on drug trafficking charges, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said Friday.

Michèle Mariano, 22, was arrested by FBI agents and members of three local police departments on Sept. 22, when more than 4 kilograms of cocaine were seized from his car, Twardy said.

A federal grand jury on Thursday handed up an indictment charging Mariano with three counts of possession with intent to distribute or distribution of cocaine, Twardy said.

Mariano faces up to 40 years in prison and a $2 million fine on each of two counts because of the amount of cocaine involved and because of prior convictions, Twardy said. He faces up to 20 years in prison and a $1 million fine on the remaining count, he said. He also faces a mandatory minimum of five years in prison without parole, Twardy said.

Mariano is being held without bail pending trial.

Grant funds rental housing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The New Haven Housing Authority has won a $12.4 million federal grant to build 183 units of low-income rental housing to replace the vacant, dilapidated Elm Haven High Rise complex, U.S. Rep. Bruce A. Morrison said.

The award virtually guarantees that the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development will fund demolition of the six high-rise apartment buildings and replace them with higher-quality units, the Connecticut Democrat said Thursday.

No plan has been set in New Haven on where or how to build the new units, but Morrison said he will work to make sure they are not clustered in a traditional housing development. Morrison, who has worked closely with Housing Authority Executive Director David Echols, said he wants the authority to build several smaller complexes in middle-income neighborhoods.

Echols said the Elm Haven Disposition Committee, which includes community residents and elected officials, is working with housing commissioners to come up with a plan for the the housing.

Final negotiations next week seek L'Ambiance settlement

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A judge involved in litigation stemming from the 1987 collapse of the L'Ambiance Plaza in Bridgeport said Friday night that he hopes there will be a settlement between victims' families and the builders next week.

But state Superior Court Judge Frank S. Meadow said whether the building will be rebuilt is still being negotiated.

"I can't tell you exactly (about a settlement)," he said. "But I'm hopeful it will (next week). The final meeting between the plaintiffs and defendants will be next week."

About 40 attorneys met throughout the day Friday with Meadow and U.S. District Judge Robert C. Zampano, who are mediating negotiations in the lawsuits stemming from the April 23, 1987, building collapse that killed 28 men.

Zampano and Meadow called all of the attorneys into the courtroom at about 5 p.m. and dismissed them for the weekend, attorneys said.

Meadow said the next level of negotiations is reconstruction of the building. He declined to give any details.

The families and injured workers have already accepted a proposal that contains a minimum amount of compensation for each of the 44 plaintiffs, lawyers said.

As part of the proposal, L'Ambiance Plaza would be rebuilt under the trusteeship of the court. Part of the apartment building's profits would go to annuities set up for the injured and families of the men killed.

One attorney for the families, who requested anonymity, said Friday that a short-term settlement could be reached next week and that details of the reconstruction of the building would come later.

"We have suggested to Zampano that we work out a short-term settlement and later work out the complicated deal with the restructuring of the building," the attorney said. "Just because we don't have the restructuring done now, doesn't mean we can't settle with 38 out of the 39 defendants."

Attorneys involved in mediation efforts said there remained several obstacles to reaching a settlement.

One of those items is the matter of $5.1 million in outstanding fines and citations against five companies by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

According to lawyers, Zampano told company officials and their attorneys in meetings this week that they would face lawsuits if they did not settle, even those who apparently were not at fault in the accident.

The arbitration panel met this week with companies involved in the project, Bridgeport city officials and state officials to tell them individually what it expected each one to pay.

The judges have not told anyone but the plaintiffs' attorneys what they have determined the minimum settlement fund would be. And the judges are not telling one defendant what another defendant is being asked to pay, lawyers said.

If the panel does not get enough contributions from defendants to reach the minimum settlement it proposed, the mediation effort would end, Zampano has said.

The judges have scheduled meetings for Wednesday and Thursday to draw up settlement papers between the plaintiffs and those companies that choose to participate.

Rights agency blasted at hearing

NORWICH (AP) — The state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities was accused having a retaliatory management style and making it too difficult for people who file discrimination complaints during a public hearing held by a task force investigating the agency.

A union leader and a lawyer leveled the charges at Thursday's sparsely attended public hearing.

Gov. William A. O'Neill ordered the investigation in response to published reports about problems at the agency, which is responsible for enforcing the state's civil rights law.

The task force released a preliminary report last week that found that commission employees suffer from poor morale, work in an atmosphere of distrust and fear retaliation if they show any sign of disloyalty.

Michael J. Ferrucci Jr., staff representative with Council 4 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said the commission has created "a working environment in which turmoil, a lack of trust among workers and fear of retaliation ... exist side by side with increased case complexity and diminishing staff to do the work."

The union represents 60 commission employees, including its investigators. Ferrucci suggested the task force find out why 26 investigators have left the commission over the past three years.

Jean M. Stawicki, a Colchester lawyer, urged the task force to recommend legislation that would ease the burden of proof needed for a hearing on a discrimination complaint.

"They certainly are deciding you must have a lot of evidence, and I'm not sure you can have enough evidence to win a case," she said.

Stawicki represents Michael W. Ierardi of Manchester, who filed discrimination complaints, initially saying he was harassed on his job and later saying he was fired in retaliation for filing the first complaint. The commission dismissed the complaints without a hearing, and a state appeals court upheld the commission's dismissal.

An average of 1,700 complaints are filed annually with the commission, which pushes each of its investigators to close five cases a month and bases annual salary increases on meeting those standards.

Last week's report raised questions about the fairness of the production standards and blamed stress, lack of advancement and pressure from management to improve performance for a high turnover rate among investigators.

Voter drive snagged again

BRISTOL (AP) — For the second time this year, a mass voter registration drive held in conjunction with a rock concert has stumbled over a section of the state's mail-in registration law.

Volunteers of the Connecticut Public Interest Research group and notaries donating their help registered hundreds of new voters during a Crosby, Stills and Nash concert at Lake Compounce Festive Park Aug. 5.

But officials say the volunteers did not return the cards to either those who filled out the cards or to the notaries, who are the only ones legally authorized to deliver the cards to registrars.

As a result, 386 voters are waiting for confirmation that they can cast ballots in the Nov. 8 general election.

The matter came to light when registrars in Bristol recently began receiving queries from voters who questioned why they had not received confirmation of registration.

A similar snag developed in a voter registration drive in March during a Frank Zappa concert in Hartford.

In the Lake Compounce case, the research group has now been told that local registrars are required to send confirmation to the applicants by Monday to ensure they will be able to vote in November, according to Ellie Klapatch, Bristol's Republican registrar.

ConnPIRG has since scrambled to find lawyers to notarize the cards who could send those cards via express mail to about 45 registrars across the state. If the local registrars can process the applications by Monday, those who registered at Lake Compounce will be able to vote in November.

James Leahy, executive director of ConnPIRG, said Thursday he is optimistic that the cards will be delivered in time for registrars to process them.

Prexy sees revival role for Eastern

WINDHAM (AP) — David G. Carter, Eastern Connecticut State University's new president, says he will work to make the school a force in reviving the economy in northeastern Connecticut and strive to improve the school academically.

"Universities could once pursue scholarship in quiet isolation... but no longer," Carter told about 1,000 people Thursday, when he was officially installed after six months on the job.

"We belong to the world," Carter said. "I see a special role for our university, here in the region."

Carter, 45, took office in April, replacing Charles R. Webb, who had served 18 years as president. A native of Dayton, Ohio, Carter previously worked as an administrator at the University of Connecticut.

He is so popular on campus that students call him "Carterman." He quickly gained students' favor by rejecting an unpopular proposal to deny campus housing to students 23 or older who live in Windham. And he has made a practice of walking through dormitories to speak with students.

Among the community-oriented programs that Carter said would be high priorities are Eastern's early childhood program, small business services, English as a second language program and general education courses.

FBI found guilty of bias

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The FBI discriminates against Hispanics, a federal judge ruled Friday, saying the agency is slow to promote Hispanic agents and assigns them less-desirable jobs.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said the 311 Hispanic agents who sued the FBI "demonstrated a pattern and practice of discrimination relating to conditions of employment and promotions."

Bunton said the issue of damages will be decided in later hearings, possibly beginning in late November.

Attorneys for the agents said the decision could change employment practices in government and private industry.

Kremlin's old guard is out

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin shake-up on Friday promoted Mikhail S. Gorbachev's friends and pushed out the old guard in a quick, unanimous vote that harked back to the power plays of his pre-glasnost predecessors.

Simultaneously, the policy-making Communist Party Central Committee took the first step toward fulfilling the Soviet leader's promise of getting the party out of the day-to-day management of the government.

The decision to eliminate some departments of the party bureaucracy and consolidate others means hundreds, perhaps thousands, of the Soviet Union's top Communist Party bureaucrats will lose their jobs on the powerful staff of the Central Committee.

House passes welfare plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress on Friday completed and sent to the White House the first major welfare overhaul in a half-century, with supporters predicting the bill will help thousands of poor people become responsible and productive parents.

The House passed the Family Support Act 347-53 despite complaints from liberals that it is unfair to welfare recipients and from conservatives that it won't cut the rolls or save taxpayers any money.

President Reagan has said he is pleased with the final form of the bill, which flew through the Senate 96-1 on Thursday.

The five-year, $3.3 billion initiative aims to transform the 53-year-old welfare system from a trap to an opportunity, to offer poor Americans the education, training and services they need to get jobs and support their own children.

Ethics panel probes Wright

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee formally asked the Intelligence Committee on Friday whether Speaker Jim Wright was given classified information on Central Intelligence Agency covert actions in Nicaragua.

The request signaled that the ethics panel, officially called the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, is conducting at least an informal probe into allegations that Wright improperly disclosed classified information when he spoke openly last week about the CIA's activities.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., the senior Republican on the Intelligence Committee, said he was "confident" the committee would cooperate with the request for information. Last week, the Democrat-controlled panel had declined to send the information to ethics, saying no official request had been made.

Korea protest hits Army HQ

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Protesters hurled firebombs into U.S. Army headquarters Friday in an escalating anti-American campaign, U.S. and South Korean authorities said. No damage was reported.

The attack followed an outburst of anti-U.S. sentiment spurred by incidents involving American athletes and news media during the Olympics. The Games, which began Sept. 17, end Sunday.

EARTH SCENES — Mission specialist David Hilmers points a camera toward Earth during Discovery's 18th orbit as pilot Richard Covey and Commander Frederick Hauck circle Friday.

Astronauts fix stuck antenna, avoiding risky walk in space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts, having consigned the world's most sophisticated communications satellite to its 22,300-mile-high outpost, had communications troubles of their own Friday as they whirled around Earth in their stockinged feet.

The problem was a stuck antenna that would have interfered with the closing of the cargo bay doors for re-entry, and the most drastic solution would have required a spacewalk — a risk NASA doesn't want to take on this first post-Challenger flight.

But it ended well when mission specialist David C. Hilmers, following complex instructions from the ground, flipped the switches and turned the dials that parked the antenna inside the bay.

"Houston, it's stowed," said Hilmers.

Mission Control replied that it was breathing a sigh of relief and joked "we can stop our EVA planning."

The response, from space: "Pinky's got his suit on." George D. Nelson, a mission specialist known as Pinky, was designated before the flight as the astronaut who would perform any spacewalk.

A spacewalk — extravehicular activity in space lingo — would have been taken only as a last resort. NASA had the option of commanding a small guillotine to sever the antenna and allow it to become another piece of space junk.

Back at Cape Canaveral, the redesigned booster rockets that powered Discovery toward orbit Thursday were towed into port, and divers who inspected them said they appeared in perfect condition.

The five astronauts were a quiet, businesslike crew as they looked down from their 184-mile perch at interesting ocean currents, observed soil erosion in Mexico caused by Hurricane Gilbert, watched how solutions separate in space and did just plain sightseeing over the blue globe below.

Conversations were confined to essentials, with little banter. But when the antenna refused to move, Commander Frederick H. Hauck offered to help, saying "We'll enjoy using our mechanical talents."

The antenna was a super data-link from shuttle to ground and provided television for half of each orbit. But there were ground stations that could accomplish much of the same thing. When a shuttle flight was troubled by a similarly stuck antenna four years ago, the repair was performed by an astronaut who was taking a spacewalk anyway. No such action was contemplated on this flight.

The crew also was asked to photograph "some of the natural phenomena of the planet Earth" — including Pacific thunderstorms, a volcano lava flow in Ethiopia and coastal erosion damage from the Hurricane Gilbert on the Yucatan Peninsula.

The astronauts all have been in space before and there were none of the gee-whiz expressions that said they appeared in perfect condition.

Back at the launch site, the worrisome booster rockets that carried the shuttle flawlessly at the start of its journey, were towed into port, apparently showing no sign of the leaks that doomed the Challenger 32 months ago.

"The divers report the boosters are in perfect condition," said Rocky Raab, spokesman for booster manufacturer Morton Thiokol.

Since Challenger, the boosters had undergone a major redesign to ensure that the joints between segments would no longer allow hot gases to escape: a problem on nine previous flights and the malfunction that caused the space shuttle's destruction with its loss of seven lives.

The 2½-ton Tracking and Data Relay Satellite released by the crew from Discovery's cargo bay late Thursday, was in its proper orbit after a journey of 22,000 miles, and Mission Control told the crew their launch was "with considerable precision."

"We're there. We're on orbit. We're very, very happy," said Ed Bangsund of Boeing, manufacturer of the rocket stage that sent the satellite to its final orbit.

BURIED ALIVE — Philadelphia firefighters and rescue workers remove the body of a plumber who was killed Friday after he was buried under about eight feet of dirt while working on a sewer pipe. A second worker was also trapped in the cave-in, but his condition was not known.

Congress rushes bills before new fiscal year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress pursued its frantic effort Friday to rush the five remaining 1989 appropriations bills to President Reagan before midnight's start of the new fiscal year, a feat that would reverse decades of plodding budget performances.

But Reagan announced as he returned late Friday from Chicago that he would not hold any signing ceremony at the White House, and he chided Congress for failing to pass all 13 appropriations bills.

"I had hoped that we could mark the end of the 'dog-at-my-homework' era of congressional budgeting," the president told reporters, criticizing Congress for not acting more swiftly. He said he expected Congress to work through the weekend to get the bills approved.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan did not want to sign the bills piecemeal and that he would put his signature on the remaining measures at the same time.

If lawmakers were successful — and if Reagan had signed all of the measures by midnight — it would have marked the first time since 1948 that all 13 spending bills were enacted before the start of the federal fiscal year.

"I hope we will be able to do this continuingly," said House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas. "But history is against us, isn't it?"

The House opened business by approving a $282 billion Defense Department spending measure on a 327-77 vote and sent it to the Senate. The Senate later approved it, but added some provisions which sent the bill back to the House, as both chambers must approve identical bills.

Later in the day, the Senate voted 90-4 in favor of a House-approved $46.6 billion agriculture bill, and sent it to Reagan.

The president signed the seventh appropriations measure into law Friday, a $10.8 billion transportation bill.

The largest remaining stumbling block seemed to be a bill calling for a $3.2 billion budget for the District of Columbia, of which $530 million would be provided from federal coffers. That was stalled over the question of whether the city should be allowed to spend federal or local revenues on abortions. The legislation received voice approval from the House, but its fate in the Senate was uncertain.

Also awaiting final congressional approval were a $14.3 billion foreign aid measure and legislation providing $1.8 billion for Congress' own operating expenses.

If the bills were completed before the stroke of 12, the accomplishment would be largely symbolic because the immediate practical consequences of failure would be almost nil.

Few federal employees work over the weekend. And even without spending legislation in place, essential workers would report, including the military, doctors, air traffic controllers and others. But if all the spending bills are not enacted by Monday, agencies for which money has not been provided would not be able to keep their doors open.

The uncharacteristic rapidity with which the spending measures were being completed this year is largely due to last November's budget summit agreement between Reagan and congressional leaders.

Reagan denies deal made for hostages

CHICAGO (AP) — President Reagan denied Friday that the U.S. government is negotiating a hostage release with Iran, but said his administration is "doing everything we can" to win their release.

Responding to a published report in a Middle East newspaper, which said a deal is in the works possibly as soon as Oct. 7, Reagan told reporters, "We have no direct negotiations, or have we had, with Iran, at any time, in this."

"Certainly there has been no contact between us and the kidnapers," the president said.

There has been a spate of reports in recent weeks indicating the possibility of movement in attempts to liberate nine Americans held captive in Lebanon by pro-Iranian elements.

Reagan was confronted with questions about the latest report, published in the Israeli newspaper, The Nation, when he arrived in Chicago to appear on behalf of Vice President George Bush before an audience of ethnic voters and at a Republican party fund-raiser later in the day.

Sitting at a picnic table for lunch at Wozniak's Casino, Reagan told reporters, "We are doing everything we can to get them back. But these rumors and reports are out about negotiations. All I can say is, they must be coming from Iran, because they're not true."

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley denied the newspaper report without any qualifications. She said: "There have been no such meetings. The story is not true. It is all false."

The Israeli newspaper had reported that a prospective U.S.-Iranian deal would result in the release of five Americans, possibly by Oct. 7, with a subsequent liberation of three other Americans and a Briton, possibly Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, a week later.

A ninth American hostage, Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, 41, a U.N. peacekeeper kidnapped Feb. 17, would not be released because the Iranians told the Americans they did not know his whereabouts, the Nation said.

According to this report, the United States would undertake a host of initiatives after the release had taken place, including restoring diplomatic relations with Tehran, along with economic assistance, and possibly resuming sales of military equipment to Iran.

At the United Nations Friday, Britain announced a resumption of diplomatic ties with Iran. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said any change in the American relationship with Iran required an end to the Iran-Iraq war, an end to terrorism and the release of Americans believed held by pro-Iranian forces in Lebanon.

Aboard Air Force 1 en route to Chicago earlier, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration had no information about the newspaper's report of an assassination attempt of Iranian parliamentary speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, although he said, "We've seen those reports."

Brits say Iran ties to resume

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Britain announced Friday a resumption of full diplomatic ties with Iran based on "mutual respect." It accelerated an improvement in Western relations with the fundamentalist government in Tehran.

But Secretary of State George P. Shultz said any U.S. settlement with Iran required an end to the Iran-Iraq war, an end to terrorism and the release of Americans believed held by pro-Iranian forces in Lebanon.

Iran evidently wants to move toward a more normal position around the world, but "there is no change in the situation as far as the United States and Iran is concerned," Shultz said at a news conference.

The British foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, announced the move after meeting with the Iranian foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati. "Both sides have decided to resume full diplomatic relations on the basis of reciprocity and mutual respect," Howe said.

OPINION

Guns are dividing the races

By Chuck Stone

Both were 14 years old. Both were black. Both were gunned down on the streets of Detroit four days apart.

Oscar (B.B.) Harris was sitting on a Detroit bus when another black youth angrily asked him, "What are you staring at?" An apprehensive Oscar decided to get off the bus. He signaled the bus to stop. As he stood up, the youth shot him.

Shawn Smith was killed near a drug shooting gallery a few days before he was to enter the eighth grade.

Their names won't go down in history like another murdered 14-year-old black boy, Emmett L. Till. But a common denominator of senselessness links all three murders.

Till's murder in Greenwood, Miss., attracted national attention in 1955 after two white men kidnapped him. He had whistled at a white woman. In Detroit, the murders of Harris and Smith have already been reduced to statistical anonymity—the 35th and 36th youths under 17 to be murdered in Detroit this year.

A recent survey revealed that Detroit's children are being killed at more than triple the combined rate for the nation's 10 largest cities. The city that once preened as No. 1 in automobile production is now demeaned as No. 1 in juvenile homicide production.

This orgy in black self-destruction may be one of the major reasons Detroit's two black congressmen, John Conyers Jr. and George W. Crockett Jr., a former judge, are such strong advocates of gun control.

But support for gun control is not unusual among black congressmen.

In the last vote on gun control, known as "the Brady Amendment" (named after President Reagan's press secretary, Jim Brady, who was shot in 1981 during the assassination attempt on Reagan and has never completely recovered), all but one of the 20 voting black members of Congress (95 percent) voted for the proposed seven-day waiting period before a gun could be purchased.

Why do 95 percent of the black members of Congress support gun control, compared to only 44 percent of the white members? Are white members of Congress less humane than black members of Congress?

No, just more vulnerable. The National Rifle Association, a group of Cro-Magnons determined to keep Americans in vigilante slavery, is one of the nation's most savagely effective lobbies. Many white members of Congress can't get elected by the secure margins enjoyed by almost all black members of Congress. A well-funded NRA campaign could easily tip the balance in a close election.

In the black community, the NRA has about as much influence as the Ku Klux Klan, and half as much respect. The results of the NRA's labors are every bit as destructive to the black community as any KKK actions.

The lone black congressman to vote against the recent gun-control measure, Rep. Mike Espy, D-Miss., was obviously responding to constituent pressures.

"The congressman believes that a seven-day waiting period is an intrusion into the private lives of people," explained Karen Hinton, spokeswoman for Espy.

If seven days is an invasion of privacy, would the congressman have voted against a two-day waiting period? Hinton didn't know. "But our mail ran 99 percent against the bill. The calls came from black and white constituents."

Espy's district is about 50-50 white and black. Were the anti-gun-control calls distributed in the same percentage?

Hinton conceded that "for the most part, white people were concerned."

I wasn't surprised. Whites love to buy guns to hunt animals. Blacks buy handguns to hunt themselves. That difference, to which the NRA deliberately turns a blind eye, continues to divide Americans by race.

And hundreds of 14-year-old Oscar Harrises and Shawn Smiths will be murdered until this nation comes to its gun-control senses.

Bush clouds real issues in campaign

By Sarah Overstreet

George Bush would have us think he could make it the law that every child in America—at least, every child in the state of Massachusetts—pledge allegiance to the flag every day in school.

He tells us this practically every time he has an opportunity to discuss his opponent for the presidency, Gov. Michael Dukakis. He tells us how Dukakis doesn't want little children to pledge allegiance to the flag. As proof, he offers up Dukakis' veto of a Massachusetts bill that would have forced kids to pledge allegiance to the flag every day in Massachusetts public schools.

Bush pooh-poohs Dukakis' reasons for his veto: That the Massachusetts Supreme Court advised him the bill was unconstitutional. "I would have found a way to get around it," Bush brags, while calling Dukakis' patriotism into question. "What is it about the Pledge of Allegiance that upsets him so much?"

What is it about believing a bill violates the Constitution that upsets you so much, George? There are so many issues on which you differ from your opponent, differences that give voters much more of an indication of what kind of leader you'd be than whether you'd force kids to pledge allegiance to the flag every morning. You favor a death penalty, he doesn't; you support research on the Strategic Defense Initiative, he doesn't; you want to aid the Contras, he doesn't.

You oppose abortion, he believes it should be a mother's decision; he wants to toughen economic sanctions against South Africa, you oppose any further sanctions; he says he would increase income taxes as a last resort, you promise not to under any circumstances. And there's his furlough program for murderers, for heaven's sake. You could work up all sorts of voter lather with that one.

Yet you keep harping on the pledge issue, an issue Dukakis explained with an answer plausible to me, one who loves nothing better than to pledge allegiance to the flag at covered-dish suppers and sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" at ball games—not because it's law, but because the words well up inside me and rush to get out.

This is America, George. We can't ignore the Constitution, even when we want to. If I had my way, it would also be mandatory that kids stop acting smart alecky to their parents, and never again answer their parents' phone when I'm on the other end by shouting, "Who is this?" But I can't have my way, George. There's the Constitution.

I'm not the first one to suggest this, George, but the argument makes sense: Given all the weighty issues you could be talking about, perhaps you keep returning to the inconsequential matter of whether the government believes he'd be violating the Constitution by signing a bill to make allegiance-pledging mandatory, because you want to play up Dukakis' immigrant heritage. Perhaps Dukakis not only doesn't want little kids to pledge allegiance to the flag, perhaps he doesn't even want to pledge it himself! Perhaps he's rather salute the flag of Greece...

There are issues on which I agree more with you than Dukakis, George, and vice versa. And maybe I'm making too much of your constant sniping on this issue, just as I believe you're making too much of the issue itself. But to me it seems to speak volumes about your measure as a man: The issue is shallow, and it's your favorite.

Both parties recruit from opposing camp

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Celebrity name-dropping is an important part of any presidential campaign, and if the celebrity comes from the other camp, so much the better.

Despite a compelling pitch, the Republicans have had little luck so far in enlisting black movie stars and professional athletes in support of Vice President George Bush.

A few major entertainers such as Lionel Hampton and athletes such as Muhammad Ali have publicly backed Bush. But the totals are far below the campaign's hopes, especially in the ranks of the National Football League and National Basketball Association.

Young black entertainment and sports celebrities were targeted by the GOP as part of a plan to get middle-class yuppie blacks to desert the Democrats. The pitch went something like this:

"Look, you're making money, you've succeeded during the Reagan years. You really are much more middle-class yuppie Republican than working class-Democratic."

But GOP insiders have confided that the appeal has failed for several reasons. One is the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Many young blacks, rich or poor, would be loath to desert his party.

For another, GOP recruiters are having a difficult time getting past the black stars' agents. The agents know that any political stand can be controversial. The stars risk alienating those who disagree with their position.

One GOP bigwig grumped to us that Hollywood's directors still tend to be liberal, and a performer's support of Bush might mean a loss of good acting assignments down the road.

Black sports and entertainment figures also share the same feelings that most other blacks have—that the Democrats have done more over the years for blacks than the Republicans. They also resent the Reagan administration's poor record on civil rights issues.

Meanwhile, Democrats are courting a celebrity who may be equally hard to catch—Surgeon General C.

Everett Koop. His is a big fish who could bring with him an unusual mix of voters.

Koop's appointment does not expire until 1989, but when administrations change, the top officials all offer their resignations as a matter of form. Some Democratic strategists think they should publicly offer to keep Koop on the job should Michael Dukakis be elected.

The ingenious Democratic reasoning goes his way: Koop's steadfastly humane stand on dealing with AIDS victims has made him popular with the hard-working gay political interest groups, most of them liberal. His attitude against abortions has also made him a darling of the conservatives.

Koop's outspokenness on such matters as the dangers of tobacco and the health hazards of pollution have given him a reputation for integrity among voters of all persuasions—a position unique in the Reagan administration.

By welcoming such a Republican, the Democrats could claim that they are willing to accept diversity in the interest of national welfare.

One Health and Human Services Department source told us that Koop, through intermediaries, has been subtly and informally approached about the possibility of staying on. His reaction so far, our sources say, is negative but not final. A spokesman for Koop had no comment on that report.

Chumming up to India

Some Pentagon officials are taking credit for the Reagan administration's forging of new ties with India. Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci has offered high-tech military equipment to India, in part to keep the huge country from turning to the Soviet Union. Carlucci recently approved the transfer of a sophisticated gyroscope to be a key component in India's new lightweight combat aircraft, which is also being developed with U.S. help. India also is buying American frigate engines and rocket radar systems and is shopping for more. The U.S. strategy is to help India become a major regional power by facilitating its independence.

Lucky to have Thompson

To the Editor:

I don't usually write letters to newspapers outside of the greater New Britain area where I live, but I'm making an exception in this case.

State Rep. Jack Thompson's performance on the Human Services Committee (which I chair) was so extraordinary that I think the people in Manchester should know about it. Rep. Thompson was not only sensitive to the needs of the disabled, to foster parents, to troubled children, and to other disadvantaged people, he also took the initiative in helping us carefully analyze our responses to those needs.

For example, Rep. Thompson arranged for an expert to come to the Capitol and to run a workshop on how to develop programs that were both effective and efficient.

Jack Thompson's willingness to study carefully as well as his genuine concern made him an invaluable member of the Human Services Committee and of the Legislature. Manchester is lucky to have him.

Pope upholds priesthood ban in apostolic letter on women

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II on Friday ruled out the priesthood for women but condemned sexual discrimination in a major teaching that will shape the debate on women in the Roman Catholic Church.

"Mulieris Dignitatem," Latin for "On the Dignity of Women," attempts to define women's nature and role in the church and society.

The document concludes that men and women are equal but fundamentally different and thus play different roles. Women, it says, are formed by maternal qualities.

John Paul defines virginity, for example, as "spiritual motherhood."

While highly theoretical, the document provides a framework for specific issues the church is expected to tackle in coming years, such as the positions and influence women can have in the church structure.

The ban on women priests and deacons has been a source of considerable tension between the Vatican and Catholics in the United States and western Europe.

The 120-page document is an apostolic letter, which means it will be presented to Roman Catholics as church teaching but is not an infallible pronouncement.

"Here the Holy Father ... is offering us the essential and inescapable facts and principles that you need to sensibly debate the role and mission of women," Archbishop Jan Schotte said.

"It's not new in terms of content but it's new in bringing together the teaching of Scriptures and the whole tradition of the church in a document that speaks to the theme of women now," he said.

Schotte was secretary-general of last year's worldwide synod of bishops on the role of the laity. The question of women played a major role at the synod.

Vatican officials said the document expresses the pope's beliefs shaped by years of reflection on the subject of women.

Much of the document consists of a strong defense of women's equality with men and praise for their contributions. The pope equates sexual discrimination and domination over women with sin and condemns men who fail to take responsibility for their sexual acts.

He advises fathers:

"It is the woman who 'pays' directly for this shared generation (of a child) ... It is therefore necessary that the man be fully aware that in their shared parenthood he owes a special debt to the woman. No program of 'equal rights' between women and men is valid unless it takes this fact fully into account."

But the pope stated that women and men have fundamentally different characters.

"The personal resources of femininity are certainly no less than the resources of masculinity; they are merely different," the document said.

"Hence a woman, as well as a man, must understand her 'fulfillment' as a person, her dignity and vocation, on the basis of these resources."

The pope links femininity to "maternal" characteristics such as sensitivity to human beings and a sense of responsibility for others.

A woman's vocation, he said, lies in devoting herself to other people — either through motherhood or "spiritual motherhood," in which a woman chooses long-term virginity to focus on a mission of service.

Open house set Wednesday

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Jeanette Cave
Senior Center Director

What better place to be on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. than at the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center. The center's open house will offer information about the many programs and services for seniors.

The center has scheduled a variety of events, including an appearance by Jeffrey Cole on WFSB-TV (a Manchester resident), demonstrations of exercise, square dancing, hobby shop and arts and crafts classes, nutritional counseling, blood pressure screening, and a drawing for a free trip for two to Radio City Music Hall for the Christmas show.

It's a good time for those not familiar with the center to tour the building and meet the members, volunteers and staff. Booths will be set up so you can pick up information and ask questions about programs.

Transportation will be available for anyone needing a ride. Just call us 24 hours in advance to get a ride.

A free lunch that meets the dietary guidelines of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services will be available. It will be a low-sodium, low-fat, low-cholesterol meal served with 1 percent low-fat milk. (Decaffeinated coffee and tea are also available.)

Senior Citizens

On Friday, the center will revert to a call-in reservation system for Thursday meals. We have listened to the many people who say that it is hard for them to get to the center to buy a ticket in advance. Once you call for your reservation, no later than Tuesday at noon, your name will be put on a list. When you arrive at the center, you can buy your ticket in the library. However, you must have made your reservation by phone.

The staff has planned a good array of entertainment and informative programs for your benefit and we would like to see more people take advantage of this.

Please note the dates of the following programs:

Oct. 23 walk will help feed hungry throughout the world

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Area Conference of Churches.

By Nancy Carr
Executive Director

The worldwide and global dimensions of hunger are staggering. More than one billion people are chronically hungry. Between 13 million and 18 million people die each year because of hunger and starvation.

Deaths resulting from hunger and starvation number 13 million to 18 million each year, of which 9 million to 14 million are children under 5 years of age; 35,000 die each day, of which 26,000 are children under 5 years of age; 24 die each minute, of which 18 are children under 5 years of age.

More people died from hunger in two days than were killed instantly by the Hiroshima bomb. More people died from hunger in the past two years than were killed in both World Wars. More people died from hunger in the last seven days than died in China's earthquake in 1976 which killed 242,000 people.

In the United States, 35.3 million citizens (15 percent of the total population) live below the poverty line of $10,176 for a family of four. Only 19.8 million receive food stamps. Approximately 20 million citizens may be hungry at least some period each month.

More American children die of poverty than from traffic accidents and suicides combined. Over a five year period, more American children die from poverty than the total of battle deaths in the Vietnam War; one in five children in the United States is poor (20.7 percent). More than two of every five black children are poor (43.6 percent) and two of every five Hispanic children are poor (40.3 percent). Poverty in the United States is not just in the cities. The rural poor are increasing in the country, from 9.4 million in 1978 to 13.4 million in 1983.

Between 43 percent and 48 percent of the rural population in the United States receives less than 67 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance of iron, vitamin A and vitamin C. In 1983, rural residents received less than one-sixth as much in general assistance as the metropolitan poor.

Such statistics overwhelm us. It seems impossible to do anything about such large scale suffering.

On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 23, Manchester residents will respond in a very personal style. They will be stepping out on a 10 kilometer "Crop Walk Against Hunger."

The funds raised during the walk will be sent to agencies in more than 70 countries to be used for supporting and developing food production and the development of the water resources essential in the battle against hunger.

One-fourth of the dollars raised by walkers will go to a local project — the Shepherd's Place soup kitchen, which provides a hot dinner and bag supper to some 40 men and women Monday through Friday and supper and breakfast to the homeless at Samaritan Shelter, Manchester's emergency shelter.

The CROP WALK is being sponsored by the Manchester Area Conference of Churches and local churches and organizations. If your Girl Scout troop, women's circle, service club has not joined this community effort to reach out to eliminate hunger, please call 649-2093 today for information on how to participate.

Thank you

Our thanks to good friend Lou Kocsis of Lincoln Engraving who has made and donated interior signs for all the entrances, exits, bathrooms and even a no-smoking sign for the newly opened Shepherd's Place; and to those who have supplied the Samaritan Shelter with everything from food to clothing and personal items during May and June: Maureen Gustafson, Roger

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
by Eugene Brewer

If you believe in eternal life after death you almost certainly have wrestled with this question: "Can I be certain that should I die today I would be saved eternally?" Many are haunted by this question because of an ungodly life. But others who seek to live good lives also are burdened by the question.

We have been taught against the danger of boastfulness and conceit, so we avoid claims of certainty. Another cause of our tentativeness is a reliance on our personal goodness and achievements for salvation. And we are ever aware of our shortcomings. Therefore, we think it would be presumptuous to feel fully assured of our salvation.

But God expects his children to enjoy a certainty about eternity. John wrote to believers that they "may know that you have eternal life," 1 John 5:10-13. Those who truly believe need never doubt their eternal state.

Galloping her way to Olympic gold

Manchester equestrian on her way to victory

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

At age 8, during her first year competing in horse shows across the state, Angela Fiengo had so many ribbons and awards strung along her bedroom walls that her mother decided to make her a quilt filled with them.

The 16-year-old Manchester girl — who has since been awarded more than 500 ribbons and another 50 or more trophies — recently won a 4-foot tall trophy for taking first place in the Junior Jumper Perpetual Challenge at the Woodstock Fair Open Horse Show on Labor Day Weekend.

The huge trophy, which Fiengo considers her "pride and joy," can stay in the young rider's possession only if she continues to win the top spot in the event for the next three years.

But Fiengo — who is third in the state in the Connecticut Open Jumper Championship — said she has complete confidence that she'll be able to keep the award.

She and her horse, the Reverend ("Homer") Jack, ran a reported 8.7 seconds to complete a course that included four, 4-foot wide solid wood jumps. And although it was Fiengo's slowest recorded time ever, she broke the show's record for that event.

"I was in shock when I won it," Fiengo said. "It was a fantastic feeling."

Among her several hundred awards, Fiengo received blue ribbons in the 1985 Quarter Horse Circuit Western World Championships, the 1987 Maiden Equitation Championships, the 1987 Hartford County Junior Horse Show, and lists and lists of others.

"It's very rare that she doesn't win some sort of ribbon," said her mother, Sharron. "And usually, if it's not a first or at least a second, we're surprised."

During the show at Woodstock, Fiengo was offered $30,000 for her horse, which she paid about $3,500 for three years ago.

"I'll put him out to the pasture and retire him before I'll sell him," she said. "He's my little baby, part of the family. He's the kind of horse you want to go up to and pinch his cheeks and cuddle."

Fiengo's father, Ronald, recently gave her an 18-foot, two-horse trailer it took him two years to build. The trailer allows Fiengo to sleep near her horse when the team travels to horse shows across the state.

"(The trailer) has everything Homer needs," she said. "My dad even asked him if he wanted a sun roof. But that would probably scare him too much."

Fiengo's latest goal is to win an award at the five-day Children's Services Horse Show held in May in Springfield, where she would be competing against Olympic riders. Her trainer, Dani Jacques of Woodland Farms in Suffield, has advised her to wait another year before attempting to compete in the show. Fiengo, however, said she's going to "go for it" anyway.

"I know I can do it," she said. "I'm kind of a daredevil. Besides, I can't wait to see the look on those Olympic people's faces when Homer and I beat the socks off them."

In the meantime, Fiengo, who trains six days a week and rides her horse freestyle on her day off, said she is going to continue training for the 1991 Junior Olympics.

Wood makes a comeback

By Andy Long
The Associated Press

Wood is enjoying a tremendous resurgence in popularity as a design element. This is especially true in the case of hardwood doors, particularly paneled doors made of mahogany and oak.

Choosing unfinished hardwood doors can save you money if you are willing to take the time and trouble to do the finishing yourself. This usually involves a four-to-five-step process for exterior doors and a three-to-four-step process for interior doors. Some companies that sell unfinished hardwood doors include complete instructions for finishing the type of door you select.

If you want a mahogany door, be sure it has a classic ribbon-striped grain and a natural red tint. If you are choosing an oak door, look for the characteristic swirling grain that distinguishes top quality. Examine the door panels closely. They should be squared, matched as to color and grain, and all joints should fit precisely with no gaps. Surfaces should be smooth and uniformly sanded with no bumps or ridges. Ask about moisture content. Larry Bennett, president of Bennett Industries, North American importers of hardwood doors from Spain, says the moisture content should be 7 to 8 percent, similar to that of fine furniture, a percentage that should make the doors stable and durable. Doors from a reliable manufacturer will have been sanded to a smooth, satiny surface on all parts, including difficult-to-sand molding and panel rise areas. This makes the surfaces ready to receive the stain and final finish.

In exterior doors, leaded glass panels have become a popular addition to the entryway system. Opaque, water glass, glue chip and beveled glass are available as components in many stock pane designs. Glass panels in the door itself and in fixed panels aside the main door let in natural light and offer the visitor a bright welcome. When choosing leaded glass panels, examine the "caming" or metalwork that holds the glass in place. It should be uniform, with straight lines and clean joints.

Triple-glazed units in which the decorative glass panels are encased within two other panels of clear, tempered glass are another assurance of top quality. It offers excellent insulation and low maintenance, and is safer because tempered glass will not shatter into small pieces. If you are handy, you can install the door yourself. But keep in mind that a door made of mahogany or oak is heavier than a softwood door. Be sure the hinges are installed correctly so the door swings freely and meets the door jamb and locking mechanism precisely. Because of the weight of the door, consider using solid brass or brass-plated hinges. A distributor who has everything in stock can get together a complete package that will include, besides the door, solid brass hinges, triple-glazed glass panels with matched brass caming, possibly sidelights and transoms, and a solid brass mortise.

At many building product dealers, h's are a stock item, so you should be able to find samples on display, as well as cutaway sections that show how the door is constructed. Look for informative literature and knowledgeable sales help. One item sometimes overlooked but important is an assurance of quick delivery from a local stocking distributor. And ask about the manufacturer's warranty, checking with your dealer to make sure the door manufacturer has a solid "track record."

Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful material on a variety of subjects in Andy Long's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this paper of Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

Rose leave 'fingerprints'

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

Rose leaves can be "finger-printed" so that each of the thousands of rose plant varieties may be specifically identified. This will protect patents for the $44 million annual rose industry.

"For the first time, we can now accurately distinguish one rose variety from another," said Charles R. Krause, U.S. Department of Agriculture plant pathologist. Heretofore, the only way to identify varieties was to rely on a specialist's opinion.

Krause magnified a rose leaf 10,000 to 20,000 times with a scanning electron microscope that projects onto a screen an electronic image that can be photographed. The highly magnified image shows that openings in the leaf, called stomata, have different shapes depending on plant variety.

The 7-year research fingerprinting project at the U.S.D.A. Nursery Crops Laboratory at Delaware, Ohio, should aid in patent application and patent infringement law suits, Krause said.

MOTORCYCLISTS HELP — Motorcyclists, often portrayed as damaging terrain, have volunteered to help maintain trails and do other conservation work in the

Weeders Guide

National Forest Service system. The American Motorcyclist Association, which has 20 million members, has signed an agreement with the Forest Service — the first nationwide pact made as part of the "Take Pride in America" program.

Forest Service Chief F. Dale Robertson said he hoped the agreement would encourage millions of trail-bikers to help enhance the more than 15,000 miles of trails that are open to motorized vehicles in national forests. Motorcyclists interested should contact area National Forest Service offices.

The "Take Pride in America" program promotes the stewardship of natural resources and encourages safe and proper land use.

CROP-PROTECTING MOLD — Scientists are fermenting good molds so that they multiply, putting them in powders, sprays or pellets and returning them to the soil to attack disease molds that can jeopardize farm and garden harvests.

George Papavizas, a plant pathologist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has been identifying beneficial molds in the "soil war." He says crops succumb to some 50 kinds of soil molds and a few types of bacteria. About $4 billion worth of crops are lost yearly, never making it to market, he said.

The scientists envision a farmer or gardener selecting a good mold to attack a specific fungal disease of crops. A company would package and sell the mold, for example, in non-toxic pellets.

"Safe, non-polluting disease control sometimes lasts for several seasons," Papavizas says of tests at the Beltsville, Md., research center. He reported reduction of diseases in tests on potatoes, beans, onions, lettuce and on livestock foraging plants and oil seed crops.

CHEMICAL SCISSORS — Plants may regulate certain growth aspects through enzymes that work like "chemical scissors," says Daniel Cosgrove, a biologist at Penn State University.

"If we can eventually identify these enzymes," says Cosgrove, "perhaps they can be used as chemical pruners, for example, to produce plants with optimal form, or as plant accelerators to produce food or fiber plants more rapidly."

The price of a man's haircut ranges from $7.48 in Dallas to $16.21 in Milan, Italy.

Tax Adviser

QUESTION: Can I deduct the tax on my sister's cottage on my return? I paid them.
M.S., ROCHESTER, N.Y.

ANSWER: Generally, you can deduct only property taxes that are imposed on property you own.

QUESTION: I overlooked an earnings statement from last year, that should have been included in my income tax return. It was buried in my cooking recipes. It works out that I will now have a much larger tax refund. Where do I begin?
S.N., AKRON, OHIO.

ANSWER: You will have to file IRS Form 1040-X, Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return. Any additional income and related withholding tax will have to be reported on this form. Follow the instructions carefully and you should be able to prepare the form yourself.

QUESTION: Are any of the legal costs stemming from my divorce deductible? I just got a huge bill from my attorney.
P.P., BOISE, IDAHO.

ANSWER: You certainly may deduct costs for tax advice, if the amount is determined in a reasonable way. You also may have legal expenses necessary to collect taxable alimony. Because you pay tax on this income, you can deduct these legal costs as an expense necessary to produce taxable income. Ask your attorney to prepare a detailed invoice identifying these items.

QUESTION: Is there a certain amount of income tax that has to be withheld from my salary so I will not be penalized by the IRS?

D.I., FORT WAYNE, IND.

ANSWER: For 1988, you are required to ante up at least 90 percent of your tax liability on a pay-as-you-go basis so you won't be penalized for underpayment. If your total tax bill is less than $500, you won't be penalized. Also, keep in mind, as long as your tax withheld during 1988 equals your 1987 tax liability, you are excused from paying an estimated tax, and you will not incur a penalty no matter how much extra income you earn or owe.
P.L., KALAMAZOO, MICH.

QUESTION: Will I receive a statement for tax withheld from my dividends?
P.L., KALAMAZOO, MICH.

ANSWER: If tax is withheld from your dividend income, the payer will give you Form 1099-DIV at the end of the year. This form will indicate the amount withheld.

QUESTION: Our son is a healthy and happy baby of two months. Is his diaper service considered a medical deduction? How about my birth control pills?
J.R., TRENTON, N.J.

ANSWER: A little bit of both. The answer to your diaper situation will not be to your liking. It boils down to a "dirty" no. Your birth control pills are deductible if you can exceed the 7½-percent minimum allowance for deducting medical expenses, and if you can itemize your deductions on Schedule A of Form 1040.

'Pig in the python' factor will sink Social Security

Sylvia Porter

"Even in the best of circumstances, Social Security has a date with bankruptcy in about 2017," says Dr. Carolyn Weaver of the Washington-based American Enterprise Institute.

"We're facing a future that is going to be horrible for all of us," predicts Richard Lamm, former governor of Colorado. "We're spending all we have, then borrowing to spend more. We're deeply in debt, with no way out," asserts Rep. Jim Moody, a Wisconsin Democrat. "Our Children will be burdened with our debt." One of three Americans now living was born between 1946 and 1964. They are collectively called the baby boomers.

Demographers call them the "pig in the python," because on demographic charts they resemble a huge meal recently eaten by one of the giant snakes. But levity about the baby boom stops there. As this disproportionate segment of the population grows older, unprecedented changes will take place in our national life.

Right now, the buy-now, pay-later baby boom generation is supporting relatively few retirees. But that will all change in about 25 years. The Social Security system, which will have a huge surplus by the mid-1990s, will see that all consumed.

"It will be a crisis even if Congress doesn't go ahead and spend the money, which would be a first," says Weaver.

The problem is this: The baby boom was followed by a baby bust. Now, while the baby boom is at work, many people are paying into Social Security, while relatively few are drawing from it.

But just as the baby boom caused the construction of new schools — and later flooded the marketplace with new, skilled workers, the boomers will one day retire.

This will result in a huge drain on the system. Social Security will move rapidly into negative flow, and there will be fewer people to support it.

Nor can workers count on company pensions. The U.S. Comptroller General points out that in the Air Force there are more retired than active officers. Most big companies are committed to pensions in excess of their net worth.

It will be a topsy-turvy society. Unusual financial arrangements can be expected. "We can expect things like reverse mortgages," says Princeton Prof. Use Binikami. "That's when people pay off their homes, then the bank starts sending them money. When they die, the bank gets the home." Difficult medical choices will have to be made. "It is becoming possible to keep almost anyone alive almost forever," says Paul Hewitt of Americans for Generational Equity. "But no one will be able to afford it."

Public facilities will be stressed. "We're already behind in many technological areas," observes Dr. Simon Ramos of the California Institute of Technology. "Our roads and bridges and buildings are falling into disrepair."

Can anything be done? Yes. But it may require that a generation drastically alter its ways.

"We have to learn to save for our future, because those savings may be the only thing putting food in our mouths just a few years down the road," says Dr. Michael Boskin of Stanford University. Ramos adds that we must also

Social Security

QUESTION: A co-worker asked me if I was "fully insured" for Social Security retirement benefits, but I wasn't sure how to answer him. How can I find out if I am fully insured?

ANSWER: You are fully insured for Social Security retirement benefits when you have earned credits for a certain amount of work under Social Security. To attain fully insured status for retirement benefits, one credit is required for each year since 1950, up to a maximum of 40 credits. For individuals retiring in 1988, 37 credits (or 9¼ years of work) is required to be eligible. For 1989, the number of credits needed will be 38 (or 9½ years of work.) From 1991 on, everyone will need 40 credits, or 10 years, of work to have fully insured status.

QUESTION: I have been receiving Social Security disability benefits for over two years. However, I have been told that I must come to the Social Security office because of a review of my disability. Can't my physician send in a statement saying that my condition has not changed?

ANSWER: Your physician will be asked to provide medical invest in the nation's infrastructure, and in education. Only through advanced technological development will the baby bust be able to finance a nation burdened by retired baby boomers — and that requires much higher educational achievement than the country now enjoys.

We must learn to take care of ourselves, says Sen. David Durenburger, a Republican from Minnesota. "The idea that we can mistreat our bodies and then expect the government to pay for our care and repair is a thing of the past."

Dr. John Makin of the American Enterprise Institute adds, "We can't just be couch potatoes, then decide at age 65 to fix ourselves up. We can't afford it individually or collectively."

Peter Peterson, former Commerce Department secretary, says the first step should be a consumption tax. "Nothing else will do as much to encourage savings and to discourage spending beyond our means," he believes. It is the opinion of Dr. Lawrence Summers of Harvard that, "It's not a matter of if, but when."

Peterson warns, "We have a choice: we can face it now, while it's a hue, looming problem. Or we can wait until it's a crisis approaching a disaster, and try to fix things then."

evidence about your condition. People who are receiving Social Security disability checks must have their case reviewed every so often to determine whether they are still disabled and thus entitled to continue receiving Social Security checks. This review is done by a group of disability specialists in your state. As part of their evaluation, they require current medical evidence. You may also be asked to undergo a special examination or test. However, Social Security will pay for these special tests. If the team of specialists finds that you are still disabled, your disability checks will continue. However, if they determine that your disability has improved to the point where you can perform substantial gainful work, your checks will continue for a three month adjustment period (the last month of disability, plus two more months) and then stop.

QUESTION: Whenever I receive medical care, I always show my Medicare card. I seem to have lost my card. How can I get a replacement?

ANSWER: You should call your Social Security office to get a replacement Medicare card.

Here's the latest on TSS

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I've worn tampons for about two years. I change every four hours and wear a pad at night. Still, I'd like to know if using tampons can cause any complications other than TSS?

Kinsey Report

June M. Reinisch, Ph.D.

DEAR READER: I'm glad you're carefully following recommended procedures in your use of tampons.

Despite the fact that tampons have been in use for years, the problem of Toxic Shock Syndrome was identified only a few years ago.

Researchers have not pinpointed any one cause for the emergence of TSS, but some blame the creation of highly absorbent tampons in the late 1970s. Women were able to wear them longer, thus permitting this particular bacterial problem in the vagina.

While tampons have been blamed in most cases of TSS, the risk of contracting it is quite low. (About one in 20,000 women during menstrual flow. The odds drop to about one in 100,000 at other times.)

It's not unusual for women to experience another problem with tampon use — vaginal infection.

Some women, especially at the end of their period when menstrual flow is light, will forget to remove a tampon. Bacteria can form, changing the delicate balance of vaginal flora, and causing an infection to begin.

Often, the only symptom of a forgotten tampon is a foul-smelling discharge. This will usually disappear once the tampon is removed. If it does not or other symptoms of vaginal infection appear (such as itching or soreness), consult a gynecologist.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: I am 40 years old. During my first marriage, even when things went badly, I was orgasmic — although I had to reach orgasm through my own movements during intercourse.

For four years of celibate life, I used a vibrator to achieve orgasm. For three years now, I have had a lovely marriage.

I become aroused, but I can no longer have an orgasm during intercourse no matter what I do. My husband would be happy to do anything he could, but I have no idea where to begin. It is as if the vibrator has ruined my ability to have an orgasm naturally. How can I restore my orgasmic capacity?

DEAR READER: You should consult a sex therapist to help you and your husband sort out what is happening and to suggest various techniques for improving the situation. That professional can also determine whether you have had any physical changes over the last few years or take any medications which might affect your ability to achieve orgasm. For example, some women begin to experience the side effects of declining estrogen many years before the last period (called the menopause), and one side effect can be a loss of genital responsiveness.

It's important to know that no two couples interact in exactly the same way, so that different movements or positions may be needed with your second husband. Also, one partner does not "give" the other orgasms; each partner is responsible for his or her own orgasms and must keep trying new approaches and communicating to the partner what is pleasing and what is not.

The reason I suggest a sex therapist help with this process is that constant monitoring of one's own responses or a partner's responses during sex can itself block the perception of sensations necessary for full arousal and orgasm.

Some clinicians do feel that vibrators can sometimes cause difficulty when an individual becomes used to the more intense stimulation of the vibrator. Half of all women need extra manual stimulation during intercourse to have orgasms (having orgasms this way, instead of from penetration alone, is also considered "natural"). The sex therapist can suggest techniques to add additional stimulation during intercourse, from either your hand, your husband's hands or the vibrator.

DR. REINISCH is director of the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction, Indiana University-Bloomington.

Reasons for X-ray tingling

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am writing to give another plausible explanation for the "warm and tingling" feeling some people experience during an X-ray examination.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

First, there are people who can feel the warmth that is generated from the collimator light, the visible beam of light that enables the technician to "focus" the X-ray machine prior to taking a picture. If the part to be X-rayed is covered, the person no longer feels the heat.

Second, during most radiologic procedures, a device called a "reciprocating bucky" is used. This is made up of a tray that holds the film beneath a grid. The grid is a metallic board with strips of lead to decrease scatter radiation. During X-ray exposure, the bucky vibrates in order to eliminate "grid lines;" this could cause tingling.

Finally, during dental X-rays, parts of the machine vibrate. Since the tip of the machine lies against the cheek, people who experience a vibration of the tube housing may incorrectly attribute the sensation to X-ray radiation.

In none of these situations is the patient feeling X-ray radiation.

DEAR READER: Thank you for your perceptive comments. Perhaps your explanations will alleviate some patients' anxieties.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A year ago I suffered pretty major injuries in a car accident. Before, I was never sick. Now, I'm in constant pain, depressed all the time, and cry at the drop of a hat. Am I nuts, or could my depression be due to the accident?

DEAR READER: Symptoms such as yours are common after serious injuries. In fact, post-traumatic stress reactions may occur after a variety of life-threatening situations. Aside from the pain, discomfort and disability that result from physical injury, patients may suffer from emotional ups and downs, forgetfulness, lack of concentration, depression, sudden attacks of anger, loss of stamina, and feelings of unwelness. In most patients, these symptoms regress with time.

You are not nuts. I strongly urge you to address these symptoms with your doctor. He or she may wish to prescribe medicine, such as pain relievers and anti-depressants, to help you get through this difficult time. For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, "Living With Chronic Pain."

Poem causes hunter to put away his gun

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: For years, I used to shoot birds — just for sport. I am enclosing the poem that convinced me to give up that sport. Some people may think the poem is "corny," but it had a powerful effect on me.

I am across it in the Chronicle, in Crested Butte, Colo. It was written by Lem Ward Crisfield, M.D.

DISARMED IN WISCONSIN

A HUNTER'S POEM
A hunter shot a flock of geese
That flew within his reach.
Two were stopped in their rapid flight

And fell on the sandy beach.
The male bird lay at the water's edge
And just before he died
He faintly called to his wounded mate
And she dragged herself to his side.

She bent her head and crooned to him
In a way distressed and wild
Caressing her one and only mate

As a mother would a child,
Then covering him with her broken wing
And gasping with failing breath
She laid her head against his breast

A feeble honk... then death.
This story is true though crudely told
I was the man in this case.
I stood knee deep in snow and cold
And the hot tears burned my face.

I buried the birds in the sand where they lay
Wrapped in my hunting coat
And I threw my gun and belt in the bay
When I crossed in the open boat.
Hunters will call me a right poor sport

And scoff at the thing I did.
But that day something broke in my heart
And shoot again? God forbid!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old boy and a sophomore in high school. I have many friends and I recently heard a rumor about one I care for. Someone told me that he is homosexual. I really don't want to be swayed by rumors, but I don't know how to ask him if it's true.

I have nothing against gay men, but I don't want to make the mistake of giving him the idea that I am interested. What should I do?

TROUBLED IN TUCSON

DEAR TROUBLED: In answer to your question, I will tell you what not to do: Don't ask him any questions concerning his sexuality, don't believe rumors — and never repeat them.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 75-year-old widow. My husband died last year, leaving me fairly comfortable, but not rich.

I have five children and five grandchildren. Three of my children have children, and two have none by choice, and I am reasonably certain that they will never have any.

Do you think I should distribute my estate equally among my five children? Or should the three with children receive more? All my children are equally dear to me, and my grandchildren have done much to brighten my life.
What would you do if you were in my situation?

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: I would leave each of my children an equal amount. I would then leave each of my grandchildren an equal amount.

Astrograph

Oct. 2, 1988

Constructive changes are in the offing in the year ahead and several old, unproductive habits will be broken. The transformation will greatly enhance your chances for success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to achieve your objectives today, you will need the good will and cooperation of others. Don't do anything rash that could deprive you of their support. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It might not be a smart move today to serve as peace-maker between two dissenting factions. There's a possibility you could catch it from both ends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't do anything today that could earn the scorn of companions — such as altering plans to placate your needs but not theirs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) "Let the majority rule today" should be your credo. Things that are for the good of the group will bring harmony; divisiveness will invite dissension.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If your attitude is negative today, tasks that you normally handle with relative ease could turn into real headaches. Don't make life tougher than it is.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to be discriminating today regarding your associations. If you get involved with someone who has a bad reputation, it could reflect on you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your emotions become too dominant today, it could cause you to behave unattractively. Let your common sense and logic take precedence over feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your first thoughts might not be your best today. Be careful that you do not jump to conclusions. Take time to assess critical situations from all angles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to keep your financial affairs in good order today, prudent management will be required. Don't let your extravagant inclinations lead you astray.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In order to get others to do your bidding today, you will first have to set the proper example. If you are too assertive or demanding, it will only create friction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Sometimes it's wise to keep what you know to yourself and this could be one of those days. If you feel you must confide in someone, be sure it is a person you can trust.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take into consideration the desires and needs of others today. If you attempt to manipulate people, you could be the one who will suffer.

Opening lead: ♠ 10

West had no obvious lead. His choice of the trump 10 was won by declarer, who promptly drew a second round. At trick three, declarer lost a trick to West's queen of hearts. The plan was to lose the three top hearts and eventually discard one of dummy's losers on the fourth heart. The spade finesse might even be taken for a possible overtrick.

When West switched to the six of spades, South decided to finesse on the theory that he could never win two spades unless the finesse won. That was the end of declarer. East won the king of spades and switched to diamonds, leaving South short of time. By the time South set up a heart trick, the defenders had established and cashed a diamond for down one.

South had erred in a typically human fashion. He'd been greedy. Had South gone up with the ace of spades, he would have been able to get his heart trick in time to use it. True, West might have had the king of spades, but that would have produced a single 20-point overtrick. Playing the ace of spades guaranteed the full value of a part-score. Playing the queen of spades was not a percentage investment.

South had the last word: "If the defense had led spades or diamonds, I could never have made three clubs."

Greed is the culprit

By James Jacoby

South did well in the bidding by not pushing too hard with his 18 points. When North raised clubs, South made a game-try by bidding two hearts, hoping North could bid no-trump. Since North had a minimum for his raise, he signed off in three clubs.

A family on the run

RUNNING ON EMPTY (PG-13) Sidney Lumet is a meat-and-potatoes filmmaker. Others may bring a dazzling signature style to their work; Lumet's best films ("Prince of the City," "Serpico," "Dog Day Afternoon") tell powerful stories with a conviction that overrides any stylistic shortcomings.

Working from a thoughtful script by Naomi Foner, Lumet presents a generational father-son conflict in this study of '60s-style radicalism forced to stay underground in the '80s. Its protagonists are a family of four perpetually on the lam: The father (Judd Hirsch) and mother (Christine Lahti) made the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List 15 years earlier for taking part in the bombing of a government-sponsored napalm factory. Determined to keep the family together, the parents move from place to place with their two sons, constantly changing identities to elude the authorities.

Now the older son, Danny (River Phoenix), wants to go to Juilliard to study piano. To his dad, this is heresy: It will break up the family and initiate Danny into the elitist bourgeois culture that the family has always opposed.

True to erratic form, Lumet lets some scenes drag and other misfire. And he falls to convince us that Danny's gifts as a pianist are really as prodigious as others say. Yet the movie resonates. A post-birthday-dinner scene of the family dancing to James Taylor's "Fire and Rain" is more tonic and touching in a '60s-meets-'80s way than it has any right to be.

Lumet handles the younger members of the cast with special subtlety. As the precocious daughter of Danny's music teacher, and Danny's subsequent girlfriend, Martha Plimpton is a fetching blend of flirt and rebel. River Phoenix continues to show that he is the most instinctual of young actors. Meanwhile, Lahti shines in an achingly poignant scene where she is reunited with her estranged father over lunch in a posh Manhattan restaurant. GRADE: *****

MOON OVER PARADOR (PG-13) Paul Mazursky may be our most charming movie satirist — witness "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" and "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." But Mazursky has had his follies, like "Tempest," and like this comedy about role-playing — a subject he previously handled with quiet wit in "Next Stop, Greenwich Village."

Watching this fanciful portrait of a struggling, ambitious New York actor (Richard Dreyfuss) who fulfills himself when he is hired to impersonate a recently deceased Latin American dictator, one is never in doubt that the picture is the product of talent. Yet the comedy doesn't blossom, and the actors seem stranded on the screen — their hard work looks suspiciously like mugging.

Like "Tempest," the movie has a male-menopausal air about it that is exclusively Mazursky's. It's there in the "Playboy"-ogling manner in which Sonia Braga is presented. Braga plays the goddesslike mistress of the dead dictator, who becomes Dreyfuss-the-fake-dictator's mistress too. She's luscious — that's the extent of the part. In a dual role reminiscent of Chaplin's in "The Great Dictator," Dreyfuss acts up a storm, but the script just doesn't give him enough to work with.

Raul Julia hams it up as the dictator's right-hand fascist, and Mazursky himself appears in drag as the dictator's mother. Despite the effort, much of this comedy is flat and strained. GRADE: ****

British fleet lost

The loss of a British fleet through the sinking of at least 50 ships off Yorktown, Va., in 1781 — some sunk by cannon fire, others intentionally scuttled to block a French landing or prevent capture — helped change the world and secure a new nation, the United States.

CAMPAIGN COIN — One of several types of the so-called Bryan dollars that were dreamed up when the McKinley Republicans were running scared because of the vigorous campaign of William Jennings Bryan.

Coins had a role in the presidency

Ninety-odd years before we had a Jame Fonda work-out program to be compared with a naval maneuver (naval-avel — get it?), or a zinger like "Read my lipzz," this medal was an effective "one-liner."

Collectors' Corner

Russ MacKendrick

The spoked-wheel part was supposed to be a silver dollar, while the whole piece was just double a dollar's weight. On the rim of the wheel we see "size of a government dollar containing 412½ grains of silver 900-1000 fine." On the reverse it reads: "This piece contains 823 grains of coin silver in value the equivalent of one gold dollar, Sept. 16, 1896."

This one of several types of the so-called Bryan dollars that were dreamed up when the McKinley Republicans were running scared because of the vigorous campaign of the free-silver orator.

"You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold!" he said. William Jennings Bryan (1860-1925), in support of the silver-mining interests, wanted to make a permanent 16 to one silver-gold basis for our currency, even though at that time the bullion prices were running more like 32 to one.

Back then it was customary to expect a coin to have an intrinsic value equal to its face — an ideal impossible to maintain in a fluctuating metal market. The McKinley campaign pulled out all the stops. Every bank in New York City was assessed a quarter of a percent of its capital

Tips on better sports photos

By Sandy Colton
The Associated Press

Camera Angles

If you are a sports fan or a photo enthusiast, you must admire the many great sports photos in your local newspaper or national sports magazine. Sports photographers are very lucky and get just the right shot, in order to successfully photograph a sports event, you have to know just how the game is played. That's for starters.

In most cases, you need some pretty expensive equipment, usually a motor drive camera with a fast shutter speed, a long, high-speed lens, monopod and sometimes some powerful remote-controlled strobe units. You also need a fantastic sense of timing.

But there are many times when a motor drive is a detriment. Many successful pros, most of the time, take only one frame at the peak of action, rather than many.

That's where the sense of timing comes in. One of the finest boxing pictures I've ever seen was taken with a Speed Graphic, long before the 35mm camera and motor drives became popular.

If you've ever tried to photograph a boxing match from ringside, you know that it is one of the toughest sports to shoot. Most of the time, by the time you've pressed the shutter button, the punch is long gone.

To get the shot at the moment that the glove hits the other guy in the chin, you must anticipate the shot and press the button at almost the same time the opponent starts the punch. You've got to know boxing in order to be able to anticipate a shot like that. With the Speed Graphic, you got only one shot before having to change your film holder or pull a tab to get the next piece of film in place.

Here's an example of bad use of a motor drive: At race tracks, photographers frequently set up cameras along the track, either under the rail at the finish line, at the starting gate, or overhead from the judges' stand, looking down on the horses as they pass underneath, all triggered by a remote control.

During my first try at shooting a horse race, I drew the overhead remote position. I set up the camera with a wide-angle lens looking straight down to get the lead horse and rider passing below. A competitor had a camera set up in the same place, but I noticed that he had placed a piece of tape on the rail just before the camera position. I wondered why he had done so.

As the horses approached the final turn, I held the remote button down, taking a number of pictures, until the horse had passed the stand. When I processed the film, I had the nose of the horse in one frame and the tail of the horse in the next. I missed the shot of horse and rider. It was between frames.

My competitor got the perfect picture. As he explained to me later, the tape was a mark. When the horse reached that spot along the rail, he took one picture and got what he wanted. Timing counts!

With all the tricks and expensive equipment the pros sometimes use, there are some tricks that will help you in photographing any fast-paced event, no matter what equipment you have.

Before you take your shot, check your position. You need a spot where you can see plenty of action that can be condensed into a tightly framed image — near the finish line for a track event, for example.

Don't try to follow focus. It's usually too fast and furious. Pre-focus on a fixed area where you know the action will take place and wait until it does before you press the shutter.

High-speed photography can make fast-moving objects look stationary. Try panning, following a moving object across the frame with your camera during exposure. Panning creates background blur that suggests movement. First, pre-focus on the spot where the subject will pass closest to you. As the subject approaches, turn your hips (don't move your feet). Keep the subject centered in your viewfinder, press the shutter release, and remember to follow through.

Try to anticipate the peak of action — that frozen moment when a pole-vaulter, figure skater or diver freezes for a moment before coming down. Then shoot. That's timing!

Watch the background. Your subject should stand out sharply. A clutter of shapes and colors will cause the eye to lose the subject.

What's in a word?

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — "Election," meaning the act of selecting by vote, is one of our oldest words. "Election" coming from the Latin word for choice or selection, was first used in writing in the 13th century, says Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary. "Election" actually predates the verb "elect" by two centuries.

'Eight Men Out' director won't sell out

By John Horn
The Associated Press

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — The story of "Eight Men Out" and its director and writer John Sayles begins at the same place, with youth and innocence.

The athletes in Sayles' movie about the 1919 World Series, rigged by gamblers, love their work. For them, baseball is play. Sayles, too, has a measure of that boyish pluck; he enjoys making movies.

The difference is that the baseball players sold out, throwing the series for a few thousand dollars, ditching their virtue and their futures in the process.

Sayles has stood tall. Surrounded by the same kind of deal-making and influence-peddling that proved toxic to the White Sox, the 38-year-old Sayles has moved through Hollywood with his integrity pretty much intact.

He didn't give "Eight Men Out" a happy ending, as others might have done.

From 1983's "Lianna" (a young woman copes with lesbianism) to 1984's "Brother from Another Planet" (a black space alien visits Harlem) to last year's "Matewan" (coal miners strike in West Virginia). Sayles has explored subjects that are both politically riveting and brazenly uncommercial.

JOHN SAYLES
...no happy ending

With "Eight Men Out," starring John Cusak and David Strathairn, Sayles may have discovered a new mix: Opening both to good notices and long lines.

The movie may finally introduce the uninitiated to one of the country's more independent-thinking directors and his reflections on common people facing uncommon choices.

Potential producers, however, were skeptical of "Eight Men Out."

"A lot of the turndowns we got were people who said, 'This is a great story,'" Sayles said. "You did a really good job on it. But we don't think we can make money on this thing."

"That's why a lot of good movies don't get made and continue not to get made. The widest audience that you can go for is probably the one that doesn't want any waves," he said. "Eight Men Out" makes waves.

Told in straight-ahead style with authentic period detail, the movie examines how personal and professional pressures seduced a group of athletes to betray both the national pastime and the national trust. Unlike "The Natural," with its happy ending that was not in Bernard Malamud's book, this is not a saccharine piece.

Some of the players were motivated either by greed or fears of hard-nosed gamblers who told them to throw the game — or else. Others were provoked by penny-pinching White Sox owner Charlie Comiskey, who was so cheap he charged his players for washing their uniforms. Thus the team was called "The Black Sox" even before the 1919 scandal.

"The movie is about an exploitative situation," Sayles said. "The owners were owners. You belonged to that guy." Some of the White Sox, Sayles added, were paid half as much as equally talented players on other teams.

Sayles said his movies carry a variety of messages. "Rarely is it a message that you can put on a quilt: 'Cleanliness is next to Godliness, so there.'"

"With this movie, you should think about how people are corrupted or lose their dreams without really knowing that's happening. It should make you think about youth and innocence and what's overrated about youth and innocence and what's actually valuable about them — and what we miss about them when they're gone."

Sayles said he'll devote his time now to writing a television movie about a "low-rent lawyer" and a feature film on the Spanish Civil War.

What to do with 'orphans' of home computing

By Larry Blasko
The Associated Press

The march to home computing hasn't been without casualties, and sometimes it's a problem deciding whether or not to abandon the orphans.

Rudolph J. Chernich of Hoyt Lakes, Minn., writes "I am 72 years old. When TI (Texas Instruments) went out of the home computer business and J.C. Penny was selling out their stock of TI-99-4A computers and software, I bought mine and a pile of their cartridges. I have the speech synthesizer as an accessory. Was wondering if it would be wise to invest in any more accessories?

Chernich wants to use his computer to send and receive Morse code in his amateur radio hobby, but the question would apply even if the computer were a PCjr (IBM), a Coleco Adam, an early Radio Shack TRS-80, a Commodore PET, a Sinclair — any members of the list of machines no longer made by their original manufacturers. When are you better off turning the thing into a doorstop?

If the machine is to be used for one or two well-defined purposes, say word processing or amateur radio, and the needs are unlikely to change, buying one or two accessories or pieces of software from after-market manufacturers makes sense.

After all, if an investment of around $150 will allow the machine to continue to do a necessary job, it beats shelling out $500 and probably more to start over with the three mainstays of home computing, Apple, Commodore and MS-DOS machines.

On the other hand, if the machine is expected to add duties over a length of time and if a lot of the commercial software being advertised looks appealing, it's probably time to get on one of the mainstays.

In Chernich's case, the best source of eventual answers is going to be a users group. Users groups are associations of hobbyists who band together to get the most out of their machine and the machine's manufacturer. When the manufacturer stops making the machine, they can often become the only source of information on a machine without an obvious commercial ax to grind.

According to Terry White of TI-Bug, a TI-99-4A users group in Birmingham, Ala., a user group in Chernich's state is MSP 99 Users Group, PO Box 12351, St. Paul, Minn., 55112. Other sources of information can be found in the classified ads at the back of general-interest computing magazines.

Even if you do make the decision to abandon your orphan for a more current machine, remember that there still may be a single-purpose chore or two that the orphan can handle. In the CompuBug closet is an original Radio Shack Color Computer, the kind with the punch-button keys that came with 4,000 characters of memory, later expanded to 32,000. An item on the "to-do" list here is to put that perfectly serviceable, if now a bit dated, machine to work controlling appliances and lights.

Two views of doomed TV star Jessica Savitch

By Judie Glove
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — On screen, NBC anchorwoman Jessica Savitch was television's "Golden Girl" — authoritative, beautiful, intelligent. Off screen, the glitter quickly vanished.

Five years after her death, two new biographies dig beneath the radiant image. Though Savitch's family and friends dispute their findings, both books describe a life marred by drugs, psychological problems, her husband's suicide and intense ambition.

"Her whole life was a suicide mission," says Alanna Nash, author of "Golden Girl" (E.P.

Dutton, $18.95).

Gwenda Blair, author of "Almost Golden" (Simon & Schuster, $18.95), says Savitch was the wrong woman in the wrong place at the wrong time.

"Drive and ambition certainly got her to the top, but it didn't provide her with the stability needed to withstand the pressure of that place in the sun. But even more than that, the changes that were taking place in the news industry that both elevated her and punished her is worth telling."

Popular with viewers but not with most colleagues, Savitch skyrocketed to television stardom in the 1970s, first as a local anchor on Philadelphia's KYW and then as anchor of NBC's "Weekend News Digest."

By the late 1970s, the petite blonde with the uncanny knack of romancing the television camera was dubbed "NBC's Golden Girl" by Newsweek magazine.

Five years later, her star fading, she and New York Post executive Martin Fischbein drowned in a car accident while visiting Bucks County, Pa.

The medical examiner's report said drugs were not involved. However, both books argue that Savitch had a cocaine problem that had crippled her career.

There was evidence of instability early on. Her main ambition was to become the first female network anchor, and to do it by time she was 30.

She gave herself an edge — she shaved a year off her age. But then her dream was shattered when ABC hired Barbara Walters — at $1 million a year — to co-anchor the nightly newscast.

Her tirades and tantrums were legendary within the business, according to the biographers. KYW cameras captured one particularly vivid outburst in which Savitch berated the crew during a commercial break — ranting, raving, screaming — and then coolly returned to the newscast.

KYW staffers set the videotape to music and sent it to Savitch's new network colleagues at NBC before her arrival.

Both books delve into her two marriages, a long affair with an abusive news producer, the suicide of her second husband, Dr. Donald Payne, and alleged lesbian liaisons; they differ in their approach.

Blair concentrates on the "Selling of Television News," blaming much of Savitch's rise and fall on the nature of the industry.

Nash, on the other hand, delves into Savitch's background — her father's death of kidney disease at age 33, her chilly relationship with her mother, her crippling insecurities.

No slowing Carly Simon

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Newly wed and busy in her career as singer and composer, Carly Simon dreams of having a little house in the suburbs.

"How I picture it is a little stone house, with maybe two or three bedrooms, tiny, though," she said. "I'll do all the housework myself. With a nice living room with fireplace and a cozy kitchen. It doesn't need to have a lot of ground but it needs to have trailing vines, wisteria or honeysuckle, and definitely a magnolia tree if possible. That's what I want to escape to on weekends from the city."

This is not, however, a woman looking forward to retirement. She had a new album out in August, which was taped during her first concert performance in eight years.

She's also scoring a movie for Mike Nichols that will include a love theme she wrote for her new husband, Jim Hart. And she has done two private concerts that were her contribution to a benefit auction on Martha's Vineyard.

...keeping busy

The Arista Records album, "Carly Simon's Greatest Hits Live," was taped — and so was a Home Box Office special — at one of the two concerts on a Martha's Vineyard beach.

"I was promoting the 'Coming Around Again' album, which came out in April 1987; consequently there are many songs on the live album that also are on that album. I also did 'You're So Vain,' 'Loving You Is the Right Thing To Do' and 'Nobody Does It Better.'"

"My favorites are songs that never really got exposure and I wanted to give a second life, like 'Never Been Gone,' which is my favorite song on the album, and 'It Happens Every Day,'" she said in a recent interview in her Manhattan apartment.

"It's funny how certain songs that I've written I always thought were terrific songs but they were never picked up from albums as singles or they were on albums that were flops or they were never recorded properly."

The curse of the recording industry, she said, is radio's top 40 playlists. "It kills your artistic motivation," she said, but credited Arista Records President Clive Davis for helping to keep her going.

Carly Simon became Mrs. Jim Hart on Dec. 23. The couple met on a train in upstate New York in May 1987.

"He was an insurance salesman. He said saying that got rid of a lot of people at cocktail parties," she said. "He riveted me. I was just fascinated. It didn't matter what he did. I'd never gone out with a man who had a straight job before. I'm used to artists and musicians. He thought I was one of those female singers but he wasn't sure which one."

Hart, who had already begun a novel, quit his job and moved to Martha's Vineyard with Simon.

Simon says her well-known stage fright comes from claustrophobia. "It probably stems from a childhood stammer," she said. "I was always afraid of being humiliated by having to talk in public. I've worked very hard many, many years to try to rid myself of it."

"On a stage I feel trapped by the lights, as if I can't get off. Then I panic. Outside (last summer on Martha's Vineyard) it was a lot better. I felt there was more air for me to breathe and I felt less trapped."

Sally, Tom 'terrible'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Punchline" co-stars Sally Field and Tom Hanks tried out their acts at nightclubs to prep for their movie roles, but they weren't very funny.

"The first few times I was terrible," Hanks said. "I thought I would have four or five minutes of material and I didn't. I had about a minute. The rest was all stammering."

Miss Field turned to her comedian-friend Lily Tomlin for advice and was told to get up on stage. At a club in Manhattan Beach, her recent 45-minute routine turned into a question-and-answer session.

Hanks, riding on the success of his box-office hit "Big," said after coal miners and police officers, comedians have the toughest job.

The movie, which depicts the lives of two stand-up comics, opened in a limited release Friday.

Prince to visit

LONDON (AP) — Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, will visit Canada twice next year, Buckingham Palace announced.

He will make a three-day visit to Ontario in March to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Duke of Edinburgh's awards for achievement in various fields by young people, officials said Thursday.

His second visit will be in May to attend the United Empire Loyalists Association's convention in Quebec. The association represents those who fled the United States during the American Revolution in order to remain loyal to the British crown.

Faubus selling home

HUNTSVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Former Gov. Orval E. Faubus says he has made a deal to sell his 9,000-square-foot cliff-top home in the Ozarks, which once made headlines for its size and price.

Faubus earned $10,000 a year as Arkansas' six-term Democratic governor, prompting Republicans to ask in 1966 how he could afford a house that, by their estimates, must have cost $200,000.

Faubus said at the time that the native stone-and-wood structure was worth "a lot less than $70,000," but he conceded in later years that the figure might be closer to $200,000.

The former governor, 78, said Wednesday he reached an agreement to sell the 11-room house to a Delaware couple for an undisclosed amount.

Study: Bad diagnoses and treatment common

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Doctor errors led to as many as one-quarter of the deaths of patients being treated for heart ailments, strokes and pneumonia in 12 hospitals studied by Rand Corp. researchers, their report said.

Doctors improperly treated patients complaining of chest pains, prescribed the wrong kind of antibiotics for pneumonia and misdiagnosed strokes, said a report on the study in Saturday's edition of The Annals of Internal Medicine.

The researchers cautioned that the findings are preliminary and warned against generalizing the results over the nation's hospitals. It also said the doctor errors were common and relatively easy to correct.

"A hospital's quality assurance committee should approach these findings with a certain sense of optimism," the report said. "Although these probably preventable deaths occurred with what we consider surprising frequency, they were due to a small number of... causes."

All three of the physician panels who reviewed the records of the 12 hospitals agreed that 14 percent of the deaths probably should have been prevented. Two out of the three agreed that 27 percent of the deaths were probably preventable, the report said.

Dr. Robert W. Dubois, who headed the study, said hospital patients should not be alarmed.

"The overwhelming majority — over 95 percent — of the people admitted to a hospital don't die. This is a non-issue for them," he said. "So it's important to put this in perspective. Of the one-quarter to one-sixth of those who do die, their death was probably preventable."

The study by the Santa Monica-based Rand Corp. was based on a review of 182 patients who died in 1985 at hospitals owned by American Medical International of Beverly Hills, a chain of 115 hospitals in the United States and abroad.

AMI sponsored the study and made extensive changes in its quality control program based on findings that were privately released, a spokesman said.

AMI spokesman Mick Taylor said the study should send warning signals to other hospitals. "It suggests there still remains a need for control mechanisms that very precisely define what quality is, and then very closely monitor every activity within a hospital that impacts a patient," Taylor said.

The study found that the average patient whose death might have been prevented was younger, between the ages of about 75 and 79, and suffered less severe illnesses than those whose deaths were unavoidable.

The deaths of 23 heart attack patients probably could have been prevented had doctors not made errors in treatment, the majority of panelists said.

For instance, the study found that a number of patients received either no treatment or only single doses of nitroglycerine or morphine after complaining of chest pain.

The report suggested that doctors should have been more aggressive in their treatment, intervening with drugs or surgery to avert what would be fatal heart attacks.

Errors in diagnosis were the main cause of nine deaths from strokes, the majority of panelists found. In some cases, doctors failed to administer such diagnostic procedures as a spinal tap or blood cultures.

The majority of panelists also found that errors in both diagnosis and treatment led to 17 deaths from pneumonia.

"Some patients had inadequate initial work-up of their condition. Others received improper antibiotics, poor fluid management or inadequate adjustment of their oxygen therapy," the report said.

Wanted: deficit magician

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite what the job listing says, the U.S. Treasury is not looking for a magician, voodoo or otherwise, to solve the budget deficit.

The job bulletin from the University of Michigan announces the federal government is in need of a "magician, deficit" who will be paid between $20,000 and $40,000 and will be "involved somehow with financing the deficit."

The contact for job seekers, Norman Carlton, with Treasury's Division of Domestic Finance, said the department's official notice designates the open position as "financial economist" with either a bachelor's degree or master's degree needed to qualify.

Carlton, who had already received several phone calls about the listing, said he had no idea how the wording got changed.

"It sounds like somebody's idea of a joke, but it wasn't our idea of a joke," he said.

Forecasting index suggests slower growth likely in '89

By Dave Skidmore
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's chief forecasting gauge of future economic activity rose a moderate 0.4 percent in August, suggesting to analysts that growth will continue through next year, but at a slower pace.

The gain reported Friday in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators follows a 0.6 percent drop in July and a 1.5 percent jump in June.

"I think the index is telling us that ... we ought to get through 1989 without a recession," said Cynthia Latta, an economist with Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "I think it also tells us, if you look at the last few months together, that the economy will be growing more slowly by next year."

The index is intended to predict economic activity six to nine months in advance, but analysts caution against drawing firm conclusions until a clear pattern is established over three months. In another report, the Commerce Department said new single-family homes sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 713,000 units in August, up 0.1 percent from July and the same as in June.

It was the best three-month performance since February-April 1987, when long-term mortgage rates dipped below 9 percent and spurred a housing sales boom.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Friday's reports were "good news for the economy" and "suggest continued economic growth."

Most economists agree that growth, as measured by the gross national product, will slow from the robust 3.2 percent annual pace of the first half of this year.

They differ, however, over how much and how soon. The Federal Reserve Board, which has been pushing up interest rates since late March in an effort to curb inflationary pressures, believes a 2 percent to 2.5 percent growth rate is sustainable without inflation.

An increase in unemployment in August coupled with lackluster retail sales and sluggish growth in personal income all pointed to a welcome cooling. However, a big increase in orders of manufactured goods and now the leading index indicate that August may represent, at best, a pause in growth.

"I think this concern that seemed to be developing from a lot of the early August data that the expansion was running out of gas was somewhat premature," said Robert G. Dederick, chief economist for Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

"It was only a moderate increase, but ... we've reached a point that if the indicators are very strong, we'd be sitting here chewing our nails, worrying about inflation. ... The fact that these (indicators) are not moving up strongly is probably favorable," he said.

October haunts Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — If a stockbroker friend of yours isn't in especially good spirits right now, please understand, October has arrived.

For the average citizen, October has a lot going for it: the World Series, colorful foliage in much of the country, Halloween.

But as even the most casual follower of finance knows, October has been witness to a disproportionate amount of disasters in the stock market.

For starters, there was the Great Crash in 1929. Back-to-back selloffs in the late 1970s came to be known as the "October massacres."

And then, of course, there was October 1987, when stocks endured a collapse that culminated in a record 22.6 percent drop in the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials on Black Monday, Oct. 19.

This year, the market begins the month still bearing a lot of scars from that rout. Trading volume, and morale, have both been running at low levels lately on Wall Street.

And with all the attention the ians' suggest that the crash memories haunting Wall Street this month may actually provide a chance to buy stocks at bargain prices.

If you want to pick up stocks cheap, the old argument goes, you need to buy them when nobody else wants them.

"The market is suffering from buying failure, not liquidation (of stocks)," contends Gene Jay Seagle, an analyst at Gruntal & Co. "It is thoroughly liquidated already."

Given the current degree of pessimism, says the investment advisory service Market Logic, "the possibility of a buying panic that could follow an abrupt easing of the Federal Reserve's current tight-money policy exceeds the likelihood of a replay of last fall's plunge."

The "bargain-hunters" made their presence felt in the past week, as the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 22.23 to 2,112.91, moving within hailing distance of the post-crash high of 2,158.61 it reached on July 5.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.19 to 153.57; the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 2.72 to 387.71; and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 2.52 to 301.63.

Volume on the Big Board remained sluggish, averaging 134.94 million shares a day against 140.23 million the week before.

Highlights of the week

By The Associated Press

■ A private study showed the amount of new construction contracts in the United States was virtually unchanged in August from the previous month.

■ Prices of farm commodities edged higher in September, but a new report by the Agriculture Department showed the effects of the drought had eased.

■ Economists from major U.S. corporations predicted the economy will slow next year to about 2.3 percent growth, less than some official forecasts.

■ The New York Stock Exchange said its "collar" restraint on computerized program trading will end on the anniversary of the Oct. 19 crash. The collar is to be replaced by previously announced measures designed to quell price volatility.

■ Macmillan Inc. accepted a cash-and-stock buyout bid from the investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., prompting British publisher Robert Maxwell to go directly to shareholders with an improved tender offer of $90.25 a share. The bid, which tops Kohlberg's offer by 20 cents a share, values Macmillan at more than $2.5 billion.

■ Kroger Co. said it would sell stores and food processing plants and reduce its work force as part of a $4.6 billion restructuring aimed at defeating two takeover bids.

■ A federal judge blocked the $2.6 billion supermarket merger of Lucky Stores Inc. and American Stores Co. pending a trial, saying the deal would "substantially lessen competition" in violation of antitrust laws.

■ Grand Metropolitan PLC agreed to sell its Inter-Continental hotel chain to the Seibu Saison Group of Japan for $2.27 billion in cash.

■ Warner Communication Inc. vowed to fight a state court ruling blocking its $1.2 billion acquisition of Lorimar Teletext Corp.

■ Best Products Co. rejected a $52.2 million cash buyout offer from an unnamed suitor, but the discount retailer would not rule out ultimately selling the company.

■ International Paper Co. said it will buy the USG Corp. subsidiary Masonite Corp. for about $400 million cash.

■ SmithKline Beckman Corp., which saw a 25 percent drop in profits in the first half of 1988, announced a major restructuring of its pharmaceutical business that will cost up to $400 million and force layoffs of 1,600 workers.

■ Electronic Data Systems sued former chairman Ross Perot, claiming he is violating an agreement made when he left EDS not to compete in the same markets as his old company. Also during the week, a federal appeals court threw out a challenge to the Postal Service's contract with Perot's new company.

■ A federal judge dismissed corporate takeover strategist Carl Icahn's efforts to nullify parts of Texaco Inc.'s bankruptcy reorganization plan.

■ A congressional watchdog agency said the unemployment insurance system has enough reserves to last only five months in a severe recession and would have to borrow billions of dollars from the government to keep paying benefits.

■ President Reagan vetoed legislation designed to toughen curbs on textile, apparel and shoe imports, arguing it would have "disastrous effects" on the economy at a time when exports are booming.

■ Private economists reacted skeptically to George Bush's proposal for new tax-deferred savings accounts for the middle class, calling the tax savings inconsequential.

■ Eveready Battery Co. Inc. announced the first lithium battery in the widely used AA size, a development hailed as a breakthrough by scientists and security analysts.

20-GAME WINNER — David Cone of the Mets delivers a pitch in the first inning of Friday night's game against the Cardinals at Shea Stadium. Cone picked up his 20th win of the year as New York beat St. Louis, 4-2.

Cone enters 20-win club

NEW YORK (AP) — David Cone became the fourth pitcher in Mets history to win 20 games in a season, leading New York past the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 Friday night on a nine-hitter.

Cone, 20-3, struck out seven and walked two in his eighth complete game. He gave up two runs in the sixth inning, losing his chance at the National League earned-run average title. Cone is at 2.22, behind Joe Magrane of the Cardinals, who is at 2.18.

Cone, a 25-year-old right-hander, did not join the Mets' starting rotation until the fifth week of the season. But he joins Tom Seaver, Jerry Koosman and Dwight Gooden as the only 20-game winners in Mets history.

Kevin McReynolds doubled in the second inning to drive in his 99th run and scored on Wally Backman's double as the Mets took a 2-0 lead. Darryl Strawberry's run-scoring single, his 99th RBI, made it 3-0 in the third.

Phillies 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Alex Madrid pitched four-hit ball for seven innings to out-duel Pascual Perez and win his first major league game as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Montreal Expos 2-1 Friday night.

Steve Bedrosian pitched the final two innings for his 27th save, striking out four and walking one.

Reds 8, Braves 7

CINCINNATI (AP) — Lenny Harris' single scored Barry Larkin with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning Friday night, giving the Cincinnati Reds an 8-7 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Harris' single off the glove of shortstop Jeff Blauser scored Larkin, whose throwing error in the top of the ninth let Blauser score the tying run on a double-play attempt.

Pirates 10, Cubs 9

CHICAGO (AP) — President Reagan made a surprise visit to Wrigley Field and returned to the broadcast booth to do Cubs' play-by-play Friday as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat Chicago 10-9 on Andy Van Slyke's run-scoring single in the 10th inning.

Reagan was in Chicago to give a speech and attend a fund-raiser, but made a late decision to go to Wrigley Field. The game was held up for 36 minutes by his visit, and Reagan stayed at the park for about an hour after throwing out the first ball.

U.S. boxers take home gold

SEOUL, South Korea — Kennedy McKinney, who once had the reputation of being a runner-up in big tournaments, won the most important championship in amateur boxing Saturday when he beat Alexander Hristov of Bulgaria for the 119-pound Olympic gold medal.

The 22-year-old McKinney, of Killeen, Texas, knocked down Hristov and also forced him to take a standing eight count as he won a 5-0 decision.

Teammate Michael Carbajal of Phoenix, Ariz., failed in his bid for a gold when he dropped a 5-0 verdict to Ivallo Hristov, also of Bulgaria, in the 106-pound final. The Hristovs are not related.

Ray Mercer of the U.S. Army won his bid for the gold medal in the 201-pound class later in the morning program as he beat Balk Hyun-Man of South Korea. Three other Americans were to fight for gold medals Sunday.

After finishing second in the national championships this year, McKinney vowed after winning the U.S. Olympic trials that there would be no more second places, and he kept his word, winning the Olympic title.

McKinney knocked down the 24-year-old Hristov, a European champion, with a right 12 seconds into the fight and kept on the pressure throughout, several times jarring the Bulgarian with single punches and combinations to the head.

McKinney forced Hristov to take a standing eight count with a right to the head in the second round and in the final minute of the bout, he landed at will to the head. Hristov's main weapon was his left jab, although he scored with some combinations in the third round.

BOXING GOLD — Kennedy McKinney of Killeen, Texas, celebrates his 5-0 Olympic boxing decision over Alexander Hristov of Bulgaria in Seoul today that gave him the gold medal in the 119-pound class.

"If I made it close, they were going to take it from me like they did from Mike," McKinney said. "I was standing there when they did it to Mike and I knew I couldn't make it close."

Carbajal lost 59-58, losing on all five official cards. "I'm the Olympic silver medalist and that's not bad at all,"

Carbajal said. "I thought I won the gold medal and I'll always feel that way."

Carbajal, 21, was the aggressor for much of the bout and landed several good punches to the head of the circling Hristov.

However, Hristov landed numerous jabs and that apparently swayed the judges in his favor.

SEOUL, South Korea — Ray Mercer, a 27-year-old U.S. Army infantryman who took up boxing five years ago so he wouldn't have to go on field maneuvers, became the Olympic heavyweight champion Saturday.

Mercer knocked down Baik Hun-han of South Korea with a crashing right-left to the head and stepped him at 2:16 of the first round to give the United States its second gold medal on the first of two finals sessions.

Kennedy McKinney, who once had the reputation of being a runner-up in big tournaments, won the most important championship in amateur boxing when he beat Alexander Hristov of Bulgaria for the 119-pound Olympic gold medal.

The 22-year-old McKinney, of Killeen, Texas, knocked down Hristov and also forced him to take a standing eight count as he won a 5-0 decision.

Three more Americans are to fight for gold medals Sunday as part of a six-bout card.

They are Roy Jones of Pensacola Fla., who will box Park Si-hun of South Korea at 165; Andrew Maynard of the Army at Fort Carson, Colo., who will meet Nourmagomed Chanavazov of the Soviet Union at 178; and super-heavyweight Riddick Bowe of New York, who will fight Lennox Lewis of Canada.

Baik and Mercer came out winging at the opening bell and both landed several rights to the head. Then as Baik backed toward the ropes, Mercer nailed him with a right-left to the jaw.

The Korean dropped in a heap, then struggled up before the 10-count was reached, but the referee stopped it.

Mercer leaped into the air and pumped his right fist in triumph as teammates Bowe and Anthony Hembrick rushed up the ring steps to congratulate him.

After finishing second in the national championships this year, McKinney vowed after winning the U.S. Olympic trials that there would be no more second places, and he kept his word, winning the Olympic title.

U.S. foul ups just incredible

By James Litke
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Carl Lewis is not the U.S. men's sprint coach, but maybe he ought to be. He's got time on his hands now instead of the baton he planned to carry across the finish line and redeem for his third gold of the Seoul Olympics.

Those who did have a hand in helping disqualify the 400-meter relay team are understandably glum. It marked the third monumental foul-up by an American coach or team member in these Games, and one, incredibly enough, that Lewis might have seen coming.

"I think it was doomed from the start," said Russ Rogers, who is the U.S. men's sprint coach — for the time being, anyway.

"From day to day, I couldn't tell what was going to happen," he said. "Every day there was something new, something different. We always had controversy."

By controversy, he meant Lewis.

"I think it is important not to lay blame on the athletes who were disqualified," Lewis shot back in a statement released by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Guess who that leaves?

But before the finger-pointing gets out of hand, let us recap.

Lewis arrived in Seoul trying to reprise his four gold-medal performance of four years ago. At age 27, he also was trying to become the first man in Olympic history to successfully defend individual titles in the 100, 200 and long jump.

First, he lost the 100 to a cheat.

Then he won the long jump, spectacularly. Next, the 100 gold fell into his lap because arch-rival Ben Johnson was found to be living better through chemistry.

Then Lewis lost the second chance for four when teammate and training partner Joe DeLoach blew by him on 21-year-old legs.

Still, when he showed up at the track Friday for the 400 relay, Lewis had two golds and one silver, and something still to look forward to.

That, however, lasted only as long as it took No. 3 man Calvin Smith to pass the baton to anchorman Lee McNeill — which, according to the officials of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, was a little bit too long.

Most of McNeill's relay experience was in running the first or second legs, but Rogers tabbed him to spell Lewis at the anchor for the preliminary round.

Running straight ahead, but turning his head and shoulders back repeatedly in search of Smith, McNeill missed the hookup three times. By the time the two got it right, they were outside the zone allowed for the exchange.

"My hand was shaking so much," McNeill said later, "I gave him a shaky target."

"I think the last handoff was not what we wanted it to be," Smith said.

Unfortunately for the Americans, it turned out to be exactly what the Soviets, French and Nigerians wanted. They protested. IAAF officials looked at a videotape and agreed.

Lewis is not entirely blameless in the matter, though he did turn out to be prophetic.

In a bylined column written for USA Today before the disqualification, he argued against running substitutes in the preliminaries.

"I think it would benefit us to run the top team all the way through. I'm not the coach and I'm not telling the coach what to do," Lewis said, doing exactly that.

"But if I was picking the team, I'd run Joe first. Dennis (Mitchell) second, Calvin third and me."

Head track coach Stan Huntsman said Rogers' use of the word "doomed" to describe the team's fate might have been too strong.

"But we've had trouble putting it together. It hasn't been a cohesive group from the start. We tried and tried and tried..."

"I guess this personalities the 400 relay team," Huntsman said. "We couldn't get it off the ground."

U.S. volleyball team anxious to go up against the Soviets

By Stephen R. Wilson
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Finally, the Soviet Union. This is the dream Olympic final the U.S. men's volleyball team waited 20 years to play.

"This is going to be the exclamation point of our success," said middle blocker Craig Buck, a starter on the team that won the 1984 gold medal, the 1985 World Cup and the 1986 world championship.

Now it comes down to one game Sunday night.

"We've worked toward that for so long. I know if we play our best, no one can touch us. We can only beat ourselves," said Bob Ctvrtlik, who broke into the starting lineup in 1986.

The Americans moved into the final Friday by routing Brazil 15-3, 15-5, 15-11 in one semifinal, while the Soviets rolled over Argentina 15-11, 17-15, 15-8 in the other. Brazil and Argentina will play for the bronze.

The U.S. players say they found some extra motivation after the men's basketball team was upset by the Soviets.

"As far as team sports goes, the women's basketball and men's volleyball teams are the last hopes for Americans," said captain Karch Kiraly.

"We want to contribute to the U.S. medal count," he said. "It's frustrating watching Matt Biondi winning one medal in 50 or 60 seconds. After six matches and 15 to 16 hours of competition, and with 12 players and a staff of eight, we can only add to the medal count by one. We wish we could help more."

The last time the Americans and Soviets competed together in Olympic volleyball, the Americans won their first-round match in 1968. But the Soviets went on to win the gold, the second of their three in the sport, and the United States finished seventh.

The Soviets dominated the sport until the Americans won the 1984 gold and went on to win volleyball's "triple crown." Since 1984, the United States has beaten the Soviets in 25 of 35 games, including seven straight earlier this year. The Soviets, however, won the last two at home in August.

"We've been on the high side for awhile," said U.S. coach Marv Dunphy. "Both teams know each other very well. In terms of power and personnel, we're comparable."

Soviet coach Gennady Parshin said the Americans should be favored.

"The United States has the edge," he said after Friday night's semifinal victory. "Mentally, our players are not as strong. Only two of our players have participated in the Olympics before. Our players are young and don't have a lot of

Whalers top Rangers

NEW YORK—Sylvain Cote scored two goals, including the game-winner, as the Hartford Whalers topped the New York Rangers, 5-3, in NHL exhibition game play Friday night at Madison Square Garden. The Whalers added an empty net goal to clinch it. John Anderson had one of the goals for the Whalers.

Greenwell sets AL mark

CLEVELAND (AP)—An official scoring change Friday gave Boston's Mike Greenwell his 23rd game-winning RBI of 1988, breaking the American League record he had shared with Harold Baines of the Chicago White Sox. Greenwell was awarded a single and an RBI on a bases-loaded ground ball he hit in the third inning of Thursday night's 12-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The grounder was originally ruled an error on Cleveland first baseman Terry Francona, who had the ball hit off the tip of his glove and then recovered too late to make a play.

A game-winning RBI is awarded to a player whose RBI puts his team ahead to stay.

Baines set the American League mark at 22 in 1983. Keith Hernandez set the National League and major-league record with 24 for the New York Mets in 1985.

Reds rehire Pete Rose

CINCINNATI (AP)—Pete Rose, criticized by team owner Marge Schott as Cincinnati headed toward its fourth consecutive second-place finish, signed a two-year contract Friday to continue as manager of the Reds.

The Reds have a 344-299 record in the last four seasons under Rose, whose contract expired at the end of the year. The 344 victories are the most by any National League West team and the third-best total in the league behind New York and St. Louis.

"I think it's a matter of time before we get to the playoffs," Rose said. Reds general manager Murray Cook said Rose's new contract was "a reflection on what I perceive as the success of the club."

Sluman still has lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—Jeff Sluman shot a 3-under-par 67 Friday to hold off a charge by Leonard Thompson for a 2-shot lead after the second round of the $400,000 Southern Open golf tournament.

Sluman, who captured the PGA championship six weeks ago, shot an opening round 63 and was at 130, 10-under-par over the par-70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

Thompson, an 18-year tour veteran, matched the 63 Friday with a string of eight birdies—including four in a row—to close in on Sluman at 132 after a first-round 69.

Lance Ten Broeck, Mike Hulbert and Dan Forsman were another stroke back at 133. Ten Broeck had a 65 while Hulbert and Forsman each had 66s over the tight, hilly pine-studded course.

Astaphan to be investigated

TORONTO (AP)—The College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario announced Tuesday it will investigate the medical practice of George M. (Jamie) Astaphan, the personal physician for disgraced Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson.

Sports Illustrated magazine quoted sources this week as saying Astaphan provided performance-enhancing steroids to Johnson. The Toronto sprinter was stripped of his gold medal in the 100-meter race at the Seoul Olympics on Monday when a urine sample tested positive for the banned drug.

The announcement of the investigation came following a meeting between Astaphan and college officials. Astaphan's lawyer also attended the meeting, a college spokesman said.

Boys Soccer

Bolton wins shortened tilt

EAST HAMPTON — There was some soccer played before a brawl forced Friday's game to be shortened between Bolton High and host East Hampton High with the Bulldogs going home 3-1 winners.

The game was called with 19 minutes left after a Bellringer, who had just been given a yellow card, started a brawl, according to Bolton Coach Ray Boyd. "After we got the three goals (East Hampton) started cheap shooting," Boyd said.

"I was terribly disappointed to see it happen. I screamed at my kids to get off the field. I think the officials handled it well. I think there would have been more fights. East Hampton wasn't playing ball any more."

East Hampton, 1-4-1 overall, was whittled for 19 fouls compared to eight for Bolton. "It was a real physical game and they were knocking us down a lot," Boyd said.

The Bellringers got on the scoresheet first at 13:27 of the first half on a counterattack with Steve Public's Manuel Barreira (8) and Manchester's Doug Harvey are in on the play. The Indians won in overtime, 1-0.

Crywiski getting the goal. "We had the better of play but we were almost playing into their counterattack plan. They had three quick forwards who caused trouble and did (with the goal)," Boyd said.

Bolton, 2-1 in the COC and 4-2 overall, tied it at 24:29 on the first of two goals from Drew Pinto. Pinto moved the Bulldogs in front at 10:06 of the second half with Cliff Dooman, with his fifth of the year, adding the clincher at 18:26.

Bolton outshot the Bellingrers, 14-5. Bulldog keeper David Boles had three saves. Pinto and Zac Morford played well for Bolton, which is back in action Tuesday at home against Coventry High.

Cheney blanks Bacon

The win raises the Beavers' record to 2-1 in the COC and 3-3 overall. Bacon falls to 0-3 and 1-4. Cheney's next game is Tuesday at home against RHAM High.

Scott House and Steven Infante each scored a goal to pace the Cheney offensive attack. Beaver goalie Matt Marcotte had 11 saves.

Coventry shut out

COVENTRY — Inexperience in the goal reared its ugly head as RHAM High took a 3-0 verdict from Coventry High Friday afternoon in Charter Oak Conference boys' soccer action.

RHAM sits atop the COC East Division at 3-0 and is 5-0-1 overall. The Patriots fall to 1-2, 2-3-1 with the loss. Coventry's next game is Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. at Bolton High.

The Sachems' prolific scoring Joey Nielsen accounted for two of his team's scores. He scored on a corner kick 32 minutes into the first half, swerving the drive home. Scott Wells, off a corner kick, tallied 17:35 into the second half off a corner kick taken by Tom Malowski and Nielsen, stealing the ball from an unsuspecting Paul Strycharz who wasn't warned by his keeper of the oncoming RHAM player, closed it out 11 minutes later.

"(We have a) lot of inexperience in goal," said frustrated Coventry Coach Bob Plaster. "The first one went right in the front post a hair above the fullback who was on the near post. The goalie wasn't there to get it," he cited.

Additional mistakes played roles in RHAM's other two scores.

"Offensively, we work the ball up the outside but never did cross it inside," Plaster offered.

Strycharz, who had the task of marking Nielsen, played well defensively for the Patriots.

RHAM 3 3-0
Coventry 0 0-3
 Scoring: R—Nielsen 2, Wells.
 Saves: C—Bob Johnson 5, R—Kevin McGill 4.

Girls Soccer

MHS romps over Public

HARTFORD — It was a mismatch from the outset with Manchester High outclassing Hartford Public, 7-0, in a CCC East Division girls' soccer clash Friday afternoon.

Manchester, 5-0 in the CCC East and 6-0 overall with all of its wins via the shutout route, scored its seven goals in the first 16 minutes. Public is 0-5, 0-5-1.

"I knew it would be a mismatch before the game so I agreed with the (Public) coach to play 30-minute halves. Also, in the second half we used only six field players so it was seven against eleven. It was good because it gave us a chance to push the ball around," MHS Coach Joe Erardi said, adding he used four groups of six in the unique

Little guys are making inroads

By Fred Boyles

SEOUL, South Korea — While all eyes are on the top of the Olympic medal chart and the renewed race between superpowers, something new is going on further down the list.

Bulgaria is fifth with nine gold medals. China and Korea are multiple medal winners. Third World nations like Kenya, Senegal and Morocco are taking home gold and silver.

While the little guys are no threat to the traditional medal moguls, they are making inroads in the medal chase as never before.

"The real story is the spread of the medals," said Dick Pound of Canada, a vice president with the International Olympic Committee. Olympic officials point to several reasons for the new competition.

Since 1972, the last full Olympics, more foreign athletes have trained in the United States and other sports powers. At the same time, developing nations are putting a greater emphasis on sports, aided by new international programs that share competition and coaching skills.

The medal chart reflects those changes. Hungary has collected a national record number of golds in swimming. Anthony Nesty of tiny Suriname set an Olympic record while beating Matt Biondi and swimmers from East Germany and the Soviet Union in the men's 100-meter butterfly.

Paul Ereng of Kenya led a Third World roster of medalists including Brazil and Morocco in the 800 meters. Amadou Dia Ba of Senegal ran past Olympic great Edwin Moses to win the silver in the 400-meter hurdles.

China, which returned to Olympic competition in 1984 after a 38-year absence, has 23 medals so far in sports ranging from diving to volleyball. Host South Korea has taken six gold for sports like team handball and wrestling. In 1972 it won one medal. Kenya has taken two golds, a silver and a bronze in track and field. Morocco has a gold and bronze.

Little Peru knocked off the United States and China to win the silver in women's volleyball. "I think people are missing what's happening here," said Mike Moran, a spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee. "You've got the first look here at an overall competitive Olympics. The medal wealth has been distributed much wider."

Some of the new winners have taken advantage of advanced training and sports medicine techniques in the United States. Nesty, who enters the University of Florida this fall, has trained in Gainesville for three years. Joaquim Cruz of Brazil, a silver in the 800 meters, attended the University of Oregon.

In this defensive affair it was the respective sweepers, Manchester senior Glenn Jensen and Public's Jeff Anderson, who took center stage. Jensen turned in a phenomenal performance.

"Cool under pressure," McCarthy described Jensen. "He knew when to go back (to the goal) with it. He (Anderson) was all over Mo (Moriarty)."

Though limited to five shots in the match, Public did have the best scoring opportunity. At 12:35 of the second half, Owl forward Huy Ly broke free and streaked down the right side toward Indian senior goalie Jeff Bernier. Ly let loose a wicked shot which caromed off the right post.

"That was a great shot," McCarthy said of the near miss. "He got behind our fullbacks."

Public is largely composed of foreigners from Vietnam, Peru, Portugal and Jamaica.

"Both teams played very well," Public Coach Steven Kasso said. "(Manchester) got the one break of the game. I knew that both teams had the potential to score and both teams had good defenses and good goalies. I knew it would be a one-goal game. It just happened to go the other way."

Just four minutes into the second half, Public's Roberto Ruz launched a 30-yarder which banged off the crossbar.

Manchester had a solid chance to put this one away with 3:45 left in regulation. Junior Dave Stephenson lofted a left-footer off a corner kick to the middle of the penalty area. Senior Ted Miller perfectly headed the ball and it caromed squarely off the crossbar.

A minute before Boyle's game-winning, senior Jonas McCray blasted a 20-yarder off the left post, but Dieterle couldn't settle the rebound as he stared at an open net.

"No doubt about it. They play a different brand of ball than us," McCarthy said. "It'll be a toss of the coin who wins the next one," Kasso added.

Also turning in fine efforts for Manchester were senior Mike Callahan, Dieterle, McCray and Stephenson.

 Scoring: M—Boyle.
 Saves: M—Bernier 2; HP—Chomthasoung 8.

SOX CLINCHING ON HOLD

CLEVELAND (AP) — Roger Clemens lost for the first time in 10 career decisions against Cleveland and the Indians beat Boston 4-2 Friday night, preventing the Red Sox from clinching the American League East championship.

The Red Sox lost for the fourth time in five games and their magic number stayed at one over second-place Milwaukee, which played later in Oakland. The Yankees were eliminated from the race with a 6-2 loss in Detroit.

Boston has two games remaining in the regular season, both against Cleveland. The Red Sox are 8-3 versus the Indians this year.

Clemens, 18-12, was outpitched by Rich Yett, 9-6, who gave up seven hits in 8 1-3 innings and won for the first time since Aug. 23. Doug Jones got two outs for his 36th save.

Clemens gave up eight hits in his 14th complete game. He allowed three runs in the first inning and yielded Carmen Castillo's solo home run in the sixth.

In his previous start, Clemens was hit on the right elbow by a line drive from New York's Rickey Henderson but still managed to pitch seven shutout innings. Clemens was clearly less than sharp, however, against the Indians, who had scored only one run on four hits in 16 previous innings against him this year. Clemens walked three and struck out four.

Julio Franco started the first with a walk and Terry Francona, filling in because first baseman Willie Upshaw had a sore arm, doubled to right on a hit-and-run play that scored Franco. Mel Hall singled home Francona and continued to second on the throw and Castillo got an infield single. Castillo then attempted to steal second and got caught in a rundown that let Hall score easily from third.

Tigers 6, Yankees 2

DETROIT (AP) — Chet Lemon hit two home runs and the Detroit Tigers beat New York 6-2 Friday night, eliminating the Yankees from the American League East race.

Boston had already clinched a tie for the division championship and the Yankees' only hope was to win their final four games and have the Red Sox lose their final three.

With one out in the sixth inning, Lemon put Detroit ahead 3-2 with a solo home run against Rick Rhoden, 12-12.

Jack Morris, 15-13, allowed five hits in seven innings and won his third straight start. He extended his string of 15-win seasons to seven, tops in the major leagues.

Rhoden gave up nine hits in six-plus innings. Lemon also made a spectacular diving catch of Willie Randolph's liner up the gap in right-center for the first out in the seventh.

Tom Brookens singled in the Detroit second, went to third on Torey Lovullo's single and scored when Yankee catcher Joel Skinner threw the ball into right field for an error on a pickoff attempt.

Pat Sheridan walked in the Detroit third, moved up when Darrell Evans drew a two-out walk and scored on Matt Nokes' high-hop single.

The Yankees tied it at 2 in the sixth. With two outs, Claudell Washington and Don Mattingly each singled and both scored when third baseman Brookens threw wide of first for an error on Jack Clark's grounder.

Friday's game at Memorial Field. The Indians beat Public, 1-0, to remain atop the CCC East standings.

MHS notches overtime win Boyle's goal nips Hartford Public, 1-0

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

Experience has carried the Manchester High boys' soccer team a long way in a short time thus far this season.

In a battle of Central Connecticut Conference East Division unbeatens, this match certainly lived up to its billing.

With Manchester and Hartford Public deadlocked at 0-0 with 2:02 left in the second five-minute overtime session, the game-winning sequence occurred.

For Manchester, which is in first place in the CCC East with a perfect 5-0 mark and 5-1 overall, it was its fourth consecutive win.

Public drops to 3-1-1 in the league and 4-1-1 overall. The Indians will be at Enfield High Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 p.m.

"It was a great goal," Manchester Coach Bill McCarthy said of Boyle's game-winner. "He (Boyle) loves the left foot. It was a rocket." It was Boyle's third goal of the season.

"They're seniors. They've been here three years," McCarthy said of his senior-dominated group.
