Homart vows no repeat of utilities flap

By Alex Girelli Manchester Herald

The developers of the $70 million mall in Buckland are expected at a news conference today to assure town and Eighth Utilities District officials that they will not install utility lines at the mall site again without proper approval. Representatives of the Homart Development Co. of Chicago, which is building the mall, also are expected to assure officials they will make any necessary corrections to work already done, Assistant Town Manager Steven R. Werbner said

The news conference is set for 4:30 p.m. in the office of the town manager. Werbner said Homart will be represented by Stephen Quaklinbush, development director for Homart, and Thomas DeMille, an attorney for

The town and the district have ordered Homart to stop work on sewer lines in the mall until tests can be made to determine if the sewers were correctly The district issued a stop work order Jan. 10 and the town issued one Jan. 11. The town order prohibited work on water lines as well as sewer

The town has ordered tests on some sewer lines along the Buckland Hills Drive, the north access road to the complex. The district wants test made under its supervision of sewers within the interior of the mall land. The district says no permits were issued for the sewer lines, although a developers' agreement for their construction is being considered by the district, and that sewers under parking lot areas were not The town says there is reason to believe some lines along the access road may not be in the right locations and wants tests made to verify the locations as well as pressure tests of sewer and water lines. The town also wants Homart to check the position of the bottom of a rock slope on the south side of the cut for the road. In a Jan. 16 letter to town Public Works Director Peter P. Lozis Jr., Eddy N. Huppe, assistant construction manager for Homart, said, "Our intention is to construct a fine, high-quality product - of which all of us can be proud - that will benefit and enhance the Town of Manchester for years to

Housing panel urged to work for usable plan

By Maureen Leavitt

Members of a new citizens' committee investigating affordable-housing problems in Manchester were told Wednesday to work for a plan that will not be "put on a shelf.

Mary Ann Handley, a Democratic town director and chairman of the directors' subcommittee on affordable housing, met with all but one member of the 12-member citizens' committee in the Lincoln Center gold room along with Theunis Werkhoven, the other subcommittee member

"This is a working committee. I hope everybody understands that we want all of us to do the initial study so we can come up with a plan that is the best for Manchester, not a set of plans to put on a shelf somewhere " Handley said Handley and Werkhoven thanked the members of the committee for agreeing to investigate the affordable-housing issue. "We are very lucky to have such a good group of people," Handley said. "On behalf of the Board of Directors and the town of Manchester, we thank you for your willingness to participate in this study." The committee has representatives of town agencies, church groups, non-profit corporations, and people considered "experts" in the housing Members include Barney Peterman Sr., a developer; Ada Sullivan, chairman of the Board of Commissioners of the Housing Authority of Manchester; Mary Wellemeyer, a member of Habitat for Humanity, a group which helps build housing for low-income people: Richard Woodhouse, an attorney; Josh Howroyd, a Planning and Zoning Commission alternate member; and Alan F.

Middlesex leads in growth

MIDDLETOWN (AP) - Middlesex County led the state in population growth from 1987 to 1988, adding new residents at a 3 percent rate. while Connecticut's population expanded at about half that rate, state officials said. From July 1, 1987 to July 1, 1988, the county's population surged from 141,270 to 145,450. according to the state Department of Health

Over the same time period, Connecticut's population grew from 3.277.980 to 3.326,420, the department estimated. The 1.48 percent growth rate was the largest in the past five

Middlesex County's growth resulted from its location on the Interstate 91 corridor, its amount of developable land, its communities and its access to major employment centers. James F. Dunn, assistant director of the Midstate Regional Planning Agency, said

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) -Whether a link exists between the deaths of two women found near a Connecticut highway and six women whose bodies were found last year along highways in the New Bedford area is being explored by police in both states.

"At this point there is no connection. but we're not precluding the fact that one might develop." Connecticut State Police spokeswoman Marcy Stamm said Wednesday. The two Connecticut women were found strangled in Harwinton. Conn., about a half mile from Route 8, a major highway to Waterbury, where they lived. Stamm said. One had been arrested on drug charges two weeks before her death, and the other had been arrested for prostitution last year, the Waterbury Republican Waterbury is about 140 miles from

New Bedford. All of the New Bedford highway killing victims were involved in drugs, and some had records of prostitution, said Jim Martin, spokesman for Bristol County District Attorney Ronald A. Pina.

The women were found along or near Route 140 in Freetown and Interstate 195 in Dartmouth. One of the victims was strangled, but a cause of death has not been determined for the others. Martin said. Twardy said Kreminski participated in the scheme in association with James Florence of Manchester, who pleaded guilty to a similar

Audit turns up problems

HARTFORD (AP) - A state audit has found that the Municipal Police Training Council in Meriden has violated several state procedures. including misusing a state police cruiser and circumventing state bidding regulations. The council's record-keeping practices and its control over its receipts, grants and petty cash also were questioned in a report by state auditors released today.

"I would have to characterize the problems as a combination of abuse and sloppiness, said state Auditor Henry J. Becker. "They were both institutional and individual." The council functions as an autonomous agency, but is under the administrative supervision of the state police. It sets standards and conducts training for full-time and part-time municipal police officers.

Resolution honors victims

HARTFORD (AP) - The nine people from Connecticut who died in the terrorist explosion of Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland last month are honored in a resolution unanimously adopted by the General Assembly. "These people, with the promise of life ahead of them, died because someone, somewhere wanted to make a statement in a twisted, reprehensible and inhuman way," said House Majority Leader Robert F. Frankel, D-Stratford, on Wednesday. "Today we are making our own statement, to cherish and honor the memory of these Connecticut citizens. They were good people and brought joy to the people around them and made the family which is our state all the better because they were here. "When the lives of these sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, and good friends were lost, we all lost," Frankel said.

Mitchell unveils agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. George Mitchell used his inaugural address as Senate majority leader to offer President Bush "true bipartisanship" on foreign policy while push-ing a distinctly Democratic agenda on The Maine Democrat's proposals include poosting the minimum wage, improving the lot of the homeless, assuring day care for the children of workers and investing in education, housing and improving the environment. Mitchell said that while Bush recognized many of these needs in his presidential inaugural address last Friday, "he has yet to tell us how he proposes to meet them." On the Senate's first working day of the 101st Congress, Mitchell, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas and other senators jammed the legislative hopper with some 300 representing new initiatives.

Peoria makes you pay

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) - You can play in Peoria, but if you're in a bit of a fix, you'll have to pay. As of Wednesday, the police and fire departments stopped rescuing kittens from trees, pumping flooded basements or handling any number of extra duties that once were considered routine. The new policy has prompted some to wonder if this quintessential Midwest town is losing its heartland values. "Peoria's definitely losing its small-town flavor but we think it's more important to be prepared to respond to emergencies rather than spending time and money on extracurricular activities like these," says Fire Marshal G. John Parker.

Bad choice for nation's drug czar

It's hard to imagine a worse person to fill the role of national drug czar than William Bennett, the man George Bush tapped for the job. Mr. Bennett's tenure as secretary of education was marked by shallow and noisy moralizing. He certainly drew attention to himself and to the woes of public education. but at the price of alienating education's best asset: its teachers.

If confirmed, Mr. Bennett will be in charge of coordinating the various agencies that try to cope with illegal drug use. The strategies he's advocated in the past are not particularly sophisticated. In a memo to the Justice Department, Mr. Bennett wrote that the United States should do to drug traffickers "what our forces in the Persian Gulf did to Iran's navy.' Congressional leaders have knocked Mr. Bennett for showing more interest in public posturing than in actually working to effect improvement. Mr. Bennett should be warned that lecturing the less-advantaged classes about their drug use will do nothing to address the nation's most serious drug problems cocaine, crack, heroin and the attendant plague of AIDS.

And make no mistake — inner cities are where the so-called drug war must be fought. Mr. Bennett's rhetoric in the past has emphasized family values and the Puritan ethic as the panacea for a host of woes. If Mr. Bennett is to grow into the job - and he may - he will need to come to grips with the fact that in beleaguered cities, the environment for such moral rectitude is forbidding. Drug use and trafficking is an escape for people with little other hope or opportunity. One person who understands this very well, and who would have made a better choice for drug czar, is Jesse Jackson.

Manchester future concerns everyone

To the Editor:

Several months ago a group of Manchester citizens came together in a free-wheeling round-table discussion about the future of our town. Issues and concerns just flowed around the table. Health, child care, education, elderly, groundwater, housing, recreation needs and concerns, and on and on; it was an exciting, exhilirating experience for those assembled. It was reassuring that all of us present shared these concerns, but more important, that we were not overwhelmed by them and were truly interested in address-

As we talked it became clear that the future was everyone's concern. Not government, nor the business ular private group alone; rather, all of us together share the responsibility of making sure Manchester continues to offer the same quality of life that we have enjoyed, to present and future generations. Gridlock in prisons tests Bush

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON - "If you do the crime, you do the time." is the kind of rap that plays well on the campaign trail. George Bush used that tough-oncrime image to help propel him to the White House. One of the first tests of his sincerity will be the budget increase he plans to give the Justice Department's Bureau of Prisons, which has 54 critically overcrowded prisons. The worst facility is the Federal Correctional Institute at Tucson, Ariz., where 623 prisoners are squeezed into a space designed for 196. The Tucson prison tops this month's list of the 10 most vercrowded prisons in the federal

The extent of the overcrowding is not news to Bush. While he was vice president, a 1987 Cabinet-level report on the prisons spelled out the crisis. But the confidential report was kept from the public eye, and even from members of Congress, because it showed the shortcomings of the Reagan administration. We have seen the report, and it warns that if the overcrowding is not alleviated, the resulting gridlock would force "significant departures from current enforcement, prosecution, sentencing and incarceration policies." In plain English, that means fewer people going to prison and shorter sentences for those that do. And that doesn't mesh with what

George Bush said on the campaign

Some experts believe the gridlock is already here. The federal report increased law enforcement and a greater number of prosecutors. judges and enforcement agents with Federal prisons have always counted overriow, but local authorities are putting more people in jail, too. At the civil rights groups are forcing the state and local prisons to give the inmates more space.

The authors of the report, led by then-Attorney General Edwin Meese. thought the situation would only get administration was handling the problem effectively. The shortcomings were tactfully blamed on fiscal Bush pledged to spend more money

But if Bush sticks with the budget proposed by Ronald Reagan for new prisons, he will start $411 millionbehind what the report recommended should have been budgeted by now. If he does increase the budget, that will be good news to the wardens contending with the tough problems of overcrowding today. Judging from Bureau of Prisons statistics, we have determined the 10 most overcrowded federal prisons in the country this month. This list does not include the many state and local prisons that are

The Tucson prison is 218 percent overcrowded. (The Bureau of Prisons considers a prison to be 100 percent overcrowded when it is at double its capacity, so a prison that is 218 percent overcrowded actually has more than three times the number of prisoners it was designed to hold.) "It's sort of like a merit raise ... getting a raise the old-fashioned way." Jaekle said Wednesday. "You'd have to earn it." He said the measure is designed to highlight the state's current budget crisis in a year when the legislature is expected to act on pay raises for top state officials elected in 1990. "I have some trouble passing a pay-raise bill for the governor or the legislature this session when we're facing a big deficit." Jaekle said. A proposal from the commission that recommends salaries for elected state officials and judges would boost the governor's salary from $78,000 to $105,000 beginning in 1991, with $5,000 increases for each of the following three years. Board names new teachers

Sharon F. Elliott-Sullivan of Manchester and Mark A. Lafontaine of Willimantic have been appointed to teaching positions in the Manchester school system.

The hirings were approved Monday by the Board of Education. Elliott-Sullivan will teach Spanish one period a day at Manchester High School. For the one period, she will replace Bernadette Musse-man, who has been named acting head of the faculty curriculum committee. Elliot-Sullivan received her bachelor's degree from the University of Connecticut. Lafontaine will become a part-time elementary art teacher. He replaces Elaine Agnew. Lafontaine received his bachelor's degree and art certificate from the University of Connecticut and his master's degree from Wichita State University in Wichita, Kan.

GOP seeks transit authority HARTFORD (AP) - A group of Republican awmakers who claim that the state Department of Transportation is nothing more than a "Department of Roads" has proposed creation of a statewide mass transit authority. The quasi-public agency would initially be supported with surplus revenue from the transportation fund created to finance Connecticut's $6.5 billion infrastructure renewal program. The agency, as envisioned by its proponents, would be responsible for operating mass transit programs around the state and have the power to issue bonds.

Shrink says pleas ignored

HARTFORD (AP) - Eric K. Steiger's pleas by his father, a psychiatrist has testified at the Suffield man's murder trial.

Steiger, 26, is one of four people arrested in connection with the slayings of Daniel Seymour. 26, of Suffield, and William Price, 26. of Monroe in 1987. The two men were gunned down after breaking up a beer party near Seymour's home.

Steiger told Dr. Peter M. Zeman, director of psychiatric education at the Institute of Living in Hartford, that he begged his father, Ralph Steiger, for years for treatment but his father Steiger is charged with two counts each of murder, conspiracy to commit murder and capital felony, which carries the death penalty. Steiger's attorney, F. Mac Buckley, concedes Steiger shot Seymour and Price but maintains he is innocent because he is insane.

O'Dea admits misdemeanor

WATERBURY (AP) - Fired Deputy Motor Vehicles Commissiner Edwin X. O'Dea has pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and agreed to leave politics for three years, but maintains his innocence in the check-cashing scheme that forced him from office. In a plea-bargain agreement Wednesday.

O'Dea pleaded guilty to missapplication of property, a Class A misdemeanor, and a felony charge of first-degree larceny by defrauding a public community was dropped. Superior Court Judge Maxwell Heiman gave O'Dea a suspended, one-year prison sentence and put him on probation for three years.

Judiciary panel delays vote on arrested judge

HARTFORD (AP) - The General Assembly's Judiciary Committee balked at reappointing a Superior Court judge once charged with drunken driving, and a legislative critic suggested the judge withdraw rather than try a second time to explain The Judiciary Committee on Wednesday unanimously reappointed nine judges to the bench, but did not vote on Superior Court Judge Richard Noren's

Committee members said they postponed the decision on Noren because of widespread doubts about the truthfulness of his sworn testimony about "DWI is not the issue," said State Sen. Anthony Avallone, a co-chairman of the committee. "It's the way he testified before the committee." Noren met with Avallone and two other key committee members in Hartford late Wednesday. State Rep. Richard Tulisano, the other co-chairman of the committee, said Noren did not indicate whether he would re-appear before the committee or withdraw from consideration

"His options are to come back for another hearing: to have us take a vote without coming back: or to do something else." Tulisano said today. "My guess is that he'll go for another hearing. SPORTS IN BRIEF

NEW YORK (AP) - As dashing, daring and dazzling as Florence Griffith Joyner's physical presence and attire were last year, it was her sparkling, sizzling, sprint performances that earned her The Associated Press' Female Athlete of the Year award.

No woman sprinter in history ever turned in such sensational performances as Griffith Joyner did in 1988. And no woman track and field athlete is cashing in on her sudden success like Griffith Joyner, whose 1989 earnings are expected to soar over the $1 million mark, with endorsements and commercials In the voting for Female Athlete of the Year. Griffith Joyner was an overwhelming winner against extremely strong opposition.

Puckett gets $2 million

NEW YORK (AP) - Kirby Puckett already has set records with his bat. Now he's setting them with his wallet. Puckett agreed Wednesday to a one-year contract with the Minnesota Twins for $2 million. No other player in baseball history has reached that level that fast. Puckett has four years, 147 days of major league service. Don Mattingly, the New York Yankees' first baseman, had four years, 163 days of service last winter when he agreed to a three-year $6.7 million contract that paid him $2 million in 1988. Puckett, an outfielder who will turn 28 on March 14, can earn an additional $200,000 this season in bonuses. He would get $100,000 if he is named the American League's Most Valuable Player, $50,000 if he finishes second in th voting and $25,000 if he finishes third.

researchers said today. The researchers said they believe that the incidence of AIDS spread through acupuncture is very low. "However, acupuncturists must be aware of the risk," they said in the New England Journal of Medicine. The researchers, from the Necker Hospital in Paris and the Charles Foix Hospital in Ivry, France, said the boy they studied had never had sexual intercourse and had never had a blood transfusion. He sought treatment for acupuncture after developing tendonitis while training to play rugby, said the researchers.

Survey shows AIDS bias

STAMFORD (AP) - A survey by the Stamford Health Department has demonstrated a bias by employers against hiring AIDS victims and uncovered misconceptions about the disease itself. The survey found that managers and supervisors who responded to the survey are concerned with the economic liability of hiring someone with a potentially debilitating and fatal condition.

The survey results also showed that people still have prejudices and fears regarding AIDS victims that have no basis in medical fact.
