No trace of teens since '78

By Michael Moran
The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — The case of five missing teen-agers has baffled police for a decade, and the trail has taken investigators through youth hostels, branches of the military and even into the cult suicides by followers of Jim Jones in Guyana.

But the search has been to no avail.

Randy Johnson, Melvin Pittman, Alvin Turner, Michael McDowell and Ernest Taylor — all 16- and 17-year-olds from the Newark area — disappeared without a trace Aug. 20, 1978.

Don Griffin, associate director of the National Network of Runaway and Youth Services in Washington, said that he has never encountered a case like this one.

"There are lots of instances where a group of young people will do something that will make them decide to take off," he said. "But unless foul play came to them, they usually come back. At least one of them should have gotten homesick and called home."

The only real lead came a few days after they disappeared when a male voice on the telephone offered to tell Sarah Johnson the whereabouts of her son and his four missing friends in exchange for $750.

The call was traced to a pay phone at Union Station in Washington, D.C., and police eventually decided it was made by the five boys who had run away from home and were trying to get some money.

But nobody has ever heard again from the five — now grown to adulthood if they are alive.

"We talked to police all over the country, we checked with the military, religious cults. We even checked with federal agents

Blaze guts home taken for Route 6

By Andrew Yurkovsky

ANDOVER — A Skinner Hill Road home that was taken by the state for the Route 6 expansion project was destroyed in a "suspicious" fire Saturday, the town fire marshal said today.

The blaze is being investigated by the Bureau of the State Fire Marshal, said town fire marshal Wallace E. Barton.

The fire at 10 Skinner Hill Road was reported at 12:02 a.m. and firefighters arrived at the scene five minutes later, Barton said. He said that the fire was put out about a half-hour later.

Firefighters from Bolton and North and South Coventry provided mutual aid, Barton said. No one was reported injured.

The home was bought by the state Department of Transportation in June to make way for the proposed Route 6 expressway, Marilyn LeBel, the town secretary, said today. She said the home had been owned by Andrew Brown.

Brown's telephone number is unlisted, and he could not be reached for comment this morning.

Adam Berluti, spokesman for the Bureau of State Fire Marshal, said today that the bureau had not completed its investigation. He said an investigator from his office was to look over the scene of the fire this afternoon.

Bush back to Duke's back yard

Race for the White House:

WATERBURY — Republican presidential candidate George Bush, trying to weaken Michael Dukakis in his back yard, arrived in Waterbury today for a speech on economic policy and announcement of the formation of "Democrats for Bush."

Bush, making his third visit to Connecticut since his nomination, arrived at Oxford Airport in Oxford on Air Force Two before taking a motorcade to the Waterbury Sheraton, where he told business and community leaders that Dukakis' economic policies would ruin the country.

"My opponent now wants to turn back to clog up the circulatory system of America's economy with exactly the kind of big government schemes the Europeans are discarding," the vice president said.

"Economists call the resulting economic paralysis 'Euroclerosis.' I call it Dukakonomics. It rhymes with Carteronomics. It didn't work then, and it won't work now."

Bush noted that unemployment in Waterbury in 1980 was 7.9 percent and is now about 3.8 percent. The current economy "can withstand almost any emergency with the possible exception of a liberal being elected to the White House," Bush said.

The vice president also introduced a 15-member steering committee of "Democrats for Bush" headed by former U.S. Sen. Richard Stone of Florida.

Among the Democrats endorsing the vice president was Robert Wood, professor of government at Wesleyan University in Middletown and formerly president of the University of Massachusetts. Wood clashed frequently with Dukakis while he headed the state university and has criticized the Massachusetts governor for a lack of commitment to education.

Democrats were key to Ronald Reagan's two victories in 1980 and 1984, and a Los Angeles Times poll estimates that Reagan Democrats comprise 18 percent of the electorate. Polls also indicate those Democrats are undecided as the election nears.

Former state Rep. Dominick Swieszkowski, a New Britain Democrat, said: "I think Bush is going to do extremely well in Connecticut. He's especially popular with those of European backgrounds."

En route to Connecticut in Air Force Two, Bush rejected Democratic charges that his campaign advertising is racist in stressing the case of Willie Horton Jr., a black convicted murderer who raped a white woman after escaping from a Massachusetts prison furlough.

"There isn't any racism," Bush

U.S. trial solves Manila's problem with Marcos

By Robert H. Reid
The Associated Press

News Analysis

MANILA, Philippines — The U.S. indictment of Ferdinand Marcos spares the Philippines from risking political instability by charging the former president with crimes and allowing him to return for the trial.

On Friday, a federal grand jury in New York indicted Marcos and his wife Imelda on racketeering charges for allegedly looting more than $100 million from their homeland to buy real estate and other properties in New York.

It was the first time Marcos had been charged with any crime despite widespread allegations of corruption during his 20-year administration.

Philippine authorities conceded that prospects for retrieving the billions of dollars Marcos allegedly embezzled were bleak unless the ousted president were formally charged with crimes.

But the Philippine Constitution bans trials in absentia, and Marcos made it clear he would demand to return from exile in Hawaii and conduct his own defense.

The Philippine military warned civilian authorities that Marcos' thousands of die-hard followers would use the return of their former leader to stage demonstrations and other "destabilization" acts.

Marcos supporters are blamed for some of the six major coup attempts against President Corason Aquino. Several alleged ringleaders, including former Brig. Gen. Jose Maria Zume and former Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabautan, remain at large.

Filipino officials also said they would face a monumental task in preventing Marcos' enemies from assassinating him. That would have raised the horrific specter of a repeat of the Aug. 21, 1983, slaying of Mrs. Aquino's husband, Benigno Aquino Jr., who was killed while under military guard just as he returned from the United States to challenge Marcos' rule.

Following Friday's indictment, Ramon Diaz, former chairman of the Presidential Commission on Good Government, said the American legal moves will save the Philippines a lot of trouble and "achieve what we wanted to do" — retrieve Marcos' alleged stolen riches.

U.S. officials have said any funds proven embezzled would be returned to the rightful owner — presumably the Philippine government.

The dilemma posed by the need to maintain stability and the desire to retrieve Marcos' alleged "ill-gotten wealth" has dogged the Aquino administration since it took office Feb. 25, 1986 after a popular uprising toppled Marcos.

Neighbors saddened by cemetery damage

By Nancy Concelmon
Manchester Herald

If Manchester resident Diane Swanson had her way, the vandals who have been overturning gravestones in East Cemetery lately would "hang by their thumbs."

Nearly 30 stones were overturned in the old section of East Cemetery off Harrison Street Friday night, Floyd Totten, a foreman with the Parks and Cemetery Division said this morning.

"I'm just furious. I'd like to hang them (the vandals) up by their thumbs," Swanson said this morning. "It's just really sad."

Swanson, who lives on Westminster Road, said she's noticed vandalism in the old section of the cemetery off Harrison Street since July 4, but Totten said vandalism of the stones happens all the time in other parts of town and all over the state. A couple of years ago, 165 stones were overturned in East Cemetery, he said.

"This is an ongoing thing," Totten said.

The old section of the East Cemetery is the hardest hit by vandals because more people walk through it and it's enclosed by trees. The newer section of the cemetery is more open, Totten said.

Swanson said she and her neighbors have complained to the Parks and Cemetery Division and police. Totten and Swanson said police do patrol the area.

Manchester police spokesman Gary Wood said today he does not know anything about the vandalism.

But no fences have been put up around the cemetery because they "wouldn't do any good anyway," Totten said.

"You can't catch them (the

Police Roundup

Car fished from pond
A Manchester man was arrested on drunken driving charges Saturday after he lost control of his car and drove it into an Irving Street Pond, police said.
Jeff W. Pete, 23, of 97 Mather St. was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, police said. Three people in the car left the scene and only one 24-year-old woman returned to identify herself, police said.
None of the passengers were taken to the hospital, according to the police report.
Pete told police he was driving north on Irving Street when one of the passengers told him to turn right, according to the report. He turned and ended up on the lawn of an apartment complex, had trouble driving on the wet grass and the car ended up in the pond, police said. The vehicle was later removed from the pond.
Pete is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Nov. 1.

GETTING OUT THE VOTE — Democratic Rep. James R. McCavanagh, who represents Manchester's 12th Assembly District, marks off the names and numbers as he calls voters on a recent evening at the Democratic Headquarters on Main Street. McCavanagh is running unopposed this year.

McCavanagh appeals to both political parties

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

Campaign '88: 12th Assembly District

Democratic Rep. James R. McCavanagh, who is seeking his fourth term in the Legislature, likes to think that his strong representation of Manchester is what makes him appealing to both Democrats and Republicans.

In fact, that strong representation may be why local Republicans were unable to find someone to challenge him this year for the 12th Assembly District seat.

He won the endorsement of Nathan G. Agostinelli, a former Republican mayor, even before it became clear that the local GOP would not be able to put up a candidate against him. Other local Republicans have hardly a bad word to say about him.

"When I'm in there, I represent the whole town of Manchester," McCavanagh said recently. "I like to think that that reason is the reason why (the Republicans) did not come up with a candidate."

McCavanagh, 48, is a lifelong resident of Manchester. He owns his own real estate company, the James R. McCavanagh Agency, on East Center Street. He served on the town Board of Directors from 1979 to 1982 and was elected in 1982 to the House of Representatives.

John T. Garzide, the Republican town chairman, admitted that McCavanagh has done a pretty good job of representing the 12th Assembly District. The district comprises Manchester Voting Districts 1, 2, 5, 7 and 10.

"In his particular district, he's a formidable opponent, and he would have been extremely difficult to beat," Garzide said.

He added that there were Republicans willing to run against McCavanagh, but not this year.

For a short time, McCavanagh actually did have a challenger in Donald K. Kuehl, the former GOP town chairman. But Kuehl, who announced his candidacy at the last minute, eventually bowed out because of business commitments.

Fellow legislators say that in the last session McCavanagh gained clout in the General Assembly through his "Moderate Caucus" of Democratic legislators. He formed the group at the beginning of the 1987 session as an antidote to what he saw as the liberal bent of many of his fellow Democrats.

He has become known for his work on the Judiciary Committee, where he has pushed for stronger penalties against those in the legal field who are convicted of felonies. He also serves on the Public Safety Committee and the Substance Abuse Committee.

In the past session, the Legislature passed a bill McCavanagh drafted that would prevent attorneys convicted of Class A and Class B felonies from practicing law for a period of from five to seven years. Also in the last session, at McCavanagh's initiative, the Legislature approved the bonding of $400,000 to help pay for renovations to Manchester's historic Cheney Hall.

McCavanagh said that judicial reform is an issue that interests him greatly. But there are other issues he's concerned about, including the budget, day care and the protection of underground water supplies.

He said that in light of the projected $121 million state deficit, current programs in the budget should be reviewed to determine which are expendable. Asked whether the Democratic majority could be held responsible for the shortfall, McCavanagh answered that changes in the federal tax laws in 1986 had an

Race for Senate is neck and neck

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Three-term Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., the renegade Republican who was thrust into the national spotlight during Watergate, confidently predicted 10 months ago that his re-election victory this year would be the biggest win of his political life.

Now, Democrats and the latest independent poll are saying that Weicker is in the biggest and closest battle of his political life. In more than 2 1/2 decades, Weicker has never lost an election.

In just over two weeks, he faces Democrat Joseph I. Lieberman, Connecticut's popular attorney general who was the No. 1 vote-getter in 1982 and No. 2 in 1986 among Democrats running statewide.

He is by far the best-financed challenger Weicker has had.

A poll by the University of Connecticut, released last week, showed the race a dead heat. Weicker and Lieberman each had 39 percent, with the remaining 22 percent undecided.

Weicker promptly labeled the poll conducted by The Hartford Courant an aberration, noting that other independent polls conducted shortly before had him leading by 10 points or more.

Lieberman said the Connecticut poll simply confirmed what he has been saying all along, that he was within striking distance of the incumbent.

Weicker is a millionaire from the "Gold Coast" Connecticut town of Greenwich. The outspoken Weicker sharply contrasts with Lieberman, who has difficulty getting himself worked up.

An Orthodox Jew, Lieberman did not campaign during this summer's convention because it was held on a Saturday and he was observing the Sabbath.

Weicker is known for his frequent bashing of President Reagan, and Republicans in general — particularly Richard Nixon — ranging from his opposition to a balanced budget amendment to his condemnation of U.S. raids on Libya and Grenada.

His string of successes in Connecticut is largely attributed to his appeal to the state's 550,000 unaffiliated voters. Democrats in Connecticut outnumber Republicans about 3-2, 650,000 to 430,000.

The senator has also shown broader appeal among traditionally Democratic groups, winning endorsements this year from the Connecticut State AFL-CIO and Connecticut Freeze Voter, a nuclear arms freeze group.

Lieberman shrugged off such developments, saying those kinds of endorsements would more probably than not go to an incumbent.

During his six years as attorney general, Lieberman has styled himself as a "people's lawyer" who goes after polluters and car dealers who tamper with odometers. On the stump, he never fails to launch a polemic against grocery chains in a conspiracy to eliminate double coupons.

He churns out press releases by the ton, and his attorneys have given his office, as well as from his campaign office.

As Lieberman has narrowed the gap — he was trailing at one point by 24 points — the campaign has become increasingly shrill.

Lieberman is running TV commercials depicting Weicker as a bear who sleeps through important Senate votes.

Lieberman claims Weicker's 90 percent attendance record is among the worst in the Senate. Weicker says 90 percent "is an A in anybody's book."

At week's end, Weicker raised questions about Lieberman's own attendance record during his 10 years in the state Senate.

Weicker has just begun airing an ad that features Lieberman himself singing Weicker's praises at a 1986 testimonial. The spot ends with the announcer saying, "If Lieberman believes what he says, he'll vote for Weicker."

The two men have already set a spending record for a Connecticut Senate campaign. Lieberman's raised about $1.8 million to Weicker's $2.2 million, according to finance reports issued this month. They're expected to have spent another million between them before the election.

A Yale and University of Virginia law school graduate, Weicker began his political career in the early 1960s, winning a seat in 1962 in the state House of Representatives. He also served as first selectman in Greenwich before being elected to Congress in 1966. He was re-elected in 1968.

In 1970, Weicker won the Senate race because of a deep rift in the Democratic Party. Sen. Thomas J. Dodd had failed to win the Democratic nomination after being censured by the Senate for improperly spending campaign funds. Dodd ran as an independent, drawing enough votes away from Joseph Duffy, the endorsed Democratic candidate, to give Weicker.

In 1976, he easily defeated Democrat Gloria Schaffer, then the incumbent, in the race for the Senate.

By 1982, many conservatives in the GOP had had it with Weicker's maverick ways and they got Prescott S. Bush, brother of the late President, to challenge him for the nomination. Bush qualified for a primary at the party convention, but then dropped out of the race.

That fall, Weicker faced Democrat Toby Moffett, then a congressman from Connecticut's 6th District. Moffett came within 46,000 votes of winning.

This year, Weicker didn't have an intraparty challenge.

Lieberman graduated from Yale and Yale Law School and was elected to the Connecticut Senate in 1970. After a decade there, he made an unsuccessful bid for Congress in 1980.

He has been an attorney general in 1982 and was re-elected in 1986.

If he loses this Senate bid, he remains attorney general. He has frequently talked about his desire to be governor, but has said he won't run as long as Gov. William O.'Neill wants the job. O'Neill indicated he will run again in 1990.

The Bucksleys, who drew a few laughs at the Republican National Convention this summer in New Orleans when they announced their endorsement of Democrat Joseph I. Lieberman in the race for Weicker's Senate seat, have a new ally in the Legislature.

Francilla L. Buckley of Sharon, the committee treasurer and sister of National Review editor William F. Buckley Jr. and former Sen. James Buckley said $1,000 has gone to Lieberman and another $200 was split up among four Connecticut congressional candidates in Connecticut.

The family plans on spending the remaining $2,500 on local newspaper ads attacking Weicker, she said.

Buckley said the family did not solicit contributions, but said small donations were received from "people around the country who have been offended by Lowell Weicker."

She said contributions have slowed to a trickle, adding that the family expected to receive about $1,000 and "were rather astonished to get three times that amount."

The feud between Weicker, a leader of the liberal wing of the party, and the Bucksleys, who represent the conservative branch of the GOP, began long before the 1988 Senate race.

The Bucksleys accuse Weicker of being a far-out liberal who would be a Republican.

Weicker counters that the Bucksleys represent an ultra-conservative extremism that is dangerous to the GOP.

"The conservatives of that ilk don't want a Republican Party with a broad base," Weicker said in an interview earlier this month. "They want a narrow party such as their Conservative Party."

"They obviously look at Lowell Weicker as frustrating that end, and believe me, they get out there and do their hatchet job as best they can because they don't care about the Republican Party. They care about their ultra-conservative principles, be damned with the party," the senator said.

CAMPAIGN NOTEBOOK

Thompson raises more

State Rep. John Thompson, D-Manchester, received election campaign contributions of $4,587 by Oct. 6 and his Republican opponent, Susan Buckno, had received $4,035, reports filed with the secretary of the state House.

They are seeking election to the state House of Representatives from Manchester's 13th Assembly District.

The Thompson report shows individual contributions of $1,750 and committee contributions of $2,200, with $637 from other sources.

The Buckno report lists individual contributions of $2,215 and a committee contribution of $1,000 from the Republican Women's Club, with $820 from other sources.

Mary Sears, treasurer for the Thompson campaign, said the Buckno report listed no contributions from political action committees.

Committees are listed among the contributors to the Thompson campaign. The Connecticut State Police Union and the Democratic Town Committee, and $250 each from the political action committees of the Connecticut State Employees Association, the Connecticut State Police Union and the Greater Hartford Labor Council.

The reports indicated Thompson has spent $1,348 by Oct. 6, leaving him a balance of $3,239. Buckno had spent $1,102, leaving a balance of $2,933.

The major expense for both was advertising in the Manchester Herald, with Thompson's figure at $1,000 and Buckno's at $653.

Women's forum slated

State Rep. J. Peter Fusca is sponsoring a forum entitled "Women in Politics. Making a Difference" with U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., of the 6th Congressional District as keynote speaker. It will be held Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to noon in Congras Auditorium, St. Joseph College, Hartford. Admission is free.

Those interested should make reservations by calling 289-6522.

Profis give endorsement

Democratic State Rep. John Thompson has been endorsed for re-election by the political committee of the Connecticut State University Professors.

In a news release, Professor David Walsh, chairman of the faculty committee, said Thompson should prove to be an energetic legislator and effective advocate for the needs of public higher education.

Thompson, who represents the 13th Assembly District in Manchester, is opposed by Republican Susan Buckno.

Prague lists endorsements

State Rep. Edith Prague, D-Columbia, seeking re-election in the 8th Assembly District has won endorsements from 13 organizations, according to a news release.

She is opposed by Republican Timothy Scott in the district, composed of Coventry, Columbia, Bezzant, Franklin and Lebanon.

The organizations that have endorsed Prague are the Justice for All Political Committee, a new committee composed of crime victims; the Connecticut Hospital Association; the Connecticut Nurses Political Action Committee; the Committee for an Effective Legislature; the Connecticut State University chapter of the American Association of University Professors; the University of Connecticut chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Also, the Association of Retired Teachers of Connecticut; the Connecticut Education Association; the Hartford County Retired Teachers Association; the Legislative Electoral Action Program, the Connecticut Optometrists; the Committee on Political Education of the Connecticut AFL-CIO; the Connecticut State Employees Association; and the Independent Insurance Agents.

Welcker hits Lieberman

HARTFORD (AP) — Republican U.S. Sen. Lowell Weicker says it's time to look at the General Assembly attendance record of Democratic challenger Joseph Lieberman, whose campaign staff is welcoming the examination.

"What's good for the goose is sauce for the gander," Weicker said Sunday. "If my opponent insists on trivializing the issues in this campaign by focusing instead on attendance records and the like, then the time has come for my opponent's own record to be put forth."

The Lieberman campaign has said Weicker has missed more than 300 votes in the U.S. Senate, including some he missed while making speeches for which he was paid.

Weicker's campaign says Lieberman had the worst attendance record in the state Senate in 1972 and 1973, missing 22 votes in 1972 and 49 votes in 1973. Lieberman is now the state attorney general.

Quotes were made up

NEW BRITAIN (AP) — Some Democratic leaders got a surprise when they read the campaign literature for 6th District Democratic congressional candidate James Griffin.

Press secretary Keith Griffin, who is no relation to the 6th District candidate, acknowledged Friday that he sent out about 30 press releases to newspapers attributing quotations to Lieberfeld Democratic leaders who never made them.

James Griffin is challenging Republican U.S. Rep. Nancy Johnson.

LOCAL & STATE

Tirozzi to discuss proposal

State Education Commissioner Gerald N. Tirozzi will meet with the Manchester, South Windsor, Glastonbury and East Hartford school boards tonight to discuss his proposal to desegregate Connecticut public schools.

The meeting will be held at 7 at East Hartford Middle School, 777 Burnside Ave.

In January, Tirozzi proposed desegregation measures for Hartford and Bloomfield schools, New Haven schools, Bridgeport schools and New London schools.

Manchester, South Windsor, Glastonbury and East Hartford would be part of a desegregation plan for the Hartford-Bloomfield schools.

The proposal calls for starting state-operated regional schools, which would enroll students from across town boundaries; developing magnet schools to lure white students to city schools and minority students to suburban schools through specialized curricula; and strong state financial incentives to accomplish the goal.

School injury to bring suit

A Manchester woman intends to sue the town for injuries she claims her son, a fifth-grader at Washington School, received during gym class.

Regina Fregau of Manchester and her son, Norman Small, filed a notice of intent to sue the town, the Manchester Board of Education and Washington School Tuesday with the town clerk.

The notice said Small received head, mouth and back injuries and suffered psychological trauma after being pushed to the floor in gym class at Washington School at around 11 a.m. on Sept. 30.

The notice was filed by Hartford attorney Richard P. Tollsano.

Law would protect species

HARTFORD (AP) — There's some help on the way for the bog turtle and the spadefooted toad.

Thomas P. Garrey, executive assistant to state Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Leslie Carothers, said the DEP will propose legislation to the 1989 General Assembly to protect an estimated 500 species of endangered plants and animals, such as bog turtles and spadefooted toads.

"Some of these species have suffered such a decline that they're almost at the point of extinction in Connecticut," Garrey said.

Garrey said it would be the first time the DEP has proposed such legislation since the mid-1970s, when a state endangered species law was scuttled because of a dispute over which wildlife should be considered endangered.

Teacher market drying up

HARTFORD (AP) — Educators say that with teacher salaries continuing to rise and more college students choosing careers in teaching, declining student enrollments mean there are too many for too few jobs in Connecticut.

"It appears we're going to end up with a glut of teachers, and I have to honestly say it's because (teaching) is now more attractive," said Bernice H. Willis, dean of the School of Education at Southern Connecticut State University in New Haven.

Only one of every four people who became licensed to teach during 1986-87 had been hired by public schools by September 1987, according to the state Department of Education.

Hazardous waste collection successful

By Nancy Concelmon
Manchester Herald

The town collected about three times as much hazardous waste during its Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day Saturday than during the collection in 1985.

The collection, held Saturday at the Manchester landfill off Olcott Street, was a "big success," said Conservation Commission Chairman Arthur Glaeser.

About 250 cars visited the landfill Saturday for the collection, compared to about 60 in 1985, he said. The waste was collected by employees of Radiac, a New York City company that specializes in handling hazardous waste.

"We had a steady stream of people," Glaeser said.

Glaeser attributed the success of this year's collection to increased publicity, better timing of publicity and a greater awareness among members of the public of the environmental impact of hazardous materials.

Collectors Saturday took an "enormous amount" of motor oil. Glaeser said. Most of the waste was taken by Radiac to a licensed dumping site since the Manchester landfill cannot accept hazardous waste, but motor oil can be stored at the landfill for recycling because it is hazardous only to groundwater if spilled, Glaeser said.

The town also collected car batteries, gasoline and some pesticides, including a large amount of DDT, Glaeser said.

This year's collection day cost the town about $15,000, 40 percent of which was funded by the state. The money came from the Conservation Commission's budget.

Glaeser said he hopes to hold a collection day next year and every year, if funding is available.

"I'd like to have a collection every year," he said. "I think that would get people in the habit of looking forward to a collection day in October."

HAZARD IN A BOTTLE — Mannequin cleaner was among the items collected Saturday at the town's Household Hazardous Waste Collection day, held at the Manchester landfill off Olcott Street. Employees of Radiac, a New York City firm that specializes in the handling of hazardous waste, collected motor oil, gasoline, ammonia and other hazardous materials for disposal at a licensed facility.

Annual roadside leaf collection is in progress

Manchester's annual roadside leaf collection program began today and will continue into December.

Homeowners are requested to rake their leaves to the edge of their roads, and make certain that the piles contain no foreign objects, such as stones, branches, cans or other material. Residents are also asked to avoid parking any vehicles on the street until the vacuums have passed by to avoid interference with leaf collection.

The refuse contractor will remove up to six bags of leaves weekly during the program. It is suggested that residents not rake leaves out to the road until the scheduled week of removal as they can create traffic hazards and fires. The town map indicates the week each area is scheduled to be cleaned with a weekly road listing.

The streets listed below are scheduled for leaf collection this week:

PZC to vote tonight on site for condos

COVENTRY — The Planning and Zoning Commission will vote tonight whether to approve a site plan for a proposed 260-unit condominium complex to be called Cotswold.

The meeting is at 7:30 p.m. at the Town Office Building.

Stratford developer John F. Bigley wants to build the condos on 129.8 acres of land he owns off Routes 44 and 6 near the Bolton town line.

A wetlands permit is also needed to build a road crossing over a narrow brook at the site.

Plans for the upscale luxury condos include 36 different clusters of condos. The complex may also include walking trails, a swimming pool, a clubhouse, tennis courts, and a small skiing area.

In other matters, the PZC will also vote on a proposal from the University of Connecticut Crew Club to build a boathouse at Patriot's Park. The club has been approved for construction by the town Council last week.

The boathouse will include town bathrooms which are being paid for by a state grant. The state has OK'd the proposal. If the PZC gives the nod, the club must then get approval from the town attorney for the entire plan.

The Race for the White House Duke heads for California; Bush tackling New England

By Robert Green
The Associated Press

George Bush was hoping to distract Michael Dukakis in New England while the Massachusetts Governor went after California's bounty of 47 electoral votes and his supporters claimed GOP campaign tactics were tinged with racism.

The vice president began 15 days of nonstop campaigning today with a trip to Waterville, Conn., Portland, Maine, and Burlington, Vt.

Although the states are relatively poor in electoral votes, Bush campaign officials said they leads in all three states and his presence in the Northeast will force Dukakis to devote time and money in an area that should otherwise belong to him.

"We're taking his base away from him," said Bush spokesman Mark Gotsdiner.

Dukakis was spending the entire day in California, including stops in Los Angeles and San Francisco, in pursuit of that crucial state's 47 electoral votes.

Dukakis, stopping Sunday night in Eau Claire, Wis., attacked the Republican ticket for what he called its "steady stream of distortion and misrepresentation."

Although Dukakis didn't mention it, campaign vice chairman John Sasso said the candidate agreed with assertions by running mates Lloyd Bentsen and black leader Jesse Jackson that there were racist overtones to some Bush tactics.

Bentsen told a television interviewer he thought the Bush campaign was making a racist appeal by focusing on Willie Horton Jr., a black convict who was sent to an Ohio prison from a Massachusetts prison in 1987. Horton stabbed a white Maryland man and raped the

Both campaigns loose with facts

WASHINGTON (AP) — To hear George Bush tell it, Democrat Michael Dukakis is against every new weapons system "since the slingshot." From the Dukakis perspective, Bush was winking and nodding while Panama's Manuel Antonio Noriega went wild dealing drugs.

Schneider said the candidates "are careful about outright lying," but that in an era of complex issues, the advertisements and campaign slogans "become more and more simplified."

For instance, Dukakis ads cast Bush "personally cast the tie-breaking vote to cut Social Security benefits."

But in reality, that 1985 vote by Bush as vice president was not to cut Social Security, but to temporarily freeze Social Security cost-of-living increases as part of a budget deal with Congress. Dukakis, as a member of the National Governors' Conference, had voted in favor of the same thing as part of a package of economic recommendations. But Dukakis said he had first sought unsuccessfully to exempt Social Security from the federal budget freeze.

U.S. voter turnout

More than 100 million Americans voted in the 1984 presidential election, roughly 60 percent of the voting-age population. By contrast, 76 million of a possible 110.6 million voted in 1984, a 69 percent turnout.

State is '88 presidential battleground

HARTFORD (AP) — Four years ago, it got to be something of an embarrassment for Gov. William A. O'Neill as reporters badgered him almost daily about when Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale was going to visit Connecticut to campaign.

But like the absent character in Samuel Beckett's play "Waiting for Godot," Mondale never arrived. He effectively conceded the state to President Reagan and ended up getting battered here by more than 300,000 votes.

This year, the state has turned into a presidential battleground. Democrat Michael S. Dukakis last week made his third trip to the state since being nominated. Not to be outdone, Republican George Bush is scheduled to make his third visit to Connecticut today. Campaign aides say Dukakis could be back before Election Day Nov. 8.

The apparent interest in Connecticut seems to reflect a feeling by both candidates that it's important for them to make the state, partly because each claims it as home turf.

Dukakis is governor in neighboring Massachusetts. Bush grew up in Greenwich and graduated from Yale University. His father, Prescott Bush Sr. represented the state in the U.S. Senate and his brother, Prescott Jr., sought the Republican Senate nomination six years ago.

The psychological importance of winning at home exceeds the significance of the state's eight electoral votes, out of the 272 needed for victory, according to Morton Tenzer, a political scientist at the University of Connecticut.

"If he doesn't win a state like Connecticut, it would indicate that he isn't going to win anywhere in the United States other than Massachusetts," Tenzer said. "If Dukakis were from Illinois, one would expect nothing."

Connecticut has been good to both candidates in the past. Bush narrowly defeated Ronald Reagan in the state's Republican presidential primary in 1980, although he ultimately lost the nomination to Reagan.

Dukakis got the neighborhood boost he needed in the state's Democratic presidential primary in March, when he easily defeated the Rev. Jesse Jackson. The much needed victory came soon after Dukakis lost the Michigan primary to Jackson, a loss that raised questions about his ability to secure the nomination.

Political analysts are uncertain what effect the "friends and neighbors" factor — as Tenzer calls it — will have on the election in Connecticut, because Dukakis and Bush are both portraying themselves as sons of the state — an adopted son, in Dukakis' case.

"If you're looking at the home-state question... both get a little edge," said Everett Ladd, director of the Institute for Social Inquiry at the University of Connecticut. But "it doesn't give either one a decisive advantage."

John F. Kennedy ran well in Connecticut in 1960 — defeating Richard Nixon by nearly 100,000 votes — partly because of the friends and neighbors effect, Tenzer said.

The problem for Dukakis is that he doesn't have the Kennedy charisma, and many Connecticut residents think of Bush as one of their own, even though some say he has downplayed his preppy past in order to portray himself as a machine from his adopted state.

Clyde McKee of the Trinity College, however, said that while Bush's Connecticut connections may be important in wealthy Fairfield County, they may not mean that much in other parts of the state, particularly around Hartford and in eastern Connecticut.

NATION & WORLD

Residents are evacuated

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government declared a state of emergency and evacuated residents from flood-prone coastal areas in the path of a tropical storm that re-emerged in the Pacific today after killing 111 people as an Atlantic hurricane.

In Nicaragua, the storm killed at least 50 people and left 300,000 homeless as it crossed the Central American isthmus, its 125 mph winds weakening to tropical storm status along the way.

But the storm gained strength over the warm waters of the Pacific. Forecasters gave what had been Joan a new name, Miriam, and said it could become the first Atlantic hurricane to gain the same status in the Pacific.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the 100th Congress was one of the most productive congressional sessions in years, it also left behind a lengthy list of unfinished business ranging from cleaning up the nation's air to raising the minimum wage.

"Much remains to be tackled," Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., told his colleagues near the end of the session. "The 101st Congress has some formidable challenges to address."

House Republican Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., agreed. "I think it was quite successful, overall, but there were also some things we didn't get that we would have liked."

Playing taps for forts

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A U.S. commission looking to close obsolete military bases may be about to play taps for Fort Douglas, and politicians say they may be ready to surrender the post built in 1863 to protect stagecoach routes.

Members of Utah's congressional delegation consider the picturesque fort and its Civil War-era buildings a likely target in the Pentagon's quest to shut about two dozen bases. They say they'll have to acquiesce if it can be shown that the move would save money, but some are skeptical that any real savings can be had.

"Our main concern is that they operate from up-to-date, accurate data," said Democratic Rep. Wayne Owens, whose district includes the fort.

Peres claims progress

JERUSALEM (AP) — In a pre-election face-off, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres claimed progress in his peace efforts but Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir accused his rival of seeking Arab support.

Sunday's 30-minute, pre-recorded debate on national television gave the public its only chance to see the two party leaders go at each other face-to-face before the Nov. 1 Parliamentary elections.

Peres, head of the leftist Labor Party, seemed to benefit from the endorsement of his approach to peace talks by Jordan's King Hussein.

It put Shamir, leader of the right-wing Likud Bloc, on the defensive and provided the missing ingredient to Peres' peace proposals: a possible partner.

Rescuers consider airlifting 2 whales

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Two Soviet icebreakers churned toward Barrow to offer help for two trapped whales as rescuers tried to lure the mammals to freedom, but biologists said they may have to airlift the animals to open water.

"We're having a net built right now" to carry them, David Whitrow of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Marine Mammal Laboratory in Seattle said Sunday.

He emphasized that an airlift was the least preferred alternative, to be used only if rescuers fail to coax the California gray whales to open water through a series of freshly cut air holes in the ice.

A third whale, the smallest and the youngest of the mammals trapped in moving ice more than

Typhoon kills 13

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Typhoon Ruby roared across the Philippines today with heavy rain and winds topping 100 mph, triggering mudslides and tidal surges that left thousands homeless. Officials said at least 13 people died.

The government warned of more flooding as the storm approached Manila. At 4 p.m., the storm had sustained winds of 102 mph and its center was moving northwest at 16 mph toward densely populated central Luzon Island.

Reagan appointed more than half of federal judges

By Larry Margosak
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's drive to remake the judiciary in his own conservative image moved fitfully through the 100th Congress, but at session's end, his nominees filled more than half the federal court seats in America.

Reagan lost the bruising battle to send Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court, after senators rejected the nominee's rigid ideological views — especially his opinion that the Constitution does not explicitly grant a right of privacy to the privacy rights of the individual.

But Reagan later won 97-0 confirmation for low-key Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, who may write as conservatively as Bork.

And while Senate Republicans accused Democrats of stalling Reagan's judicial nominees, the president said the 100th Congress confirmed 91 of 110 selections to U.S. courts.

The president has had a long-standing goal of replacing liberal judges with conservatives. His nominees now constitute 384 of the nation's 752 federal judges on full-time status.

To the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the 100th Congress set new standards for scrutiny of judicial nominees.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said his panel sent future presidents the message that senators have the right to go beyond traditional questions about a Supreme Court nominee's character.

"The Senate made clear in the Bork nomination, he said, that it can consider whether a nominee's views are 'philosophically appropriate for the times.'"

Bork was defeated by the Senate, 58-42, in October 1987 after furious campaigns by his supporters and opponents. The battle was fought out on television in committee hearings, paid commercials and floor sessions. But Democrats and Republicans, liberals and conservatives, now agree that the Reagan nominees who were confirmed by the Senate are having a significant impact on the court system.

"It's very difficult for minorities or women to win affirmative action cases when Reagan appointees control the court as they do in many circuits now," said law professor Herman Schwartz.

Bush a member of Skull and Bones

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Skull and Bones, the oldest and most secret senior society at Yale University, boasts many distinguished alumni but none more prominent today than a "spook" from the class of 1948 — George Herbert Walker Bush.

Little is known about the strange rituals and practices of the 156-year-old society, and that's the way its members want it. The rites are rumored to include placing initiates in a coffin and requiring them to plunge naked into a pile of mud.

Some of the rumors come from the former chairman of the San Carlos Apache tribe in Arizona charged recently that Bush's father, Prescott Bush, stole the skull of Apache chief Geronimo years ago, and that it is still on display at Skull and Bones' inner sanctum. That claim was denied by the vice president's brother, Jonathan Bush.

One thing is not disputed: Bush the Bonesman is in powerful company.

The society has long been suspected of ritualistic thefts. A group of history buffs in El Paso, Texas, claimed that the skull referred to in the society's name belongs to Mexican revolutionary Pancho Villa, whose grave was robbed in 1926.

Endicot Davison, a lawyer who says he speaks for Skull and Bones, said the society does not have the skull.

The former chairman of the San Carlos Apache tribe in Arizona charged recently that Bush's father, Prescott Bush, stole the skull of Apache chief Geronimo years ago, and that it is still on display at Skull and Bones' inner sanctum. That claim was denied by the vice president's brother, Jonathan Bush.

One thing is not disputed: Bush the Bonesman is in powerful company.

Brothers of the order have included Henry Stimson, Averell Harriman, Henry Luce, Potter Stewart, McGee Bundy, Archibald MacLeish, William F. Buckley Jr., and William Sloan Coffin Jr.

Prescott Bush, a Republican senator from Connecticut, was a member. So was Bush's oldest son, George W. Bush, and about a half-dozen other family members.

Skull and Bones is arguably the most famous and influential secret society in the United States, having served as a model for others that followed at Yale and other institutions.

It was founded by William Russell, a member of the Yale Class of 1825, apparently in reaction to the stripping of secrecy from Phi Beta Kappa, the honorary scholastic society, during the rise of a national anti-secrecy movement.

Skull and Bones is a private organization incorporated as the Russell Trust Association. It pays taxes to the city of New Haven and owns Deer Island, a resort on the St. Lawrence River.

Voluntary integration of schools

If so-called forced busing isn't acceptable to achieve racial integration of Connecticut schools, how about trying voluntary busing? Or an open enrollment plan? Some acceptable state initiatives should be developed soon to get the state off its dead-end condition of de facto school segregation. A certain number of parents of all races and national origins are willing to send their children out of their neighborhoods to achieve integration. They understand that their children aren't getting a complete education in segregated schools that do not reflect the diverse nature of American society. Schools in large Connecticut cities with 80 percent minority enrollment or almost 100 percent majority enrollment must have the ability to understand and relate to those who are "different."

The problem has been kicked around with hardly any progress for many years in this state. When this was pointed out by state Education Commissioner Gerald N. Tirozzi, it stirred a tempest. Playing on parent fears, some politicians sounded the call of "forced busing." This caused other politicians to put off action as long as possible.

Hardly anything has been undertaken to integrate Connecticut's schools. The least that should be done is to encourage those parents who want integrated schools for their children. The state and communities, working together, perhaps can enable them to gain their choice. Certainly it is things such as an individual's energy, their intelligence and their ability to relate to people and to deal with their problems; these are the things which will mark a truly outstanding state representative.

It is because Susan Buckno has all of these qualities that she is, and so many others, are backing Susan for state representative. Manchester deserves a state representative as good as Susan Buckno. The Cambridge plan, known as "controlled choice," features open enrollment and teacher-controlled schools. It's based on the theory that schools would have incentive to improve if their enrollments depended upon parental choice. It has become a model for plans in Fall River, Lowell and New Bedford in Massachusetts and cities outside of the Bay State. A report of the Yankee Institute contends that widespread parental choice would encourage schools to develop a wide range of courses and teaching styles. Some of those schools could feature integrated student bodies. These institutions could receive state aid to bolster their programs on the ground that they are working to achieve an important state educational goal, integration.

Another year shouldn't go by without a state program that can make a dent in the chronic problem of school segregation. The least the state can do is make satisfactory arrangements for those parents who are anxious to have their youngsters attend integrated schools without sacrificing quality of education. Start school desegregation by accommodating parents whose sense of security isn't undermined by the idea of sending their children outside the traditional neighborhood. Do this successfully and you may overcome the doubts and fears of other parents.

Balladeer's songs bring hope to farmers

TEKAMAH, Neb. — Rita Hennig is an aspiring balladeer and songwriter with a singular air of interest. She writes and sings about the lives and customs of the rural people of the nation — family farmers, in particular, whom she believes are the world's noble souls, coping as they must with adversity.

"Now gather 'round people, get a story for you to hear, / The Great American Farmer is endangered I fear, / We can't seem to find a way, the impossible debt to pay, / And the grain imports are getting bigger every day."

Hennig is deeply acquainted with the subject. She was born on a farm and eventually married a farmer as well. She says she knows what it is to work around the sun to coax food from the earth, and to worry through the night whether the effort is worth it. She knows success, in other words, and failure.

"One year things went very bad," she says. "So bad that I had to go to the welfare department to apply for food stamps. Well, they just treated me like dirt. I got so mad that it changed my life. I figured if they did it to me, they did it to others, and I decided to start taking care of the farm people on my own."

She has since become something of a rural revolutionary. She is dedicated — in song and deed — to the betterment of country people. #### Buckno would be truly outstanding

To the Editor:

What makes a good state representative? Certainly, how many different political positions one may have held in the past doesn't tell us what sort of state representative that person will be. Certainly it is things such as an individual's energy, their intelligence and their ability to relate to people and to deal with their problems; these are the things which will mark a truly outstanding state representative.

It is because Susan Buckno has all of these qualities that she is, and so many others, are backing Susan for state representative.

Manchester deserves a state representative as good as Susan Buckno.

Badminton group seeking players

To the Editor:

As part of its 50th birthday program, the Connecticut Badminton Association is attempting to identify the state's indoor badminton players, including those who may not be current participants. If any reader has played in Connecticut, knows of a former player, or wants to start an exciting (and economical) lifetime sport, please contact me. Since badminton was included in the 1988 Olympics, we expect and encourage increased participation at the many recreational badminton clubs associated with the CBA.

Glasnost pioneers
The new press freedom that came with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's glasnost began in part with two editors from opposite sides of the cold war — Vitaly Korotich of the Soviet mass-circulated magazine "Ogonyok," and Walter Anderson of the American Sunday supplement "Parade."

In his new book, "The Greatest Risk of All," Anderson writes: "In a series of bold and dramatic moves, (Korotich) published several provocative and critical articles previously banned by the authorities, and stretching the limits of glasnost, introduced investigative reporting to the Soviet press. Quickly 'Ogonyok' became the Soviet Union's most sought publication."

Next time someone tells you that state lotteries are good for the public welfare, look closely. That person is one of the few who has made money through the lotteries. New evidence of the subtle effect turned up in California recently where a survey of high-school students showed a 50 percent increase in the number of students who gamble since the introduction of the California lottery.

Lotteries, like any other form of gambling, prey on the people who can least afford to play. The twisted logic of the 1980s is that some lottery revenues should be used to pay for treatment programs for compulsive gamblers — a sort of like drug dealers paying to treat junkies. Everybody feels better, but the result is a wash.

Hussein's assessment

The always outspoken King Hussein of Jordan has made an unflattering assessment of President Reagan. The CIA picked up on remarks Hussein made privately in which the king made it clear he was glad to see Reagan go. He thinks Reagan has squandered an opportunity for peace in the Middle East and Hussein has little confidence that George Bush or Michael Dukakis will do any better.

Billboard bust

Special-interest groups usually find the end of a congressional session to be fruitful. Legislation files fast and loose as the members of Congress try to wrap up the session and get home to campaign for re-election. But the usually successful billboard lobby didn't find the going easy this time. Billboard companies were pushing a bill to make it harder for cities to cut the use of billboard eyesores.

Proponents of the bill tried to attach it to two other bills without success. Opponents claim the billboard lobby has worn out its welcome on Capitol Hill. Heavy contributions and old-fashioned schmoozing aren't enough. Rep. Butcher, R-Pa., has been doing most of the legwork on the billboard, according to our sources. In the past two years, Butcher has received almost $1,000 in speaking fees from the billboard industry.

Mixed blessing

The recent announcement that the Soviets will allow a permanent Voice of America bureau in Moscow is a mixed blessing. The ability to reach the Soviets with a message from the West is good news. The track record of State Department meddling with the message is bad news. We hope this opportunity to be a part of glasnost is not marred by diplomats who let their political agenda get in the way of the free flow of information.

Mini-editorial

It's bad enough that the Japanese are better than the rest of the world at making stereos, cars and computers. Now it looks like they're better at an even more important job — staying alive. Japan recently boasted that its women have the longest life expectancy of any people in the world — 81 years. That's a remarkable step up from the 54 years at the end of World War II. The only thing standing in the way of 90 years is a cure for cancer, heart disease and strokes. We wouldn't put it past the Japanese to take care of that.

Rita Hennig says rural people have to act together to save their way of life. The alternative may not be acceptable. She tells of friends who are suicidal, and farmers who threaten to kill their bankers. If the troubled times in the country are not eased, she goes on, those could be the songs she sings tomorrow.

Buyer must identify a spun odometer

DEAR BRUCE: I recently bought a used car that had very low mileage (which is why I bought it!) I now have reason to suspect that the odometer has been tampered with. As you know, this is a federal crime. The problem is, how do I prove it?

Smart Money

D.T., HOUSTON
DEAR D.T.: My experts tell me that a very close examination by a knowledgeable mechanic can determine if an odometer has been spun. In the absence of such a mechanic, go to your state motor vehicle department and see back the ownership of the vehicle.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My mother was 90 when she had cancer surgery. She was given Haldol nightly for 18 days. Could this have had anything to do with her grand mal seizure and stroke?

DEAR READER: Probably not. Haldol is a tranquilizer used for the management of psychotic disorders: behavioral problems characterized by confusion, belligerency, over-activity and poor reality-testing. Stroke has not been reported with use of the drug. Seizures are an extremely unusual side effect.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your recent column about jack itch brought back memories. My husband switched from nylon to cotton briefs. "Huggies" to "swing-frees," one soap to another and still no relief. Then we started running all his underwear through the rinse cycle twice, and that solved the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have two turtles who are losing their toenails. Could I get salmonella from the pet?

DEAR READER: I am not a turtle doctor, so I think you should ask a veterinarian about the salmonella issue. It's my understanding that turtles like "swing-frees," one soap to another and still no relief. Then we started running all his underwear through the rinse cycle twice, and that solved the problem.

Social Security gives benefit information

In the next few days, the Social Security Administration will announce how much a beneficiary of Social Security will receive this year in a cost-of-living increase. The total increase is expected to fall between 3.8 and 4 percent. It will go into effect Jan. 1.

Sylvia Porter

You also can find out what your monthly benefit would be if you retire at age 65, age 70, or an earlier age that you specify. And the Social Security statement will list survivors' and disability benefits as well.

How do you get this information? It couldn't be simpler. You must fill out a form, SSA-706, to ensure that unauthorized people aren't trying to gather your account information. You can use a special toll-free telephone number (1-800-897-2000) to request the form, which is also available at local Social Security offices. Or you may request it from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81069. Once the form is sent in, Social Security will put together your account statement, which you will receive in two to three weeks.

Composer has heart attack

OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Mikis Theodorakis, the Greek composer-politician whose works include "Zorba the Greek," has suffered a heart attack, but the attack was life threatening, organizers of his Belgian tour say.

Theodorakis, 63, was on a nine-day tour of Belgium and his last concert had been scheduled for Saturday in Ostend but was canceled.

Token of thanks given

DETROIT (AP) — Pop star Michael Jackson says his $125,000 donation to the Motown Museum is a token of thanks to the man who gave him his start — Berry Gordy Jr.

Jackson also donated three items from his personal collection to the museum — a trademark glove, a hat and a uniform he wore when he was 13 and performing with the Jackson Five, said museum spokesman Lee Solters.

"I'm very happy and proud to be back to the soil from which I came," Jackson said Sunday. "Berry Gordy is the man that made it all possible for me. I want to say thank you, Berry, and I love you."

Battling a disability

NEW YORK (AP) — Novelist Harold Robbins, whose pulp novels have sold more than 500 million copies, was living like one of his own high-relling protagonists when a bathroom accident left him unable to walk.

Now, 3½ years and more than $1 million in medical bills later, Robbins is doing daily battle with his disability. He also has finished his 19th novel, a loosely autobiographical work called, "The Storyteller," according to this week's People magazine.

Stepping out of the shower, he tripped on a 4-inch-high splash panel and struck his head on a marble counter, sliding across the floor and striking the toilet bowl with such force that he knocked it off its pipes. Doctors told him that his hip had been shattered and his right fractured.

Burns writes about Gracie

NEW YORK (AP) — George Burns, who for years urged his wife and partner in comedy Gracie Allen to "Say goodnight, Gracie," still has something to say to her 24 years after her death.

At 92, he has collaborated with ghostwriter David Fisher on the book, "Gracie: A Love Story," due out next week.

"I have to be honest. I was a lousy lover," Burns writes. "But Gracie married me for laughs, not for sex. Of course, she got both of them — when we had sex, she laughed." In 1964, when the heart disease that had plagued her for years finally took Gracie's life, Burns was inconsolable. For a time, Burns says, "things were very, very bad for me. My life was Gracie."

His life eventually turned around, but he still visits her grave monthly in Glendale, Calif., bringing flowers and conversation.

"I talk to her," Burns says in this week's issue of People magazine. "I tell her what I'm doing." A royal family life

NEW YORK (AP) — As he nears his 40th birthday, the Prince of Wales appears to be settling into a normal Royal Family family life — largely apart from his family, says People magazine.

The warmth of the early married years of Prince Charles and his wife, Diana, which surprised some after what many saw as a rather businesslike match, has chilled and boredom has set in, the magazine said in this week's edition.

Moreover, the report said, Charles — heir to the British throne — no longer shows the doting interest in his sons — Prince William, 6, and Prince Harry, 4.

Charles' birthday is Nov. 14.

said, responding to charges by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Rev. Jesse Jackson and others. "It's absolutely ridiculous and everybody sees this as an embarrassing kind of move, basing it on one ad."

The Democrats had accused the GOP nominee of inflaming racial fears by emphasizing the Horton case, which has been a favorite Bush theme in speeches and television commercials charging that Dukakis is soft on crime.

A Republican Party campaign flyer mailed recently to several hundred thousand New Yorkers featured a photograph of Horton, who now is imprisoned in Maryland where the woman's rape and the slaying of her fiancé occurred.

"I stand fully behind these ads, and at the last minute — those ads have been on a long, long time — for some concerted effort with all these people going out saying the same thing, I mean people see this for what it is — a campaign tactic. I stand 100 percent behind those ads. I think the American people are smart," Bush said.

Bush, who considers Connecticut one of his home states, leads Dukakis 46 percent to 36 percent in Connecticut, with the remainder undecided, according to the latest poll for the Hartford Courant done by the University of Connecticut. The poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent.

J. Brian Gaffney, Bush's Connecticut co-chairman, said the vice president probably wanted to hit Connecticut one more time because it is one of about 18 states targeted by Dukakis as crucial to an Election Day victory in Connecticut.

The vice president campaigned twice in Connecticut last month, stopping in Norwalk and Hartford. Bush had earlier visited Connecticut, Bush grew up in Greenwich and went to Yale.

Bush was headed for rallies here today in Hartford, Meriden and Burlington, Vt., as he began a final, non-stop stretch of campaigning that will take him to California and back to Washington.

None of the states on today's electoral votes needed to win the White House. Of the 270 needed for victory, Connecticut offers only eight, Maine has four and Vermont has three.

However, Bush's strategists consider it a good investment of time because it could weaken Dukakis on his home turf and force him to devote time and resources in an area that should belong to him.

With Dukakis trailing in the polls, "he's got to fight a multi-front war," said Mark Godin, a spokesman for Bush. "He needs every vote at this point."

"It's now a strategy of locking him out," said Godin. "We're taking his base away from him."

about the bodies flown back from the Jim Jones suicides in Guyana," said Detective Everett Hairston, who has been on the case since the five were first reported missing.

"Now we just hope that someday someone will call about them," he said.

The five all hung around together that summer and several of them had grown up in the same neighborhood, Hairston said. He said they were "basically good kids, not rowdy, and they had fairly stable home lives."

Before Mrs. Johnson and the families of the other four teenagers decided to stop granting interviews on the subject, she said that "the only thing that keeps me going is God almighty. But every time I sit down for my dinner I get full thinking about my son and thinking maybe he's starving."

She said she especially misses him around 9 p.m., "when I could always hear the basketball bouncing, bouncing, bouncing as he walked home from the park."

Shooting baskets at West Side Park was the last place anyone saw all five of the boys together that day, Hairston said. They were picked up by Lee Anthony Evans, a handyman who often hired the teen-agers to help him with odd jobs.

Evans told police he dropped the boys off on a street corner near an ice cream parlor. Later that night, Michael McDowell returned to his home in East Orange and changed clothes, hopping back into a waiting pickup truck with at least one other boy inside.

That was the last confirmed sighting of any of the five, Hairston said. Evans, known to the teen-agers as Big Man, was exhaustedly investigated. "We followed him for a few months, but he didn't turn up. He disappeared, and he came up clean."

Hairston said he has run through every hypothetical situation he could come up with. If they had stolen a car and crashed into a river, for instance, the bodies would likely have been found by now. If they had robbed a bank or ended up in prison, there would have been a record.

The same applies for military enlistment. He's checked with police in Atlanta and Chicago, where mass murderers took young victims. Still no trace.

Marcos

In June, Swiss authorities made clear they would not lift banking secrecy laws covering Marcos' alleged secret accounts in Switzerland in the absence of a criminal case.

For years, the Philippine government struggled to find a solution to the dilemma.

In 1987, Solicitor General Francisco Chavez proposed the government ask the United States to allow the Philippine anti-corruption court to try Marcos in Hawaii, where he fled after the 1985 uprising.

U.S. officials successfully lobbied strongly against the plan. American sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they urged Filipino authorities not to make a formal request because it would surely be rejected to the embarrassment of both governments.

Officials also considered holding the trial at a remote resort on the Bataan peninsula, which could be sealed off.

But that scheme too was scrapped because it would surely have raised charges by Marcos supporters that the government was conducting the same "secret trial" for which the former president was condemned.

Mrs. Aquino has said repeatedly her government will eventually file charges against Marcos. The government has filed 39 civil suits against Marcos to recover $1.8 billion in damages, but no trial dates have been set.

Diaz told The Associated Press that in June, military Chief of Staff Gen. Renato de Villa recommended no charges be filed until at least the first three months of 1989 to avoid risking political instability by a Marcos return.

Totten was on his way up to the cemetery this morning to copy down names on the stones so he could notify family members of the damage. Repairs to the stones or new stones are usually covered by homeowner's insurance, he said.

Swanson said that some of the neighbors have even taken to trying to fix the damage themselves.

"I've talked to my neighbors and they say they've tried to put them up," she said.

She said she especially felt badly for the families of those buried underneath the toppled stones.

"It's more sad than anything that people (vandals) could do that," she said.

Racial equality in schools, the state budget deficit and the presidential race were among the issues debated this morning at Manchester High School by state senate candidates Michael Meotti and Carl Zinsser.

Zinsser said he supported a balanced budget amendment. "We're going to have to do something," he said.

Neither he nor Barton could say where the fire originated or what the source of it was.

Barton said that the fire burned off the roof of the raised-ranch house. He said that a portion of the house was burned down to the floor. The part of the house still standing has been boarded up, he said.

The fire is considered suspicious, Barton said, because the house was vacant and because there was no electricity in the house that could have caused the fire.

"(A fire) normally can't start by itself," Barton said.

Zinsser, who said he had originally supported Bob Dole of Kansas, who lost in the primaries to Bush, said Bush has more experience in the crucial area of foreign policy. "George Bush has a deeper feeling for foreign policy," he said.

Meotti said that while he supported Dukakis, he was "frustrated" that the Massachusetts governor could not seem to get his message across to the people.

St. Bridget expands, upgrades its school

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

St. Bridget Church is planning a $500,000 expansion and upgrading of the parish's elementary school through eighth grade.

So far, about $200,000 has been pledged by parishioners and school parents in donations to pay for the project, Agostini said.

Bolton architect Alan C. Wiedie, who has drawn up plans for the expansion, said that two new classrooms would be built in the two bays of a garage at the north end of the school building, while a third classroom would be partitioned off in the existing main purpose room. A "multi-purpose building," which will be located south of the school, will provide storage for the school and the church.

As part of the project, work also will be done in the school to bring it up to current safety and building codes.

Perrone hoping for NFL career

Begins dream in Italy

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

From Manchester to Amherst to Italy in the NFL?

That's quite a circuitous route, but one Vito Perrone is going to have to follow if the Manchester native hopes to fulfill his dream of playing in the National Football League.

The 23-year-old Perrone, an All-State linebacker at East Catholic High School and standout at the University of Massachusetts, leaves Thursday for Pescara, Italy, where he'll embark on his professional career.

"There are three leagues in Italy. The 'B' and 'C' leagues are playing now. Pescara is in the 'B' league and is having a tough time defensively. They're looking for me to come over and make a big impact defensively," Perrone said, adding otherwise he doesn't know much about his new club.

Perrone, who has been waiting for a call for awhile, got it last Wednesday from his contact, Scott Crowell, another former UMass graduate who played in Italy a couple years ago. After I found out the NFL wasn't working for me, I called (Scott). He said I wouldn't be going until January or February (for the 'A' league season). But from what I hear Pescara has a good offense but needs help defensively."

"Scott said it's better to go over now and get some exposure. If I play well, it'll help my bargaining position."

Perrone's contract is for the first half of the season, roughly five or six games. He'll receive 1.7 million lire, about $1,100 a month. "That's all gravy," Perrone said. "They're paying all my air fare and living expenses." He has no guarantee for the 'A' league campaign that begins in February. "I'd like to go over to Italy and make a big impression and come back and get a tryout."

Miracle rally saves Giants

By Tom Soldino
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Falcons' frustrations continued to mount after what appeared to be a certain victory against the New York Giants turned into yet another disaster on the last-minute heroes of linebacker Carl Banks.

The Giants' outside linebacker intercepted a pass and returned it 15 yards for a touchdown with 1:24 left to play Sunday for a 23-16 NFL triumph after setting up the tying TD 14 minutes earlier by forcing another interception, this by fellow linebacker Harry Carson as New York scored 14 points within 33 seconds.

"To lose it like we did was like a knife in your back," said Falcons' cornerback Scott Case after Atlanta lost its fifth straight and fell to 1-7.

"This is one of the biggest wins we had in a long time," said Giants' Coach Bill Parcells after his club won two in a row for the first time all season to go to 5-3.

The Falcons, who had the worst record in the league a year ago at 2-13, appeared to have the game wrapped up with less than four minutes left, leading 16-6 on the 1-yard TD burst by John Settle and field goals of 32, 37 and 43 yards by Greg Davis.

But with 2:25 to go, Paul McFadden booted a 45-yard field goal after earlier kicks of 21 and 27 yards and it was 16-9.

MHS suffers another tough loss

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

VERNON — It has been a difficult first year for the helm of the Manchester High football team for Jim McLaughlin and his Indians, to say the least.

Although he has been more than competitive in each and every outing, McLaughlin can't help but feel disappointed concerning the result of the team's performance on Saturday afternoon in CCC East action.

"I'm disappointed we're not putting wins on the board. We're going through some real internal struggles as an organization."

The loss drops the Indians to 1-3 in the league and 2-4 overall while Rockville moves to 2-1 in the CCC East and 4-2 overall. Manchester, which will be at Enfield Saturday at 1:30 p.m., has lost its four games this season by a total of 12 points.

Stiffed for three quarters, the Indians, behind a superb performance from junior quarterback Aris Leonard (6-for-8 passing for 63 yards and three carries for 49 yards and two touchdowns), found his receivers well covered. He tucked the ball under his left arm and cut across the left part of the field. With Rockville defense in hot pursuit, Leonard cut back again and scampered into the end zone to make the score 13-12.

The Indians' final scoring drive went 85 yards on only five plays. Senior Vinnie Moore (eight carries for 64 yards) and senior fullback Chip Driggs (two carries for 25 yards) were instrumental in the drive.

Penn State has Connecticut's number

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

STORRS — Beating the University of Connecticut men's soccer team at home is a lofty task.

However, history has shown that Penn State has had success against the Huskies in their series.

Deadlocked at 0-0 until 11 minutes remained in the match, Peter Daigle's 25-yard bullet into the upper right corner of the net off a corner kick sealed it as Penn State posted a 1-0 win over the 10th-ranked UConn Sunday afternoon before a crowd of 5,736 at the Connecticut Soccer Stadium.

It was only the second home loss of season for UConn, with the other being a 4-2 decision to Old Dominion on Sept. 4. The Huskies, the No. 1 ranked team in New England, fell to 11-6-1 while Penn State improves to 11-5-2.

The defeat also ended a four-game UConn shutout win streak.

The Nittany Lions led the series with UConn, 5-2-3, with the Huskies' last victory coming in 1982. Each non-tie in the series has been decided by one goal.

"That seems to be the story of our Penn State series," UConn Coach Joe Morrone said. "We always do a good job against them, but they always manage to get the edge."

To say that the Huskies had some golden scoring opportunities would be an understatement. With a mere 15 seconds left in the game, it (the loss) is frustrating," Morrone said.

With 13:31 left, Donigan went in on goal with his shot deflected and the game, in that sense, is still being decided.

"We had three balls on the goal line and nothing goes in and they hit one from 25 yards out to win the game. In that sense, it (the loss) is frustrating," Morrone said.

Off a corner kick, Daigle's game-winner from the Husky defense. "Daigle" just hit a great shot. There's no way you could stop that," Husky senior stopperback Kerry Rudich said.

Actresses carry 'real-life' dramas

By Kathryn Baker. NEW YORK — You can tell things are getting slow when actresses such as Bernadette Peters and Julie Christie start turning up in made-for-TV movies.

Peters in "David" on Tuesday and Christie in CBS' "Dadah Is Death" next Sunday and Monday are the best things going for the two dramas, both based on real-life stories.

John Glover is also notable as Charles, the boy's father. Glover gives him a wide-eyed helplessness that exasperates the police who are dying to discipline him.

WHILE AVOIDING outright sensationalism — the movie was directed by Emmy winner John Erman — there seems to be no sense of misdeed here, "David" should aspire to be an uplifting story of surviving pain, but it spends too much time in excruciating suspense leading up to the horrible event everyone knows is going to happen.

"Dadah Is Death" has more problems, since it never provides any good reason to watch it other than Christie's superb performance, also as a spunky mom. This mother is a blue-collar Australian determined to save her husband from a death sentence for smuggling drugs in Malaysia. CBS is running "Dadah Is Death" in two parts. Four hours is too long by at least two, if not four hours. After struggling through this incredibly slow-paced drama, there's not even an emotional payoff at the end.

NEITHER IS THERE a hero, except for Christie as the mother. Even then, it's difficult to root for her, absent any sympathy for her son, and Kevin (John Polson) just doesn't generate any. Whatever the real Kevin was like, the TV Kevin comes off as an inevitable loser.

UConn physicist works to trap atoms

By Dean Golembeski. The Associated Press. STORRS — Anyone who has tried to swing a golf club with a right angle appreciated the work of Phillip L. Gould.

He's building a laboratory at the University of Connecticut faculty. He'll catch the smallest bits of nature as they zoom about aimlessly at incredible speeds.

The prey of the 30-year-old physicist are atoms, which will slow, freeze and trap with laser beams.

Everything in the universe is composed of atoms, and Gould's research, aided by associate physics professor Juha Javanainen, is aimed at providing a rare glimpse of the movements and interactions of these building blocks.

His work could lead to more precise measurements of time by atomic clocks, which are important for navigation and missile guidance systems. The research also could lead to the trapping of antimatter and improved spectroscopy, which is useful in astronomy.

"I can't force any project — making a better radio or anything like that," Gould said. "It's esoteric stuff, but it's fun. We find it very interesting."

Gould's laboratory is still being assembled. But he experimented with so-called laser cooling and deceleration of atoms while a postdoctoral fellow at the National Bureau of Standards in Gaithersburg, Md.

He was awarded a National Science Foundation grant can be obtained. In Gould's case, the Norwalk-based Perkin-Elmer Corp. is providing a matching $37,500 grant, giving him $100,000 this year for his research.

CHICAGO (AP) — Nearly 500 years after Copernicus postulated that Earth revolves around the sun, 20 percent of Americans think otherwise, suggests a poll that found vast numbers of the nation's adults "scientifically illiterate."

Asked whether the Earth goes around the sun or the sun around the Earth, 21 percent replied incorrectly. Seven percent said they didn't know.

In a July telephone survey, 2,041 adults 18 or older were asked about 75 questions on basic science, Miller said. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The results show that on very basic ideas, vast numbers of Americans are scientifically illiterate," Miller said Sunday. "It's a fairly dire situation."

The results of the survey haven't been fully tabulated yet, but it appears that 93 percent to 95 percent would have to be considered scientifically illiterate, lacking fundamental knowledge of scientific vocabulary, methodology and an understanding of science's impact on the world, said Miller. The group's 1985 survey found a 93 percent illiteracy rate.
