Contract OK paves the way for town department merger

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

The town is one step closer to combining its Recreation Department and Parks Division after the union representing town supervisory workers ratified a contract allowing the reorganization.

Robert Harrison, president of Local 105 of the Civil Service Employees Affiliates and supervisor of the Parks and Cemeteries Division, said Friday the contract was approved Wednesday. He refused to release any details on the contract until the Board of Directors reviews it.

Review of the contract is on the agenda for the board's meeting Tuesday. The merger had been recommended by a consultant hired by the town.

Harrison could not be reached for comment Friday night.

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. said Friday night he hadn't been briefed on the contract, but he didn't predict any problems in approving it. Plans to reorganize the departments are moving forward, he said.

Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Werbner Friday also would not release details on the contract, but said it provides for salary increases and allows the reorganization.

Local 105 represents about 30 members in various departments in the town, Werbner said. The workers have been without a contract since June.

The consultant who recommended the combination of the Recreation Department and Parks Division of the Public Works Department was hired for $29,700 earlier this year.

The consultant, Kenneth A. Rogala of Stonington, also recommended that the town create the position of Parks and Recreation director, a proposal that was approved 7 to 1 by the Board of Directors Sept. 27.

Director Barbara B. Weinberg cast the negative vote, saying Rogala didn't give the board any other options. Weinberg and director Geoffrey Naab were also reluctant to approve the position without a job description.

Rogala has said his recommendations will result in better maintenance of park and recreation facilities.

104-room suite hotel planned behind Spencer St. restaurant

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

A Hartford investor wants to build a 104-room suite hotel on Spencer Street, according to plans filed at the town Planning Department.

The plans were filed Friday by The Inn at Manchester Inc., care of the Hartford law firm of Blume & Elbaum.

A secretary at the law offices said Friday evening that attorney Jerome D. Elbaum, who is also a real estate investor, is in charge of the project but was not available for comment.

Elbaum's hotel is the third proposed in town this year. It would be constructed on 3.74 acres at 191 Spencer St., which is behind a Friendly restaurant, Planning Director Mark Pellegrini said. The developer proposes 117 parking spaces.

Zoning regulations for a Business III zone require a special exception permit for projects with more than 60 parking spaces.

Pellegrini said suite hotels are designed for longer stays than most hotels.

Other hotel plans already announced this year include a proposal for a hotel on a portion of 39 acres of land west of the Pavilions at Buckland Hills, the regional mall under construction. New York developer John Finiguerra, who owns 150 acres around the $70 million mall, also has proposed retail and office uses for that acreage.

Chalet Suisse International Inc. of Wilton, N.H., recently received approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals and Planning and Zoning Commission for construction of a 105-room budget motel off Tolland Turnpike.

Fred Roedel, a real estate representative for Chalet Suisse, said his company chose Manchester because of the amount of business traffic here and its proximity to Hartford.

Firm puts the squeeze on

MADISON (AP) — The president of a Connecticut company that distributes fresh orange juice wants to put the squeeze on a Florida company he alleges is labeling orange juice as fresh-squeezed when it isn't.

Peter V. Ferris, 28, president of Natural Juice Company of Connecticut Inc., a Madison-based company that distributes fresh-squeezed orange juice, is the lead plaintiff in a $35 million lawsuit that alleges Frostproof Groves of Frostproof, Fla., adds concentrate to orange juice it sells as fresh squeezed.

Ferris has been joined in the suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Baltimore last week, by four other Natural Juice companies in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Washington, D.C. The companies all distribute juice produced by Vero Beach Groves of Vero Beach, Fla., under the E.B. Richfield's label.

"The purpose of the suit is to protect the integrity of a growing industry," Ferris said Friday.

Natural Juice companies charge more for their product because it is fresh squeezed — it has a 14-day shelf life and must be gotten to market within 48 hours of squeezing. Juice made from frozen concentrate or pasteurized has twice the shelf life because heat used in making the concentrate and pasteurizing kills bacteria.

Concentrate is made by boiling off the water in the juice, leaving the pulp which is then frozen. It is made drinkable by thawing the pulp and adding water. Ferris said flavor is lost in the process.

"When I'm trying to sell at a dollar a gallon more, we're at a disadvantage if they're using concentrate," he said. "The stakes have gotten so high, we couldn't afford to let them use concentrate. We'd be out of business."

Ferris has hired Alan Brause, a chemist who testified in the celebrated Beechnut case. Brause developed a testing method to prove that Beechnut was labeling as apple juice a product that contained no apple juice.

Ferris said he understood that Frostproof had issued a statement Friday questioning the testing method. Frostproof officials had closed for the day and company officials could not be reached for comment.

Ferris got into the juice business five years ago, starting with a $3,000 stake saved from profits he made dabbling in oil stocks while a student at New Hampshire College in Manchester, N.H.

He started out of his parents' West Simsbury home.

Union, Electric Boat break off talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three days of marathon contract negotiations ended Friday night without a resolution to the 3-month-old strike at the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton, Conn., a manufacturer of Navy nuclear submarines.

Labor and company negotiators met with federal mediators for about 30 hours since Wednesday, but could not reach an accord to end the wage dispute. Friday was day 99 of the strike.

Officials at the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said they would be in contact with both parties, but no further negotiating sessions were set.

Representatives from the sub-building division of General Dynamics Corp. said they reoffered their previous proposal, a four-year contract with bonuses and a one-time 3 percent wage increase.

The Metal Trades Council, an umbrella group representing all the striking unions, had said it wanted a three-year contract with 4 percent raises in at least the second and third years.

In a prepared statement, the company said, "It appears that this unnecessary and illegal strike will continue indefinitely as will the hiring of permanent replacements."

The bargaining sessions with the mediation service was the first major negotiations since another round of federally mediated talks broke off in August without an agreement.

Hopes were high that the strike would be settled this week as pressure mounted on the union.

More than 1,500 of the original 10,000 striking workers have crossed picket lines and returned to work.

And a key union, the Boilmakers International, told the Metal Trades Council that it wanted the strike settled immediately, fearing the job action may be declared illegal. Electric Boat could fire striking workers if the strike is found to be illegal.

A National Labor Relations Board official has questioned the strike's legality because it did not receive a strike notification 30 days in advance from the Metal Trades Council as required by law. The union sent the notification to the wrong address. MTC officials have said they believe the strike is legal because they notified federal officials orally of the strike plan.

Electric Boat is the Navy's sole producer of the giant Trident nuclear submarines and competes annually with the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. for contracts to build the smaller, SSN-688 fast attack subs.

The company said it needs to hold down labor costs to remain competitive for Navy submarine contracts.

Electric Boat, one of New England's largest employers, normally has 18,000 workers at the Groton plant and another 6,000 at its North Kingstown, R.I., facility. The Rhode Island workers did not strike.

Clock kills family bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — A package of family bills offering child care assistance and parental job leaves died Friday in the Senate, a casualty of political pressures and the ticking clock of the 100th Congress.

With adjournment expected next week and at least two major bills still pending, sponsors of the legislation failed to get the 60 votes they needed to restrict debate and get on with their bill. The vote was 50-46.

The triple-pronged package — which also included a crackdown on child pornographers — was on the Senate floor for the better part of two weeks amid intense political and parliamentary maneuvering.

Democrats repeatedly termed the package an opportunity to back up election campaign rhetoric with a solid commitment. Republicans said there were more pressing matters to deal with, such as drug and tax bills, and they refused to offer amendments or strike a compromise on the family measures.

"Their filibuster was successful. They have won today and America's families have lost," Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said after the vote.

Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said the Senate had acted prudently. "What we've done in effect is say slow down," he said. "This isn't an urgent measure that needs to be passed in the waning days of the 100th Congress."

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who led the drive for the package, accused Republicans of waging "a filibuster by silence; nine days of stalling; nine days of total inertia."

"Never in the history of American politics has there been a constituency so popular but with so little political clout as the American family," said Dodd, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on children, family, drugs and alcoholism. He said he would re-introduce the parental leave and child care bills on the first day of the 101st Congress in January.

The three elements of the family package included:

- Dodd's original bill requiring employers of over 50 people to offer workers at least 10 weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave when they have newborn, newly adopted or sick children, or have serious medical problems themselves.

- An anti-pornography measure sponsored by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., making it a federal crime to possess, sell or distribute child pornography or obscene materials. It was added to the parental leave bill on a unanimous vote.

- The $2.5 billion Act for Better Child Care Services, also sponsored by Dodd, aimed at helping low-income parents pay for child care at centers or homes.

ON DISPLAY — The blunt white tip of a Soviet SS-11, nuclear-armed, intercontinental missile is visible to reporters who were taken on a tour of a Soviet missile site 150 northeast of Moscow.

Soviets show nuclear missile

By Mark J. Porubcansky
The Associated Press

TEYKOVO, U.S.S.R. — Beneath the surface of the northern Russian landscape, a few miles from ancient churches and grazing cattle, lies the blunt white tip of nuclear destruction.

The SS-11 intercontinental missile has not intruded on the outside world in the 15 years or more since it was placed in its silo 150 miles northeast of Moscow.

But it retains the power to destroy New York, Los Angeles or any other American city in minutes.

"This missile is on full military standby. It's fully armed," Maj. Gen. Ivan Vershkov said Thursday on a trip sponsored by the Soviet Foreign Ministry and Defense Ministry. The Soviet decision to show the missile to foreign reporters was unprecedented.

"Your presence here is indeed a step toward trust," he said. "If someone five years ago told me a group of correspondents, including foreign correspondents, would meet me by a missile site, I wouldn't have believed it." The single-warhead SS-11 is among the oldest of the Soviet strategic forces. Western military references list three types of SS-11s and estimate the Soviets have deployed about 440.

The U.S. Defense Department says their range is 6,600 to 8,000 miles, putting any intercontinental target within their reach.

The missile is based at what Western analysts call the Teykovo missile range, surrounded by the historic towns of Suzdal, Rostov and Yaroslavl, whose ancient churches remind one of life centuries before nuclear weapons.

Vershkov said residents know only that a military installation is in the area.

Soviet military officers said the decision to show the missile was made by the general staff of Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev, the Soviet military chief, within days of a reporter's query. The officers said they learned of the visit six days before it began.

Akhromeyev was shown a U.S. Minuteman 2 missile in the United States this summer. Vershkov, a 49-year-old veteran of Soviet rocket forces, said reporters were shown an SS-11 because it is analogous to the Minuteman 2.

U.S. officials have visited more than 100 missile sites while monitoring Soviet compliance with the treaty eliminating medium- and shorter-range missiles, which was ratified in May.

"I wouldn't have thought we would have gone through 115 inspections, poking into sensitive areas, without some kind of minor tension," Gen. Roland Lajoie, director of the U.S. Arms Control Inspection Agency, said.

'Shooting for the gold'

MCC student hopes to win Paralympics

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

The Olympics may be over for most people, but they've just begun for LeRoy Moore Jr., a Manchester Community College student.

Moore, 20, of Hartford, will be going to Seoul on Monday to represent the United States in the Paralympics, an Olympic-type competition for people with disabilities. He will compete in the 1,500 and 3,000 meter cycle races on a three-speed tricycle.

Moore, who has cerebral palsy, has taken part in several athletic competitions for disabled people before. He found out around the beginning of July that he would be participating in the games.

He entered the tryouts last year at Hofstra University on Long Island but wasn't one of the top finishers. He was tapped for the U.S. team after a cyclist who did make the team had to drop out because of physical problems.

"I'm really psyched," Moore said Monday. "I'm trying to get a hold of my emotions until I get on the plane."

While he has enough money for the trip to Seoul (his present employer has donated a portion of the money needed), students at the college are working to collect additional funds so his parents can join him.

Moore expects the competition to be especially keen from the Canadian cyclists, who can afford better bicycles because of funding from their government.

Still, Moore is keeping his sights aimed high.

"Of course I'm shooting for the gold," he said.

Moore trains four times a week, riding about three miles during each workout. In the summer, before college classes started, he trained every day before work and afterward.

United Cerebral Palsy of Greater Hartford is paying for most of the $3,500 it will cost to send Moore to the Paralympics, according to Bill Wilkie, the sports coordinator for United Cerebral Palsy.

Wilkie said that during a Wednesday training Moore had lapped off 2 seconds from his previous best time of 4 minutes, 20 seconds for the 1,500 meter race. He said the top two finishers in the Long Island competition, one from Canada and the other from Australia, would pose a formidable challenge to Moore.

Employees at Cheese & Stuff, a grocery store in Hartford where Moore works, raised about $300 to help pay for Moore's trip, said Michael Lewis, the store manager. He said Cheese & Stuff's owner also contributed some money, bringing the total donation from the store to $672.

On Monday, students from the Coalition for Change, a student organization for disabled students, sold ice cream in the cafeteria at the college to raise money to pay for Moore's parents' flight to Korea.

Jackie Young, a member of the coalition, said that the organization would try to raise "as much (money) as possible."

If not enough money is raised to send his parents to Seoul, Moore said, he will use the money for his own expenses or to help out other athletes.

"I feel fortunate that I have friends like this," he said. "I feel mixed emotions. I can't believe all this is going toward me."

Moore will be leaving for Seoul Monday morning. He said the games begin the same day in the Olympic complex and are scheduled to end on Oct. 26 or 27.

Lewis said that United Cerebral Palsy is still about $3,000 shy of the amount needed to pay for Moore's trip and that of three other athletes. Despite the shortfall, the organization is sending Moore and the others to the games and hopes to raise the remaining money afterward.

Those wishing to make contributions should contact Lewis at 236-6202.

Herbst blasts Giulietti on casino support

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

State Sen. Marie Herbst, D-Vernon, on Friday blasted her Republican opponent James Giulietti for his proposal to open state-owned and operated casinos.

"I am absolutely opposed to casino gambling. It has a rippling effect that creates a lot of problems," Herbst said in a telephone interview.

Giulietti says such casinos could resolve the projected state deficit. The Vernon man is challenging Herbst to regain the 35th Senatorial District seat he lost to her two years ago.

The GOP candidate says the state already has a state Gaming Commission and legalized gambling like Lotto and Jai-Alai which is franchised out to private owners. He also said a teletrack gambling facility was recently adopted by referendum in Windsor Locks.

Herbst, chairman of the Legislature's Public Safety Committee, said the legislative leadership does not want to expand gambling in the state due to what she called its potential adverse effect.

Giulietti said that state-owned casinos would provide funds that would prevent cutting essential programs like aid to schools or municipalities. But Herbst said it is presumptuous of Giulietti to indicate there would be forced cuts of those programs.

"Who says those programs will be cut?" said Herbst.

She said the projected deficit has already been cut in half "and the results of the 1986 Tax Reform Law are't even in yet."

Herbst added that problems generated by the casino proposal would be numerous — expansion of the state bureaucracy to deal with the casinos, need for additional enforcement officials, determination of location, and an overall large expenditure to put it into action.

Day care for elders, children gets support

State funding of mixed day care facilities for the elderly and for children has been proposed by John Quinn, Democratic candidate for representative from the 55th Assembly District.

In a news release, Quinn said the overhead cost for construction of the joint venture would save taxpayers dollars while providing day care centers to meet the needs of the working middle class family. It would also provide an opportunity for the frail elderly to maintain a life in their community with respect and dignity.

Quinn serves on the Advisory Board and Executive Committee of the Speaker's Task Force for the Elderly. The task force has recommended construction of additional adult day care centers.

Quinn envisions day care programs staffed by professional workers who would provide stimulation for the children and the elderly, with the elderly filling a grandparent role.

Quinn is challenging incumbent Republican J. Peter Fuscas.

GOP committee to meet

The Republican Town Committee will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the hearing room of Lincoln Center to hear reports from committees and from elected officials, and to discuss election campaign plans.

The party is seeking volunteers to work at election campaign headquarters and to distribute campaign signs. Headquarters, at 843 Main St., are open daily from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

School-business link proposed

Susan M. Buckno, Republican candidate for state representative from the 13th Assembly District in Manchester, has proposed three initiatives aimed at strengthening partnerships between schools and businesses.

She proposes expanding the Neighborhood Assistance Act to provide 50 percent tax credits to business taxpayers that provide scholarships to higher education level trade students.

The act provides tax benefits for businesses that contribute to non-profit agencies.

Buckno also suggests competitive grants tied to matching funds from businesses or private foundations, with the grants focusing on drop-out prevention, tutoring and counseling, and opportunities for business volunteers in schools.

The third initiative proposed by Buckno would be arrangements with business, labor, regional vocational-technical schools, and school districts to match regular academic instruction and supervision by school professionals with the resources and facilities of the workplace. That would give students the chance to learn current skills with state-of-the-art equipment and techniques.

Buckno is trying to unseat incumbent state Rep. John Thompson.

Slick roads cause accidents

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

A head-on collision on Route 31 in Coventry injured four people Friday night, police said. Police in other towns, meanwhile, reported an increase in motor vehicle accidents and listed slick roads due to rain as the cause.

Two people were listed in stable condition at Windham Community Memorial Hospital Friday night following the Coventry accident. Frank Acebal, 78, and Marion Acebal, 76, of Palm Harbor, Fla., were suffering from broken bones, hospital officials said.

Kenneth A. White, 54, of 26 Woodland St., Tolland, and Carl Acebal, 35, of Somers, N.Y. were treated and released from the hospital, officials said.

At about 4 p.m., White was traveling southbound on Route 31 when his vehicle skidded into the northbound lane, striking Carl Acebal's vehicle, Marc Montminy of the Coventry Police Department said.

Acebal's parents, Frank and Marion Acebal were passengers in the vehicle, Montminy said.

Montminy said police aren't sure if wet roads caused the accident, which is still under investigation.

But wet roads were the cause of two minor accidents in Manchester and others in surrounding towns, police said.

Deputy Chief Peter Beckwith of the Town of Manchester Fire Department said accidents occurred at the intersection of Oakland Street and Tolland Turnpike at around 5 p.m. and at 276 Oakland St. at around 6:15 p.m.

Beckwith said Friday night those involved in the accidents received minor back and neck injuries. A nurse at Manchester Memorial Hospital said Friday night those involved were treated and released.

Details on those accidents were not available Friday.

State police with Troop K in Colchester reported no accidents in Andover or Bolton.

Vernon and East Hartford police reported more accidents than usual Friday because of slick roads. All were minor, police said.

Birthday party set for school

Martin School has just turned 20 years old and students and faculty are preparing a special birthday party.

The party will be held at the school on Oct. 30 from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. The school opened in September 1968, Leslie Letendre, a first-grade teacher, said.

The school was named after former General Manager Richard Martin. Martin took over for the town's first general manager George Waddell after Waddell's death in 1951. Martin retired in 1965.

Martin was a former reporter for the Manchester Herald who became a public administrator. He was one of the people who convinced the town to switch to a town manager style of government.

The party will be held to help promote school spirit, said Letendre.

"We like to do things for spirit," she said. "It seems like a good spirit-raising activity."

The fifth- and sixth-grade classes will sing in the mixed choir, the fourth-grade class will draw posters, and the second- and third-grade classes are deciding on a birthday present for the school, Letendre said. The kindergarten and first-grade classes will make birthday cards, she said.

There are about 300 students at the school, she said. Committee members also plan to exhibit photographs of past events at the school. Anyone with related photographs can mail them to Letendre. The school is located at 140 Dartmouth Road.

Auction kicks off 'Routes to your Roots'

Routes to Your Roots, a celebration of Manchester's history, kicks off today with an auction at the Cheney Homestead, 106 Hartford Road.

Visitors will be able to preview the wide array of antiques and other items in the auction beginning at 9 a.m. The auction will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and admission is free.

Spectators are encouraged to bring lawn chairs. The homestead building and Keeney School, on the same grounds, will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., for guided tours.

The Lutz Children's Museum, 247 S. Main St., also will be open noon to 5 p.m., with all of its regular exhibits and a special slide show, "The People of Manchester 50 to 100 Years Ago," on the hour.

Other events planned for the weekend include:

—The Manchester Historical Museum, 128 Cedar St., will be open 1 to 5 p.m., today and Sunday. Exhibits of photographs of immigrant laborers and Bon Ami memorabilia will be displayed both today and Sunday. A slide show, "Cheney Brothers was the World," will be presented Sunday at 1:30 and 3 p.m. The museum's artist of the month, Carol Gregoire, will demonstrate the art of paper cutting between 1 and 4 p.m. Sunday.

—The Connecticut Firemen's Historical Society, 230 Pine St., will be open today from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. National Fire Prevention Week will be celebrated today only, with visits from Smokey the Bear, Woodsey the Owl and Pluggy the robot fire hydrant. A traveling theater with animated fire safety messages will be parked next to the building from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today.

—The Bon Ami Building, 71 Hilliard St., is celebrating its 100th birthday. The Train Exchange will have its semi-annual open house, with electric trains traversing miles of track. This will be the first weekend that visitors are given the opportunity to run the trains, even if they are not members of any train clubs. In addition, there will be an extensive display of doll house miniatures. The building will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today.

—On Sunday, there will be a birthday party for the Bon Ami building with cake and balloons. A slide show on the north end of Manchester will be shown at 2 p.m. The building will be open 2 to 5 p.m.

Indian tribes gather at college at 1 p.m.

More than 900 people are expected to converge at the Lowe Program Center of Manchester Community College today for a first-time gathering of all five of Connecticut's Indian tribal nations.

Based on the theme, "Tribal Voices Honor the Earth," the gathering will include traditional Indian music, costumes, dancing, story-telling, and more than 20 booths displaying and selling traditional Indian arts and crafts. It will take place from 1 to 4 p.m.

Several tribe leaders and chiefs are expected to attend the conference in full dress, including Chief Eagle or "Piper," one of the state's most noted tribe leaders, Papa said.

Issues concerning the political and social rights of the Connecticut American Indians will be discussed and numerous pamphlets containing information about these issues, events and organizations will also be available at several booths.

People planning to attend the event are asked to bring donations of non-perishable food stuffs for the American Indian for Development's emergency foodbank.

Sheep killed at nature center

STAMFORD (AP) — A 6-year-old sheep was bludgeoned to death at the Stamford Museum and Nature Center, officials said.

Gerald Rasmussen, the museum's executive director, said someone broke the padlock on the gate of the barn, which houses sheep, oxen and goats, at about 10:15 p.m. Wednesday.

An alarm sounded and frightened sheep bolted from the barn, he said. One of the ewes, named Sunflower, was repeatedly kicked or bludgeoned and died a few hours later, he said.

"This is such a shock," Rasmussen said. "We try to teach a respect for life. That is what a museum is all about. And this is such a callous disregard for life." He said security will be tightened around the 118-acre museum.

Serious water shortage

STAMFORD (AP) — Stamford officials will meet next week to come up with a rare autumn-time plan for conserving water — a plan that could forbid washing cars and sprinkling lawns — in an attempt to deal with a severe water shortage hitting lower Fairfield County.

"We are significantly below where we should be," Stamford Health Director Dr. Andrew McBride said Friday. "We're down to 31 percent of our reservoir and we're usually around 60 (percent)."

McBride said he met Friday with Stamford Water Co. officials and they will meet again next week to come up with a plan to submit to the mayor.

Officials throughout Fairfield County agree that low rainfall this year have led to shrunken reservoirs.

Yale profs to mingle

NEW HAVEN (AP) — In an effort to achieve greater intellectual contact between undergraduates and their professors, Yale University on Monday will begin providing about 600 faculty members five free lunches each week at student dining halls.

"A vital component of the educational process at Yale takes place on campus, outside the classroom and laboratory, and the college dining halls provide a wonderful setting where teaching and learning can flourish," Yale President Benno C. Schmidt Jr. said in a prepared statement.

Yale's 5,150 undergraduates are divided randomly among 12 residential colleges, each with its own dining hall, library, common room, social organizations and recreational facilities.

Bringing professors into the dining halls will restore a bit of the "Old Yale," when professors and students regularly ate together and the dining halls were an intellectual center, university officials said.

Travel agency raided

WESTPORT (AP) — A five-month undercover investigation led federal agents this week to raid the office of a Westport travel agency accused of illegally booking trips to Cambodia and Vietnam.

U.S. Customs Service agents on Thursday searched Lindblad Travel Inc. in Westport for documents detailing the trips, including one that was to leave on Oct. 16.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Holly B. Fitzsimmons said Friday that no arrests had been made. She declined to give any details of the investigation.

A woman who answered the telephone at the travel agency said Lindblad is out of the country. Another employee, who declined to give his name or title, said "I really have no comment."

The search was based on an affidavit by U.S. Customs Service Agent Maryann Caggiano, who was booked on the Oct. 16 trip.

Judge rejects AIDS testing requested by victim of rape

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — A Superior Court judge, agreeing with the lawyer for a man accused of rape that AIDS is not a venereal disease, rejected the victim's request that her alleged assailant be tested for the deadly disease.

Judge Richard Damiani said Thursday that the defendant, Earl J. Volpe of East Haven, doesn't have to be tested for acquired immune deficiency syndrome under a 19-year-old state law that permits testing of alleged rapists for venereal diseases.

"Now she has to go out and worry if the guy has AIDS," Assistant State's Attorney Stephen Sedensky III said of the victim. But he said he wouldn't

Computer hackers hit

MIDDLETOWN (AP) — Wesleyan University is investigating an incursion by computer hackers into a mainframe computer system at the university, a school spokesman said Friday.

The break-in occurred sometime between Sept. 23 and 25, said Bobby Wayne Clark, the Wesleyan spokesman.

The breach was discovered when workers at Wesleyan's computing center found in the system a "Trojan Horse," a program that appears benign but can unexpectedly alter or erase programs or files, according to H. David Todd, director of university computing.

"It's not necessarily immediately felt, but at some point it does something that was an unexpected result," Todd said.

The "Trojan Horse" was promptly removed, but Clark said it was possible that information stored in the system was compromised and all users on campus were notified of the breach.

No files were erased, he said. "One of our primary community values is confidentiality of personal information. Another is free access to information. It appeal Damiani's decision.

It can take years for someone infected with the AIDS virus to develop the disease.

The victim claims she was kidnapped and raped three times by a man who attacked her in a commuter parking lot in Fairfield on June 3.

Volpe, 36, has been charged with three counts of first-degree sexual assault and one count each of kidnapping and robbery in the first degree.

Volpe's lawyer, assistant public defender William Schipul, contended that testing of his client for AIDS would have been a violation of his constitutional rights and illegal because AIDS is not a venereal disease.

During a two-day hearing on the issue, defense witness Dr. Alvin Novick of the Yale Medical School countered the claims of the state's witness, Dr. Thomas Tinghitella, director of microbiology and immunology at Bridgeport Hospital, saying AIDS is not a venereal disease because it is not exclusively transmitted by sexual contact.

Damiani agreed with Novick, ruling that "the diseases most commonly referred to as venereal diseases are transmitted almost exclusively through sexual contact, namely syphilis and gonorrhea. AIDS, on the other hand, is a viral illness that impairs the immune system and is transmitted in a number of ways."

Schipul said it is the first time the statute has been tested in this manner and that a recent attempt by the Legislature to define AIDS as a venereal disease failed.

"It was a judgment call from the court's perspective, but it's certainly unfortunate that victims of sexual assaults will now just have to have themselves continually checked," Sedensky said.

could be said that both these values are threatened by this type of activity," Clark said.

He said the university notified the FBI and the Middletown police.

Deputy police chief wants chief's birds to go

HAMDEN (AP) — Birds of a feather don't flock together at the Hamden police department, where the deputy police chief is complaining that the chief's caged cockateels and parakeet make him sick.

Deputy Police Chief David Dixon has notified Chief John P. Ambrogio that he will not attend any more meetings in the chief's office until the birds are removed.

If he is ordered into the police chief's quarters, Dixon wrote in a memo, he will "take any and all legal action available" to protect his health.

The chief said he has no intention of getting rid of the birds — Councilor and Louie, cockateels, and Mary, a parakeet, each of which has its own cage.

"The birds have truly become a source of comfort," Ambrogio said. "I'm really learning to talk to them. It's quite an education."

Dixon told the chief he recently learned he was allergic to the birds, which he said cause him to suffer stuffed sinuses and watery eyes. But Ambrogio said his deputy had attended innumerable meetings in his office without having complained of any discomfort.

The chief said he would try to make arrangements to protect his deputy's health only if he provides medical documentation to back his claims.

Dixon, a 25-year veteran of the force, said he has no intention of providing such information.

"I don't have to justify my illness. He has to justify why he can keep birds in his office," he said.

At Dixon's request, a representative from the Quinnipiac Valley Health District paid a visit Friday to the police chief.

"What I found were generally acceptable sanitary conditions," said Joe Hock, chief of environmental services.

Meteors due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skywatchers may be in for a treat Saturday night, with the annual appearance of the Draconid meteor shower.

Since there is no moon visible the sky should be dark, making it easier to view the meteors, the U.S. Naval Observatory here says.

The Draconid meteors are actually debris from the tail of Comet Giacobini-Zinner. Also called shooting stars, meteors occur when these bits of space material enter the Earth's atmosphere, heat up from friction and then burn.

The Naval Observatory said it cannot offer a precise measure of how many meteors are likely, but this is expected to be a good year for viewing.

People who forget, or whose view is obscured by clouds, get another chance the night of Oct. 20-21 when the Orionid meteor shower occurs. That one stems from debris from Comet Halley.

Bush, Dukakis step up attack

By David Esposito
The Associated Press

George Bush suggested Friday that Michael Dukakis apologize to a couple that was brutally attacked by an escapee from a Massachusetts prison furlough program. Democrats tried to squeeze every last ounce of political gain from Wednesday night's vice presidential debate.

But Dukakis stumbled on his own, even as he vowed to "hit hard" at Bush's running mate Dan Quayle.

Campaigning in Missouri, he unwittingly used a foreign-owned factory as the setting for a speech criticizing rising foreign ownership of domestic manufacturing plants.

"You are one of the few survivors" of the trend to foreign ownership in the auto-parts industry, he said to workers at the Moog Automotive Co., which has been owned since 1977 by a New York-based holding company controlled by an Italian family. Aides said Dukakis was unaware of the ownership of the company.

Bush campaigned in the swing states of Ohio and Missouri, where he referred to the attack that furlough escapee Willie Horton committed on a Maryland couple last year. He criticized Dukakis for having "an astounding lack of sensitivity for crime victims."

Bush said the Massachusetts governor had presided over a criminal justice system "completely out of whack: a 'Twilight Zone' world where prisoners' right to privacy had more weight than the citizens' right to safety."

With one month to go to the election, the polls continued to show Bush a step ahead in the race for the White House. Democrats were hoping that other polls rating Democrat Lloyd Bentsen as the winner of the vice presidential debate would serve as prelude to a shift in the presidential race itself.

GOP vice presidential candidate Quayle laughed at that, as he shrugged off Democratic campaign commercials aimed at raising doubts about his fitness for high office.

"We can stand the heat. We're going to stay in the kitchen. George Bush is going to be the next president of the United States. The voters will vote for him," the Indiana senator said as he campaigned in Tennessee.

Bentsen chipped in on the Democratic anti-Quayle barrage, saying it was an "incredible misfit" for his vice presidential rival to compare his own experience in Congress with John Kennedy's before the 1960 election. Quayle's self-comparison produced the most riveting moment of the debate, when Bentsen turned to him and said, "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

Beirut magazine says Waite, Americans to be freed soon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Beirut magazine said Friday the captors of Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite will free him "very soon" and American hostages will be released before the U.S. presidential election Nov. 8.

Ash-Shiraa said the two other British hostages will be freed with Waite, who has been missing since January 1987. Al-Anwar, a conservative daily newspaper based in Christian east Beirut, said Waite would be freed in 72 hours.

An Israeli newspaper said the United States made a deal with Iran to free American hostages in exchange for delivery of arms and spare parts through South Korea. U.S. officials denied the report.

Lebanese police said two unidentified foreigners kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut 21 months ago were Czechoslovak businessmen held only a few days.

That leaves 14 foreigners missing in Lebanon, including nine Americans.

church envoy

The Anglican Church and British government said they had no information about Waite. Both Beirut publications have been inaccurate in recent reports.

about hostages. Ash-Shiraa, based in Moslem west Beirut, revealed in November 1986 that the United States was secretly delivering arms to Iran.

The report about arms in The Nation, a new English-language Israeli weekly, was not attributed. It said the U.S. government also agreed to pay $7 million ransom to Shiite Moslem extremists holding the hostages but refused their demand for immunity from prosecution.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater denied the report but said there were "a lot of free-lancers, independent operators in the region." On Thursday, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Washington was not dealing with Iran and that "Anyone who tries to cut across our policies should butt out."

President Reagan refused questions about the reports as he left for a speaking engagement in Detroit. Fitzwater, traveling with him, said there was "nothing new" on any hostages.

Abortion arrests over 400

ATLANTA (AP) — Anti-abortion demonstrators besieging women's clinics here called in reinforcements to continue their week of protests, saying Friday's 53 arrests had nearly exhausted their pool of people willing to go to jail.

More than 400 people have been arrested since Tuesday for trying to block clinics as part of a campaign by Operation Rescue, the group that organized protests during the Democratic National Convention in July.

With buses carrying more demonstrators arriving in the city, Operation Rescue spokesman Bob Nolte predicted Saturday could be the biggest day of the "Siege of Atlanta."

Those arrested Friday had blocked two driveway entrances to the Midtown Clinic. Police appeared to treat them more gently than those arrested earlier this week.

On previous days, police roughly dragged demonstrators who refused to walk to waiting vans and buses bound for jail. They also dragged those arrested Friday, but more carefully, with only the demonstrators' feet touching the ground.

"I believe the public would rather see us take more time and be more gentle," said Maj. Kenneth Burnette.

During the arrests of one group, Burnette asked demonstrators leaning against a clinic gate in the early morning chill if they would walk to the buses "like gentlemen and ladies." Few did.

The picketing followed what demonstrators called an "end run" by clinic operators the day before, in which patients were whisked inside before demonstrators arrived.

Midtown administrator Ignazio deBlasi said about 80 percent of the patients with appointments

Friday showed up; the clinic usually handles 25-30 women daily.

As one woman was escorted through protesters trying to block the back gate, they said to her, "Have mercy on your son or daughter."

After the arrests, small groups held hands during Bible readings or sang hymns on the sidewalk outside the clinic.

Pro-choice advocates, who say the decision on abortion should be the mother's, not the state's, have escorted patients to clinics but decided against counterdemonstrations to avoid making the situation more difficult.

No decisions on PTL

TORONTO (AP) — Stephen J. Mernick, the Orthodox Jewish businessman who wants to purchase the assets of the PTL Christian ministry, said Friday he is keeping all options open about their future use.

He said he is willing to talk to Jim and Tammy Bakker about their possible activities at Heritage USA, a Christian retreat and theme park in York County, S.C., and the other assets to be purchased for $115 million.

"I have made no decision whatsoever as to the utilization of the Heritage assets," Mernick, 34, said at a news conference at his lawyer's office in the Toronto suburb of North York.

"Over the next several weeks I will be engaged in an intensive analysis of the property in order to determine their best possible use from a business and financial standpoint," he said.

Reagan lauds Rowan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan telephoned syndicated columnist Carl T. Rowan on Friday to offer congratulations on the District of Columbia's decision to drop its weapons-possession case against him, Rowan said.

"The president said it was an outrage that they prosecuted me," said Rowan, who had lashed out on Thursday at city officials, calling their case against him a "malicious, political prosecution."

Reagan made the call because he considers Rowan a friend and was concerned about him, according to a White House official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The 63-year-old columnist had been charged with using an unregistered weapon and ammunition to wound a teen-ager who intruded in his back yard in June. If he had been convicted on the misdemeanor charges, he would have faced a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Giant coke lab destroyed

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Police and U.S. drug agents raided and destroyed a huge jungle cocaine laboratory that produced at least $50 million worth of drugs each week, Bolivian and U.S. officials said Friday.

"This is definitely the biggest cocaine lab ever discovered in Bolivia," said a U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Interior Minister Juan Carlos Duran said the lab produced 3.5 tons of pure cocaine a week. Under a formula established by U.S. agents, the wholesale worth in the United States of the cocaine produced at the plant is at least $50 million a week — or $2.6 billion a year.

Twelve Bolivian anti-drug police and U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents discovered the lab Wednesday on a helicopter sweep over sparsely populated jungle 400 miles northeast of La Paz, the Interior Ministry said.

Shark attacks youth

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — A teen-ager who required 110 stitches after a shark attack in southeastern Australia said Friday that his surfing days are over.

Murray Taylor, 15, said the "huge shark" dragged him from his surfboard and bit him repeatedly.

Murray said he escaped by punching the shark on the nose and trying to gouge its eyes. The attack occurred Thursday at Moana Beach, 30 miles south of Adelaide.

"When he reached the shore he actually walked up the beach on his own," said Murray's mother, Wendy Richardson. "Murray said he wasn't sure how big the shark was, but he said its head was at least a foot wide."

The teen-ager was recuperating at Flinders Medical Center in Adelaide.

Justice Department reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh moved Friday to develop programs that maintain "the highest ethical standards" in a department previously run by Edwin Meese III who was for 14 months under criminal investigation.

"Subordinates cannot be left to speculate as to the values of the organization," Thornburgh said in his first major speech to Justice Department employees as attorney general.

"Top leadership must give forth clear and explicit signals, lest any confusion or uncertainty exist over what is and is not permissible conduct," Thornburgh added.

He said that "to do otherwise allows informal and potentially subversive 'codes of conduct' to be transmitted with a wink and a nod, and encourages an inferior ethical system based on 'going along to get along' or on the notion that 'everybody's doing it.'"

The attorney general in his remarks made no reference to Meese, who left the department in August. Thornburgh introduced the subject of ethics by quoting the results of a newly released Associated Press-Media General poll showing that seven out of 10 Americans think illegal payoffs are common in the federal government.

Thornburgh also raised the issue of how close the relationship should be between an attorney general and the president, saying that how their relationship "can be both as close as it should be and as correct as it ought to be is a difficult question" and one that is worthy of study. Thornburgh said there is a "need to look analytically" at the relationship.

A Thornburgh assistant, David Runkel, later said Thornburgh wasn't referring to any specific relationship, such as the particularly close one between President Reagan and Meese. Runkel said that Thornburgh was expressing a general feeling that the matter should be examined, as a subject of scholarly study outside the Justice Department, and that the comment wasn't meant as "a criticism of anyone."

The criminal investigation of Meese stemmed from his ties to longtime friend E. Robert Wallach and culminated in July with no indictment but a finding by independent counsel James McKay that Meese had probably twice broken conflict-of-interest laws and tax laws.

Thornburgh said he has requested Deputy Attorney General Harold Christensen "to gather the views of all senior management to help in developing proposals that will aid our employees in maintaining the highest ethical standards."

He said the questions that should be addressed include how to avoid "any appearance of personal and financial conflict of interest, how to deal with lapses in behavior, how to properly regulate interaction between employees and outside groups and what 'perks' are proper and which are out of bounds.

Jamaica lowers cost of Gilbert

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Hurricane Gilbert caused $818 million to $1 billion damage to Jamaica, less than previously estimated, Prime Minister Edward Seaga said.

The prime minister originally estimated Gilbert caused $8 billion in damage when it slammed into the Caribbean island with 130 mph winds Sept. 12.

In a report to Parliament on Thursday, Seaga said Jamaica already has raised enough money from other countries to finance immediate emergency needs.

He said about $15 billion was received or pledged by other countries and international financial institutions for rebuilding the ravaged economy, including a $125 million pledge from the United States.

The government's latest reports said 45 people were killed when the hurricane ripped the length of the island, severely damaging or destroying half of its 500,000 homes and wiping out hundreds of acres of banana, coconut and citrus crops.

Seaga noted that $1 billion is almost 80 percent of what the country gets in foreign-exchange earnings annually.

"To find up to $1 billion for hurricane emergency relief is in effect to embark on a program to almost double the value of foreign-exchange earnings in one year," which would normally be a seven or 10-year goal, Seaga said.

"This target, however, is required not in seven to 10 years, but in seven to 10 days," he said. Later, on radio and television, Seaga told Jamaicans he had set a Christmas deadline "to break the back of the rebuilding program."

"By no means all the work will be completed by then," he said. "But hopefully comfort will be restored to those who are shelterless, farmers will be in the field and the lights will shine again."

He said the pledges from other countries and institutions such as the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund will finance the government's emergency spending, but more money will be needed for the private sector.

"The financial picture, therefore, is one of good order, with the necessary funding in place to finance the emergency and normal operations of the country for the entire fiscal year," Seaga said.

What I already knew

By Sarah Overstreet

There are those who claim to have learned more about the candidates' platforms from the first presidential debate.

All I got was an hour and a half reaffirming what I already knew:

■ Michael Dukakis has more of President Reagan's flair for the anecdote than Reagan's own vice president, along with his penchant for not getting the story quite right. Whereas we couldn't find Reagan's Welfare Queen, it wasn't Little League baseball that Dukakis' little boy couldn't play because his father didn't have insurance; it was football.

Dukakis also has more of Reagan's talent for creating visions of that shining city on the hill awaiting us once we punch our ballots for him; more of the "it's morning in America" knock than Bush, whose biggest promise is that we'll all have values when we cometh into his kingdom.

■ When backed into a corner, Bush will put on a show the likes of which we haven't seen since Gracie Allen left the stage: Defense by rambling innuendo, managing to use every bit of his rebuttal time without ever drawing a bead on what he was asked.

But I can say I didn't enjoy it. I always look forward to "shining city on the hill" time, when one or both of the candidates promise us Camelot while preparing to give us South Succotash.

Here's what we'll find in Michael Dukakis' version, located just south of Fantasyland, next to the Magic Kingdom:

We will "help people to live better lives, and at the same time save money by helping hundreds of thousands of families (this became "millions of families" a little later in the speech) on welfare to get off welfare."

All God's chilluns will have free health insurance, as well as wings: "I think it's time that when you get a job in this country, it came with health insurance."

We'll have such a low unemployment rate we'll enjoy "a tremendous opportunity to reach out to everybody and make them a part of this wonderful nation of ours with the opportunity we create."

He'll be a president who "understands that affordable housing for families of low and moderate income, for young families, first-time home buyers, is an essential part of the American dream."

Bush was at his best. When questioned about his own role in the arms-for-hostages deal, he shifted attention from himself to President Reagan and accused Dukakis of making a "serious charge" against the president.

When asked to defend his choice of Dan Quayle as his running mate, the best he could do was a shameless ploy for yuppie votes: "I see a man who is young, and I'm putting my confidence in a whole generation of young people in their 30s and 40s...."

Does that mean we don't have to worry about Dan Quayle's qualifications to lead, because all of us young middle-agers will be governing by committee?

Bush must have sensed he was getting nowhere with that tactic, so he launched himself even further into orbit and urged us on to mass repentance on Quayle's behalf: "And I'd like each person to say, (all together, now), 'did I jump to conclusions running down rumors that were so outrageous and so brutal....'"

But he surpassed even my wildest hopes when he accused Dukakis of making fun of Quayle's name. It was vintage Bush — pulling nothing out of the air, trying to make something out of it, and failing that, using it to imply Dukakis is unpatriotic. "My opponent says J. Danforth Quayle.... Do you know who J. Danforth was? He was a man who gave his life in World War II, so ridiculing a person's name is a little beneath this process...."

All in all, it was an entertaining hour and a half. Mr. Pie-In-The-Sky vs. The Wanderer.

Civil disobedience: Ends may justify it

By Chuck Stone

The Massachusetts Mechanic and the Texas Tenderfoot can't make up their minds how they feel about abortion, and I can't make up my mind how I feel about civil disobedience.

One of my readers, Garry St. John of Fairbanks, Alaska, neatly capsuled this dilemma of indecision when he wrote: "Why is it when I disagree with you, you sound so hot and emotional...and yet when I agree with you, you sound cool and reasoned? Is the difference on your end or mine?"

Michael Dukakis and George Bush are equally dichotomous. In their debate, Bush's opposition to abortion included support for "penalties." After the debate, he tried to back away from that extreme position. Dukakis expressed distaste for abortion, but supported a woman's right to exercise freedom of choice.

I don't advocate abortion. I simply accept the supremacy of the woman's right to determine what happens to her body.

Freedom of expression is paramount. But this is where I get into trouble, because my support for freedom of expression seems to be predicated on my feelings about a cause's righteousness.

My position on civil disobedience should not be a function of ideology, but I still draw ideological distinctions. I consider apartheid one of the most barbaric crimes against humanity, for example. So I applaud the 143 white South African army conscripts who are refusing military service because it upholds apartheid. Their resistance represents the largest expression of defiance to date in the proliferating draft resistance by white South Africans.

The Yonkers, N.Y., councilmen who were fined after refusing to vote to build federal court-ordered low-income housing, were also practicing civil disobedience. But instead of applauding them for exercising their freedom of expression, I commended the federal judge who held their civil disobedience in contempt and levied enormous fines.

Anti-abortionists have been escalating their campaign to close down clinics where abortions are performed. The pro-lifers are practicing civil disobedience and exercising their freedom of expression by blocking clinic entrances, lying down on the sidewalks and getting arrested. But their freedom of expression results in the denial of others' freedom of choice, so I oppose it.

Civil disobedience depends on the practitioner's willingness to accept the penalty for breaking what he or she considers an unjust law. In South Africa, Yonkers and cities where anti-abortionists have been arrested, the ends may be different, but the means are the same.

Socrates drank the hemlock, rather than recant. Thoreau went to jail, rather than pay taxes that would support the Mexican War. Gandhi remained in prison, rather than accept British rule. Martin Luther King Jr. accepted prison, rather than comply with unconstitutional racist laws.

Are draft-resisting South Africans, Yonkers city councilmen and anti-abortionists equal inheritors of the historical mandate of civil disobedience?

My head says "yes." My heart says "no." The distinction may lie in the ends they seek.

Draft-resisting white South Africans want to make their country more democratic.

Yonkers city councilmen want to make their city less democratic. ("Low-income housing" is a euphemism for black residents.)

Anti-abortionists want to do both — make society less democratic by restricting a woman's right to exercise freedom of choice, but simultaneously make society more democratic by protecting the rights of the unborn.

Just as my reader in Fairbanks can't reconcile his differences and agreements with me, I can't reconcile my differences and agreements with the practitioners of civil disobedience. Ethics don't come easy.

WHY DID I TELL HIM THAT HER FATHER AND I WERE REAGAN DEMOCRATS?

Soviets poised to enter the world market

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Both presidential candidates have expressed wary optimism over Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms. But the next president will have to do more than be optimistic. He will have to decide if the Cold War is really over and, if it is, what the United States' new relationship with the Soviets will be.

The next American president will likely accept the Soviet Union into the world economic community, but neither candidate will commit to that before the election.

Many European leaders have already made their judgments. They have begun to treat the Soviet Union as if the Cold War is over. This has led to a sudden increase in trade between the Soviet Union and Western Europe. The Kremlin also has sent signals that it wants to end its economic isolation and take its rightful place in the world market. Western Europe banks are extending credit to the Soviet Union. The next step will be for the Soviets to add their currency to the international monetary system.

If the United States doesn't act soon, there may be a limited market left in the Soviet Union for American products.

Trade with the United States could play a big role in Gorbachev's reform program. He needs to improve the Soviet standard of living quickly and one way would be to increase trade. Gorbachev is being pulled from two directions — the Soviet bureaucracy, which is resistant to reforms, and the Soviet people who, at the moment, support Gorbachev's efforts at economic reform.

But most Soviet citizens who now back their leader will judge him by the food he puts on their tables and the consumer goods he puts on their shelves. Now, the shelves in state stores are bare and the bureaucrats are confidently waiting for the economic discontent to cause a backlash against Gorbachev.

He is literally leading a revolution against his own party apparatus. He can't afford an open civil war, so he is taking steps to reassure the bureaucrats that there will be a place for them in a reformed Soviet Union.

The bloated Soviet bureaucracy is known around the world as a model of inefficiency. Gorbachev would like to cut it by half.

Gorbachev has enlisted the Soviet press to help him with his war against the bureaucracy. He lifted the corner of the Soviet censorship blanket and unleashed the media, which has had a field day exposing bureaucratic excesses.

Gorbachev has had a strong adversary in the person of Yegor Ligachev, the head of the Kremlin's conservative faction and the champion of the bureaucracy. Last week at a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee, Legachev was demoted. Until then, according to intelligence assessments, Gorbachev had deliberately refrained from purging Ligachev from the Politburo, in spite of Ligachev's open attacks against reform. His continued place in the Politburo was a sign of Gorbachev's power, and was Gorbachev's way of reassuring the party structure and avoiding a showdown.

Gorbachev has another formidable foe in the KGB, the Soviet secret police, which is threatened by the new openness in the Soviet Union. Gorbachev's reform advocates are finding themselves tailed by the KGB, according to our intelligence sources. KGB agents have done nothing openly to harass the reformers, but their presence in the shadows has an intimidating effect. It is clear that the agents are keeping watch on the reformers and gathering information.

The Soviet Union has produced such a tangle of laws and regulations that anyone could trip over some restriction. That gives the KGB an excuse, if it needs one, to crack down.

As he caters to Ligachev, Gorbachev has also taken steps to mollify the KGB. For example, the new Soviet ambassador to Afghanistan, Nikolai Yegorychev, has the strong backing of the KGB and his appointment may have been a bone that Gorbachev threw to the secret service.

Yegorychev was chief Soviet policy-maker on the Middle East and a veteran of the diplomatic corps who fell out of favor and was removed from full membership in the Central Committee during the Brezhnev era.

Kremlinologists believe that Yegorychev's appointment to Afghanistan at this sensitive time means he will be restored to the Central Committee and that would be a gesture of good will toward his friends in the KGB.

A great library, but ...

To the Editor:

As a Coventry resident, I have used the Mary Cheney Library in Manchester since 1974, the year the Connecticut system went into effect. Connecticut allows state residents to use almost every public library in the state simply by using their own hometown library card.

The staff at Mary Cheney Library have always been helpful whenever I've needed assistance. Their cheerful attitude makes it a pleasure to use the Cheney library. I knew that if our libraries here in Coventry (like Manchester, we have two) didn't have something that I needed fairly quickly, that Mary Cheney would usually have it; and also, they are open until 9 p.m., a rarity these days in public libraries. Most libraries in this area close at 8 on weekday evenings.

This past summer, with our Coventry library closed due to renovations and many books stored away, I patronized Cheney Library quite often. Though many parts of the library are now air-conditioned, the main lobby/reading room still is not. I don't know how the staff that had duty at the circulation desk could stand the heat and humidity. Even with the electric fans it was pretty hard to take, particularly for the short time I was there. If it hasn't been set as a top priority for the library board, then the completion of central air conditioning for the entire library should be done as soon as possible, because, while we are now looking at old man winter, the miserable dog days of July and August 1989 will be here before we know it!

Protestant leaders disagree with Whealon on AIDS ads

HARTFORD (AP) — Roman Catholic Archbishop John F. Whealon's criticism of the state's new AIDS advertising campaign has opened up an interreligious debate, with the Episcopal bishop of Connecticut and eight other Protestant leaders announcing their support of efforts to warn people about the deadly disease.

Whealon on Friday declined comment on the Protestant stance, but his assistant said the archbishop will have something to say next week in the column he writes for the archdiocese's weekly newspaper.

The spokesman, the Rev. Thomas J. Barry, also said Whealon had no plans to contact the Protestant leaders on their positions on the AIDS advertisements.

Whealon has said the television, radio and billboard ads are offensive and opposed to traditional moral values. The ads deal openly with the issue of AIDS and call upon sexually active adults to use condoms.

Whealon objected to that approach, saying abstinence is the only sure way to avoid acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

A day after Whealon made his complaint, Gov. William A. O'Neill also objected to a bedroom scene in one television ad and ordered that the scene be edited out. Aides to O'Neill, a Roman Catholic, said he wasn't influenced by the archbishop's stance.

The Protestant leaders supporting the ad campaign represented Episcopalians, Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists, Evangelical Lutherans and members of the United Church of Christ.

"We come together to offer this affirmation of the state's program. We recognize that the realities of the current crisis require that, in order to save lives, explicit information about the prevention of (AIDS) must be available," Episcopal Bishop Arthur E. Walmsley said in the joint statement.

It was the second time Walmsley has disagreed publicly with Whealon. In 1984, Walmsley parted company with Whealon over the role of the clergy in shaping public debate over abortion.

In their statement, the church leaders sought to minimize their differences with Whealon, saying they agreed with him that "Christian models for AIDS education and prevention should promote abstinence or monogamy." And they said the Roman Catholic Church "must continue to affirm for society the sacredness of sexual activity within the context of marriage."

But they said there was a "plurality" of religious views in the state.

"We are not attempting to say the archbishop is bad or wrong ... but other voices need to be heard," said one of the nine signatories, the Rev. Thaddeus Bennett.

Bennett, director of the AIDS Ministries Program of Connecticut, said the media coverage Whealon received could give the public the impression "his was the only religious position in the state."

AIDS Ministries is a program of the Episcopal diocese that is supported by other Protestant denominations.

Episcopal church leaders this past summer passed a resolution calling for AIDS education that stresses monogamy or abstinence, and "disease prevention measures, such as ... condoms."

The other clergy signing the statement supporting the AIDS ads were: the Rev. Robert Roberts, executive minister of the American Baptist Churches of Connecticut; the Rev. Walter Elwood, executive presbyter of the Presbyter of Southern New England, Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.); the Rev. Richard Thompson, district superintendent, Connecticut-western Massachusetts district, United Methodist Church; and the Rev. Robert Isaksen, bishop of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Also, from the Connecticut Conference of the United Church of Christ: the Rev. Arthur Higgins, acting conference minister; the Rev. David Taylor, director of the Ministry of Church and Society; and Amy Beveridge, program assistant, Department of Church Life and Leadership.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
by Eugene Brewer

Last week I wrote of the certainty Christians should have of eternal life. One cause of doubt is our mistaken dependence upon good works for salvation.

While a Christian's life will be characterized by a religious, moral, and ethical life, these are not the fundamental grounds of his justification. If so, he would have to be perfect (Gal. 3:10). And none is without sin (1John 1:8-10).

The essential cause of source of light in a room is the sun. The effective cause or means of admitting that light into the house is the window. God's loving grace is the essential cause, the source, of my salvation (Eph. 2:8-9). My trusting obedience is the window that admits the gift into my life (James 2:20-24). Herein, lies the certainty of salvation, for God's promises are not "yea" and "nay" (2Cor. 1:18-20).

Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory T. Mulka III

Mulka-Swietek

Laura Swietek, daughter of Robert and Barbara Swietek of South Windsor, and Gregory T. Mulka III, son of Gregory and Rose Mulka Jr. of East Windsor, were married Aug. 20 at St. Catherine's Church, Broad Brook.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Nancy Ballinger was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mary Ann Alverson, Wanda Monroe and Sandy Jaworski, all sisters of the bride. Tami Lynn Alverson, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Barry Rossi was best man. Ushers were Larry Mulka, Robert D. Swietek and Lorne Stevens. Greg Alverson and Scott Monroe were ringbearers.

After a reception at Polish National Home in Hartford the couple left on a wedding trip to California. The couple makes their home in Enfield.

The bride is a graduate of South Windsor High School and Greater Hartford Community College. She is attending Central Connecticut State University and is employed by Manchester Memorial Hospital as a registered nurse-head nurse.

The bridegroom is a graduate of East Windsor High School and is employed by the Town of East Windsor.

Mrs. Michael T. Dorsey

Dorsey-Harrison

Tracy Lynn Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Harrison of 7 Laurwood Drive, Bolton, and Michael T. Dorsey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Dorsey of Meriden, were married Sept. 10 at St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

The Rev. Andrew Smith officiated at the double ring ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Janis Vannais was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Margaret Harrison, sister-in-law of the bride, and Lisa Dorsey, sister of the groom.

Steve DiNino was best man. Ushers were Paul Harrison and James Harrison. After a reception at the Buckboard in Glastonbury the couple left on a wedding trip to Hawaii. The bride and groom are both employed at CIGNA in Windsor.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Proto

Proto-Uccello

Diane M. Uccello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Uccello of Unionville, and Raymond J. Proto, of 145 Barnsbee Lane, North Coventry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Proto of Wallingford, were married Aug. 27 at St. Maurice Church, Bolton.

The Rev. John Serprenant officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Dale MacDonald was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Terri Petrella, Terri Uccello, Donna Proto, Denise Proto, Chris Tanguay, Heidi Blomstrand and Leslie Francini. Heather Carleton was flower girl.

John Carleton was best man. Ushers were Robert Uccello, Richard Uccello, John Uccello, Richard Maulucci, James Psaras, Dan MacDonald and Peter Roccapriore. After a reception at the home of the bridegroom, the couple left on a cruise to the Bahamas, Puerto Rico and St. Thomas.

The bride is a 1982 graduate of Farmington High School and a 1983 graduate of the National Academy of Hairdressing. She is employed at the Hair Factory of West Hartford.

The bridegroom is a 1977 graduate of Wilcox Regional Technical High School and a graduate of the University of New Haven and the University of Miami in 1981. He is regional sales manager for Canon U.S.A.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Hyde

Hyde-Roy

Denise Bernadette Roy, daughter of Mrs. Gisele Roy, of 31 Finley St. and Richard Todd Hyde, son of Richard W. Hyde of 181 Wadsworth St. Ext. were married June 4 at St. Bartholomew's Church.

The Rev. Martin Scholsky officiated at the double ring ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her mother and her godfather, Norman Nicol of Westerly, R.I.

Kimberly Bottone was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Judy Dalone, Lisa Hovan, Debbie Galligan and Karin Galligan. Stephanie Roy, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Richard Bissell was best man. Ushers were Michael Sullivan, Ken Strout, Peter Childree and Chris Diana. Nicky Roy, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

After a reception at La Renaissance in East Windsor, the couple left on a wedding trip to Aruba. They are making their home in Coventry.

The bride is self-employed in her own business in Manchester. The bridegroom is employed by Cox Cable of Manchester.

Mrs. Thomas F. Cleary

Cleary-Fiano

Kim Marie Fiano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fiano of 12 Fiano Road, Bolton, and Thomas Francis Cleary, of Farm Drive, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Cleary of Wethersfield, were married Aug. 20 at St. Maurice Church, Bolton.

The Rev. William Olesik officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Lori Fiano, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were MaryEllen Duhaine, Georgie Livingston, Sandra Rehm and Maura Lindsay. Elizabeth Hardy was flower girl.

Robert Cleary, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were William Cleary, Paul Fiano Jr., William Young, David Farrell and Gregory DeNies.

trip to San Francisco, Calif. They are making their home in Bolton.

The bride is a graduate of Manchester High School and Eastern Connecticut State University. She is a kindergarten teacher at Martin School in Manchester.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Wethersfield High School and Eastern Connecticut State University. He is a sales representative with Fiano Realty Gallery of Homes.

Chisolm-Aloisio

Donna Marie Aloisio of Glen Cove, N.Y., daughter of Rosario T. and Margaret N. Aloisio of 41 Oak Forest Drive, and Steven Clay Chisolm, son of Henry C. Chisolm and step-son of Ethel Chisolm of Amityville, N.Y., were married Sept. 17 at St. Patrick's Church, Glen Cove, N.Y.

The Rev. Raymond Carlo officiated at the nuptial high Mass. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Christine Schell was maid of honor.

Brian Donovan was best man. Ushers were Richard Hobson and Michael Aloisio.

After a reception at Grand Cafe Restaurant in Glen Cove the couple left on a wedding trip to Paris, France and Hawaii. They are making their home in Glen Cove.

The bride is a graduate of S.U.N.Y. at Cortland, N.Y., and received her master's degree from C.W. Post College, Greenvale, N.Y. She is sales manager for food and beverage at Pall Corp. in Glen Cove.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio and is vice president for electronics at Pall Corp.

He finds warmth in cold stones

Artist finds inspiration in dolmens

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

Robert Manning is an artist who finds spiritual warmth in cold, damp stones, tremendous energy in a static balance of boulders and abstract patterns in ancient structures.

For four years, Manning, a veteran art professor at Manchester Community College, has been under the spell of the stone walls, burial chambers and worship circles found in the British Isles.

He refers to prehistoric burial structures, or dolmens, as "great queens of ancient times," with their slender tripod legs and enormous capstones, weighing between 20 and 100 tons.

He speaks of dawn at Stonehenge, an ancient rock formation in Wiltshire England, as a "transcendental kind of experience," admitting that "my mind hasn't been the same since."

Since his first visit to Ireland in 1984, Manning has been trying to put onto paper the "kind of mystical magic and energy" he experiences when viewing the islands' rock rings, huts and walls.

Working from photographs and slides he took during three separate visits there, Manning has produced a body of paintings, sketches, pastel drawings and prints. An exhibit of these, titled "Stone and Stonehenge," opens to the public at 10 a.m. today at MS Gallery, 205-A Sisson Ave., Hartford.

The fascination with stone began when Manning, whose ancestors were Irish, paid his first visit to the land of his roots. "There we were, petrified of course, because we were driving down the wrong side of the road, and then we would come across these absolutely incredible walls, piles of rock thrown together in seeming chaos," said Manning.

"They're almost like anarchist walls, one stone here, then others over all," continued Manning. "Of course, what excited me was the abstract patterns of it."

After another trip to Ireland, in 1985, he put together a show of paintings called "Stone Walls of Ireland." Many of these are close-up, frontal views of the walls, so they fill the large canvases with their strong outlines and textures.

He arrived before dawn to take full advantage of his pass. Against the dim sky he could see

Reginald Pinto/Manchester Herald

ANCIENT INSPIRATION — Robert Manning, veteran of more than 20 years on the faculty of Manchester Community College, shows two of the watercolor prints to be exhibited at MS Gallery starting today. The works depict the ancient stones, or dolmens, which help inspire Manning.

Since his first visit to Ireland in 1984, Manning has been trying to put onto paper the "kind of mystical magic and energy" he experiences when viewing the islands' rock rings, huts and walls.

"these big black shapes all around me, in silhouette, and I could feel this tremendous energy all around me," said Manning.

He remembers thinking, "This is a place that human beings put up as a celebration to the sun. And here I am, watching the sun come up." Just then, said Manning, he saw an absolutely gorgeous sunrise. "First the magenta, and all these colors, and then these black clouds moving along and then the sun burst forth. It was like a symphony."

Manning was certain, even then, that the experience could never be repeated. Later, guards told him just how unusual it was. "They said a Japanese film crew had been there for five days the previous week, and had never seen a sunrise, or a clear sky, for that matter," said Manning. "It rains nearly all the time over there."

His experiences at Stonehenge are reflected in several of the paintings displayed at the MS Gallery. The multi-color piece he chose for the poster and gallery invitations, called "Spiral Night," features what Manning calls pyrotechnical effects, or high-energy triple spirals in the sky above Stonehenge. These spirals can be seen carved on the walls of burial tombs of 3,000 B.C., or about 200 years before scholars believe that Stonehenge was erected. The highly-charged colors are moved to the bottom of the canvas in works like "Earth Jewels," a somewhat surrealistic painting showing a conventional rock-and-grass landscape above ground, and highly imaginative rock chunks, mineral veins and even skeletons underground.

Manning expects to do further work in this direction, as it allows him to get away from the essentially gray-and-tan stones, while still evoking the feelings of the places he has visited.

Before visiting Ireland, Manning said he was doing primarily pieces of social commentary, which were quite depressing in nature. "I am very happy with the break in my work, from that to these stone pieces," he said. "They are very literal, they say something to the viewer, and they have a close connection with me and my roots."

The show will run through Nov. 2. The gallery is open Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: I want to install plastic laminate around the area of the kitchen sink, but I don't feel equal to cutting the plastic myself. I assume I can have it done. How do I give the dealer or carpenter the exact dimensions of the space to be covered, since it is very irregular? Would it do to make a cardboard cutout, a kind of template, and then have it cut to that size?

ANSWER: Yes, that is one way to handle it. But first select the company or person who is to do it, then ask how it is to be handled. In most cases, it will be easier for the installer to come to your house and make his own template or use his own method. In that way, he will not have to rely on a cutout made by somebody else. It also will be his responsibility to get it correct.

QUESTION: We moved into a house with untreated shingles on the outside. We are debating whether to use paint, varnish or a clear finish on them. What's your opinion?

ANSWER: Use paint or some kind of opaque or transparent stain or even a penetrating oil or water repellent liquid, but avoid varnish. It has to be renewed too often when exposed to the elements.

QUESTION: We had our house painted professionally. The painter applied only a single coat. We felt it should have more than one coat, but he said one coat would last for six or seven years. Is he right and should we have insisted on a second coat?

ANSWER: Under the right conditions, one coat often is enough. No way to tell from here what the condition of the old surface was and how well it was prepared, prime factors in the life expectancy of paint. The time to determine how many coats should be applied was when you made the deal, not after the paint was applied.

QUESTION: My late husband installed our window shades several years ago. The shades have been working perfectly all this time, but one of them has started to fall down every so often. I put it back, but it is only a question of time before it happens again. Can this be fixed? If so, how?

ANSWER: Very little physical work is involved. It sounds like the brackets that hold up the shade are now a bit too far apart. If the brackets are inside the window casing, merely put a cardboard shim under one of the brackets. If they are mounted outside the window casing, unscrew one of them and move it a bit closer. The whole idea of these moves is to lessen the distance between the brackets.

What to do with that wall

By Andy Lang
The Associated Press

When you want to apply 4-by-8 panels to an existing wall which has a rough surface, your first inclination is to figure out how to smooth or repair the wall to prepare it for the new paneling.

Actually, it's a lot better to apply furring strips to the wall and attach the panels to the strips. "Furring strips" is a term used mostly by 1-by-2 pieces of lumber, although it sometimes is used for other sizes. If you place furring strips on the wall, the only preparatory work necessary is to fill any wall openings or other gashes and perhaps scrape off any loose particles.

If it should be a masonry wall, little need be done ahead of time, although you will have a bit more trouble attaching the furring strips. To make sure the strips are solidly attached, drill holes into the masonry with carbide-tipped bits and insert expansion shields into them. Or you can place wooden plugs into the holes and then nail or screw the furring strips into place at those points.

On non-masonry walls, such as gypsum board or plaster, the most effective attachment of the strips to the wall is by nailing directly into the studs. A stud finder is excellent for locating their studs. Another way is to remove the base and/or shoe molding and find the nailheads holding the drywall or plaster lath to the studs. Probe into the wood surface until you strike solid wood. Check every so often to make sure the studs are spaced 16 inches apart on center, as they usually are. While there are some variations on the installation of furring strips, the most common way is to use horizontal strips spaced 16 inches apart on center and vertical strips 48 inches apart on center. "On center" means measurements from the center of one stud to the center of the next, which is different than the measurements from the edge of one strip to the edge of the next.

The most important thing about the installation of the furring strips is to see they are plumb and level. The plumbness is assured by dropping a plumb line from the top of the framework to the bottom, the straightness of the horizontal strips by using a level frequently.

When anything is out of line, you can get it into line by using wedges between the wall and the strips. The first furring strip is started one-half an inch from the ceiling, the bottom one one-half an inch from the floor.

While most room heights are a bit more than eight feet, there are many variations. The way to avoid trouble is to plan everything before you begin. See how many panels you will need and where cutting will be necessary. Don't forget you have to make cutouts for doors, windows, electrical switches or whatever. Every time you make a move, measure what you have done and be sure it is correct. Gaps that are inevitable usually can be covered with molding. The usual starting place is at a corner of the room, so that the panel is butted up against the corner. If the first panel is precisely in place, you will have made fairly certain that everything else will be in order. See if the home center or other dealer where you purchase the panels has an instruction brochure, because some panels require a tiny space between them to allow for possible expansion.

There is a special panel adhesive for attachment to the furring strips, but nails also can be used. If you use nails, get the finishing type, countersinking them and filling the indentations with a putty stick to harmonize with the panels. In some places, colored finishing nails are available.

Keep the panels in the room where they are being installed for at least a couple of days before beginning the work. This gives them time to adjust to the temperature and humidity of the area. It may seem unimportant, but anything that will produce a good result is worth the little extra effort.

It cannot always be done, but the perfect way to condition the panels is to stack them flat on the floor with pieces of wood between them to permit the air to circulate around them. If they are kept standing up, have them resting on the 8-foot side and place bits of wood between them.

Do-it-yourselfers will find helpful advice on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's new book, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $3 to this newspaper of Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

It's bulb-harvesting time

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

The August view of the Dutch bulb fields from the airplane seemed drab compared with my previous spring flowering-time visits, but the growers of tulips, daffodils and hyacinths were happy. It was bulb-harvesting time.

There were still patches of color, however, from summer-blooming gladioluses and other flowers near miles of greenhouses.

The growers annually harvest about 8 billion flower bulbs of many varieties for shipment to many parts of the world, mainly for fall planting and for beautiful spring blooming the following year and years to come.

I watched bulb digging the next day, as I walked beside machines that scoop up the bulbs, shake off sandy soil, and load bulbs into wooden boxes for cleaning and grading at nearby storage buildings. Shipment to local and foreign dealers begins about Sept. 1, after thorough inspection.

The United States and a few other large importing nations have resident agents in Holland have reduced the time for developing commercial bulb varieties from seven years to about three to four years.

Where roads are lacking, canal boats are still used to transport bulbs from fields to processing plants.

Growing in the Hillegom area were vast fields of gladioluses. Tubers are dug before heavy frost for planting again by home and commercial gardeners around the world when the ground warms in the spring. Some fields are flooded to help kill weeds and to reduce disease.

I watched also as new bulb fields were being developed near canals. Huge dredges rotate the soil, sucking up sandy soil and laying it on richer loam to improve conditions for bulb production.

We stopped at the Flowerbulb Museum at Lisse, operated by volunteers and supported by the bulb industry. While we were visiting the museum, Frans Rozen, whose family has been in the bulb business for many years, told us that Dutch children help in the fields and are made aware early of the importance of the bulb industry.

Rozen related how new techniques, including tissue culture, has reduced the time for developing commercial bulb varieties from seven years to about three to four years.

Where roads are lacking, canal boats are still used to transport bulbs from fields to processing plants.

I watched the harvesting of hyacinths at the farm of brothers Kees, Hubert, Roos and George Hoogervorst. The brothers operate 25 hectares, specializing in 2-year-old bulbs. Unsold bulbs are planted again to give them more size — the larger the bulb, the better.

Three of the brothers' children were astride a tractor, helping to clean and sort bulbs. Kees said three brothers have three children each, while he is "the richest with four."

The Hoogervorst farm grows hyacinths, daffodils, tulips and gladioluses.

The credit society keeps on growing

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It grows so relentlessly that it leaves you little time to dwell on the impact it has on your way of life, but that impact affects you from youth to retirement.

It is the credit society. Not long ago it was felt a student should graduate from college and enter the adult world bright-eyed and raring to go. Now the student begins with a load of tuition loans to be repaid.

Less than 20 years ago you felt sorry for the poor bloke who had to borrow money on the house. A mortgage was there to be paid off, and nothing provided more satisfaction than doing so. Borrow on the house? What a pity!

A house today is considered a cash cow, the equity to be tapped for what people consider essential expenditures. That's the assumption, but you wonder when you see your neighbor borrow for a trip to the Caribbean.

You may recall that back in the 1960s it was customary to pay off the car loan in two or three years. Now you take up to seven years, which means the car might have to be junked before the loan is retired.

Perhaps you were one of those people who swore not to run up any more credit card or bank card debt, since only 40 percent of the interest — not 100 percent, as before — is deductible from your income tax. Have you kept your promise?

Or, as is likely, have you been enticed into using your credit card by the promotional onslaught from the issuers? It's hard not to bite, because the "free" offers come in the mail and over the phone — often at dinnertime.

Once you applied to the bank for credit, but now the bank applies to you. Why not? The rates they charge you on installment loans are better than rates they can get almost anywhere else, even if the paperwork is onerous.

Back in 1960, consumer credit amounted to about $65 billion. By the end of 1987 it had reached $753 billion.

That figure has been inflated, of course, by the declining value of the dollar. But most of it is real growth. In 1978, consumer installment debt as a portion of disposable personal income was under 15.5 percent and fell close to 14 percent in 1982 and 1983. Lately it has been in excess of 18 percent.

Americans have a tradition of managing their credit intelligently, but some observers wonder if borrowers will be able to handle the new flexible rates, those that tend to rise at the wrong time — that is, when the economy in general is going the other way.

The Credit Union National Association recently called attention to one of the newer problems in handling loans, especially for automobiles.

"Imagine your surprise, even shock, when you learn your car is virtually worthless as a trade because you owe more on it than the dealer is willing to give you in trade."

"The reason? You probably chose longer-term financing for your automobile — five, six, even seven years."

Understanding of numbers can aid investing strategy

Sylvia Porter

We are into the late stages of an economic upturn that started in 1982 — an unprecedented duration which in itself vitally affects the economic health of us as a nation as well as individuals.

It would be easy to guess that the upturn is losing strength, although on the surface it still appears powerful. Its very duration indicates that.

There are four major economic statistics that help identify where the nation stands in relationship to the business cycle. Our country's top policy-makers in government, industry and education rely on these statistics for critical guidance.

They are:
1. Gross National Product. This is the big one. It's the total of all goods and services produced in the country — in short, an overall measure of whether the economy is growing, and if so, how quickly.

"The quarterly GNP numbers are absolutely vital to all of us," Professor Paul Samuelson of MIT says. "It's impossible to plan anything without them."

If the economy is growing too rapidly, it is in danger of "overheating," which is to say maintaining a rate of growth that it can't possibly sustain. This results in corrective action, such as tightening of credit by the Federal Reserve system. If growth of the GNP slows or worse, actually declines, times are rough. If the GNP shows two consecutive quarters of decline, it constitutes a recession.

2. Consumer Price Index and Producer Price Index. These monthly statistics measure the pace of inflation or deflation; the former at the retail level, the latter at the wholesale level. The PPI leads the CPI in that if retailers have to pay more for products and raw materials, the consumer is ultimately likely to have to pay more, too. These figures have been relatively unexciting in the last few years, but in the late 1970s and early '80s (a time of double-digit inflation) they were crucial.

3. Employment figures. The most widely reported employment statistics is the monthly unemployment figure, which is interpreted as the percentage of American workers who are seeking jobs. But there are others, such as the percentage of the population that is employed. This is an important one and has been hovering around 62 percent — the highest in the country's history.

"One of my favorites is the total number of hours worked," says Dr. Geoffrey Moore, former U.S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics and now head of the Center for International Business Cycle Research at Columbia University. "It takes into account those who work part-time jobs and those who work more than one job."

These statistics are important because they measure the demand for labor. The higher the demand, the higher the price. This can affect individuals in a variety of ways, from determining when to ask for a raise to planning when to build an addition to a home. They also are a leading indicator of inflation, because when it costs more to hire workers, the prices of the goods and services they produce will rise.

4. The Labor Department's monthly index of leading economic indicators. This is a group of 11 statistics that are designed to predict the economy's movement. When the figures are released, however, only nine components are included because the other two aren't ready. So the figure must be revised each month. Dr. Moore is completing a study of the indicators and it is anticipated that the recommendations he makes will be adopted.

Among those recommendations will be the inclusion of four additional indicators and a delay of their release date until all the components can be included, eliminating the need for revision.

Economic statistics are like instruments on the dashboard of an airplane. They provide those in control with the information necessary to gauge the strength, speed and safety of a multitude of functions that are all essential to the health and well-being of the craft — and of those aboard.

You now know the four vital statistics on which the pilots of our nation base their economic decisions. Use them for your own financial planning.

QUESTION: We're having a bake sale at our church to raise funds for a new addition to be built next spring. We're also going to serve dinner, which is included in the price of the ticket. Is the cost of the ticket deductible by the purchaser?

T.W.
ISLIP, N.Y.

ANSWER: The Internal Revenue Service says that many taxpayers who attend fundraising events are under the misconception that their contribution is fully deductible. Under the tax law, however, a paid admission to a qualified fundraiser is not a deductible gift except for the amount that exceeds the value of the benefit received. IRS Publication 1391, Deductibility of Payments made to Charities Conducting Fund-Raising Events, can be obtained by calling the IRS (202) 566-4034. The toll-free number is (800) 424-FORM.

QUESTION: I sell home products and use part of my house for business. One section of the basement is used strictly for storing boxes of merchandise and for packaging. This space takes up over half of the basement. Can I deduct the heat and electricity that I use for business?

B.W.
SOUTHFIELD, MICH.

ANSWER: You may deduct certain business expenses including heat and electricity for the part of your home that you regularly use to store good you sell. One catch though, your home may be the only fixed location of the business.

QUESTION: I turned down a prize I won at a zoo benefit so that it could be auctioned off again. Now I've been told that I have to report the prize on my tax return. Do I have to pay tax on something that I didn't receive?

H.K.
GREENBELT, M.D.

ANSWER: If you refused to accept the prize, there is no need to report it on your tax return. That's the law. However, if the prize was a double-layer fudge cake and you ate it, you've got a big problem. That's also the law

QUESTION: I haven't paid my quarterly estimated income tax payments so far this year. When is my next payment due? I would like to get caught up.

I wish they would put a sex education class in my high school, but most of the parents are against it. They say they would teach their own children about sex when it comes to it. Well, I learned by what I was told, off other people. Most girls come out pregnant because all their parents tell them is about "the period" once every month and "don't get pregnant." That sure doesn't help!

I was really scared because I thought I was pregnant and I was scared to talk to my mom. So I didn't.

How can I keep from getting pregnant?

DEAR READER: You aren't alone in your concern over lack of information about such matters. I receive many letters from teenagers who need — and are desperate for — information on sex and reproduction.

Becoming and remaining sexually active at any age means accepting responsibility for one's own behavior and health. Having regular pelvic (gynecologic) exams, for example, is a necessity for all sexually active women.

Contrary to the objections of some groups, sex education does not appear to cause an increase in sexual activity among teenagers. Studies have documented that teenagers who had a sex education class postponed becoming proximately one-half of 16-year-old girls have tried sexual intercourse at least once.

Unfortunately, of those females who did not want to become pregnant, only one-third used any form of contraception. Many of those who don't use contraceptives rationalize their actions by claiming "it can't happen to me."

Others are afraid to seek help in choosing a contraceptive for fear of being discovered by parents or seeming "too prepared" (rather than being swept away by love).

Even though many parents do say they prefer to do their own children's sex counseling, research shows that only about 10 percent provide more specific information than "don't get pregnant."

There is a common myth that if sex is not discussed, adolescents will not think of it by themselves. This is not true. A good sex education course stresses the importance of decision making and defining personal values; it also provides basic information about sexual functioning and reproduction.

Contrary to the objections of some groups, sex education does not appear to cause an increase in sexual activity among teenagers. Studies have documented that teenagers who had a sex education class postponed becoming sexually active longer than those who had not had such a class. Make an appointment with a school counselor, your family physician, or a local family planning clinic. Most clinics provide counseling, information and encourage you to become informed about all your options — including how to say "no" and how to postpone sexual activity while still maintaining friendships.

DEAR DR. REINISCH: If you have a Pap test when you are in your 50s, will it show if you ever had syphilis or gonorrhea when you were younger? What does the test show?

DEAR READER: A Pap smear test (named for Dr. George Papanicolaou, who developed the procedure) does not show the presence of syphilis or gonorrhea — current or past cases.

What the test does identify is both normal and abnormal cells from the upper end of the vagina, the surface of the cervix, and the os (the tiny opening between the vagina and the uterus).

The Pap test can detect cancer cells, cells with pre-cancerous changes and some organisms responsible for vaginal infections such as trichomonas. Additionally, the Pap smear can give a general idea of a woman's level of estrogen.

There are other, specialized tests for both syphilis and gonorrhea. These are not routinely done at the same time as the Pap smear, unless the patient or physician suspects exposure to one of these sexually transmitted diseases.

Contrary to the objections of some groups, sex education does not appear to cause an increase in sexual activity among teenagers. Studies have documented that teenagers who had a sex education class postponed becoming

Pact on safe-driving puts parents at ease

DEAR ABBY: Being the parents of a 16-year-old who has just passed his driver's license examination, we feel that other parents, such as we, are apprehensive about our child's newly found freedom, and perhaps would like to draw up a contract as we did, as a reminder of the seriousness of this new responsibility. It has worked wonders for us.

DRIVING CONTRACT
I (name), on this day, do agree to the stipulations stated below rendering me the privilege of driving my parents' cars. If, at any time, I violate the said agreement, the driving privilege will be forfeited to the extent and degree of violation.

1. Should I get a traffic violation ticket, I agree to pay for the ticket as well as the difference in the insurance premium for as long as the premium is in effect.

2. I agree to pay for damages that I incur not covered by insurance.

3. At NO TIME will I ever drink alcoholic beverages and drive at the same time, nor will there be any liquor or beer in the car at any time.

4. I will never transport more passengers than there are seat belts, and will not drive the car until all passengers have buckled up.

5. I will keep the car that I drive clean, inside and out, and be aware of its needs for gas, oil, etc. plus wax the car once a month.

I have read the above agreement and do sign this in accordance with the rules.

DEAR ABBY: I have had call-waiting service for several years and decided to cancel it because I became irritated by the constant interruption of a second call.

Your readers should check with their phone representatives to find out if the deactivation feature is available in their area. It probably is.

NO INTERRUPTIONS, PLEASE
DEAR NO INTERRUPTIONS: Thanks for bringing me up-to-date. I checked with the phone company and found that "cancel call waiting" is a brand-new service becoming available in many areas.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Lady in Waiting," who would like for her child (if he's a boy) to have a middle name, but her husband has none. Abby is right. The child's name must be exactly like his father's, or he can't be a "Junior." But all is not lost. Select a middle name, and have your husband go to court and have HIS name legally changed to include the new middle name.

The baby, if a boy, can then be a bona fide "Junior," and father and son will have given each other a gift that will truly last forever.

BOTHELL, WASH.

Cortisone-related problem

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been on cortisone for five years for chronic hepatitis. I also take Imuran, Lasix, MicroK and hormones. I get black and blue marks all over my arms. Would you discuss this condition?

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR READER: Chronic hepatitis is arbitrarily defined as liver inflammation that lasts more than six months. It is further subdivided into two classes:

■ Chronic persistent hepatitis is benign, usually follows typical acute hepatitis, rarely causes symptoms and needs no treatment.

■ Chronic active hepatitis, on the other hand, is serious. It is thought to be due to an inefficient immune response to the hepatitis B virus. Some medicines, such as methyldopa (for hypertension) and isoniazid (for tuberculosis) can cause chronic active hepatitis. This ailment can progress to cirrhosis (liver scarring) or liver failure. Diagnosis is made by liver biopsy. Treatment includes cortisone and immune suppressing drugs, such as Imuran, in order to reduce liver inflammation and retard hepatic damage.

Unfortunately, these medicines also affect tissues other than the liver. In particular, blood clotting may be impeded. Therefore, patients on cortisone or Imuran may tend to bleed readily and bruise easily. I suspect that your black and blue marks are drug-induced. However, the healthy liver plays a role in blood coagulation, so if your liver is malfunctioning, your blood clotting may be slowed by liver disease, irrespective of the therapy.

You seem to be under the care of a doctor who is, judging from the treatment you are receiving, familiar with chronic hepatitis.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 63 and had a cancer removed from my nose and cheek. At least once a year I go to the dermatologist for a checkup. He usually removes moles, lumps, etc., I guess with cryosurgery. Will this kind of treatment have detrimental effects?

DEAR READER: As a general rule, removal of skin cancers or premalignant growths, using cryosurgery or standard biopsy methods, is safe. Obviously, the consequences of treating skin lesions on the face are more troublesome, because scar tissue can produce unwanted cosmetic effects. However, skin cancers should be removed irrespective of their location. Cryosurgery for other blemishes on the body is harmless.

Astrograph

Oct. 8, 1988

Lots of new activities and moving around are in the offing in the year ahead. Numerous short trips are likely, as well as one of long duration.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, work closely with people who can now help advance your self-interests. Keep at arm's length those who can't be of assistance. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Friends will be willing to go out of their way to help you today, provided you don't make them feel they are obligated to do so. Be grateful, not grumpy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you attend a social gathering today, try to spread yourself around instead of being attentive to certain people while ignoring others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Possibilities for achieving your objectives look good today, but you must be careful that your goals are attained in a manner that will not aggravate others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Today, if possible, try to avoid the company of a person whose views are always diametrically opposed to your own. Your tolerance level is lower than usual and sparks might result.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Financial conditions may be a mixed bag today. Your chances for gains and losses are equally balanced. The scale could be tipped in either direction.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to give those with whom you'll be involved today the benefit of the doubt. If you are arrogant or demanding, they may behave in ways to spite you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Guard against tendencies to make things harder than they are. The secret to success is to operate along the lines of least resistance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Inclinations to overindulge or be extravagant could be prevalent in your attitude today. Treat both your waistline and your purse with respect.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It will prove unwise today to leave something of importance undone that can easily be dispatched now. It might be twice as hard to do tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) People who disagree with you today may not necessarily dislike you, it's just that they might not care for your ideas or the way you present them. Don't take it personally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might have an opportunity to add to your resources today, but don't look for it to come from an area that hasn't provided dividends in the past.

By James Jacoby

In the early days of contract bridge, conservative tactics were employed against pre-emptive bids. Since the opponents had a long suit, you needed extra values to get into the bidding at a high level. With the increase in bridge sophistication, special bids came to be employed to show two-suited hands against high-level pre-empt. This made it easier to compete. Look at today's deal for an example of how too much sophistication can sometimes backfire.

East raised his partner's three-spade opening to four. He thought he could provide West with a couple of tricks, and hoped it would be enough. Anyway, if they went set, no doubt the opponents could make something. South trotted out four no-trump as a takeout bid. His partner might not know that this bid showed clubs and hearts, but South felt he could handle whatever happened. West doubled four no-trump to show that he had a defensive trick, and East doubled five diamonds. Now South bid five hearts, implying that his takeout bid was two-suited in clubs and hearts. There they rested, although East did double and get a one-trick set.

It would have been better if South had been of the old-fashioned conservative school. If he had tamely passed over four spades, his side would have taken four tricks to get a plus score. But let's not be too harsh with him. If North had held the diamond ace rather than the Q-J, five hearts would have been a makeable contract.

CELEBRITY CIPHER

Celebrity Cipher cryptograms are created from quotations by famous people, past and present. Each letter in the cipher stands for another. Today's clue: F equals U.

JUMBLE THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

Wor't be long before we look like them!

AGE MAY BE THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THESE.

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

Answer: A ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ & A ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ (Answers Monday)

Yesterday's Jumbles: ABASH HYENA SWIVEL DAMASK
Answer: Strong lungs often appeal to people with this—WEAR HEADS

Now look to check. Jumble Book No. 38 is available for $3.00, which includes postage and handling, from Jumbles, 5050 S. University, P.O. Box 4282, Orlando, FL 32802-4282. Include your name, address and zip code and make your check payable to Jumbles/Booklets.

TOP ROLE — Sigourney Weaver plays anthropologist Dian Fossey in "Gorillas in the Mist."

that lanky, freshly scrubbed beauty blessed with some of Kate Hepburn's spunk — gets her first full-scale role in this film about the late Dian Fossey. An anthropologist whose study of gorillas in Rwanda helped to rescue the animals from extinction, Fossey met an untimely death — the victim of a still-unsolved murder. Directed by Michael Apted ("Coal Miner's Daughter"), the movie is best when it concentrates on Fossey's interaction with the gorillas. As Weaver plays her, Fossey is openly enraptured by the animals — imitating their movements and sounds, lost in a primeval reverie. (Some of the gorillas aren't gorillas, though: Credit the special effects and makeup department.)

Toward the end, the movie turns downright screwy: Fossey flips out when her favorite gorilla is killed by poachers. Short on a sense of the actual research Fossey did, and forced to leave her demise clouded in mystery, the movie ends up nearly as evasive as it is evocative. But the strapping fierce Weaver keeps one watching through the clichés. GRADE: ***½

An attempt to craft a contemporary urban variant of the "elves and the shoemaker" fairy tale, with a sweet little spaceship-shaped extraterrestrial in place of the elves. STEVE LAWRENCE AND EYDIE GORME... she's got an international hit

Eydie Gorme a hit south of the border

By Mary Campbell
The Associated Press

A Venezuelan composer sent her a demonstration record of a song in the brand of Spanish spoken in Venezuela, Miss Gorme sang the song that way. Her first success was "Amor" with Trio Los Panchos, in a Mexican dialect, 25 years ago.

"My albums, though I think they were marvelous, came out in all different dialects, depending on where the song came from," she says.

This time, producer Roberto Livi told her to do Castilian Spanish and eliminate the "th." "I went down the middle," she says. "It can be appreciated by everybody. It's the first time I totally did that. I was able to do it before; it just never occurred to me that would be the right way to approach it."

"A few years ago I made an album, 'Muy Amigos,' with Danny Riviera from Puerto Rico. The music was contemporary and fabulous. I followed his whole approach and accent. It became a very big hit in Puerto Rico and New York. It did not make it in Mexico, California or Texas."

The Lawrences live, with four poodles, in Beverly Hills and have a beach house with an open kitchen, where they both like to cook for guests. She says, "We can look out and see everybody. They can come in and help, especially with the chopping."

"When we're relaxing, that's how we relax. We travel so much. I don't want to order from another menu. We don't like to have household help around us. Or let them come in the day I'm not going to be home and clean up. We like to be alone with our people."

Lawrence says, "Half the year or more, we're putting our carry-ons through X-ray."

Lots of color in new issues

October is — ta-dahhh — Stamp Collecting Month, with an excellent blast-off given by these stamps on the first day. They just blossom with colors, being framed in gold and embellished with choice dollops of yellow, orange, red, blue, brown, green and black.

The figures represent hand-carved carousel animals to continue the Folk Art series. (Pueblo Pottery, Quilts, Pennsy Pottery, and Duck Decoys).

Note that the creatures are all facing to the east, with the right side the show side. Our carousels go counterclockwise. If you run across an item with the left side better than the right it is a European production. They spin the other way.

Collectors class these figures as Philadelphia, Coney Island, and Country Fair. Philly saw the first ones, beginning in 1867. An "outside row stander" from that group brought a record $63,800 at a San Francisco auction last April.

The Time-Life Encyclopedia of Collectibles shows a medley of carousel critters on the front cover of their Buttons-to-Chess Sets volume. The story inside tells of a New Jersey all-outer who has 150 stabled in a barn and displays a few at a time in her home.

The pricing guides, Kovels' Schroeder's and Warman's, all treat the pieces with respect. Schroeder's is the most informative.

There is a National Carousel Association at Frankfort, Ind. 46041, P.O. Box 307. It was founded in 1973 and has 1,000 members. Then the American Carousel Society was founded in 1978 and has 900 members. Address: 470 South Pleasant Ave., N.J. 07450. Both groups offer many publications.

At the Mary Cheney Library you can find "A Pictorial History of the Carousel," by F. Fried,

NEW ISSUE — Hand-carved carousel animals continues the Folk Art series of stamps.

Barnes 1964. You can get a brochure on another book, hot off the press, by sending a large SASE to "Painted Ponies," Box 47, Dept AT, Millwood, N.Y. 10546.

ALSO NEW: The $8.75 Express Mail Eagle came out as a miniature sheet of 20 on Oct. 4. Calculates out to $175. Pass.

The USPS miscellany for the rest of the month: Christmas stamps in plenty of time on Oct 26; later comes Chester Carlson, the xerography inventor; Special Occasions; Tandem Bike, Federalist Papers, Cable Car, and, finally, the old-time paddy wagon on Oct. 29.

Innovative features on latest cameras

By Sandy Colton
The Associated Press

Camera Angles

Camera manufacturers are jumping the gun. They've already introduced some new products, rather than wait to do so at Photokina, the World's Fair of Photography, scheduled Oct. 5-11 in Cologne, West Germany.

Among the new cameras are a number of point-and-shoot models designed for the amateur.

All include autoeverything features that many amateurs have come to expect: autofocus, auto-wind, autofocus, autofocus, auto DX-coding and so on.

However, a few do have some innovative features. Canon's Sure Shot Ace, for example, has a waist-level finder as well as an eye-level finder, great for shooting from overhead, at low level or around corners. It also has a detachable wireless remote that can trigger the camera from up to 16 feet away. The Ace lists for $260.

Another new camera from Canon, the Sure Shot Joy, allows you to take two, three or four shots continuously. This feature is useful if you're recording an action sequence or you want extra shots to give to relatives or friends. No price or delivery date yet.

The best thing about the Konica Pop Super is the price — $128. The Olympus Infinity Twin, which lists for $325, features a twin lens system that allows you to shoot with either a 35mm or 70mm lens, wide-angle or telephoto. It also has a self-timer that can take two shots in a row, rather than one, plus a motor drive setting that allows you to take a sequence of up to four consecutive shots.

The Pentax IQ Zoom 70 features a 35-70mm power zoom lens that can be increased to 100mm with an optional tele-extender. The Pentax IQ 60 camera has a 38-60mm zoom lens and macro capability. No price or delivery date on either camera.

Nikon's Zoom Touch 500, which lists for $404, features a 35-80mm zoom lens with four zoom control modes. You can zoom continuously; step zoom between 80, 64, 53, 44 and 35mm; take three shots in a row — a long shot, a medium shot and close-up; or take a close-up head-and-shoulder shot and then a full body shot. You don't move the lens door!

The viewfinder changes magnification with the lens and features both red and green LEDs showing both focus and flash status. The built-in flash works in both low light and for flash fill. You can shoot continuous sequences as well as single shots. There is also a creative override that allows you to set the exposure for plus or minus two stops.

Yashica's new T3 AF camera, which lists for $430, features, in addition to an eye-level finder, a waist-level finder that can be used for shooting low-level or overhead shots. The lens is 35mm f-2.8.

Kodak's new S300MD motor drive camera, at $89.95, features autolock to first frame, autowind, push-button autorewind, and a fixed-focus 35mm lens with a range from 4 feet to infinity. It has, however, a comparatively slow 1/100th of a second shutter speed.

Between now and the end of the year, look for a host of new point-and-shoot cameras to come onto the market. This is where the hot market is right now.

Some will be just that: point-and-shoot. The cheaper versions may limit you to one or two ASA's, usually 100 and 200, or 400. They will contain fixed-focus lenses that depend on depth of field rather than on autofocus to get a sharp picture, and relatively slow shutter speeds.

At the top of the line will be the "bridge" cameras, designed to be used as simple point-and-shoot cameras at first and then, by pressing a few buttons, convert to such professional options as multiple exposure, sequence photography and exposure bracketing. You'll pay for what you get, so the price is likely to be something of a shock.

Because so many new cameras will be coming out, there is too little space here to go into all the details. Watch upcoming issues of photography magazines for more detailed information, or visit your local photography store.

Coping with pets that chew everything

QUESTION:

My dog chews and eats anything she can get her mouth on — stones, dirt, socks, toys. I'm worried she'll ingest something some day that'll make her sick. She's a year old and I thought this habit would stop by now. Why does she do it and what can I expect in the future? The problem is worse when she's alone.

Pet Forum

Allan Leventhal, D.V.M.

When you remove a foreign object from the puppy's mouth, do so with a positive maneuver, no playing.

Feeding infrequently leaves a dog with an empty tummy too much of the time; thus inviting pica through hunger. Therefore a pup should be fed three or four times daily and an adult usually twice daily.

An occasional case of pica may be due to a nutritional or digestive deficiency. These may be protein, minerals, fatty acids, etc. but if your pet is on a proper diet, this should not be a problem.

You're right in assuming that this pica-business should be over by one year of age. Sometimes when a dog is left alone for long periods it'll eat items symbolizing the owner. This may happen if the pet feels neglected and is trying to attract the owner's attention. When this happens try getting your pet's attention by asking it to sit for you or lie down, or heel. This should settle her down and relax her. Avoid excessive petting or fondling — five seconds is enough. Over attention causes introversion which is a pica problem.

Tone down your pet's emotions about your comings and goings by making these exits and entrances non-dramatic and calm. No prolonged and emotional goodbyes and greetings, not even eye contact on leaving. A simple command to "sit" and a short, nice hello on arrival is enough.

If you are home when you pet starts to show interest in ingesting something, distract her immediately. Clap your hand, spank a wall with a newspaper, etc. Do not slap her — again it may be negative feed-back. You also could distract her with a ball or a chew toy of her own. Never pick up items you don't want her to have while she's watching. This will only tend to heighten her desire for them. Dogs sometimes enjoy "mouth-handling" things we handle.

At least once a day have a play period with your pet, especially if she's alone a lot. Toss a ball, play tag, preferably in the morning. But give her time to calm down before you leave. This happy exercise period provides an interaction that will actually calm her down. Let her have her own large chewy but unswallowable artificial bones.

What should you do if you arrive home to find your dog has swallowed something? Call your veterinarian. The vet may want to induce vomiting or in an extreme case, perform surgery. But often a pin or some sharp stone can be monitored radiologically to see if it's progressing through the intestines.

Allan Leventhal is a Bolton veterinarian. If you have a question you'd like answered, write to: Pet Forum, Manchester Herald, P.O. Box 591, Manchester 06040.

A worthwhile test to determine 'computing skills'

By Larry Blasko
The Associated Press

Early fall usually brings the first parents' meeting or open house at school and the chance to worry about the kids getting enough computer education to compete in the 21st century. Baby-boomer parents, most of whom got a good bit of education with no more complicated calculation instrument than a pencil, see a coming world where computing is an assumed skill for adults. Assumed skills are those that every adult in a society is assumed to have — using the telephone, driving a car, operating home appliances, keeping a checkbook, mailing a letter. But just what is computing skill? Programming in BASIC or PASCAL? Running spreadsheets or word processing programs? Using a computer to search a database? Should the computer be the subject of a course of study or should it be a tool that's available for use in all courses? The questions can go on for hours without getting any definitive answers. Computing at the individual level is just too new, a shade more than a decade old, for anything to be a hard-and-fast answer. It would be like trying to establish the definitive Drivers Education course from experience gained in the development of the Stanley Steamer.

That aside, parenting gives you just one shot per kid, so most of us will try to develop workable interim answers. That's probably going to move from a bias in favor of adding computers to education. It's the same bias that makes us add sweaters to a toddler about to play in the snow: if a little is good, a lot is better. But like everything in computing, it's a bit more complicated than that. An article in the October issue of COMPUTE! (COM-PUTE! Publications, $2.95) has an interesting score-yourself test that rates your school's performance in computing. Taking the test (and doing the reporting that will allow you to answer the questions) is worthwhile.

The article, by David Stanton, offers 15 questions with multiple-choice answers and a point-rating system similar to the traditional 100-point grading system. Stanton is the computer coordinator for the Bolivar School District in Bolivar, N.Y.

Questions include those that spotlight the amount and kind of hardware and software available in the school, but they also focus on how that equipment is used and to what end. It's a test worth taking and if you find the results unsatisfactory, it's time to talk to school officials and fellow parents.

Major vendors have substantial discounts and extensive programs aimed at getting their gear into schools on the theory that the consumers of tomorrow will have fond memories. Curriculum and staffing issues might be more difficult, but most schools welcome parental input and will work seriously with concerned adults to provide a better education for children.

Authors examine the auto industry's big picture

By Michael Bezdek
The Associated Press

BOSTON — As the story of maverick automaker Preston Tucker is being discovered by movie-goers in the acclaimed George Lucas-Francis Coppola movie "Tucker," dozens of writers continue to labor quietly on the big picture of automobile history.

Books on the rich development of the industry and its cultural impact remain largely left to small publishing houses and university presses.

Some recent publications are worth a read. Here are thumbnail sketches of those books:

James J. Flink's "The Automobile Age" (The MIT Press, $25) is thick with colorful detail on the industry, its leaders and the automobile as an icon.

Flink focuses on all the highlights, such as the days when Henry Ford's Model T democratized the industry by making cars, all of which looked alike, affordable for millions of Americans. There also are low points: the modern Japanese invasion; Ford Motor Co. turning down Volkswagen for free after World War II, and how under German direction it became by 1972 the best-selling car in the history of the automobile industry.

Flink, a professor of comparative culture at the University of California, Irvine, and affiliated with its Institute of Transportation Studies, analyzes the many changes wrought by the car culture: the disappearance of corner grocers and the emergence of the supermarket, the proliferation of fast-food joints, and the increased ability of millions to vacation at far-flung spots.

The history of the car industry gets a coffee-table presentation in Walter J. Boyne's "Power Behind the Wheel: Creativity and the Evolution of the Automobile" (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, $35).

Boyne, former head of the National Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian Institution, parlays his experience into an attractive book.

The book is complemented by archival pictures and especially by the work of collaborator Lucinda Lewis, a specialist in automobile photography. Whether Lewis is focusing her camera on the door of a Duesenberg SJ, the lights of a Lincoln or the fine points of a Pierce Silver Arrow, the result enhances Boyne's history.

Donald Finlay Davis, in "Conspicuous Production: Automobiles and Elites in Detroit, 1899-1933" (Temple University Press, $29.95), focuses on the city's bluebloods who largely blew their chance to capitalize on the industry.

Davis, a history professor at the University of Ottawa, tells how Detroit's old families — who had made fortunes in lumber, mining, banking and stove manufacturing — shunned Henry Ford's commitment to producing an affordable car for the masses and aimed at the more expensive market. They eventually priced themselves out of the fledgling industry even as it grew prodigiously.

FOCUS / Senior Citizens

Open house a huge success

Editor's note: This column is prepared by the staff of the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center.

By Joe Diminico
Activities Specialist

I would like to thank the volunteers and all the individuals who helped make the year's open house a huge success. Many new faces appeared and I would encourage them to visit the senior center more frequently.

Remember, the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center is a multi-purpose facility that has something to offer to all Manchester residents 60 years of age or older.

Congratulations to Bill Valenti, winner of the open-house raffle. Bill will be taking his wife, Louise, to Radio City Music Hall this Dec. 13, compliments of the senior center.

FLU CLINIC: The Manchester Health Department will sponsor a flu clinic at the senior center on Oct. 17 from 9 a.m. to noon and at Mayfair Gardens from 1:30 to 2 p.m. The Health Department requests a $3 donation for the flu shot and a $6 donation for the pneumococcal shot. Seniors should consult their physicians before receiving their shots. Additional dates are Oct. 19 and Nov. 21. For more information, call the Health Department at 647-3179.

FAIR TIME: The senior center's annual Holiday Fair will be Oct. 29 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. This year the fair will be very exciting, with a display of handknit goods, ceramics, arts and crafts, wood crafts, dried flower arrangements, baked goods, and much more. All proceeds help defray the cost of our meals program.

TRIPS:
Oct. 12 — "Funny Girl" at the Coachtlight. We leave at 10:30 a.m.
Oct. 18 — Governor's Day at New Haven Coliseum. Filled.
Oct. 22 — Hawaii (12 days). Filled.

Social Security

QUESTION: I have been looking after my great-aunt daily for the past five years. Now her doctor is telling me that she will soon need nursing home care. I am concerned about her Social Security checks since Aunt Laura has always received them by mail. What would be the best way for her to get them now?

ANSWER: The most convenient way for your Aunt Laura to receive the Social Security checks, especially in her present circumstances, is through direct deposit. This is now the preferred method of payment of Social Security benefits. By having her monthly checks deposited directly into her savings or checking account, she no longer has to be concerned about her checks becoming lost or stolen; it will be received in her account usually by the third day of each month.

QUESTION: I receive a small Social Security check each month. However, it is becoming very difficult for me to pay all my bills with that small check. At the local senior center, they told me I may be able to get SSI checks. Is that correct?

ANSWER: You may be able to get SSI checks as well as Social Security if you meet the eligibility requirements under both programs. Eligibility for SSI depends on the amount of income and resources you have. Generally, the first $20 a month of any income you receive does not count. In addition, the first $65 of earned income received each month is not considered, and one-half your income as well as any other pensions, cash, or checks, and even non-cash items such as food, clothing, and shelter that you receive. Concerning resources, an individual can receive SSI if the value of his or her resources is $1,900 or less. For an eligible couple, this amount is $2,850. Resources include real estate, personal belongings, a car, savings and checking accounts, cash, or stocks and bonds. However, the house you live in and the land it is on don't count. Neither does your car, under most circumstances.

QUESTION: I'll be eligible for Medicare later this year. If I enroll in Medicare, will my Medicare coverage day in advance for ride.

Oct. 20-21 — Atlantic City. For the second bus, call Don Berger, 875-0538. $77 per person.

Oct. 19 — Signup for the Christmas show at Radio City Music Hall. The trip is scheduled for Dec. 13. $41 per person. The trip includes the show at Radio City, lunch on your own at South Street Seaport, and admission to Museum of the City of New York.

A CHANGE: Effectively immediately, seniors will no longer be required to buy tickets for Thursday meals. Seniors will be asked to call in reservations no later than Tuesday at noon so the kitchen staff can be prepared. Remember, the reservation system is needed to cut waste. Individuals canceling, for whatever reason, should contact the center.

THURSDAY PROGRAMS:
Oct. 13 — Movie, "Home Free."
Oct. 20 — Lefty's Trio (polka and country music).
Oct. 27 — Slide presentation of the Trans-Siberian Railroad, with the Rev. Ross Meteger.

CLOSED: The senior center will be closed this Monday for the Columbus Day holiday.

MENU:
Tuesday — Tuna-cheese melts, apple juice, warm gingerbread with apple sauce, beverage.
Wednesday — Beef stew, biscuit, pears, beverage.

Thursday — Spaghetti and meatballs with garlic bread, garden salad, tortoni ice cream, beverage.

Friday — Sliced turkey sandwich on wheat bread, vegetable soup, dessert (chef's choice), beverage.

ON-GOING ACTIVITIES:
Monday — Closed for Columbus Day.
Tuesday — plumbing, 9 a.m.; oil painting, 9:30 a.m.; photography, 10 a.m.; square dancing, 10 a.m.; exercise with Cleo, 1:30 p.m.; basketweaving (beginners), 2 p.m.; grocery shopping, call a day in advance for ride; non-grocery shopping. Bradlees, call a LONDON (AP) — A proud Prince Andrew calls his 2-month-old daughter, Beatrice, "quite extraordinary."

"She is really very alert and does not make much noise," the Duke of York said of his first child, born Aug. 8 to him and his wife, the former Sarah Ferguson. "She has Sarah's eyes and I am convinced she is going to be prettier than both of us."

Denver ponders offer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Denver says he has until Nov. 1 to accept a "very serious" invitation to fly aboard a Soviet spacecraft.
"This is not a stunt to me. I think that it's the best thing that I can do right now for my country, for NASA, for our space effort, for our people and for the planet," the "Rocky Mountain High" singer said Thursday.

However, Denver said the Soviets' insistence that he pay $10 million for the flight would likely prompt him to drop the project.

Miss America unchanged
AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Miss America Gretchen Carlson, who has shaken hands with President Reagan, eaten sushi with Bill Cosby and chatted with David Letterman on his talk show, says: "I'm still me. I haven't changed."

Returning to her home state Thursday, Miss Carlson said, "The first thing I do when we get to the hotel room is get into my robe, and the second thing is see what room service has."

While job growth continued, it occurred at a relatively subdued rate, which suggested that the economy was neither getting too hot nor catching a chill.

Analysts said the Federal Reserve Board probably would like the figures enough to decide against any further credit-tightening in its battle against inflation.

Meanwhile, the passage of time has made it increasingly apparent that last year's stock market crash was not the immediate precursor of a corresponding plunge for the economy.

The stock market has been holding its ground lately because of "a total absence of any sign of a recession," in the words of Henry Gailliot, president of Federated Investment Counseling, a Pittsburgh-based money management firm.

Yet Gailliot, like a good many other observers, believes the

Griffin's ballroom opens

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Merv Griffin, the talk show host turned real estate tycoon, christened the newly decorated International Ballroom of his Beverly Hilton Hotel with a celebrity bash.

James Stewart, Walter Matthau, Tom Selleck, Anne Bancroft and Mel Brooks, Red Buttons, Suzanne Pleshette, Suzanne Somers, Kenny Rogers, Carl Reiner, Dina Merrill and Cesar Romero were some of the famous faces at Thursday night's fête.

The crowd seemed to approve of the new, lighter decor of the ballroom, which has held such events as the Oscar Ball and the Directors Guild and Golden Globe awards ceremonies.

"I love it," said Lucille Ball. "It's about time this town had a place like this."

HOUSTON (AP) — Nearly 100 homeowners with leaky pipes have been awarded up to $7 million in damages from the four companies that made and installed the plumbing, ending a marathon trial that produced a 4,465-page verdict.

The state jury Thursday sided with 94 La Porte homeowners who had sued General Homes Corp., which built the houses, Shell Oil Co., U.S. Brass Corp. and Hoechst-Celanese Corp., which produced and marketed the plumbing materials.

Ending a trial that began in June, the jury found that the four companies were negligent and misrepresented the quality of the plumbing.

Union election approved
NEW HAVEN (AP) — A federal judge Friday denied a former Teamsters official's bid to delay a local union's nomination of officers, ruling that the official failed to prove that he was improperly disqualified from running for his old job.

Judge Ellen B. Burns' ruling means that the Teamster's Local 671's nominating meeting will go forward tomorrow without Richard Robidoux, who was seeking election as the union's secretary-treasurer. The election is scheduled for Nov. 13.

Robidoux was the union's secretary-treasurer for 15 years before being defeated by his cousin, Thomas Robidoux, in 1985.

Rosy data can't kill fears of recession

By Chet Currier
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — No matter how good the statistics on the economy get these days, they don't seem to be good enough to quell fears on Wall Street of an approaching recession.

By most standards, the figures on the pace of business activity and growth have been very upbeat of late.

The latest case in point: The Labor Department's report Friday of a drop in the unemployment rate from 5.6 percent in August to 5.4 percent in September.

While job growth continued, it occurred at a relatively subdued rate, which suggested that the economy was neither getting too hot nor catching a chill.

Analysts said the Federal Reserve Board probably would like the figures enough to decide against any further credit-tightening in its battle against inflation.

Meanwhile, the passage of time has made it increasingly apparent that last year's stock market crash was not the immediate precursor of a corresponding plunge for the economy.

The stock market has been holding its ground lately because of "a total absence of any sign of a recession," in the words of Henry Gailliot, president of Federated Investment Counseling, a Pittsburgh-based money management firm.

Yet Gailliot, like a good many other observers, believes the gains recorded by stock prices this year have represented nothing more than a "bear market rally," and argues that a recession is likely by next year.

"If this business cycle is to move toward recession in the standard sequence, which involves capacity strains in finance, industrial output and employment, the recession will occur in 1989," he maintains.

"The overextended consumer will stop in a not very different fashion from the overextended stock market, which stopped in August of 1987."

Not everyone shares this view, of course. For the nearly six years since the current period expansion began, the optimists have been right and the frequent warnings from the pessimists have proved wrong.

"We do not anticipate a recession soon," said Jim McCamant, editor of the Medical Technology Stock Letter, in the latest issue of that investment advisory publication.

"It is important to look at the economy sector by sector, rather than always concentrating on the aggregate numbers."

"During this long period of prosperity, we have had some serious recessions in a number of different industries. The oil supply industry is still in its recession."

"The 'Rust Belt' companies are now in the early stages of an economic recovery, helped by strong exports. In this sector the recovery is still very young and is far short of previous cyclical peaks."

Local 671 is based in East Hartford.

'Grand Prix' economy

Low jobless rate draws GOP raves but the numbers may not be that rosy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate in September fell back to July's level of 5.4 percent, but with the loss of 37,000 factory jobs in the meantime, the government said Friday.

Employers added 255,000 new jobs to their payrolls last month, sending the number of unemployed workers down by a like figure to 6,596,000, the Labor Department said. The unemployment total was the lowest it has been since June, when the jobless rate hit a 14-year-low 5.3 percent.

But more than 100,000 of the new jobs were an unusually high number of teachers returning to the classroom. Payroll growth in the private sector has averaged only 120,000 new jobs in each of the past two months, compared with average monthly gains of 300,000 in the first half of 1988.

The 0.2 percentage point drop in the September jobless rate directly offset an increase of the same size, to 5.6 percent, in August.

Analysts said the figures indicate a continuing trend of slower economic growth — just what financial markets nervous about an overheating economy and inflation wanted — going into next month's presidential election.

"If you were (Republican nominee) George Bush, I don't think you could have written a better set of numbers," said David Wyss, chief financial economist for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

Wyss called the loss of 18,000 factory jobs last month following a similar drop of 19,000 in August a concern but added: "If you're a Republican, you avoid the details and look at the big picture."

That's just what President Reagan did, citing the figures in a campaign rally for Bush in Michigan as evidence that

Union election approved

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A federal judge Friday denied a former Teamsters official's bid to delay a local union's nomination of officers, ruling that the official failed to prove that he was improperly disqualified from running for his old job.

Judge Ellen B. Burns' ruling means that the Teamster's Local 671's nominating

"America's economy is a Grand Prix racer."

However, there was other evidence in Friday's report that the job picture is not as rosy as it appears at first glance.

Construction employment was flat and oil and gas industry rosters fell for the second month in a row. Together with assembly-line employment growth, they had been providing an average 65,000 new jobs a month from January through July.

Employment growth in business services such as data processing that has provided a large chunk of the job gains in the 6-year-long economic recovery also has slowed to a trickle the past two months, the government said.

Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, told the congressional Joint Economic Committee that as many industries lost jobs last month as gained them, the first time that has occurred in more than two years.

Citing an unusual monthly drop of 107,000 people in the labor force, Larry Mishel, an economist of the Economic Policy Institute, a liberal think tank financed largely by labor unions, said Reagan and Bush "are getting lucky on the demographics."

"The whole reason why Reagan has been able to achieve low unemployment rates is that the population growth slowed by a third in the 1980s," Mishel said. "President Carter had the Baby Boom coming into the labor market and had to create a lot more jobs. Reagan has enjoyed the effects of the Baby Bust."

Economists said they did not expect government economic reports due to be released before the Nov. 8 election to help Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis.

after about four years because of contact with chemicals, primarily chlorine, found in water, said James R. Moriarty, an attorney for the homeowners.

Moriarty said the verdict, which addressed each claim on a separate sheet of paper, was the first against the companies responsible for the polybutylene plumbing system. Six similar suits are pending in Harris County courts, he said.

Moriarty said the jury awarded each homeowner about $40,000 to $70,000 in damages, interest and fees, but the final amount depends on whether Judge Alice Oliver Trevathan affirms the panel's finding of deceptive trade practices.

He said the plumbing system was taken off the market in 1986.

Highlights of the week

■ The government said civilian unemployment fell 0.2 percentage points to 5.4 percent last month as payrolls grew by 255,000 jobs. Other reports showed orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods surged 3.1 percent and construction spending fell 0.6 percent in August.

■ The nation's largest general retailers reported modest gains in September sales, but analysts said the 19-month-old retail slump was far from over.

■ The automakers said they had their third-best sales year ever with sales of 15.6 million cars and light trucks in the 1988 model year ended this past week.

■ Oil futures prices tested lows not seen in two years amid indications that Saudi Arabia might boost their output to try to pressure other OPEC oil producers to restrict production. Prices on near-term contracts for the benchmark U.S. crude sank below $13 per barrel.

■ The Transportation Department set fuel-economy standards for 1989 passenger cars at 26.5 miles per gallon of gasoline, a level the nation's two largest automakers say they could meet without layoffs and production cuts.

■ Pillsbury Co.'s stock skyrocketed after Britain's Grand Metropolitan PLC launched a surprise $5.17 billion tender offer for the nation's fourth largest food company.

■ Financier Carl Icahn, who heads Trans World Airlines Inc., talked with Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo about acquiring Miami-based Eastern Airlines, while New York developer Donald Trump confirmed he was bargaining with Texas Air about purchasing Eastern's Northeast shuttle.

■ After a year-long tug of war, Irving Bank Corp. surrendered to Bank of New York Co., accepting a sweetened $1.4 billion bid that ended one of the nation's longest-running takeover fights.

■ Macmillan Inc.'s board urged shareholders to reject a $2.51 billion tender offer from British publisher Robert Maxwell. Macmillan previously agreed to a slightly lower, $2.5 billion buyout proposal from a group led by the investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co.

■ Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. raised its takeover offer for Kroger Co. to $5.03 billion, rivaling a planned $4.6 billion restructuring previously announced by the grocery giant.

■ Coniston Partners proposed a friendly $1.13 billion takeover of foods giant TW Services Inc. but suggested it might turn hostile if the offer is rejected.

■ R.P. Scherer Corp. management hired an investment banker to explore the possible sale of the company, a reversal that marks an apparent victory for dissident shareholders led by the company founder's daughter.

■ Knight-Ridder Inc. said it plans to sell its eight broadcast television stations, partly to reduce its debt that has grown to $929 million with its recent purchase of a leading electronic information concern.

■ The Supreme Court closed a chapter in the largest municipal bond default in U.S. history, dismissing claims by investors who lost money from the Washington Public Power Supply System's nuclear project. In other action, the court expanded its study of drug testing in the work place and agreed to consider the authority of states to deny unemployment benefits to people who refuse to work on their Sabbath.

■ A federal appeals court rejected an unusual request by Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. to disqualify the judge presiding over the government's fraud case against the Wall Street firm.

■ A congressional investigation revealed no widespread price gouging of grocery shoppers as a result of the summer drought.

State firm picks Oklahoma

CLAREMORE, Okla. (AP) — A Greenwich, Conn., company has selected a site in Claremore for a jet aircraft engine repair plant that could employ up to 350 people in a few years, officials announced Friday.

The Howmet Corp. is one of a group of five aerospace companies expected to announce they will locate operations in the area, bringing up to 800 jobs with them, economic development officials said.

The Connecticut company chose a 10-acre site with two buildings 20 miles from Tulsa International Airport over a location in the Atlanta area, said Jerry Blevins, executive director of the Claremore Industrial and Redevelopment Authority.

Blevins noted the installation could become the second largest employer in the county if it reaches its anticipated work force level. Baker Hughes employs about 500 people in its Rogers County drilling supply business.

The buildings targeted by Howmet were formerly occupied by Centrifit-Hughes Control, which manufactured submersible pumps for the oilfield industry.

Four other aerospace-related companies, which will employ at least 75 people each, have committed to move their operations to the Tulsa area within six months, said Don Smart, past chairman of the Northeastern Oklahoma Economic Development Association and marketing manager for Tulsa International Airport.

The Howmet Corp. plant will have an initial work force of 30, according to officials of the company, which has 23 manufacturing facilities in the United States, France, the United Kingdom and Japan.

The new location will be called the Tulsa Refurbishment Center, said John Parkinson, general manager of the Howmet Refurbishment and Coating Division.

Workers will specialize in the repair of blades and vanes from large commercial and military gas turbine engines, Parkinson said.

David Squier, executive vice president of Howmet, said an agreement in principle includes the purchase of 10 acres and two buildings. They are a 65,000-square-foot structure to house refurbishment operations and related activities and a 10,000-square-foot building for management and support personnel and an experimental laboratory.

Closing on the site is expected in November.

Operations are expected to begin early next year and production is scheduled to gear up by the second quarter of 1989. Howmet will invest almost $8 million in the facility over the next two years, and there will be room for expansion if market conditions warrant, officials said.

Howmet established a Wichita Falls, Texas, refurbishment center in 1984. Sales at the Wichita Falls plant have doubled in each of the past two years and expansion has recently doubled manufacturing capacity there.

Tyson sued for divorce by 'tortured' Givens

By Judy Farah
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Actress Robin Givens, who called her turbulent marriage to heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson "torture," filed for divorce Friday, celebrity attorney Marvin Mitchelson said.

Miss Givens, who appears in the ABC series "Head of the Class," cited irreconcilable differences for seeking to end the eight-month marriage that has been dissected on television and in the press. Miss Givens is in town filming the series. Mitchelson has also represented actress Joan Collins and was the lawyer in a landmark "palimony" decision against the late actor Lee Marvin.

In an interview with Barbara Walters on ABC's "20/20" a week ago, Miss Givens said her husband has an "extremely volatile temper" and that life with him was "torture... pure hell." She said she's become very afraid of him, but gave no indication she wanted to end the marriage.

Tyson, 22, the youngest heavyweight champion ever, told Miss Walters that he loves his 23-year-old wife and would not stand in her way if she chose to leave.

"My wife would just have to ask for it and she has every penny I have," said Tyson, a millionaire.

Miss Givens told Miss Walters that Tyson is a manic-depressive, but a doctor who examined the heavyweight champ said this week he is not.

Friends of Tyson have accused Miss Givens and her mother, Ruth Roper, of manipulating Tyson in order to gain control of his $40 million fortune.

Days after the interview, police went to the Bernardville, N.J., mansion of the couple to try to calm Tyson, at the request of Miss Givens and her mother, because the champ reportedly had flown into a rage and hurled furniture through the windows.

COUPLE SPLITS — Heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson has been sued by his wife, actress Robin Givens, for a divorce. Givens retained celebrity divorce attorney Marvin Mitchelson to file a divorce petition Friday against her husband, claiming irreconcilable differences.

Dorsett admits he was wrong

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — Denver Broncos running back Tony Dorsett, arrested by the Colorado State Patrol and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, said he knew he was wrong to refuse to take a breath test.

The state patrol said Dorsett was "uncooperative" and verbally abusive to officers who stopped the black Jeep Cherokee he was driving at about 11:30 p.m. Thursday.

Dorsett said he had been without an attorney and had always heard that in such cases "if you have an option not to do something, do not do it because it can work against you in some cases. That was the only reason I didn't do it — because I wasn't in the presence of my attorney."

Trooper Don Rolfe stopped a black Jeep Cherokee driven by Dorsett about 11:30 p.m. Thursday after the patrol received a complaint that such a vehicle was weaving along Parker Road in Arapahoe County, authorities said.

Rolfe confirmed the vehicle was "weaving severely," authorities said.

Rolfe said he used his lights and siren but had difficulty stopping the vehicle, according to Trooper Mark Anello of the state patrol. When the vehicle did stop, Rolfe and two sheriff's deputies recognized Dorsett and Rolfe "detected the presence of alcohol," Anello said.

Dorsett was taken to the Arapahoe County Jail and was released early Friday after posting a $750 bond, Anello said.

He was scheduled for an arraignment in county court Nov. 8.

Gretzky a big help to his friends

By James Litke
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Lee Iacocca should have had it this easy when he set out to turn around Chrysler. Remember that during the coming weeks as NHL scores roll in and the Los Angeles Kings turn up winners more often than not.

And remember this: They may have gone from laid-back to laying it on, under the tutelage of a young tough named Wayne Gretzky — but they're still a club, not a gang.

Item: Some friends of a friend showed up at Greg Stefan's doorstep the other night and broke in. Eight times.

They didn't say please, didn't say thank you, didn't say much, in fact, except that Gretzky had sent them.

Stefan understood. He has been a pal of The Great One going back to their boyhood days on the frozen ponds of Brantford, Ontario.

And it just turned out to be his misfortune to wind up in goal wearing a Detroit Red Wings uniform the night that Gretzky, now wearing the black, white and silver sweater of the Kings, had something to prove.

"The only other team I've ever seen come at you like that,"

Stefan said, shaking his head. "was Edmonton with Wayne Gretzky."

"That's why he's the greatest player in the world. And he seems to be getting better."

Item: During the second period of Thursday night's season opener, things got so bad at one point — two Kings' goals within 13 seconds, four straight during one stretch — that the beleaguered Red Wings sent one player too many over the boards because it just didn't seem fair.

Now, Detroit Coach Jacques Demers doesn't go back as far with Gretzky as does Stefan, and his teams don't make those kind of mistakes often.

It just turned out to be his misfortune to wind up behind the wrong bench on the wrong night.

"I never saw a Los Angeles team come at you like that," Demers said, also shaking his head.

"The difference is Wayne Gretzky. He makes every player around him play better."

Wayne Gretzky did not invent — or even re-invent — the Los Angeles Kings. It only seemed that way to the recently converted in the land of the sometimes self-absorbed.

What he did was make all the Kings and all the Kings' fans something they hadn't been in their last seven season-openers and too few times in the 21 seasons they spent wandering in the NHL wilderness without him.

He made his teammates breathe easy by scoring the first goal and assisting on the second. He made them look good with blind passes that uncannily found the target, by freezing defenses with his stickhandling, then coolly setting up someone else for a shot.

Then he refused to take the credit. "One guy doesn't win," he said. "It takes a whole team. Pressure is on to win now — maybe for the first time for this team."

"But you haven't done anything until your name is on the Stanley Cup. I've had it four times. I want it one more time on this team."

He will need help, but he is willing to give some help in return — as Luc Robitaille found out.

Robitaille scored 45 goals as a rookie in the 1986-87 season and 53 last season, but now the horizon truly seems limitless. He was named the No. 1 star Thursday night after scoring three times, but he was quick to note that he had a lot of help from No. 99.

"It was a great feeling just to be out there with him," Robitaille said. "Even with two guys on him, he gets the puck to you."

Bengals and Jets in unfamiliar surroundings

By Hillel Italie
The Associated Press

New York Jets doesn't usually meet anyone's idea of a big game, but this year is different.

The Cincinnati Bengals playing the

The Bengals, the National Football

BENGAL QB — Cincinnati quarterback Boomer Esiason, shown last week against the Raiders, will lead the unbeaten Bengals against the surprising New York Jets on Sunday.

League's only unbeaten team after five weeks, entertain the improving Jets on Sunday in a matchup between two of the American Conference's top-ranked teams.

"We're in a new era now," Bengals coach Sam Wyche said. "We're beyond the stage where we sneak up on folks. We're beyond the stage where everyone is saying, 'Well, they're not as good as their record, wait and see next week, they're going to get whipped.' We're now at the point where whoever we play is playing the big game. We're the guys that they want to knock off."

Cincinnati, led by quarterback Boomer Esiason, has the top-ranked offense in the AFC. The Jets have the AFC's second-best offense and top-ranked defense.

"They (the Jets) have a stronger offense and a stronger defense than anybody we've played to date on the Sunday we've played them," Wyche said.

The New York Giants are at Philadelphia on Monday night.

The Bengals, who beat the Los Angeles Raiders 45-21 last Sunday, are off to their best start since 1975. Esiason, the NFL's top-ranked quarterback, has thrown 12 touchdown passes.

"They've been on the verge the last couple of years of being a great team," Jets coach Joe Walton said. "They had a young team a couple of years ago. They've taken their lumps. They've learned how to play."

The Jets, 3-1-1, are still learning, but learning well. Their defense has allowed only 12.2 points per game, and defensive end Mark Gastineau has regained his touch for sacking quarterbacks, tying for the NFL lead with seven.

New York Giants (3-2) at Philadelphia (2-3) (Monday night): The Giants have won six straight over the Eagles, but have 17 players on injured reserve and several others hurt.

Philadelphia has the NFL's best giveaway-takeaway ratio at plus-10 and quarterback Randall Cunningham has thrown touchdown passes in 17 straight games, the longest active streak.

New England (2-3) at Green Bay (0-5): The Patriots will start quarterback Doug Flutie, last week's hero in a 21-17 victory over Indianapolis.

Flutie, the AFC Offensive Player of the Week, replaced starting quarterback Tom Ramsey at the outset of the fourth quarter and completed 12 of 16 passes for 132 yards.

Alysheba leads Jockey field

NEW YORK (AP) — Alysheba, who enjoys his work, takes on the task of beating a small, but tough field at 1 1/4 miles in the Jockey Club Gold Cup at Belmont Park Saturday.

It will be Alysheba's first start at the distance since finishing fourth in the Belmont Stakes last year in a bid for the Triple Crown.

In explaining why he wasn't skipping the Gold Cup and waiting for the 1 1/4-mile, $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic, especially in the wake of Alysheba's record performance in the recent 1 1/4-mile Woodward, trainer Jack Van Berg said: "If you're scared of getting beat, you ought to retire, you ought to go home."

Van Berg feels that Alysheba's Belmont Stakes performance let down a lot of people, adding, "It's only fair to give him this chance."

Alysheba, who was voted 3-year-old champion, has won five of seven starts this year and has looked sharp in his last two races.

"This horse loves to run," Van Berg said. "He loves to train. He loves what he's doing."

The 4-year-old colt, owned by Dorothy and Pamela Scharbauer and ridden by Chris McCarron, must have been ecstatic Sept. 17 at Belmont.

He won the 1 1/4-mile Woodward in a track record 1:59 2-5, beating Forty Niner by a neck, with Waquoit another neck back and 1/4 lengths ahead of Personal Flag.

Waquoit, winner of the 1 1/4-mile Brooklyn Handicap at Belmont in 1987-88, and Personal Flag, winner of Belmont's 1 1/4-mile Suburban Handicap this year, also are in the Gold Cup field.

Completing the field are Creme Fraiche, the 6-year-old gelding who won the 1985 Belmont Stakes and the Gold Cup in 1986-87, and New York-bred Easy N Dirty.

Oregon squads invade L.A.

By Herschel Nissenon
The Associated Press

This week's Hollywood epic is "Invaders from the North."

They'll be wearing funny looking headgear and bulky, padded outfits, but it won't be an invasion from outer space, just from Oregon.

The college football spotlight shines on Los Angeles on Saturday when second-ranked UCLA meets Oregon State and No. 3 Southern California faces No. 18 Oregon. It's the only time this season that quarterbacks Troy Aikman (UCLA) and Rodney Peete (Southern Cal) will show their wares in L.A. on the same day.

Will the scripts have happy endings?

"I would say this is the best Oregon State team that I can remember," UCLA coach Terry Donahue said of the 3-2 Beavers, who are over .500 this late in the season for the first time since 1970.

"Oregon is a very fine team," Southern Cal's Larry Smith said of the 4-0 Ducks. "They're sound, they execute well, they have very good balance on offense and they're playing very good defense. They beat us last year."

Top-ranked Miami (Fla.) is idle, while No. 4 Auburn visits Louisiana State for a night game and No. 5 Notre Dame is at Pitt at night. Sixth-ranked Florida State entertains Division I-AA Georgia Southern, No. 7 West Virginia is at East Carolina, No. 8 South Carolina at Virginia Tech, No. 9 Nebraska at Kansas and No. 10 Oklahoma plays Texas at Dallas.

In The Associated Press Second Ten, No. 11 Clemson is at Virginia, Mississippi at No. 12 Alabama, No. 13 Oklahoma State at Colorado, Memphis State at No. 14 Florida, Vanderbilt at No. 15 Georgia, No. 16 Wyoming at San Diego State at night, Michigan State at No. 17 Michigan, No. 18 Washington at Arizona State at night and Texas Tech at No. 20 Arkansas.

UCLA is coming off a hard-fought 24-17 victory at Washington and Donahue is trying to keep his team from looking past Oregon State, long a Pac-10 Conference doormat.

"There was a day you could look at somebody with an eyebrow up," he said. "I don't think you can do that now. The league is outrageous. There's no relief. I think Oregon State is a team that we better prepare well for and play well against if we're going to win."

Oregon may be without star quarterback Bill Musgrave (ankle) for the second straight game. The Ducks were the only Pac-10 team to beat Southern Cal last year and want to prove it wasn't a fluke.

Boston at Oakland (8:22 p.m. EDT), Mike Boddicker, 12-15, pitches against Bob Welch, 17-9. Boddicker is 3-0 with a 1.85 earned-run average since Aug. 29. Welch was 13-4 at home this season, 4.5 on the road.
Stumps
Walt Weiss of the Oakland Athletics batted .250 this season. Against Boston he was 4-for-36, a .309 average. Mark McGwire of the Oakland Athletics was 0-for-10 lifetime against Roger Clemens before his RBI single in the sixth inning Thursday night.
Stumps
The Boston Red Sox have lost four consecutive postseason games.
Swings
Ron Darling of the New York Mets was 14-1 at home this season and 3-8 on the road.
Stumps
Including the first two games of the playoffs, the Los Angeles Dodgers have a team batting average of .201 since Sept. 1.
Stumps
Rich Gedman's homerun off Greg Cadaret in the seventh inning Thursday night was his first off a left-hander since July 25, 1987. All nine of Gedman's homers during the 1988 season were off right-handers.
Stumps
The Oakland Athletics have won 14 of their last 15 home games, losing only to the Milwaukee Brewers and Teddy Higuera 8-3 on the last Saturday of the season.
Stumps
Jose Conseco's two-run homer off Roger Clemens and Walt Weiss' game-winning single off Lee Smith in the ninth inning Thursday night both came on 0-2 pitches.
Stumps
The Athletics were 54-77 this season in Oakland, the best home record in the American League. Their 30-31 road record was the best in the major leagues.
Stumps
Dennis Ecklerley of the Oakland Athletics got saves in the first two games of the AL playoffs after saving 45 during the season. The record for saves in a series is three by Dave Gluski of the 1971 Pittsburgh Pirates.

Jose Conseco of the Oakland Athletics has homered in two consecutive games and three of his last five.

Situations
Prior to Thursday night's game-winning hit against Boston, Walt Weiss of the Athletics was 4-for-46 this season in late-inning pressure situations, defined as from the seventh inning on when Oakland led by one run, was tied or trailed with the winning run on base, at bat or on deck.
Stumps
Seattle Mariners manager Jimmy Snyder was fired Thursday, along with pitching coach Billy Connors, batting coach Frank Howard and first-base coach Howie Bedell. 19-year veteran Dave Conception of the Cincinnati Reds was released Thursday.

1988 — The Chicago Cubs won the National League pennant when Mordecai Brown beat Christy Mathewson 4-2 in the playoff of the disputed game in which Fred Merkle failed to touch second base.
1929 — Howard Ehmke, a surprise starter for the Philadelphia Athletics, struck out 13 Chicago Cubs to win the opening World Series game.
1956 — Don Larsen of the New York Yankees pitched the only perfect game in World Series history, beating the Brooklyn Dodgers 2-0. Sal Maglie was the loser, giving up five hits. The Yankees took a 3-2 lead in the series. Mickey Mantle's homer in the fourth was all Larsen needed.

1961 — Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees set a World Series record for consecutive scoreless innings by extending his streak to 32 in a 7-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in Game 4.
1973 — Rusty Staub's two home runs tied the Mets to a 9-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, giving New York a 2-1 lead in the National League playoffs. Pete Rose of the Reds and Bud Harrelson of the Mets scuffled in the fifth inning after Rose slid hard into Harrelson.
1980 — Dave Bergman's two-run triple capped a four-run 10th inning as the Houston Astros beat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-4 and evened the National League playoffs after two games.
1980 — Mike Scott equaled a playoffs record with 14 strikeouts and threw a five-hitter as the Houston Astros beat the New York Mets 1-0 in the first game of the National League playoffs. Glenn Davis opened the second inning with a homerun off Dwight Gooden.

Sports in Brief

EC boys' soccer in action

TRUMBULL — The East Catholic boys' soccer team (4-2-1) will travel to Trumbull to take on St. Joseph's in a key ACC clash. The Eagles have won their last four matches. East is 4-0-1 in its last five matches and has allowed only one goal in the last four outings.

UConn teams at home

STORRS — The University of Connecticut football team, No. 14 in the Division I-AA poll, will entertain Villanova in Yankee Conference action.

The Wildcats share first place in the conference with a 2-0 mark and are 3-1 overall while the Huskies are 1-1 and 3-1 overall. Villanova has won its last three straight.

Meanwhile, the UConn men's soccer team will host the University of South Florida Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium. The Huskies are 7-5-1. It's Parent's weekend at UConn.

In local soccer action, the Manchester Community College men's soccer team (3-6) will travel to New Haven to take on the Southern Connecticut State University junior varsity soccer team today at 1 p.m.

Rhyan shares the lead

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — Dick Rhyan, a journeyman pro who has yet to score an official victory, compiled a 2-under-par 68 and took a share of the lead Friday at the halfway point of the $1-million Vantage Championship.

"Do you realize I could win more in this tournament than I did in the whole 10 years I spent on the regular tour?" Rhyan asked.

Rhyan, 53, reached the halfway point of the richest event on the Seniors Tour, offering $135,000 to the winner, with a 36-hole total of 137, three under par on the difficult Vantage course at Tanglewood Park.

With two rounds to go, he was tied for the top spot with 1975 U.S. Open champion Lou Graham, who had a struggling 69 that included five one-putt pars.

Ederberg reaches semis

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — Wimbledon champion Stefan Ederberg downed fellow Swede Magnus Gustafsson 6-3, 4-6 Friday to reach the semifinals of the $270,000 Swiss Indoors tennis tournament.

Ederberg, ranked third in the world, will play another Swede, fourth-seeded Jonas Svensson, in the semifinals. Svensson downed Diego Nargiso of Italy 6-7 (6-8), 6-3, 6-2.

Top-seed Mayotte wins

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Top seeded American Tim Mayotte crushed unseeded West German Carl-Uwe Steeb 6-2, 6-3 Friday night to move into the semifinals of the $195,000 Queensland Open tennis championships.

Mayotte has not dropped a set in the tournament. He earned a meeting with surprising Japanese player Shuzo Matsuoka on Saturday.

Matsuoka, ranked 193rd in the world, overpowered Australian teenager Jason Stoltenberg 6-3, 6-4 in 1 hour, 27 minutes earlier Friday.

Brooks grabs 2-stroke edge

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Mark Brooks shot a 4-under-par 68 Friday and swept into a 2-stroke lead at the halfway point of the $400,000 Gatlin Brothers Southwest Golf Classic.

Brooks, 27, bidding for his second PGA title of the year, slashed three shots from par on the last six holes to break out of the pack and post a 12-under-par 132 after two rounds.

His closing 33 propelled him past non-winner Brad Bryant, who is alone at 134, and earned him a 3-shot cushion over tournament favorite Ben Crenshaw. Keith Clearwater and little-known Brian Clair.

Boston has had 21 straight winning seasons, the longest active streak in the NHL. Washington's Mike Gartner has scored at least 30 goals in nine consecutive seasons. ... Quebec has won five straight games in Hartford.

Vancouver entered the season with 12 straight non-winning records.

The Winnipeg Jets and New York Rangers combined for 211 power play goals last season. But on opening night, the Rangers were 0 for 3 and the Jets were 1 for 3 as both played 5-2 ties.

The five new NHL coaches had mixed results on opening night. Philadelphia, under Paul Holmstrom, beat New Jersey, and St. Louis, playing its first game for Brian Sutter, routed Minnesota and new coach Pierre Page. Montreal, under Pat Burns, lost to Buffalo and Chicago, under Mike Keenan, tied the New York Rangers.

Quebec's Jeff Brown scored the final goal of a 5-2 victory over Hartford with the NHL's down six strikers to three. Quebec had two men in the penalty box and Hartford pulled goaltender Mike Liut for a three-man stacking edge.

Wayne Gretzky, Kings, had a goal and three assists in his first game with Los Angeles as the Kings bombarded Detroit 8-2. Gretzky, traded by Edmonton to Los Angeles in August, scored on his first shot at a King.

Detroit's Dutch Reibel, making his NHL debut, set a league record with four assists in his first game as the Red Wings downed the New York Rangers 4-1 of the Olympic. Reibel's record was equaled by Minnesota's Roland Eriksson in 1976, also against the Rangers.

1975 — Montreal rookie Doug Jarvis played his first NHL game. He didn't miss another one until he retired on Oct. 10, 1987, 94 games later. The 94-game streak is 30 games longer than Garry Unger's previous mark.

Green new field boss as Piniella is canned

By Ron Sirak
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dallas Green has signed a two-year contract for a one-year job.

George Steinbrenner maintained his manager-a-year pace Friday when he fired Lou Piniella as field boss of the New York Yankees and replaced him with Green. It was the 16th time Steinbrenner had changed managers since buying the team in 1973.

The latest move came after Commissioner Peter Ueberroth had asked Steinbrenner not to upstage the playoffs by making a change. But Steinbrenner spoke with Ueberroth in Tampa, Fla., on Friday and was given a "window" between 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. EDT to make the move, Yankee spokesman Harvey Greene said.

Steinbrenner has twice changed managers during the World Series, naming Piniella to replace Billy Martin on the day of the seventh game of the 1985 World Series and replacing Piniella with Martin during the 1987 Series.

Green managed the Philadelphia Phillies to a World Series victory in 1980 and was general manager of the Chicago Cubs when they won the National League East in 1984. He resigned after the 1987 season in a dispute with the front office over the hiring of Don Zimmer as manager.

It was the second time Piniella was replaced as Yankee manager. He was made general manager last year when Steinbrenner brought Martin back for his fifth term as manager. Piniella resigned as general manager in May and returned as manager in June when Martin was fired after a brawl in a topless bar in Texas.

The Yankees were in second place when Piniella took over but an already suspect pitching staff collapsed and the team finished fifth in the American League East.

HE'S GONE — Lou Piniella, left, shown in a discussion with umpire Dale Ford in August, was fired as Yankee manager Friday and replaced by Dallas Green.

"I know this is a great opportunity for me," Green said in a conference call. "The history is there and the achievements by the Yankees are second to none."

"I want to win and be a winner and that's something we're setting out to do," he said.

Green, who said he signed a two-year contract, is no stranger to conflicts with ownership.

"Any management situation is liable to explode," he said. "I thought we were doing very well in Chicago and it exploded. In Philadelphia it exploded. I know it's part of the game."

I'm not afraid to cross any bridge that comes to me."

Green brought in many of the good young players currently with the Chicago Cubs but left before they could jell as a team because of a dispute with ownership.

"They wanted me to do things that I had promised my organization that wouldn't happen," he said. "They wanted me to fire people who worked very hard. They wanted to change things that Dallas Green believed in very, very deeply."

Piniella's firing came as no surprise, but because of Ueberroth's request it was expected to come after post-season play.

"Everything was consummated in the last 24 hours," Green said. "George wanted to talk to Lou. I really feel bad for Lou for having to go through what he went through, but I feel comfortable with the deal Mr. Steinbrenner has put together for me."

Steinbrenner and Piniella met in Tampa on Friday but were not available for comment when the change was announced. Piniella's status with the team was undetermined, a spokesman for the team said.

Piniella, who was a key member of the Yankee teams that won consecutive world titles in 1977-78, managed New York to a 89-73 record in 1987 and a fourth-place finish. He was general manager until he resigned May 29 of this year.

"Billy is not the easiest person in the world to work with," Piniella said at the time, but added that Martin "was not the reason I am stepping down."

Piniella said he did not like the desk job.

With Piniella as GM, the Yankees had an active off-season, signing free agents DH Jack Clark and pitcher John Candelaria and acquiring catcher Don Slaught, shortstop Rafael Santana and pitcher Richard Dotson in trades.

The addition of Clark to All-Stars Don Mattingly, Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield gave the Yankees a first-rate hitting attack that was unable to make up for second-rate pitching.

The staff had no star and the only starter not to miss a start was 45-year-old Tommy John. Rick Rhoden, Dotson and Candelaria all failed to become the ace of the staff. The bullpen also broke down as Dave Righetti suffered through a series of last-inning losses and got little help from anyone else in the pen.

Fregosi fired by White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Fregosi was fired as manager of the Chicago White Sox Friday by General Manager Larry Himes, ending a two-year association that was uncomfortable at best.

In their case, the catch phrase "philosophical differences" was not just rhetoric.

Himes, hired at the end of the 1986 season to replace Ken Harrelson and rebuild the organization, traded away high-priced talent for young prospects and set his sights on the future.

But Fregosi, hired by Harrelson in the middle of the 1986 season, wanted a chance to win now.

Fregosi, 46, was under contract through 1989. But he should have no trouble landing a job elsewhere — probably as manager or general manager of the California Angels, where he played for most of his 18 major league seasons. He also managed the Angels to the American League West title in 1979.

Himes has never criticized Fregosi's managerial abilities and didn't Friday when the firing was announced.

"Philosophical differences led to today's decision," said Himes in a statement released by the White Sox. "No reflection of Jim's managerial ability should be read in this course of action."

A's have the Bosox reeling

By Dave O'Hara
The Associated Press

OAKLAND — The Oakland Athletics are like championship fighters. They can take a hit and keep coming back.

With the first two games of the American League playoffs at home, the Boston Red Sox tried for a quick knockout.

They trotted out one of the baseball's premier left-right pitching punches, southpaw Bruce Hurst and Roger Clemens. The Athletics were not intimidated.

Now the Red Sox, not the A's, are reeling in the best-of-seven series.

Oakland, which led the major leagues with 104 victories, beat Hurst 2-1 on Jose Canseco's homer and Dave Henderson's eighth-inning RBI single in the playoff opener.

In the second game Thursday night, Boston and Clemens took a 2-0 lead on a pair of unearned runs in the sixth inning, but Oakland fought back and won 4-3.

Blanked on two hits and eight strikeouts through six, Oakland caught up with the two-time AL Cy Young Award winner in the seventh. "Everybody was screaming, 'Let's go get them,'" said right-hander Storm Davis, the victim of Henderson's error on a dropped line drive with two out in the sixth.

That's exactly what the A's did. Henderson, a Boston postseason hero in 1986, led off with a single and Canseco tied the score by hitting an 0-2 pitch high into the left field screen.

Tony Phillips singled home a run with two out in the seventh before Clemens ended the inning. After Boston's Rich Gedman tied the score 3-3 with a homer in the bottom of the seventh, reliever Lee Smith took the loss, yielding a run in the ninth on singles by Ron Hasse, Phillips and Walt Weiss.

"Beating Hurst and Clemens is significant, but we have to file these two games and enjoy them later," Oakland Manager Tony La Russa said. "We may see Hurst and Clemens again."

"Win two more and you can say it all started by going to Boston and winning two."

"I wouldn't want to be in their shoes, but we still have to win four," Henderson said.

"I thought it was shoo-in the way Clemens was throwing," Boston Manager Joe Morgan said. "I thought he'd shut them out."

"I made a terrible pitch and Jose hit a mile-high pop up into the net," Clemens said of the home run.

The loss extended Boston's longest losing streak of the year to five games. The Red Sox have lost eight of nine games since the final week of the regular season.

"We've cooled off in our hitting," Morgan said. "We've got fellows who had pitches right there, but they're just not getting the good part of the bat on the ball."

With a 3-11 record against the A's this year and with only one victory in the last 15 visits to the Coliseum, the Red Sox will try and avoid falling behind 3-0 Saturday, sending Mike Boddicker to the mound in Game 3.

Boddicker, 13-15 overall but 7-3 with a 2.63 earned run average since being acquired from Baltimore on July 29, will be opposed by Bob Welch, 17-9, with a 3.64 ERA.

In 19 AL playoff series, one club has taken a 2-0 lead 12 times. Ten have gone on to win the pennant.

Coventry booters trip Tech; Bolton breezes

Scholastic Roundup

Some adjustments in the lineup paid off for Coventry High as it toppled Cheney Tech, 3-1, Friday afternoon in Charter Oak Conference boys' soccer action.

Jack Ayer, switched from the midfield to the attack, tallied twice as the Patriots snapped a two-game skid to improve to 2-3 in the COC East and 3-4-1 overall. The Techmen, losing their second straight, slip to 2-3 in the COC East and 3-5 overall.

"We moved some of our better players up (front) to help generate some offense," said Coventry Coach Bob Plaster.

Ayer scored at 20:13 with an assist from Steve Poulin. "We made some mistakes and they connected on their first goal (because of one)," Tech Coach Paul Soucy cited.

The second Patriot goal was a pretty one with Paul Strycharz, moved from center fullback to center halfback, heading in a corner kick by Jeff Rheault at 23:08. Ayer made it 3-0 at the half with an assist from John Vincent.

Cheney avoided the shutout with a goal with 10 minutes remaining. A miscommunication on the backline turned into a Tech goal as Steven Infante stole the ball and slid it to Nick Werfel, who tapped it in.

"We came out flat the first half," Soucy said. "The second half we played much better. It was up-and-down (the field) the second half."

Harold Hodge at center fullback and Poulin, who rang three off posts, played well for Coventry. Infante and Brett Grasso had strong outings for the Techmen.

Both teams are on the road Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. Coventry visits Cromwell High while Cheney takes on Vinal Tech in Middletown.

Coventry	3	0-3
Cheney Tech	1	0-0
Scoring: C—Ayer 2, Strycharz, CT—Werfel.

Bolton breezes

COLCHESTER — A relaxed Bolton High boys' soccer team took care of this one early with four first-half goals en route to a 6-1 victory over Bacon Academy Friday in Charter Oak Conference action.

The win lifts the Bulldogs to 4-1 in the COC East and 6-2 overall while the Bobcats slide to 0-5, 1-6. Bolton has a difficult one coming up Tuesday as it visits perennial conference power Rocky Hill High.

"We played relaxed and played really well. It was a good team effort as the distribution in the scoring shows," Bolton Coach Ray Boyd.

Drew Pinto had a pair of first-half goals with Cliff Dooman and Mike Depold adding one apiece. Brian Savitsky tallied for Bacon at 17:58 of the second half but that was more than countered by goals from Dooman and Jon Wiedie. The latter's was on a penalty kick with 13 minutes left. Midfielder Patrik Mattsson chipped in with a pair of assists.

Dooman now has seven goals and Pinto five for the Bulldogs.

"Defensively we played well and the substitutes we used on defense also played well. We scored a couple of goals with them in there," Boyd said.

Bolton outshot Bacon, 41-7. Jason Kowalski had a stellar outing in goal for Bacon, coming up with 20 stops.

Bolton	4	2-4
Bacon Academy	1	0-1
Scoring: B—Dooman 2, Pinto 2, Depold, Wiedie; BA—Savitsky.
Saves: B—David Boles and Brian Nell 5 (combined); BA—Kowalski 20.

SUSPENDED — The ball is up for grabs on this play during Friday's game between Manchester High and East Hartford at Memorial Field. Eyeing it are an outstanding performance. "She's an excellent goalie," East Coach Ron Palmer applauded.

"We had our chances, but all of our shots were rushed with no patience," he added. Palmer is aware East is seeing his club's tournament hopes are being dimmed. "We're digging ourselves a big hole," he said.

Heather Dahill scored both goals for the winners, one in each half.

Lynn Gentilcore, Allissa Mulligan and Phyllis McDevitt played well for East. The Eagles resume play Tuesday when they host Portland High.

Sacred Heart	2	1-2
East Catholic	0	0-0
Scoring: SH—Dahill 2.
Saves: EC—Laura Gunsten 12, SH—Cytlink 44.

The Indians brutally outshot the Hornets, 42-6.

"You saw our best match," Erardi said. "We played with tremendous intensity. We were really ready to play today. I think you saw a player emerge that you're going to see a lot of, Mary Moriarty at center mid (field). She did a super job. The difference was Moriarty, Hornbostel and Dieterle, two freshmen and a sophomore."

Despite dominating the first half, Manchester had to settle for a scoreless tie at the intermission. "I thought it was going to be a 0-0 tie that I'll never forget as long as I live or I thought we were going to put the ball away a few times," Erardi said.

At 11:11 of the second half, Hornbostel fed Moriarty whose shot caromed off Hornet All-State goalie Missy Samuels. Indian sophomore Kathy Cumberbatch collected the loose ball and left-footed a 10-yarder into the upper right corner of the net for a 1-0 lead. It was Cumberbatch's fourth goal of the year.

"When they got the first goal we kind of let down," East Hartford Coach Jim Agnew said. "We tried to play the long ball because I thought we were a little quicker on the outside. (But) Manchester came out fired up. They really played a good game. We knew they were definitely a better skilled team. Missy kept us in the game."

Rattanakoun finished off the scoring at 25:16 on a beautiful individual move along the right side. She streaked by the Hornet defense and fired a 15-yarder past a diving Samuels into the left corner. For Rattanakoun, the pair of goals gives her a team-leading 11.

Senior sweeper Heather Lavery, Junior All-State stopperback Meg Berte, senior fullback Amy Gates and sophomore fullback Jen Brindisi were immense on the defensive end.

"We felt they were faster than us and more physical," Erardi said. "We felt we were more skilled so we had to maintain the ball and that's what we did. After today's game we realize that we're not ready to step down as league champs."

Agnew added, "If we had a shot at beating them it had to be this game because they're going to get better. They're young."

Manchester	0	3-3
East Hartford	0	0-0
Scoring: M—Rattanakoun 2, Cumberbatch.
Saves: M—Paula Hollis 5, EH—Samuels 2.

MORGAN JUGGLES LINEUP

By Dave O'Hara
The Associated Press

OAKLAND — Trailing 2-0 in the American League playoffs with Oakland, Boston Manager Joe Morgan shook up his batting order Friday for Game 3 with the Athletics on Saturday.

"We'll go with the same troops, just change the order a little," Morgan said. "One more run at this stage of the game would be more punch."

Dumbfounded by Boston's hitting slump in five consecutive losses and eight in the last nine games since the final week of the regular season, Morgan decided on changes before the Red Sox went through a light off-day workout at the Oakland Coliseum.

Although Morgan delayed an announcement, it was learned that five-time AL batting champion Wade Boggs would be dropped from the leadoff spot to No. 3 in the order. Ellis Burks, it was learned, would be shifted from the No. 6 spot to replace Boggs.

Rain washes out Game 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Rain postponed Friday night's third game of the National League playoffs between the New York Mets and Los Angeles Dodgers, causing some juggling of the Dodgers pitching rotation.

National League President Bart Giamatti called the game at 9:30 p.m. EDT, after waiting 65 minutes beyond the scheduled 8:25 p.m. start.

The rainout pushed Game 3 back to noon Saturday and Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said that the ace of his staff, 23-game winner Orel Hershiser, would replace left-hander John Tudor as the starter. Although Hershiser would be pitching on Saturday with only three days rest instead of the usual four, he would be available on three days rest to throw in Game 7, if the series goes that far.

Had the Dodgers gone with Tudor as scheduled in Game 3 and Hershiser in Game 4 on Sunday night, the Dodgers right-hander would have had only two days rest before possibly coming back for a Game 7.

The rainout forces the teams to play Game 5 at noon Monday, eliminating a travel day if the series must return to Los Angeles for sixth and seventh games.

Hershiser, who set a record with 59 consecutive scoreless innings at the end of the season, pitched eight scoreless innings in Game 1 of the playoffs before New York rallied for a 3-2 victory. The Dodgers evened the playoffs with a 6-3 victory in the second game.

Ron Darling, 14-1 at home this season for the Mets, remains New York's Game 3 starter. But the rainout allows New York the opportunity to come back with Dwight Gooden, also on his regular four days of rest, on Sunday. Sid Fernandez is the scheduled Game 4 pitcher.

"I would just as soon have played tonight," New York manager Davey Johnson said. "One of our strengths is our pitching depth, so I don't think (the rainout will) hurt us too much."

Not ready to surrender CCC East title

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

At the outset of the scholastic soccer season, Coach Joe Erardi possessed a few misgivings concerning his youthful Manchester High girls' soccer contingent.

As four-time defending Central Connecticut Conference East Division champions, the Indians got off on the right foot winning their first seven matches, six via the shutout route. They met their most potent adversary to date, unbeaten East Hartford, Friday afternoon at Memorial Field.

With first place in the CCC East at stake, Erardi's youth movement gave its finest performance that translated into a 3-0 shutout victory.

Manchester is now 7-0 in the league and 8-0 overall while East Hartford slips to 5-1-1 in the CCC East and 6-1-1 overall. The Indians will host Rockville High Tuesday at 3:30 p.m.
