

Lawmakers' wish lists grow, despite budget crisis

By Brent Lovmon
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Although austerity has become the operative word for the upcoming legislative session, don't be fooled into thinking that lawmakers will spend the next five months occupied with nothing but the state's mounting fiscal woes.

A host of other issues involving criminal justice, health care, worker safety, recycling, zoning and education reform, among others, will provide lively subplots to the drama over how to close the state's estimated $882 million budget gap.

"There is a variety of legislation that we've got on the burner that doesn't have a financial burden that will keep us very busy," said Rep. Jay B. Levin, D-New London, incoming co-chairman of the Program Review and Investigations Committee.

Committee chairmen have already been warned by their colleagues on the Appropriations Committee to concentrate on maintaining "essential services and nothing else."

Even that dire warning hasn't deterred some lawmakers from talking wistfully about some expensive new initiatives. Rep. Doreen Del Bianco, D-Waterbury, the new co-chairwoman of the Public Health Committee, says she would at least like to study the issue of universal health insurance along the lines of the program recently adopted in Massachusetts.

Rep. Joseph Courtney, D-Vernon, incoming chairman of the Human Services Committee, helped organize a demonstration earlier this month by the Coalition for Universal Needs, which is urging the governor and the General Assembly not to cut human service programs in areas such as housing, mental health and nutrition.

"It's not my intention to be just the bearer of bad tidings all year to human-services advocates," Courtney said. "At the same time the state budget is in deficit, human service needs are still quite acute."

Nevertheless, Courtney, Del Bianco and other committee chairmen are talking about concentrating their efforts on initiatives that don't involve major new expenditures.

Perhaps the most explosive non-budget issue awaiting lawmakers when they return is how to calm the tumultuous criminal justice system.

Levin's committee is preparing legislation that would require that the commissioner of public safety be a civilian — a move that would effectively strip embattled State Police Commander Lester J. Forst of one of his titles.

The committee, which spent a year investigating infighting within the criminal justice system, recently sent a letter of no confidence in Forst to Gov.

William A. O'Neill because of Forst's alleged lack of respect for civilian authority.

"We think it's extremely important that it be made very clear as a matter of law that state police are responsible to the civilian and constitutional authorities of this state," Levin said.

He's predicting bi-partisan support for the proposal, which could pit the legislature against the governor.

The committee is also considering legislation to reorganize the chief state's attorneys office, regulate the use of police informants and tighten Connecticut's first-in-the-nation automobile lemon law, Levin said.

How residents pay for health care promises to be another hot topic. Special interests on all sides of the issue, including labor, the insurance industry and the state's hospitals, are pressing for reforms of the system for setting rates for specific services, including surgical and other procedures at hospitals.

"Getting a consensus will be difficult," Blain said. "Another major issue is a holdover from last year: How much authority should the state have to override local zoning when it interferes with the construction of low- and moderate-income housing, prisons and trash-to-energy plants?"

The upcoming session will also be notable for the absence of some perennial issues, such as the plant closing bill.

Recent federal legislation requiring six months' notice of a plant closing means the legislature won't have to deal with that divisive issue for the first time in years, said Rep. Joseph Adamo, D-West Haven, co-chairman of the Labor Committee.

Besides prison overcrowding, the Judiciary Committee will likely take up two other divisive issues that have occupied lawmakers in recent years, said Sen. Anthony Avallone, D-New Haven, co-chairman of the Judiciary Committee: whether to make the death penalty easier to impose and tougher drunken driving laws.

The big-picture legislation aside, various committees will also have to sort through hundreds of bills submitted to individual lawmakers. Bills back for another hearing this session include one to require pre-marital AIDS tests, abolish auto emissions inspections program and permit the death penalty for murdering a child under the age of 12.

registration, direct primaries and lighter control on absentee voting. Of those, only the mail-in registration succeeded.

After tackling big-money issues like school funding and teacher salaries in recent years, the Education Committee will likely concentrate on tightening professional standards for educators and other more modest proposals this session, said Sen. Kevin B. Sullivan, D-West Hartford, committee co-chairman.

Takeshita today named a political outsider, former Supreme Court Justice Masami Takatsuki, 78, to replace Justice Minister Takashi Hasegawa.

Hasegawa announced he was stepping down just three days after Takeshita appointed him to a new Cabinet supposedly untroubled by a stock-dealing scandal that had already forced the resignation of 17 politicians and business leaders.

Opposition parties and analysts say Takeshita should follow the lead of those leaders and resign. Hasegawa's resignation, which occurred the day after Takeshita publicly reaffirmed his support for him, was the second Cabinet casualty. Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa stepped down on Dec. 9.

Takeshita made no comment on the resignation of Hasegawa, 76.

Takatsuki, a constitutional expert and former bureaucrat, served as a Supreme Court Justice from 1973 to 1980. He is an unusual choice as a Cabinet member because he is not a career politician, the background of nearly all Cabinet ministers.

Takeshita apparently decided it was necessary to go outside politics to find someone without links to the Recruit Co., the information conglomerate at the heart of the scandal over resignation.

Within a day after Hasegawa was given a mandate to reform political ethics and head the legal probe of the Recruit scandal, he was disclosed Recruit had given money for 12 years to a group that financed his campaign and political activities.

"There is nothing wrong with politicians accepting donations made from the good will of their supporters," Hasegawa told reporters.

"However, as minister in charge of clearing up the Recruit problem in the Takeshita administration, which is trying to regain trust in government, it is regrettable that I received donations from Recruit," he said.

"I apologize deeply and resign from my post as justice minister."

The scandal has engulfed the Liberal Democrats, as several senior party lawmakers or their aides purchased shares in the subsidiary before the shares were offered publicly and later sold them at large tax-free profits.

The transactions were legal but generated a storm of controversy over business and political ethics. Prosecutors also are investigating possible bribery.

Leaders of the opposition Clean Government Party and the Democratic Socialist Party said Hasegawa's resignation was only natural, while the Communist Party called for the entire Cabinet to resign and new parliamentary elections.

A newspaper poll this month found Takeshita's public support was 18 percent, down from 30 percent when he took office 13 months ago.

Marie-Laure, Virginie and their father, Pascal Betille, arrived in a French government plane at a secluded military base near Marseille, a Foreign Ministry spokeswoman said. They were then taken to a hospital for checkups and then to a secret location for sleep.

The girls, dressed in dark robes, their shoulders draped with hand-embroidered scarves, had been reunited with their father hours before the girls' release.

The long journey home took Marie-Laure Betille, 7, and her sister Virginie, 8, by boat from Lebanon to Libya, where they were turned over to French officials and flown to France late Thursday.

Their hometown of Ouloules, near Toulon, set up welcoming banners and French flags on its streets today. Mayor Rene Arnaud said the town would give the girls a belated Christmas celebration.

Left behind in the hands of Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council, a Palestinian guerrilla organization, was their mother, Jacqueline Valente, a baby sister born in captivity, and five Belgians also seized aboard the yacht Silco off Israel's occupied Gaza Strip.

Their captors, who have been blamed for numerous terrorist attacks, said the girls' freedom was a gift to France from the children of the yearlong Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories.

French newspapers today suggested the release was a propaganda ploy by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi to improve his image at a time when the U.S. government has raised concerns about an alleged chemical weapons plant in Libya. The Palestinian kidnappers are backed by Libya.

A statement in Beirut by Fatah Revolutionary Council spokesman Waid Khaled said the girls' release was "a gift to the French authorities ... in the name of the children of Palestine, the children of the Revolution of the Stones on the occasion of Christmas and New Year."

Betille's lawyer, Yves Massani, said Thursday night that the children had said nothing of their detention, "talking only of their boat trip."

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi called for the girls' release on Christmas Eve, and on two occasions they were reported freed and en route home. The Palestinian group has ties to Libya.

"France ... welcomes this humanitarian gesture in appropriate measure," the Foreign Ministry said. "It thanks foreign authorities who contributed," it added without elaboration.

Japanese minister quits post

TOKYO (AP) — In a major blow to Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, the man appointed to investigate a widening scandal resigned today after saying he had accepted political donations from the company at the center of the controversy.

Takeshita today named a political outsider, former Supreme Court Justice Masami Takatsuki, 78, to replace Justice Minister Takashi Hasegawa.

Double detonator believed use to bomb Flight 103

By Maggie Jackson
The Associated Press

LONDON — A sophisticated device with two separate detonating systems is believed to have triggered the bomb which brought down Pan Am Flight 103, killing 270 people, The Times of London reported today.

The newspaper said crash investigators believe the first trigger was a barometric device set off by altitude. This then activated the second trigger, an electronic timer, to make the bomb explode an hour later, it said.

The double detonator technique was developed by terrorists after some airports started putting cargo through pressure chambers which would detonate pressure-activated bombs before they got on the plane, The Times said.

The Frankfurt airport, where the Pan Am flight originated aboard a different plane, uses the pressure chambers, The Times said.

On Wednesday, The Times was the first to report that investigators had concluded a bomb was responsible for the crash. The formal announcement was made hours later.

As a worldwide hunt began for the terrorists who planted the bomb, passengers using American airlines at four British airports underwent questioning Thursday and had their baggage X-rayed in accordance with Department of Transport orders.

In Frankfurt, the airport security chief said today that ground personnel were being checked in connection with the bombing.

The official, Horst Hantel, did not elaborate other than to say, "Certainly we are checking all security procedures on how luggage was handled, as they are also doing in London."

In Washington, the Federal Aviation Administration ordered visual or X-ray inspection of all checked bags going on U.S. airlines at 103 airports in the Middle East and Western Europe.

FAA Administrator Allan McCarty said the change "far exceeds international standards" and is based on practices adopted by the Israeli airline El Al, which has never had a hijacking or bombing.

Officials said the FAA is rushing delivery of devices that are capable of detecting all known explosives, including plastic explosives, including plastic explosives.

"The historical record suggests that in fact we probably will eventually be able to identify a perpetrator," he told the British Broadcasting Corp.

Analysts have speculated that the bomb could have been smuggled aboard by ground staff.

World Airways' chief in northern Europe, said the airline had met "all the requirements set" by Britain's Department of Transport. He refused to elaborate.

Check-ins proceeded smoothly at London's Heathrow Airport, but passengers were quizzed about who packed their bags, when they were packed, whether the bags had been out of their sight and whether strangers had given them surreals to carry.

Their checked-in baggage was fed through X-ray machines and then bound with a tough plastic strip to prevent them from being opened en route to the planes. Some luggage was also hand-searched.

Police patrolled with submachine guns, as they have done at the airport for two years.

Sam Fleischacker of Philadelphia, who was catching a TWA flight from New York, said he flew to Britain the day after the New York-bound Pan Am jet crashed into the Scottish village of Lockerbie.

"What worries me a lot is the fact that they didn't have all this then," he said, gesturing to the X-ray machine.

The security directive, aimed at airports serving U.S. airlines, was made only hours after Wednesday's disclosure that a bomb brought down the Boeing 747.

Chief investigator Michael Charles said Wednesday that "conclusive evidence" was found of a high-explosives blast.

Police officers working on the case flew Thursday to West Germany and would be sent to "other parts of the world," John Orr, the detective chief superintendent of the Glasgow area police, said in Lockerbie.

The FBI, Scottish police, the British anti-terrorism squad and West German police are investigating.

Brian Jenkins, a U.S. terrorism consultant, said investigators must check the background of each Flight 103 passenger and look for false identities; discover whether any had connections that could make them "witting or unwitting confederates;" and trace cargo items to their origins.

"The historical record suggests that in fact we probably will eventually be able to identify a perpetrator," he told the British Broadcasting Corp.

Analysts have speculated that the bomb could have been smuggled aboard by ground staff.

Pepperidge Farm decision is hailed

NORWALK (AP) — A Nebraska man who has spent $2 million on a crusade to pressure the food industry into making healthier products said he was pleasantly surprised by Pepperidge Farm's decision to stop using coconut oil in its crackers and cookies.

"Ultimately Pepperidge Farms will have saved thousands of lives," Phil Sokolof said Thursday.

Sokolof, founder of National Heart Savers, a Nebraska organization that has campaigned against products which use tropical oils, such as palm and coconut, said the decision will force the company to come up with new recipes for more than 50 brands of cookies and crackers.

"Frankly, I'm surprised, because Pepperidge is undertaking on their hands to change their products," he said.

Pepperidge Farms announced Wednesday that, in response to "strong consumer demand," it would stop using coconut oil in numerous products, including its popular "Original Goldfish," by next summer.

The oil is technically cholesterol-free, and products containing it are frequently touted as such. But oil, a saturated fat, has been shown to raise the cholesterol level and with it the risk of a clogging of the arteries that can lead to heart attacks.

"We must find oils that will provide the same benefits in terms of performance in the baking process, flavor, texture, mouth-feel and shelf-life stability," Richard A. Shea, president of the Norfolk-based company, said in a prepared statement issued Wednesday.

Sokolof said coconut oil contains 100 percent more saturated fat than lard. Coconut and palm oil are popular with food manufacturers because they help extend the shelf life of food products, he says.

"Many products advertised as being free of cholesterol contain tropical oils that can help cholesterol form after consumption, he said.

"In a label, the companies can put the public at ease by saying 'cholesterol' or '100 percent pure vegetable oil,'" Sokolof said, "but when you eat them it turns into cholesterol in your body."

Sokolof placed advertisements in newspapers in October depicting nine products he says are "poisoning" healthy foods, but are "poisoning" Americans with saturated fats.

A 65-year-old multimillionaire who nearly died from a heart attack in 1966, Sokolof has spent $2 million on a campaign to pressure food industry giants into making healthier products. His father and a brother-in-law died of heart attacks.

O'Neill confident on budget crisis

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — As bad as Connecticut's budget problems are — a $135 million deficit this year and an $882 million shortfall next year — Gov. William A. O'Neill said he's confident the crisis can be overcome through spending cuts and tax increases.

"We've been down this road before," O'Neill told reporters Thursday. "We've made the tough decisions to keep our state on top, and we will do what we have to do again this year."

He said that the state's anticipated 1989-90 budget deficit had grown by another $29 million, to about $135 million, and summoned his agency heads to a meeting to discuss home earlier orders to keep spending down.

Last summer, O'Neill had ordered agencies to trim spending by 3 percent, or $65 million. He reaffirmed that order Thursday and also said he wants to make sure that $94 million not previously expected to be spent in the 1989-90 budget is in fact not spent. The $84 million, technically known as the "budget lapse" is money that is appropriated but not spent. Among such funds are the wages of state employees who quit their jobs in mid-year.

"I'm under no illusion that these cuts, which go beyond the 3 percent, or the $65 million already imposed, will be painless," O'Neill told reporters after the meeting with commissioners.

"Nevertheless, we must reduce spending as much as possible this year to address our deficit and the total spending for next year as well."

Earlier this month, Anthony V. Milano, the governor's budget chief, said that the gap between spending for current services and revenue from existing taxes in the coming budget year would be $92 million.

Milano and O'Neill said that tax increases — the first in six years — were a certainty. On Thursday, O'Neill did not expect to outline specific tax plans until he presents his 1989-90 budget to the General Assembly in February. He reiterated that he would not consider a state personally income tax.

He said that while the state had cut taxes by a half-billion dollars in 1985 and 1986, "some of those cuts had to have to be recouped."

O'Neill said he had given agency heads several directives:

- Postpone the start of any new programs authorized in the current budget.
- No new hiring except for "absolutely essential" personnel, such as for public health and safety requirements.
- No travel except for "the most urgent and necessary trips."

Review staff assignments with an eye toward shifting personnel among agencies where possible, within the confines of collective bargaining agreements.

Freeze and try to reduce the size of the state motor vehicle fleet.

"Tax increases in 1989 are inevitable," Milano said in a letter passed out to the commissioners. "We cannot, however, expect Connecticut taxpayers to willingly assume the burden of paying more unless we can assure them that we are currently spending their dollars in the most cost-effective manner possible."

House Minority Leader Robert G. Jaekle, R-Stratford, said the Democratic governor was wrong to conclude already that tax increases will be necessary.

"He's giving up without a fight," He's putting on third down," Jaekle said. "If Governor O'Neill would support Republican calls for budget freezes, tax increases could be avoided."

Champion auctioneer no man of few words

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — John Kessler never has been a man of few words. He's usually chanting about 500 a minute.

That's the pace Kessler keeps as the reigning World Tobacco Auctioneering Champion.

At age 25, Kessler already has been an auctioneer for seven years. He learned the trade from his auctioneer father, Wayne, as a youngster and has been perfecting his chant ever since.

Kessler won his first contest when he was 3, recalls his father. The Kesslers operate a real estate and auction company in Campbellsville, Ky.

First U.S. plant to recycle plastic coffee cups starts up soon

LEOMINSTER, Mass. (AP) — The nation's first plant to turn plastic items like foam coffee cups and hamburger trays into things like flowerpots, coat hangers and even fence posts opens next month.

And its creators expect the $4 million plant to change the reputation of the maligned material.

"I predict that the plastic bashing that's going on today will stop and polystyrene will become an environmental hero," said Robert J. Barrett, safety environmental officer at Mobil Chemical Co. of Rochester, N.Y., one of two backers of the factory.

The plant, called Plastics Again, is a converted warehouse with machines that can turn 3 million pounds of dirty cups, trays and cutlery — the amount that 1,000 schools throw away yearly — into hard, pea-size pellets.

Mobil and Genpak Corp. of Glens Falls, N.Y., hope to use the pellets themselves and sell them to other companies for making wall insulation, fence posts, flowerepots and packing material, or anything not dealing with food because of the danger of contamination. They expect a profit by 1992.

Barrett sees a lucrative market because the nation uses 5 billion pounds of polystyrene yearly. He said Mobil has five people searching for cheap sources of used or low-grade plastic film for recycling.

One key to the plant's survival, however, is teaching diners to stack their used cups and trays in a special garbage can so the waste can be collected easily and carted to the 21,000-square-foot plant in this industrial town 40 miles west of Boston.

To that end, the company has spent three months carrying out lunchroom experiments at schools in Lexington and Glastonbury, Conn. The company has agreed to take their polystyrene waste for free if the schools use the special garbage cans.

"Kids will be kids. Some are throwing plates in the wrong place as an act of rebellion," said Brad Devlin, Glastonbury schools' director of food services. "But I'm willing to bet a week's pay that it's been 90 percent effective."

The project has worked so well at one school in Lexington that a principal at another complained about being left out of the experiment, said James MacCinnes, assistant superintendent.

The reason for its success, the two said, is that children are worried about diminishing landfill space for garbage including polystyrene, which accounts for half the waste in school cafeterias.

MacCinnes said 300 teen-agers signed petitions last spring demanding that Lexington schools switch from polystyrene to paper, although plastic is cheaper, keeps food warm longer and doesn't get soggy.

The plant is the result of these and many other protests against the material that has become the rallying point of environmentalists. Supporters claim that polystyrene accounts for only 10 percent of all the plastics produced in the world.

A royal family dope scandal: Charles' horse fails drug test

LONDON (AP) — Move over, Ben Johnson. Make way, Lawrence Taylor. Drugs have caught another sports star, this one named after a pub and owned by the heir to the British throne.

Devil's Elbow, a 4-year-old gelding, tested positive for three stimulants after giving Prince Charles his first winner as a race-horse owner in a $1,000 steeplechase at Worcester.

In announcing the finding this week, the Jockey Club, which governs horse racing in Britain, said there were no indications the prince had anything to do with the doping and in all likelihood would not be punished. Suspicions were that the drugs were contained in contaminated feed.

But trainer Nick Gascoles faces a $1,000 fine, and Devil's Elbow, the namesake of a pub in Princeton, England, that also is owned by the prince, could be stripped of the victory if further tests showed the horse was deliberately doped.

The Royal Family's longstanding love affair with horses and racing was for the first time touched by the spreading stain of drugs in sports, which have claimed such stars as Johnson, the Olympic 100-meter runner from Canada, and Taylor, the all-pro linebacker from the New York Giants.

"I am not aware of any other royal horse being disqualified for this sort of reason," said Michael Oswald, manager of the Royal Studs, the Royal Family's horse-breeding farm.

Prince Charles, whose career as a steeplechase jockey ended several years ago in a series of spills, was not commenting on the drug findings.

The tabloid Daily Star quoted an unidentified friend of the prince as saying Charles was "highly embarrassed" by the case.

"The whole business is most upsetting for him — it'll take some time to get over," the friend was quoted as saying.

Most of Britain's dozen national newspapers played the story on the front page Thursday with the kind of headlines usually reserved for sex scandals and murders.

"Charlie's Nag Fails Dope Test," the Daily Star said. "Charles Horse In Dope Shock," said the Daily Mail. The Times of London, using Charles' formal position in the royal household, headlined its front-page story: "Prince of Wales' First Winner Fails a Dope Test."

Like other sports, British horse racing has had trouble recently with drugs. The Jockey Club said that of an estimated 6,500 samples per year, 10-20 test positive, usually for legitimate medication administered too close to race day.

Two days after Devil's Elbow won the Novice Stakes at Worcester Dec. 5, the Jockey Club leveled a record $1,500 fine against trainer David Elsworth after one of his horses tested positive for steroids.

Steroids are muscle-builders and their use got Johnson thrown out of the Olympics in Seoul. Drug use in horse racing in Britain, where no medication is allowed in race entrants, more often involves pain-killers or stimulants, such as the caffeine, theobromine and theophylline found in Devil's Elbow.

FISHING PRESENT — President-elect George Bush holds up a fishing lure given to him by Wilson Scott in Montgomery, Ala., Thursday. Bush and Wilson's father, Ray Scott, fished for bass in Pintaila later in the day.

Bush to complete Cabinet selections

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Bush, back home in Washington after a hunting and fishing vacation, said he was "fairly close" to making his two remaining Cabinet-level appointments and ready to focus on his first 100 days in the Oval Office. Bush ended a four-day vacation Thursday with a successful bass fishing outing on a private lake in Pintaila, Ala. He caught nine fish, the largest a three-pounder. Today Bush was having a private meeting with Thomas Pickering, the U.S. ambassador to Israel, who Bush has nominated as the new ambassador to the United Nations. Bush also planned to meet with William Webster, director of the CIA, a job Bush once held. Bush said he was "fairly close" to naming his energy secretary and his drug czar, the only two Cabinet-level posts still vacant in his new administration. According to sources, James Schlesinger, who was once secretary in the Carter administration and defense secretary in the Nixon and Ford administrations, was among a number of candidates Bush was considering for the energy post. On Thursday in Beville, Texas, before heading to Alabama, Bush told reporters his top priorities were to "finish the Cabinet, start fleshing out the secretary and undersecretary levels," and then start making "definitive plans for the first 100 days" of his new administration, which begins after his Jan. 20 inauguration.

Nuclear accidents rose last year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's nuclear power plants reported 2,940 mishaps in 1987, a slight increase from the year before, according to an anti-nuclear organization. A report Thursday by Public Citizen's Critical Mass Energy Project said the accident figure represented incidents reported by nuclear plant owners to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and classified by the NRC as "potentially significant safety events." The corresponding figure was 2,836 accidents in 1986, when there were 99 reactors in operation. The number of operating reactors grew to 109 in 1987, according to the report. Public Citizen, a non-profit research organization and long-time critic of nuclear power, also said Thursday that in 1987 there was a record number of mishaps, more than 104,000 incidents in which nuclear workers were exposed to measurable doses of radiation. In addition, it said there were at least 430 emergency shutdowns last year and at least 492 violations of nuclear plant safety rules.

The report was based on NRC data compiled and analyzed by Public Citizen. Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, said in releasing the report, "Public attention has recently been focused on the poor safety conditions at the nation's nuclear weapons reactors. However, in 1987, badly managed commercial nuclear plants daily threatened the safety of the public, particularly the 96 million Americans who live within 50 miles of a reactor," she said. Public Citizen criticized the NRC for refusing to release key safety data such as "single-component failure" records and a comprehensive listing of all emergency plant shutdowns. It contended that the commission's public records on safety violations are incomplete and contradictory. Robert Newlin, an NRC spokesman, said he could not comment in detail on specific allegations. This work would report to an NRC. This work would report to an NRC. This work would report to an NRC.

18 hours in an elevator

BEAVER DAM, Wis. (AP) — A woman says she read a prayer book and somehow managed to stay calm while trapped nearly 18 hours in a cold elevator at the high school where she works as an accountant. "I thought it would be nice at one point to scream, rant and rave, but that would not get me anywhere," Gretchen Forrester, 58, said Thursday. "So I took out my rosary and started praying. I had a beautiful prayer book with me that I read most of the night. I didn't sleep." Finally, at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday, Charlie Mann, interim superintendent of buildings and grounds at Wayland Academy in this southeast Wisconsin city, asked Forrester if she was in the elevator. "And I said, 'Yes, Charlie, get me out of here,'" she said. Forrester was going to her office in a new building at the

Shamir wants new peace initiative

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir wants to launch a peace initiative within two months and will seek Egypt's help in finding non-PLO Palestinian negotiators, an aide said today. "I rang the bell, I rang the bell, I rang the bell, and it didn't do me any good," Forrester said. "From 1 p.m. to about 4:15 p.m. I rang the bell about every 15 minutes or when I heard a noise. After 4:30, I figured no one was coming." "Hypothermia crossed my mind," she said. "It was so cold. I had my coat on and my gloves. I used my purse to block vents in the walls where cold air was coming through." She kept rigging the bell. "My faith kept me going and kept me calm," Forrester said. Forrester was found after a police officer told a cleaning woman at the school that a buzzer had been going off at the new building, Mann said.

talks between Israel and the Arabs. "If the two superpowers call on neighbors to negotiate that's all right but the talks would be direct talks," Pazner said. The Yediot Ahranon newspaper reported Thursday the Israeli plan proposes an unofficial understanding that Palestinian negotiators be chosen or appointed by the PLO but not belong to PLO institutions or have a terrorist past. Officials have declined comment on the report. But Shamir aide Yossi Ahmeir said choosing Palestinians was the "internal business" of the Arab side. "We only insist that there should be no PLO people or people identified with the PLO," he said. Shimon Shamir, Israel's ambassador to Egypt, was summoned to Jerusalem and met Foreign Minister Moshe Arens today amid reports Israel was planning to present new proposals to Egypt soon. Both Shamir, head of the right-wing Likud bloc, and his political rival Shimon Peres of the Labor Party have hinted that their coalition government will propose holding Palestinian elections as part of a peace package. As a condition for any such concessions, Shamir and Peres insist that Palestinians end the violence in the occupied lands. Since the Palestinian uprising broke out in December 1987, 339 Arabs and 14 Israelis have been killed. In the past, clandestine leaders of the uprising and prominent Palestinians above ground have called for elections, but the latest underground leaflets and a statement from the PLO's executive committee both opposed the Israeli proposals. Saeb Erakat, a political science professor at An Najah University in the West Bank city of Nablus, said the election idea was another Israeli attempt to find an alternative to recognizing the PLO. "Why stall and lose time and try to escape the realities of peacekeeping?" he said. "I think we should tell Israel that instead of introducing such ideas you should face the PLO."

non-profit residence, with five major sources of funding and six sets of fiscal and demographic reports to be generated.

"I thrive on a challenge. And there really couldn't be seen any job more challenging," said Cabana, looking back on her first six weeks on the job.

Cabana has degrees in sociology with an emphasis on social work, residence management and counseling. She managed dormitories and student services for five years, enjoying the work tremendously.

"But I felt like I really wasn't making a difference," said Cabana. "I knew that these were terrific, motivated kids. They would have done fine whether I was there or not."

Then Cabana and her husband moved to New England, to be nearer to their families. Cabana saw this as an opportunity to move into a social service agency of some kind.

The position with MACC seemed ideal, said Cabana, since it allowed her to utilize her experience managing a building, as well as helping people.

As the director, Cabana is hoping to make a few changes at Samaritan Shelter. First on her agenda, she said, is to get the office a computer. Cabana must prepare budget projections and give quarterly reports to the town of Manchester, the state of Connecticut, United Way and MACC, each of which have different fiscal years. Then there are statistical reports to prepare for MACC and the state's Department of Human Resources.

In addition, the director logs and acknowledges each contribution, no matter how small; handles inventory control on all supplies; and generates thank-you letters for each volunteer who works at the shelter.

Doing the bookkeeping, reports and correspondence without a word processor or computer could be a full-time job, by itself, said Cabana. Once she has her data in a computer, however, she should be able to pull financial reports or demographic profiles with ease, she said.

respond," Fuscias said.

Gov. William O'Neill has already asked agency heads to reduce their budget requests.

McCavagnh said he also has not decided where some cuts should be made. He added that he would like to see Manches-

"I certainly plan on doing everything I can to bring the money back to Manchester," he said.

Getting monies to towns may be a difficult job, though, because of the need to cut back, McCavagnh said.

"The attitude in Hartford right now is we're going to have to cut corners and raise taxes," he said. "All options are on the table."

Economic

The other negative factors dragging the index down were a fall in stock prices, an increase in weekly unemployment claims and a decline in raw materials prices, also viewed as a negative because it signals falling demand.

Three indicators made positive contributions, led by an increase in growth in the money supply. Other positive forces were a rise in manufacturing orders for consumer goods and an increase in orders for new plants and equipment.

Two indicators, building permits and the length of the average workweek, were unchanged in November.

The various changes left the index at 103.2 percent of its 1967 base 100.

The Federal Reserve has been tightening up on credit for much of this year in a move to dampen demand and keep inflation from accelerating.

Even without the credit tightening by the Federal Reserve, many analysts said a slowdown because they expect that business investment and export sales, the two sources of strength in 1988, cannot continue growing at the same rates in 1989.

Those two sectors of the economy were responsible for half of all growth in 1988.

The Commerce Department on Thursday said it was projecting a somewhat slower demand for U.S. manufactured goods in its annual U.S. Industrial Outlook.

McArdor said he was "not at liberty" to say what percentage of hand luggage would be inspected or how it would be selected.

McArdor told reporters the stricter security measures "are based on the practices of El Al—the best in the world," and "far exceed existing international standards."

El Al, the Israeli airline, has never had a hijacking or bombing. McArdor did not mention some El Al practices, such as the testing of baggage in a decompression chamber and the close questioning of passengers about their personal lives.

The Commerce Department said that new single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 671,000 units last month following a 4.4 percent rise in October.

The November decline, the second in the past three months, was the sharpest since an 11.8 percent decrease in May 1987.

Film gives no clue on robber's identity

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

Film of an armed robber who took about $39,500 last Friday from a Spencer Street bank has not yielded any additional clues to the robber's identity, police said today.

The film shows only that the robber wore a ski mask and gloves and carried a small handgun when he robbed the Manchester State Bank branch at 185 Spencer St., Manchester Police Department spokesman Gary J. Wood said.

Police are still searching for the robber, who is believed to have escaped in a red Chevy Blazer after leading police on a foot chase through the Spencer Street shopping plaza, Wood said.

Wood initially said police were investigating the possibility that an accomplice may have been involved but later said that was not part of the investigation at this time.

The robber was described on police radio reports as a white male about 5 feet, 10 inches tall and weighing 165 pounds. He was wearing a dark blue ski mask, gray jacket, denim pants and white sneakers at the time of the robbery, according to radio reports.

Manchester police are working with the Federal Bureau of Investigation on the case and are investigating the possibility of a connection between the Manchester State Bank robbery and a Nov. 4 robbery at the Savings Bank of Manchester across the street, police said.

Police are still searching for the robber who took $11,000 from the SBM branch at 244 Spencer St., Wood said. In both cases, the robber wore a ski mask, police have said.

FBI officials could not be reached for comment this morning.

MHS cagers can't find right chemistry

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

Chemistry on a basketball court is essential for any successful team.

Unfortunately for the Manchester Indians, their quest for the "right stuff" is not passing over smooth terrain in the early stages of this scholastic hoop season.

After garnering its initial victory of the year Wednesday night, a 46-33 overtime victory over cross-town rival East Catholic, Manchester faced unbeaten Windsor High in the final round of the three-team round robin high school division of the seventh annual Rotary Club Basketball Classic.

Windsor defeated East (67-60) Tuesday night.

Warrior All-State senior guard Tehad Robinson displayed his awesome wares (29 points on 9-for-12 shooting) and Windsor (4-0) took advantage of 21 Indian turnovers as it broke open a tight

DRIBBLING — Manchester High's Cory McGee (33) keeps the basketball away from Windsor's Sean Sheete in their game Thursday night at East Catholic.

Warrior Coach Dom Ferrara had scouted the Indians in their thrilling 80-79 opening game loss to Wilbur Cross of New Haven. Manchester 6-2 senior forward Jason Goddard, who was averaging 20 points a game, acquired his third foul with 6:22 left in the second quarter and sat out until 5:30 to go in the third.

All of Goddard's nine points came in the first half. "I thought they (Manchester) shot the ball better the last time I saw them," Ferrara explained. "I didn't think they shot that well tonight. And I think a big thing too was Goddard got in foul trouble right off the bat. He's a good player. If he gets the ball inside, forget it. He'll beat you by himself."

Trailing, 34-31 at halftime, Manchester couldn't narrow the gap the rest of the way largely due to a woeful shooting performance (3-for-18) in the third quarter. A Robinson 3-pointer gave Windsor a 10-point lead (47-37) with 3:11 left and the Warriors led, 50-37, after three quarters. Robinson tallied nine of his points in the third stanza.

The Warriors' tandem of lightning quick 5-10 guards, Clayton Knight (13 points) and Sean Sheete (six points) combined for 12 fourth-quarter points. As Manchester was forced to play catch up, Knight and Sheete were beating the Indian defense back for the easy layup.

"We were just releasing fire in the fourth quarter," Ferrara said. "I thought we played fairly smart offense. We distributed the ball

East girls claim 2nd title of week

ELLINGTON — It was quite a week for the East Catholic High girls' basketball team. The Eagles captured the North Haven Christmas Tournament on Monday night with an overtime win over East Haven. And they capped the four days Thursday night with their fourth consecutive victory, a 51-43 verdict over host Ellington High to capture the Ellington Holiday Classic.

East started the season off with a running style of game. It didn't pay off, with 40 turnovers in an overtime loss to cross-town Manchester. Since then, however, the Eagles (4-3) are unblemished with their new-found deliberate style. Ellington lost for only the second time in seven outings.

"We again tried to dictate the temp and play a deliberate game and again it worked to our advantage," East Coach Donna Ridel said. "The key to the game was being able to handle Ellington's fullcourt press and hitting our foul shots when the game was on the line."

East was a splendid 11-for-15 from the charity stripe the fourth quarter with tournament most valuable player Karen Mozdzierz hitting seven in a row. Mozdzierz, who was also the MVP in the North Haven tournament, was 16-for-17 from the 15-foot line and totaled a game-high 24 points. As a team, East was 23-for-26 from the foul line.

"The entire team has shown tremendous improvement over the last 14 days since the first Manchester game," Ridel said. "Heather Osinski is coming into her own as a good point guard and last night against Ellington it was evident."

Ridel also got solid board work from Margaret Riley, Mauna McPaden and Barbara Chorazycewski, who combined for 21 of East's 30 rebounds.

The host Knights tied it at 36-36 with 5:40 left on a jumper by Heather Henriksen. But East, with Mozdzierz and Osinski showing the way, withstood Ellington's challenge. Osinski totaled 10 points and was the key in breaking the Ellington press. She was named to the all-tournament team.

"The team showed a lot of poise, character and heart in playing three tough opponents in four days and winning two tournaments," Ridel said.

East led 13-10 after one quarter and 26-21 at the half. It held a 36-32 bulge after three.

Henriksen led the Knights with 14 points.

East's next game is Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. on the road against St. Thomas Aquinas in New Britain.

MHS takes third

ELLINGTON — Keeping its turnovers to a minimum in the critical fourth quarter, Manchester High topped South Catholic, 49-38, Thursday night to capture third place in the Ellington Holiday Classic.

Manchester (4-1) is idle until next Friday night when it hosts Gaston High at Clarke Arena, South goes to 2-5 with its loss.

All-tournament selection Tina Stone (14 points) led the Indians in the fourth period as Manchester was able to extend a 29-24 bulge after three periods.

Trish O'Connell turned in a strong game for Manchester with 12 points while Lisa Carter contributed 10 points and eight rebounds and Shelly Dieterle 10 caroms.

"The people here were treated to a nice quarter of basketball, our best basketball since the preseason," Manchester Coach Joe DePasqua said. "To be a good basketball team we must develop the ability to put a team away when the opportunity is ours. We are on the threshold of

MY BALL — UConn's Tate George (32) has the basketball and keeps it from the Air Force's Mark Slimko during the Connecticut Mutual Classic championship game Thursday night at the Civic Center. The Huskies prevailed, 68-55.

Husky tournament win was far from a classic from a suddenly short bench.

Husky third-year Coach Jim Calhoun insists his club is prepared to do battle in the Big East.

"Our non-conference schedule this year was generally more difficult than last year. Hopefully when we play Villanova we'll be more prepared. We won't know until we throw the ball up against Villanova. We may not know (how prepared we are) until February. But we played a more difficult schedule and came out a sprained left ankle in the first half against the Air Force. That leaves once again Phil Gamble and Tate George the yeman of work, and looking for some help

The Mavericks had five players with 18 or more points, led by Rolando Blackman's 32 points. The 131 points was a season-high for Dallas.

"The jumpers were falling like layups tonight," said Perkins, who had 21 points and 14 rebounds for Dallas, which hit 58 percent from the field. "We were distributing the ball well and the shots were there."

Mark Aquire added 22 points for the Mavericks, but when he picked up his fifth foul and was removed from the game with 9:07 remaining, he glared at coach John MacLeod. After taking a Smith, averaging 8.1 points per

49ers need change

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers are the only team with a chance to win three Super Bowls in the 1980s. It will take a severe reversal of recent results to do it.

"People tend to overlook the fact we've won two Super Bowls in the last eight years," Coach Bill Walsh said as the 49ers prepare for Sunday's NFC playoff game against Minnesota.

It's overlooked because the 49ers have been routed three straight years in their only playoff games since winning the Super Bowl following the 1984 season. Even though they have the best record in the NFL for the decade, the 49ers have been a major disappointment in the postseason, losing twice to the Giants and once to the Vikings by an aggregate score of 129-38.

"It's hard to explain to somebody who's never been through it," said center Randy Cross, one of five veterans left from both Super Bowl winners, "and there are a lot of young guys on this team who might be saying, 'Golly gee, what we're in the playoffs.'"

The 49ers were 7-1 in the playoffs under Walsh through 1984, losing only 24-21 at Washington in the 1983 NFC championship game.

"This year has got to be the year," said third-year defensive end Larry Roberts. "I told them we've got to lay it on the line."

"They claim we've been here three years and we've won the division every year. We just don't have that ring yet. I think this is the year to do it, because some of the older guys might not have another chance."

The Chicago Bears also have been the slide-rich champions of the 1985 league championship. They lost at home to Washington in the 1986 and '87 playoffs. This Saturday, the Bears play host to Philadelphia.

Buffalo, which has not been in the playoffs since 1981, is home to the AFC wild-card champion, the Cincinnati Bengals.

The Bears-Eagles game features the return of Buddy Ryan to Chicago. Ryan designed the 46 Defense for the Bears and helped them win the '85 title. He has coached the Eagles since then and rarely has a kind word for the Bears or former boss Mike Ditka.

Ditka wasn't bothered by a quote attributed to Ryan that if the game came down to coaching, the Eagles would win.

"I'd agree with that," Ditka said.

The Bills, like the Bears, aren't much into verbal battles.

"We let our players do the talking," quarterback Jim Kelly said. "They do both. They like to talk but they get it done, too."

They — the Oilers — finally got it done on the road against a winning team when they edged Cleveland 24-23 in the AFC wild-card game last Saturday. It was the first road playoff victory for Houston since 1979.

Oilers coach Jerry Glaviano would prefer emphasis on his team's skills, not its talkative nature and bruising — some say dirty — style.

"We are a hard-nosed team," he said. "They play 100 mph and they get after you. I don't think you should ever have to apologize for that in the NFL. This is football."

Like the Oilers, the Seahawks don't often fare well in cold weather.

seat at the end of the bench. Aguirre made an obscene gesture in the general direction of MacLeod.

"I didn't see it so I can't respond to it," MacLeod said. "I thought Mark had a fine game. I can't please everybody. The commissioner says we can only play five guys and I'll leave it at that."

The Celtics haven't had a sub-500 month since April, 1979. "We've got to win five to seven points a couple of times, but we just couldn't get over the hump," said Kevin McHale, who led the Celtics with 29 points. "They came out and hit some incredible shots in the first quarter. The first quarter was the difference in the game."

"It's tough to win on the road when the other team hits such a tremendously high percentage," said Celtics coach Jimmy Rodgers.

Turnovers costly to MCC as Nassau takes hoop title

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

Turnovers, especially against a talented team, usually prove to be the telling detail in the outcome of any basketball game.

In the junior college championship game in the seventh annual Manchester Rotary Club Basketball Classic, the Manchester Community College Cougars couldn't afford to make many mistakes versus their formidable opponent, Nassau Community College (N.Y.) from Garden City, Long Island.

MCC and Nassau battled back and forth in a very tight first half which saw the Cougars cough up the ball 11 times. Henry Anderson scored all of his 13 points after the intermission, along with 12 more Cougars turnovers, as Nassau pulled away for an 86-71 victory Thursday night at East Catholic High School.

MCC clips to 7-6 while Nassau is up and down the court. Olander said, "The Cougars will travel to Montreal to take part in a three-day tournament beginning Monday."

"We were just one pass behind them," Olander said.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Boomer Esiason's value to the Cincinnati Bengals can't be measured by quarterback rankings. That's why receiver Cris Collinsworth thinks it's appropriate for Esiason to be named the NFL's Most Valuable Player.

"I don't think I've ever been around a more dynamic leader as a quarterback than what Boomer is," Collinsworth said. "And that probably is his biggest strength and his biggest asset for our football team, especially after last year."

Esiason, the triggerman in the league's top-ranked offense, was named Thursday as the league's MVP by The Associated Press. He won the award in a close three-way vote among sportswriters and broadcasters covering each of the NFL's 28 teams.

Esiason had 31 votes to 21 for quarterback Randall Cunningham of Philadelphia.

It was awarded to Esiason by a vote of 49-46 over Tom Brady of the Patriots.

HUSKY NOTES — The all-tournament team included Dudley Gamble, UConn's Willie McCleod, Harvard's Ralph James and Davidson's Jay Schmitt. Davidson won the consolation game, 70-62.

Calhoun hoped to use the Classic as a testing ground for freshman Rod Sellers and Dan Cynolik. It was and was tonight. Calhoun said, "They gave us more and more shots, and the more we missed the more they gave the shot."

Pass-happy BYU has QB prospect

By The Associated Press

The first controversy of the 1989 college football season has already begun.

Who will start at quarterback next year for Brigham Young, the pass-happy school that produced Jim McMahon, Steve Young, Robbie Bosco and others in the past?

Redshirt freshman Ty Detmer took over for Junior Sean Covey in the second half Thursday night and rallied BYU over Colorado 29-17 in the Freedom Bowl at Anaheim, Calif.

"The best thing about him (Detmer) is that he has three more years of eligibility, which I'll coach that much more," Coach LaVell Edwards said.

Emmitt Smith, meanwhile, is assured a position in Florida's backfield. He ran for a 55-yard touchdown on the first play from scrimmage and scored on a 2-yard run with 4:28 remaining. The Gators rallied past Illinois 14-10 in the All American Bowl in Birmingham, Ala.

Smith gained 159 yards on 28 carries and was the game's most valuable player.

Tonight, Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders leads No. 12 Oklahoma State against No. 15 Wyoming in the Holiday Bowl at San Diego.

BYU wound up 9-4 and Colorado ended 8-4.

An interception by Own Bartruff at the Illinois 26 set up Smith's winning touchdown. Smith ran 16 yards to the 2 and then took it in.

Florida finished 7-5 and the Illini dropped to 6-5-1. The Holiday Bowl is usually one of the most wide-open postseason games and tonight should be another offensive showcase between teams both named Cowboys.

Oklahoma State led the nation with 47 points per game and Smith gained third with an average of 41.

"If we play our game, they won't stop us," Oklahoma State coach Bill Sanders said. "We've got the best, most exciting offense in the country."

A 3-point play by Rob Smith gave Nassau a 69-50 lead with 7:22 left.

Joel Lewis added 14 for the Cougars while Bob Gordon, who played at Division I Siena College last year, and Bob Brunhake added 15 and 13, respectively, for Nassau. Gordon was named the tournament's most valuable player. Lewis and James of MCC were named to the all-tourney team along with Earl McGraw of Mitchell College and Brunhake and Anderson of Nassau.

Mitchell defeated Hartford UConn, 129-88, in the consolation game.

"We were just one pass behind them," Olander said.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Whalers host Red Wings
HARTFORD — The Hartford Whalers (13-20-3) will host the Detroit Red Wings (18-13-5) tonight at 7:30 (SportsChannel, WTC) at the Civic Center. The Whalers, 0-6-2 in their last eight games, are in last place in the Adams Division while the Red Wings are in first place in the Norris Division. Hartford is coming off a 4-4 tie in Quebec Wednesday night. The same two clubs meet Saturday night at Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

Wade Boggs is attacked
GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Five-time American League batting champ Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox was cut on the neck with a knife early Wednesday morning in his Jeep outside a bar.

George Young, Jr., 23, was charged with burglary and two counts of aggravated battery. Young's bond was set at $50,000 and he will be issued a psychological evaluation.

Boggs was showing his newly bought 9mm handgun to two friends when two men blocked them with their vehicle. Young jumped in the back seat and held a knife to Boggs' throat. Boggs was cut when a passenger in the Jeep, Stephen Marvin, yelled at Young.

Antrun I-AA All-America
NEW YORK (AP) — Lafayette quarterback Frank Baur, Eastern Kentucky running back Elroy Harris and Connecticut wideout Glenn Antrun, the nation's leading passer, rusher and receiver, were named to the Associated Press Division I-AA All-America team today.

The trio also includes four repeaters from 1987 — light end Sean Doctor of Marshall, linebacker Glenn Sanders of Louisiana Tech and defensive back Mark Seals of Boston University and Kevin Dent Jackson State.

Baur, one of six juniors on the team, completed 164 of 256 passes for 2,621 yards and 23 touchdowns. Harris, also a junior, rushed for 1,543 yards on 277 carries. His average of 15.43 yards a game was more than 15 yards ahead of the runnerup.

Antrun caught 77 passes for 1,130 yards. The other wide receiver, Mark Stock of VMI, had 74 receptions and 1,161 yards. Doctor caught 45 passes for 682 yards.

Reynolds is released
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sacramento Kings coach Jerry Reynolds was released from a hospital Thursday with a doctor's report that he was in good health following 48 hours of heart tests and observation.

Reynolds, who collapsed and lost consciousness during the final minutes of the Kings' 112-111 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers Tuesday, joked with reporters that he was going to have to find a better way to motivate his last place team to win.

But the 44-year-old coach said the experience of losing consciousness and being rushed to the hospital was "a little scary." Reynolds said he seriously considers giving up coaching if it occurred again.

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Sergei Makarov scored a shorthanded goal and assisted on linemate Vladimir Krutov's game-winner with 4:36 left in the Soviet Red Army to win a 3-2 victory over the New York Islanders Thursday night.

The victory was the first for either of the two Soviet teams currently in action in the NHL. Dynamo Riga is 0-1 in its first two games while the Red Army club, the premier team in the Soviet Union, has a victory and a tie.

The two clubs from the Soviet National League are currently on a 14-game NHL tour, the most extensive in history.

Flames not so invincible on home ice
In what some consider a preview of the Stanley Cup final, the Montreal Canadiens beat the Calgary Flames, even more importantly for the Canadiens, they won at the Saddledome, which has been a house of horrors for NHL teams this year.

"We proved to them we can win here," Montreal's Mats Naslund said following Thursday night's 4-3 victory over the Flames. "And we wanted to prove to other teams they (the Flames) can be beaten at home."

Before Thursday night, the Flames had been unbeaten at home this season with a 14-0 record. And with the victory, the Canadiens moved into first place overall in the standings, although the Flames have four games in hand.

"Well, we've gotta play 80 games and the playoffs," Calgary coach Terry Crisp said. "The record is what we took it as long as we could."

Riley gets new pact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coach Pat Riley, who has guided the Los Angeles Lakers to two straight NBA championships, is expected to sign a four-year contract in the near future.

"As far as I know, he's reached an agreement," said Joe Rosenfeld, the Lakers' director of public relations. "He has the contract for his review. That's all I know right now."

Riley, who has the highest winning percentage in NBA history, was quoted in the Los Angeles Times as saying he would sign the contract on Thursday.

"I have it right here in my bag, and I'll sign it," Riley said.

The contract reportedly will make Riley, 43, the second-highest paid coach in the NBA, behind a first-year San Antonio coach Larry Brown.

Riley reportedly will earn a base salary of between $600,000 and $850,000 each year, with incentive clauses boosting his earnings to as much as $900,000.

Philadelphia hoop stars making presence known

By The Associated Press

Mark Macon is the biggest star in Philadelphia's college basketball constellation, but Lionel Simmons and Tom Greis are making the most impact at holiday tournament time.

Greis got 10 of his 14 points in the second half as Villanova surprised No. 10 Florida State 87-77 Thursday night to win the Red Lobster Classic in Orlando.

Simmons scored a tournament-record 38 points as La Salle upset No. 16 South Carolina 85-67 in the opening round of the Cotton States Classic in Atlanta.

The upsets by Villanova and La Salle, each members of Philadelphia's Big Five conference, came in a season when Macon and his Temple Owls are struggling.

"It's about time we went our way. We're close to being back," said Villanova coach Rollie Massimino, who guided the Wildcats to the NCAA championship in 1985.

This season, Villanova is 8-4. La Salle is 8-1 and will play Georgia tonight in the championship game.

"It felt exciting to go up against one of the best teams in the country," said Simmons, a 6-foot-6 junior forward. "Once I hit a 3-pointer, they were going for every take I threw up there."

"They say it happens to you sooner or later, and tonight it happened to us," he said. "The way I felt right now, we played a legitimate Top 20 team. They did everything Lionel Simmons is a first round NBA draft pick and he's only a junior."

In other Top Twenty games, No. 1 Duke beat Cornell 94-80, No. 2 Michigan defeated Holy Cross 100-63, No. 4 Illinois stopped No. 7 Georgia Tech 80-75, No. 5 Wake Forest beat Virginia Tech 74-64, No. 6 Oklahoma overwhelmed Texas A&M 128-80, No. 7 North Carolina rallied by San Diego State 102-90, No. 13 Seton Hall handled DePaul 83-60, No. 15 Ohio State downed St. John's 77-72, No. 19 Tennessee held off Wichita State 76-74, No. 20 Kansas beat Iowa 100-67.

Villanova used 3-point shooting to overtake Florida State, which lost for the first time in nine games.

Kenny Wilson, the tournament's most valuable player, led Villanova with 17 points and made three of four 3-pointers. Greis got four inside baskets in the final 10 minutes.

Oklahoma rallying by five points with 10:53 remaining, rallied for a 66-60 lead with 2:44 left. George McCloud's 3-pointer got the Seminoles within 66-67 with seven seconds to play, but Tony Dawson missed a desperate shot.

WEEKEND

AT THE MIKE — Stacey Ann Logan, as Lorelei Lee, sings a radio jingle to promote buttons at her own wedding, so she can win the blessings of her future father-in-law, in a scene from Coachtlight Dinner Theatre's current musical, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." The show runs through Feb. 5 at the theater in East Windsor.

Show proves entertaining

Even if you couldn't afford to buy your sweetheart a diamond for Christmas, you can get some diamonds for New Year's by purchasing tickets to "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," now playing at the Coachtlight Dinner Theatre in East Windsor.

Weekend activities

Celebrate First Night

First Night Stamford is a community-wide event on New Year's Eve, featuring every imaginable kind of performance. There will be classical, jazz, pop and choral music performances, dance, theater, mime, puppetry, storytelling, poetry readings, films and video events.

Like father ...

George F. Walker's comedy of manners, "Nothing Sacred," opens this weekend at the Hartford Stage Company, 50 Church St., Hartford. The show, based on a novel called "Fathers and Sons" by Ivan Turgenev, looks at the effect of a young revolutionary on the traditional values of his provincial Russian family.

Egg rolls and cheesecake

Aubrey's Lounge — Hunan 'n Sushu. Manchester's newest dance club, is offering an unusual, cross-cultural New Year's Eve menu. For $20 per couple this restaurant, at 485 Hartford Ave. Road, will serve your choice of filet mignon or butterfly shrimp, along with Oriental side dishes such as fried rice and spring rolls.

Up in the air

What would it be like to float through life, completely without gravity? That's what's explored in "The Light Princess," a fairy tale by George D. MacDonald. The floating princess has been cursed by her wicked aunt, so she is not allowed to touch the ground, to feel a deep emotion or to think a serious thought.

Some old for the new

Start the new year with some old objects, at the annual Glastonbury New Year's Day Antique Show. On Sunday, more than 100 exhibitors will gather at the Glastonbury High School on Hubbard Street, to display antiques and collectibles. The event is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. It is sponsored by the Glastonbury Exchange Club.

A humorous New Year

Welcome in the new year with a big laugh at Brown Thomson, 942 Main St., Hartford. John Trueson from "Comedy Tonight" and Levent, named Atlantic City entertainer of the year, will be joined by Stacey Ann Logan, who is a better vocalist than Monroe and Channing won't be disappointed by the performance turned in by Stacey Ann Logan.

An outdoor party

The Hungerford Outdoor Education Center in Kensington will hold a New Year's Eve Party on Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., with food, crafts and outdoor fun. Admission is $3. Call 827-9064 for information.

Gene Autry's museum rounds up western history

By E. Soft Reckord
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — You'd think an 81-year-old Texan would be satisfied with a string of careers that reads: star of radio, records, movies and TV, broadcast czar, real estate tycoon, baseball mogul.

"The hard items to find are the common ones. So we're proud of things like a simple day, the odds of an item like that surviving?" Notage shows off a collection of items used by Mexican cowboys, the original range riders, such as a mid-1700s Saltillo serape worn to ward off the weather. He hopes to expand the museum's displays of items about women, minorities and business people in the West.

Bringing glasnost to the bedroom: Soviets struggle with sex

MOSCOW (AP) — A nation known for its prudishness about sex is paying for its and an increasingly frustrated and puzzled populace, a Soviet sex expert says.

Despite a spirit of openness and a freer discussion of once sensitive subjects, philosopher Igor S. Kon believes the Soviets desperately need to engage in some frank banter about the boodier.

"Things that newspapers in the West already are writing about, and which even have become sensations, aren't even known by specialists here," said the 60-year-old doctor of philosophy.

Although the social chit on discussing sex is thawing a bit, sex is still a taboo topic in a country known for its puritanism, where even the Russian language lacks a polite word for love making.

On a recent televised discussion between panels of Soviet and U.S. students, the Americans spoke freely about the problems of teen-age pregnancy and other sex-related subjects.

But when an American asked whether there were similar woes in the Soviet Union, the half-joking answer was: "We don't have sex."

Evidence points to the contrary in this nation of nearly 285 million people, however. Western specialists say Soviet women average nine abortions, and the number of AIDS cases, while small, is growing.

Such problems makes it necessary to deal openly with sex, said Kon, who is trying to take President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of glasnost — or openness — behind the bedroom doors.

"If we don't do anything ... we will create new difficulties. The stability of marriage will suffer," he said at a recent lecture to an overflow crowd at Moscow's House of Actors.

Kon recently returned from a 3½-month stay in the United States, where he visited AIDS clinics and family planning centers. He told his audience that the Soviet Union is far behind the West in discussing sex.

His frank talk goes against the mainstream, and his comments raised many eyebrows among an audience that ranged from young men and women clad in jeans to people in their 80s.

With little poll data available to judge the Soviet public's attitude toward sex, the audience's questions offer some clues. Most expressed concern over a perceived rise in pornography and homosexuality.

But Kon said he does not consider recent sexually explicit Soviet movies to be pornographic and told the audience that homosexuality is natural for some people.

He noted that right-wingers in the United States once condemned sex education as "a communist plot." But he said that sex education is desperately needed in this bastion of communism.

Kon blamed Soviet authorities for the public's ignorance about sex and the resulting health and family problems.

"If a woman comes into a clinic, even a solid one in Moscow, and asks how to become pregnant, they will tell her," Kon said in his lecture. "But if she asks how to receive pleasure from this, they will say

"We can't help you, it's not our speciality."

Traditionally, Soviet women are expected only to be good mothers and housewives.

"Sexual pleasure was considered not important to marriage," he said. Today, however, Soviet women are demanding happy sex lives.

There have been some changes, however.

This year, after a 10-year struggle with censors, Kon's book "Introduction to Sexology" was finally published in the Soviet Union. A new book, which he says will include illustrations of sexual positions, is slated for publication early next year.

Sex clinics have been opened in several Soviet cities and the Health Ministry is beginning to realize that AIDS, the high rates of divorce and abortions cannot be reduced without the help of psychologists and sociologists, Kon said.

This year, the Health Ministry newspaper Meditsinskaya Gazeta decried a chronic shortage of condoms and printed a reader's letter saying some people were so desperate they were using balloons as a substitute.

It kills friendships. It breaks up families. It destroys happiness. It ruins lives. We can't say it any plainer than that. Get in a car with someone who's had too much to drink and you take your life in your hands. Get behind the wheel after you've had too much to drink and you not only endanger your own life, you jeopardize the lives of innocent people besides. If you drink, don't drive.

Drive Safely This New Year's Weekend!
