'Big Chill' heads for East Coast

Freezing drizzle ushered the 'Big Chill' of '89 deeper into the nation's midsection and toward the East Coast today, turning highways into glacial stretches of ice and draping trees and power lines in a hardened coat. The frigid air mass that spilled into the lower 48 states from Alaska earlier in the week brought more snow today to the weather-weary Pacific Northwest and northern states, threatening crops and endangering newborn livestock. The cold spell has closed schools, disrupted travel, and caused power outages at a time when electricity is in high demand. Wind-chill readings between 60 and 80 degrees below zero were common across much of Montana and the Dakotas. Stretching across a roughly triangular area from the Pacific Northwest to Texas to New England, the air mass is pushing southward, but at a slower pace than earlier in the week, said Brian Smith of the National Weather Service. "It's moving quite a bit slower now. We're not getting the really rapid changes in temperatures that we were," Smith said today. The below-normal temperatures are expected to linger until the middle of next week. Schools in Montana, Nebraska, Washington state, Kansas and elsewhere told students to stay home today because of the snow and cold. "There's no sense messing with this stuff," said Oswego, Kan., school Superintendent Ed Sink, who closed his schools. State government workers were expected back at work after being sent home at midday Thursday by Montana Gov. Stan Stephens. The capital, Helena, also had to cope with a train explosion that forced the daylong evacuation of thousands of people and left some without power with 38 below zero temperatures. The cold chased out what had been an unusually warm January in many parts of the country. Bostonians enjoyed a record-high 66 degrees Wednesday. Twenty-four hours later, the city shivered in 31 degrees and freezing rain. Six record lows for the date were posted Thursday and early today: a record of 14 below zero was set in Goodland, Kan. At the same time as northern states experienced staggering lows on Thursday, the southeast corner of the nation was hitting record highs. Nearly 30 records were set, including 80 degrees in Charlotte, N.C., Norfolk, Va., 80. See CHILL, page 12

ALL THAT'S LEFT — Rosa Johnson Highter of 599 Grant Hill Road, Coventry, stands near the site of a 19th century farmhouse she once owned. Developers demolished it last month without a demolition permit.

Her history fell to wrecker's ball

By Jacqueline Bennett Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — When the 19th-century farmhouse that Rosa Johnson Highter once owned was demolished, a part of the 83-year-old woman's past went with it. There was little left but dusty debris after the High Street house was razed on Jan. 16. The demolition, which was undertaken without a permit, sparked a protest by resident Judy LeDoy and others who believed the town had lost something of historical value. They soon found out that there is no easy way to define what is of historical value and what is not. And they discovered that even when a building is determined to be historical, there is no guarantee it can be protected. For Rosa, who took over the farm in 1940 after her uncle Frank Spaulding had it up for health reasons, the destruction of the home was a great loss. She and her husband Raymond had sold it in 1968 to Lawrence and Marie Abbot after spending half their lives there. To see 28 years of hard work just bulldozed under was a shock," she said. Some members of the Town Council also were taken aback by the news, and after discussing whether the town can adopt an ordinance to prevent a recurrence of the demolition, they were issued a stop work order by the town last week after it was discovered the home was demolished and work begun on a new foundation without permits. Whether the home had historical value was a question that will never be answered. Even if it had been determined the home was historical, there is little in the law that could have prevented its destruction. John Herzan, who helps determine what structures the Connecticut Historical Commission will nominate for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places, said, "It (the farmhouse) was never inventoried and evaluated, so I couldn't say if the structure was historic." Built in the 1860s for Francis Spaulding, the house became a dairy farm at the turn of the century, under the ownership of his son Frank, Rosa's uncle by marriage. "I remember visiting Uncle Frank," Highter said. "He sold milk and butter." She also remembers in intricate detail the inside of the home. See HISTORY, page 12

Paraguay coup ousts president

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — The No. 2 army commander seized power today in a military coup that ousted President Alfredo Stroessner, who has ruled Paraguay since 1954. Gen. Andres Rodriguez, the second in command of the army and a close associate of Gen. Stroessner, said in a nationwide radio address that the army commander in chief was under house arrest. Stroessner, who had been the Western Hemisphere's longest ruling leader, was given 12 hours to leave Paraguay and had chosen exile in Chile, the Roman Catholic station Radio Caritas reported. The arrest followed a long struggle between the president and the army. See COUP, page 12

Bolton scales back budget

By Andrew J. Davis Manchester Herald

"Save today so we can spend it out over a longer period of time," said U.S. Treasury Secretary James A. Bolton. The fiscal year begins July 1. With the state projecting a deficit of $170 million this fiscal year and a gap in spending and revenues of about $282 million next fiscal year, Urwin said he was afraid that the state will cut back in aid to towns. "It depends on the state," said Urwin. "The state expects a significant shortfall in revenue that naturally affects the town." The Board of Finance also recently sent out a directive asking boards to keep budgets

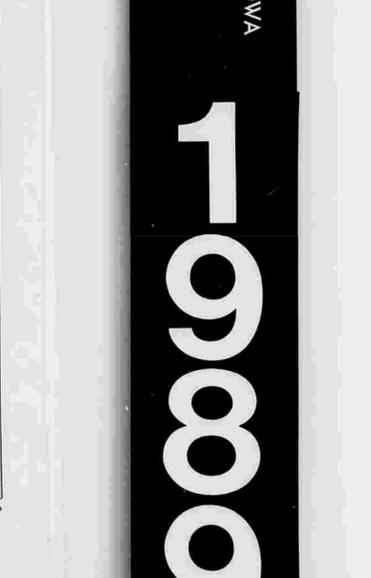

Shuttle moved to launch pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space Shuttle Discovery was moved out of its hangar today on its way to a launch pad where technicians hope to replace three engine turboturbofans in time for a mid-March liftoff. The earliest possible launch date is March 10. If the shuttle can't be launched by March 18, Discovery would be pulled back to a hangar, yielding the pad to Atlantis, whose crew is to dispatch the Magellan probe to Venus after a liftoff scheduled for April 28. Atlantis' planetary payload has priority over Discovery's communications satellite because after May 23, Venus will not be in the proper alignment with Earth again until 1991. "We are under pressure, but in this case it's good pressure because it will just make us sure that we pay attention to all the details in that we know we have a point to meet. But we know we can make it," said B. K. Davis, NASA's shuttle engine manager and chief of the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. "I think we're in good shape," Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's associate administrator for space flight, said Thursday at a Houston awards ceremony. Discovery's launch is scheduled for 11:00 a.m. on Wednesday to replace all three of the engine turboturbofans. Perched vertically on a giant tracked transporter, Discovery was expected back at work after being sent home at midday Thursday by Montana Gov. Stan Stephens. The capital, Helena, also had to cope with a train explosion that forced the daylong evacuation of thousands of people and left some without power with 38 below zero temperatures. The cold chased out what had been an unusually warm January in many parts of the country. Bostonians enjoyed a record-high 66 degrees Wednesday. Medina suffered a stroke in 1978.

Massage parlor suit thrown out by judge

A Federal District Court judge has thrown out a lawsuit against the town of Manchester filed by a former massage parlor owner who was arrested in 1985 and twice charged with promoting prostitution in the second degree; town officials said.

Paul J. O'Bright of 307 Grissom Road, former owner of the now-closed Little House of Foxes on Main St., sued the town and police officials for character defamation resulting from his arrest. He was seeking up to $3 million in damages.

Federal District Court Judge Peter Dorsey granted a request filed on behalf of the town seeking a summary judgment, according to a press release issued today from the town attorney's office. Summary judgment is granted when a party in a lawsuit establishes that there are no facts for a jury to decide.

The judge ruled that O'Bright's allegations were not supported by enough evidence, the release said. Assistant Town Attorney Thomas P. Cella of the Hartford law firm of Howard, Kohn, Sprague and FitzGerald represented the town.

O'Bright sued the town, Manchester Police Chief Robert D. Lannan and Detective Russell Wood.

Police Roundup

Man charged in burglary

A Manchester man was arrested Thursday on charges he burglarized a neighbor's apartment, police said.

Kenneth J. Oliver of 869 Main St. was charged with third-degree burglary, sixth-degree larceny, and third-degree criminal mischief for the alleged robbery of another apartment in his apartment building, police said. The incident occurred on Jan. 17, police said.

Police found the apartment in a mess, with items thrown on the floor of the living room, bathroom and bedroom, police said. Police said they found a disconnected pair of speakers, receiver and television.

A panel of the back door, which was blocked by two closets, had been destroyed, and the front door had been pushed open, police said.

Oliver allegedly returned the speakers to the apartment, police said.

He was held on $500 non-surety bond and will appear in Manchester Superior Court on Wednesday.

Bowers School library is on wheels

By Andrew J. Davis

The library at Bowers School has been closed for renovation work, the bookmobile stops there weekly.

The school undergoes renovations. But the bookmobile has been coming to Bowers every Wednesday since September and will continue to be there until the school's library is reopened, said Paprzyca. The about 24 classes are split into two shifts, with half the classes coming one week and half coming the next, she said.

The class teacher watches students who cannot or do not need to use the bookmobile while volunteers escort children to it.

Only children with public library cards are able to use the bookmobile. "It's the only way we could do it," said Paprzyca. "We were just able to work it out."

Mail construction won't harm wetlands

By Nancy Concelmion

A permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is not required for work on the $70 million Buckland mall because the work will not affect wetlands, a corps spokeswoman said Tuesday.

"Our folks have no jurisdiction over that site," spokeswoman Sue Douglas said. "Our visit and our review of the property (shown) that the impact to the wetlands was almost nonexistent."

The Army Corps of Engineers in July asked the major project

Douglas said a corps permit is not required because the development don't propose to fill any of the wetlands.

The Planning and Zoning Commission approved a wetlands permit for the site in 1985. In a Nov. 4, 1985 memo to the commission, Pellegrini said town staff had no objections to the use of the wetlands and found that the wetlands would not be disturbed by the plans.

The application for the permit shows there are more than 28 acres of wetlands on the site.

Andover candidate creates third party

By Andrew J. Davis

ANDOVER — First Selectman Earleen Duchesneau has decided to seek re-election by forming a third party ticket, which could split the Republican party.

Duchesneau lost her bid to be nominated by the Republican party last month when committee member Judith Willard received the backing of the party caucus.

But Duchesneau's "Andover Fair Government" ticket has the support of the Republican Town Committee. Also included on the fair government ticket are Stephen O. Fish, who will run for Board of Selectmen, and Susan Ciosowski, who is running for town clerk.

political power to the Board of Selectmen majority, he said.

Duchesneau received 13 out of 20 votes during the Wednesday caucus. Willard, who could not be reached for comment, won the caucus 7 to 25 votes.

The election is May 1. Julie A. Havel is the Democratic candidate for first selectman.

"I enjoy being first selectman," said Duchesneau. "Perseverance and getting my message across are the keys to the election." Getting the word out is going to be the most important thing.

After losing to Willard at the caucus, Duchesneau said she would not seek the first selectman's seat.

Dredging of Union Pond less complicated

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

Dredging Union Pond to make it more suitable for recreation uses may not be as big a job as originally thought, representatives of the Army Corps of Engineers have discovered.

Representatives of the corps made a preliminary inspection of the pond area Jan. 18 and determined that the north end of the pond, where the Hookanum River flows, is shallow naturally, not because it has been filled in with debris.

According to U.S. Sprague Parks and Recreation director, that means a much smaller area of the pond will have to be dredged, mostly downstream to dispose of the material.

The next step would be a study of the economic feasibility of the project.

Cassano said he was told the corps would probably not be authorized to do such a study for a recreation facility because other projects would have higher priority.

"Some other source of funds for the feasibility study would have to be sought."

When she announced the grant of up to $50,000 last May, Kennedy described it as "a foot in door," and said she would continue to work to get other funds for the plans.

Work for the pond area call for restoring a shallow skating basin at the south end of the pond and establishing a boat launch and picnic area, as well as improving trails along the pond banks that are part of the Hookanum River Linear Park system.

Weiss proposal would give 34 10% wage hikes

The town manager has proposed increasing the maximum salaries of 34 non-union employees by an average of 10 percent.

Assistant Town Manager Steven B. Werber said Town Manager Robert B. Weiss's recommendation was based on a study which showed that non-union employees in Manchester are paid less than in many comparably-sized towns.

Personnel Department.

Across the board, higher level administrators earn salaries below the average in the current labor market, Werber said.

"In almost every case we are down to the lower end of the scale compared to other towns," he said.

"It should be stressed that for almost every single recruitment process which has taken place in the last several years involving positions covered by this study, the Board has had to raise the salary of the position in order to attract qualified applicants."

Weiss said in a Jan. 30 memo to the Board of Directors. The directors are scheduled to review the increase proposal at their meeting Tuesday.

Proposed increases are based on salary information collected from 19 towns and a rating of each position based on a job evaluation plan developed by J.W. Thompson Associates, a Manchester consulting firm operated by state Rep. John W. Thompson. Ratings are based on knowledge and skills, responsibility and working conditions.

An evaluation team consisting of Werber, Parry and Personnel Officer Jan Devendorf used the plan to rate each position.

Increases in the maximum salaries range from 2.5 percent to 20 percent, but the average hike is 10 percent. Parry said in her memo.

Under the plan, the town would pay about $14,600 for the increases from March 1 to June 30 of this year and about $70,250 in fiscal year 1989-1990, Werber said.

Those now making the maximum salary would first get increases for the next highest salary step, meaning that the maximum wage hike would not take effect for as many as three years.

Readathon set Saturday

By Nancy Concelmion
Manchester Herald

Literacy Volunteers of America has scheduled a "readathon" Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Charter Oak Mall in East Hartford.

First Lady Barbara Bush's book "C. Fred's Story — A Man's Life" is on the reading list.

Bush acts as ghost writer for the family cocker spaniel in the story. Other books available are Lee Paquette's "Only More So," a history of East Hartford, and a collection of Robert Frost's poems.

Readers also may choose their material. They will be backed by pledges.

Stephen Breen, president of the Connecticut River East chapter of Literacy Volunteers of America, will head the group. Volunteers are welcome.

Proceeds from the event will support training sessions and buy tutoring materials for volunteer tutors. The Connecticut River East chapter serves Manchester, East Hartford, Glastonbury, Vernon, South Windsor, Bolton, Tolland and Ellington.

For more information call 647-8216.

More pupils return

WATERTOWN (AP) — Attendance at a local elementary school is improving but is lower than normal in the aftermath of an anonymous letter threatening to "start shooting the little pigs on the school yard very soon."

Superintendent of Schools Blaise A. Salerno said only 45 pupils, or 11 percent, were absent from Polk School on Thursday compared with 75, or 16 percent, the previous day.

"We're getting back to normal," Salerno said, noting that elementary school absences run about 6 percent.

Polk School and two parents — one from a private, parochial school — have received the threatening letters, apparently from the same person, since last weekend.

Public school officials sent notes home to parents on Tuesday, informing them of the letters and steps being taken to protect the children.

Police profit from arrest

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The state police and police departments in Glamorgan and Hartford have received more than $10 million from the sale of houses in the West French Indies that belonged to a convicted drug dealer, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Tworzy Jr. said.

The house in St. Batoelme was taken from William Zimmerman, who was arrested in 1984 for running a marijuana importing and distribution organization, Tworzy said.

State police received $6,535, Glamorgan police received $37,921 and Hartford police received $12,507.

In addition to the houses, the government has seized drug-related assets and proceeds worth about $5.2 million, Tworzy said Thursday. The action is allowed under the Comprehensive Forfeiture Act of 1984.

Key post for Rowland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John G. Rowland, R-Conn., has been named to the House Armed Services seapower subcommittee, a panel that approves construction of nuclear submarines made at the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton.

"This subcommittee is vitally related to the economic well-being of eastern Connecticut in that all Navy ship construction originates in the subcommittee," the Waterbury lawmaker said in a prepared statement Thursday.

Rowland, who joined the Armed Services Committee in 1987, gave up a seat on the readiness subcommittee to join the seapower panel. He retains his seat on the procurement subcommittee.

Lotto winner claims prize

NEWINGTON (AP) — A Bridgeport man came to lottery headquarters nearly a week after he learned he was a winner in the Jan. 27 Connecticut Lotto drawing to claim the first of 20 annual installments that will total $1.7 million.

Joseph Wirth, 63, took five days to settle his insurance matters, quit his job and buy a new car before he claimed the third and final winning ticket from the drawing on Thursday.

"I'm retired as of 8:02 Friday night," said Wirth, who had worked as a tool and die maker for 45 years.

Wirth's winnings total $1,708,247. Lottery officials on Thursday presented him with a check for $68,330, the first of 20 annual payments after federal withholding tax has been deducted.

Wirth, who was born in Hungary, said he plans to use his winnings to visit friends and family in Hungary and Austria.

Judge won't seek new term

HARTFORD (AP) — State Rep. Edith G. Prague, the General Assembly's most outspoken and drunken dissenting lawmaker, says she's relieved that Richard C. Noren, the judge arrested for driving while intoxicated, has withdrawn from consideration for a second term.

The Columbia Democrat says the withdrawal, which came Thursday evening after two dramatic hearings by the Judiciary Committee, should send a message to other judges.

It was the Superior Court judge's account of his 1986 arrest and subsequent behavior that had jeopardized his reappointment for a second eight-year term.

On Wednesday night, the General Assembly's Judiciary Committee for the second time postponed acting on Noren's nomination.

The committee had received a letter, signed by the chairman of the Woodstock Board of Education describing an incident in which Noren was allegedly drunk and obnoxious at a Woodstock restaurant more than a year after his drunken-driving arrest and his completion of the state's alcohol education program.

Witness says former over planned Wells Fargo heist

HARTFORD (AP) — The government's star witness in the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery trial told jurors that her former lover masterminded the 1983 heist and then temporarily stashed thousands of dollars in small bills in Westchester boxes under her bed.

Anne Gassin, the former mistress of key defendant Juan Segarra, told jurors she was the one who hid the money in Westchester boxes under her bed in her Cambridge, Mass., apartment. She said Segarra and two others transported most of the money to Mexico in September 1984.

When she was asked to identify one of the people who helped Segarra move the money, Gassin rose and pointed to Antonio Camacho Negron, another defendant in the case.

Gassin, who follows more than 100 witnesses, told the jury that DECISION POSTPONED — Philip Aronow, left, and Frank Jones, brother and attorney of victim Michael Aronow, leave court in Hartford Thursday. A judge postponed a decision on whether Steven M. Asherman, convicted of manslaughter in the death, should be allowed to return to a community release program.

Decision is delayed in Asherman case

HARTFORD (AP) — A Superior Court judge has postponed for two weeks a decision on whether Steven M. Asherman, convicted of manslaughter in the 1984 stabbing death of a medical school classmate, should be allowed to return to a community release program.

Hartford Superior Court Judge Samuel Freed was to settle the matter Thursday but agreed to delay the case until Feb. 15.

The state Attorney General's office, trying to keep Asherman in prison, is seeking medical records from Asherman's college, but Asherman has so far refused to release the records.

Asherman had participated in the release program from January 1988 until August, when he was ordered back to Somers state prison by Correction Commissioner Larry Meachum.

Asherman challenged Meachum's action, arguing he had been denied due process. Freed agreed, and correction officials conducted another hearing into the matter.

The new hearing concluded that Asherman was eligible for community release. But the state, led by Gov. William A. O'Neill and Meachum, asked last month that Freed delay Asherman's release. Meachum said authorities wanted to investigate Asherman's past to determine if there was any undisclosed activity that might affect the release.

Philip Aronow, the victim's brother, said

Forst says he'll use study to 'guide' public safety unit

HARTFORD (AP) — Public Safety Commissioner Lester J. Forst, while noting he doesn't agree with everything in a consultant's report recommending his department's reorganization, says he will assemble a management review team to address those suggestions he considers feasible.

"I consider this document a working paper which I will use in guiding this department to better management and improved public safety services," Forst said Thursday in a prepared statement.

The consultant hired by the state is the Department of Public Safety, which includes the state police, suffers from inefficiency.

The report was ordered by the Legislature's Appropriations Committee because of problems with state police overspending their budget. It was delivered to the committee Wednesday.

Forst did not specifically mention in the statement parts of the report with which he does not agree. But he said recommendations suggesting improvement in the management of overtime, the distribution of manpower, civilianization and recruitment would receive particular attention.

Annual 5-month session passes its first hurdle

HARTFORD (AP) — The Legislative Management Committee is asking the public for comment on the idea of having annual five-month General Assembly sessions.

Those bills were introduced by the House speaker, Senate president pro tem and other leaders, voted 10-9 to hold a hearing on the five-month session bill.

The committee decided it didn't want to hear from the public on bills that would restrict the hours of operation of the General Assembly, repeal the last two legislative pay raises or limit the number of terms a House speaker could serve.

The dissidents thus managed to elect Richard J. Balducci to the post.

Balducci did not speak on the two-term speaker proposal on Thursday.

The committee also rejected a bill requiring the House and Senate to adjourn by 10 p.m., except that on the last day of each session they could meet up to the constitutional adjournment hour of midnight.

The bill's "statement of purpose" reads: "To allow legislators to return to their homes at a reasonable hour, and to be a citizen legislator, when we are not in session."

Toward the end of each session, the House frequently goes past 10 p.m. and occasionally past midnight. The Senate, with one-fifth the number of House members, rarely goes into the supper hour.

Also rejected by the committee was a bill that would have repealed the last two legislative pay raises, another that would have provided an unspecified amount of money to allow legislators to set up offices in their districts, and one more that would have allowed no more than 40 percent of the members of the Judiciary Committee to be lawyers.

The committee also agreed to review a request by a lobbyist for the Society of the Plastics Industry that would ban the use of polystyrene, or plastic foam, containers in the cafeteria in the Legislative Office Building.

The committee had ordered the ban because of the use of chemicals used in manufacturing the containers that could potentially harm the atmosphere.

Foster parent rule rejected by court

HARTFORD (AP) — A long-standing state policy that prevented foster parents from visiting their charges in court has been overturned by the Appellate Court.

The decision came in the case of foster mother Margaret Soden of Waterbury who waged a two-year court battle to win the legal right to seek permission to visit the girl she raised for more than three years.

Soden, who last saw the girl in February 1987, two months after state workers moved her back with her mother, was a state Thursday when she learned of the ruling.

"It's been a very hard time for me since I last saw the girl," she said. "But it's all worth it if I can see her, hold her and tell her I love her and let her know I just didn't give her away."

With the legal recognition awarded her by the ruling, Mrs. Soden can now file a petition in juvenile court, seeking scheduled visits with Jennifer, now 6 and living in the Waterbury area with her mother.

Her petition might still be rejected, but her attorney, Jeffrey Ginzberg of Seymour, said that's not likely.

Pay raise spotlight now on House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's rejection of a 51 percent congressional pay raise places the spotlight on a House leadership plan to legalize the increase next week but scale it back to 30 percent a day later.

The Senate's 95-vote Thursday against the raise sent the two houses in different directions, and "no one knows" how the controversy will be resolved, said Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan. "I don't believe we'll know that for a matter of weeks or months."

The Senate resolution included language to roll back the raise if it becomes law and end the system of allowing congressional pay raises, along with those for top federal executives and judges, to be set by the president.

Judge decries 'security gurus'

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Security gurus" from the CIA and other intelligence agencies won't be permitted to disrupt Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial, said U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell in his courtroom remarks Thursday, disclosed that he had turned down an earlier unsolicited request from the intelligence community concerning how the trial would be conducted.

He did not discuss the ruling, but said: "I do not want to see that proposal re-established in some other form."

Gesell's comments came at the end of a day in which nine prospective jurors were sent into a jury pool the judge wants to build to 50 before selecting a 12-member jury and six alternates. A total of 25 have been sent into the pool since North's trial opened Tuesday.

The judge predicted it will take "most of next week" to complete the jury selection process.

Gesell has spent much time since the Iran-Contra indictment was handed up last March dealing with the problem of classified information which the prosecution and defense want to present at trial.

Gesell's criticism of "security gurus" reflects a clash of interests between the intelligence community's responsibility to protect national secrets and the court's responsibility to ensure that North gets a fair trial.

Diana winding up triumphant N.Y. tour

NEW YORK (AP) — Princess Diana made a triumphant but exhausting tour of New York City that embraced both its homeless and high-and-mighty, and by most accounts the only people she failed to charm were 400 Irish-American protesters.

The 27-year-old princess, described as tired and perhaps a little homesick, was to head home to England today after visiting Harlem Hospital and meeting children with AIDS.

"She is a beautiful woman — strikingly beautiful — who has taken the world by storm," Mayor Edward I. Koch exclaimed after meeting the princess Thursday night at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Diana was at the Brooklyn concert hall to attend the American debut of the Welsh National Opera, after which she returned to Manhattan and dazzled guests at a gala dinner in her honor at the World Financial Center.

Earlier, she visited a family's apartment at a Lower East Side shelter for the homeless and browsed at the giant FAO Schwarz toy store.

"I dreamed about this last night," said Wanda Morales, who shook Diana's hand. "It was better (than the dream). It was really there. We can hold our heads up high and say, 'Princess Diana came to the Lower East Side.'"

Cheering crowds turned out at each stop to glimpse the princess. The lone note of dissent was heard outside the opera performance, where more than 400 protesters chanted "IRA, IRA" and waved signs denouncing the Charles J. Hynes, a potential mayoral candidate who is active in Irish-American affairs, said the protest "is not directed against Princess Diana, it's directed against her as a symbol of British government, which for much too long has inhabited Northern Ireland."

Koch and developer Donald Trump were heckled as they entered the elegant concert hall, located in a run-down Brooklyn neighborhood.

But all was calm and serene inside, where the princess watched a performance of Giuseppe Verdi's "Falstaff," which tells the story of Sir John Falstaff, Shakespeare's knight of the punch.

"She was very proud of the company," said Brooklyn Academy of Music president Harvey Lichtenstein, who sat next to the princess during the opera and at the dinner that followed. As Princess of Wales, she is the patron of the company.

Tower's approval in trouble after new allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel will extend its investigation of John Tower after new allegations surfaced about President Bush's choice for defense secretary, reportedly concerning his drinking habits and relationships with women.

Tower served 24 years in the Army, and was chairman of the Armed Services Committee from 1981-84.

He was dogged by allegations of drinking and womanizing before his nomination. In divorce papers filed two years ago by his second wife, Lilla Burt Cummings, Tower was accused of "marital misconduct" while he was in the Army.

Bush has defended Tower, saying an FBI background check noted nothing that accused by the Tower from serving as defense secretary. When Bush announced the nomination he dismissed "a lot of rumors that proved to be groundless."

Senators also asked Tower whether he would be influenced by the more than $1 million he collected as a defense consultant. Tower denied any such influence, saying he had made a request to certain items in the files, so he will not be voting today," Nunn said.

Nunn interrupted a committee hearing on another matter Thursday to announce that an expected vote on the Tower nomination that day had been postponed.

"The file is still not complete and there are members now who have made a request to review certain items in the files, so we will not be voting today," Nunn said.

Nunn and the ranking Republican on the panel, Sen. John Warner of Virginia, later met with the FBI and Sherrill Marshall, assistant to White House counsel C. Boyden Gray, to discuss the new information.

Nunn refused to describe the allegations or identify the source. But Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., said the committee would tend "to give more weight to sources who don't have an axe to grind."

The new allegations involve reports of womanizing and drinking, according to network and newspaper reports.

The Washington Post, quoting unidentified sources involved in the investigation, said the allegations deal with "incidents of a relatively recent nature that had previously been unreported to the FBI." An unidentified woman who worked with Tower in the FBI reportedly told Exon Thursday that she had seen Tower chase a secretary around his desk.

Further delaying the vote was the request by two unidentified committee members to review the FBI report. Previously only Nunn and Warner had read the report.

Warner said he hoped the committee would be able to vote next week, possibly Monday, on the nomination.

Exon said he believed the nomination was "still in question," but not in jeopardy. "Another committee report, the difference is we will be serving one master, not two, that is, the American people," he said.

"I don't like to articulate failure," Wright said, when asked what would happen if his plan is defeated. "If for some reason it doesn't work, we will regroup."

The House committee to pass the 30 percent raise by a majority, like most legislation, but opponents might be able to tack on language rescinding the raise altogether. Under the two-thirds rule, no amendments would be in order.

The House plan would scale back the raise for all three branches of government, even though the Constitution prohibits judges' pay from being reduced.

Wright released results of a survey showing 57 percent of House members opposing a pay raise vote before the Tuesday midnight deadline and 54 percent favoring instead a vote to reduce the raise to 30 percent.

World debt, trade woes on the table

WASHINGTON (AP) — Third World debt and stubborn international trade imbalances are key topics being discussed by the United States and its allies at a two-day meeting of Western economic powers.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, who has gotten mixed reviews so far in his handling of international economic matters, is host of the meetings.

The finance ministers and central bank presidents of Japan, West Germany, Great Britain, France, Canada and Italy are taking part in the sessions.

While the sessions come during a period of relative calm for global currency markets, investors are still watching with keen interest, hoping to learn more about the Bush administration's views on international economic matters.

Brady was criticized last November for botching an effort to calm financial markets concerned about a steep drop in the value of the dollar. During a television interview, he said: "Markets go up and down... I don't want to worry about (the dollar's decline) very much."

The dollar plunged further following Brady's comments.

Exon said he believed the nomination was "still in question," but not in jeopardy. "Another committee report, the difference is we will be serving one master, not two, that is, the American people," he said.

"I don't like to articulate failure," Wright said, when asked what would happen if his plan is defeated. "If for some reason it doesn't work, we will regroup."

Washington: American dream — and nightmare

By Ruth Sinal
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On a snowy Sunday morning this month, two youths were buying drugs within a few steps of the Embassy of Spain. There was nothing furtive about the deal, just money handed over and two small packets given in return. Anybody driving by could have seen it.

Across the street, next to the Polish Embassy, a young woman signaled a passing car. The car stopped, the woman leaned into the open window and handed over some money. She withdrew a gloved hand holding a small package. Anybody could have watched.

That block, just a mile up 14th Street from the White House, is one of the estimated 90 open-air drug markets flourishing in the capital, which last year achieved the distinction of having the nation's highest murder rate.

Washington is a city of contrasts, and they never have been more stark. The news coming out of the capital these days — fresh expectations which arise with the inauguration of a new president competes against news of murder, drugs and a mayor under a cloud.

Things have gotten bad enough for the other Washington to begin to poke into the consciousness of official, prosperous, gleaming Washington.

Barely a block from the White House, some of the city's homeless huddle on heating grates. Activist Mitch Snyder estimates there are 15,000 people who live in Washington with no homes other than the streets, and he says several have frozen to death. The best publicized case was that of Jesse Carpenter, a World War II veteran who died of exposure across the street from the White House in Lafayette Park.

Across the street from the domed Congress, a beggar jangled coins in a tin cup and asked passing legislative aides for money.

"It's the American dream and the American nightmare all rolled into one," said B.J. Harris, a drug education counselor with the non-profit Sasha Bruce Youthworks, a youth counseling service named in honor of the late daughter of a prominent American diplomat.

Statistics provided by the Census Bureau highlight the disparity.

The District of Columbia has the nation's second highest per capita income after the state of Connecticut, $20,303 annually, which is 32.3 percent higher than the national average.

The city has the nation's fourth highest per capita education level, with 28 percent of the population having completed 16 years or more of schooling.

Yet, Washington's infant mortality rate is the highest in the country — 20.8 per 1,000 births, compared to the national average of 16.6, according to the Child's Defense Fund. The city has the country's highest tuberculosis case rate, 25.4 per 100,000, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

"This city has monoliths of marble attesting to a great civilization, and yet some of its neighborhoods are like the undeveloped Third World," Harris said.

Most of the 27 million tourists who come through Washington every year never see the seamy sides. In Washington, most neighborhoods are clearly delineated between the 170,000 white minority and the 458,000 blacks and Hispanics.

There are many middle-class black neighborhoods, and integrated neighborhoods, with tidy lawns and substantial houses which could fit anywhere in America. Some of the predominantly white areas, such as green and grassy Spring Valley or Cleveland Park, with shaded streets of elegant Victorian homes, are as comfortable as any in America.

One can stroll down Massachusetts Avenue — past the official residence of the vice president, past the statue of Winston Churchill, past the ornate Islamic Center where Moslems gather to worship, past dozens of elegant embassies — without a moment's thought of danger.

In fact, one can live a lifetime in northwest Washington removed from the violence and crime that characterize neighborhoods just a few miles away.

"The lines of race and class are very distinct here," said Harris. "The neighborhood we live in is completely white and it's a world apart from" the crime-ridden streets in other parts of the city, said Lauren Silva Pinto, a television producer who lives with her husband on a shaded block in northwest Washington. "I feel extremely safe here, we walk around at night with no problems, have barbecues, visit neighbors."

Washington became a mecca for blacks fleeing the segregated South in the first half of this century. Washington was segregated itself until after

Kangaroo for dinner angers activists

By Richard Bill
The Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Kangaroos may soon end up on dinner plates in New South Wales, Australia's most populous state. Animal welfare groups are hopping mad.

They contend few Australians will want to feast on their national symbol but that tourists might. Conservationists called the decision "disastrous" and potentially dangerous because kangaroos carry a host of diseases.

"Paul Hogan (the comic star of 'Crocodile Dundee') is luring American tourists to Sydney, but all they are likely to see is a bloodbath," said Sue Arnold of Australians for Animals, the country's largest wildlife conservation group.

"Kangaroos are shot by helicopter, poisoned, snared and used for pet food as well as an export industry. Now they're being offered for domestic human consumption. How can they survive?" she said in an interview.

Hogan, hailed by the tourist industry for his "throw another shrimp on the barbie" commercials that brought a record 2 million visitors to Australia's bicentennial celebrations in 1988, has a new series to be screened in the United States in February.

In the commercial, as reported by the Sydney Morning Herald, Hogan says that "God had a sense of humor" when he deposited in Australia "the famous giant hopping mouse" — the kangaroo.

Tourism Minister Graham Richardson said the commercials are expected to contribute to a 20 percent increase in tourism this year. Five million tourists are expected by the year 2000, said Bill Gray, Manager of the government-funded Tourism Australia.

Officials said a decision Jan. 6 to harvest kangaroos for human consumption will not endanger wildlife.

The New South Wales health minister, Peter Collins, said the program is for farming kangaroos, not depleting wildlife stocks. The decision reverses a longstanding ban in New South Wales, of which Sydney is the tourist gateway.

Kangaroo meat already is consumed in the states of South Australia and Western Australia. It is described as extremely lean, full of protein and somewhat gamey, not unlike venison.

Collins said his department would ensure that kangaroo meat is safe to eat, but Arnold and others questioned how the state government planned to farm the creatures and maintain a standard that makes them fit for consumption.

Australia's population is 16.5 million. The government's National Parks & Wildlife Service estimates the kangaroo population at about 15 million. An annual culling quota is about 3 million, with the meat used for pet food and skins turned into such goods as wallets and purses for export.

"What other country in the world slaughters its national symbol?" said Richard Jones, a member of the New South Wales Parliament who was elected in 1987 on a platform of animal welfare.

Arnold said kangaroos carry a range of diseases, such as salmonella, tuberculosis, toxoplasmosis and hydatid cysts, a worm that can be fatal.

Farmers regard the kangaroo as a pest. The Greenpeace and Animal Liberation organizations, both supporters of Australians for Animals, said the decision represents a victory for the farm lobby.

The Canberra Times, a newspaper in Australia's capital, said the kangaroo industry is in chaos.

It said there is compelling evidence of widespread illegal shooting and few controls on the transportation of skins and carcasses interstate.

Only licensed professional shooters are supposed to hunt kangaroos but conservationists and others maintain the government regulation is loosely enforced.

"At the end of the day, the only conclusion to be drawn is that the government controls on the kangaroo industry are worthless," the newspaper said in an editorial.

Christine Townsend, spokeswoman for Animal Liberation, called the decision a disaster.

OPINION

Club lease proposal good sign

Negotiators for the town and for the Manchester Country Club have come closer together in their proposals over an interim lease, indicating some hope for breaking the long impasse over how to reconcile their differences.

An offer for a two-year lease by the three town directors serving as negotiators represents a more realistic approach than the one-year lease they had suggested earlier or the three-year lease the club has sought.

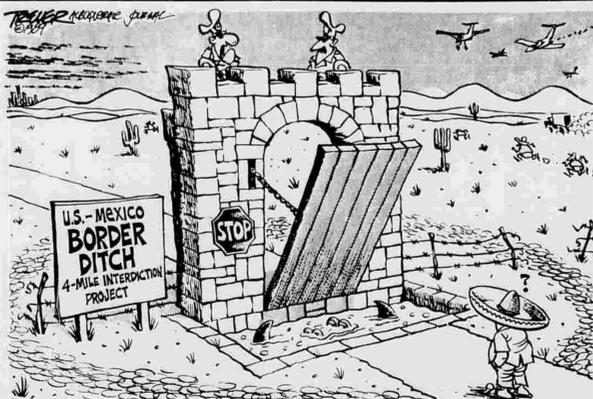

The club needs some assurance that it can continue viable operation of the golf course while the town studies the possibility of adding more holes to the course to permit more use of it by the public.

The decision cannot be made overnight. Even if it is found feasible to expand the course, it will take time before new holes are playable.

There are two major problems to be resolved. One is the length of the lease and the other is the amount the club will pay the town annually.

The current lease price of $25,000 is clearly too low. Town negotiators have suggested $75,000. The club's spokesman says there is going to be opposition to that figure from club members. Club negotiators have countered with a $50,000 figure.

The newest proposal is not likely to be embraced quickly by the club, but it does represent movement in the right direction.

"SURE, IT'S EXPENSIVE, BUT IT'S TIME WE SHOWED 'EM WE MEAN BUSINESS!"

George Bush rolls right

By Fred Barnes

On the Sunday morning before Labor Day, George Bush was at home watching NBC's "Meet the Press." The guest was William Bennett, the outgoing education secretary. Bennett was sharply criticized by Michael Dukakis for having vetoed a 1977 bill requiring Massachusetts teachers to recite the Pledge of Allegiance in class daily.

Bush loved every word of it. Later that morning he went to the phone and called Bennett. Bill, he said, that was a great performance on "Meet the Press." Keep up the good work.

George Bush changed in the 1980s, and so did a lot of other Republicans. A decade earlier, Bennett's fusillade would have repelled Bush. Bush may not feel comfortable bashing liberals in such polarizing language himself. But he likes it when he hears it now. Reagan's success has driven Bush and the GOP to the right.

You'd never know this from the postelection press coverage of Bush. His ascendancy has been heralded as the rebirth of centrism. Assessing Bush's Cabinet, R.W. Apple of The New York Times said its chief trait is "competence, not ideology." David Ignatius of The Washington Post said the centrist establishment had taken over again.

True, they're establishment, but they're not centrist.

On economic policy, Bush and James Baker, the new secretary of state, are unabashed supplysiders. On social policy, Richard Thornburgh has cast himself as the leading proponent of overturning the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion. On relations with the Soviets, Bush and his national security advisers, Brent Scowcroft and deputy Robert Gates, have emerged as strong skeptics on Gorbachev.

Though the Bush administration is going to be more conservative than practically everyone expects, the rhetoric won't be. In his public utterances on everything but Gorbachev, Reagan was relentlessly conservative and noisily nationalistic. Bush can't top him, and wouldn't dare try. But the Reagan reality was not as conservative, especially in Reagan's second term. Without saying much, Bush managed to persuade a group of New Right activists who met with him on Dec. 11 that he'll at least be more conservative than second-term Reagan.

In staffing his administration, Bush has created a conservative bloc in his Cabinet that is bound to be more effective than the maladroited Meese-Watt-Donovan-Weinberger clique.

WILLIAM BENNETT... bashing paid off

The Justice Department from Edwin Meese III to Richard Thornburgh, the former governor of Pennsylvania, Thornburgh is not a Reaganite conservative. He doesn't deliver conservative rhetoric that Meese did, but I'll bet he turns out to be far more successful in achieving conservative goals.

In one of his first acts as attorney general, Thornburgh petitioned the Supreme Court to overturn Roe vs. Wade. Then in a Jan. 13 interview on CNN's "Evans & Novak" show, he flatly predicted that the 1973 ruling will be reversed this year. He also said he favors repeal of the special prosecutor law.

According to the conventional wisdom, Thornburgh is supposed to represent the revival of the GOP moderates. So is Louis Sullivan, Bush's choice as secretary of health and human services. Sullivan, who is black, was picked because he's a pal of the Bushes.

The Sullivan nomination infuriated pro-lifers because Bush had promised them he'd pick someone avowedly anti-abortion to run HHS. Sullivan is fuzzy on abortion. But in meetings with Republican Rep. Vin Weber of Minnesota and Chris Smith of New Jersey and right-to-life activists Kay James, Sullivan pledged to pursue an anti-abortion agenda. He also agreed to staff the upper reaches of HHS with pro-lifers.

Bush's enthusiasm over Bennett's TV trashing of the Brookline-Cambridge crowd produced a tangible benefit for conservatives. It led to Bennett's appointment as drug czar. Remembering the Bennett performance, Bush called him a few days after the election and thanked him for his help. In their chat, Bennett said he didn't want a job in the Kemp administration. By then, he'd embarked on a lucrative schedule of speeches at $15,000 an appearance.

That wasn't the only reason. Bennett also feared the Bush administration would be rudderless and weak. He began to change his mind when Bush announced the Kemp pick on Dec. 19. That was the election of a man who said he'd like to be considered for drug czar.

Most of Bush's aides, except Sununu, were opposed. They said Bennett wasn't a team player and lacked the diplomatic touch needed to coordinate the drug fight. Besides, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, Bush's longtime friend, had a candidate, Johnson & Johnson chairman James Burke. Bush ignored his old pal and went with his new one.

information and very thoughtfully let me know when (photographer) Reginald Pinto would be able to come.

Both of your staff members showed up exactly as planned. I know that is not always possible, but it is appreciated. They very discreetly set up pictures in the tiny gallery without disturbing other visitors. When Reginald realized there might be a problem with one camera he even found a few minutes to come back and shoot additional film. Maureen stayed almost an hour pleasantly visiting with the photographer and staff. All of us could tell this was not just "a job" for Maureen but that she really cared about their work and their ideas.

These two people are certainly an asset to your staff and fine representatives in the field of journalism.

Main Street plan not a good idea

Our Manchester town administration, I presume Mayor DiRosa, has called a meeting of the Board of Directors on Feb. 7 for a "hurry up" combination public hearing for over $3 1/2 million dollars in the Main Street project.

In this day and age of our increasing traffic and billion dollar programs for highway expansion, the logics of the Main Street proposal is impossible to understand. The extensive reduction of the widest street in town at such a time flies in the face of common sense.

If angle parking is the problem, and I understand it is, I suggest we eliminate it and spend an appropriate amount of town funds to expand off-street parking east and west of

Soviets, Chinese to meet

BEIJING (AP) — The Chinese government has officially invited Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to China, setting the stage for the first Sino-Soviet summit in 30 years.

The Foreign Ministry said in a statement today that Foreign Minister Qian Qichen extended the invitation. In talks with his visiting Soviet counterpart Eduard Shevardnadze, who "accepted the invitation and expressed his gratitude."

No date for the visit was given, although it is widely expected to take place this spring. Qian said earlier today that Shevardnadze would announce a date at a news conference Saturday before he leaves China for Pakistan.

Gorbachev will be the first Soviet leader to visit China since Nikita Khrushchev met Mao Tse-tung in Beijing in 1959, a year before rapidly deteriorating bilateral relations led to an end of Soviet technical and military aid to China.

Measles cause concern

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One-sixth of America's 1988 measles patients came from Los Angeles County, where an ongoing outbreak among mostly Hispanic toddlers demonstrates a nationwide need to vaccinate 1- to 4-year-olds, experts say.

"We seem to have a toddler immunization gap," said Dr. Stephen Waterman, chief of acute communicable disease control for the county Department of Health Services. "A lot of those kids don't get vaccinated until they go to school," where measles shots are mandatory.

The extent of the outbreak of the virus-caused respiratory disease in Los Angeles County was reported by the national Centers for Disease Control in today's issue of the agency's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The county last year reported 513 measles cases, 17.5 percent — or more than one-sixth — of the nation's total of 2,933, the Atlanta-based CDC said. Two of the patients, ages 8 months and 23 months, died.

Freeze to hamper cleanup

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — U.S. experts en route today to Antarctica to clean an oil spill that threatens the delicate ecosystem, but an environmentalist said only a few weeks remain before the area's frigid waters begin to freeze.

A giant C-5 cargo plane flew the crew and 52 tons of cleanup gear to the southern port of Punta Arenas on Thursday. The crew was to board on a U.S. research ship departing today for the spill, about 590 miles south of the Cape Horn.

Anton Underhiza, head of Antarctic Studies Foundation, said the vessel Polar Duke would take about four days to reach the spill, just off the Antarctic Peninsula and about two miles from the U.S. scientific base Palmer Station.

However, a Greenpeace spokesman cautioned that less than two months remain to contain the damage.

HES OK — Vice President Dan Quayle gestures how he felt his meetings have gone so far during his visit to Caracas, Venezuela, as he leaves the presidential inauguration of Carlos Andres Perez Thursday. Quayle is on his first overseas assignment and traveled to El Salvador today.

Kemp wins approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack Kemp blunted last-minute ethical questions about his acceptance of a $1 million honorarium for his role in the nation's last year reported 513 measles cases, 17.5 percent — or more than one-sixth — of the nation's total of 2,933, the Atlanta-based CDC said. Two of the patients, ages 8 months and 23 months, died.

The Senate voted unanimously to confirm Kemp, the former professional football player who served 18 years as a congressman from Buffalo, N.Y., and unsuccessfully ran for the Republican presidential nomination in 1988.

The vote followed by hours the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Development Committee's vote to recommend Kemp's nomination to the full Senate.

More unrest in Tampa

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Riot police arrested nine people during a second night of arson and rock-and-bottle throwing that erupted in a mostly black neighborhood following reports a suspected drug dealer died in police custody.

"The message is very clear. You come over here and incite riots, you're going to get arrested," said Mayor Sandy Freedman after police reported the disturbance Thursday.

About 70 police officers cordoned off the College Hill neighborhood for nearly three hours after sunset.

Explosion leaves Helena shivering from the cold

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Thousands of people returned to their homes following a spectacular railroad explosion and fire, but the blast damage threatened a dangerous power shortage today as temperatures ranged to 38 below zero.

"We've got to minimize power usage right down to the last light bulb," said Leroy Lemach, Helena division engineer for Montana Power Co. "It's that critical."

As wind chills dipped to 70 below zero, National Guard and Air Force troops relieved local firefighters late Thursday to monitor the explosion scene overnight and extinguish the last stubborn fires.

"We're just going to keep pouring water on it all night," said Sgt. Ron Weber, a National Guardsman stationed in Helena. "The cars that were the most threatening are now huge ice cubes."

Bitter cold weather that swept down out of Alaska was indirectly responsible for the pre-dawn explosions that rocked Montana's capital Thursday, severing power lines and shattering some neighborhoods with shrapnel.

Authorities said the accident occurred when railroad workers tried to switch locomotives on a freight train because the heater in one locomotive had failed. Forty-eight freight cars rolled away during the switch, traveling 12 miles into Helena before derailling and plowing into a propane tank.

The tank exploded, igniting a rail car filled with highly flammable hydrogen peroxide, which also exploded. But a second hydrogen peroxide car was cooled with ice in the frigid cold, apparently preventing it from exploding.

Only two minor injuries were reported.

It was one of two major train derailments in Montana on Thursday. In the second, 32 Burlington Northern grain cars derailed near Glacier National Park, spilling more than 5,000 tons of corn and blocking tracks in both directions. The derailment forced Amtrak to suspend service indefinitely between Minnesota and the West Coast.

The explosions in Helena scattered debris for a quarter-mile radius, showering a nearby college campus and sending a 1,500-pound coupling unit through a dormitory roof. Windows were blasted out of homes and businesses up to two miles away.

About 2,000 residents were evacuated within a square-mile area around the blast site as the temperature hovered near 30 below zero. Power was knocked out in parts of Helena for up to six hours.

By Thursday night, the evacuation order had been lifted, although parts of neighborhoods near the blast site remained without power. Lemach said that on substations carrying re-routed power was so heavy that any further problems could force rolling blackouts throughout the city.

Many homes in Helena rely on electricity as their primary source of heat. With forecasts predicting a high of 20 below zero today and a low of minus 38 tonight, officials pleaded with residents to cut back on all but essential electricity use.

Mayor Russ Ritter, who also is vice president of Carroll College, said damage to the city was estimated at $3 million, with $2 million on the college campus.

Secret Irish talks revealed

LONDON (AP) — Roman Catholic and Protestant politicians from Northern Ireland held secret talks last fall in which they discussed sharing power in the troubled British province, the British Broadcasting Corp. said today.

The BBC said in its report that the politicians met Oct. 14-15 at the Anghor Hotel between Dueseldorf and Duisburg in West Germany, and unanimously agreed they wanted to be partners in governing the provincial government.

"They agreed that Protestants and Catholics could share power at all levels of government, including control of the police," the report said.

The BBC initially reported the secret talks Thursday. In that report it said the talks could produce the most important political breakthrough since sectarian violence in the Protestant-dominated province flared in August 1968. Meetings have continued in Northern Ireland since October, it said.

Gordon Mahwinney, deputy leader of the province's Alliance Party, which draws support from Protestant Catholics and Protestants, confirmed he had participated in the talks but gave no details.

Mahwinney said Thursday the talks were arranged by a German Lutheran church official for a purpose he did not specify, but the four politicians involved departed from the agenda "some chief lieutenant" and discussed their differences.

"There was a regular line of communication opened between the Northern Ireland political parties and... great willingness to look at the problems of the other community," he said.

Catholic and Protestant party leaders who were not at the talks divorced themselves from the report.

John Hume, the province's leading Catholic politician, called the BBC version "nonsense." James Molyneux of the Official Unionist Party and Ian Paisley of the hard-line Democratic Unionists, Northern Ireland's two main Protestant leaders, also denied the report.

The BBC said Peter Robinson was a Protestant representative. Robinson had been Paisley's chief lieutenant but apparently has taken a more independent position recently.

"It was a beautiful six-room house with wide floor boards and three fireplaces. It had a large brick oven and a large fireplace in the living room overlooking the town and the University of Connecticut in the distance," she recalled.

The new owners have said they wanted to restore the house to its original shape but discovered that it was too unsteady to withstand the work.

Rosa Johnson Highter and her husband Raymond had converted a milk room building on the site into an apartment in 1952. In addition to that building, part of a barn at the site still stands.

After receiving the stop work order last week, Brophy, Aherm and Perotti promised town officials they would inform them in advance of any work planned on the rest of the site.

Well said the owners did not sign any document requiring restoration of the home as a condition of the sale.

While Highter is grieving over the loss, Arnold Carls, vice president of the local Historical Society, said the house was not of great historic value.

"It really didn't have historical significance to the town except maybe to Rosa Highter, whose family lived there. It was just a pretty house you would pass on the road," Carls said.

But Town Manager John El-Sesser said the house was on the list of structures to be inventoried by the state Historical Commission. If that agency approves a request by the town for a $30,000 grant to survey historical structures in the village section.

That might have led to the farmhouse being named to the National Register of Historic Places.

Herzan said the age of the house did make it eligible for consideration for evaluation by the commission but age alone does not a "historic" structure make. Other criteria include architectural style, uniqueness, local historical significance and/or association with important events or people.

If a structure is listed on the National Register, the state Historical Commission must review any federally funded road project to determine whether it would have an "adverse impact."

The state's Environmental Protection Act of 1971 also empowers any citizen to bring legal action to prevent any "unreasonable" destruction of such a building.

But the Connecticut Trust for Historic Preservation says that, in all but a few cases, the courts have allowed the destruction of such buildings. The courts ac-and Wilmington, N.C., 80.

At least four traffic fatalities were blamed on the weather, which slickened highways in a band of freezing rain from Texas to Vermont. In Edmonds, Wash., a 35-year-old utility worker died Thursday when he fell while trying to repair a downed power line.

Two men died of exposure, one in Martin, S.D., and the other in Great Falls, Mont. In Seattle, where snow is rare, a 12-year-old girl died of head injuries suffered in a sledding accident Thursday.

But a life was saved in North Dakota when searchers Thursday found a 16-year-old boy who got stranded three days before while driving to his family's farm. Bennett Stebleton of rural Regland had only a stocking cap, light jacket, sweatshirt and car mats to keep him warm.

"He's quite a courageous young man," said Dr. William Norberg at St. Luke's Hospital in Fargo, where Stebleton was taken with frostbitten feet and hands. Overnight temperatures in the area had plunged to 30 degrees below zero.

The Alaskan air mass also delivered a rare snowfall to parts of northern California.

"There was snow right down to the beach in Trinidad Harbor," Viviane Lewis, deputy city clerk at the tiny fishing town 300 miles north of San Francisco, said late Thursday. "It was nice, the kids loved it."

Farmers in Washington state worried that the cold would damage their fruit trees.

motor vehicles, personal property, and real estate as of Oct. 1, 1988 — totals $89,120,104, up from 1987's total of $83,289,101.

The letter to town departments here is similar to one written by Manchester Town Manager Robert B. Weiss in December.

Weiss also asked boards and town departments to curb spending this year, even with the increase in the grand list, said members of the Board of Selectmen and Board of Finance.

Administrative Assistant Helen M. Kemp said she was unsure how much of the town's $2,385,976.50 budget has been spent so far or how much state aid the town receives. Town officials are in the midst of preparing six-month budget totals, she said.

Campbell, along with First Selectman Sandra W. Pierog, said it was too early in the budget process to predict what impact the Grand List will have.

The selectmen must submit their budget to the Board of Finance by Feb. 15.

Administrative Assistant Helen M. Kemp said she was unsure how much of the town's $2,385,976.50 budget has been spent so far or how much state aid the town receives. Town officials are in the midst of preparing six-month budget totals, she said.

lowed eight hours of gunfights and cannon fire in the capital's streets Thursday night between rebel soldiers backed by tanks and mariners and forces loyal to Stoeness.

Local radio stations reported military and civilian casualties, but the toll was not known.

The country's borders were closed.

Radio Caritas also reported that Rodriguez and members of a new government would be sworn in as Paragay's new president later today. The station did not identify the source of its reports, which could not be confirmed independently.

Residents who ventured out today saw bloodstains on the pavements of the capital. Bullets from small-arms fire had pockmarked the police headquarters and shredded metal on the outside of the nearby National Telephone building.

Meotti bill seeks appeals of CIAC

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

High school athletes disciplined by the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference would be able to appeal the action to some public body if a state law proposed by Sen. Michael Meotti, D-Glastonbury, is passed by the General Assembly.

Meotti, whose 4th Senatorial District includes Manchester, has introduced a proposal that would require the State Board of Education to adopt regulations for interscholastic sports and to set up a process for appealing decisions of the CIAC.

The law stems from a case last year in which tennis players from Manchester High School and from Glastonbury High School were declared ineligible to play in high school matches after they participated in tournaments at private racquet clubs.

Meotti's bill also calls for a small deposit, refundable on return, of the small propane tanks used for barbecues.

Meotti said a deposit system would also help prevent system from disposing of old tanks unsafely, while they still contain some liquid propane.

Meotti said fire officials in his district have found that accidents occur every summer that could have been prevented if people were given tips from gas dealers.

Breland and Starling getting shots at titles

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mark Breland didn't follow trainer Joey Fariello's advice, and Fariello is glad.

"Maybe you should take up acting," the trainer told Breland as a sometime actor, following a dismal 12-round draw in which he failed to regain the World Boxing Association welterweight title from Marlon Starling last April 16.

"I just thought he looked like a fighter who didn't want to be there," Fariello said.

Saturday night, Breland will fight Lee Seun-Soon of South Korea for the vacated WBA title, and Fariello believes Lee will face a fighter with fire in his belly.

Also on the card at Caesars Palace will be a World Boxing Council welterweight title defense by Lloyd Honeyghan of Britain against former WBA champ Starling.

Breland originally was to challenge Tomas Molinares of Colombia who won the title on a controversial knockout of Starling last July 29.

Molinares relinquished the title in early January because, his physician reported, he is suffering from depression.

The WBA then declared the top-ranked Breland, of New York, and the second-ranked should fight for the title.

"The title is more important than the opponent," Breland said Thursday at the obligatory pre-fight news conference at which the principals said what they will do to their opponents.

"Since that fight he used to have," Fariello said.

"The 27-year-old Lee, who will be fighting outside South Korea for only the second time, has a 32-2 record, with 24 knockouts.

Honeyghan, 28, will be making his second defense of the WBC title he regained by stopping Jorge Vaca in the third round last March 29. He had lost the title on a seven-round technical decision to Vaca Oct. 28, 1987. Vaca, who couldn't continue because of cut suffered from an accidental fall, was ahead on points at the time.

Honeyghan once was the undisputed 147-pound champion. "I wasn't there," he said. "I would watch boxing. I wouldn't run or anything."

When Breland resumed training for a fight against Pablo Baez Aug. 11, what Fariello saw only added to his belief that Breland might be finished as a fighter.

"He looked so bad in the gym that we sat down again and talked," Fariello said. "I thought he should fight Baez in 16 rounds."

NFL list of free agents is very well seasoned

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Will the Indianapolis Colts, who failed to plug a hole at nose tackle with veteran Joe Klecko, try again with Bob Golie or Jim Burt?

Will the Los Angeles Raiders try to shore up their depleted offensive line with Russ Grimm?

Will the Chicago Bears go after 36-year-old Mike Haynes to plug a hole at cornerback and could Bobby Beathard convince Larry Carson to eschew his announced retirement to fill Washington's middle linebacker spot?

Or will the prime beneficiaries of the NFL's new free-agent rules be young unknowns ferreted out by Beathard or Carl Peterson, the new president of the Kansas City Chiefs?

"They'll strike like sharks," agent Harold Lewis said of the Redskins. "That's because there's fresh meat in the water."

In fact, as the names of that meat — the 619 NFL players who are now unconditional free agents — was made public Thursday, the most seemed more seasoned than fresh.

Just about every player in the league over 30 was on it — barring some regular quarterbacks and a few other stars too valuable to lose. It included an entire All-Pro roster from a decade ago and even one recent hero, Jim Breech, whose three field goals accounted for most of Cincinnati's offense in its 16 Super Bowl loss to San Francisco on Jan. 22.

For teams that could protect 37 players each, it was no cakewalk. In case of protecting young talent first, and hoping the high salaries or injury problems of the older players will keep them from being bid.

But the question remains, will they be signed?

"I think you'll see some action," said John Jones, spokesman for the NFL's management Council, which formulated the plan in an attempt to satisfy Judge David Doty, who is presiding over the antitrust suit filed by the union after its 24-day strike in 1987.

"I don't think anyone knows how much there will be," Jones said. "The basic formula is this:

Each team can protect 37 players, including those whose contracts have technically expired. Any team offering them a contract will be required to give the old team right of first refusal and, if it overcomes that barrier, signed Wilbur Marshall of the Bears a year ago.

The rest of the players from the active roster and various reserve lists are divided into two teams — would then be free to sign with any other team without compensation until April 1, when they revert back to their old teams.

Among the others left unprotected were:

— Several regular kickers, including the Bahr brothers, Matt of Cleveland and Chris of the Raiders. Breech and Denver's Rich Karlis, who missed two field goals in the 1987 Super Bowl.

— Such past stars as Denver's Tony Dorsett and Mark Haynes, Washington's Grimm, Tight end Orzle Newsome of Cleveland, who left its entire starting defensive line of Golie, Sam Clancy and Carl Hairston unprotected. Cincinnati's Cris Collinsworth and Reggie Williams: the Raiders' James Lofton, the Rams' Charles White and Dallas' Randy White. All are over 30 and some like Williams, a Cincinnati city councilman, have overriding reasons to stay in their communities.

— Numerous injury risks, like one-time perennial All-Pro center Dwight Stephenson of Miami, whose career is in jeopardy because of a knee injury that

Proposition 42 proponents neglect the student-athlete

By Hol Beck
The Associated Press

When the proprietors of collegiate athletics authored Proposition 42, the now notorious addendum to Prop 48, they figured all the fancy letters and titles they tote around behind their names gave them the wisdom necessary for the task.

As a result, they felt no pressing obligation to discuss it with the people it would most directly affect — the student athletes.

So Chucky Spurling, a high school All-American at Denver's Manual High last year, sat in the empty bleachers at St. John's University the other day and listened for the first time to the details of the legislation that would require both a 2.0 high school GPA and 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude test for a scholarship.

"Both?" he said.

Both, he was told, or else no scholarship.

Spurling thought about that for a moment and then, without benefit of all the degrees and titles that went into authoring the legislation, he asked a simple question.

"If you don't give a kid a chance," he said, "how can he get started on the road to success? Some kids would just forget about it."

That is exactly what Georgetown coach John Thompson was thinking when he took a two-game sabbatical last month to protest the proposal. The NCAA subsequently backed off somewhat, putting the legislation on hold and Thompson responded by returning to the bench.

If kids deprived of a chance shrug their shoulders and forget about college, how does that accomplish anything positive?

Standards, argue the defenders

"I'm just a spectator, like any other student. I don't feel like a basketball player. I'd miss it more if I had stayed closer to home where people knew me. Here, I'm just another person. But this has been one of the best years of my life. Sitting out was a blessing in disguise."

— Chucky Spurling

should have."

That left junior college as an option. Spurling, however, decided not to go that route.

"I'm not a JC type," he said.

"To me, that's wasting two years instead of one. This way, I still have three years that can play."

So he sits this season, concentrating on studies with courses in calculus, college English, speech and public relations. His program includes two tutorial sections and a study hall required of all basketball players and takes him from 9 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon. Then he works by himself in the weight room and in an auxiliary gym while the team practices. On game days, he sits in the stands and watches.

"I'm just a spectator, like any other student," he said. "I don't feel like a basketball player. I'd miss it more if I had stayed closer to home where people knew me. Here, I'm just another person."

But this has been one of the best years of his life. Sitting out was a blessing in disguise. It was a chance to watch the game, something you can't do when you're playing. I've learned a lot from that.

He's also had a chance, courtesy of Prop 48, a chance that Prop 42 would not have offered him.

White set to take job as NL prez

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty-two years after Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color barrier on the field, Bill White is about to break it in the executive suite.

White today will be named to succeed A. Bartlett Giamatti as National League president, becoming the first black to head a major professional sports league in the United States. The Associated Press learned Thursday, White, a six-time All-Star first baseman with the New York and San Francisco Giants, St. Louis and Philadelphia, and a broadcaster with the New York Yankees for 18 years, was chosen Thursday by the five-man search committee, several sources said.

White, interviewed in St. Louis by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch on Thursday night, said his chance to become the first black league president did not enter his decision.

Hall of Famer Hank Aaron, an Atlanta Braves vice president and baseball's top black executive, was pleased with White's selection.

"Quite naturally, I'm very happy," Aaron said. "I don't think they could have found anyone more qualified than Bill White. Bill White is a baseball man. He knows baseball. There is nothing that will be a surprise for him."

BUSINESS

MARKET REPORT

IN BRIEF

Business aid sought
HARTFORD (AP) — State technical college officials will seek the support of business and industry as they seek to block attempts to merge their system with state community colleges, an official says.

"At this point we are fighting for our lives," said Carl S. Feen, a member of the Board of Trustees for the State Technical Colleges.

Feen, chairman of the board's business and industry relations committee, said Thursday he believes business and industry will lose an important source of technicians if technical education is made part of the state's community college system.

The state Board of Governors for Higher Education earlier this week approved a plan that would dissolve the technical colleges' board of trustees and make technical education part of an expanded community college system.

The issue is now before the Legislature. The technical college system has been under pressure to reorganize because its budget has doubled in the past six years while enrollment has declined 40 percent.

Ames sales up 171 percent
ROCKY HILL (AP) — Ames Department Stores Inc. on Thursday reported fourth quarter sales of $1.78 billion, up 171.5 percent compared to last year's fourth quarter earnings of $657 million.

Sales for the year were up 59 percent compared to 1987, from $2.1 billion to $3.3 billion.

The company's acquisition of Zayres Stores on Oct. 28 was largely responsible for the increase. Sales from continuing Ames stores increased 6.2 percent in the current fourth quarter and 5.9 percent for the year compared to 1987.

The company will release its fourth quarter and 1988 annual earnings in March.

Ames operates 361 Ames discount stores, 318 Zayres stores and 166 other variety stores.

Bic to market perfume
MILFORD (AP) — The makers of low-cost Bic disposable pens, lighters and shavers are out to prove that smelling good can be just as inexpensive writing, smoking and shaving.

The Bic Corp. will introduce Parfum Bic in April at a cost of $4.99 a bottle. The company is planning a $20 million advertising campaign for Parfum Bic, which will be sold in the same retail markets as all other Bic products, such as department stores and supermarkets.

Pitney Bowes earnings up
STAMFORD (AP) — Pitney Bowes Inc. reports that its net income for 1988 increased 22 percent over the previous year while revenues increased 14 percent.

Net income was $243.4 million, or $3.06 per share, on revenues of $2.65 billion, compared to net income of $199.4 million, or $2.53 per share, on revenues of $2.3 billion in 1987, the company reported Thursday.

For the fourth quarter, the company reported net income of $78.9 million, or 99 cents a share, on revenues of $746.1 million, compared to net income of $67.9 million, or 87 cents a share, on revenues of $666.8 million for the same period a year ago.

Pitney Bowes is a $2.6 billion manufacturing and marketing company that provides mail, shipping, copying, facsimile and other business systems, as well as business supplies and product financing.

Bush: 'I want the S&L problem solved'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said today that any plan to rescue the troubled savings and loan industry "is not going to be popular," but pledged that the government will continue to guarantee the safety of insured deposits.

Bush met at the White House with Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress to seek their ideas on how to resolve the S&L crisis.

"We've got a big problem in the savings and loan industry," Bush told the lawmakers, meeting in the Cabinet Room. "There are no easy answers, no worrying about blame. I want to get around it. I want to see the problem solved."

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, who was present at today's meeting, criticized the ads Thursday at a private, hour-long meeting of Bush and five S&L and bank trade associations, said Frederick Webber, president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, who attended the meeting.

Sununu, waving copies of several of the ads, said, "Gentlemen, it is absolutely, unequivocally irresponsible to have placed those ads," according to another participant, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

At today's meeting, Bush did not mention the ads but said, "The safety of those deposits is guaranteed, we continue to be guaranteed and there should be no feeling around the country that some solution will do anything to diminish the credit of the United States being behind the backs of the FSILIC, FDIC, whatever."

Mary-Liz Meany, a spokeswoman for the American Bankers Association, said Sununu gave the association copies of advertisements placed by banks in Texas, Arkansas and Kansas.

"We are going to call the banks and inform them of the concern in Washington and the sensitivity that they might not be aware of," she said.

"We made a promise to the administration that we would certainly monitor it and we agreed with their concern."

Bush did not speak at the meeting about the ads or reveal any preference among the many options for addressing the S&L crisis, according to participants.

"He was there to learn from us and he's a good listener," Webber said. "It was very gratifying. The man is personally involved in this."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said proposals in the president's address to Congress Thursday "will be pretty specific."

The spokesman outlined the "basic points" guiding the president:

- Insured savings must be protected.
- Current problems must be solved and losses stopped.
- Persistent reforms preventing a recurrence must be enacted.
- The deposit insurance system should be put on a sound financial footing.
- Cleanup costs must be equitably allocated.

Sununu's anger over the advertisements underscores the administration's concern that the debate in Washington over how to pay for the S&L crisis has unraveled some thrift depositors.

Last week, regional Federal Home Loan Banks reported higher-than-expected S&L withdrawals after

Jobless rate at 5.4%

But 408,000 new jobs created

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment rose slightly in January to 5.4 percent, but the number of new jobs created last month rose to 408,000, much higher than expected, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the civilian unemployment rate rose by 0.1 percentage point from the December rate of 5.3 percent.

But the first major report of the economy's 1988 performance showed continued strong growth, something analysts have predicted would feed inflationary fears and perhaps convince the Federal Reserve Board to tighten its reins on credit.

The 408,000 new non-farm jobs created last month followed a gain of 278,000 in December and nearly matched November's robust gain of 440,000 new jobs.

Analysis had predicted that January job growth would be in the 250,000 range and that any growth of more than 300,000 could trouble the markets.

The Labor Department said the labor force expanded by nearly 800,000 people.
