

Jim Bakker's empire sold to Canadian businessman

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — PTL's trustee has accepted a $115 million bid from a Canadian businessman for the Christian ministry's assets, but the buyer, who is Jewish, hasn't said what he will do with the remnants of Jim Bakker's empire.

The decision Tuesday came down to who offered "the most money and the best terms," said bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton.

"I'd hoped we could get a bit more for it. But this is not a bad price," said Benton, who spent nearly six months talking with bidders.

One of them was Bakker, who nearly a month ago failed to secure the financing for his $172 million offer.

Bakker gave a conditional blessing to the winning bid by Stephen R. Mernick of Toronto.

"Tammy and I remain committed to the restoration of the ministry of PTL," Bakker said in a statement. "If the present offer is agreeable to the creditors, the partners (PTL's major donors) and the court, and God's will is satisfied with respect to the ministry of PTL, we will be happy with that outcome."

Mernick, 34, will pay $50 million at closing, which the contract set at no later than Dec. 31, and the balance over five years, said his attorney, Joseph Klutz.

If approved by a U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge in Columbia, S.C., Mernick will own the 500-acre Heritage USA, a Christian retreat and theme park south of Charlotte in York County, S.C.; the PTL satellite TV network; and 1,700 undeveloped acres in York County.

PTL's religious functions have been separated from its other operations, and the Heritage USA Church is leasing back its facilities from PTL to continue on-site worship and Christian broadcasting.

Mernick, an Orthodox Jew who was celebrating the holiday Simchat Torah, did not travel to Charlotte to attend Tuesday's conference announcing the winning bid.

Klutz said Mernick has interests in real estate, clothing, garbage collection and landfills.

"His primary interest as a businessman is to get a maximum return on his investment," Klutz said.

In a Sept. 15 letter to Benton, Mernick said he "would welcome the opportunity to meet with representatives of any group or groups that are seriously interested in exploring ways of preserving or enhancing the Christian orientation of parts or all of the existing developed assets."

Aaron Gruber, Mernick's attorney in Toronto, told The Charlotte Observer last month that Mernick wanted PTL because "it's a large tract of land, and I'm not sure those types of parcels are readily available."

Mernick, who entered the negotiations a month ago, outbid fellow Canadian Peter Thomas of Vancouver. Thomas offered $113 million, $46 million of it in cash, but not all would have been payable until September 1989.

By signing Mernick's contract, Benton agreed to stop negotiating with any other bidders and to file a motion with Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds recommending Mernick's offer by Friday.

Other bidders may still present offers directly to the court, but Benton said his recommendation gives Mernick the upper hand.

Reynolds has said a firm bid must be submitted by Oct. 14 or he would order PTL's assets sold to pay creditors, who are estimated to be owed more than $100 million. He is expected to hold a hearing on the bid in about a month.

An assistant to Reynolds, Susanne Roblesek, said the judge "doesn't have any comment" on the offer.

Dictionary has lots to offer

LONDON (AP) — Heavy readers take heart. The long-awaited second edition of "The Oxford English Dictionary" will weigh in at a whopping 137 pounds worth of words.

The venerable OED, world's biggest dictionary, is getting bigger.

"We are sure we will sell a lot because the dictionary is the standard work of reference on the English language and any substantial library will have to have it," said Ludo Craddock, promotions executive of the Oxford University Press.

The tumbstone tome will span 22,000 pages, fill 20 voluminous volumes and sell for about $2,500.

The publishing house, founded in 1584, describes the dictionary as its most adventurous project since it began the first edition in the 19th century.

But the first edition had a mere 44 million words of text and the second has 59 million. There are 290,500 main entries on different words, a 15 percent increase from the first edition.

In addition, there are 157,000 combinations and derivatives and 169,000 phrases making a total of 616,000 "word forms" which are defined. The 1928 edition had 414,825.

The OED was first published in parts between 1884 and 1928 and a supplement of new words and words missed the first time was added in 1933. Together, they made up 13 volumes.

The last of four additional volumes was finished in 1986 by New Zealander Robert Burchfield, who spent 28 years on the project. The publishers had expected it to take seven years.

Since Burchfield's four volumes, 5,000 new words have been added — "most of them at the beginning of the alphabet as Burchfield was continually adding as he progressed," said Craddock.

James Murray, a Scottish village tailor's son, was the dictionary's original editor. He had a flowing white beard and worked in a garden shed from slips of paper. He died in 1915 when he was halfway through the letter 'S'.

The new edition also has been computerized, with the vocabulary of English since 1150 A.D. on a single data base to be available by home computer.

The first advertisements for the dictionary are now appearing in Britain and the United States. The publishers are reluctant to divulge any other details about the dictionary before it is officially launched on March 29.

But this book is big. According to Craddock, the new OED is "more than five times the size of any other dictionary of the English language."

'Routes to Your Roots' will bring history alive

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

'Grand lady' celebrates a century. Related story and pictures on page 3

Tourists from around the state will be visiting Manchester this weekend for "Routes to Your Roots," a celebration of the history and heritage of the town.

From the Cheney Historic District in the south end of town to the Bon Ami building in the North End, the town will be offering an opportunity to meet Smokey the Bear, bid on antiques, play with electric trains and learn from slide shows.

"Routes to Your Roots" is a new, five-town program, organized by the East of the River Tourism and Convention District. Beginning with the Rockville section of Vernon on Sept. 24, and concluding with Tolland on Oct. 16, each town has been given an opportunity to display the most interesting aspects of its history.

Rockville has had a festival and walking tour; East Hartford had an historic district tour; on Oct. 16, South Windsor will have a harvest celebration, with a colonial encampment, quilt exhibit, doll show and horse-drawn trolley rides.

The "Routes" events conclude Oct. 16, with pumpkins and cider on the Tolland Green, an educational program on researching genealogy, a Civil War encampment and tours through three museums.

The Manchester weekend has been built around two anniversaries: the 100th year of the Bon Ami building and the 100th birthday of the designation of the Cheney Historic District, according to Jay Savery, president of the Manchester Historical Society.

Panel's search tricky

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

The committee that will search for a new town manager for Manchester will be able to draw on the lessons of several other communities that have recently gone through similar searches.

Perhaps the most important part of the search, according to officials from those towns, is deciding what kind of manager a community needs and wants.

A five-member committee of past and present directors will conduct the search for a new manager in Manchester to take the place of Robert E. Weiss. The appointment of the committee was announced Tuesday by Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr.

Norwich went through the search for a new manager 2 1/2 years ago, after the departure of a manager who had served the town for 16 years. With a population of about 40,000, the town is slightly smaller than Manchester, which has a population of about 50,000.

Bonnie Hong, the Norwich City Council president, said that Dale Cunningham, who replaced former City Manager Charles Whitty, was not suited to the needs of the council, and earlier this year his contract was bought out. Cunningham was replaced by his assistant, Ernest M. Znyinski.

Hong said that the council members were new, and "they probably needed more direction than the manager was used to providing." She said that if a community is hiring someone from outside the administration, particular attention must be paid to the needs of the city.

That's a point that David Baram, Bloomfield's mayor, stresses in an article he has written on how that town conducted its search for a manager three years ago. And it's one that's made by Frank Connolly, the town manager of Newington, and the historian of the Connecticut Association of Town and City Management.

"It helps the council to evaluate the different candidates that come before them," Connolly said of the need for a job description. Connolly became Newington's town manager three years ago.

Baram, in his article, says that as the first step in the search in Bloomfield the town council put together a "manager's guide," which described the qualifications and attributes desired of the new manager.

"The guide established a positive mind set among the selection committee, built consensus and provided the motivation for a demanding and disciplined selection process," Baram writes.

Weiss last month provided Baram's article to members of Manchester's Board of Directors. Controversy can arise, Baram

EMERGENCY — Fire department personnel help Ken Cusson, a paramedic with the town of Manchester Fire Department, during a simulated disaster at Wickham Park this morning. Emergency personnel participated in the mock accident to gain experience in case of a real emergency.

'Disaster' struck today, as planned

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Firefighters from the Town of Manchester Fire Department, the Eighth Utilities District and the East Hartford Fire Department responded today to a one-car accident at Wickham Park in which radioactive material was exposed.

But no one was in danger. And if the emergency response to the accident achieves its objective, residents will be able to breathe a lot easier.

The incident was a mock accident staged to help officials learn how to respond to disasters involving hazardous materials.

The emergency began innocently enough when a town police officer responded to what appeared to be a run-of-the-mill accident. However, after he saw a sign on the vehicle, which identified the hazardous material, the officer realized that there was a potential for a release of radiation.

The purpose of the exercise was for emergency workers to gain experience in dealing with hazardous materials, said Ronald Kraatz, director of health and chairman of Manchester's Local Emergency Planning Committee. Manchester's committee is preparing a report on dealing with hazardous material for submission to the state this month.

A public hearing will be held on that report at 7 tonight in the coffee room of the Municipal Building.

"It's probably the most likely scenario we'll face," Kraatz said of the reason for simulating a car accident. He said the exercise will help emergency personnel determine who is in charge of the scene, who responds, and how the emergency is dealt with, he said.

When the police officer called for help, firefighters from all three departments responded. Staying about 150 feet away from

Bolton government cost put at $79,300

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Changing the town's form of government to a town manager-selectmen style will cost the town a maximum of $79,300 or about 80 cents on the residential tax rate, Robert Lessard, vice chairman of the Charter Revision Commission, said.

Lessard made his comments Wednesday during a public hearing that attracted more than 25 people on proposed changes in the charter. Between $34,300 and $79,300, or 0.3 to 0.8 mills, will be needed to switch to the new government from the current selectmen form, he said.

Lessard also explained why the commission decided not to recommend keeping the current form of government or having a full-time first selectman.

By keeping the administrative assistant, the town would still be left without a full-time person with decision-making powers, Lessard said. Also, the full-time first selectman idea was ruled out after the commission received negative reactions from people it interviewed in Ellington, where such a selectman is in office, he said.

"The present system as we have it has no administrative focal point," Lessard said. "There's no person on a daily basis running the show."

Commission members, though, said they haven't considered a form of government where there would be a "super" administrative assistant who would have some decision-making powers, and a first selectman's position. Robert Campbell, a Board of Finance member, said that a system which keeps the first selectman position intact would have someone who is responsible to the voters, something a town manager form of government lacks.

"There's someone in this town the people can vote out," Campbell said. "What you're doing is eliminating that person from the

'Drug house' seized

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

Federal officials have seized a 237 Spring St. house valued at $175,000 that was used for drug operations, police said.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation seized the house on Tuesday by authority of a federal law which allows for the seizure of property suspected to be used for the trafficking of drugs, police said. A lien has been placed on the property until the cases of two men arrested in a drug bust there are resolved.

Funds from the sale of the house could be given to the Manchester Police Department for drug enforcement programs if approved by the state, police said.

The Tri-Country Narcotics Task Force obtained a warrant to search the house on July 17 following a police investigation in May which indicated that residents were selling large amounts of the drug to a long list of customers, according to a police report.

As a result of the search, police said on July 17 they arrested the owner of the house, Walter Zurowski, 34, and another man, Dean Carpenter, 34, of 1661 Homestead St. The two were both charged with possession of cocaine with the intent to sell, possession of drug paraphernalia, and operation of a drug factory, according to police.

During the search, members of the task force discovered seven street-level packets of cocaine ranging in weight from one-half ounce to one ounce with a selling value of about $50 to $100 each, according to the police report. Detectives also found two large plastic bags containing cocaine valued at about $250 to $300 each, police said. Several other smaller amounts of the drug were found hidden in different areas of the house, police said.

Paraphernalia used for weighing and snorting cocaine were also found during the search, including razor blades, glass vials, small mirrors, and lottery tickets used to package the drug, police said.

Adopt a pet: Leo and Amy

By Barbara Richmond
Manchester Herald

A very friendly male shepherd is this week's featured dog at the dog pound. Dog Warden Richard Rand has named him Leo and said he would be a wonderful pet for anyone with children.

Leo

Leo was found on Sept. 27 on Downey Drive which is near the Manchester-East Hartford town line. He's black and tan, is in excellent condition and appears to be 2 or 3 years old.

Besides Leo, there were two other dogs at the pound, as of Tuesday. One is a 14-week-old mixed breed. He was wearing two or three collars when found roaming on Main Street on Sept. 28.

The other is a female setter-cross. She's all black and also has a very nice disposition. She was found on Adams Street on Oct. 4.

Britt, the little female mixed breed featured a couple of weeks ago, has been adopted by an East Hartford family. The elderly male terrier-poodle cross, mentioned in last week's column, has been adopted by a Cushing Drive family and the young female mixed breed, found last week as Joy, was claimed by her owner and her real name is Tiffany. The dog pound is located on town property off Olcott Street near the landfill area. The dog warden is at the pound weekdays from noon to 1 p.m. and there is someone there from 6 to 9 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. The phone number at the pound is 643-6642 or you can call the police department, 646-4555 and they will get a message to the dog warden.

Thoughts

So much is made these days of physical fitness, health, and diets. How clean we are or least urged to be! Yet how filthy our language. We ridicule God and drag His Name in on damnable deeds against others for whom He also created. Many can't seem to communicate without words which express the most lewd and deprecating manner of turning something good into evil. But clean bodies and clean skin we can all nearly boast about while our thoughts and expressions would still need a lot of soap! But the things that come out of the mouth come from the heart, and these make a man "unclean." (Matthew 15:18)

'Grand lady' celebrates a century

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

Bob Bell is enamored of a grand old lady on Hilliard Street. And his wife, Adele, isn't even jealous.

Eight years ago Bell moved his company, New England Hobby Supply, into the old Bon Ami Building at 71 Hilliard Street. He became fascinated with the building, which turns a century old this year, with its landmark twin towers and octagonal chimney.

Bell calls the building the "grand old lady of Hilliard Street" and he is clearly in love with its past.

This "lady" will open to the public this weekend, for a 10th birthday celebration that's part of a two-day celebration of the town's history, called Routes to Your Roots. Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. has declared Sunday to be Bon Ami Building Day, and plans to attend the birthday party which will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This weekend, put together by the East of the River Tourism and Convention District, will also feature an auction of goods and services at the Cheney Homestead, a celebration of Fire Prevention Week at the Fireman's Museum and slide shows at three locations.

The celebration of the Bon Ami building birthday is special to Bell. He began delving into the history of the Orford Soap Co., which had manufactured Bon Ami soaps in that building for 64 years.

Bell undertook the seemingly endless renovation of the 35,000-square-foot Bon Ami building with his eyes open. "I knew it was going to be difficult. I guess you could call me a masochist," he said. The renovations have required more than $100,000 so far, and are not yet complete.

For 25 years the building sat vacant and deteriorated badly. "There wasn't even a front door. It was only boards," he said, as he pointed out the ornate door which hangs in front now. This was an interior door which Bell found and had stripped.

The problems were numerous. From dead animals piled up on the huge, central staircase, to the need for extensive brick work, insulating and tuck pointing, said Bell. One of the first things that he did was to have the interior staircase sandblasted. "You're talking about 12 coats of paint, you couldn't even tell where the wood was," Bell said.

But each phase of the renovation has brought a kind of "treasure hunt," with its own set of prizes. For example, the Bells came across clothes lockers formerly used by the female employees of Orford Soap. Pasted into one of these was a news clipping from May 20, 1927, the day Charles Lindbergh made the first solo non-stop flight across the Atlantic Ocean. The margins of this clipping were decorated — presumably by the owner of the locker — with a border of interlocking hearts.

The lucky locker find, the tale of Anthony Agostinelli, the glue "chef," and other anecdotes of Bon Ami history have been put together into a six-page booklet by Leon Enderlin, a friend and fellow train enthusiast of Bell's. Copies of this historical treatise will be distributed at the 10th birthday party of the building, on Sunday afternoon.

Once others learned of Bell's fascination with Bon Ami pieces, they began calling to offer their

AT THE PORTAL — Bob Bell talks about the work that's gone into renovating the old Bon Ami Building on Hilliard Street.

"treasures." Last week, for example, Bell was given a device in which liquid soap was first molded, then compressed and cut apart with wires, much the way curds are cut when cottage cheese is prepared.

While this device will be displayed at the Bon Ami Building this weekend, other items from Bell's collection are being moved to the Manchester Historical Museum, 126 Cedar St., which is another site for the Routes to Your Roots celebration.

In addition, former Bon Ami employees have been invited to attend the centennial party on Sunday afternoon, along with the family which now produces Bon Ami products in Kansas City, Mo.

"This kind of thing really gets into your system, you don't want to let go," said Bell, of his interest in Bon Ami. "It's great to find that you're holding onto a piece of town history."

Crash victim in coma for three weeks

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

A Vernon woman is still in a coma after being critically injured in an accident in Manchester three weeks ago.

Amy F. Gravelle, 27, who was trapped inside her car for more than 45 minutes following a Sept. 14 accident on Adams Street, was listed in critical condition today at Hartford Hospital. Details concerning her injuries were not available.

The accident also injured five other people and resulted in the arrest of a Manchester man on drunken driving charges, police said.

The family is praying for Gravelle's recovery, said her 21-year-old sister Jackie Pichowski, who was also injured in the accident. Pichowski, who was a passenger in her sister's car, was treated for abdominal trauma at Manchester Memorial Hospital and released Sept. 23.

Pichowski, who had her spleen removed and suffered four broken ribs, attends Central Connecticut University but will not be able to return to school for about a month. But she said the last thing on her mind right now is herself.

"I'm in a lot of pain, but I'm not even worried about myself. I'm worried about my sister waking up and coming back home to us," Pichowski said. Following the accident, police said they arrested James Napolitano, 24, of Spruce St., and charged him with second-degree assault with a motor vehicle while intoxicated, evading responsibility, and operating with a license under suspension.

Napolitano is being held at the Hartford Community Correctional Center because he could not post a $5,000 bond. He is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Oct. 11.

Police said Napolitano left the scene of the accident. He was found later by police being treated for injuries at Rockville General Hospital.

Pichowski said other family members, who did not wish to comment, are not concerned with what happens to Napolitano and are more concerned about Gravelle's recovery. Gravelle has two children.

"All we really care about is what happens to Amy," Pichowski said. "We're too busy praying for her recovery to even care about what happens to (Napolitano). He's the last person we need to think about."

"Our priest has been telling us: Don't fill your heart with hate, fill it with love and pray for Amy's recovery," she said.

Pichowski said the family is planning to express its gratitude to the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department members who prepared Gravelle to be transported in the Life Star helicopter.

Water problem fixed

COVENTRY — Problems with low water levels at Coventry High School Wednesday have been corrected, but maintenance is looking into the situation to see what may have caused the reduction, a maintenance worker said today.

School stayed in session the full day Wednesday despite the low water levels in the tanks, maintenance worker Frank Brousseau said. Maintenance workers discovered Wednesday that switches in the pump room had been turned off, resulting in a reduced water supply.

Brousseau said no one is sure how the switches got turned off, but the maintenance supervisor is investigating. Maintenance turned them back on Wednesday, the water supply built itself back up to normal levels and school is in session today.

"Everything is working at 100 percent today," Brousseau said.

Herbst aims to satisfy debate date

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — All but one candidate for the 8th Assembly District seat and the 33rd Senatorial District seat have agreed to square off in a debate scheduled for Oct. 18 at the Coventry Grange.

The debate at the Grange on Route 44 is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. All candidates have confirmed they will be there except Democratic incumbent Sen. Marie Herbst, D-Vernon, who may have a scheduling conflict. Herbst is challenged for the 33rd Senatorial District seat by James D. Giulietti.

"I spoke with Mrs. Herbst and she may be able to make it if we move the time from 8 to 7 and have the Senate candidates go in the first 30-minute segment," Republican Timothy Scott, a candidate for the 8th Assembly District seat, said Wednesday.

Scott, who is challenging incumbent Democratic state Rep. Edith Prague, said he organized the debate and that it will be scheduled for 7 p.m.

If Herbst cannot make it to go ahead with the debate and Giulietti, her GOP challenger from Vernon, will answer questions from the audience. Giulietti is seeking to regain the Senate seat he lost two years ago.

Giulietti said this week, "Even if I don't show up I'll be there. I have things to say."

Herbst said Tuesday, "The debate was only mentioned to me once a while back by Edie (Prague). I didn't get a written invitation and assumed it wasn't on so I committed myself to attend another engagement in Woodstock."

But she added she was trying to arrange her schedule to attend.

Herbst said Scott had apologized for not adequately notifying her of the debate invitation.

Herbst and Giulietti will meet in two other debates. One will be in a United Cable Television studio next Wednesday and will be broadcast before the November election. The other is a public forum at the town hall in Mansfield Nov. 2 at 7:30.

Prague said, "I think it is a real benefit to the voters to meet the candidates, listen to what they have to say, then evaluate."

Prague and Scott have already met in two debates, one in Columbus, the other in Vernon. Grange master William Miller will moderate. Miller said the Grange is a non-partisan organization and acting only as a host to the event.

The format agreed to by the candidates who have confirmed they will be there will involve taking questions from the audience. Those must be written and handed to the moderator anytime after the start of the debate.

Questions must pertain to the budget, crime, the environment, housing and health.

Miller said the seating capacity of the Grange is for 120 people.

Meotti, Zinsser spar again

By Michele Noble
Manchester Herald

State Sen. Michael Meotti, D-Glastonbury, defended his record during a cable television debate Wednesday night with his opponent for the 4th Senatorial District seat, former state Sen. Carl Zinsser, R-Manchester.

The debate will be presented on public access Channel 33 at least once a week until the election on Nov. 8. The date and time of the first showing were not available today. It was their third debate. Several others are scheduled.

During the hour-long debate, Zinsser — who lost the seat to Meotti in 1986 — attacked the Democrat's two-year voting record on a number of issues and on several occasions reiterated his accusation that his opponent favors forced busing.

The two candidates were given two-minute responses and one-minute rebuttals to questions posed by representatives from four area newspapers at the Cox Cable Greater Hartford building at Parker Street.

In a three-minute opening speech, Meotti restated his stand on the state Department of Education's report concerning forced busing and the state Department of Transportation's "stripping of forests" for highway projects. Two issues he has challenged Meotti about in the past. He also said he was in favor of the death penalty, a balanced budget and property tax reform.

Zinsser said that the bill passed by the Legislature does not prohibit forced busing, as Meotti has said, but merely says the state Department of Education has to come back to the General Assembly before it can provide for forced busing. This bill, Zinsser said, will ultimately lead to forced busing.

Meotti countered that the issue has become distorted, adding that "it is sad that in 1988 we are making an issue out of busing."

Meotti also challenged a new formula for state aid to school districts, suggesting that the funds for the formula be phased in over a seven-year period instead of the current five. He said he was opposed to a state income tax to pay for the plan.

Meotti, who said the bill was "not perfect" but one he was proud of, said that he believed the new formula was a major improvement over the old one because it eliminates fluctuations in the amount of the grants and will increase Manchester's grant in each year over the next four years. He said he would not approve of funding the program through state income tax.

A question was raised about Meotti's refusal to sign a petition to force the state Human Services Commission to hold a hearing on the state funding of Medicaid abortions.

Meotti, who has repeatedly said he is opposed to state funding of abortions as a "primary means of birth control," said that he didn't mean to mislead the opponents of the funding, but said he didn't think the hearing would be worthwhile.

The Democrat, who said he was pressed by several Republicans to sign the petition, called the incident a "partisan stunt."

The question gave Zinsser another opportunity to challenge Meotti's voting record, echoing what has become the main theme in his campaign, "credibility."

"You can say one thing to a group in Manchester and Glastonbury and then go to Hartford and say another thing," Zinsser said. "If you give your word to do something, you should follow through."

In answering a question concerning the problem of rising hospital fees — an issue the two candidates sharply differ on — Meotti said he plans to bring together experts from hospitals, the state Commission on Hospitals and Health Care, and the Blue Cross to work out a plan that will provide hospitals with the funds they need to provide services.

Zinsser, on the other hand, said the state should scrap the present hospital cost control plan and start a new measure from scratch.

The Republican candidate also pointed to an amendment to affordable housing legislation he said Meotti voted for that hands some of the local control over the decision-making process to a regional committee.

Meotti said the statement was "inaccurate" and said that the regional committee would only need to approve long-range plans and would collaborate with local committees concerning those plans. He said he is a strong advocate of local control.

"I think I have a proven track record and any attempt to completely eliminate illness going to have any bearing here," Meotti added.

The four-member media panel which questioned the candidates included Alex Grelli, of the Manchester Herald, Alex Wood, of the Journal Inquirer, James Robinson of the Hartford Courant and Tink Henderson of the Glastonbury Citizen. Joyce Taylor, of the League of Women Voters, served as moderator.

Thompson backs safe food bill

By Alex Grelli
Manchester Herald

State Rep. John Thompson, D-Manchester, plans to join two other representatives in introducing legislation he said will insure a uniform statewide standard for training personnel who prepare food for public consumption.

Thompson is seeking his second term from Manchester's 13th Assembly District.

The announcement of plans for the legislation was made at a news conference held Wednesday morning in the Legislative Office Building at Hartford in conjunction with a meeting of the Connecticut Environmental Health Association, composed of health directors, health inspectors and health educators throughout the state.

Thompson was joined in the conference by Rep. Naomi Cohen, D-Bloomfield, and Rep. Joseph P. DeStarrs.

In a news release, the three representatives said they were part of a group of 24 representatives who supported similar legislation about 18 months ago.

They said they found themselves in the minority when intense industry lobbying made their effort unsuccessful.

They said that the proposed legislation now has the support of the Connecticut Environmental Health Association and of food stores, restaurants, caterers, Thompson said Manchester Community College has an education program ready to implement which would train food handlers to instruct fellow workers in preventing food from becoming contaminated.

He said the legislation he will help introduce will require at least one person with food preservation training in each establishment that serves food.

The release said that in 1987, when the legislation failed, more than 1,000 positive cultures were identified in the state as containing food-borne disease, 32 percent more than in the previous year. Inspections showed that food was stored at unsafe temperatures in 60 percent of the cases.

In the release, the legislators said that while the legislation will not completely eliminate illness transmitted by improperly prepared or stored foods, it will reduce pain, suffering, fatalities, and medical and legal costs associated with food outbreaks.

John Salcius, town sanitarian in Manchester, and three inspectors from the Health Division were, at the association meeting. They were H. Larry Jean, Josephine Forte, and Gary Owens.

Auditors at odds

HARTFORD (AP) — The state's auditors, who rarely disagree in public, are at odds over the future role of the State Properties Review Board, the agency that oversees the state's leasing of office space.

Republican Auditor Henry J. Becker Jr. says the board should not be stripped of its binding authority to approve and reject state leases.

Public Works Commissioner Donald Cassin has proposed the board become just an advisory panel. Becker said earlier this week that he has concerns about the move, including Cassin's "political connections."

"I don't have a lot of confidence in the guy," Becker said Tuesday of Cassin, a Democrat.

Becker said he thinks Cassin's proposal last week to make the 13-year-old watchdog an advisory panel is "an attempt to get out of any kind of review at all" on leases.

Park attracts thousands

BRISTOL (AP) — The new owners of Lake Compounce Festival Park say their efforts to bring big-name entertainment into Connecticut was a success this summer and boosted the amusement park's attendance 10 percent over 1987.

Meriden man faces term

HARTFORD (AP) — A Meriden man who pleaded guilty to charges of possessing a firearm will face at least 15 years in prison because he is a convicted felon, according to the U.S. attorney's office.

William H. Buehler, 40, admitted in Hartford Federal Court Tuesday to possessing a firearm on June 6, 1987. Buehler also said he had been previously convicted of possessing heroin, which is a felony offense, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy said in a prepared statement.

The firearm, which was discovered in the clubhouse of a motorcycle gang in Meriden, had been transported from Florida, Twardy said.

Under a recent federal law, convicted felons found in possession of firearms which have traveled in interstate commerce face a mandatory minimum sentence of 15 years in prison, he said.

Somers inmate charged

SOMERS (AP) — A Somers state prison inmate was charged in connection with the stabbing of another inmate — his stepfather — in the prison recreation yard, state police said.

Vaughn D. Outlaw, 21, formerly of New Haven, was arrested Wednesday in Rockville Superior Court on a bench warrant charging him with first-degree assault and possession of a dangerous weapon.

A state police affidavit said Outlaw allegedly stabbed Cecil A. Basden, 55, about 15 times in the recreation yard on Aug. 28. Basden is serving a 20-year sentence for manslaughter in the killing of his wife, Outlaw's mother.

Basden, who recovered from his wounds, has been relocated to the Litchfield Community Correctional Center for his own protection, said Correction Department spokesman Michael Donahue.

Newtown challenges jail-impact report

HARTFORD (AP) — The first selectman in Newtown says he's ready for the next round in his town's fight against a planned 400-bed Newtown jail, even though he acknowledges he has lost a 3 percent change of stopping it.

First Selectman Roderick J. MacKenzie said town officials will speak out against the project at a hearing next month when state officials take public comments on the preliminary report.

He said the project would pose significant threats to the area.

The public will have a chance to comment on the preliminary report through Dec. 2 before the project is put in final form. Unless dramatic evidence to the contrary is found, the preliminary conclusion is expected to become final, clearing the way for the start of construction by spring.

Deputy Correction Commissioner Leonard G. Barbieri said the design of the jail is under way on the assumption that the project will go forward.

MacKenzie said he was "disappointed but not surprised" with the preliminary report by SEA Consultants Inc. of Wethersfield.

Cops nab 2nd of 3 escapees

WATERBURY (AP) — The second of three prisoners who escaped the jail out of Newtown, holding court was arrested Wednesday night as he tried to hide in the closet of a third-floor apartment, police said.

Alton Woods, 25, was arrested around 10 p.m. Wednesday after police received a tip concerning his whereabouts. Waterbury police Sgt. Patrick Corozza said.

Police forced open the apartment door and found Woods hiding in a closet, he said.

Woods, who offered no resistance, was arrested on a warrant charging him with second-degree robbery and possession of narcotics. Four other people who were in the apartment at the time of Woods' arrest were charged with harboring a fugitive. Corozza said.

Woods was originally charged with attempted murder and reckless endangerment.

Woods has been on the lam since Monday, when he escaped with two other prisoners from a first-floor holding cell in Waterbury Superior Court. Woods and the other prisoners overpowered two deputy sheriffs, locked them in the jail cell and escaped through a carport.

A second prisoner, Americo Nieves, 29, also of Waterbury, was arrested around 11 p.m. Monday at Amici's Restaurant in Waterbury after patrons recognized a picture of him on the television news and called police.

Nieves was originally charged with first-degree sexual assault, failure to appear, trespassing and second-degree burglary.

State police Sgt. Scott O'Mara said police are chasing down tips on the whereabouts of the third suspect, Paul Kinlon, 28, of Waterbury.

O'Mara said Kinlon's wife, Angela Kinlon of Waterbury, attempted to buy a car from an acquaintance on Sunday. Mrs. Kinlon left with car, but never returned, he said.

The car was reported stolen on Wednesday, he said.

State police detectives went to the home of Mrs. Kinlon's mother in Waterbury and found that Angela Kinlon's clothes were missing, O'Mara said. He said police believe that Mrs. Kinlon is with her husband.

Mrs. Kinlon also uses the alias of Angela Washington, he said.

Mrs. King's visit becomes political

HARTFORD (AP) — It wasn't billed as a political event, but both candidates for the U.S. Senate in Connecticut got some mileage out of Coretta Scott King's visit to the state.

Mrs. King, widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., spoke at a forum held Wednesday at Greater Hartford Community College to commemorate the 1968 March on Washington, when her husband delivered his famed "I Have a Dream" speech.

Although she said she was staying neutral in Republican Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr.'s race against Democratic challenger Joseph I. Lieberman, Mrs. King heaped praise on Weicker's civil rights record.

"I am not endorsing any candidates," Mrs. King said of Weicker, who also addressed the forum. "But before I begin, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for being a consistent champion of minority rights in America."

"You have led your party in standing up for equality, and I just wanted you to know how much I appreciate it," she said.

Later, Mrs. King attended a luncheon at the Wadsworth Atheneum, where she was introduced by Lieberman, Connecticut's attorney general.

"Dr. King rallied — and rallied — a nation's conscience," said Lieberman, who as a college student participated in the Aug. 28, 1963, march on Washington.

"His enduring legacy is the Civil Rights Act, which Congress passed soon after his watershed speech," Lieberman said. "But Dr. King was the catalyst for another kind of legacy — a future generation of leaders, black and white, who carried on the fight after he left us because we shared the dream."

Mrs. King echoed her husband's 1963 speech in exhorting Americans to rededicate themselves to a nation "united in justice, equality and brotherhood."

"We have made significant progress in reducing racial segregation in the last 25 years," Mrs. King told about 300 people attending the forum. "The Dream at Twenty-Five."

"But we have much to do before we can say that we have fulfilled the dream of a nation united in justice, equality and brotherhood," she said. "Despite the gains of the last quarter of a century, the festering sores of poverty, racism and violence continue to frustrate our hopes for national unity."

The forum was the first of four being held around the country to mark the 1963 march, when 250,000 people converged on the National Mall to demand equality for blacks in America.

Mrs. King is president of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change in Atlanta, which is holding similar forums in Atlanta and two other, still-to-be-decided cities.

"We still have a dream of a nation free from the cancer of racism and discrimination," Mrs. King said. "In our dream all people are judged instead by the content of their character and the quality of their contributions," she said.

Sommers named to board
Heather E. Sommers of Stafford Springs, an employee of Allied Printing Services of Manchester, was recently elected to the board of directors of the Connecticut Society to Prevent Blindness.

Sommers is the executive vice president of sales and customer relations at Allied. She is a graduate of Catholic University in Washington, D.C. She is a member of Allied's board of trustees and of Women in Communications.

Sommers also serves on the society's "Tip A Whaler" dinner committee.

The society is a non-profit organization which promotes eye health and safety through community services, public and professional education and research.

Eleven pass nursing test
Three Manchester residents are among 11 Manchester Memorial Hospital staff members who passed their state nursing exams.

The 11 staff members who are now registered nurses are: Brenda LaBarre, Catherine McConville and Julie Woodhouse, all of Manchester; Leslie Furlong and Sarah Shea, both of Glastonbury; Lisa Beaulac of Tolland; Julie Martocchio of Enfield; Jane Pascher of Ellington; Laurel Phelan of Hartford; Anthony Tiemann of Columbia; and Trina Wittenzeller of Woodstock.

Troopers endorse candidates
State Sens. Michael Meotti, D-Glastonbury, and Marie Herbst, D-Vernon, were not among the 39 legislators endorsed for re-election by the Connecticut State Police Union. Also not endorsed were state Reps. Edith Prague, D-Columbia, and J. Peter Fuscasses, R-Marlborough.

Among the endorsed candidates were state Reps. Donald Bates, D-East Hartford, James McCavanagh, D-Manchester, and John W. Thompson, D-Manchester.

In a news release listing the endorsed candidates, Robert J. Kowalczyk, the union president, said the endorsements were based primarily on past voting records on legislation for working men and women. Development of a state police stress-management program and improved workers' compensation benefits were among the issues in determining the endorsements, he said.

He said candidates for the General Assembly should be challenged to say how they intend to finance the deficit.

Giulietti in favor of casinos
James Giulietti of Vernon, Republican candidate in the 33rd Senatorial District, has said he will support state-owned and operated casinos subject to local referendum in any host town as a means of financing the state budget deficit.

Giulietti said, "I will never vote for a state income tax as a state senator."

He said he considers state-owned casinos as a subject to local referendum in any host town as a means of financing the state budget deficit.

OPINION

Continuity one key in government

The most significant decision the Board of Directors has made about what sort of person should be hired to succeed Robert Weiss as town manager is that the candidate should be someone in mid-career.

There are two reasons for that. The chief one is that Manchester is large enough and its problems complicated enough to require a manager with considerable experience and to provide an adequate professional challenge for such a manager.

A related reason is that it would be fortunate if the newly hired manager finds Manchester the right place in which to spend the rest of his or her professional life.

One of the keys to the effectiveness of the council-manager form of government is continuity in the highest level of administration.

But to attract a person in mid-career the town has to offer an adequate salary and the directors are apparently willing to do so. They are talking about a range of $70,000 to $75,000.

One encouraging sign is the bipartisan support for hiring a manager with experience and setting the salary accordingly. Republican Director Ronald Osella and Democratic Director Stephen Cassano, who often clash, have both supported the idea.

Both are on the committee charged with finding a new manager.

One town director, Democrat Mary Ann Handley, objects to the fact that all members of the committee are men and all are of about the same age, and thus the committee is too homogeneous. That should not be a problem because the directors plan to seek advice from the public and from administrative department heads on the selection.

Thanks from 8th district

To the Editor:

During the past year the Manchester Fire Department, Eighth Utilities District, has commemorated its 100th year with enthusiasm and pride. The conclusion of the "The Big One" has left us with a huge and almost impossible task. We will never be able to adequately express our appreciation and thanks to those who contributed to our happy celebration.

We are deeply grateful to the members of the business community for their financial and moral support to the staff of numerous departments and agencies of the town of Manchester for cooperation and assistance cheerfully and ably provided, to our fellow firefighters from throughout Connecticut for their enthusiasm and professionalism, to individuals and volunteers without number who stepped in at a moment's notice, and to the members of the Eighth District family. A special note of thanks to the Manchester Police Department for outstanding service and support beginning in 1981 and continuing throughout the day.

Beyond this is a debt owed to the people of Manchester. Time and again we heard from out-of-town firefighters that "This is the friendliest, warmest town we've ever been to" and "What a great town; we'll come back anytime." You truly made "The Big One" a community celebration of pride and happiness. Thank you, Manchester, for the opportunity to serve, for 100 years of support, and for a grand celebration.

We will attempt to pay our debt in the only way we know. We pledge continued service to you for the next 100 years with all the dedication and energy at our command. From each member of the Manchester Fire Department to each of you, thanks.

Bolton not for everyone

To the Editor:

A recent article in the Herald in which Carl Preuss of Bolton voiced the wish he has that a town manager for Bolton should be required to live in Bolton has set me to wondering.

First of all, why should the town manager for Bolton be required to live there? As an employee of "John Doe Electronics" located in Middletown required to live in Middletown? Is your banker in an East Hartford bank required to live in East Hartford? What purpose would the requirement serve?

Secondly, is any town within its legal rights to impose upon a town official a residency requirement? With the residency requirement would the requirements that the individual send his children to town schools, pay taxes to the town, and cope with town garbage collection, the plowing of town roads.

Casinos see Indians as competition

WASHINGTON — It is hard to picture the casual gambler passing up the glitz of Caesar's Palace for a metal bingo shed on a Wisconsin Indian reservation. But the casino industry apparently views the growing appeal of Indian gaming as competition.

Nevada casino barons, who claim they want to protect American Indians from organized crime, have successfully lobbied Congress for a law that crimps gambling on Indian reservations.

The new law will require Indian tribes to subject their bingo and betting parlors to state and federal inspection and to pay fees to finance the regulatory bureaucracy. Until now, the tribes have regulated, their own gambling operations and there is no evidence of any organized crime involvement.

The National Congress of American Indians says the attempt to restrict reservation gambling is a violation of the Indians' sovereign rights and will open the door to state regulation of their lands.

In the past six years, bingo, pull tabs, card games and video betting have blossomed into a major source of revenue for more than 100 Indian tribes. Indian gaming now generates about $400 million a year.

The Nevada Resort Association paid a Washington law firm $42,100 during the first six months of this year. The firm made campaign contributions to some members of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee and the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee during that same time frame. The law went through two committee votes and was passed Sept. 27.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., is not convinced by the stated intent of the law, "to shield (tribes) from organized crime and other corrupting influences."

In testimony on the House floor, Udall noted the irony of the debate: "The Indian opponents that are instructing us in the evils of organized crime are gambling casino operators of Nevada, the Horse Track Owners Association and American Greyhound Track Operators Association," Udall said.

"It is quite simply economics. The gambling lords of Nevada and the race track owners of the country perceive an economic threat to their profits."

Indian leaders say the tribes have become increasingly dependent on gambling revenues. Federal funding for Indian programs has declined by 15 percent under the Reagan administration. Many tribes now rely on gaming proceeds to generate more than half of their revenues for health, education and housing needs.

The law, awaiting President Reagan's signature, was a compromise between those who favored severely restricting Indian gambling operations and those who wanted only a bare minimum of state interference.

Arguably, the record of organized crime infiltration in casinos in the past would lead Congress to believe that the tribes should also be scrutinized. But the Indians say they are capable of regulating their own industry rather than surrendering their sovereignty to the states.

Casino owners carried the clout of Nevada Senators Harry Reid, a Democrat, and Chic Hecht, a Republican, into the political ring. Reid got the Senate's attention soon after entering office in 1986, when he introduced a bill that would have outlawed all Indian gambling enterprises except bingo, effectively eliminating the reservations as a source of competition for Nevada. Reid's 1988 campaign contributions include at least $1,000 each from the owners of these Nevada casinos: Circus Circus, Palace Station, Barbary Coast, Golden Nugget and Holiday Casino.

A Reid staffer told our associate Jim Lynch that the senator's strong sentiments on gaming regulation stem from his four years as chief regulator of that industry in Nevada. He knows firsthand how vulnerable the gambling industry is to the criminal element, the spokesman said. A scandal in Indian gaming would stifle the entire industry and hurt Las Vegas, he added.

Hecht owns more than $100,000 of stock in the California Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas. Atlantic City casino magnate Donald Trump contributed $1,000 to Hecht's Senate campaign last year.

Rush to the finish
Plenty of worthy legislation will be left in the dust as Congress rushes to adjourn this month. One proposal with little, if any, opposition would boost federal benefits to the survivors of public safety officers who are killed in the line of duty.

Currently, the survivors get $50,000 — an amount that was set 11 years ago. The bill in Congress would double the amount and include a provision for automatic escalations in the future. The bill is expected to pass the Senate with ease, but probably will not make it to the House floor. That would be unfortunate for the families of about 100 firefighters, police officers and ambulance drivers who die on the job each year.

The Race for the White House

Dems hope Quayle an issue after VP candidates' debate

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Michael Dukakis and George Bush, picking up where their underdog status left off, are arguing about the fitness of their running mates for the nation's highest office after a vice presidential debate that focused on doubts about Dan Quayle's background and qualifications.

Democrats hoped the debate that dramatized their contention that Quayle was too inexperienced to step into the presidency on a moment's notice and they drew cheer from the first flash poll suggesting much of the public was going along with that view.

In the only debate scheduled between the two of them, Quayle and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen clashed over protecting the environment, Social Security, Contra aid, taxes and campaign reform.

An ABC News poll rated Bentsen the clear winner. Six debate judges who scored the encounter for The Associated Press also picked Bentsen unanimously as the victor.

Nevertheless, Republican Quayle said he did "great" in his prime-time encounter with Lloyd Bentsen. "I think I did fine and I enjoyed it. I had fun."

In a 90-minute meeting where neither candidate made any big mistakes, the most electric moment came when the boyish-looking, 41-year-old Quayle was defending his qualifications and said he had as much experience as John F. Kennedy when he had fun.

Bentsen shot back, "Senator, I served with Jack Kennedy. I knew Jack Kennedy, Jack Kennedy was a friend of mine. Senator, you're not Jack Kennedy."

With an icy stare, Quayle interrupted to say, "That was really uncalled for, senator." Bentsen replied, "You are the one who was making the comparison, senator ... and I'm the one who knew him well."

In Fort Worth, Texas, Vice President Bush said Quayle hit a "home run" right from the start of the debate and wasn't fazed by the questions about his fitness. Bush said that Quayle "under tremendous flying colors ... came through with flying colors."

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., called Bentsen's remark "vicious" and "a cheap shot." "That was very unbecomingly of Lloyd Bentsen," Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said he was "embarrassed" for Quayle.

In a presidential race that is virtually a tossup at this point, polls indicate that Quayle is costing Bush support, with many voters uneasy about his readiness for high office.

It was the first question put to Quayle on Wednesday night, and he replied, "I have more experience than others that have sought the office of vice president." He said that on national security and arms control, education and jobs and the deficit, "I have more experience than does the governor of Massachusetts."

The 67-year-old Bentsen was never challenged on his qualifications, but he pointed out that he had served in combat, was a businessman and a farmer as well as a senator.

Underlining the sensitivity of the exchange, Bush's campaign chief, James A. Baker III, acknowledged later that it might have been the most riveting part of the debate. However, he added, "The American people will not judge the debate on one response or rebuttal or remark. That's not

State's pols rally behind candidates

HARTFORD (AP) — Connecticut politicians rallied behind their party's vice presidential candidates in predictable fashion, dividing evenly along party lines.

While Republicans scored the 90-minute debate Wednesday in Omaha, Neb., as a victory for Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, Democrats declared Lloyd Bentsen the clear winner.

U.S. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., in a statement released Wednesday night, said the debate supported views he formed while serving with both men in the Senate.

"I've served in the Senate for eight years with both of these men and I'm on good terms with both of them," Dodd said. "But opinions I've formed over that period were only confirmed tonight; Lloyd Bentsen should come to that, is qualified to be president. Dan Quayle is not."

The two-term senator said Quayle showed that he "doesn't have the knowledge, the perspective, the temperament or the plain common sense to be a heartbeat away from the presidency."

On the Republican side, U.S. Rep. John G. Rowland, R-Conn., said Quayle was precise and specific in answering the questions put to him by a panel of four journalists. Bentsen, he said, never answered the questions.

"I scored it three-to-one-to-zero," Rowland said. "Three for Quayle, one for the press for asking the same question four times, and zero for Bentsen for never answering a question."

State Sen. Reginald J. Smith, R-New Hartford, said he scored it a split, with neither candidate answering what he called the tough question — how to resolve the federal budget deficit.

"Nobody said which programs they would cut to bring the budget into balance," said Smith, the Senate minority leader. "That means nobody has set down how they are going to do it."

Gov. William A. O'Neill said in a statement that Bentsen's answers showed his "experience, knowledge and ability," while Quayle's responses appeared "rehearsed."

Why modernize strategic nuclear arms?

WASHINGTON — Neither George Bush nor Michael Dukakis faced the central issue in their debate on how to defend the country.

The question is not which weapon system ought to be cut to save money — but how much modernization of strategic nuclear weapons is needed.

We have 13,000 nuclear weapons, and the Soviet Union has 12,000. Both sides, and both political parties, favor cutting those numbers in half. The question is, why continue building any nuclear weapons or delivery systems if the goal is to reduce the chance of nuclear war and halt the arms race?

Modernization is nearly a god to Bush, and is a semi-god to Dukakis.

"How do you deter nuclear attack without modernizing our nuclear forces when the Soviets are modernizing?" Bush asked.

It is a good question, but not a central one. What Dukakis should have said in response is this: "Why not make the Strategic Arms Reductions Treaty (START) one which prohibits any modernization by either side? That would save $138 billion."

Instead, Dukakis had to sound tough and talk about "modernization" that he supports: "I'm for Stealth. I'm for the D-5. I'm for going ahead on the advanced cruise missile."

They would cost $81 billion and would not be needed if both sides agreed to build no new systems.

What's the case for them? Or for those that Dukakis has opposed, which Bush favors? As Dukakis put it, "Mr. Bush wants to spend billions on Star Wars." He apparently wants to spend billions on the MX and on railroad cars — a weapons system we don't need and can't afford. I thought the administration was opposed to Midgetman." (The Pentagon does oppose it.) Bush has a point that some modernization will be needed if the Soviets continue to modernize.

However, it is quite probable that they are building new systems because we are doing so.

Why not ask the Soviets to consider a mutual halt of modernization?

That would save $138 billion, says Stephen Cain of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities in a report both sides should read. It's called "The START Agreement: Strategic Options and Budgetary Savings."

"The acquisition of new strategic offensive nuclear weapons delivery systems currently planned could cost approximately $138 billion during the 1990s," he says. "The United States could continue all of these planned acquisition in slightly reduced numbers, while complying with the START treaty by dismantling older weapons."

He says the START treaty could save only $7 billion in weapons acquisition costs if the United States proceeds with all current modernization programs. With the federal deficit, that's not good enough.

The National Journal last week described "the overwhelming prospect that whoever wins the election will find himself caught in the jaws of a fiscal vise that promises to crush military initiatives, whether Reagan's SDI (Star Wars) or Dukakis' Conventional Defense Initiative (CDI)."

Prudential-Bache published a study on the current consensus in Washington that "defense spending can be expected to remain essentially flat — hovering at about $300 billion — over several years." While that is a 40 percent jump after inflation from the 1980 defense budget of $144 billion, "Pentagon planners were assuming internally only two years ago that they would have almost $400 billion — not $300 billion in FY 1990."

That means "about $300 billion must be cut from existing plans" for 1990-94. Unquestionably, some weapons now approved must be scrapped. Which ones? Dukakis suggests eliminating new MX missiles and Midgetman, saving $48.3 billion. But he'd spend much of that on "CDI."

And Stephen Cain says, "If the Soviets continue modernization, it is reasonable for us to go with Midgetman or more MXs. However, regardless of whether they modernize or not, I have not heard any justification for the B-2 (Stealth) bomber" which is slated to cost an added $24 billion.

Its purpose is to hunt for mobile Soviet targets after an initial exchange of nuclear attacks on both the U.S. and U.S.S.R. Even if that ghastly mission is needed, experts say it can be done with cruise missiles.

Yet both candidates favor the B-2. Why? Dukakis has a point that Bush "never met a weapons system he did not like." When asked to name one he'd be willing to cut, he cited three that had already been cut: the AGF fighter, the Divad and Minuteman additions.

However, both candidates should explain why any modernization is needed

Here is the weekend's schedule:

Saturday

The kickoff is an auction Saturday morning at the Cheney Homestead on Hartford Road.

Refreshments are being prepared by the Patisserie restaurant.

The homestead and the Keeney School, on the same grounds, will be open for tours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On the next block, Fire Prevention Week will be observed at the Connecticut Firemen's Historical Society Museum, 230 Pine St.

The museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Elks Club, with animated messages about fire prevention, will be on the site from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Elks Children's Museum, 247 S. Main St., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Elks Children's Museum, 247 S. Main St., will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Across town, the focus is on the 100th birthday of the Bon Ami building at 71 Hilliard St.

The museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

John Sutherland will present his slide show, "Cheney Brothers Was the World," on immigration.

Carol Gragore, the museum's artist of the month, will demonstrate the paper-cutting technique known as sherechnitte.

The museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

At the Bon Ami building, the trains will be running and the dollhouse displays will be open.

Herb Bengtson of the Manchester Historical Society will present a slide lecture on the history of the North End at 5 p.m.

says, if a local person becomes a candidate for the job.

"The politics associated with local candidates can be as intense as the departure circumstances of an existing town manager," Baram says.

Manchester's assistant town manager, Steven R. Werbner, has said that he has not decided whether he will seek the post of manager.

But candidates from outside the community also pose certain risks, Hong said.

"There are obviously a number of problems that occur when you bring in a manager from another community," she said.

Familiarity with the community was the reason the council in Norwich replaced Cunningham with Zmylinski, Hong said.

"What we were looking for was some continuity," she said.

Hong said that there should be no problem in finding the right manager for Manchester if the directors are not afraid to re-advertise for the post if they are not completely satisfied with the first set of applicants.

But she added, "The council will probably be very unprepared for the amount of scrutiny they will come under because it hasn't been done so long."

the accident, workers determined whether it was safe to respond.

Matt Nelson, deputy chief of the East Hartford Fire Department, said that although the accident victim was left unattended for about 20 to 25 minutes until a determination was made, in the long run it prevented firefighters from being injured.

"More firefighters were being hurt or killed than people being saved (in such an emergency)," he said.

After determining that the scene was safe, firefighters helped the victim and took him to the hospital. The victim, firefighters and policemen were decontaminated before being able to leave the scene, Nelson said.

After the 45-minute drill at the park, the victim was taken to the hospital. Also, an East Hartford Fire Department rescue worker was sent to the hospital after her hand was exposed to the simulated radiation, said Amy Avery, hospital spokesman.

The hospital will use the drill as a teaching opportunity to let workers gain experience on how to approach, handle and decontaminate patients, she said.

Officials from the hospital and emergency planning committee will meet next week to review the exercise, Kraatz said.

He would have liked to have had the meeting to review the accident earlier, but scheduling conflicts made that impossible.

ballot box."

Sandra W. Pierog, first selectman, said that would be one of the suggestions considered by the selectmen.

The selectmen, who recently received an initial report from the commission, have 15 days to make suggested changes to the commission, which in turn has another 30 days to submit a final report to the selectmen, Pierog said.

The selectmen then either accept or reject the report. If accepted, it could be voted on by residents by January. If rejected, the changes can be brought up to vote by petition, Pierog said.

Not everyone agreed with Campbell. Many people at the hearing said that more professionalism was needed in government, which is something a town manager could bring.

"We are growing and our form of government is not working," said resident Pat Pinto. "We're asking too much of volunteers."

Lake Commission Grant Davis said a compromise between the people who want a town manager and those who don't may have to be worked out.

Hearing not valid, Northfield man says of water rate bid

COVENTRY — A Fieldstone Lane resident claims that an Oct. 11 hearing on the General Water Services Co.'s proposed 142 percent rate hike will be invalid because the Stratford-based company did not tell its customers about the hearing.

The hearing may be canceled or postponed if the company has failed to notify customers within seven days of the hearing as required by law, Louise Rickard, spokeswoman for the state Department of Public Utility Control, said today.

Rickard said she didn't know whether the company has notified customers, but if it hasn't, it could be fined. The violation would be considered by the hearing officer, she said.

Two summers ago, the Northfield section suffered periodic water outages.

General Water Services has requested a quarterly increase from $37.20 to $90 and an annual increase from $148.80 to $360, according to the DPUC.

Rickard said the company's application said the increase is needed to cover operating losses last year. The company predicts larger losses this year, according to the application, she said.

Wickham Park Invitational run again serves as a mid-year test

By Jim Tierney Manchester Herald

The halfway point of the scholastic cross country season has arrived, and with it annually comes an important test — the Wickham Park Cross Country Invitational.

Recurring for its eighth edition, the Wickham Invitational will draw all of the top boys' and girls' teams in Connecticut, along with squads from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and New York.

Approximately 1,500 runners and 100 schools will compete in Saturday's 12-race card. Competition begins at 10 a.m. with the seventh and eighth grade races.

Entered in the girls' championship race which will answer the gun at 11:30 a.m. are both Manchester High and East Catholic.

The Manchester girls' squad has a 7-1 dual meet record while East is 4-1. Teams must have won 80 percent or better of their dual meets to qualify for the championship races.

Manchester, which will be without senior captain Merry Chodzievic due to a hip injury, has been led by junior Beth Cool and sophomore Marianne Loto.

"I see us improving a lot. I'm not putting any pressure on them at all," Bebyn said. "I feel our depth has improved. We've come a long way in terms of confidence. I hope we finish in the top half."

Manchester finished third in the state competition for the state championships in three weeks. East is led by sophomore All-Stater Nancy Byrne and seniors Noel Feehan and Sarah Thiery.

"I think this will be an excellent measure of how the team has improved since Windham (Invitational) and how much more work we'll need to do to reach our potential by the time of the State Open," O'Neill said.

East placed fourth in the girls' championship race last year while St. Bernard's of Uncasville is the defending champion. Other teams to watch are Notre Dame (Mass.), Bethel and Amity of Woodbridge.

The Manchester boys' squad is entered in the boys' championship race which will go off at 2 p.m. The Indians have a 9-1 dual meet record and have been spearheaded by seniors Todd Liscomb and Craig Hempstead.

Boggs loses the 1st round Strikes out in clutch

By Hal Bock The Associated Press

BOSTON — Wade Boggs has baseball reduced to its simplest terms, the eternal battle between pitcher and hitter.

"That's the fun part of the game," Boston's Boggs said, "the one-on-one confrontation between you and the pitcher. Get a hit, you win. Strike out, you lose."

On Wednesday, the man who led the majors with a .366 batting average and won his fourth straight American League batting title, struck out twice in key confrontations and the Red Sox lost the opener of the AL playoffs, 2-1 to Oakland.

Boggs left the bases loaded, striking out to end the second inning against Dave Stewart. He delivered a sacrifice fly in a bases-loaded situation in the seventh that temporarily tied the score. Then he struck out again to end the game, leaving two more men on base against Dennis Eckersley.

"I take it personally," he said of the loss. "I'll take the blame. I left five guys on base."

Then he turned philosophical. "There's a master plan," he said. "You can't change fate. Whatever is going to be, is going to be."

This much Boggs knows. He will be at third base, leading off for the Red Sox in tonight's second game of the series. Beyond that, there are no guarantees.

If the Red Sox wanted one, they could have asked for no better circumstance than the ones provided for Boggs, who may be baseball's best contact hitter. He came up with eight runners on base during the afternoon, scored one with the sacrifice fly but left the others.

"I hope it's the last time we see that," Oakland manager Tony LaRussa said of Boggs' three opportunities. "You just hold your breath."

Boggs analyzed his at-bats, especially the strikeouts against Stewart and Eckersley.

"I didn't get a fastball in," Boggs said. "He threw it away."

The result was another strikeout, only the fourth this season that Boggs fanned twice or more in a game.

Was he disappointed? "As long as you play this game, you're going to have disappointments," he said. "Naturally, you don't want them in the playoffs."

"It's not over yet. We've got tomorrow (Thursday) and then we go to Oakland. The goal one day can be the hero the next."

example, were the only team in the league without a 30-goal scorer.

Two years ago, Francis, Kevin Dineen and John Anderson combined for 101 goals but managed just 67 last winter. Sylvain Turgeon, who zipped in 45 in 1986, has totaled just 46 the past two years while battling arm and stomach injuries.

A key for the Whalers last season was the addition of center Carey Wilson from Calgary. Wilson, who joined Hartford in mid-season, supplied an offensive spark, netting 15 goals in 34 games.

For Hartford to challenge Boston or Montreal and regain a spot in the upper tier of the division, Wilson will need support.

"This year, we have to make a statement or it could turn the other way for the franchise," says goaltender Mike Liut. "We have been building a team that has shown progress each year, with more points each year, until last season. It was a step back but we have to comeback right away."

"How well you play over the course of a season determines where you'll finish," said Liut. "Teams have injuries but your key people have to perform. The division is competitive so you can wind up with 80 to 85 points."

"Last year was one of those years where nothing seemed to go right," says Francis. "We have to do it this year to prove to people that two years ago was for real. We have to get back to the way the Hartford Whalers won games two years ago. Hard work for 60 minutes and nothing short of that."

Liut, the backbone of the defense, begins his fourth full season (47-48-15-30 ggs). He has seen the team around him improve then slide.

"We have to have a big year, not only as individuals but as a team and a franchise," says Liut. "We have to establish ourselves and play like we did here two years ago. With the type of people we have here, it's important for last year. We took a step backwards and we didn't play well."

Defensively, the Whalers play a good system and have effective performers. Ulf Samuelsson, Dave Babych, Joe Quenneville and Randy Ladouceur form the core.

Yale soccer takes major U-turn, trips UConn

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

NEW HAVEN — Annually, the University of Connecticut and Yale University meet on the soccer field. Annually, the Huskies are victorious over their intra-state rival.

Yale hadn't beaten UConn since 1977. In addition, the Elks had not won at home against the Huskies since 1968.

The UConn-Yale soccer tradition took a U-turn Wednesday afternoon as the Huskies, in perhaps its poorest outing of the season, UConn was forever unsettled and dropped a 1-0 decision to the Elks before a crowd of 1,050. It ended the Huskies' five-game winning streak. It was also UConn's first defeat to a New England opponent this year.

UConn, ranked third in New England, is now 7-5-1 overall and 4-1-1 in the regional play. Yale, No. 4 in New England, moves to 4-1-1 overall.

"It's good, obviously," Yale Coach Steve Griggs, who was previously 0-9-1 versus UConn, said. "Certainly, I know we've been playing even with UConn the last six or seven years. I knew it (a win) would come. Sooner or later, it had to come. They (UConn) are a fine team. It's nice to get a win."

The lone score came at 6:20 of the first half. Yale's Eric Ople deftly crossed the ball from the right side to the center of the penalty box. The ball evaded Husky defender Fred Carlos and rolled freely to Dave Goldblatt, who deposited the 10-yarder into the back of the net.

"That goal was my fault," Carlos said. "The guy (Goldblatt) was marking me behind me and got the ball. It (the loss) hurts, but Yale's a good team. They came out at us hard."

UConn's overall lethargic performance was not enhanced by senior All-American forward Dan Donigan, who played but hadn't practiced in 10 days due to nagging injuries from a season full of tight marking. (Donigan) is not helping himself or us," UConn Coach Joe Morrone said. "We have to sit down and decide if he should take two or three games off."

The Huskies' best scoring chance of the match came at 11:52 of the first half. Off a Carlos corner kick, freshman Vince Jurga banged his header attempt off the crossbar.

Owners set to cry foul on Strawberry remark

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Now, it's the owners who may charge the players with collusion.

New York Mets outfielder Darryl Strawberry and Cincinnati Reds outfielder Eric Davis said Tuesday that they hope to one day play for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Baseball officials reacted swiftly, charging possible violations of the collective-bargaining agreement and major league rules.

"Recent statements made by Darryl Strawberry and Eric Davis raise serious questions about tampering and possibly collusion," Ed Durso, executive vice president of the commissioner's office, said in a statement issued Tuesday.

Cone, in his second full big league season, was 20-3 with a 2.22 earned-run average, second to the Cardinals' Joe Magrane in the NL.

"As soon as we got Orel over the game, we knew we'd beat the Dodgers, even after Jay Howell had struck out Ho Jo (Mets' infielder Howard Johnson)," Cone wrote. "We saw Howell throwing curveball after curveball and we were thinking, 'This is the Dodgers idea of a stopper?'"

League Baseball Players Association, disagreed. "It sounds like the orphan liberating it around," Fehr said. "After systematic, massive, deliberate collusion that will wind up costing them tens of millions of dollars, for them to say that about a couple of kids who want to go home in a couple of years, I find that hard to take seriously."
"If they wanted to bargain together, that would be a problem. But wanting to go home, that's what free agency is all about."
Baseball officials also are concerned about the tampering aspects. For instance, Strawberry could be questioned if he had a bad series against the Dodgers since he has expressed a desire to play for them.
"The New York right fielder was instrumental in the Mets' 3-2 victory in Game 1 with a double that drove home the first run in a three-run, ninth-inning rally Tuesday night. He also scored the tying run."
Strawberry will earn $1.4 million with the Mets next season and the club has an option for 1990 at $1.8 million. Davis made $990,000 with the Reds this season, setting before a salary arbitration hearing.

Cone's prose woke L.A.

By John Nadel
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Pitcher David Cone, who had a spectacular season for the New York Mets, is trying his hand at sportswriting.

One of his early efforts brought him a lot of attention, but probably not the kind he wanted. Cone, writing a column for the New York Daily News during the National League playoffs, infuriated the Los Angeles Dodgers with his remarks after Tuesday night's opener, which the Mets won 3-2 by scoring three runs in the ninth inning.

The Dodgers took out their anger on Cone on Wednesday night, scoring five runs in the first two innings of the Mets' right-hander en route to a 6-3 victory over New York, evening the best-of-seven series at one game apiece.

Windsor football player dies

WINDSOR (AP) — A high school football player died after being injured during a practice game at Windsor High School, officials said.

Norman Edwards, 18, was flown to Hartford Hospital by Life Star Helicopter after being injured about 4:15 p.m. Wednesday. He was pronounced dead at the hospital shortly after arrival.

Windsor police Sgt. Gregory R. Deschamps said the death was being "investigated as an accidental injury" and was under investigation.

William J. Lastinski, Windsor High's athletic director, said Edwards played defensive back and apparently was injured when he made a tackle and was in a pile of players. Lastinski said Coach Philip Kearney noticed that Edwards was "breathing heavily" and told assistant coach Clifford Snow III to call the emergency aid telephone number.

"It was just a pile-up of kids. Nothing abnormal," Snow said. "Other than that, we haven't anything to say."

The youth was injured during a scrimmage game in preparation for a Saturday game. Files at The Hartford Courant indicated that the last football-related death in Connecticut was that of a 17-year-old Bulkeley High School senior in 1942.

meant in a facetious manner," Cone said. "For me to belittle a fine pitcher like Jay Howell, who has been an all-star, is not right, and it wasn't meant like that. The comment I made after a very emotional game. I don't plan to hide. I plan to take total responsibility for it."

Cone shouldn't have had much difficulty making his deadline Wednesday night, even with the late start (7:10 p.m. PDT). After going 20-3 with a 2.22 ERA during the season, he was roughed by a pitcher with one out.

Hatcher followed with a double down the left-field line to drive in Belcher and Sax. After Kirk Gibson was walked intentionally, Marshall singled to right to score Hatcher and make it 5-0.

Hernandez followed a leadoff single by Gregg Jefferies in the top of the fourth with a homer over the right-center field fence, making it 5-2.

The only scoring after that until the Mets' ninth came in the bottom of the fifth when Alfredo Griffin grounded into a forceout with the bases loaded to drive in Marshall, who led off the inning with his third single of the game.

"This was really an outstanding game by Belcher. You've got to give him credit," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "It was just a great game. As for my guy (Cone), this was his worst outing all year. He didn't settle in."

Johnson said wasn't too concerned about the article and pointed to some other problems that untracked the usually cool Cone.

"This is what happened with Cone," Johnson said. "He threw down the middle to (Mickey) Hatcher but they called it a ball in the first inning and that upset me. Then he had the balk, which unraveled him further. He really got out of sync, and started overthrowing and made a lot of bad pitches."

The Dodgers broke the game open by scoring four runs in the second inning. As it turned out, that gave them enough offense to win the game.

The key to the inning was a two-out single by Belcher, an RBI hit during the season. That put runners on first and second. Steve Sax then singled to drive in Jeff Hamilton, who had been hit by a pitch with one out.

Canseco ignores Sox fans

By Ed Golden
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Jose Canseco must have thought he was at the Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, instead of right field at Fenway Park.

Each time the muscular Oakland right fielder stepped to the plate or warmed up in the field Wednesday during the Athletics' 2-1 victory over Boston, Canseco was greeted by the chant "steroids, steroids," by Red Sox fans.

Canseco maintained his sense of humor in the wake of a reporter's broadcast speculation of his steroid use, at one point flexing his muscles toward the right field bleachers, at another time throwing up his arms as if to ask, "What can I do?"

"I thought it was kind of fun. I don't really think they mean any harm," said Canseco, whose reaction was less outspoken than A's manager Tony La Russa.

"I thought it was a cheap shot and brutal," La Russa said. "But he said he was having a good time out there and didn't really seem to be bothered by it. But I thought it was a cheap shot."

IGNORED FANS — Oakland's Jose Canseco heard the right field fans chant "steroids, steroids" at Fenway Park Wednesday but said he just ignored it.

And the fans resumed their chant whenever Canseco made a play in the field, including three routine fly balls.

"It wasn't a big deal," Canseco said. "I've heard this and I've heard that. But now when they say it, it just doesn't make any sense to me. And I just try to go out here and try not to have any distractions."

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers have signed veteran swing man Jeff Lamp to a new contract. It was announced Wednesday.

Lamp, a 6-foot-8, 205-pounder who made the Lakers last season after trying out as a free agent at training camp, injured his left shoulder on Nov. 12 and was sidelined for the rest of the season. He played a total of seven minutes in three games and scored two points.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

MCC women win first

The Manchester Community College women's soccer team captured the first win in the program's history Wednesday afternoon with an 8-1 win over visiting Holyoke Community College. MCC is 1-2, Holyoke 0-1.

Brenda Bailey had three goals and an assist, Wendy Burnett three goals and four assists and Sue Gorrek two goals and an assist for the Cougars. Jen Andrus had an outstanding game in goal for MCC.

"We passed the ball better than we have all year and it showed today. We are starting to come together and it's nice to see all the work paying off," MCC Coach Cathy McGillicuddy said.

MCC has two games remaining, Saturday at home against Dean Junior College and Tuesday at Holyoke.

MCC soccer loses

HOLYOKE, Mass. — The Manchester Community College men's soccer team suffered its fifth straight loss as host Holyoke Community College trimmed the Cougars, 4-2, Wednesday afternoon.

MCC is now 3-6 while Holyoke evens its mark at 4-4-1.

Norman James scored both goals for MCC, which led, 2-1, Tied 2-2 at half, Holyoke's Frank Montanez and Jose Martinez each tallied for the win.

The Cougars will entertain the Southern Connecticut State University junior varsity team Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at the McCormick Athletic Complex on the MCC campus.

Bolton runners tripped

COVENTRY — Host Coventry High topped Bolton High, 19-42, Wednesday in boys' cross country action. Coventry's Mike Oswald took individual honors with a 17:28 clocking over the 3.1-mile course. R.J. Negro was fourth and John Norbut fifth for Bolton, now 0-8 for the season.

Flutie to draw start

FOXBORO, Mass. — Doug Flutie will start for the New England Patriots on Sunday against the Green Bay Packers. It was announced by Patriot head coach Raymond Berry.

Berry would not elaborate on his decision but said Flutie would start ahead of a healthy Steve Grogan and Tom Ramsey, who lost the job after three quarters last weekend against Indianapolis.

Flutie, former Heisman Trophy winner at Boston College, will start in his first non-strike game for the Patriots.

Flutie player of week

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie, whose fourth-quarter heroic sparked the New England Patriots to a 21-17 victory last Sunday, was named the AFC Offensive player of the week.

Flutie, who entered the Patriots' game against Indianapolis with the score tied at 7-7, connected on 12 of 16 passes for 132 yards and scored the winning touchdown on a 13-yard run with 25 seconds remaining.

Mark Brown of Miami, who made two interceptions in the Dolphins' 24-7 victory over Minnesota, garnered AFC defensive honors.

In the NFC, Neil Lomax of Phoenix and Clyde Simmons of Philadelphia were selected. Lomax completed 28 of 43 passes for 342 yards in the Cardinals' 41-27 victory over the previously unbeaten Los Angeles Rams and Simmons had two sacks — one for a safety and the other which caused a fumble — as the Eagles beat Houston 32-23.

Americans upset winners

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Americans Lefi Shiras and Marty Davis upset seeded players to advance to the quarterfinals of the $195,000 Queensland Open Open indoor tennis championship.

Shiras ousted eighth-seeded Joey Rive, a native of Puerto Rico, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2 and Davis upset third-seeded Australian John Fitzgerald 6-3, 6-3 in second-round matches.

Brister out 1 to 3 weeks

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Brister expects to be sidelined for one to three weeks with a chipped bone on the middle finger of his right hand, but the Pittsburgh Steelers aren't in a hurry to name his replacement.

The middle knuckle on Brister's hand is swollen almost two normal size and the tip of the finger is also swollen, forcing him to wear a splint. The finger was dislocated during the Steelers' 23-10 loss Sunday to Cleveland and the chipped bone was discovered later.

Land offered Olympians

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego National Sports Training Center Foundation announced that two development companies have offered to donate land for the nation's first warm-water facility that would allow U.S. Olympic hopefuls to train year round.

The two sites, are owned by Eastlake Development Co. and by United Enterprises Inc., are both larger than 150 acres.

The USOC executive board in April endorsed San Diego as the nation's fourth Olympic training center. The others are in Colorado Springs, Colo.; Lake Placid, N.Y.; and Marquette, Mich.

Alomar player of year

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Alomar Jr., son of the former major-league infielder, was named Class AAA Player of the Year by Baseball America.

Alomar, a catcher for Las Vegas in the Pacific Coast League, batted .297 this year with 16 homers and 71 runs batted in.

Shortstop Gary Sheffield, the cousin of New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, was named the top Class AA player after he hit .314 with 19 home runs and 65 RBI for El Paso of the Texas League.

Ken Griffey Jr., son of the veteran outfielder, received Class A honors after he batted .338 with 11 homers and 42 RBI for San Bernardino of the California League.

Pacers sign Smits

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rik Smits, the Indiana Pacers' top draft choice, has agreed to a $6.5 million contract that will make him the highest-paid No. 2 selection in NBA history.

Smits, a 7-foot-4 center out of Marist College, still must sign the four-year contract, which calls for him to earn an average of $1.3 million per year.

Scottsdale nets a win

SCOTTSDALE (AP) — Tobias Svantesson, the 11th ranked player in the world, beat Tucson native Jim Grabb in the second round of the $415,000 Eagle Classic tennis tournament.

Svantesson, a Swedish native who now lives in Florida, surrendered two third-set service breaks, then held off three match points in the tiebreaker to win the two hour, 23-minute match, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 (10-8) win.

Replay official resigns

DALLAS (AP) — The former instant-replay official who admitted making a mistake in the Sept. 18 Cowboys-Giants game resigned after NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle suspended him for two games.

"I was forced me to retire," said Armen Terzian. "The league didn't talk retirement at all. Just two weeks' suspension. I felt when I took the heat off everybody by saying it was my mistake, I sure as hell didn't want to be treated like a little kid and be suspended."

Rozelle suspended Terzian the day after the Cowboys' 12-10 loss to the Giants. On the opening kick of the game, Dallas' Darryl Clark lost Raul Allegre's kickoff in the sun. The ball bounced off his shoulder at the 2-yard line and into the end zone.

When Clark was tackled by New York's Mark Collins, referee Pat Haggerty incorrectly ruled it a safety worth two points.

Trudeau out of lineup

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Colts quarterback Jack Trudeau is wrestling with the prospect of having reconstructive surgery on his left knee and missing the rest of the season, Coach Ron Meyer says.

"He's basically been laboring with the knee since the Japan Bowl injury (after Trudeau's senior year at Illinois) and operating with a 60-80 percent mobility strength," Meyer said Wednesday.

Trudeau re-injured the knee Sept. 19 when he was tackled by Cleveland's Carl Hairston just as he was throwing a pass.

"With the damaged cartilage the pain is much more severe and the likelihood of it going out on him is a much higher degree," Meyer said.

Gretzky's debut real media event

By Ken Rappoport
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD — As Hollywood productions go, it doesn't get much bigger than this one.

That goes double for the Los Angeles Kings, who have turned opening night into a real media event with Wayne Gretzky in the lineup.

"There's never been this much excitement for an opening game in NHL history," Detroit Coach Jacques Demers said. "It's good for the game."

It also has been good for the Kings, who will mark tonight's game against the Red Wings with a lot of attention, including their first opening-night sellout in history.

The Kings not only expect a large crowd of fans, but the largest crowd of reporters ever to cover a hockey game in the Forum. David Courtney, the California, his agent said.

Probert scored 20 goals and 23 assists last season, but was one of several Wings caught breaking curfew and drinking at a disco in Edmonton the night before Detroit's season-ending playoff loss to the Oilers last May.

More hockey on TV, but who's going to watch?

By John Krelser
The Associated Press

There will be more hockey than ever before on television this winter, but not everyone will be able to see it.

The new National Hockey League season also marks the start of the league's new contract with SportsChannel America, a pay-cable programmer that is paying the NHL upwards of $50 million for TV rights for the next three seasons. That's more than double what ESPN paid for the previous three seasons.

Unlike ESPN, which is part of the basic cable package on most systems, SportsChannel America is a premium service, which means viewers will have to pay extra for it — a lot of cable systems may not offer it.

NHL President John Ziegler said the league was aware of the problem when it agreed to the contract.

"We knew there were negative; that some people who were following us on ESPN wouldn't be getting the games," he said. "That was a decision we had to make. What we hope is that there will be enough of an outcry to persuade the cable operators to carry it."

Ziegler also said the fact that fewer people will be able to watch NHL games isn't necessarily a bad thing.

"We're not on network television. It's not a goal of ours," he said. "What we seek is a sort of 'target audience' concept. Channel finally brought to us something that we would have liked to be able to do 20 years ago — target the audience and the product. This is the first time we've been able to have a delivery system capable of doing this and a company willing to take the risk."

Tom Chestnut, a vice president of SportsChannel America, said his company "is doing about as well as expected" in selling the service, which will present two games a week to NHL markets and three in non-NHL areas.

"We expect to start on opening night with a base of between five and 10 million available subscribers and we'll try to build on that," he said.

Some viewers will get a three-month free look at SportsChannel's NHL coverage. Chestnut said SC, based in Woodbury, N.Y., is offering cable operators a three-month free look before the service officially begins in January.

"We're doing a lot to make ourselves as available as possible to operators and subscribers. It's a different concept."

"The best way to sell is to let people see us. We want to make sure fans don't miss out on Wayne Gretzky's first game because of the negotiations, so we're making that available free to cable systems.

"We think that if people see the service, it will become an important part of a cable operator's package. What we're saying now is: try it for three months and let's talk without depriving subscribers."

Ziegler said the new television pact was consistent with the league's overall marketing strategy.

"This agreement with SportsChannel is very consistent with our business plan we formed eight years ago," he said. "It was an investment we had to make to get to the position we wanted to be in."

"By limiting our target group, we've been able to multiply our media dollars and sponsor dollars and ticket prices in a way that we never would if we had kept the same strategy we used in the early 70s, which was to be everywhere."

He said he realizes that there are some areas where fans won't be able to see NHL games, but that it's a problem the league is prepared to face.

"There's nothing wrong with people wanting your game. We're pleased to hear that," he said. "We realize that if they don't get our games within 2-3 years, they might not come back to the sport when they do get it. But I doubt it. Once people have been bitten by the hockey bug, the percentage of people who leave is very small."

Scoreboard
Oakland at Boston (8:22 a.m. EDT), Storm Davis 16-7, pitches against Roger Clemens. In 14-15 starts, Clemens was 4-5 ERA in 14 starts. Clemens was 6-1 against Oakland in his career, including only one run and one hit in 14-15 starts.

Devon Henderson of the Oakland Athletics has 10 RBIs in 10 postseason games. He had nine RBIs when he won the home run triple crown in Game 3 of the playoffs with the Red Sox last season.

The Dodgers' 63 victory over the New York Mets Wednesday night in Game 2 of the NL playoffs ended Los Angeles' five-game losing streak in postseason play.

The Dodgers' victory in Game 2 ended a seven-game losing streak against the Mets this year in Dodger Stadium. The pitcher of the Los Angeles Dodgers closed the season with 21 consecutive homeless innings and added three more in the playoffs before a shoulder injury hampered him in the fourth inning of Game 2.

Swins Hamilton of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who walked 10 times in 20 at-bats during the season, walked Wednesday night in Game 2 of the NL playoffs.

Wide Boggs, a career .356 hitter and five-time American League batting champion, is 17-for-16 in a postseason play, a .288 average.

Dennis Eckersley set the Oakland record for most saves in a game by striking out three batters in the ninth inning against the Boston Red Sox.

Shane Bieber of the New York Mets was knocked out after two innings. Five runs and five hits against the Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night. It was his shortest outing so far this year and his first losing outing of any kind since he pitched on an injury of relief against Atlanta on April 27.

Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics has 10 RBIs in 10 postseason games. He had nine RBIs when he won the home run triple crown in Game 3 of the playoffs with the Red Sox last season.
