Town seeks no-trial ruling against Senkow

By Andrew Yurkovsky Manchester Herald

A motion has been filed in U.S. District Court seeking a judgment in favor of the town in the lawsuit brought against the town earlier this year by former Town Engineer Walter J. Senkow.

The motion for a summary judgment was filed on Thursday by Thomas P. Cella, an assistant town attorney, in U.S. District Court in Hartford. In a summary judgment a judge rules in favor of a defendant without a trial.

Senkow, 51, resigned in 1986 amid charges that he sexually harassed a town employee by placing allegedly pornographic materials on her desk. He filed a suit against the town and town officials in January seeking reinstatement to his former job and back pay. The suit charged that town officials had maliciously conspired to force him from his job.

Cella could not be reached for comment this morning. In his written request for a summary judgment, Cella says, "Pursuant to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the defendants, the town of Manchester, (Town Manager)

Robert B. Weiss, (former Public Works Director) George A. Kandra and (Assistant Town Manager) Steven R. Werber, hereby move for summary judgment on the ground that no genuine issues as to any material facts exist and that they are entitled to a judgment as a matter of law."

Leon M. Rosenblatt, Senkow's attorney, could not be reached for comment this morning. Senkow, the top town engineer for 18 years, was originally fired in May 1986 for "violation of proper town personnel practices." In an investigation that began before the firing, Senkow admitted to police that he had placed pornographic materials on the desk of Carol Zebb, then assistant planning director. Senkow said he put the materials, photographs and the novel "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," on Zebb's desk to cheer her up.

In August 1986, Senkow was allowed to resign after an agreement was reached with his union, the Civil Service Employees Affiliates. The town was unable to fill Senkow's post. A new position with lower qualifications, known as director of engineering services, was created in its place.

Benefits increase $21 a month for an average retiree

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's 38.4 million Social Security recipients will get a 4.0 percent benefit increase in January, the second highest boost in 6 1/2 years, the government said today.

The Social Security Administration said the increase promises an extra $21 a month for the average retired worker, who now gets $516 a month from the huge

CAMPAIGN NOTEBOOK

Flynn seeks homeless aid

HARTFORD (AP) — The plight of the homeless is a non-partisan issue that will only be resolved by an "American commitment," Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn said.

"It requires a commitment that will not stand for people starving on the streets," Flynn told about 100 people at a noon rally Thursday outside the Old State House in Hartford.

Flynn also called on the country's next president — either Republican George Bush or Democrat Michael S. Dukakis — to initiate a conference on the homeless after taking office.

The rally was sponsored by the Connecticut Coalition for the Homeless and the Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless.

Windsor campaign frugal

WINDSOR (AP) — A state Senate candidate running on a platform of fiscal restraint is pinching pennies to drive his point home, using brochures left over from an unsuccessful campaign 18 years ago.

"Why should I ask my friends to pay for my folly?" said Donald A. Jepsen of Windsor, who is challenging Democratic incumbent Frank D. Barrows of Hartford in the 2nd Senatorial District. "I'm depending entirely on the Fourth Estate to get the word out."

Jepsen's campaign literature is left over from his unsuccessful race for state representative in 1970 and features his wife, Jane, and the couple's four children.

"You see the youngest girl there," he said, pointing to his daughter, Laura, then 4 years old. "She's a graduate student now."

The old brochures urge voters to "restore fiscal responsibility of our state government through new Republican leadership" and address such issues as housing, pollution, crime and drug abuse.

Jepsen acknowledges that he has virtually no chance of winning in the heavily Democratic district.

Teams to handle any fraud

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Teams of federal prosecutors, FBI agents and U.S. postal inspectors have been set up in three cities in Connecticut to handle any reports of voting irregularities in the Nov. 8 general election.

U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said, "The U.S. attorney's offices in Bridgeport, New Haven and Hartford have been designated to receive and act on complaints of voter fraud."

Twardy said Monday, "There are a number of actions that constitute violations of federal statutes including bribing or intimidating voters, altering vote tallies or casting fraudulent ballots."

Munns tries again in 'whole' district

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Paul Munns is hoping things will be different this time. For the second time in two elections, the Glastonbury Republican is challenging East Hartford Democrat Donald Bates in the 9th Assembly District. In 1986, Munns lost to Bates by 480 votes.

Munns, a 25-year-old customer service representative for Aetna Life Insurance and Annuity Co., thinks he can reverse the outcome this time. The absence of the party lever and his extensive door-to-door campaigning are among the reasons he is hopeful.

"Getting rid of the party lever is the best thing for democracy," he said. "It will help me out. People will get elected for their own candidacy, not the party. All I can ask is you vote for the person, not the party."

Munns, who recently was elected to the Glastonbury Town Council, wins praise from those in his party for his hard work and single-minded support of issues important to his constituents. Democrats on the other hand, paint him as a political neophyte whose lack of experience will be a detriment on the job.

Munns says he hopes to knock on the doors of the more than 6,400 homes in the 9th District, which is composed of voting districts in Manchester, Glastonbury and East Hartford. Door-to-door campaigning helps voters recognize his face, something which Munns said Bates has not achieved.

"I don't feel he represents the district as a whole," Munns said of Bates. "He tends to stay in East Hartford. People don't know Don Bates."

By keeping office hours and being visible as a representative, Munns said he would represent the people better than his opponent. He also said he would be a hard-working legislator who will not be a party puppet.

"I'm not going to let leadership tell me what to do," Munns said. "That's the beauty of democracy."

"I'm not going to let leadership tell me what to do," Munns said. "That's the beauty of democracy."

Munns says he will represent all people in his district. But he admits he has to do better in East Hartford, where about 60 percent of the district lies.

In 1986, Munns won in Glastonbury and Manchester by a total of 216 votes, but lost to Bates in East Hartford by 2,555 votes to 1,859 votes.

"I'm not going to represent Glastonbury any more than East Hartford or Manchester," Munns said.

Geoffrey Naab, a Republican town director in Manchester, characterized Munns as hard-working, enthusiastic and knowledgeable.

"I think he'd make a darn good representative," said Naab. "I think Mr. Munns would bring to the Legislature what Mr. Bates does not. If you want somebody who is going to work hard for the district... that man is Paul Munns, not Mr. Bates."

Nick Paolindis, Glastonbury's Democratic town chairman, is not convinced. He said that Munns does not have as much experience as Bates, who has been in office for three terms.

"There's a lot to be learned that cannot be learned from a textbook," Paolindis said. First-hand experience is valuable. I don't see him as mature enough and experienced enough to handle the MEETING VOTERS — Paul Munns, who is challenging Democrat Donald Bates for the 9th Assembly District seat, prepares to meet with a voter in Manchester. He says he wants to become better known than Bates.

Being labeled as "green" or too young are not worries to Munns, though. He points to his jobs as committee clerk and staff aide to the Republican secretary, legislative intern at the State Library and for the Legislature's Public Safety Committee.

He also has served as vice chairman of the Glastonbury Republican Town Committee, and he cites his recent election as a Glastonbury councilman as proof of his experience.

Munns also says he has been a member of Glastonbury's Public Safety Commission, and he worked with the student government while at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain.

"People have pinned that [issue of being too young] on me," said Munns. "I know they're smart enough to read right through that."

Campaign '88: 9th Assembly District

"My youth can be a problem with some people. There is a big difference between experience and longevity. He's been a state representative for six years. Does that make him more qualified? How hard you're going to work should be a consideration."

And his experience should make up for any apprehensions people may have about his age, Munns said. Munns is single and lives at 26 Crossroads Lane in Glastonbury with his parents, turned 25 in September. He is a talkative man who says he wants to stay away from political mudslinging.

Bates is quick to add he feels he will be a better representative than Bates.

"I do understand the realities of the Legislature. I've been there," he said. "I'm very familiar with the legislative process. I won't be green when I get up there. I know how the process works. I know a lot of legislators."

Sonya Googins, a Republican on the Glastonbury Town Council, said Munns has done an excellent job during his tenure on the council.

"I see in Paul a willingness to work," Googins said. "He's been very conscientious. He's a hard worker."

Googins also said Munns is an independent politician who does not vote the party line simply for the sake of party unity.

"He's done excellently grasping the issues," she said. "He has enough independence. He's not on a party line. It's more of a point of view."

Among the issues Munns supports is a freeze on hiring new state employees, establishing a cap on the number of inmates allowed to participate in the meritorious performance program, and affordable housing.

Munns points to the projected state deficit as a reason for his support of a freeze on hiring new state employees. Last year, 2,864 new state jobs were created, but an amendment to reduce that number by about 1,000 positions was defeated, he said. He said he would have supported the amendment since "you have to remember the taxpayer."

Munns criticized Bates for changing his mind on a vote to put a cap on the number of inmates in the meritorious performance program, which reduces prison terms for inmates with good behavior. He also said he supported building more prisons and a strict death penalty statute.

On affordable housing, Munns said he would support the continued funding of state matching funds for towns building affordable housing.

Restricting business development over large groundwater supplies and stricter dumping laws also are issues Munns said he supports.

It's been a long, long time

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The word "politics" has been around for a long time. It entered English about 1529 but it is at least as old as ancient Greece.

In Greek, "politikos" originally meant pertaining to citizens or civic affairs.

Col. North urges vote for GOP

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

EAST WINDSOR (AP) — Former Lt. Col. Oliver North, at a fund-raiser on behalf of a Connecticut state Senate candidate, said Americans will be calling Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis anything but "Mr. President" after Election Day.

North, a key figure in the Iran-Contra affair, on Thursday urged a vote for Republicans from George Bush down through the ticket.

Bolton is too important to give up to the other side," North told supporters of Republican state Senate candidate Joseph F. Roberts of East Windsor.

Roberts brought in North to help him raise money for his uphill campaign. But Roberts said he expected to lose money on the dinner.

Noting that Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis had campaigned in Connecticut earlier in the day, North predicted the Massachusetts governor would lose.

"I can tell you they'll be calling him governor or they'll be calling him Deficit Duke, or they'll be calling him Tax-hike Mike, but they're not going to be calling Mr. President," North said.

Roberts, the East Windsor GOP town chairman challenging state Senate President Pro Tem John B. Larson, D-East Hartford, said before the fund-raiser that he had sold about 140 tickets at $175 each. He said 44 of those had paid an additional $25 to attend an exclusive cocktail party with North.

North charges $25,000 for such appearances.

Roberts said he would have enough to cover North's fee but would have to pay $4,000 for the costs of the dinner.

About 100 North supporters and detractors outside of the banquet hall exchanged banter, with detractors outnumbering the supporters.

Zinsser, Meotti spar again over education aid

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The state Education Enhancement Act and aid-to-education formula came under attack again Thursday from Republican state Senate candidate Carl A. Zinsser during a debate with state Sen. Michael Meotti, D-Glastonbury, at the Community Hall.

This time, Zinsser wasn't alone in his criticism. During opening statements, he said a notice from the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities says the formula will cover only a portion of newly enacted education programs, which will eventually mean higher property taxes for the towns involved.

"That's not coming from Carl Zinsser, that's coming from the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities," Zinsser said.

Zinsser said he is opposed to creating a state income tax to pay for changes that result from the act or any other state programs.

The debate was the fourth between the two candidates in the 4th Senatorial District, which consists of Manchester, Glastonbury, Columbia, Bolton and Hebron. About 25 people attended, asking questions on abortion, the death penalty, Route 6 and other issues.

Meotti defended the new education funding formula during opening statements, saying towns like

Bolton will see their share of state aid to education growing. He called the act "an investment."

A member of the audience asked Zinsser if the Republican-controlled Legislature that passed the original enhancement act in 1985 considered that raising teachers' salaries would mean raising salaries for other employees.

Zinsser said the Legislature was aware of that possibility and that "the state has a responsibility to somehow try and do that."

But to adjust the salaries of support staff, the state may have to cut somewhere else, he said.

Meotti argued that the current aid-to-education formula will allow individual towns to adjust support staff salaries. The state should not set those salaries, Meotti said.

Responding to a reporter's question on where the state should put recycling residue, Meotti said the state needs to help communities set up effective recycling programs.

"A well-run recycling program does not have to generate much residue," Meotti said.

But Zinsser said Meotti should help N.S. Realty, a company that allegedly used Manchester's landfill to dump recycling residue from garbage collected in other towns. Zinsser said Meotti should help N.S. Realty and other recyclers find a market for recycled material instead of trying to prevent the firms from dumping in certain areas.

"The policy of the state of Connecticut is to encourage recycling throughout the state of Connecticut," Zinsser said.

Meotti, in turn, criticized Zinsser's proposal to remove interstate trucking from rush-hour traffic.

"I have a problem with throwing out solutions that are nothing more than false hopes," Meotti said. "We can't stand up here and tell you we're going to ban interstate trucking."

Zinsser argued that Los Angeles effectively banned interstate trucking during rush hour for the 1984 Olympics and has successfully continued the policy.

Extra renovations at schools funded by leftover money

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Additional renovations are being done at Nathan Hale and Verplanck schools even though contracted renovations have been completed.

Richard Mankey, architect of the renovation projects at both schools, announced the additional work during a meeting of the town Building Committee Thursday. The extra work is being done with money left from the original work.

Work at both schools includes painting classrooms and corridors, new corridor flooring, adding temperature controls, relocation of existing cabinets and building new cabinets.

About $100,000 is left in each school's contingency fund for the added renovations, Mankey said. He said he hoped work could be completed by March.

"What we have to do is start working until we run out of money," he said. "You get it by item so you don't extend yourself."

Nathan Hale and Verplanck are two of the five schools undergoing reconstruction. Waddell School, Bowers School and Manchester High School also are part of the $3.8 million bond project.

Paul Phillips, Building Committee chairman, said the additional work was eliminated from the main contract because of projected cost overruns. Officials originally wanted to bond $12 million for the renovation projects, but fearing it would not pass a public referendum, they lowered that amount to about $10 million. It was finally cut to $8.8 million in an effort to gain public acceptance, he said.

"We're doing what we can afford," Phillips said. "When we first started it was $12 million and that never would have gotten through referendum. It would be nice to have $1 million more."

Primary work already finished at Nathan Hale includes repaving the parking lot, building storage rooms and replacing between 700 to 800 bricks.

At Verplanck, work included rebuilding the office area and building a 1,500-square-foot addition to the media center.

The committee also discussed possible additional work to Waddell, Bowers and the high school, though Phillips said it was too early to talk about details.

Decisions on more work at the three schools will not be made until the original construction is completed, Phillips said. "This is just a hope list," he said.

Work on the elementary schools is scheduled to be completed in February, though Phillips has said it should be done by the beginning of March.

Work at Manchester High is not scheduled to be completed until April, but Phillips has estimated that work could be finished by the end of the year.

Among the work being considered at the two elementary schools are painting classrooms and adding window shades.

At the high school, installing new doors, lights and panic hardware are among the items being considered.

'Model' search for manager to be reviewed

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

The committee that will coordinate the search for a new town manager for Manchester plans to meet next week with Bloomfield's mayor to find out how that community went about its search for a manager three years ago.

The Manchester committee, which is made up of five present and past town directors, met for the first time Thursday afternoon in the town manager's office in the Municipal Building. The members discussed a variety of issues concerning the search, including the confidentiality of committee meetings.

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss announced last month that he would retire in June 1989. He did not attend Thursday's meeting.

The committee agreed Tuesday to meet with Bloomfield Mayor David Baram after member Stephen T. Penny, a former Manchester mayor, suggested Baram would be willing to speak to the group.

Baram has written an article for publication in a manual being prepared for state elected officials outlining how Bloomfield conducted its search for a town manager in 1985. Committee members said that Bloomfield's procedure is considered a model for other communities.

Weiss distributed a copy of Baram's article to the Board of Directors last month.

Discussion at the meeting touched on qualifications for the job, deadlines for the search, and the confidentiality of committee meetings.

Members agreed that the committee should continue with the search beyond Weiss's departure if it is unhappy with the candidates. They also agreed that politics should play no role in the proceedings.

"If we get into politics, we just shot ourselves in the foot," said former Mayor Nathan G. Agostinelli, president of Manchester State Bank. Directors and members of the public have suggested that the next manager should be strong in financial skills, but Agostinelli suggested that it might be wrong to put too much emphasis in one area.

Obscene performance case is transferred to Hartford

The case against a Manchester resident and Rockville High School student supervisor charged with employing a minor in an obscene performance was continued to Nov. 7 during an arraignment Thursday in Manchester Superior Court, court officials said.

John L. Jenkins, 30, of 166C Homestead St., was arraigned on the obscenity charge and various narcotics charges, court officials said. He was released on a $5,000 non-surety bond.

His case was transferred to Hartford Superior Court, where cases involving penalties greater than those of a class D felony are heard.

Employing a minor in an obscene performance is a class A felony punishable by up to 25 years in prison.

Jenkins was arrested on a warrant at about 7 p.m. Tuesday at his home and also charged with possession of cocaine, narcotic substances and drug paraphernalia, police said.

Police said details of the charges and information leading to the arrest were not available because the arrest warrant affidavit has been sealed by a Superior Court judge.

Meanwhile, Jenkins has been suspended without prejudice from his job as an in-school suspension supervisor at Rockville High School, said Albert Kerkin, superintendent of Vernon schools.

Jenkins was invited to appear today before the school administration to respond to the charges against him, Kerkin said. A decision on Jenkins' employment will be made when investigations by police and school officials are complete, he said.

Jenkins is a 1976 graduate of Manchester High School and had attended Manchester Community College. John E. Franchling, a Glastonbury attorney representing Jenkins, said.

Jenkins also coached the Bolton High School baseball team in 1986 and 1987 and for a short time, about five years ago, wrote a bowling column for the Manchester Herald.

PREVENT FIRE

There are two lifesaving steps you can take to avoid the tragedy of fire. First, you can learn to prevent fires by keeping areas around the home, farm and business uncluttered. Storing chemicals carefully. Keeping matches away from children. The second step is to know what to do in case you're caught in a fire. Plan fire drills. Install smoke detectors. Learn escape routes. Because careless fires can cost lives, knowing what to do can save lives. It's that simple... and that smart.

OPINION

A one-year commitment is too short

It appears likely that a quick solution will be found to the confusion that has arisen over plans for the Housing Authority of Manchester to manage the housing for the elderly being developed on North Elm Street.

At their meeting Wednesday, commissioners of the authority made it very clear they do not want to enter into a lease with the town for the property, largely because of the liabilities the authority would incur as a lessee.

They had expected instead to enter into a contract with the town under which the authority would be manager of the project.

It seems that the assistant town attorney drew up a proposed lease agreement and the attorney for the authority drew up a proposed management contract and the two documents somehow did cross paths.

The two lawyers are to meet today, along with other officials. Indications are it will not be a problem for them to come to an agreement satisfactory to both the town and the authority.

Town officials and the representatives of the authority have been cooperating on the project and they should find no trouble in continuing that cooperation.

But there is one area of concern. It is easy to understand why the commissioners of the authority want a management contract and not a lease. But Ada Sullivan, chairwoman of the authority, said Wednesday that a one-year lease would suit her and that "anything else is committing the authority too much."

Some Manchester residents who support the plan for the North Elm Street housing have confidence in it, at least in part because the Housing Authority, with its experience and expertise in handling public housing for the elderly, is involved.

The idea of limiting a management contract to one year seems to be committing the authority to too little. It projects the uneasy feeling that the authority is entering into the partnership with more reservation than enthusiasm.

Arts commission seeking members

To the Editor:

Due to the recent resignation of four members for personal reasons, the Coventry Arts Commission is looking for persons interested in the advancement of the arts in the town of Coventry.

Since its inception, the goals and concuring programs instituted by the commission have seen a steady growth in providing various artistic outlets for members of the community and entertainment in many forms for the enjoyment of a wide segment of the population.

Scheduling for the band shell at Patriot's Park during the summer months has brought in a variety of both local and out-of-town talent, from bluegrass to rock. Patriot's Park Lodge is now the forum for many folk musicians at monthly coffeehouse performances from October to May. High school art students had the opportunity this spring to exhibit their work at the annual Booth & Dimock Memorial Library cocktail party. With the completion of the new addition to the library in sight, the Arts Commission and the library will join forces to provide ongoing exhibits for local artists in both the visual and literary realms.

Following the success of the 275-plus Festival at Patriot's Park this summer, a second festival is in the planning stages for September 1989. The commission also hopes to be able to work with the schools in order to help them with their cultural programs.

As the scope of our community is broadening, both economically and statistically, we hope to be able to provide all of the residents of Coventry with an artistic and cultural environment in which they may participate and grow.

We would like to acknowledge at this time the many hours of work and the creative input of those members who have recently left the commission: Chairman Aline Hoffman, Connie Moore, Richard Risley and Mary Carlson. Our best wishes for their future endeavors and our sincere appreciation for their valued time on the commission is expressed by all of us.

If you are interested in the visual, performing and literary arts and the cultural growth of Coventry, you may find that the Arts Commission is the place where you can help to make your ideas a reality. There are positions open for two commission members and three alternates, or you may wish to volunteer your time to any one of our projects. If you are interested in the Arts Commission or would like further information, please contact me at 742-1547 or address your inquiries to the Arts Commission, care of the Coventry Town Office Building, Main Street.

Thompson great for 13th District

To the Editor:

As an educator, I believe that state Rep. Jack Thompson has performed very well in supporting all vital educational legislation for the people of the 13th Assembly District and the community of Manchester.

Leaders and fellow associates in the state House of Representatives have observed his outstanding devotion to duty in representing all the people of the 13th District.

His voting record has been established as one of the most outstanding representatives in the House. He has voted on all legislation in the House with the exception of one time. His one absence from the chambers was due to the fact that he was trying to help a citizen from the 13th District who had a pressing problem. His voting record deserves an A-plus.

To get the pulse of all the citizens in his district, he has provided open meetings so that the voters could boost it even higher if we just turned them all loose and asked them to phone in once a week.

In the case of individuals convicted of misdemeanors and non-violent felonies (such as forgery or embezzlement), I can see some excuse for furloughs in certain circumstances: for example, to let them, near the end of their terms, begin adjusting to life on the outside.

But I see no excuse whatever for routine furloughs to prisoners convicted of violent felonies such as murder, rape or armed robbery. Their place is in prison — not gadding around town, like the child molester whom the child's shocked mother (who thought he was safely behind bars) discovered having lunch at the next table in a restaurant.

Bear in mind that the weekend furlough on which Willie Horton skipped was the 10th that this brutal thug had received. On nine earlier occasions, he had been turned loose into the very society that had ordered him imprisoned without hope of parole for the rest of his life. How many others like him are roaming the streets today?

Dukakis' defenders argue that this whole subject is a red herring — a highly emotional but essentially trivial issue, not worth the time of candidates for president. George Bush disagrees, saying that the most important thing the voters can learn about a presidential candidate is the nature of his core values. He is absolutely right.

VA employs rogue cops at hospitals

WASHINGTON — As many as six out of 10 cops protecting the hallways of Veterans Administration hospitals probably should not have been hired. In addition to officers who simply aren't qualified for the job, an alarming number of VA cops have been on the wrong side of the law — including one accused murderer and an assortment of rapists, thieves and thugs.

These rogues won VA Security Service badges because bumbling bureaucrats failed to check arrest records and talk with past employers of would-be cops.

The haphazard hiring practices has made it harder for honest men and women in the VA Security Services to keep the peace at the 172 VA hospitals nationwide. Many of these medical centers are located in tough urban neighborhoods where an officer's life may depend on the ability of his colleagues.

He has fought for increased funding for the nutritional program for the elderly, to take up the slack created by the federal budget cuts. Whenever legislation is presented for senior citizens, Jack has always been there to support good senior legislation.

His diligent fight for the best educational programs has assured Manchester educators and students they will be protected. He has fully supported state aid for education, resulting in increased financial funding for the Manchester Board of Education. Teachers in Manchester now can hold their heads high as professionals since their salaries have deservingly increased due to the support of Rep. Jack Thompson.

A vote for Jack Thompson will assure the citizens of the 13th District that they will be fairly and objectively represented on all educational, environmental and senior citizen issues.

Rep. Jack Thompson has been a steady presence in the 13th District. He truly deserves the support of all the voters of the district on Tuesday, Nov. 8.

The inspector general also found eight VA cops who were convicted while they worked for the VA and were allowed to remain on the job — even though their supervisors knew about their brushes with the law. In one case, a cop was arrested on narcotics and weapons charges. He was convicted for unauthorized use of a weapon. Two years later, he was arrested for battery.

The VA sometimes ignores more than criminal records. The inspector general found that the VA sometimes doesn't even check with previous employers. One applicant told the VA he had nine years of experience on a city police force. The inspector general suspected something because the cop accounted for nine unemployed months by stating simply "out of town" on his application. A call to the police force by the inspector general turned up the truth — that the officer had been suspended several times for insubordination, unauthorized absences and abuse of sick leave. He was also under investigation by the city police department's internal affairs office and was under the care of a department psychiatrist.

Why didn't the police department tell that to the VA? The VA never asked.

Dukakis focuses on Connecticut with an eye on the West Coast

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — Connecticut is psychologically important to Democrat Michael Dukakis' presidential campaign because the outcome in the Northeast could well affect the outcome on the West Coast, one of his Connecticut strategists says.

The polls will close in Connecticut several hours before they close in the West. If Dukakis loses in states like Connecticut and it's reported on network television while voting is still going on in other areas, his supporters might not bother going to the polls.

"One factor certainly has to be that it will have an impact on voters in California when returns come in from New England states," said Marianna Koval, Dukakis' Connecticut campaign press secretary, after a Thursday rally in New Haven's "Little Italy" section near Wooster Square.

But, she added, "that is not the main focus."

"We're campaigning in Connecticut because it's a neighboring state (to Dukakis' home state of Massachusetts). It's a state we should win," Koval said.

"There's no reason we shouldn't win it."

Connecticut's voter demographics, she said, are "really a cross-section of the voters across this country."

A poll by the University of Connecticut released this week showed Dukakis trailing Republican George Bush in Connecticut by 10 points, 46 percent to 36 percent. The remaining 18 percent were undecided.

In New Haven, the city where Bush attended Yale University, Dukakis spent almost 20 minutes addressing more than 300 workers in the cafeteria at Southern New England Telecommunications before heading down Wooster Street where there was a crowd estimated at 5,000.

Criticizing Bush for allegedly distorting his record, Dukakis told the phone company workers that truth had been "the first casualty of the Bush campaign" just as it had been a casualty in the Nixon White House in the Watergate years.

He also outlined a program designed to help working mothers and fathers by providing unpaid parental leave for up to 10 weeks to care for a sick child or parent, ensuring affordable day care, boosting the minimum wage to $4.55 and guaranteeing health insurance for all working families.

At the outdoor rally, Dukakis brought a hush to the crowd when he talked about how his father had once been mugged and his brother killed by a hit-and-run driver.

"My family has been touched by crime. I know something about crime," said Dukakis, who has been accused of being soft on crime by Bush. "I don't need to be lectured by Mr. Bush on the subject."

Asked about the recent UConn poll, Dukakis shrugged and said, "You know the polls, they go up and down."

Peace at charity dinner, then Bush attacks again

By The Associated Press

George Bush picked up the well-worn campaign trail in Ohio, attacking Michael Dukakis on crime and foreign policy, while the Massachusetts governor invoked the ghost of Watergate to accuse the vice president of distorting his record.

Peace broke out only briefly between the two presidential candidates, who appeared jointly at the Alfred E. Smith charity dinner in New York, a state where Republicans say Dukakis' on-stage support is shaky.

But behind the scenes, Dukakis was apologizing directly to the vice president for remarks made by a campaign worker about Bush. The official national field director Donna Brazile, resigned Thursday after telling reporters that Bush should "fess up" about rumors surrounding his personal life.

Dukakis was staying in New York this morning to tape a pair of TV talk-show interviews, and spending most of the day in that state before going on to Louisiana and Texas. The two Southern states are considered the Democrats' best prospects in the region.

Running mate Lloyd Bentsen was back in his native Texas, not getting out, Republican Dan Quayle said. Quayle said that state's 29 electoral votes, and mixing production appearances with remarks attacking what he called GOP distortions of what he and Dukakis stand for.

Quayle, who spent most of the week in his native Midwest, headed south, with appearances in East Tennessee and Georgia. Ronald Reagan, who also campaigned this week for Bush and Senate candidate George Voinovich in Ohio, planned to give a pep-talk to 4,500 campaign workers in North Carolina and help raise money for Republicans there.

At the Al Smith dinner, a nonpartisan Catholic charity event in New York, Dukakis spoke first and got in a few jibes at Bush as well as some self-deprecating digs at himself.

He began by saying how pleased he was to be at an event where "all thought of politics is banished and I can concentrate on what I do best — comedy."

Dukakis apologized for his wife's absence.

"Kitty's in a hotel room in Dallas tonight," he said. "Maybe she qualifies as a Texan," a dig at the fact Bush's Texas residence is a hotel room in Houston.

Bush joked about his background. He noted Dukakis' pride in his immigrant roots, and said, "My people landed at Ellis Island. They were on the Mayflower when it made a pit stop on the way to Plymouth."

"You've seen the portraits of the Mayflower. My people are the ones waving the Bloomingdale shopping bags."

Prison furlough fiasco no trivial matter

If NBC News gets any more partisan, it may actually crawl out of our TV sets and order us to vote for Dukakis. On the morning of Oct. 12, at the top of the second hour of the "Today" show, John Palmer told us that the latest Gallup Poll showed Bush and Dukakis in "a virtual dead heat," but carefully omitted the actual figures (49 percent for Bush, 43 for Dukakis), which showed no such thing.

And earlier on the same program, Jane Pauley, who used to work for the Democratic State Committee back in Indiana, persuaded an alleged expert on prisoner furlough programs to agree that Dukakis had gotten "a bum rap" on the subject because as governor of California Ronald Reagan had similarly furloughed "murderers."

As Pauley knows but didn't say, you have to be very careful how you make that point or it's not true. The "murderers" that Reagan and two-thirds of the other governors have furloughed are significantly different from many of those furloughed by Dukakis, because only Dukakis' liberal Massachusetts furloughed first-degree murderers serving life sentences without hope of parole.

That obviously makes a huge difference, because the latter have absolutely nothing to lose by failing to return to prison. If they're caught, it's just back to pokey anyway. Yet in 1976 Gov. Dukakis vetoed a bill to close this gaping hole in the incarceration system.

William Rusher

Lastly, and worst of all, when first-degree murderer Willie Horton failed to return from one of Dukakis' weekend passes and turned up in Maryland, where he raped a woman and brutalized her husband, the Massachusetts Miracle refused even to meet with the couple afterward.

Quite apart from the campaign, though, I'm glad the whole subject of furloughs for prisoners has come up for discussion, because I suspect that the vast majority of Americans had no inkling that there was such a program and think it's a lousy idea. Barry Goldwater said on TV the other day that he had never heard of it either — and he served for 30 years in the U.S. Senate!

It has all the earmarks of one of those characteristically lousy schemes hatched by the liberals back in their heyday when they couldn't do enough for prisoners. Its defenders claim that it "boosts inmate morale," and I'm sure it does. We

Hurricane Joan hits Venezuela; death toll at 26

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Hurricane Joan resumed its deadly trek toward Central America with 110 mph winds today after heavy rains pounded Venezuela and pushed the storm's death toll at least 26.

The rains unleashed mudslides Wednesday and Thursday that swallowed wooden huts and left at least 11 people dead in the poorest neighborhoods of Caracas, Venezuela.

The storm killed 15 people in Colombia, injured 50, and left tens of thousands homeless when it swept the Guajira peninsula on Monday.

More than 37,000 people fled coastal areas of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, where a hurricane watch was in force. Hurricane warnings were in effect for the Colombian islands of San Andres and neighboring Albuquerque and Providencia.

"It's better to leave before we get killed," said Teresa Wilson, who toiled a plastic bag stuffed with clothes and fled the Nicaraguan coastal village of Bluff with her seven children.

The Nicaraguan government appealed to the international community to be prepared to lend assistance.

At 9 a.m. EDT today, Joan's center was about 65 miles south-southeast of San Andres and about 170 miles east of Bluefields, Nicaragua, near latitude 11.6 north and longitude 81.2 west.

After stalling most of the day Thursday, the hurricane resumed its drift westward and was expected to continue slowly in that direction today. Maximum sustained winds were 110 mph, the center said.

Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla., said forecasters still expected the hurricane to hit Nicaragua or Costa Rica today or Saturday.

Nicaraguan officials worried about the readiness of government agencies, relief organizations and coastal residents, some of whom live in wooden homes on stilts.

"We make a formal call upon the international community to respond in rapid fashion with its cooperation," Budget Minister Enrique Sotelo said.

Sotelo said if Joan continued straight for Nicaragua, "the economic consequences would be enormously severe and would force greater sacrifices upon the people."

About 7,000 people fled Nicaragua's remote Miskito Coast and two small islands off the coast, and schools were closed nationwide. Hundreds of people arrived by boat Thursday afternoon in Rama, 180 miles east of the capital, and were taken by military and civilian trucks to a school in the provincial capital of Jugalpa, 85 miles east of Managua.

"We decided to bring our children and to leave our husbands to guard our homes," said Johnny Hunter, a 29-year-old Bluefields woman.

President Daniel Ortega enacted an emergency law banning communications media from reporting unauthorized news about Joan.

The opposition daily La Prensa called the decree "absurd and illegal" and said the law made it "legally impossible to report on the hurricane."

NATION & WORLD

Jet alarms checked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's airlines are being told to examine the takeoff warning horns on two of the industry's most widely used jetliners after faulty alarms were found in 35 of the aircraft.

The inspections on nearly 1,800 Boeing 727s and 737s, which were ordered Thursday by the Federal Aviation Administration, comes as federal accident investigators continue to try to determine whether an alarm may have failed on a Delta Air Lines Boeing 727 that crashed last August at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport.

The alarm is designed to sound if a pilot has forgotten to prepare an aircraft properly for takeoff, such as leaving wing flaps, which help give a plane lift, in the wrong position.

The National Transportation Safety Board has said there is evidence, though not conclusively determined, that the flaps may not have been in the proper position on the Delta jet.

Chile's cabinet quits

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The political opposition, pressing for policy changes that will lead to democratic reforms, is hoping that President Augusto Pinochet's new Cabinet will have more power than his previous one.

All 16 members of Pinochet's Cabinet resigned on Thursday and the 72-year-old general was expected to pick a new group of ministers today.

"The sudden shakeup in Pinochet's authoritarian government came the same day a magazine reported that Pinochet's aides tried to delay news that Chilean voters had overwhelmingly rejected him in the Oct. 5 referendum on his rule."

Whales still in ice

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Rescuers frustrated by a delayed icebreaking barge opted for a new plan to free three trapped whales: using a helicopter to drop a 4½-ton concrete slab that could punch a trail through foot-thick ice today.

"A large, wide lead has opened four miles from the whales. That's the closest open water there's been yet," Ron Morris of the National Marine Fisheries Service said Thursday. "I just want to take advantage of the situation."

Israeli race close

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Small parties, especially those representing Arabs and religious Jews, could determine whether the right-wing Likud bloc or the leftist Labor Party is the big winner in Israel's Nov. 1 elections.

The race is expected to be close, with the winner being the major party that wins the most small parties into a coalition after the balloting is over.

There are 25 small parties, and pollsters predict they will garner up to 40 percent of the votes cast and an unprecedented number of seats in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament.

No right to silence

LONDON (AP) — Critics are denouncing the government's proposal to scrap a crime suspect's right to remain silent, a legal maneuver aimed at battling the IRA and other Northern Ireland guerrilla groups.

"The government will not defeat terrorism by taking away one of the few remaining safeguards in Northern Ireland's justice system," said Sarah Spencer, general secretary of Britain's National Council for Civil Liberties.

Israel raids targets in Lebanon, 15 killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes and helicopters attacked guerrilla strongholds in Lebanon today in apparent retaliation for a bombing that killed seven Israeli soldiers. Fifteen people were killed in the raids, police said.

The jets scored direct hits on ammunition dumps and training bases of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, and Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, said a police spokesman in Lebanon.

On Thursday, Israel's leaders vowed to retaliate against Hezbollah, which claimed responsibility for killing the Israeli soldiers Wednesday.

The police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said 12 Israeli fighter-bombers were involved in simultaneous airstrikes near Sidon, provincial capital of south Lebanon, and in the eastern town of Mashgara.

Helicopter gunships later joined the attack on Mashgara, police said.

Eight people were killed and 15 wounded in the Sidon area, and seven were killed and 15 wounded in Mashgara, the spokesman said.

He said clouds of black smoke hung over the stricken bases on the outskirts of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, and Mashgara, 15 miles to the east.

The Israeli military command said the raids occurred about 10 a.m. and were aimed at "Palestinian targets in the Sidon area and Hezbollah command posts in the villages of Mashgara and Al-Luwayzah."

The village of Al-Luwayzah is about two miles southeast of Sidon, where the car bombing occurred.

The military statement said at least six U.S.-made F-16's took part in the raids.

Lebanese police said an ammunition depot belonging to Hezbollah was hit near the Palestinian refugee camp of Mieh Mieh, on the outskirts of Sidon, and set off a series of explosions.

A Palestinian guerrilla training base was hit in Mieh Mieh. The planes also blasted targets in the nearby Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp.

Magazine reports deal to release 9 hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Beirut magazine said today the United States and Iran were working out a deal for freeing nine American hostages before the U.S. presidential election on Nov. 8.

The weekly Ash-Shiraa said the hostages would be freed to ensure victory for Vice President George Bush in exchange for a commitment to the Republican candidate to rearm Iran after he takes office.

There was no way to verify the report.

Ash-Shiraa, which has access to Iranian hardliners, gained international fame when it broke the story of the secret U.S. arms sales to Iran in November 1986. But its subsequent reports about the hostages, including reports of an imminent release, proved inaccurate.

Other reports have said both Bush and Democrat candidate Michael Dukakis sent envoys to work out a deal with Iran on the hostages. But Washington has denied any contact was under way with Iran.

The nine Americans are among 14 foreign hostages in Lebanon, most believed held by Shiite Muslim radicals linked to Iran. The longest held is American Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Ash-Shiraa said: "A new deal has been in the works for a while between the United States and Iran under which Iran would free the American hostages held by its factions in Lebanon before the upcoming American elections to ensure the victory of the Republican candidate, Vice President George Bush."

2 million copiers

WEBSTER, N.Y. (AP) — Production workers at Xerox Corp. in main copier manufacturing complex celebrated the completion of the company's two-millionth copier with a mid-day ceremony.

Some 3,000 workers joined in the festivities Thursday at the Xerox facility located in the Rochester suburb of Webster.

The two-millionth machine, a Xerox 1090 copier, was placed next to machine number 2,000,001, a Xerox 5900 duplicator, one of the most sophisticated copiers the company makes.

The company, now based in Stamford, Conn., reached the one million milestone only eight years ago.

Silver case settled

NEW YORK (AP) — An attorney says Peru's state-owned mineral company paid a $17 million check from Lamar Hunt as part of a settlement in a personal bankruptcy protection in Dallas last month.

The three brothers, all from Dallas and sons of the late oil billionaire H.L. Hunt, were sued by Mincopec in federal court here.

Mincopec lawyers said they would ask bankruptcy court in Dallas today to unfreeze the Hunt's assets so Mincopec can pursue collection efforts against them.

GE to build center

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — General Electric Corp., based in Fairfield, Conn., will put a distribution center in Knox County, Tenn., that will employ 170 people within the first year, officials said Thursday.

The center will house records and computers for GE, officials said. Shipping, handling and loading also will be handled through the center.

Construction of a 350,000-square-foot building is expected to start immediately, and the center probably will be open by May 1. The company may double the center's size within five years, officials said.

Supermerger proceeds

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A divided state Supreme Court rejected an effort by California's attorney general to block the super-merger of Getty Oil Co. and Texaco by using the state's antitrust law.

Attorney General John Van de Kamp had argued that the $10.1 billion buyout of Getty Oil by Texaco would jack up prices at the pump by reducing oil supplies to discount independent refiners.

But the court Thursday rejected Van de Kamp's first-ever use of state antitrust law to challenge a merger.

EB blames losses on 15-week strike

HARTFORD (AP) — A General Dynamics official said the 15-week strike at Electric Boat had a "major impact" on the company's slip in earnings and hinted that the Groton shipyard will lose business if productivity doesn't improve.

Stanley H. Koch, an executive vice president at General Dynamics, did not offer any specific figures on the amount lost as a result of the strike at the nuclear submarine shipyard, but he indicated it was substantial.

"Our third quarter losses were related to the strike," Koch said Thursday at a meeting of Hartford Society of Financial Analysts. "That's been a major impact on the operating earnings this year for the corporation."

The St. Louis-based defense contractor announced Wednesday that its third-quarter earnings decreased 13.5 percent from last year's level. Earnings dropped from $11.5 million in the third quarter of 1987 to $9.4 million in the same period this year.

The decline in earnings was particularly steep in GD's submarine-building division. Earnings in that division were $9.8 million in the third quarter of this year, down from $30.8 million a year ago. For the first nine months of 1988, the operating earnings from the division were $13.5 million, down from $79.8 million for the same period last year.

Koch said GD has made cost reduction its top priority and said the recent contract settlement with the 10,000-member Metal Trades Council is an example of the company's resolve.

"A lot of people pay lip service to cost reduction but at General Dynamics we give it top priority," Koch said.

He described the labor dispute as painful but unavoidable because of "hot" competition between EB and Newport News Drydock & Shipbuilding Co.

Benefits

For the elderly and disabled, the Social Security increase will be partially offset by an extra $7.10 a month in Medicare premiums, which will rise to $31.90 starting in January. They are deducted directly from the benefits.

The agency gave the following examples of how the 4.9 percent increase will affect average monthly benefits:

- All retired workers, up $21, from $516 to $537.
- Aged couple, both getting benefits, up $38, from $883 to $921.
- Widowed mother and two children, up $42, from $1,070 to $1,112.
- Disabled worker, spouse and children, up $41, from $902 to $943.
- All disabled workers, up $20, from $509 to $529.

The maximum federal SSI payment will rise by $14, from $335 to $349, for an individual, and by $21, from $352 to $373, for a poor couple.

The Social Security Administration also announced today that the maximum amount of wages subject to the payroll tax will climb from the current $45,000 to $46,000 in 1989.

That means that the maximum tax on employees will jump by $25.30 to $3,604.80 for workers earning over $48,000 annually. Employers pay the same amount each worker pays.

This change affects about 7 percent of the 130 million workers covered by Social Security. The wage base, the amount subject to the tax, has gone up every year since 1971.

However, the payroll tax rate, which has been increased 20 times since Social Security started in 1937, will remain unchanged at 7.51 percent. But it will rise to 7.65 percent on Jan. 1, 1990.

Inflation

July gain, which had also been blamed on the drought.

The other bad news: Clothing costs shot up 2.2 percent as prices for nearly all items of apparel reflected higher prices for fall and winter lines.

Drivers, however, found significant good news in today's report. September's steep drop in gasoline prices sent pump prices 27.3 percent below their peak of March 1981.

Home heating oil costs were down 2.1 percent while the price of natural gas and electricity, taken together, rose 0.6 percent.

The 0.5 percent rise in the overall Consumer Price Index, if it persisted for 12 months, would amount to an annual inflation rate of 4.1 percent. From January through September, prices rose at an annual rate of 4.5 percent, up a notch from the 4.4 percent gain posted for all of 1987.

Economists expect this moderation in prices to continue for the balance of 1988 as falling energy prices should counter further drought-driven food price gains.

Indeed, last week's report on wholesale prices for September showed that food prices one step short of the retail level shot up 1.2 percent while energy prices plummeted 3.3 percent.

Stacy Kottman, an economist at Georgia State University, predicted that consumer prices for all of 1988 would rise by around 4.2 percent, even a better than the 1987 performance.

Crisis

The plan was described as a kind of support service for the mentally ill, enable them to live and function in the community.

Karen Everson of Glastonbury, head of the Inter-Community Mental Health Group, which assisted in drawing up the local proposal, said the fact that the proposal provided for mobile services was one reason it has been approved.

Thompson said that while establishment of mental health crisis centers "is not the end of mental health problems, it is a big step forward."

Two other crisis centers are planned, one for the New Britain area and one for the Meriden area.

Thompson and Matthews both serve on the General Assembly's appropriations committee, which has a role in determining state budgets. Matthews is Senate chairman of the Public Safety Committee. Thompson is on the Human Services Committee.

Thompson, who represents Manchester's 13th Assembly District, is seeking re-election. He is backed by Republican Susan Buckno.

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRE — Town of Manchester firefighters Doug Welch, left, and John Rivosca look at some pictures in a display on the 9th District School fire, which occurred on Oct. 23, 1913. Welch, a Manchester fire history buff and the department's unofficial historian, put together the display. It can be seen through Oct. 28 in the lobby of the Savings Bank of Manchester, 923 Main St. Despite the destruction of the school building, no one was seriously hurt in the fire.

Promotion

Minor had retained authority over the administrative division after being promoted from captain to deputy chief two years ago. The captain's post in that division had remained vacant after Minor's promotion.

Money to fill the vacancy was provided in this year's town budget.

"For me it's a logical step up in my career," Holyfield said. "The bad part is I'm leaving a department I've been in for five years."

As detective lieutenant, Holyfield, 40, had been commander of the Tri-Town Narcotics Task Force and the Special Weapons and Tactics Squad. The task force is a group of officers from Manchester, Vernon and South Windsor who make drug-related arrests in all three townships.

"I think it's a fantastic choice," Minor said of Holyfield's promotion. "I have known Russ since he's been on the department — an excellent police officer."

Capt. Joseph H. Brooks, the commander of the detective division, said he had mixed emotions about Holyfield's departure from that division.

"I kind of hate to lose him," Brooks said. "He's done an outstanding job on the task force. He'll be a hard man to replace."

Holyfield joined the police department on Dec. 12, 1971. In 1974 he became the department's first community relations officer. He was promoted to detective in 1975, to sergeant in 1979, to lieutenant in 1982 and to detective lieutenant in 1983.

He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Connecticut. He attended the National FBI Academy school in 1983. He is now in the master's degree program in public administration at the University of Hartford.

Holyfield is married to the former Linda Gee of Manchester. They have a son, Travis.

'24 Men Out' based on the Oakland A's

"Twenty-Four Men Out — The Story of the 1988 Oakland Athletics"

The sequel to John Sayles' "Eight Men Out," based on the 1919 Chicago White Sox team which "threw" the World Series that year, was written, produced and directed by Oakland manager Tony La Russa.

"Twenty-Four Men Out" finished its filming Thursday night when the Athletics bowed to the Los Angeles Dodgers, 5-2, in the fifth game of the World Series to lose four games to one.

Those who have seen Sayles' latest movie may have wondered if any relatives of the "Black Sox" players of 1919 were around. Well, they certainly are. The great grandchildren of the scandalous 1919 White Sox are all, and well and they, collectively, welded impotent bats and gloves for the Athletics during the World Series.

The painfully obvious fact is that the Oakland players are, unequivocally, bad "actors." In an innovative move by La Russa, all of the scenes in "Twenty-Four Men Out" were shot live so as to nullify any stage fright by the Athletics.

Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda was foretold of La Russa's maiden attempt at the silver screen at the start of the series, clearly evidenced by the almost too dramatic ending to Game 1 in Los Angeles.

Here are some tip offs (which will be edited for realistic reasons) that the viewer should have caught which could have afforded he or she the lofty privilege of writing this tumultuous, breaking story:

With Oakland leading Game 1, 4-3, with two outs in the bottom of the ninth, Lasorda utilized pinch-hitter Mike Davis against the best relief pitcher in baseball, Dennis Eckersley. In the regular season, Davis batted .196 with two home runs. Davis drew a walk which set the 'stage' for Kirk Gibson.

Gibson drilled a 3-2 fastball down the middle well into the right field bleachers for the 5-4 Dodgers' win. If the viewer didn't cry 'fix 'em and there, he or she must have been blind.

Down to his last chance, why would Lasorda have pinch-hit a .196 batter instead using Gibson right there. Because Lasorda, cognizant of La Russa's endeavor, went for the dramatic effect and wanted a game-winning homer from Gibson, not to simply tie the game.

Losing the series at home didn't make La Russa look good.

In an obvious mismatch from the beginning (most people didn't give the Dodgers a chance to win one game, let alone the series), NBC announcer Bob Costas stated that the Dodgers are "the worst hitting team in the history of the World Series." So, you know that Costas wasn't a character in "Twenty-Four Men Out."

The slugging Athletics went about their 'business' in a very amateurish way, making it plainly seen, to some, their intent. The best player in baseball, Jose Canseco, went a pathetic 1-for-19 in the series. Also, Mark McGwire went 1-for-17, Walt Weis 1-for-16 and Carney Lansford 3-for-17.

In Game 4, Weis (a rookie and definitely a novice actor) let Davis' liner go right past his glove into left field. Canseco struck out with the tying run on second in the ninth. McGwire popped up on the first pitch in every at-bat of the series.

A lineup with names like Stubbs, Hatcher, Dempsey, Heep, Scioscia, Hamilton and Woodson does not constitute a World Series championship team, the Dodgers didn't have a chance. But, La Russa gave them and himself a chance at Hollywood.

Who knows what impact "Twenty-Four Men Out: The Story of the 1988 Oakland Athletics" will have on the movie industry. Sequels are never as good as the original.

Until further evidence can be presented, "Twenty-Four Men Out: The Story of the 1988 Oakland Athletics" stands.

The result: 1-for-19 even after an opening-game grand slam.

"It's a little bit different feeling in the Series. I don't know what it is," Canseco said. Mark McGwire kept uttering to try to hit more line drives.

The result: three shots to the warning track Thursday night and 1-for-17 for the Series. "It's very frustrating, but I gave it my best shot," he said. Did the youthful Oakland Athletics succumb to the pressure of their first World Series? We did not choke," Manager Tony La Russa said.

Hershiser caps incredible year Pitches Dodgers to World Series championship

By John Nadel The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Incredible season. Incredible finish. Incredible Orel Hershiser.

He capped one of the most amazing stretches a pitcher has ever had as the Los Angeles Dodgers won the World Series in five games by beating the Oakland Athletics 5-2 Thursday night.

Hershiser allowed only four hits while walking four and striking out nine as he hand-cuffed the heavy hitting Athletics for the second time in five days.

Following his three-hit, 6-inning over the Athletics in Game 2 Sunday night, the 30-year-old right-hander was a clear-cut choice as the Most Valuable Player in the Series. Just as he was in the National League playoffs.

"I just never wanted to let down," Hershiser said of his amazing pitching in the last 52 days. "I always went pitch-by-pitch. Every outing I had was a pressure outing.

"I didn't want to go out there and lose and have everybody say, 'He cooled off at a crucial time in the Series. He can't pitch under pressure.'"

Starting with the fifth inning of a game Aug. 30 against Montreal, Hershiser pitched 101 2-3 innings and allowed only five earned runs.

Called "Bulldog" by his teammates, Hershiser finished the season with an all-time record 59 consecutive scoreless innings and worked 42 2-3 more innings in the postseason.

"We had to play hard. We had guys come off the bench and do a great job. We got the right guys last winter. We had a solid team and a great pitching staff."

Sax implied that Oakland's Don Baylor led the Dodgers a favor during the NL playoffs by saying he hoped the Athletics would face New York

because he thought the Mets "were the best team."

"I don't see why somebody would say that," said Sax, who batted .300 in the Series, going 6-for-20. "They've got nothing to gain from it and only something to lose."

"My father once told me, you're a slave to what you say and a master to what you don't say. I've tried to live that way."

Catcher Mike Scioscia, who didn't play Thursday night because of the twisted right knee he suffered in Game 4, said he felt much more satisfaction this year than he did in 1981, when Los Angeles beat the New York Yankees to win the World Series in six games.

"This one was a total team effort," Scioscia said. "We were a much better ballclub in '81, but we were a better team in '88."

"This is the best bunch of guys I've ever played baseball with in my whole life."

Knowing the type of ballplayer Davis is, the power he has, there was no question La Russa's going to have him swing."

"Davis made a good pitch and also made a good one on Hatcher's homer but both were gone."

Storm Davis wasn't sure how good his pitch to Mike Davis was.

"It was a fastball down the middle of the plate," the pitcher said. "Hase mentioned to me with his hand that the guy is going to swing on 3-0. But I've seen a lot of guys pop it up on 3-0."

clear: Swing away. It was a gamble and a vote of confidence for Davis.

Davis swung and sent the ball on a low arc over the left field fence, and the crowd of 49,317 fell nearly 15-23 in disbelief. The scoreboard changed to Los Angeles 4, Oakland 1.

"That was two big runs for us," La Russa said. "They thought with the count 3-0 that he was going to take and the guy laid the ball in there and he knocked the daylight out of it."

The A's weren't really fooled. They just decided to challenge Davis.

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bench-warmers, utility men, extras from a Hollywood epic, that's what won the World Series for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

They called in the Red Cross, read a roll call at Warner Bros. and Universal Studios, and came out with a patchwork lineup that somehow made the Oakland Athletics look awful.

Kirk Gibson limps off, no problem, don't worry, freckle-faced Mickey Hatcher comes to the rescue with two homers.

"I think Mickey exemplifies what this team is all about," says Gibson. "I got hurt and the team accepted that I would be out. And Mickey stepped in and filled my role and I filled his. We had a team approach that kept us together. We always gave it our best shot."

Need another hero? How about Mike Davis, a .196 hitter with two homers in the regular season who's been idle most of the last three months. Suddenly in the series, he's a slugger again, lofting a two-run homer in Game 5 to clinch the championship.

And how about utility man Franklin Stubbs and catcher Kirk Dempsey?

Stubbs hit only .223 while swinging sparingly during the regular season, then hit nearly .300 in the series while taking over first base.

Dempsey made the club as a free agent in spring training, played only 77 games, but filled in admirably when Mike Scioscia was hurt in Game 4 and missed Game 5.

No one, not even though, enjoyed the final moment more than Davis, who struggled through the year a forgotten man, injured some of the time, idle nearly all of it, once a hitting star, now a .196 bench-warmer.

His only reward was the fact that his team was winning, a team he was on but not really part of.

He begged La Russa for a chance to redeem himself in the World Series, to play left field when Gibson went down or designated hitter, or anywhere.

Lasorda put Hatcher in left but gave Davis his chance in Game 3 as designated hitter. Then when Mike Marshall was injured in Game 4, Davis took his pitch. Marshall played Game 5 and Davis went back to DH.

Hatcher's two-run homer in the first put Los Angeles ahead, but Oakland cut the lead to 2-1 in the third.

The fourth, Hatcher led off with a single against Oakland starter Storm Davis, but Marshall and John Sheby struck out swinging.

Mike Davis, no relation to the pitcher, came up and drew three straight balls, then looked around for a sign.

A more cautious manager might have told Davis to take the pitch, go for the walk, trying to build toward a rally. But La Russa has been nothing if not bold this series.

Lasorda signaled and shouted from the dugout steps.

Davis said La Russa wasn't telling him to kill the ball or hit it out or any other pithy baseball phrase. The manager was reminding him of a quote from the Bible, Davis said.

"I had mentioned to him about the Book of Esther — 'For times such as this you have endured,' Mordecai said Esther — and things worked out today for us," Davis said.

For times such as this, indeed.

Whether La Russa was really quoting from the Bible or from Dodgers' playbook, the message was clear: Swing away. It was a gamble and a vote of confidence for Davis.

Motivation no problem in big conference clash

UConn and Maine collide in Storrs

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

STORRS — Motivation shouldn't be a problem when the University of Connecticut and Maine square off in another critical Yankee Conference clash on the gridiron Saturday at p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

It's a literal dogfight for the conference championship at the moment with six of the nine teams still very much in the hunt. Maine, which shared Yankee Conference honors a year ago with Richmond, is alone in fourth place at 3-2 with the Huskies a half step behind at 2-2 with New Hampshire. The three-man trail Delaware, Villanova and UMass, all at 3-1.

Saturday's loser is going to feel like he was on the receiving end of a Mike Tyson knockout punch. "It's not unrealistic for the conference champion to have two losses," 31-year-old Black Bear Coach Tim Murphy, the youngest head coach on the I-AA level in the country, said.

Maine's offense concerns Jackson. "Maine is as balanced a team as we've played. What's deceptive is how well they run the ball. Their offensive line wears people down. The key for us is to control the ball all four quarters. We want to keep their offensive people off the field.

Robinson's departure put on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — All-American David Robinson will have to wait one more year before taking up his post at center for NBA's San Antonio Spurs.

The secretary of the Navy says the 7-foot-1 former Naval Academy star must fulfill his obligation to the military.

Robinson, who has an eight-year, $26-million contract with the Spurs, had hoped to begin his pro career this fall.

MHS facing pivotal game; East looking for first win

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

Although, this is only the sixth outing of a 10-week scholastic football schedule, Manchester High's game at Rockville Saturday at 1:30 p.m. can be looked upon as a pivotal match.

On the heels of a 34-16 win over Windham last Saturday, the Indians are 1-2 in the CCC East and 2-3 overall, and looking to reach the 500 mark. A victory over the Rams would also lift Manchester's hopes for a winning season under first-year coach Jim McLaughlin.

up to go out really strong." Manchester's offense has been powered by the strong inside running of senior fullback Chip Driggs (three touchdowns against Windham) and the outside running of senior halfback Vinnie Moore. Driggs and Moore combined for 302 rushing yards last week. Moore also scored a TD.

Against Rockville, Indian senior halfback Ed Saunders could be a "key," according to McLaughlin.

FOCUS

Hurricane will wash out refund rules

DEAR BRUCE: Recently my wife and I planned a vacation trip in the Caribbean taking advantage of no-refund tickets. We were getting ready to leave for our trip when Hurricane Gilbert formed in the Atlantic.

Smart Money
Bruce Williams

On television we saw that the area we had planned to visit was right in the path of the hurricane. We called the airline, and the representative said the status of our flight was being determined on a minute-by-minute basis.

We decided that even if the plane left, we had no interest in going into the area until the storm was completely gone, and we vacationed elsewhere. We went back to our travel agent, and she told us that the no-refund policy was in effect — despite the hurricane! We have come to learn that our flight never did leave, yet we are told we cannot get a refund.

What do you think?
P.R.,
SYRACUSE, N.Y.

DEAR P.R.: I think your travel agent will have to get an update from the airlines. Most, if not all of the carriers, waive the no-refund conditions under the circumstances you've described.

Like you, they have no desire to send their aircraft into unsafe areas; consequently, it was well reported in the press that these tickets are refundable.

I would go back to my travel agent and have her ask the airline again.

DEAR BRUCE: I know that you and others like you have addressed my situation on many occasions. However, not only have I not paid attention, but I have also avoided reading about it because I childishly hoped that I ignored my problem, it would go away. That obviously is not going to happen.

I have not filed an income tax return for the past seven years. I do have taxes taken out of my pay, but I've also earned a fair amount of money in a part-time job that has gone totally untaxed. It's gotten so that when the phone rings or a friend comes to call, I am absolutely certain it is federal agents coming to arrest me.

I've got to do something! I love a lot of money and I may have to go to jail, but I've reached the point where I can't live with this anymore. Can you tell me what steps to take to get myself back into the mainstream?

A READER
I have worked with the Internal Revenue Service on several occasions, doing public service announcements, interviews and call-in programs.

These folks tell me that they do not attempt to put people in jail unless it is absolutely necessary. Their role is to collect money due to the U.S. government, at best, not an easy job.

Let's face it, nobody enjoys paying taxes! But I am assured that the IRS looks a great deal more kindly upon people who come forward than those who are "caught" one way or another. Given that, you should immediately seek out the services of an enrolled agent — an accountant who is allowed to practice before the IRS. He or she will show you how to file the back returns.

The process of paying back taxes, while not easy, probably will not be nearly as painful as you first imagined. And it will certainly be far less painful than worrying every time a doorbell rings.

Either way, if you continue to ignore this problem, sooner or later you will be in much more trouble — when the IRS notices your delinquency.

It is possible that the penalties and taxes due will be significantly lower than you have imagined because of the taxes that have been withheld from your pay for the last seven years. However, you should accept the possibility that you may have to come up with a considerable amount of cash.

If you continue to ignore this problem, sooner or later you will be in much more trouble — when the IRS notices your delinquency.

Satanism show censored

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gerald Rivera says he's having a devil of a time with NBC censors over the TV personality's upcoming special on Satanism.

Rivera said Thursday he is so unhappy with network censors that he may broadcast blank pictures Tuesday night rather than make more cuts in his two-hour special, "Devil Worship: Exposing Satan's Underground."

"We're going to make the changes that we consider appropriate," Rivera said. NBC spokeswoman Rosemary Keenan said talks between Rivera and network censors were continuing.

Rivera had hoped the show would include graphic descriptions of satanic murders and other rituals.

Olympian on TV show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Olympic track star Florence Griffith-Joyner will make a guest appearance as herself on an episode of the NBC-TV situation comedy "227," the network says.

The episode will be taped Nov. 1 for broadcast later this season, according to Kathi Pearn-Banks, an NBC publicist. Griffith-Joyner, who won three gold medals and a silver in Seoul, will tell Brenda, an aspiring runner played by Regina King, that there's more than one way to be a winner.

The story was conceived by series star Marla Gibbs and her son, Dorian Gibbs.

Lynn Anderson booked

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grammy Award-winning singer Lynn Anderson was booked on a misdemeanor charge of malicious mischief after a pre-arranged incident at the home of songwriter Paul Williams' brother.

Judicial Commissioner Howard Taradash released Anderson, known for her 1970 hit "I Never Promised You A Rose Garden," on her own recognizance after she was booked Wednesday following the incident earlier that day.

The warrant was sworn out by Linda Gail Bower, who told police that Anderson vandalized her car and threatened her life after songwriter Mentor Williams refused to let Anderson into his home.

Ms. Bower, who was at the house, said Anderson stole her leather jacket and threw some of her belongings into garbage pails.

Ms. Bower said Mentor Williams is a former boyfriend of Anderson.

NASA official 'cool'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher says the anxiety he'd expected to feel during the Sept. 29 countdown for the successful launch of space shuttle Discovery never materialized.

"I thought the butterflies were going to be there, but they weren't," he said Wednesday in Pittsburgh, where he received the Willard F. Rockwell Medal at the 1988 International Congress on Technology Exchange.

Fletcher, a physicist, said he will return to the University of Pittsburgh when he quits the National Aeronautics and Space Administration next July.

Can thick blood cause fatigue?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a friend, male, 35. He says he feels tired and without energy unless he takes an aspirin. Recently, he cut his hand badly but only about two drops came out. The blood was so thick. Could thick blood be causing his fatigue?

DEAR READER: The "thickness" or consistency of the blood is not necessarily related to the speed of clotting. In some diseases characterized by viscous blood, such as polycythemia vera (an excess of red blood cells), blood does clot more rapidly; this is probably due to the over-production of platelets, the body's blood-clotting cells, that often accompanies the condition.

Aspirin (and other drugs that inhibit coagulation) do not affect blood consistency. Rather, these compounds slow clotting by reducing platelets' adhesiveness or interfering with the proteins that are necessary for coagulation to take place.

Therefore, I doubt that your friend's single aspirin tablet is truly relieving his symptoms. I believe that he will have to look elsewhere for an explanation. Blood ailments marked by excess viscosity — such as polycythemia vera — can cause fatigue and loss of stamina.

I suggest that your friend undergo a medical examination to determine the condition of his blood. If his blood constituents are normal, the doctor will want to look for other causes of energy loss. On the other hand, if your friend's blood is abnormal, he will require further diagnosis and treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I buy cosmetics through a neighborhood sales rep from a reputable cosmetics firm. Recently I had occasion to purchase lipstick, but the only one available was a demonstrator. I did not know this, but noticed that it looked a bit different, and asked the rep. She said it was not quite new but had been dipped in boiling water prior to sale. What do you think of this practice?

DEAR READER: The lipstick may have a waxy base. With use, the tip of the lipstick may have become blunted. By heating it in boiling water, the sales representative can return the demo lipstick to its original shape, thereby "reconditioning" it. I doubt that the practice you described serves any health purpose and in boiling water is unlikely to kill most bacteria and viruses. Therefore, I recommend that you forget the demonstrator model and insist on an unused product. Leave the demo for the rep; her germs are hers and should not be spread to you.

Toddler needs to be taught that three's a crowd in bed

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after Julie was born, I started taking her into my bed to breast-feed her. I had fully intended to put her back in her own crib when she was finished, but after a week or two, I found myself slipping asleep with her, and when she would wake up, I would be right there. It was convenient, and I admit I enjoyed the security of having her next to me, as my husband was working the graveyard shift.

However, when my husband started working days, Julie was not used to sleeping alone, so she cried until I took her into my bed. When she was 10 months old, I weaned her to a bottle.

Abby, she's 2 1/2 years old now, and she's still sleeping with us! It is ruining our marriage, but I just don't know what to do. I can't force her to sleep in her own room because she's afraid to sleep alone. I've tried everything. I guess I'm just a marshmallow. Please help.

GINA IN LAYTON, UTAH

DEAR GINA: Place a night-light in Julie's bedroom and explain lovingly but firmly that she must sleep in her room — and not in yours. For "company," let her take her favorite cuddly doll or toy animal to cradle in her arms.

You can expect her to cry and fuss at first, but don't back down. When she realizes that she may no longer sleep with you, she will accept it.

DEAR ABBY: Everyone is talking about the possibility of a serious water shortage in this country. I have a suggestion that could help.

If most people are like me, they let the water while they brush their teeth. Today, I closed the drain to see how much water I was wasting. The sink filled twice before I finished brushing (about two gallons).

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Perhaps most people would waste only one gallon per brushing. However, if 200 million people brush their teeth twice a day, wasting only one gallon of water each time, that's 400 million gallons of water going down the drain daily. Multiply that by 365 days a year, and we have lost 146 billion gallons yearly!

Abby, if people would shut off the water while brushing their teeth, think of all the water they could save.

J. TYREE, HUNTINGTON BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR J. TYREE: You gave us something to think about. It's said, "You never miss the water till the well runs dry." Why wait until then? Readers, it's worth a shot, right?

DEAR ABBY: I can't verify that bad men are better lovers, but my hunch is that a man who has lost his hair — or is losing it fast and isn't preoccupied by the fact — is generally superior in bed.

Bald men do not resort to trying to hide their baldness have obviously accepted themselves as they are. This is masculine, strong, honest, self-confident and, therefore, sexy!

BALD IS BEAUTIFUL

DEAR ABBY: You said it all when you said, "It's not what's on a man's head, it's what's in it that makes him attractive, sexy and handsome."

I'll tell you what handsome and sexy means to me: It's being kind, thoughtful, clean, honest and gentle.

My guy became my first friend — then my lover. He's everything I've ever admired in a man. I'm crazy about him as if this were my first love. I'm 74 and he's 75.

IN LOVE IN VENTURA

DEAR ABBY: I don't know whether you can use this in your column or not, but I hope you can because it could help a lot of people who are as ignorant as we were.

I had never read the instructions that came with condoms because I figured that was my husband's department, so consequently, I was not aware that a condom can cause it to break!

We have been married for 12 years and this will be our third child, so it's no big deal, but please, publicize this very important information so other people will not have the kind of accident we had.

I'm signing my real name, but if you print this, sign me.

PREGNANT IN ALABAMA

DEAR PREGNANT: Thank you for wanting to warn others. Readers, for the best protection, ask your pharmacist for a lubricant containing nonoxonyl-9. This kills both sperm and the AIDS virus, according to Dr. Merv Silverman, the president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

DEAR ABBY: We are having a difference of opinion at our office regarding a particular wedding anniversary celebration where the newspaper announcement states, "No gifts, please."

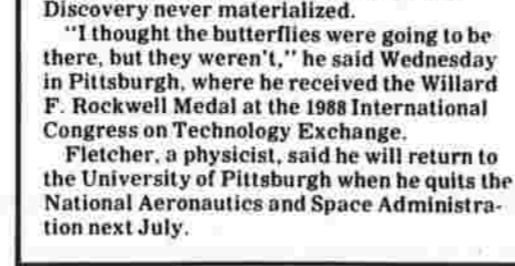

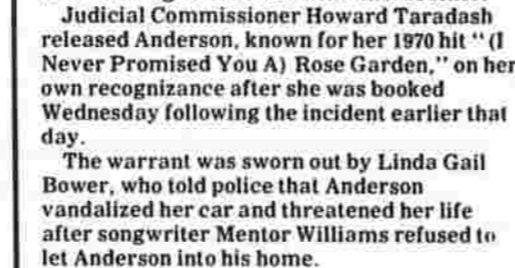

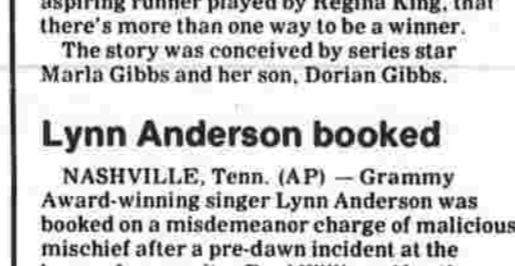

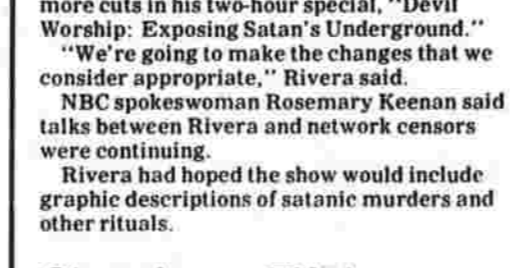

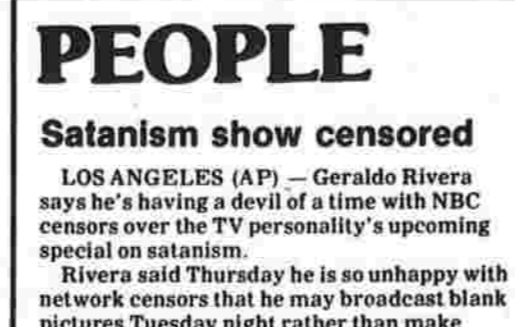

Some of us feel obligated to give a card with money enclosed, and others say that the honorees don't want your presents, just your presence.

Also, maybe it could be interpreted that they want no gifts, but money would be fine.

Your comments, please.

PART-TIME PATTI

DEAR PATTI: "No gifts, please" means "Please do not give me any kind of gift — including money."

Seven no-trump for safety

By James Jacoby

Forget about the danger of the opening spade being ruffed — when seven no-trump is safer contract than seven of a suit. Here's one possible answer: when you are able to get a count on the hand to help you play your long suit to best advantage. If your long suit is your trump suit, you don't usually have the luxury of postponing the play of trumps for too many rounds.

make. And North of course thought that if his partner could bid six no-trump without the A-K in either minor, he ought to be raised to seven.

Declarer won the opening spade lead and in quick order cashed the diamond ace, the K-Q of hearts, and A-K of clubs. He then finished up with the other two high hearts and the remaining high spades and to only three rounds of hearts, and he was shown to have six clubs when East showed out on the first lead of that suit. That left him with only two diamonds, so it was easy to play a second diamond to dummy's king, dropping the queen and making the contract. And what would have happened in seven diamonds? Probably declarer would have played the pre-emptive spade bidder for diamond shortness and gone set.

WEEKEND

Go fairly crazy
You'd go "fairly" crazy if you tried to get to every one of the fairs which are being held this weekend. Here's a selection which should whet your appetite for popcorn balls and homemade pies:
The Order of the Eastern Star will hold their Harvest Time Fair on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Masonic Temple, 25 E. Center St. In addition to the crafts and white elephant items, there will be a luncheon from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.
On Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Buckley School P.T.A. will have its Halloween and Harvest Fair. There will be a cake walk, games, face painting and lots more.
Daughters of Isabella will have its annual Isabella Boutique Sunday at the Lithuanian Hall, 24 Golvay St. The fair, noon to 4 p.m., features a tea room, cake sale, arts and crafts and more. UNICO, a service club with many members in Manchester, will hold its annual craft fair at Glastonbury High School on Hubbard Street. It will be Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $2.50 general, and children 12 and under admitted free.
While you're down in that direction, stop at 100 Somerset Road, Glastonbury, where the Manchester Area Alumnae Club of Phi Beta Phi will hold its annual sale of crafts from the Great Smoky Mountains. There will be handwoven scarves, stoles and placemats, pottery pieces such as wind chimes and bird feeders, and wild cherry and walnut wood carved into cooling racks, cutting boards, birds and toys. The display will be open 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Jean Weiss of Spring Street and Edna Woodbury of Nye Street will be the hostesses.
If you want to get peeking anyway, head for Columbia, where the Columbia Cooperative Nursery School will have crafts, baked goods, a pumpkin decorating booth, face painting and more. It's from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the school, Route 87. Admission is $1 per person.
At the same time, the Apple Fest at Columbia Congregational Church will be going on right down the road. This will feature visits from Johnny Appleseed and Miss Piggy, apple edibles and apple crafts. The fair is to be followed by a spaghetti dinner. For more information, call 423-4151.
A fair of quite a different kind is the Russian Bazaar, tonight and Saturday at the St. Panteleimon Russian Orthodox Church at 19 Becket St., Hartford. There will be Russian food and handicrafts, books and records. It's open tonight until 9, and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.
If you're still in a fairly good mood on Sunday, try the Apple Festival at Wapping Community Church, at Five Corners in South Windsor. Home-baked apple products of all kinds will be sold from 9:30 to 10 a.m. and from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Ask Alice
A magical version of "Alice in Wonderland" will be presented Sunday by the Prince Street Players, at the Jorgensen Auditorium, on the Storrs campus of the University of Connecticut. From the whimsical smiles of the Cheshire Cat to the royal whirres of the Queen of Hearts, your youngsters should enjoy this one. Performances are at 1 and 3 p.m. Tickets are $3.50 for adults, $2 for children and other students. Call 486-4226, to reserve seats.
Try the pemmican
Native American arts and crafts, dancing, drumming and food will be available at the Mashamoquet Pond Wow, Saturday and Sunday at the Mashamoquet Brook State Park on Route 44 in Pomfret Center. From 10 a.m. to sunset, you can experience some aspects of native American life. Try the pemmican — it's a dried meat delicacy.
A bit crafty
The annual exhibit of highly unusual work by members of the Society of Connecticut Craftsmen will open this weekend at The Art Guild, 1 Church St., Farmington. An opening reception for the artists will be from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday. This group exhibited last year in the Newspace Gallery at Manchester Community College. The exhibit will hang through Nov. 20, with the gallery open Mondays through Fridays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and weekends, 1 to 4 p.m.
Reader's theater
Characters from children's literature such as Amelia Bedelia, Clifford the dog and Frog and Toad will come to life Sunday with a performance by Story Sala II. This is a delicious theatrical "dish" to be served up at the Greater Hartford Jewish Community Center at 2 p.m. Four actors from Maximillion Productions will use music, acting and humor to interest children in reading. Tickets are $8.50. Call 236-4571 for reservations.

In this season, as the movie "The Last Temptation of Christ" is causing such a stir, it is interesting to look back on the last pretender to the title of "offensive portrayal of Jesus," the musical "Jesus Christ Superstar."

When this Tim Rice-Andrew Lloyd Webber collaboration was brought to the Broadway stage in 1973, the religious community was scandalized.

A Jesus who speaks in the rock idiom? A Mary Magdalene who sings sexually-charged ballads? And, worse still, a tale told from the viewpoint of the traitor, Judas?

But seeing the show 15 years later, in the Nutmeg Theatre's rather uneven production at the University of Connecticut, its piece seems remarkably tame.

It tells a basically traditional tale of Jesus' relationship to his apostles, to his captors and to his Lord. The fact that Jesus is wearing a yellow muscle shirt, or that Judas has on a bright pink leucis unlined and a rickshaw earring does not change the fact that this is a relatively tame piece, theologically speaking.

Only King Herod, portrayed here as a hidden, cunning, King Louis XIV and Boy George, is drawn in outrageous fashion. And one doesn't expect to sympathize with the villain — one of several — of the piece. Oddly enough, however, it is the villain in the current production of "Superstar" who demonstrate the most talent.

Herod is played by James Holden, a senior in music education whose comic talents may be lost on his students. He cavorts, simpers, sings and sashays across the stage in his one memorable scene, blowing kisses to his line of male Rockettes in gray, shaggy wigs.

Rusty Churchill, as Caiaphas the high priest, has a superbly evil voice and presence. His horrid appearance is dramatized by the skin-tight hood and soft-sculpture belly (complete with protruding navel) which costume designer Joan C. Lins-Morstadt has given him.

The third member of the leucisvolent trio is Clay David as Pontius Pilate, who probably has the strongest male voice in the show. Together, the sinister three make up a chord that exudes pure evil. David, Churchill and Holden are exquisite musicians, so that evil becomes attractive.

Competing with these three for a Most Valuable Player citation is Caroline Daly as Mary Magdalene. This young woman comes to Storrs with extensive professional credits, including two years on Broadway and stints in dinner theater, on television and at Radio City Music Hall. She has a show-stopper voice that is held carefully in check in "Everything's Alright," and "I Don't Know How To Love Him." The audience feels that it is sharing a special, intimate moment as she sings.

Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for Owen Padraic Bailey, who was badly miscast as Judas. This is the show's featured part, since the authors themselves described "Superstar" as the last seven days in the life of Jesus, seen through the eyes of Judas Iscariot. But Bailey had to strain badly to hit the notes, and he did not have the rapid passages confidently. The wincing in the audience was almost audible during Judas' death scene.

Another disappointment was Rik Walter as Jesus. His acting is quite strong, but the entire role seems to be scored somewhere just above his comfort level. As someone who fairly swooned with his powerful singing this summer, in "Little Shop of Horrors," I was disappointed with Walter's vocalizing in this show.

This points up the difficulty which Nutmeg Theatre faces, as a hybrid institution that is caught between two sets of expectations. During the summer, the group presents professional-level productions, with a cast that includes primarily professional actors.

But during the school year, the same name is applied to production of a master's degree in Dramatic Arts. Fortunately, a great many of these students are superb, and the choices available to the director are necessarily limited.

Many people, including the six who were seated behind me on Saturday night, are unclear about the distinction. They came expecting a boho performance, such as "Man of La Mancha" or "Little Shop of Horrors" this summer, and made no secret of their disappointment in the current offering.

The people behind me were also put off by one of my favorite aspects of the show, which was the set. Designed by Lisa Cody, who normally does costume work for Nutmeg Theatre, this set is made up entirely of huge pieces of gauzy fabrics which are moved about by the actors. In a sense, Cody dressed the stage, much as she dresses people when she costumes them.

This made for some very effective moments, as when Jesus is crucified. He is elevated on a small platform, surrounded by gauzy drapes. The drapes underneath fall away and Jesus remains, suspended. Then the remaining cloth pulls up, forming wings that seem to hover a moment and disappear in the sky. All that is left is Jesus, hanging in the air by invisible threads. The effect is completely awe-inspiring.

The work which director Terry Runnels has done on this is in partial fulfillment of his requirement for a master's degree in Dramatic Arts. There is no question that this is a tremendous talent in the making.

To pull together an enormously complex show like this one requires a fine sense of judgment.

"Jesus Christ Superstar" continues in the downstairs theater of the Jorgensen Auditorium, at the University of Connecticut in Storrs, through Sunday. There are performances tonight, Saturday and Sunday at 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m. Call 486-3969 for reservations.

'A Midsummer Night's Dream'

Play is full of masterful inventions

The plot of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" which opens at the Harvard Stage Company's season, is full of masterful inventions. Shakespeare combined several sources when he put together this tale of the cross-watching and confused devotion of two sets of lovers.

Add a little Greek mythology, the marriage of an Athenian duke and an Amazonian queen, a little Old English folk magic and you have the stuff of which Mark Lamos, the Stage Company's artistic director, creates even more masterful theatrical invention.

Start the plot boiling in a magic dream setting complete with the operative word flashed on the set floor in the opening darkness. Michael H. Yeargens' set appears simple at first. It is a sky and a tippy arch seem to be brown rug that covers the stage. A rectangular platform is covered in putting-green plastic grass and a tippy arch seem to have fallen precariously from some Acropolis facade.

Suddenly the setting's all changed and actors move about placing bits and pieces of trees and shrubs; a starry sky of lighted globes drops from the ceiling. Call Theseus, Duke of Athens, is transformed into Oberon king of the fairies. His intended bride, Hippolyta of the Amazons, becomes Titania the fairy queen.

As royalty of two worlds, handsome Bradley Whitford and stylish Janet Zarish glide regally about, planning their marriage and ruling on the fate of the lovers. Mischievously aided by the changeling child Puck, played with wing-and-sneakered charm by Daniel Tamm, the trio float, spin and rage in the air in an airborne ballet.

Once in the fairy world of the forest, Yeargens' set is filled at times with fog and stabbed and bathed with glowing patterns of misty light, designed by Pat manages of his troupe. James McDonnell as Nick Bottom balks at playing Pyramus but admittedly would be superior in any other part. Cherub-like rotund, Joel McKinnon Miller is the slow study Snug who does Tender Lion with a disclaimer and a roar. Irwin Appel's rehearsal wall Tom Snout, even better in brick attire. Tall, lanky flame-haired Robert Stanton is Flute and the heroine Thisbe stamping about with a confused grace reminiscent of Stan Laurel. The entire production is colorful, spirited and very physical.

AIDS 'poster boy' now 25

WASHINGTON (AP) — AIDS victim Bill Travis celebrates his 25th birthday today with Quenne Warwick, several dozen of their close friends and top officials of the federal health bureaucracy.

The highly public spectacle, intended as a birthday salute to all people with AIDS, comes a year after Travis decided to allow government officials to cast him as a sort of unofficial poster boy for AIDS.

"My job now is to be public," he said in an interview on his 24th birthday. "I don't particularly enjoy being photographed, but it's something I've learned to tolerate. If I become the AIDS poster boy, that's OK."

No more AIDS headlines?

IXTAPA, Mexico (AP) — The media has run out of heart-rending human interest stories and is rapidly losing interest in AIDS while researchers still struggle to cure the deadly disease, experts say.

CDC warns of play hazards

ATLANTA (AP) — Few regulations exist to prevent a preschool child's frolic on playground equipment from turning into a potentially fatal fall, even though many such hazards could be avoided, federal health officials said.

The Centers for Disease Control said Thursday that workers at construction sites are protected by more safety precautions than children under 4 years of age on playgrounds.

A child could suffer severe head injuries or die if he fell headfirst onto a concrete or asphalt surface from a height of one foot onto packed earth from four feet, the CDC said in its weekly report.

"If you can crack your skull from a fall from one foot off the ground, why put concrete on the playground?" asked CDC spokesman Jeffrey Sacks. "We're not asking a child to change his behavior, we're just asking make the environment more forgiving."

Scientists say comets led to a third mass extinction

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A comet striking Earth with the power of 300 million Hiroshima-sized atomic bombs may be the cause of mass extinction 11 million years ago, say scientists who blame a bigger blast for killing the dinosaurs eons earlier.

The scientists' new study means that of nine mass extinction episodes in Earth's history, three that occurred about 11 million, 38 million and 66 million years ago now have been linked to comets or asteroids impacting the planet.

The highly controversial theory says such impacts kicked up dust and triggered smoky fires that blocked enough sunlight to freeze many creatures and deprive others of food supplies.

Other new studies bolster support for rival theories that blame mass extinctions on gigantic volcanic eruptions, on changes in sea level or on a series of changes unrelated to objects smashing into Earth.

The studies are being presented at a four-day conference, "Global Catastrophes in Earth History," which opened Thursday in Snowbird, Utah.

Scientists from Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory and the University of California at Berkeley and Santa Barbara campuses performed the study that suggests a comet or asteroid impact caused mass extinction of about 25 percent of species 10 million to 11.7 million years ago. The team was led by Nobel Prize-winning UC-Berkeley physicist Luis Alvarez, who died last month.

In 1980, the Alvarez team found thin layers of the metallic element iridium deposited around the world in 66-million-year-old rocks, suggesting a comet or asteroid striking Earth killed about two-thirds of all species, including dinosaurs, at the time.

Iridium is viewed as evidence of such impacts because it is far more common in extraterrestrial objects than in Earth rocks.

In the new study, two deposits of iridium were found in 10-million- to 12-million-year-old sea-floor rocks some 6,200 miles apart: in the Weddell Sea near Antarctica and the Tasman Sea north of New Zealand.

That suggests, but doesn't prove, that a comet or asteroid also hit Earth and triggered extinctions at that time, he said.

Researchers estimated the comet or asteroid would have measured about 1.8 miles across and would have vaporized in an explosion with 300 million times the power of the 13-kiloton atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima at the end of World War II, Asaro said.

He said they estimate the 6½-mile-diameter comet that killed the dinosaurs produced a blast 10 billion times more powerful than the Hiroshima bomb.
