CLOSING - Bernie Giovino, manager of the Brunswick Parkade Lanes on West Middle Turnpike, says the bowling alley will close May 28 after 30 years in business. He's been manager for all but two of those years.

Bowling alley striking out May 28

By Nancy Pappas Manchester Herald. Although the lanes are filled with bowlers almost every day, the Brunswick Parkade Lanes at 246 1/2 W. Middle Turnpike is scheduled to close its doors May 28, after 30 years in business. The bowling alley regularly attracts 800 people on a weekday, and accommodates as many as 2,000 a weekend, according to Bernie Giovino, who has managed the lanes for all but two of the past 30 years. But he said that the lanes cannot continue to operate in a deteriorating building, with outdated equipment and an impending rent increase from the landlord, Cutter Realty of Stamford. Giovino said Monday that he had received confirmation of the closing Thursday from the property administration department of Brunswick Recreation Center, the Chicago-based company which owns the Manchester facility and about 130 other bowling establishments in the U.S., Europe and Canada. According to Giovino and a spokesman for Cutter Realty, Brunswick had a 30-year lease that will expire in June. Giovino said that Cutter had proposed a new rental schedule which would more than double his monthly other modifications. Judy Herman, who works in the leasing department at Cutter, said that the end of those long leases is to try to bring things up to fair market value," she said. Handy Yarnoff, who negotiates leasing arrangements, was unavailable for comment. Adrian Sakowicz, vice president for communications at Brunswick Recreation, said that, although the firm would like to continue to operate in the Manchester area, "we were unable to come up with an extension or renewal of the leasing agreement which was agreeable to both parties." In addition to the increase in rent, Brunswick was looking at renovations which would cost at least $500,000, said Giovino. This would include modernizing and upgrading the equipment, gutting and rebuilding the rest rooms and making several other modifications. Brunswick's decision to close the lanes was a wise one, from a business standpoint, according to Giovino. "But from a personal point of view, it's awful. This has been my home for 30 years," he said. "The place where I live, where I sleep, is really just my second home." Bowling league presidents and secretaries are being warned this week that they will need to look for other bowling locations. But the three nearest allies, Vernon Lanes, Ten-Pin Bowl in South Windsor and Silver Lane Leisureland in East Hartford, are already operating at near capacity.

No 6th grade in reopening

By Andrew J. Davis Manchester Herald. Highland Park School, scheduled to reopen in September, will not have a sixth grade the first year because not enough students can be attracted to form a class. School Superintendent James P. Kennedy told the Board of Education Monday night. The school board voted in June 1988 to reopen the school up to grade 5 in September 1989. Last year, school officials said a sixth grade would be formed if 18 or more parents agreed to send their children to Highland Park for the 1989-90 school year. Only seven families have agreed to send their sixth-graders to Highland Park next year. "It is evident there will not be enough students," Kennedy said during Monday's meeting at Nathan Hale School. Though the school administration has not heard from 18 third-affected families, there still would not be enough students to form a sixth grade, said Wilson E. Deakin Jr., assistant school superintendent. Because the school board promised parents when the school was closed in 1984 that students would not be moved twice in elementary school, the board wanted to give parents a choice of whether to have their children move again or stay in their current school, said Deakin. The students who would have formed a sixth grade were in kindergarten when the school closed. The sixth-graders will stay at their current school - either Nathan Hale, Buckley or Martin Deakin Jr. for the next school year, he said.

Townhouse OK may change

By Nancy Concinello Manchester Herald. Peteron proposes single-family attached townhouses for the development. The property is on the south side of the Hockanum River, bounded on the east by Union Street. Commission members Ronald Gates, Leo Kwash and William Brayer and Alternates Theodore Brindamour and Josh Howroyd voted on the application. Chairman Alfred W. Sieffert Sr. and member Truman Crandall were not at the meeting. Peteron said a sixth grade would be formed if 18 or more parents agreed to send their children to Highland Park for the 1989-90 school year. Only seven families have agreed to send their sixth-graders to Highland Park next year. "It is evident there will not be enough students," Kennedy said during Monday's meeting at Nathan Hale School. Bundy goes to the chair

Execution brings relief to homes of victims' kin. By Ron Word The Associated Press. STARKE, Fla. - Ted Bundy, the "diabolical" law school dropout who confessed to killing 29 women in four Western states, was executed in the electric chair today for the 1978 rape and murder of a 12-year-old girl. At 7:06 a.m., six minutes past schedule, the executioner turned on 2,000 volts of electricity and Bundy gently arched back in the chair and clenched his fists. One minute later, the power was turned off. At 7:16 this morning, the doctor at Florida State Prison pronounced Theodore Bundy dead," said Jon Peck, a spokesman for Florida Gov. Bob Martinez. "He was executed right on schedule." In his final statement, Bundy said, "Jim and Fred, I'd like you to give my love to my family and friends." Jim Coleman is Bundy's attorney from Washington, D.C., and Fred Lawrence is a Methodist minister who spent the night in prayer with him. In addition to praying, a remorseful Bundy, 42, also placed two last calls to his mother in Tacoma, Wash., to say farewell. "He sounds wonderful," Louise Bundy said after the first telephone call. "He sounds very much at peace with himself." At the conclusion of the second, Bundy's mother told him, "You'll always be my precious son," according to today's Morning News Tribune of Tacoma. Bundy, who had dodged three previous execution dates through appeals, has been called a suspect in many as 36 deaths. In addition to the crime for which he was executed, he was under a death sentence for the murder of Theodore Bundy's daughter and two Florida State University sorority sisters. Around 5:30 a.m., the final preparations began with a prison official shaving Bundy's head and right leg, where the electrodes were later placed. When Bundy entered the chamber at 7:01 a.m., wearing a light blue shirt and dark blue pants, he looked frightened but walked directly to the electric chair. After being seated he nodded to his attorney and minister and mouthed words to them. Forty-two people witnessed the execution from behind a plexiglass partition. They included 12 official witnesses, among them a state representative and three state attorneys; 12 reporters; and 18 other people, mostly corrections officials. More than 100 people supporting the execution and about two dozen against milled around outside the Florida State Prison. At 7 a.m. a small group of death penalty supporters lit sparklers and firecrackers and cheered, while opponents silently held candles and then held a memorial service. Within a half hour of the execution, a hearse carried Bundy's body out of the prison to Gainesville for an autopsy. The execution brought a sigh of relief in the LaConner, Wash., home of Vivian Rancourt, whose daughter, Susan, was among Bundy's victims. "Good," Mrs. Rancourt said when told Bundy was dead. "The only thing I can say is thank God. It's finally over." Bundy's final appeals, including a series to the U.S. Supreme Court, were rejected Monday. On Tuesday morning, Peck said, "The governor told the superintendent at the prison there were no stays, saying, 'On behalf of the countless victims of Theodore Bundy's death and living throughout Florida and the nation, I direct you to proceed

Police Roundup

Charged with truck theft

A Manchester man was arrested Monday in South Windsor driving a stolen pickup truck, police said. John E. Johnson, 29, of 90 Rachel Road, was stopped by South Windsor police after the owner of the 1989 Ford pickup truck reported it stolen to Manchester police, police said.

The victim left the truck keys in the truck when he went inside a convenience store on Oakland Street in Manchester, according to police reports. When the victim left the store he saw his truck being driven away, police said.
Police said when Johnson was arrested he had an additional set of car keys that were reported stolen from Chorges Motors, police said.
Johnson was charged with first- and third-degree larceny in the thefts, police said. He was held on $25,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Jan. 30.

Three charged with drug use

Three area people were arrested last Wednesday on charges of possessing drugs.
Desiree L. Church, 26, of 7 West End St., Stafford and Lisa A. Minor, 26, of 71 West Main St., Stafford and Kenneth A. Covert Jr., 23, of 313 Phoenix St., Vernon, were all charged with possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia, police said.

In addition, Church was also charged with possession of a controlled substance. Police said they first noticed suspicious activity among the suspects in a car in a parking lot off Oakland Road. The suspects drove the car to a secluded area near Union Haven elementary school children and a full-day schedule for secondary children. Labor Day was Sept. 5.
Kennedy said the recommendation to add the possession of inoperable or fake guns to the list of reasons for expulsion or suspension from schools would bring policy in line with changes in state law.

The board is scheduled to vote on the policy at its Feb. 9 meeting, he said.
Under a policy change approved unanimously by the school board, students will not be allowed to distribute political campaign literature at school.
The old policy, which had been in effect for almost 10 years, did not specify students be excluded and only specified the distribution of campaign literature was against the rules for a referendum vote, said James P. Kennedy, school superintendent.

Thoughts

If Christians are united or are truly one, then we will see them with one purpose or goal.
This is true of all Christians. They have one purpose given them by Jesus while he was still on earth. It was stated by him in these words, "Go into all the world — make disciples of all nations, baptize them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit — teach them to observe all that I have commanded you."

Since Jesus left the world, his followers have tried to win all nations to the truth that Jesus taught them, baptizing and teaching them.
Through the centuries since that time, Christians have reached out to all people telling them of Jesus and his teachings. Christians are united by this one purpose and will continue to be one forever.

Board OKs opening date of schools

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

School will permanently begin before Labor Day under a policy change approved Monday by the Board of Education.
The school administration also recommended changing the school's discipline policy to make it illegal to bring inoperable guns or fake guns to school. The school board did not vote on that matter. The school board met Monday at Nathan Hale School.

In a unanimous vote, the school board voted 7-0 to change the board's policy on permanently changing the opening of school date. Board members Bernice Cobb and John A. Tucci were not at the meeting.
The change was necessary because of the adding of in-service teacher training days over the last few years. There are three in-service days during this school year.

The new policy also states that school will not be held the last week of June.
The old policy stated that if Labor Day fell on Sept. 5 or later, school would begin the week prior to the holiday. If Labor Day fell between Sept. 1 and 4, school would begin after the holiday.
For the last two years school has opened before Labor Day, said Kennedy. This school year, classes began last Aug. 30 with a four-hour session for elementary school children and a full-day schedule for secondary children. Labor Day was Sept. 5.

Kennedy said the recommendation to add the possession of inoperable or fake guns to the list of reasons for expulsion or suspension from schools would bring policy in line with changes in state law.
The board is scheduled to vote on the policy at its Feb. 9 meeting, he said.
Under a policy change approved unanimously by the school board, students will not be allowed to distribute political campaign literature at school.

The old policy, which had been in effect for almost 10 years, did not specify students be excluded and only specified the distribution of campaign literature was against the rules for a referendum vote, said James P. Kennedy, school superintendent.

Kennedy said the previous policy was "ambiguous." Non-profit organizations will continue to be allowed to distribute approved materials through schools, he said.

The policy was reviewed as part of the school board's attempt to periodically review its policies, said Kennedy. He said the change is not because of an incident during last November's election when Susan Buckno, a Republican candidate for the 13th Assembly District seat, was scheduled to appear at a Parent-Teacher Association meeting. Buckno did not appear at the meeting after complaints were made to the PTA.

Residents urge school budget not be cut down

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Only three people spoke at a public hearing on School Superintendent James P. Kennedy's proposed $40 million school budget and urged that the budget not be cut.
Only two members of the Parent-Teacher Association Budget Study Committee, and the director of the Latz Children's Museum spoke at the public hearing. The hearing was held during the school board's Monday meeting at Nathan Hale School.

None of the speakers recommended cutting the budget, which calls for a 12.74 percent increase over the current $36 million budget.
Ted Brindamour, of 941 Hillstown Road, and a member of the PTA committee, told the board the PTA committee did not recommend cuts in the budget. He said cutting the budget could reduce the value of educational services.

"The Budget Study Committee does not endorse cutting the superintendent's budget," he said. "The committee feels that since most of the budget is either contractual or legal obligations, any cut to the budget will affect the quality of education for the average student attending the Manchester school system, and we are opposed to reducing the quality of the school system we all worked so hard to achieve."

Cutting the budget would be difficult since more than 80 percent is fixed costs such as teachers' salaries and fringe benefits, Brindamour said.
Recent teacher salary increases amount for 48.31 percent of the proposed budget increase and 55.35 percent of the total budget, school officials have said.

The committee did compile a list of 18 areas that could be reduced, if the budget must be cut, said Brindamour.
The suggestions include: phasing in and reducing a $20,000 request to improve the quality of equipment for High School computer science laboratories, reducing by $1,100 the $8,500 budgeted for supplies for the fine arts program, and eliminating $5,000 from the language arts program, which would be used to develop a research style guide at the high school.

The committee also suggested hiring a new employee for the building and grounds office on a part-time basis instead of full time. There is $25,000 budgeted for the new position.
Richard P. Jensen, of 231 Keney St., also a member of the PTA committee, asked the school board why special education courses have not been provided with computers.
No one responded to the question but Kennedy has previously said that $180,000 has been proposed for new programs and improvements.

Steven C. Ling, director of the Latz Children's Museum, asked that the $13,750 budgeted to the museum not be cut. He said the museum provides an invaluable service to the school system.
The school board is scheduled to vote on the budget on Feb. 9.

Herald wins 3 awards

The Manchester Herald and three staff members have received awards in annual competition sponsored by the New England Press Association.

City Editor Marie Grady won a second place for editorial writing.
Reporter Nancy Concomino won third place in the business/economic reporting category for a story on the development boom in the North End.
A third Herald staffer, photographer Patrick Flynn, received a first place award for work done for the weekly Westport News before he joined the Herald in August 1988.

There were nine circulation categories, ranging from weekly newspapers with circulations of 3,000 or more to daily newspapers with circulations of 75,000 or more.

The Herald was in the combined class category for the awards. That category is open to daily newspapers with circulations of up to 20,000 and weekly newspapers with circulations of 75,000 or more.
The first-place winner of the editorial award in the combined class was Emerson Lynn of the St. Albans (Vt.) Messenger.

The first-place winner in the business/economics reporting category for the combined class was Charles Provancher of the Lewiston (Maine) Journal.
Overall, the Lawrence (Mass.) Eagle-Tribune captured the most awards. The newspaper, which received a Pulitzer Prize last year, also was named the George A. Speers Newspaper of the Year for the combined daily class.

The New Milford Times in Connecticut received the George A. Speers Weekly Newspaper of the Year Award.
The late Speers was chairman of the Journalism Department at Northeastern University in Boston for many years and executive director of the New England Press Association.

The awards were presented Friday at the 1988 Better Newspaper Competition awards banquet at the Marriott Hotel, Cambridge, Mass. There were nearly 1,500 entries in the competition, which were judged by editors of various New England newspapers. More than 400 received awards.

'Great' to watch Bush being sworn into office

By Andrew J. Davis

First lady Nancy Reagan who worried about "superficial" material goods too much, said Malone.
"She's (Barbara Bush) a real lady, down to earth," he said.
Malone was less impressed with Vice President Dan Quayle. While saying Quayle had enough experience to be vice president, he said, "I don't want Bush to get shot tomorrow."

Even though Bush is "less conservative" than his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, Malone said he did not expect any major changes in government.
Bush will have to concentrate on reducing the annual deficit, the trade deficit and on education, said Malone, a former member of the Board of Education.

Malone said Bush, who has said he wants to be known as the "education president," will have to find out who is responsible for declining Scholastic Aptitude Test scores. He said teachers and educators may not be to blame. Parents may be the reason since many are not being enough time with their children, he said.
"Everything went smoothly. It was pretty upbeat," said Malone, "though the parade was a madhouse. You couldn't move up and down."
Smith, a Manchester coordinator for Bush's campaign, said he'd been waiting eight years to see Bush inaugurated.
Smith went to the inauguration and parade.

"The crowd in general felt very confident and very good that George Bush became president," he said. "It was great. We loved it."
Though Malone said Bush will make a good president, he said he was most impressed with Bush's wife, Barbara.

Ruling has cast doubt on state's aside programs

HARTFORD (AP) — The state's acting attorney general says a U.S. Supreme Court ruling striking down a "set aside" program in Virginia doesn't necessarily mean the end of similar programs aimed at helping minority owned businesses in Connecticut.

In a 6-3 decision, the bitterly divided Supreme Court on Monday struck down an illegal reverse discrimination a Richmond, Va., program that required 30 percent of the project to minority owned firms.

"Our state program has not fallen by this ruling," said Attorney General Clarence Manti Riddle said. "Right now we're saying it is holding. It hasn't been knocked down. Ours is a different plan as the other legislative history."

The state of Connecticut and its largest cities — Hartford, New Haven and Bridgeport — have similar set aside programs aimed at helping minority owned businesses, especially in the construction industry.

"Obviously we're very concerned because we feel the set aside program has been very important in helping minority businesses get off the ground in the state," said Andrew Brecher, deputy commissioner of economic development, the department responsible for overseeing the state's principal minority set aside program.

State law requires that 25 percent of most state business go to companies that have less than $3 million in annual revenues a year. Twenty-five percent at least 15 percent by blacks, Hispanics or other minority group or by women.

Riddle said the her office would have to study what she described as the Supreme Court's "intricate" ruling to determine whether it will affect Connecticut's law. Connecticut filed an amicus brief on Richmond's behalf in the Supreme Court case.

About 150 small businesses are owned by minorities in Connecticut; about 200 small companies are owned by women, Brecher said. About 10 percent of the state's population is black and about 4 percent Hispanic.

About $15 million worth of state business went to such companies in fiscal 1987-88, he said.
The state set aside was increased from a range of 15 to 25 percent to 25 percent last year as the result of controversy surrounding construction of the $53.3 million Legislative Office Building in Hartford.

Some members of the Black and Puerto Rican Caucus were angered because about $30 million of the $38 million in actual construction contracts were exempted from the set aside program to minority owned businesses.

"It's tragic," Rep. William Dyson, D-New Haven, one of the lawmakers critical of the L.O.B. project, said of the Supreme Court decision. "If redress to past practices cannot be addressed in the form of set asides, the question then becomes, what can be done?"

"Is there justice to be found anywhere?"
Hartford law only requires that the city have an affirmative action program in awarding city contracts, but does not specify a particular percentage, said Ronald Fletcher, executive director of Hartford's Commission on Human Relations, which oversees that city's affirmative procurement program.

The city also requires developers who get tax breaks or other financial incentives from the city to contract out 15 percent of work on private projects to minority businesses, he said.

"Clearly we need to take a real close look at it real fast," Fletcher said of Supreme Court ruling.

The high court ruling apparently won't effect a federal set aside program enacted by Congress in 1989. The congressional plan requires 10 percent of federal public works contracts be earmarked for minority controlled businesses.

"I think George Bush is going to do a really great job," said Malone. "The important thing is to see the biggest Republic in the world in an orderly transition."

Malone also is a member of the Republican Town Committee. Beverly Malone is a member of the Cheney National Historic District Commission.
Smith agreed that education and the deficit were two areas Bush has to work on, along with possibly cutting the defense budget. He said the country will change under Bush and become "a kinder, gentler nation."

"I think he can identify with the average person," he said.

Lottery chief says changes could backfire

NEWINGTON (AP) — Although a state lawmaker says top gaming officials are seriously considering increasing the odds to boost interest in the Lotto game, the lottery division chief says a plan could backfire. Top officials from the Division of Special Revenue met last week with the committee's co-chairman the impression that they were receptive, if not committed outright, to changes in the Lotto game. "There was a general feeling that the division would in fact like to see something like that," state Rep.

Lawrence Anastasia Jr., D-Norwalk, co-chairman of the Legislature's Public Safety Committee, said Monday. Anastasia said he and other committee members believe that the best way to increase sagging Lotto sales is to increase the odds, which would result in higher jackpots. "But lottery unit chief J. Blaine Lewis Jr. has written a report critical of a proposal by General Instrument Corp. of Maryland, which operates the lottery computers for the state, to increase the field of Lotto numbers from the 40 numbers used now to 42, 43 or 44 numbers.

A person wins Lotto by selecting all six of the numbers picked at random in twice-weekly drawings. "The worst-case scenario goes this way. The field is made larger making it more difficult to win. Customers become angry, sales drop, no one wins, sales drop more and the game is finally scrapped. This is not a wild theory — it has happened," Lewis wrote in a Jan. 13 report to the Gaming Policy Board, which supervises the division's operations. The company said increasing the field to 44 numbers could increase annual Lotto sales by as much as $85 million a year from the depressed levels now. Sales for this fiscal year have been running at a projected annual rate of about $220 million — down from $259 million for the year that ended last June 30. General Instrument and other state gaming officials have pointed to an extended period of small Lotto jackpots — caused by frequent winners — and less excitement in general with the game, which has not been changed since April 1986, when a second weekly drawing was added. The Gaming Policy Board is to meet Thursday to consider Lewis' report.

Dirty water charge halts housing plan

By Jacqueline Bennett

COVENTRY — The Planning and Zoning Commission took no action Monday night on a proposed 23-lot development after residents opposing it said water in the area is so polluted it flows black through faucets. "I don't know if we should be approving house lots on property when we know there has been pollution," PZC Chairman Jonathan Kreisberg said during the public hearing at the Town Office Building. Kreisberg continued the hearing to Feb. 14 so that more information can be gathered.

The development, called Thornton Book Estates, would be built on 34 acres of land on Pucker Street owned by Ray Zimmerman. The site plan for the development was presented by Robert Arsenault and Peter DeMallie of Design Professionals Inc., South Windsor, and their engineer, James LeClair. Jacqueline Dworzysk of 465 Pucker St. said that last April water from her well came through her faucet black. "I turned on the tap and it (water) splurged black. It was days before it turned gray and weeks before it cleared up," Dworzysk said. She said she thought the water could be contaminated with nitrates. Dworzysk's husband, Michael, who had several years ago farmed land next to the site of the proposed development, said that after he sold that land it was used as a cornfield and was fertilized and sprayed with weed killer, until two years ago. That, he said, could be the source of the pollution which seeped into the ground and drained down.

John L. Twery of 605 Pucker St. said that 15 years ago his well had been found to be polluted with nitrates. "That was a capped well," said Twery. "So apparently nitrates were sinking into the aquifer." Most residents were concerned about water draining onto their properties from the development and possible contamination of their wells if septic systems at the development over-loaded. Residents said that may happen because the property is so wet. Ed and Cathy Derench of 554 Pucker St. said they have hired Hartford attorney Edward Daley. "Their detention basin is close to our well," said Cathy Derench. "I don't want raw sewage flowing over on to my property." Arsenault told the group he is satisfied that won't happen. He also said he was unaware of any nitrate pollution. Kreisberg asked if another well could be drilled on the site to check the quality of the water, but Arsenault said he would have to check with the land owner before agreeing to do that.

Others complained the development would double the number of houses on the street and create a traffic hazard because a one-lane bridge nearby could not handle the extra cars generated from the development. A decision on the proposal, called Cotswold, may be made at a special hearing set for Feb. 6. That hearing will be held at Capt. Nathan Hale School primarily to discuss the commission's proposal to designate about 20 acres along Route 44 as an economic development district. Stratford developer John F. Bigley wants to build the Cotswold project on 130 acres. Town Planner Diane Blackman needs more time to review documents about the proposal, said Jonathan Kreisberg, PZC chairman.

During the meeting at the Town Office Building, the commission also postponed a decision on the 13-lot Orchard View subdivision of almost 26 acres on Hartford and Milk Street owned by Frank K. and Mary Rixy. A wetlands portion of the proposal to build driveways through the wetlands was approved but the PZC portion needed specific motions drafted because the proposal involves rear lots, Kreisberg said. A hearing set for Monday on the fourth phase of Mountain Ridge Estates, calling for 191 units on 66 acres, was rescheduled to Feb. 27. Landtech Associates, the applicant, requested an extension to gather more information. The commission also heard a site-plan proposal from Brian King of Fransen Consultants on behalf of John Poulos, owner of land on Bunker Hill Road. He wants to subdivide the 48.3-acre into eight lots. A special permit is needed because there are four rear lots.

King said the 16.2-acre of wetlands at the site will not be disturbed and no fertilizer will be used there during construction. There is a 25-foot buffer zone along the wetlands and erosion control would be used during construction. New PZC member Rubert LeBreux questioned the accuracy of the test holes dug for units on 66 acres. He was admitted to Meriden-Wallingford Hospital, where he remained in serious condition today suffering from smoke inhalation and minor burns. Police said Kennedy had stopped breathing by the time firefighters found him in his car in the parking lot of a Burger King restaurant on East Main Street in Meriden. Fire Inspector George Talbot said firefighters didn't know Kennedy was in the car because the windows were blackened by smoke. They discovered him in the driver's seat after putting out the fire. Talbot said.

LOCAL & STATE

Victims had similar pasts

HARWINTON (AP) — State police are investigating the similar circumstances surrounding the strangulation deaths of two young women from a tough Waterbury neighborhood as they attempt to conclude whether the same person or persons may have killed both women.

Both women's bodies were dumped in a ravine near the Naugatuck River in Harwinton — one in October and one last week — and both were familiar to Waterbury police. State police on Monday identified the latest victim, whose body was discovered Friday by troopers checking out an anonymous tip, was Mildred Alvarado, 30. She hadn't been sexually assaulted before she was killed, police said. Her body was found near the site where two hunters last Oct. 16 discovered the body of Karen Everett, 24, clad only in a shirt. Everett, like Alvarado, was strangled and her body found not long after she had apparently been killed, said state police Sgt. Scott O'Mara. He said authorities weren't able to determine whether Everett had been sexually assaulted.

Conservation ideas aired

HARTFORD (AP) — Investments in water conservation devices could generate $5.4 million in annual savings for Connecticut residents and conserve about 3 billion gallons, Gov. William A. O'Neill said. O'Neill submitted legislation that, among other provisions, would require water companies with at least 250 customers to provide customers with conservation devices they could attach to showers, toilets and other plumbing fixtures. The cost of the conservation kits would be passed on to each customer in a one-time $15 charge. They would have to be made available to the customers by Jan. 15, 1991. The companies affected provide water to 85 percent of the residential users in the state. Residential users consume about two-thirds of the 45 billion gallons used in Connecticut annually.

Ed and Cathy Derench of 554 Pucker St. said they have hired Hartford attorney Edward Daley. "Their detention basin is close to our well," said Cathy Derench. "I don't want raw sewage flowing over on to my property." Arsenault told the group he is satisfied that won't happen. He also said he was unaware of any nitrate pollution. ### Anti-abortion legislators pushing for bills

HARTFORD (AP) — Anti-abortion legislators say they'll resume a push this year for bills requiring parents be notified before a minor could get an abortion and barring the state from paying for most abortions for poor women. Similar bills have been killed in recent legislative sessions, but about 200 demonstrators rallied at the Capitol on Monday to show their support for the measures.

Gov. Joseph J. Fasullo, a Democrat, urged them to help end "the silent holocaust" and said that "abortion violates the most basic of human rights." He said 23 million abortions had been performed since the U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortion 16 years ago. "This clearly is a question of good against evil," said Sen. Thomas Scott, R-Milford.

One bill would prohibit the use of state Medicaid funds to pay for abortions for welfare recipients, except in cases of rape or incest, or when the pregnancy endangers the life of the mother. The legislators and demonstrators said they were optimistic about the chances of getting the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn, or at least restrict or modify, the 1973 high court decision affirming a woman's right to choose abortion.

But Deborah Bakulski, coordinator for a coalition of pro-abortion groups called Freedom to Choose, said she was just as optimistic that the Supreme Court would not strike down the principles of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling. That ruling, she said, "was based on a woman's right to privacy and women still have that right." The high court has agreed to hear a Missouri case this year involving central abortion issues. She also said most Connecticut residents support the pro-choice position and said "we're confident that the legislature will continue to represent their constituents and support that position."

Bakulski said her coalition opposed a law requiring that a minor's parents be notified before an abortion is performed, although "we do want children to involve their parents." But she said, "we don't believe you can mandate good family communications." Former Sen. Regina Smith, a North Branford Democrat who is active in the anti-abortion movement, said that with recent changes in the Supreme Court bench "the sentiments this year are far more hopeful than they have been in the past."

She helped lead a peaceful demonstration outside the Capitol, which later moved inside to hear brief speeches from Fasullo and the legislators who support the two bills. One demonstrator, Edith Maher of West Hartford, carried a placard reading, "Abortion will bring chastisement from an angry God." But Smith said the debate is not a religious one. "We look at this as a moral issue. You don't have to have any religion to have moral values."

Her group, known as the Pro-Life Council of Connecticut, last year gathered more than 100,000 signatures in support of a bill eliminating Medicaid funding of abortions. She said the money could be better spent providing those women with better pre-natal care, decent housing, food and clothing, which she said, "would help to address the disgraceful, high infant mortality rate in our state."

Members of the group did not attempt to block entrance to the building as was done during previous protests in Hartford and Bridgeport. The Planned Parenthood office was open during the demonstration, but Susan Lloyd Yolen, a spokeswoman, said no abortions are performed during the evening.

to ensure each side could "freely express their views," said Lt. James Sorrentino, a police spokesman. The two groups did not mingle, and there were no arrests. The anti-abortion protesters carried signs that read "Abortion is not private property" and "Every child is a wanted child." Planned Parenthood's supporters carried placards with slogans such as "Keep abortion safe for women" and "No return to back-alley abortions."

As the abortion foes sang hymns and songs, such as "Glory, Glory Hallelujah," Planned Parenthood's supporters engaged in a number of chants, including "Women shall decide their fate, not the church, not the state."

John Grant, of New Haven, who used a megaphone to lead the anti-abortion protesters, said the demonstration by the Connecticut Pro-Life Action Network was held to mark the 16th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision upholding the right of women to legal abortions. "We are doing penance for not

Planned Parenthood counters New Haven protest

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Supporters of a woman's right to legal abortion responded to a call for help from Planned Parenthood and met in an anti-abortion protest with an equally forceful counterdemonstration.

As anti-abortion protesters marched Monday night in front of Planned Parenthood, about an equal number of supporters of a woman's right to legal abortion staged their own demonstration about 20 feet away. Two city policemen were posted between the two groups of protesters to ensure each side could "freely express their views," said Lt. James Sorrentino, a police spokesman. The two groups did not mingle, and there were no arrests. ### Angry lawmaker suggests probe of ethics panel

HARTFORD (AP) — A lawmaker angered by a letter he received from the State Ethics Commission has proposed that the General Assembly's investigative committee examine the way the seven-member ethics panel functions.

Questions about the ethics commission surfaced Monday as the General Assembly's Program Review and Investigations Committee narrowed its list of proposed 1989 investigation topics to six. The committee has yet to make its final decisions.

State Rep. Dean Markham, D-East Hampton, proposed that the committee look into the processes and the policies of the ethics commission. Markham said he was angered last fall when the ethics commission wrote to him requesting information about his dealings with lobbyists.

Markham said he has also spoken to several lobbyists who are upset over the commission's policies. "I think the personal letter to me sort of opened my eyes... to questions about what they were really doing," Markham said.

Murder convictions upheld

HARTFORD (AP) — The state Supreme Court has upheld the murder conviction of a black man who had claimed the prosecutor violated his rights by systematically excluding blacks from the jury.

The ruling on Monday came in the case of Anthony Holloway, accused in the 1985 shooting death of Roy Lee MacIntyre at a Bridgeport housing project. The high court also upheld the murder conviction of Hartley Anderson in the stabbing death of Sharon Ruggiero, owner of an East Windsor liquor store in 1985.

Anderson had claimed in his appeal that the trial court judge had improperly allowed into evidence certain statements he made to the police. The Supreme Court rejected that claim, as well as another that the trial judge had wrongly refused to allow Anderson to call another witness after he had rested his case.

Holloway said he was angered last fall when the ethics commission wrote to him requesting information about his dealings with lobbyists. CHAIRS MEETING — President George Bush talks with Secretary of State-designate James Baker during the administration's first Cabinet meeting at the White House Monday.

Bush meeting with Congress; trimming deficit on agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is meeting with congressional leaders, and aides say the agenda will include trimming the nation's enormous budget deficit as the top item on the agenda.

Bush, who promised Congress an "offer hand" of cooperation, had a chance to make good on his words at today's meeting with House and Senate leaders.

Economic gap between races grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation made no progress in reducing economic disparities between blacks and whites during the Reagan years, and blacks face increasing misery from poverty, crime and drugs, the National Urban League reported today.

ADA says campaign issues fared well

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advocacy group says that despite George Bush's liberal-bashing in last year's campaign, liberal politicians and issues fared well in the elections and are poised to make their mark in the 101st Congress.

Two manslaughter charges filed against Miami officer

MIAMI (AP) — Two manslaughter counts have been filed against a policeman whose fatal shooting of a black man ignited last week's racial riots, but a lawyer for one of the victims said the charges amount to a "whitewash."

Officer William Lozano, 29, was charged Monday, hours after the funeral for 23-year-old Clement Lloyd, who was shot to death on his motorcycle while being pursued by another officer for speeding.

The Hispanic officer, who has been suspended with pay since the shooting on the holiday for the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., surrendered Monday at Dade County Jail and left 30 minutes later after posting $10,000 bond.

Also Monday, a special city panel reviewing the killings complained it lacked sufficient investigatory powers, and the U.S. Justice Department said it sent two prosecutors to Miami to investigate.

A government source in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said a grand jury could be impaneled as early as this week to study possible federal charges against Lozano.

Lozano, 29, was charged Monday with manslaughter with a firearm, said State Attorney Janet Reno.

But Ellis Rubin, an attorney for Blumhartz's family, said that Lozano wasn't charged with second-degree murder, which indicates malice was present in the attack and carries a possible life prison sentence.

Ms. Reno also was criticized by Lozano's attorney, Roy Black, who said the officer acted in self-defense and was being made a scapegoat for political purposes.

Sovs dig for victims

MOSCOW (AP) — Rescuers used bulldozers, cranes and excavators to dig for victims of an earthquake that sent a massive mudslide crashing through mountain villages in Soviet Central Asia, killing about 1,000 people, officials said.

An estimated 600 people died in the farming settlement of Sharora when the quake, the country's second in as many months, struck just before dawn Monday in Tadzhikistan, said Zaimiddin Nasreddinov, editor-in-chief of the republic's official news agency.

It unthrew a wall of sodden dirt and mud at least five miles wide that buried the village of Okuli-Bolo and much of Sharora, said Erkin Kasimov, a Tadzhikistan Foreign Ministry official.

When the earthquake came, it was like a catapult, and it hurled the sodden earth onto the villages below, Kasimov said.

Man shoots co-workers

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A man with a history of mental problems wounded two co-workers at a car dealership when he opened fire with an AK-47 assault rifle on customers and employees before killing himself, police said.

The body of Willie Howard Womack Jr., 26, of Virginia Beach, was found Monday in the trunk of a service garage at Kimch Ford. Near his body was the rifle and a derringer, said police Cpl. Robert P. Hayes.

Heavily armed police had surrounded the garage and tried to contact Womack for more than six hours before they lobbed tear gas canisters into the building and went inside.

Womack's sister, Angela, had tried to contact her brother over an intercom after police efforts to reach him by telephone and bullhorn failed. But he apparently had been dead during what police thought was a standoff, said Hayes.

"SNAKE KING" CHALLENGE — Dastagir Hussein, 63, known as a snake king in Malaysia, holds one of 100 cobras in a specially-constructed room at the National Museum in Kuala Lumpur Tuesday. Hussein will sleep, eat and play together with the poisonous creatures for 14 days to challenge Guinness records.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A man in a wheelchair tried to set fire to a 16th-century painting by Raphael in the Vatican Museum today by setting ablaze a flammable liquid he tossed at the painting, Vatican officials said.

Museum guards restrained the man, quickly extinguished the flames and prevented the work from being damaged, said Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro.

The Italian news agency ANSA said police identified the man as Thomas Lange, a 31-year-old West German from Berlin who had been living in Italy about a year.

Shiite factions clash

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Shiite Muslim militias battled anew in south Lebanon today while their leaders met with Syrian and Iranian officials in Damascus to seek an end to the bloodshed.

Police said four people were killed and 14 wounded in the fighting between the Syrian-backed Amal militia and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God.

That spared the casualty toll since the latest spasm of violence erupted Dec. 31 to at least 172 killed and 332 wounded.

The fighting began with artillery exchanges late Monday, shattering four-day cease-fires. It centered on Hezbollah's stronghold on the western edge of Israel's self-designated "security zone."

Report: Impose fees on polluters of coastal water

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study by two congressional subcommittees recommends imposing fees on companies that dump toxic wastes and other pollutants into the nation's coastal waters.

A fee system would "create powerful economic incentives" for companies to reduce the amount of wastes dumped into oceans, bays and estuaries while raising money to pay for new environmental programs, according to the report released Monday.

The fees would be imposed on companies that are meeting or exceeding regulatory standards, which allow some dumping. Companies would be fined for illegally dumping toxic wastes and other pollutants already are subject to criminal penalties, including fines.

The 48-page report, released by Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., from nine hearings held during the past two years by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee on fishery and the environment, headed by Studds, and the oceanography subcommittee.

The panels painted a bleak picture of the state of the nation's coastal waters.

"The continuing damage to coastal resources from pollution, development and natural forces raises serious doubts about the ability of our estuaries, bays and near coastal waters to survive these stresses," the subcommittee wrote.

The subcommittee recommended development of a national coastal protection policy, increased funding levels, stricter pollution enforcement efforts and new incentives for voluntary cleanups.

"If we fail to act and if current trends continue unabated, what is now a serious, widespread collection of problems may coalesce into a national crisis by early in the next century."

Commandos surrounded after battle

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — In a major policy shift, today held soldiers' hostage at an army base they stormed, and the sporadic fire of guns and mortars continued after battles authorities said claimed at least 25 deaths.

The commandos scattered right-wing pamphlets about the infantry base when they broke through its main gate in a stolen truck Monday morning, but the government said they were leftist guerrillas.

The battle was the most serious of its kind since an attack by the leftist Peoples Revolutionary Party and an allied guerrilla group on an army arsenal near Buenos Aires in 1975.

Leftist rebels offer support of elections

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — In a major policy shift, leftist rebels have offered to participate in and respect the outcome of national elections if the U.S.-backed government meets their conditions.

The proposal from the guerrillas who have waged war against the government for nine years comes in a document, obtained by The Associated Press on Monday, signed by the five senior rebel leaders.

Beach getting worse

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Those beach-bronzed Aussies are paler this southern summer because, they say, the fabled Sydney shores are too polluted for safety.

State officials claim pollution is no worse than 30 years ago, but a cleanup of Sydney Harbor by 20,000 volunteers this month produced tons of garbage including a car, 3,000 syringes and hundreds of tires and shopping carts.

Lifeguards are getting vaccinations against hepatitis B because of the dirty water, syringes and broken glass.

Troops kill Arab youth

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers shot and killed an Arab youth in a pre-dawn raid on a West Bank village today, and the military announced that security agents had arrested dozens of members of an underground "army."

Jerusalem's mayor, Teddy Kollek, who for 23 years has championed unity in this mixed Arab and Jewish city, announced he is running for a sixth term.

Reputed mob leader arrested in shooting

NEW YORK (AP) — John Gotti, the organization's 48-year-old reputed boss of the nation's most powerful organized-crime family, was arrested on charges that he ordered the shooting of a union leader, investigators said.

One newspaper today said Gotti ordered his associates to "put a rocket in his pocket."

A grand jury indictment was to be unsealed today, sources said. This is a united city and will remain a united city, with equal rights to Arabs," said the 77-year-old mayor, who faces opposition on the City Council from ultra-Orthodox and right-wing elements that control almost half the 31 seats.

Law enforcement officials said Gotti ordered his associates to "put a rocket in his pocket."

He was arrested before Criminal Court Judge Patricia Williams, who ordered him held without bail.

Aides to Morgenthau said that shortly before the shooting, O'Connor was wounded, law enforcement officials overheard Gotti, on a court-approved listening device, talk about a planned execution of a union leader, who was not identified.

PZC stand weakened by overrule

Blacktop sidewalks instead of concrete sidewalks along a stretch of West Center Street and Spencer Street may be economical for town taxpayers who will have to pay the costs directly. But when the Planning and Zoning Commission insists in the future that private developers install concrete walks, it will be in a somewhat weakened position.

Last week the town Board of Directors, mindful of its should be of budget constraints, overruled a PZC decision that the walks should be of concrete.

"Sometimes economics has to take a little preference," Director James F. Fogarty said, explaining his vote to overrule the PZC.

Peter Loiz, the town's director of public works, said concrete walks would cost six or seven times as much. He also said that properly installed concrete walks should not require maintenance for about 10 years.

But if those arguments apply to town projects, they also apply to privately built walks. The town normally requires concrete walks in private developments because they last longer without maintenance. In the long run the taxpayers benefit from the saving.

But whether the town itself or a private builder installs the walks, someone has to pay the initial cost of the more expensive installation. Usually that someone is the person who buys a home in a new development.

With the current effort to make housing more affordable, there might be as strong an argument for making an initial saving for home buyers as there is for taxpayers.

Bush's hand to the Democrats

By Walter R. Mears

WASHINGTON — That outstretched hand President Bush is offering the Democrats had better have something in it when they sit down for hard bargaining on the budget.

The words and the gesture were eloquent, but congressional Democrats are going to want something more concrete. Bush said what he wants to bargain about, the question now is what he'll bring to the table to negotiate with.

Bush recalled a time when Congress and administrators worked together to produce budgets on which the nation could live. "Let us negotiate soon — and hard," he said in his inaugural address.

But taxes and spending were part of the ammunition Bush aimed at the Democrats during the campaign that won him the White House.

On a hundred platforms he said Congress would try to force him into imposing new taxes and he'd say no. "Read my lips, no new taxes."

The targets of Bush's favorite applause line aren't likely to forget the way it was used against them. They've already said that Bush will have to narrow the deficit gap without taxes or eat his campaign words and propose steps to increase revenue.

Furthermore, the tax question leads to the broader issues of spending priorities, which embroiled the White House and congressional Democrats for all eight years of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

That put it at the center of political debate, and as vice president, Bush was a ranking debater. Beginning his presidency, he proposed another way — a new breeze is blowing — and the old bipartisanship must be made new again.

"To my friends — and yes, I do mean friends — in the loyal opposition — and yes, I mean loyal — I put out my hand."

Bush said he was reaching out to House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas, and to Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell of Maine, and he turned to them on the inaugural platform to underscore the gesture.

This is the age of the offer, the hand, the president said. Bipartisanship historically has been linked to foreign policy, not to domestic issues like deficit budgets.

Republicans Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan became a symbol of bipartisanship when he turned from isolationism to support President Harry S. Truman in major foreign policy moves after World War II.

Vandenberg said the two-party system was indispensable, but that the nation's voice should be united at the water's edge.

He then proposed to extend the idea to subjects that don't go near the water. Talking off before a Capitol dome to narrow the deficit gap without taxes or eat his campaign words and propose steps to increase revenue.

Furthermore, the tax question leads to the broader issues of spending priorities, which embroiled the White

For Congress, too, has changed in our time," said the president, once a Texas congressman. "There has grown a certain divisiveness. We have seen the hard looks and heard the statements in which not each other's ideas are challenged, but each other's motives."

Our great parties have often been far apart and untrusting of each other. The bitter campaign in which Bush defeated Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis added to that mistrust.

Reagan could afford a hard line with Congress, especially during his first term. Republicans had won a Senate majority on his coattails — it lasted six years — and he was soaring in the polls. House Democrats could read minds.

Republicans lost three seats in the House and one in the Senate in 1988. Under the circumstances, new-look bipartisanship would be ideal for Bush if he can get it. He's determined to try. As he put it in a pre-inauguration interview:

"Using Lyndon Johnson's words, maybe different methods, let's reason together."

Diplomats in Bogota risk lives

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — One of the toughest outposts of the U.S. foreign service is Bogota, Colombia — so tough that Americans working there think twice about stopping for a red light or even a police barricade. It might be a trap.

Colombia poses the dual threat of the Medellín drug cartel and the M-19 guerrilla group. Both use kidnapping, torture and murder to get their point across — and that is to eliminate anyone who stands in the way of the multi-billion-dollar cocaine flow from Colombia to the United States.

The cartel, headquartered in the city of Medellín, operates outside of the law, in spite of the best efforts of the beleaguered Colombian government. The M-19, or the April 19 Movement, is named after the date in 1970 when its favored candidate lost an election. The cartel and the terrorists were enemies until the terrorists do some of their dirty work for the cartel.

The arrangement has worked well for both. To date, their primary victims have been Colombians — hundreds of judges, police officers, government officials and journalists. But the U.S. embassy staff is constantly on alert to avoid becoming a notch on someone's lip.

We have seen a confidential memo circulated among embassy employees, advising them how to stay alive in Bogota. The first rule of thumb is to know that Americans probably won't be kidnapped. "Our enemies must kill us," is the stark warning. "They know that neither ransom, prisoner exchange nor other deals will be made by the U.S. government to release us. This simplifies their task."

No embassy employee should ever be caught off guard. "It's a sin to be surprised," the memo says. To eliminate the element of surprise, the memo outlines examples of what to look for, which can be summarized as just about anything unusual and a few things that look perfectly normal.

Travelers eliminates 225 more positions

HARTFORD (AP) — The Travelers Corp. officials say cost-cutting measures will continue despite the elimination of 225 jobs as part of a cost-benefit analysis program.

The program identified $145 million in potential savings in the past year. Dan Kalerie, a company spokesman, said while cost cutting will continue a third stage of eliminations may not be necessary.

"We have determined what business areas will be evaluated next," Kalerie said. "That will be determined in the future depending on where we feel it makes the most sense."

Ninety-three people, 49 in the Hartford area and 44 elsewhere in the country, were told Monday that their jobs were being eliminated while 132 workers accepted a "voluntary separation option," the company said.

Last June, the Travelers announced the elimination of 465 jobs nationwide. The Travelers employed 34,021 people as of Dec. 31, 1988.

Alan Fletcher, a Travelers spokesman, said Monday's action marked the end of major job reductions for the insurer, although analysis of ways to cut costs would continue.

"The process will be continuing," he said. "We will continue to look at jobs, at tasks — tasks more than jobs. The tasks may be streamlined, but the jobs still there."

Edward H. Budd, chairman and chief executive officer of The Travelers, said in a statement: "I am pleased with the results of our cost-benefit work. It has many benefits. People throughout the company are recommending ways to do things better and are eliminating unnecessary costs."

Just as important, they are identifying areas where we need to invest in new programs and add staff with important skills."

In the third quarter of 1988, the Travelers had operating earnings of $87 million, down from $108 million in the same quarter of 1987. Nine-month operating earnings last year were $192 million compared with $330 million in the first nine months of 1987.

Hearings look at junk bonds, takeover deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and at least a half dozen congressional committees all are worried about corporate America's debt binge of junk bonds.

With a series of hearings on the growing wave of debt-financed corporate takeovers opening today, the new administration already is under pressure to come up with proposals to curb the buyouts.

Some economists worry that during a recession, highly leveraged companies would not have enough cash flow to keep up their interest payments to junk bond holders and other creditors and might pull other companies down with them.

The leadoff witness before the Senate Finance Committee is Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, a former Wall Street investment banker who officials call the junk bonds in corporate takeovers a "dangerous destabilizing element ... largely dedicated to unproductive purposes."

Since last fall Brady has had a team at the Treasury Department looking at whether the tax laws are encouraging companies to finance their expansions through debt rather than stock equity.

He also has tried to determine corporate vulnerability in the event of an economic downturn. The Senate Finance and the House Ways and Means committees already are under pressure to show that corporate debt has climbed by $613 billion in the past five years while ownership equity has declined by $110 billion in 1987.

The report also said that the ratio of debt to equity in non-financial corporations has climbed from 30 percent to 46 percent from 1981 to 1987.

Fears about the vulnerability of highly leveraged companies were heightened last September when Revco D.S. Inc., the Cleveland-based drug store chain, entered Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings after defaulting on $70 million in bonds following a buyout.

Despite the continuing booming economy, bankruptcies continue to climb — from 51 large companies defaulting on $11 billion in debt in 1984 to 87 companies defaulting on $2.4 billion in 1987.

But two weeks ago ruled out direct government action to curtail the new tide of takeovers — most of them financed by borrowing huge amounts of money against the use of junk bonds in the company being acquired through high-yield junk bonds.

Williams hauls in big numbers

By Bob Greene
The Associated Press

When you work hard, good things come your way. In Herb Williams' case, good things happened to be rebounds.

The forward grabbed a team-record 29 rebounds — breaking the old Indiana mark of 25 set by Dan Roundfield in 1977 — and scored 21 points to lead the Pacers to a 117-102 victory over the Denver Nuggets on Monday night. The win snapped Indiana's five-game losing streak.

"The rebounds were just coming to me tonight," Williams said. "I went to a lot of them, but a lot just fell in my hands."

Williams, known for his defensive skills, also showed he could score.

"I'm not going to sacrifice it anymore," Williams said of his offense. "I kind of let into that thing where people say you're a good defensive player. Well, I can score. I can do both."

"Three of four years ago I put up a lot of good numbers. I've always been a scorer, and I'll always be a scorer."

Williams entered the game averaging 12 points. He scored eight points during the decisive third period when he, Reggie Miller and Rick Smith led a Pacers surge that inflated a five-point halftime lead into a 97-70 advantage.

"I was happy for Herb," Pacers coach Dick Versace said. "I told him before the game to get out of the blocks fast and let the chips fall."

Chuck Person also scored 20 points for the Pacers. Alex English had 25 for the Nuggets, who now have lost three straight games.

get better players, don't just change coaches.

"People with the right chemistry all participate together and are involved in the decisions. We have worked well together for years. I think our staff is as good as any."

But it could be changing. Walsh has coached for 31 years, the last 10 with the 49ers. Although he says he remains enthusiastic, he likely won't stay on the bench.

Defensive coordinator George Seifert is one of the rising assistants in the league and Walsh said, "I hope he's a head coach (next year). He sure deserves it."

Does he deserve the chance in San Francisco? If Walsh does step down as coach, a main proviso could be that Seifert takes over.

The 49ers have made the playoffs the last six years, even though they've been challenged by either the Rams or Saints throughout that span. The NFC West is the conference's toughest division and will get tougher for the Niners.

"The problem with an extended season, with the extra five weeks is that you become emotionally spent," Walsh said. "It's tough to generate that enthusiasm again. The opposition is aware of it and you kind of play you desperately. And you just play the Saints and Rams and Falcons are gearing up to get at us because they think they're better than us."

No team has been better than the 49ers in this decade, of course, even though they haven't won consecutive Super Bowls. And no quarterback has been more successful in the '80s than Joe Montana.

This victory was especially gratifying for the 10-year veteran, who has a new contract, guaranteed for three years, that pays him $2.5 million a season.

"This was really sweet after where we were earlier in the year," said Montana, the engineer of the remarkable 1982 drive to glory against Cincinnati. "When we were 6-5 and had lost two really tough games, you couldn't even imagine this."

It's hard to imagine the 49ers without Walsh and Montana at the helm. But with Steve Young, one of the Niners' best athletes as his understudy, Montana will be able to face even more quarterback controversy questions if the team has a new coach.

"We overcame a lot this year," All-Pro running back Roger Craig said. "Not the least of it was the quarterback controversy."

In view of Montana's superb plays, however, Young figures to be a substitute for a while longer.

I really didn't know what I wanted to do my first two years," Phillip, a native of East Hartford who just turned 17 last month, who just turned the injury last year could be the end. At the beginning of it (recruiting) was kind of tough but I'm starting to adjust to it more. I think about it but I don't want to think about it to much so it interferes with basketball for this season. Phillip is in the machine tool program at Cheney.

Since his freshman year, Phillip has been on one winning team. His sophomore year, when he averaged 11 points and 10 rebounds per game, the Beavers went 11-10 and qualified for the state tournament. The other years have been arduous. Cheney went 1-19 a year ago. Cheney is 3-7 at the halfway point of the current campaign.

"It has been difficult on him to lose," Silvia said. "We've been having some young kids in a learning situation where he's had to do a lot. There's times where he's found it very difficult and the future with the situation."

Flames return favor

Turnabout is fair play. The Calgary Flames, who had a 17-game home unbeaten streak snapped by Montreal on Dec. 29, returned the favor Monday night.

Joe Mullen snapped a tie with eight seconds left in the second period and Joe Newenewyk scored the other two goals in a 3-1 Calgary victory that snapped the Canadiens' 16-game unbeaten streak at the Forum.

Montreal with 72 points and Calgary with 69 are the top two teams in the overall NHL standings and they showed why.

"It was a heck of a matchup," Newenewyk said. "It was a grinding game where every shift felt like your last one. We meet them once more, and we may face them in the finals a few months since losing 5-4 to Pittsburgh last Oct. 29. But only Claude Lemieux, who tied the score with his 21st goal at 1:30 of the opening period, was able to best Calgary goalie Mike Vernon."

"I thought we played fairly well, but we can do better," Lemieux said. "We weren't thinking about the winning streak at home as much as we were thinking about first place overall. We've got 16 home games left and now we'll just have to start over."

Mullen was second in 4:48 in the 1600-meter run with Zach Alaire fourth and Keith Reimer sixth. Ghabrial was fourth (7:23.2) and Liscomb fifth (7:24.1) in the 800. Rivera won the 300-meter run in 37.7. Hempstead outlasted South Windsor's Pat O'Neill at the tape in the 3200-meter run in 10:04. Allaire was third in 10:20.

Yuen Phan was fourth in the high jump at 5 feet 4 inches and Dave Jarvis sixth at 5 feet 2 inches. The 4 X 1-lap relay of Hollic, Coletti, Joyner and Barber was second while the 4 X 2-lap foursome of Lavioie, Joy Stiepl, Amy Stoudt led Bolton with six points while Jen Hein and Deanna Salomone had 10 each for Portland.

PORTLAND (6) — Nancy Borrett 2:24.16, Sue Coleman 2:46.8, Shannon O'Neill 2:48.8, Mary Chris Fisher 2:50.2, Nadine Turner 3:00.2, Jen Wiley 2:24.2, Amy Stoudt 2:24.2, Ashley 2:24.2, Cindy Morrice 2:21.1, Asia Payne 0:12.

HEBRON — Getting out of the gate early in the second half, Coventry High took the lead and then held on for a 42-35 victory over host RHAM High Monday night in Charter Oak Conference basketball action.

The win lifts the Patriots to 7-3 in the COC East and 11-4 overall while the loss drops RHAM to 5-6, 4-9.

Coventry's next game is Thursday at 7:30 p.m. against Bacon Academy in Colchester.

The teams were back-to-back at 17:41 at the half before Coventry built a 26-23 margin after three periods. "We talked about coming out strong in the third period and we made an early run."

"It worked out well for us. We caused a few turnovers and got some buckets and I feel it made a difference."

Dinnick had mixed feelings about the way his team performed. "We played a good second half. But we still have too many turnovers and that bothers me," he said. "But we are doing a lot of good things." He added, noting the nine regulars who were all got into the scoring column.

Brenda Thalacker had 10 points and 7 rebounds to lead the Patriots. Maura Danehy grabbed 15 rebounds while Mollie Jacobson chipped in 6 points and 6 steals.

Emily O'Bannon had 8 points to lead RHAM.

COVENTRY (43) — Brenda Thalacker 10, Corine Caponegro 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

A discard holds the key

By James Jacoby

There were plenty of high-card points for the no-trump game, but the nasty opponents began proceedings by running the first four diamond tricks. On the last diamond declarer threw a spade from dummy and a club from his own hand, while East shed a spade. West next led a spade, declarer winning the king in dummy. He played a heart back to his jack and then cashed the king and ace of clubs. East had the clubs stopped and the heart king protected. Declarer cashed two more high spades, hoping a miracle would happen, but East simply dis-

Readers discuss wives reading at in-laws

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Although I don't always agree with you, rarely have I disagreed with you as vigorously as I did when I read your reply to "No Town" concerning the daughter-in-law who always brings magazines along to read whenever she and her husband visit his parents. "No Town" thought her daughter-in-law was being inexcusably rude. Your comment: "Your daughter-in-law may not be rude at all, she could be very shy and insecure. Instead of judging her, try reaching out to include her so that she will feel more comfortable." etc. Abby, although the daughter-in-law may in fact be shy and insecure, she should have the common sense and good manners to leave her reading material at home. If she's so shy and insecure that she can't face her in-laws without resorting to "reading," perhaps she should seek counseling. Also, what kind of son would allow his wife to treat his parents so shabbily? Ignoring her in-laws' company to do her own thing is, in my opinion, the height of rudeness. So, who is the injured party here? "No Town" or her daughter-in-law? What am I supposed to do? The mother-in-law should examine the topics of their family conversations before criticizing her daughter-in-law. BEEN THERE IN TEXAS DEAR ABBY: I know exactly how that daughter-in-law feels because everybody else gossiping about my neighbors, whom I do not know, or about "old times" that go way back, years before I married into this family. I've tried to get a conversation going that concerns issues of something in the news, but nobody seems interested, so I just reach for my tote bag and bring out my needlepoint to keep myself occupied. I wouldn't call that rude. I may as well do something productive. I think people who make no effort to include everyone present in the conversation are the rude ones. When I'm the hostess, I do. NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE DEAR ABBY: It seems that too many people, once married, forget the celebration of each passing year. I would care enough to receive no material gift on my anniversary, because my husband is literally too good to be true. He cooks for me. I always prepare his favorite meal, and we exchange the cards and the gifts we purchased for each other. But the single most important gift to each other is to love me. Fifteen years ago, we said, "I do," and I meant it with all my heart. Throughout the years, his support and love have made me the luckiest woman in the world, plus we have two beautiful and healthy children. I feel that I am blessed to have won the affection of such a man. I listen to my friends rattle on complaining about their mates, then I watch them turn green with envy when I talk about my wonderful husband and the love we share. I will continue to show him every day of the year how much he means to me, but especially on our anniversary. I am still passionately in love with my husband, and proud of it. 'Queen's Suite' debuts

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II once had a musical tribute composed just for her by Duke Ellington, but 31 years passed before it got its first live public performance. The queen's daughter, Anne, was guest of honor at a Royal Festival Hall benefit concert Monday night to hear the 15-minute work, "The Queen's Suite," performed by U.S. musician Bob Wilber and his band. "Duke was so overwhelmed at meeting with the queen in 1958 that he composed this longer orchestral work for her, recorded it with his band and instructed that only a single disc should be pressed, for the queen herself," Wilber said in a preconcert interview. Because no sheet music existed, Wilber transcribed it by listening to the music, which Ellington's son, Mercer, allowed to be issued on a disc for public sale in 1978, two years after his father's death. "Duke set a precedent for his extended music with 'The Queen's Suite' because it's about nature," Wilber said. "All his previous compositions were about city life. This is in six parts and is about sunsets, insects, birds, animals and the single petal of a rose." Wilber described "The Queen's Suite" as a "short, pretty work considered by musicians and critics comparable with Duke's other longer compositions."

De Lorean's lawyer unpaid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lawyer Howard Weitzman, who successfully defended John De Lorean on cocaine conspiracy and fraud charges, said the former auto executive owes him $683,392 in unpaid legal fees. "Sometimes I don't understand clients, and he's one of them," Weitzman said. "If it wasn't for me he'd certainly be in a different position than he's in now." A Superior Court lawsuit filed Dec. 15 by Weitzman and his law firm alleges De Lorean has failed to pay the legal bills or to respond to letters sent to him. Attorney Karen Randall, who is handling the lawsuit for Weitzman's law firm, said De Lorean had agreed orally in April 1986 to certain legal services involving a federal tax trial in Detroit. De Lorean was found innocent in that case, which dealt with charges of fraud, racketeering and income tax evasion. Weitzman earlier won acquittal in the Los Angeles cocaine and fraud case. De Lorean, who lives in New York, declined through Detroit lawyer Mayer Morganroth to comment on the lawsuit.

Ticket race causes jam

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Phil Donahue's talk show, which will be taped next week at the Las Vegas Hilton, created traffic jams as residents lined up to get free tickets. "It was a mess to say the least," said Las Vegas police Sgt. Steve Tuggle. "There were some very anxious people out there waiting for tickets." KLAS-TV had planned to begin the ticket giveaway at 9 a.m. Monday, but the line began lining up at 7 a.m. and the station started handing out the tickets at 8 a.m. Within two hours, the traffic was so bad that police asked the station to stop handing out tickets until another distribution site could be found. All 15,000 tickets to the five shows were given out by mid-afternoon.

Brown apologizes to town

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Soul singer James Brown apologized to the people of Augusta after receiving a six-year prison term for pleading guilty to misdemeanor weapons and traffic charges. "I had it all to do over again. I just wouldn't do it," Brown told the judge Monday. "I hope this is behind us," said Brown. "My life has always been a model, and I just don't feel good about it now." Besides the prison term, Brown, who also pleaded no contest to charges of driving under the influence, was fined $1,000 by Judge Gayle B. Hamrick. Brown's sentence would run concurrently with a six-year term he is serving in South Carolina. Hamrick said. The charges stemmed from a two-state car chase last September.

Shelton finalist for award

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ricky Van Shelton, a former pipetteer who has been recording country music less than two years, is the leading finalist for fan-voted awards sponsored by cable TV's The Nashville Network. Shelton is a finalist for five of the eight annual Viewers' Choice awards to be presented by TNT. He was voted one of six finalists in every eligible category: favorite entertainer; favorite male vocalist; favorite album; favorite song and favorite music video. The song and video are "I'll Leave This World Loving You," a No. 1 hit in November. The album, which has received gold status for selling 500,000 copies, is "Loving You." Shelton, 37, whose trademark is a white cowboy hat, is one of country music's rising stars. Four years ago, he left Grit, Va., where he had worked as a pipetteer for 10 years. Settling in Nashville, he signed a recording contract with CBS Records just two years ago. "I feel wonderful," Shelton said after the finalists were announced Monday during a live telecast on the cable network. "I had no idea this would happen. I just want to keep putting out good songs, selling records and get my farm paid for."

Using a personal computer to keep track of your taxes

By Larry Bosko, The Associated Press

The CompuBug

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Lawrence B. Gibbs writes "we at IRS will continue to improve the quality of the service we are providing to you." That has all the cheer of a firing squad pledging improved maintenance. So many personal computer owners will look to their machines to reduce the pain. But unless you've been using the machine to keep records all year long, a hasty purchase of tax preparation software is likely only to increase the cost of being one of Gibbs' "valued customers."

For most of us, a spreadsheet program will handle the necessary work, particularly if we want to do several trial runs, and a spreadsheet program may be used for things other than taxes. Besides, the tax laws change almost yearly, and that means buying updates of tax-specific programs. It's simply not a lasting spreadsheet formula. Several personal finance programs are also on the market in the same price range and in addition to keeping records for tax purposes can also ease the burden of monthly bill payments and small-scale business accounting. Those IBM or compatible owners who have been keeping track of their finances with programs like Quicken, Dollars and Sense and Managing Your Money — and who want to buy a tax preparation program in spite of this advice — may want to look at TurboTax Personal 1040 by ChipSoft. The software company says the program will import financial data from the other software, saving some keystrokes. It costs $75 and updates are available for half of whatever the current-year price is. They also have software for 41 state income tax returns. For more information, call them in San Diego at 619-453-8722.

Disorders have same symptoms

DEAR DR. GOTT: My sister was diagnosed with a spastic colon and lactase deficiency. She alternates between diarrhea and "rabbit pellets," has cramping with every movement, is lethargic and has lost 40 pounds in two years. What can you suggest?

DEAR READER: Spastic colon is an extremely common intestinal disorder characterized by bowel irregularities, frequent diarrhea, bouts of abdominal distress and excessive gas. The condition is also called irritable bowel syndrome. No physical cause is found for this ailment, which appears to be related to stress that causes the intestine to empty too quickly. Bulk-producing agents, such as Metamucil, and anti-diarrheal drugs are often helpful in controlling the symptoms of irritable bowel. On the other hand, lactase deficiency is a purely physical disorder. As they age, some adults develop a deficiency in lactase, an intestinal enzyme necessary for the digestion of milk sugar (lactose). In the presence of this deficiency, the ingestion of untreated milk products produces symptoms identical to those of spastic colon. These symptoms disappear when milk products are removed from the diet. Yogurt, which has its lactase already pre-digested (broken down by an enzyme), usually causes no abdominal distress, bloating or diarrhea. Similarly, milk can be predigested with Lactaid so that lactase-deficient patients can drink it.

Because the symptoms of irritable bowel and lactase deficiency are so similar, many experts would not give your sister two diagnoses when one (lactase deficiency) would do. I think that she should be examined by a gastroenterologist (an intestinal specialist), to determine which of the conditions is present. Since treatment is available for both ailments, a proper diagnosis would be important to control her symptoms and enable her to maintain an appropriate bodyweight.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can a specific diet or exercise program for middle-aged people with congenital heart-valve murmurs prevent calcification of these heart valves in old age?

DEAR READER: No. Abnormal heart valves do tend to calcify with age. The precise reasons for this phenomenon are unknown. However, a low-cholesterol diet may help retard some of the other cardiac consequences of aging. If you have a congenital valve deformity, you should be under the care of a cardiologist, a specialist with particular interest in heart problems. He or she can give you specific advice about diet, exercise and what, if any, treatment will be necessary for your condition.

With computers almost a fixture in home offices, computer companies are anxious to know whose computers most often are used on home office desktops. Ed Judge, director of market planning at Radio Shack, says a survey by Venture Development Corp., a Massachusetts firm. "Leading the pack is 'other,' with 28.9 percent of those desktops, followed by Tandy (Radio Shack) in its Sunday clothes with 17.2 percent. Apple and IBM at 15.6 percent each, Commodore at 9.1 percent, Leading Edge at 5.4 percent, Epson at 3.8 percent, and Amstrad and NEC at 2.2 percent each. Although Tandy obviously wants to make the point that it has more of that market, according to this survey, that is its major rival, the great show of 'other' just demonstrates what a diverse, bubbling stew personal computing is.

Sharpeners on cutting edge

By the Editors of Consumer Reports

Most people — many culinary wizards included — don't sharpen their kitchen knives. As a result, they grow accustomed to working with fairly dull blades. But it doesn't have to be that way. Honing a knife requires neither a great deal of time nor a great deal of skill. Recently, Consumer Reports' testers tried out some methods, both time-honored and new-fangled, that promise to maintain a blade's cutting edge. One novel approach to sharpening is the Wilkinson Sword Classic soft-sharpening knife. The knife is stored in a plastic holster that contains a carbide insert, which sharpens the blade each time you either take the knife out or put it away. But in the tests, the regular honing didn't make the blades feel particularly sharp. The consumers also take a lot of drawer or counter space. The cases can be wall-mounted, but they aren't especially attractive. The traditional way to keep a knife sharp is to regularly give it a few strokes along a sharpening steel. You hold the blade at a 15 to 20 degree angle to the steel, then draw the blade across the steel firmly, from handle to tip. With most knives, it's important to sharpen both sides so each receives 10 to 15 strokes. Sharpening steels 10 to 12 inches long are easier to use. The testers also prefer steels with a diamond coating and a finger guard for safety.

A useful, though expensive, alternative to the sharpening steel is the Chef's Choice Diamond Home Sharpener Model 100. It's an $80 electric sharpening machine that worked well on knives with a smooth edge. (Serrated knives can't easily be sharpened at home.) The device works like this: You draw a knife blade through the three paired slots in the machine; magnets inside the slots set the blade at the proper angle. The first slot contains a diamond-impregnated grinding wheel that does the rough grinding. The middle slot has an oscillating diamond "file" to smooth the edge. A very fine oscillating grinder in the final slot hones the blade.

The Chef's Choice put fine edges on a variety of kitchen knives, and did so faster and more easily than sharpening with a whetstone or steel. There's also a Chef's Choice Model 300, at $60, on the market. It has only the diamond file and the fine grinder. It works just as well as, although more slowly than, the Model 100 when sharpening very dull knives.

The only problem with the Chef's Choice was magnetism. A knife blade can pick up tiny metal filings produced in the course of sharpening. It's a good idea to wipe the blade before using it on food.

Our Language

Scalese identifies a triangle having sides of unequal length. No matter how this unbalanced work begins, scalese doesn't look made to scale. Use petit point for embroidery done with a short stitch. The final of petit is silent, which sounds like a petty point.

QUESTION: What is the word for someone given the same name as somebody else? I don't mean junior.

ANSWER: Junior is usually reserved for a son named after his father with identical first, middle and last names. Use as a more general term namesake, probably from a shortening of name's sake in the 1600s. Namesake implies a name for the "sake" of the person being honored.

Lasers poised for a quantum leap

By Peter Coy
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — They find things in the dark. They check grooves, play concertos and perform eye surgery. They are faster than a speeding bullet and could do serious damage to a locomotive. Lasers have been the Superman of the electromagnetic spectrum ever since 1960, when 33-year-old Theodore H. Maiman of Hughes Aircraft Co. built the first one from a pink ruby.

As they near their 30th anniversary, though, lasers have switched from comic-book novelties to necessities that preoccupy the technology giants of the United States, Europe and Japan. Lasers are not only in compact disc players and bar-code scanners at checkout counters, they are in the phone system carrying long distance calls over hair-thin glass fibers.

Now, lasers are poised to take a quantum leap. Tiny devices called quantum lasers herald an era in which lasers will be more central to the technology underlying daily life.

Experts say quantum lasers and their cousins, quantum transistors, could make possible supercomputers the size of baseballs, and television screens of unparalleled clarity that hang on the wall like a painting.

Quantum devices are the wave of the future. Almost all of the research that goes on involves quantum effects in some way or another," said David V. Lang, director of the solid state electronics research lab at AT&T Bell Labs.

Lasers are what some scientists call a "killer" technology: Compact discs are killing vinyl records, for example, and nobody uses copper anymore for long-distance phone lines.

To repeat a familiar story, the Japanese are putting the American-invented killer to use more effectively than Americans themselves are. Japan's dominance of mass-market electronics gives its companies unmatched expertise in making things small, cheap and

TYPICAL LASER
When the laser is charged up, in this case by a bright flash of light from the surrounding flash lamp, the excited electrons throw off photons. These photons stimulate the emission of other photons in the same wavelength and direction. The photons bounce between the mirrors, gathering energy, and then shoot out through the partial reflector as a laser beam.

QUANTUM LASER
Quantum lasers are microscopically small, and depend on the quantum effect to produce a laser beam. When a certain resonant voltage is applied, electrons in the material can travel into the "quantum well" in the center but cannot escape. Now, lasers are poised to take a quantum leap. Tiny devices called quantum lasers herald an era in which lasers will be more central to the technology underlying daily life.

reliable. For example, Japanese companies dominate the market for CD players, which use more lasers than any other product. "It's a byproduct of the Japanese decision to invest in consumer electronics. They'll find an application and find the technology to solve it. I wish we did it here," said Henry Kress, a venture capitalist at E.M. Warburg Pincus & Co. Inc. in New York.

Japan's twin towers of strength in lasers and semiconductors could allow it to build the first computers in which chips are connected by quantum laser beams instead of electricity. That worries companies like International Business Machines Corp., which is intensively studying quantum well lasers and quantum well transistors.

At AT&T Bell Laboratories one of America's foremost laser research centers, Alan Huang is hoping to leapfrog the Japanese. He admits the competition is tough. For an early model of his "optical computer" he had to use a diode laser he took from a Japanese-made CD player. A laser is a directed needle of light purified to one particular color, or wavelength. In contrast, ordinary light is a jumble of many wavelengths flying in all directions.

"Laser" stands for light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation. In a cascading effect, photons of light strike an energized material and stimulate the release of more photons in a synchronized pattern.

The most powerful lasers, big enough for someone to walk inside, are being used to attempt to fuse the nuclei of atoms in flashes of energy a million times more intense than a nuclear blast. Sustained nuclear fusion could be a source of clean, plentiful and cheap electricity.

At the other end of the scale are semiconductor diode lasers, no bigger than a grain of salt — the kind used in compact disc players and laser printers. One exotic species is the quantum laser. Scientists build quantum lasers by "spray-painting" thin layers of semiconducting materials, some of which have impurities added.

The impurity layers act like walls to trap electrons. Confining so many electrons and their receptors ("holes") to a tiny space makes it easier to get a cascade of photons going, creating laser light.

If a laser the size of a salt crystal were blown up to the size of the World Trade Center in New York, a quantum well would be about the thickness of a rug in an office, said Michael Eitelberg, director of the optoelectronics research lab at the David Sarnoff Research Center in Princeton, N.J.

Quantum lasers are more precise and require less current, and their efficiency in converting electricity to light is unmatched. Spectra Diode Physics of San Jose, Calif., recently produced 78 watts of continuous wave power from a quantum laser, a record in power conversion efficiency.

For an early model of his "optical computer" he had to use a diode laser he took from a

DNA HELIX IMAGE — This is one of the first images of individual lengths of native DNA, showing the double helix, obtained by scientists from Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory. The three-dimensional image, magnified one million times, was made through a scanning tunneling microscope. The images support recent evidence that DNA exists in several different variations of its helically wound shape.

IN BRIEF

AIDS transmitted by woman to man
BOSTON (AP) — A man reportedly contracted the AIDS virus by having oral sex with a prostitute, the first reported in medical literature of woman-to-man transmission of the virus that way, a doctor said.

"This isn't unusual," says Dr. Cheryl Sheets, a spokesperson for the Academy of General Dentistry. She suggests that parents be certain to reinforce regular brushing and flossing habits, especially when children are ill, to avoid future dental problems.

Grant to help train radiation therapists
HARTFORD (AP) — Hartford Hospital has received a $300,000 grant to establish a program for training high school graduates to become radiation therapists.

Sugar in medicine imperils kids' teeth
CHICAGO (AP) — A spoonful of sugar may help the medicine go down, but it also can contribute to an unusually high number of cavities found in chronically ill children.

Researchers at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto looked at the medication schedules for 20 chronically ill children who were prescribed liquid medicine, which contained 20 to 70 percent sugar.

Dr. Peter G. Spitzer said the transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus was the first of its kind to be documented.
