LEADERS SEE BUDGET TRAP IN CONGRESS

HEADS UP — Ken Brokaw pokes his head through the ceiling to talk to Ray Corey as the two install a light fixture in the lobby of the Lincoln Building in downtown Spokane, Wash., on Thursday.

WASHINGTON — Congressional Democrats said Friday they will not begin negotiations with President Bush over his $1.16 trillion budget until the administration specifies the programs it would cut to reduce the deficit. Senate Budget Committee Chairman Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., and his House counterpart, Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said they would meet Monday with administration budget director Richard Darman to try to learn more details about the fiscal 1990 spending plan. They said the vagueness with which Bush spelled out his plan for achieving savings is aimed at putting the pressure — and the blame — on Congress for cuts that will inevitably be unpopular. "The fiscal buck has traditionally stopped at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, but last night President Bush tried to pass it up to Congress," Sasser told reporters. "We need to know the administration's full budget proposals so that everything is on the table if we get to negotiations," Panetta said of the blueprint for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 that Bush presented to Congress Thursday night. Bush said his proposal would leave a deficit of $9.1 billion next year, well within the $10 billion target required by the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law. He achieves that level by holding the growth in the defense budget to the rate of inflation, providing $399 billion in new spending, making a controversial cut in the capital gains tax rate that he says will raise $4.8 billion in new revenues; slowing the growth of Medicare by $5 billion; selling $3.7 billion in federal assets; and extending taxes on telephone service and airline tickets that are due to expire.

In their own analysis of Bush's spending plan, Senate budget committee Democrats said the blueprint would actually produce a deficit of $15 billion, when asset sales were not counted. They attributed the difference to their use of economic projections that are more pessimistic than those used by the White House's Office of Management and Budget. The Congressional Budget Office and many economists believe interest rates will be higher and economic growth will be lower than OMB assumes, which if accurate would mean a weaker economy and thus a higher federal deficit. But of most concern to Democrats is his proposal to limit a collection of more than 1,000 programs — most of them domestic — to the $185 billion spent for them this year. Democrats said this meant that Bush was leaving the onus for finding $1 billion in cuts up to them, reductions that could effect programs like toxic waste cleanups, mass transit assistance, and law enforcement. "This is not what we would call a flexible freeze," Panetta said, referring to Bush's campaign promise to reduce the deficit by limiting spending increases to the rate of inflation. "It's a flexible squeeze." Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, the ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee, defended Bush's strategy of lumping these programs together. "There's more room for negotiation this way," he said. Darman briefed Republican senators and representatives on the budget early Friday, and told reporters afterward that it is time for the administration and congressional leaders to begin negotiating on a spending plan. "The spirit is very good at the moment and we've got to build on that spirit," he said.

Bolton urged to mold future with plans for town's growth

By Nancy Pappas
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Residents can help shape the town's future by learning lessons from other communities, which grew rapidly, according to one area sociologist.

William McKinney, dean and professor of religion and society at Hartford Seminary, spoke to about 60 Bolton citizens this week at a dinner sponsored by the Bolton Ecumenical Council.

"Don't sit back and wait," McKinney warned. "Not to act is to lose control of your own destiny. When these new housing developments go through, you're going to have about a one-to-two-year window of opportunity."

The event was held on Shrove Tuesday — the traditional day of merriment before the Lenten fast. It involved members of St. Maurice St. George's Episcopal, Bolton Congregational and Bolton United Methodist churches. The first part of McKinney's talk focused on the reasons for population changes in churches like those.

But for the last 20 minutes, McKinney turned to the ways people can mold their communities during periods of change and growth. It was the topic he'd been asked to address when he was invited to the group, he said.

Enormous change is inevitable in a town like Bolton, which is experiencing and anticipating tremendous growth, McKinney said. Those who are able to muster information and exert influence may be able to help shape those changes.

In many small towns, the churches form the only formal infrastructure or foundation for growth and change, according to McKinney.

"In a church there is already a focus, a population, a staff and committee structure in place," he said.

As a start, McKinney suggested that people in Bolton might identify three communities which had experienced rapid growth about 10 years ago. A small committee could correspond with officials there, and arrange to visit the communities.

"Find out what happened to them a decade ago. And find out what they really wish they had done differently," McKinney said.

While one group looks outward another might look within, McKinney suggested asking residents to define three things about Bolton: what is important to them and should be preserved at all costs; what is undesirable, and could happily be jettisoned; and what falls in between.

Within a church, this could be done with a survey. For townwide input, there might be focus group meetings.

When the information from the other communities and the town's own residents is gathered, some recommendations must be formulated, and citizens' committees formed to implement them.

He cited the development situation on Cape Cod, where he owns a second home.

"Things there got impossible. The developers were running the show and now there's a moratorium on all building," he said. "Someone's got to make plans before, not after. It's too late. If what you've got here is not to prosecute. Department attorneys said they lacked evidence corroborating the account of Ms. Ray, the House clerk, and her relationship with Hays.

After leaving office, Hays returned to his 300-acre Red Gate Farm in Belmont, where he bred Angus cattle and Tennessee walking horses.

In 1978, Hays made a comeback of sorts with his election to the Ohio House. There, he pushed bills aimed at curbing big utilities and promoting Ohio coal, but generally kept a low profile. One exception came during an incident in which he threatened to punch a television cameraman during a hearing.

He was defeated in a re-election bid in 1980.

In 1980, Hays became chairman of the Democratic Party in Belmont County and remained active in local party politics.

Wayne Hays dies; sex scandal ended political career in 1976

BELMONT, Ohio (AP) — Wayne L. Hays, a 14-term congressman whose affair with House clerk Elizabeth Ray in 1976 touched off a payroll-sex scandal in the nation's capital and destroyed his political career, died Friday. He was 77.

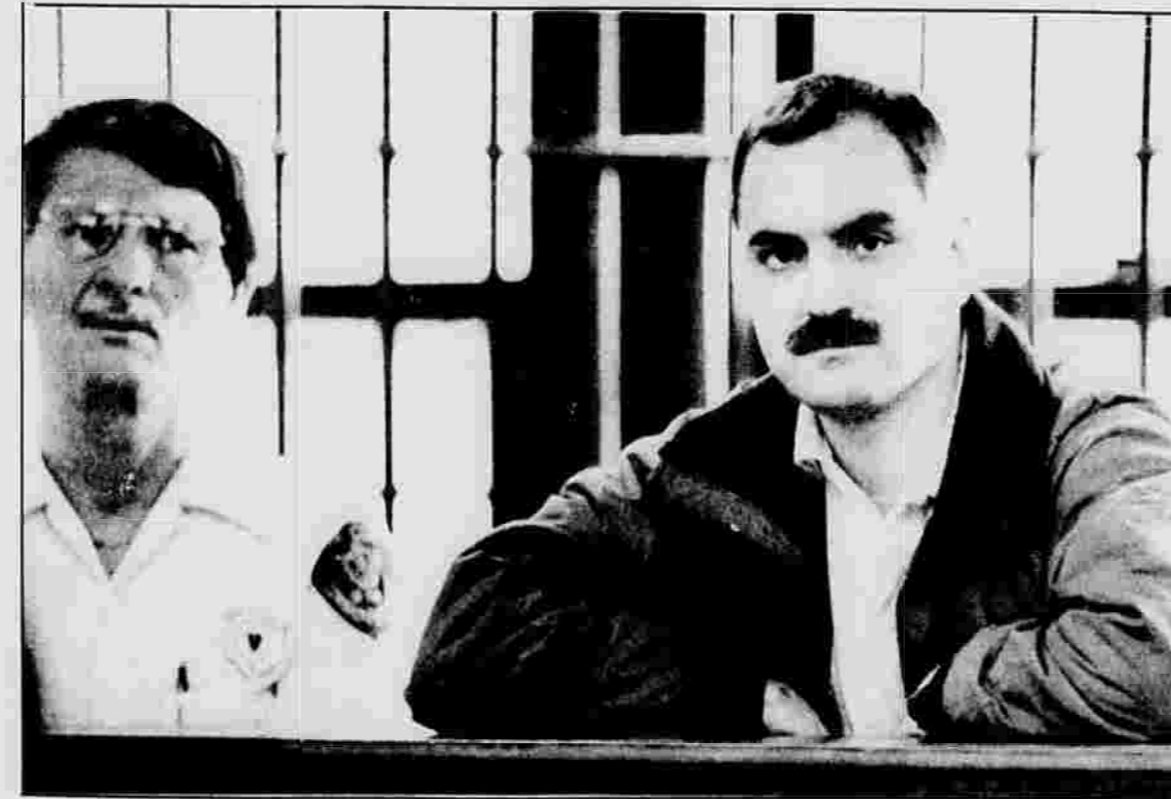

Jean Walker, a family friend, said Hays died at 1:30 p.m. at Wheeling Hospital in Wheeling, W. Va., across the Ohio River from his eastern Ohio town.

Walker spoke by telephone from the Hays residence, said Hays apparently suffered a heart attack about noon Friday as he read a newspaper at his home.

Hays' wife, Pat, was at his side, Walker said.

The Ethics Committee then voted to end its three-month investigation of the scandal on grounds that Hays no longer was a congressman and no longer under the panel's jurisdiction.

The Justice Department, which also was investigating, decided

COURT APPEARANCE — Alleged astronaut imposter Robert Hunt, right, sits with a guard during a hearing in East Boston District Court Wednesday morning. Hunt is charged with larceny and fraud in connection with police allegations that he posed as a space shuttle astronaut and Marine officer as well as other uniformed roles and professions.

Man who posed as astronaut faces trial in fraud, larceny

By Arlene Levinson
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Robert Hunt scroched some kitchen tiles and told his wife they fell off the ill-fated Challenger space shuttle.

That, police say, was just one prop in Hunt's pose as an astronaut during a period of make-believe that carried him through several states, speaking engagements and marriages.

Now his wife is leaving him and he faces fraud and larceny charges for taking his make-believe too far.

State police arrested Hunt on Jan. 28 in suburban Medford. The 27-year-old plumber's son from Everett is accused of swindling his fourth wife and bride of five months, Ann Sweeney, of up to $50,000 on her company-issued credit card without her knowledge and for taking $4,000 from a Saugus family on the promise he could get their 18-year-old son out of the Navy.

On Jan. 6, calling himself Marine Capt. Robert J. Hunt, the fake astronaut spoke before a group called the Experimental Aircraft Association.

He was a very good speaker, he entertained us. He held us spellbound for 2 1/2 hours," said Greater Boston chapter president, Lou Pasucci.

Sweeney, 23, a former optical engineer, also believed he was an astronaut.

"I love the person I thought I was married to," she said.

Recalling the day he was unmasked, Sweeney said, "I was shocked. It was almost like watching someone die. He just dissolved, disappeared."

Hunt is being held on $100,000 bail in a Boston jail. His case in East Boston District Court was continued to Feb. 17 after a request for reduced bail was denied. Hunt's attorney, James Ciolella, said Friday he has urged his client not to speak to reporters until the case is settled.

Investigators compiling the story of Hunt's alleged stories say that for the past eight years he has been fooling many people in imaginative ways — in Massachusetts, Florida, Pennsylvania and Ireland.

Montour, Pa., Township Police Chief Robert Lighthow said Hunt allegedly rode around Pennsylvania in a limousine seeking models for his baby powder while pretending to be a powder maker. He said Friday that he was investigating charges that Hunt swindled his third wife, a local woman, out of large amounts of money. He would not elaborate.

Authorities say Hunt is believed to have been married to two other women.

Harry Doan, the owner of an air service in Daytona Beach, Fla., was convinced by Hunt that he was a Navy helicopter pilot.

Last summer, Hunt chartered a jet to fly with his wife to Montreal, allegedly charging it on his wife's credit card while telling her the flight cost nothing because he was a space shuttle pilot.

In Ireland Oct. 8, he was granted a 10-minute interview with Benjamin Briscoe, lord mayor of Dublin. Briscoe's spokeswoman said the meeting at Mansion House, the official residence, was arranged after Briscoe was told Hunt was a visiting astronaut.

The spokeswoman said when Hunt told the lord mayor that British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was arranging for him to be married at Westminster Abbey, Briscoe realized Hunt was "not the full shilling," but politely said nothing. Others were completely taken in.

During Hunt's arrest, police searched the apartment and found assorted military paraphernalia, flight jumpsuits and a helmet bearing the insignia of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dr. Park Dietz, a forensic psychiatrist who is an FBI consultant and a professor at the University of Virginia, said there are cases in legal circles falling under the category of the so-called imposter phenomenon.

"It's generally believed that people who are able to dupe others into believing that they have some professional status that's untrue, most likely suffer from antisocial personality disorder," Dietz said, who is on sabbatical in Newport Beach, Calif.

Directors join protest over tax plan

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

Republican members of the town Board of Directors are happy that Gov. William A. O'Neill's proposed budget leaves aid to cities and towns untouched, but they chastised O'Neill's plan to raise taxes.

Republican Director Ronald Osella said that O'Neill's proposed aid to cities and towns will probably change because of protests over his plan to raise $737 million in new taxes.

He recommended that the town and the Board of Education develop "contingency" plans designed to prepare for varying amounts of state aid. Town Manager Robert B. Weiss has already placed restrictions on hiring and purchasing to offset the effects of a drop in local aid and Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. has called for a freeze on spending for programs deemed to be non-essential.

Those non-essential programs have not yet been identified.

Under O'Neill's proposal, the state would send $2.11 billion to municipalities in the next fiscal year, compared to $2.16 billion in this fiscal year, which ends June 30. About $17.6 million of the town's $63.5 million budget comes from state and federal sources.

Osella and Republican Directors Geoffrey Naab and Theunis Werkhoven agreed Friday that O'Neill's proposal to tax utility bills to help offset a state deficit is unfair.

Democratic Directors DiRosa, Stephen T. Casano, James F. Fogarty, Mary Ann Handley, Kenneth N. Tedford and Barbara B. Weinberg could not be reached for comment.

When asked about the budget, Osella gave it a verbal raspberry. He said he especially did not like the proposed utility tax, which would place a sales tax on electric gas, telephone, water and cable bills.

"I think it's outrageous," he said. "The utility tax is just a killer. That's just outrageous."

The new tax is projected to generate $340 million a year. It would cost the average consumer about $120 a year.

Because of widespread opposition within the Legislature to the utilities tax and other taxes, Osella said communities can not be sure of local aid yet.

"His budget is just a proposal," he said.

While not arguing that new taxes will be needed, Osella said the state has to cut back its spending.

"There may have to be some increases in taxes," he said. "However, there has to be a serious look at cutting spending."

Werkhoven and Naab echoed Osella's disapproval of the utility tax, though neither has taken a stand on the entire budget.

"That's absolutely ridiculous," Werkhoven said of the utility tax. "I'm certainly going to let my legislators know."

Naab said, "I'm certainly pleased the amount of aid has not been cut."

While towns may not be hit hard, school boards could possibly see state funding drop. O'Neill has proposed to cut $23 million in state education grants.

School board member Francis A. Maffe Jr. said he was unsure how O'Neill's proposal would affect the 1989-90 school budget.

"I really don't know how that's going to affect us," he said. "I haven't seen any figures."

Board member John A. Tucci did not seem concerned about a possible loss in state aid.

"Twenty-three million. That's hardly anything, overall," he said.

Coventry votes down plan to take Willington students

COVENTRY — The Board of Education has decided not to accept students from Willington next year, a move that could benefit the Bolton school system.

"We came to the conclusion we did not have the space," school board member Robert J. Christie said Friday. "We determined we will not make a proposal. As of right now, it's a dead issue."

The board voted against accepting the students at a meeting Thursday.

The town of Willington, which has no high school, has been sending many of its students to Bolton for eight years. But Willington school officials this year sent letters to Coventry, Tolland and Stafford school officials, asking if they would be willing to accept the students.

Patricia E. Soltys, a member of the Coventry board, said members agreed to negotiate with Willington in the future. The board felt there would not be enough time to plan for the Willington students, she said.

Willington also sends students to Windham High School and E.O. Smith High School in Storrs.

Bolton High School now enrolls 105 Willington students, at an annual cost of $3,866 each to Willington. That cost is scheduled to rise to $5,170 per student in the next school year under a contract between Willington and Bolton that is due to expire in 1991, according to Michael L. McKee, Willington school superintendent.

In addition to the Willington students, there are 305 Bolton students enrolled at Bolton High School. Bolton Superintendent Richard Packman has said,

"It would be devastating" to the Bolton school system if Willington stops sending students there, Packman has said.

He could not be reached Friday for additional comment.

In another matter Thursday, the Coventry board also discussed complaints about school bus service.

Kathleen Ryan, chairman of the board's transportation committee, said there are delays in bus runs to and from schools.

Lawrence Mickel, board chairman, presented letters from two Robertson School students asking the board to solve the problem.

"My mom wants to sue and we hate it," Mickel read from one of the letters.

Gordon Lustila, business manager for the school system, said there is a shortage of drivers. Lustila said he has contacted the bus company, Laidlaw Transit Inc., and its local manager, Heidi Ognusiewicz, about the situation.

"I've seen the ads in the papers offering bonuses for drivers," Lustila said.

Soltys said the bus that picks her son up in the morning arrives anywhere from 7:55 to 8:25 a.m.

"I never know when to put him out," said Soltys.

An out-of-town girls' basketball game for the Capt. Nathan Hale School team recently had to be canceled because there was no bus, board members said.

William Carpenter, principal at Robertson School, said he gets complaints daily from parents about the problem.

"Something has to be done about this. It's really starting to generate heat," he said.

Gay rights measure hailed and assailed

Anti-bias proposal goes to the House

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — The sister of a homosexual man murdered last year pleaded with a legislative committee Friday for passage of a gay rights bill and, later in the day, got her wish.

The bill, which would outlaw discrimination against homosexuals in housing, employment, credit and other areas, cleared the Judiciary Committee, 15-11, and was sent to the House of Representatives.

Similar bills have been narrowly defeated in the General Assembly in the past. But backers are more optimistic this year because the bill doesn't mention the area of education, a move designed to alleviate critics' fears that teachers might somehow "recruit" children to become homosexuals.

"We need this bill to protect the civil rights of gays and lesbians and to stem the rising tide of violence against them," said Nancy Leckerling of Madison.

Her brother, Richard Riehl of Wethersfield, was brutally killed last May in what police said was a clear case of "gay bashing." Two teen-ager boys have been charged with beating Riehl to death after he picked them up in Hartford.

"The jokes about gays have to stop. Discrimination has gone far enough," Leckerling told the committee. "Gays are people like you and me, with the same needs of love and acceptance."

Earlier, Mary Ann Pressamarita of East Hartford, head of a group that calls itself Citizens for Decency, told the committee that Riehl was responsible for his own death because he had been "cruising," looking for young men to pick up.

"The perversion of this behavior is so gross," Pressamarita said, calling homosexuality "a sickness, a mental disorder."

"If they would only keep their private lives private, they would be able to get housing and jobs they're entitled to," she said.

The bill bans discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in housing, employment, credit, public accommodation, licensing, state services or state contracts.

Dr. J. Cameron Kirschner, an associate professor of surgery at Yale, told the committee that,

"from a medical perspective, the gay lifestyle has clearly demonstrated itself to be a major public health problem."

He mentioned the AIDS epidemic and said the male

NANCY LECKERLING ... questioned at hearing homosexual population has the highest rate of venereal disease of any population group.

"There is no biblical basis for 'gay pride,'" Kirschner said.

The National Coalition of American Nuns, in written testimony submitted to the committee, supported the measure, while the Connecticut Catholic Conference went on record against it.

Rep. Eugene A. Migliaro Jr., R-Wolcott, a conservative legislator who has consistently opposed gay rights bills in the past, said passing the measure would condone a chosen behavior and do nothing to improve the protection of rights already enjoyed by everyone.

"The true issue here is acceptance of a way of life," Migliaro said. "If they want to be that way, good luck to them. That's their problem. But don't tell me I have to accept it. It's not an accepted norm."

Two years ago, a similar bill passed the House by one vote, was amended and passed in the Senate and, when it went back to the House, died on a tie vote.

During debate on the bill, the committee rejected an amendment that would have exempted religious organizations from the bill's requirements.

Meriden man guilty in murder of ex-wife

NEW HAVEN (AP) — A Meriden man police accused of trying to fake his former wife's suicide was found guilty of her murder on Friday.

After nearly six days of deliberations, a 12-member Superior Court jury returned the verdict against Jeffrey Dontigney, 33, accused of shooting Linda Bernard, 29, in the head during a domestic squabble and then trying to make it look as though she had killed herself.

"Justice was served by the verdict," said Patrick Clifford, the assistant state's attorney who prosecuted the case. "I am extremely happy for the victim's family," he said. "They've been here watching the trial for five weeks and they were getting pretty worn down at the end."

When the jury foreman announced the verdict, Clifford said, Bernard's mother and sister "broke down in tears."

Dontigney's stainless steel, .357 magnum revolver was found in Bernard's hand when police arrived at the couple's apartment shortly before midnight on Aug. 7, 1987. She died three days later.

Dontigney, who began living with Bernard again shortly after their divorce, maintained that his ex-wife killed herself after using drugs. But the prosecution presented evidence that while Bernard had been shot in the left temple, police found the gun in her right hand.

"The most damaging part of this case is that Jeff Dontigney put the gun in the wrong hand and upside down because he was in a panic," Clifford said in closing arguments to the jury last week.

"This was an argument in a domestic situation mixed with alcohol and an available gun. It is a horrible situation," Clifford said.

Ira Grudberg, Dontigney's attorney, asked the jury to note testimony by state forensic experts that no trace of blood or gunpowder was found on Dontigney's hands or the shirt he said he was wearing at the time of the shooting.

The absence of gunpowder was evidence that Bernard may have shot herself, said Grudberg, who maintained that there was a "reasonable hypothesis of innocence."

Grudberg said Friday that he was "disappointed" with the verdict and would most likely file an appeal.

After the jury returned its verdict, Judge Thomas Corradino ordered Dontigney held in lieu of $200,000 bail. Dontigney, who had been free on bail during the trial, was taken to a New Haven jail.

He is scheduled to be sentenced on March 31. Dontigney will be sentenced to at least 25 years in prison, and could be sentenced to a maximum of 60 years imprisonment.

State tells Bolton's attorney to resolve charter questions

By Maureen Leavitt
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The secretary of the state's office has said the town will have to rely on its own attorney to solve questions concerning proposed changes in the Town Charter.

The Board of Selectmen read a letter from the secretary of the state's office at Tuesday night's meeting in Community Hall which stated all questions regarding the referendum be referred back to Richard L. Barger, town attorney.

Barger had come up with verbal opinions on proposed charter changes in December but was looking for a more formal opinion from the secretary of the state.

Some of the questions the selectmen are trying to answer include when a referendum could be held on the charter changes and how many questions can appear on the ballot.

Helen M. Kemp, administrative assistant, said the selectmen received the letter from Joanne M. Christolis, acting administrative assistant with the state election services division, on Monday. Kemp said, Barger said he will research the issues further, and expects to solve the matter by Feb. 15, in order to meet the statutory deadline to combine the proposed charter referendum with the municipal election.

The election is May 1 and the date of the referendum must be set at least 30 days before it is held.

The proposed changes include switching to a town manager form of government, eliminating the Board of Finance, changing the Board of Selectmen from a five-member board to a seven-member board, and eliminating the power of voters to make specific cuts in the town budget.

Barger, in his verbal opinions, said the board could place as many questions as it would like on the ballot.

He also determined that if charter changes are approved by voters, the two new selectmen positions could not be placed on the ballot for the May election.

He said the new positions would be handled like a vacancy, and the board could make interim appointments or hold a special election.

New suit faults New Haven for car's plunge into river

NEW LONDON (AP) — The families of three of the four East Lyme residents killed when their car plunged into the Mill River last November have filed suit against the city of New Haven and several officials.

The most recent suit, filed by the family of Laura M. Lagrotteria Thursday, alleges the deaths were the result of the city's failure to maintain the roadway.

It is similar to one filed two months ago on behalf of the families of two other victims of the Nov. 13 accident.

Meanwhile, the city of New Haven on Thursday offered a "substantial monetary reward" for information about the accident. The information will go to the city's defense lawyer, who will decide whether to pass it along to police investigating the accident, officials said.

Lagrotteria, Jill Sawyer, Christy Stevens, all 19, and Michael Gallo, 20, were killed when they drove between concrete barriers placed near an open swing bridge on Chapel Street and into the Mill River.

Both suits charge the deaths were the result of the city's failure to maintain adequate warning signs, barriers, lights and detour signs and also failed to conduct adequate inspections of the roadway.

The city has since installed lights, signs and a fence at the end of Chapel Street.

In the latest suit, LaGrotteria's family alleges that New Haven and city officials created a public nuisance and violated several state laws governing road maintenance. The lawsuit does not specify the amount of damages LaGrotteria's family is seeking.

New Haven Mayor Biagio DiIieto said Thursday night he had no comment, other than that the city "fully expected" to be sued by the families.

New Haven has hired Arnold Bai, a prominent Bridgeport lawyer, to represent the city in cases stemming from the accident.

Bai said the purpose of the reward, the amount of which the city didn't specify, was to gather information for New Haven's defense against the lawsuits.

"If I were to receive information that the police should properly have, I would tell the police," Bai said.

Merrill to stand trial in Toronto

By The Associated Press

A Canadian judge has ordered a former Tolland man, who escaped from Somers State Prison in 1987, to stand trial on sexual assault and burglary charges in connection with a crime spree in Toronto, a prosecutor said.

Prosecutor Paul McDermott told the Journal Inquirer that the judge ruled after a four-day "show-cause" hearing that there was sufficient evidence to bring Frederick R. Merrill to trial.

of Connecticut prisons for 20 years, is scheduled to return to court March 10 when a trial date will be set.

The former Tolland man escaped from Somers on Aug. 23, 1987. Officials believe that Merrill escaped by placing a dummy in his bed and scaling a prison fence with hooks made from bed springs and cutting through another with wire cutters.

McDermott said he could not elaborate on the pretrial hearing because of a court-ordered ban, routine under Canadian law, on information regarding it.

Merrill, who has been in and out and cruelty, Brunson is being held at Brooklyn Correctional Center in lieu of $50,000 bail.

Neighbors in the apartment building where Naylor and Brunson lived said they noticed about a month ago that the child's face was so bruised and swollen that she could barely speak.

One neighbor said she contacted the state Department of Children and Youth Services, but a state official said the agency couldn't comment on such cases.

On the morning the girl was injured earlier this week, neighbors said they heard a child screaming from Naylor's apartment. One neighbor, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said she went upstairs to see if anything was wrong and was told the girl had fallen and was not breathing.

Adoption agency to fight order

HARTFORD (AP) — The operator of a Chicago-based adoption agency says he will fight an order to stop arranging adoptions for children in Connecticut.

Acting Attorney General Claire Nardi Riddle this week ordered Seymour Kurtz, who heads the Easter House adoption agency, to stop making placements because he is not licensed by the state.

"He is not allowed to place children who are born in Connecticut or outside of Connecticut," said Thomas M. Moriarty, a spokesman for the Department of Children and Youth Services.

"I won't deny that in the past he has been able to place (children born in Connecticut) ... but he should not have been allowed to do that."

Kurtz, whose agency has been operating in Connecticut since the early 1980s and charges $20,000 for adoption of a white baby, denied Thursday that he has violated state regulations.

"They never told us or suggested we needed a license," said Kurtz, noting that he has placed more than 100 Connecticut-born children in homes in the state.

"Now they say it's against the law."

He called the state's action "illegal, immoral and shameful," and he promised to seek a restraining order to prevent the state from enforcing its order.

"They have put into jeopardy every placement we have made to Connecticut families," he said. But Moriarty said children already placed in homes through Easter House would not be jeopardized.

and Easter House is not. In 1987, a federal judge wrote that Easter House's primary purpose was to make money, and that it was making "very substantial profits."

Riddle said Easter House was brought to her attention by the Department of Children and Youth Services when the adoption agency applied for a renewal of its approval to place out-of-state children in Connecticut. That approval is pending.

Moriarty said his department has written Kurtz several times in the past several years and told him he needed to become licensed.

The attorney general's office began investigating complaints against Easter House last month.

One of the complaints came from a couple who said they had been misled by Easter House into believing they had a good chance of adopting a baby but were later told the child had been placed with another couple.

Quayle raps Israel for killings

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle criticized Israel before an American Jewish group Friday for a "clearly unacceptable" record of civilian killings in the West Bank and Gaza strip, even as he pledged a strengthened U.S.-Israeli alliance under the Bush administration.

Quayle said that despite Israel's "current difficulties and turmoil," the last eight years have been good for that alliance.

Speaking to a conference of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Quayle said the United States must not be in a position of pressuring Israel, its longtime strategic and diplomatic ally, to accept a "pre-cooked" solution on peace with its neighbors.

"Some may say that by the grisly standards of some of Israel's neighbors, a few hundred people killed in the course of a yearlong uprising is not a very staggering figure."

But Israel should be judged not by those standards but by those of "the democratic West," he said.

Later, in remarks prepared for speech in Miami to the Cuban American Bar Association, Quayle urged improved human rights in Latin American countries. Quayle cited a human rights lecture he delivered last Friday to military forces of the U.S.-backed El Salvador government.

"I believe I succeeded in getting my message across," Quayle said. He said he told them "about commitment to the rule of law and human rights, two crucial areas in which they must do better."

While State Department statistics show that political murders have declined from a high of 750 per month there in 1980 to 18 per month in 1986, Quayle said that figure "is still unacceptable."

He contended, however, that the worst violators of human rights in El Salvador are the leftist guerrillas trying to overthrow the democratic government.

Quayle said Cuba, Nicaragua and Panama represent tyrannical Latin governments that are "desperately holding out against a democratic tidal wave that is rising every higher."

Watching the waste line

By Vincent Carroll
Suppose you were the chief of a Fortune 500 company and earning a million dollars or more a year. Would you care terribly if President Bush broke his promise and raised taxes to reduce the federal deficit? Based upon the opinions of actual CEOs, the answer is no. You wouldn't care. Of more than 200 chief executives surveyed recently by Fortune magazine, two-thirds favor hiking taxes (although they conveniently exempt income and capital gains taxes, which tend to hit the rich where they live). Predictably, Fortune presented its survey as proof that hard-headed chief executives were willing to hit the bullet for the national good. Here's another possibility: Like mandarins of old, CEOs rarely trouble themselves with obstacles to vertical mobility. They've already arrived at the summit, so the question of whether others make it is not of crushing importance. Siphoning several hundred dollars off average incomes through extra gasoline and sin taxes, or through a national consumption tax, wouldn't even dent the lifestyle of the average CEO. But it could matter decisively to less prosperous Americans aspiring to a better existence. It could mean, for example, the difference between saving for the future or not. John Makin, director of fiscal policy studies at the American Enterprise Institute, put his finger on what's at stake in the tax debate in a recent article discussing the federal deficit: "If we want to hold the government's share of national income to about 20 percent... we must slow spending growth to 4 percent for the next few years. If, instead, we raise taxes, the federal government's share will reach 25 percent very quickly and we shall as individuals lose control over an additional 5 percent of our resources." The debate over whether to raise taxes is often portrayed as between courageous and blinkered ideologues on the other. Yet at its most basic level, the faceoff pits people who wish to see government grow (or who are resigned to such growth) and those who've witnessed too many concessions to expanding government in the past, often in the name of "realism," and have decided to draw the line. One of the enduring myths of the Reagan presidency is that Congress cut federal spending and taxes. In fact, Congress trimmed or eliminated only a few programs, such as housing subsidies and local revenue sharing. Most programs grew — and in many cases, such as for the military, agriculture, health, veterans' benefits and income security, they grew at an alarming rate. The federal government has expanded during this decade by 3.3 percent annually, in constant dollars, a pace only slightly slower than during President Carter's years. Meanwhile, hikes in Social Security taxes alone outstripped savings from the 1981 rollback in income tax rates. Nevertheless, many in Congress insist they can't trim spending, except perhaps at the Pentagon. Not only can't they find savings, they want to spend additional billions on education, the homeless, housing, day care, scientific research, law enforcement, environmental cleanup, mass transit and so on. Without a trace of a smile to acknowledge the joke, they insist government has been starved and now must begin to beef up. Beef up? Pork out is more like it. Congress resembles a glutton who thinks self-restraint is stopping after the fourth piece of pie. Either we put this creature on a diet or, eventually, it will eat us out of house and home. Vincent Carroll is a syndicated columnist.

Solutions better than celebrations

By Chuck Stone
Multiply DIFs like that on standardized tests, and you can eliminate most potential black applicants, despite their C or even B high-school averages. Recently, the Council of the Great City Schools (the nation's 44 largest school systems) passed a resolution expressing its "profound concern" over Proposition 42 and asked to meet with the NCAA. Instead of expending so much energy celebrating Black History Month, white and black Americans might try uniting to resolve the divisive controversy over the new regulations. For starters: (1) Secondary school systems should require students to have a C average in order to participate in any extra-curricular activity. (2) Eliminate the SAT as a mandatory admission requirement and make it optional. (3) Require colleges and universities to publish the graduation rates of all athletes categorized by sport, race — and sex — and those of all other students categorized by race and sex. (We'd soon find out which colleges are teaching their athletes and which ones are "shuckin' and jivin'.") (4) The athletic scholarship aid to athletes' graduation rates. That's the NCAA's more stringent rule that would require freshmen athletes with scholarships to have a combined high school C average and a score of 700 (out of a possible 1600) on the Scholastic Aptitude Tests. With blacks scoring an average of 198 points below whites on the SATs, 90 percent of the freshmen eliminated last year by the NCAA's ruling were black. That's why Georgetown University basketball coach John Thompson walked off the court in protest. The real problem is the NCAA lame brains who are missing the SATs to set academic standards. First of all, SATs are surplus. "The single best predictor of college performance is the high school record," concedes a publication from the College Board, which owns the SATs. Second, SATs are culturally biased and you've heard that argument before: haven't you? But here's proof of what the psychometricians call "differential item functioning" or DIF. Try this question: Runner is to marathon as: (a) envoy: embassy (b) martyr: massacre (c) oarsman: regatta (d) referee: tournament (e) horse: stable The correct answer is (c). Whereas 52 percent of white test takers get that question right, only 22 percent of black test takers do. (Suburban kids are just more familiar with regattas than ghetto kids.)

'Buy American' policy can present problems

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta
WASHINGTON — The discovery of electronic bugs in the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow reinforces the need to stick with American building materials for security reasons. But the "buy American" policy has some problems of its own. Just ask U.S. diplomats in Yugoslavia who ordered new doors for the embassy and got a human skeleton instead. The story isn't one that the State Department likes to tell. Officials would rather say there are a few problems with the system. But the Yugoslavian mix-up shows the potential for blunders which are bizarre, if not serious. The mistake occurred in 1986 during a renovation of the U.S. Embassy in Belgrade. A crate was shipped from Baltimore and arrived in Yugoslavia addressed to the U.S. Embassy. Diplomats assumed it was the new doors they had been waiting for. But when they opened the box, they found the remains of a Yugoslavian poet who had died 40 years earlier. The poet had originally been buried in the United States, but was being repatriated posthumously and had been shipped to Belgrade for reburial. His name has been forgotten in this macabre story. Customs officials in the Yugoslavian port of Rijeka discovered that the boxes carrying the doors and the corpse had been mislabeled. Here is how a dry State Department cable described the surprise: "The bill of lading stated that the crate contained two doors being shipped on the 'Tubotic' 5/23/86, from Baltimore. When the crate was opened in Rijeka, the body of Yugoslav poet who died 40 years ago in the U.S. together with tombstone, was discovered. No doors." With single-minded determination the diplomats concluded their cable, "Please find out where the Sarajevo doors are: we cannot move forward with the... project without them." Embassy officials told our associate Scott Sleske how the mistake was sorted out. The doors were still on the ship. They eventually got to the embassy, and, as far as officials know, the poet made it to his final resting place. Shipping through the mail, despite its drawbacks, is still the best way for the United States to protect the security of its foreign embassies, especially in countries where workers may be moonlighting for the KGB. The Moscow embassy was expensive proof of that. In 1987, the State Department discovered that the chancery building under construction at the embassy was riddled with Soviet listening devices. Soviet workers planted them in precast concrete pillars and beams. The Soviet laborers were supposed to be under U.S. supervision, but the concrete work was done in a factory and then delivered to the embassy with the bugs already implanted. The State Department is still mulling its options. Unless someone buys the bugged building, the United States may have to tear it down and start from scratch, at a cost estimated at $35 million. The case of the misplaced Yugoslavian poet and other possible mix-ups are minor inconveniences when compared to razing an entire building. Economy is greased An obscure but generally sound measure of the health of American heavy industry is showing a promising outlook for 1989. It is the use of specialized oils and nonpetroleum lubricants in machine tools and other heavy manufacturing devices. A conventional standard for tracking heavy industry is the sales of machine tools. But these figures may be misleading because even when a company buys the equipment, it may not use it full time. But the highly specialized lubricants used to make steel, other metals, train cars, earthmoving machines and other heavy equipment is most often bought on an "as needed" basis. That makes those sales better reading of the true state of heavy industry as any given time. Industrial sources tell us that the sales of these necessary greases are increasing with predictions of big gains within the United States this year. In the past, companies in West Germany, Japan and Italy have increased their use of lubricants while American sales dropped off or remained steady. Paying for apartheid The economy of South Africa is floundering and that has caused an alarming increase in black unemployment, fanning unrest and stimulating violence. The government is deeply worried about providing for South Africa's 28 million blacks if the unemployment crisis can't be turned around. The black population is growing faster than the economy. Government economists estimate that the South African economy must grow 5 percent a year to keep up with population growth. Yet the economy has been averaging only about 1.4 percent growth a year. It is improbable that South Africa will achieve 5 percent growth a year. That means increased unrest and violence among the unemployed blacks. Critics of the Bible have appeared through the centuries. This is a bit like me, an artless layman, finding fault with the Mona Lisa. Truly the Lord holds his critics in contempt. Korean church struggling to find room for 600,000

By Kelly Tunney
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — While many churches are struggling to keep their doors open, the Yoido Full Gospel Church wrestles every week with the problems of a congregation of 600,000 parishioners.

The Seoul church, part of the worldwide Assemblies of God, claims to have the largest congregation in the world. The church seats 25,000 worshippers in its main sanctuary and another 25,000 in 17 "overflow" chapels.

The church was established with five parishioners by Rev. Paul Yonggi Cho in 1958 amid the devastation left by the Korean War. Over the years it expanded into a massive organization still intent on getting bigger every year.

"People often ask why the church is so large. Why is it 600,000? Why not break it up and have 60 churches of 10,000 members each?" says Lydia Swain of Miami, an ordained minister who first came to Seoul in 1964 and now works in the church office.

The simple answer, she said, is that "people want to stay together, to pray together." She said the congregation, virtually all Korean, is made up of born-again Christians who believe the power of prayer is strongest in groups.

Coping with what the church calls "a city of Christians" can be a test of ingenuity. There are 12 services a week, including seven on Sunday and nightly prayer meetings.

The faithful line up half an hour ahead of each service to cram into the 25,000-seat sanctuary. Thousands too late to get a seat jam into the overflow chapels to watch the proceedings on closed circuit television.

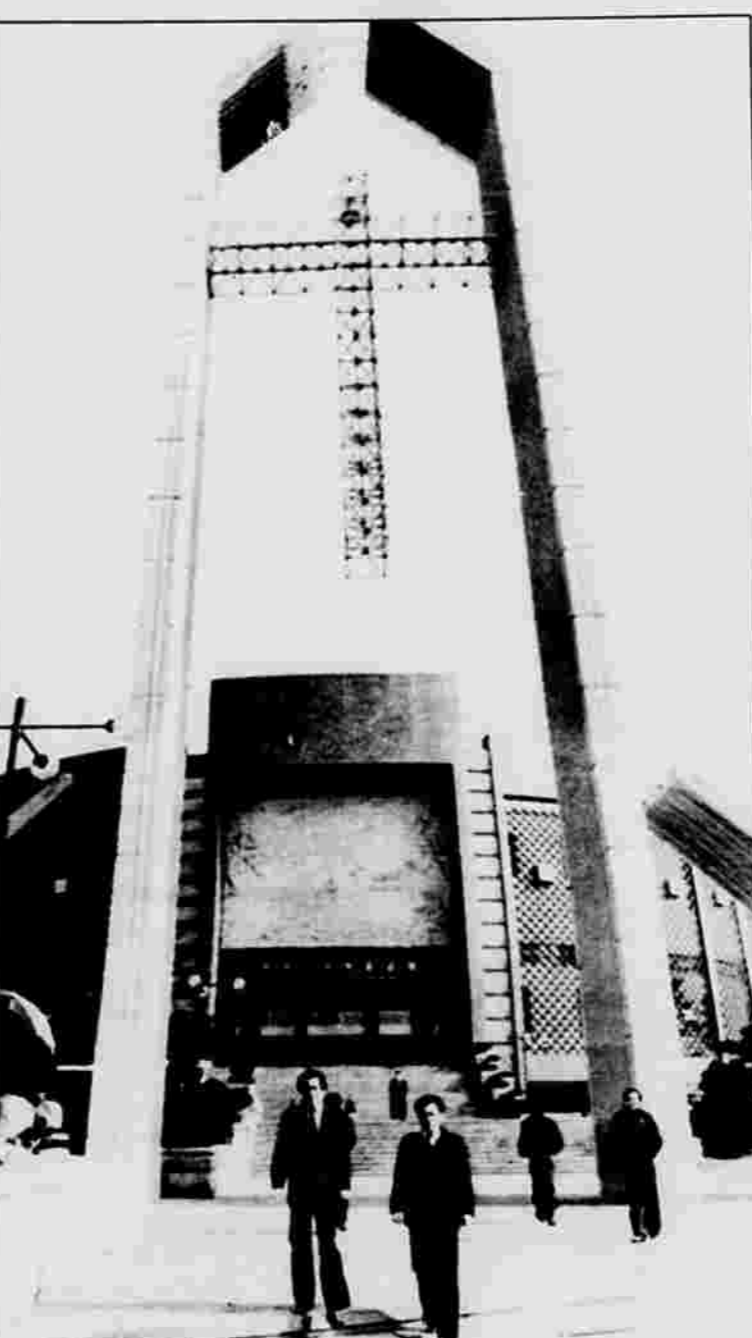

More than 30,000 children attend Sunday school classes in halls, crowded rooms and stairwells.

There are 12 choirs, 12 choir directors and 12 organists. Two orchestras play on Sunday.

"If you're 15 minutes early, you're late in this church," says Jim Dunnet, a church member from Great Falls, Mont., who lives in Seoul. "The seats are filled."

Church traffic police direct hundreds of cars and buses picking up and dropping off church-goers at every service. Users hand out 500,000 printed church programs a week, and if one does not speak Korean, there are headsets to hear translation in up to five languages. Some visitors bring binoculars.

Thrift shops are thriving in Connecticut

By Bill McDonald
Bridgeport Post-Telegram

BRIDGEPORT — Consignment shop owners find one of their hardest jobs is saying "no" to people who want to donate old clothes.

"Some people have a sentimental attachment to their clothes, like the women who come in with the dress she wore at her wedding," said Pat Benedetto of Monroe, co-owner of Chapter II Ltd. in Bridgeport. "One of the keys to our success is the kind of clothes we take in."

Now the two consignment shops, both of which have run 10 years, have found a national support group to help them along.

The National Association of Resale and Thrift Shops made its presence known last summer by running its first national convention. Both Chapter II and Perfect Partners II were among the few consignment shops representing Connecticut at the Chicago gathering.

Sieban with partner Ellie McCaffrey of West Norwalk and Benedetto with partner and neighbor Jan Weisse of Monroe said they loved swapping war stories with colleagues from around the country.

"They expected 70 and got 250," Weisse exclaimed. "They had workshops on all sorts of things, like computerizing your business, which we've already done, insurance and how to say no."

"We're glad we went," said McCaffrey. "The networking alone is worth it. Just speaking to other women and hearing how they were successful was fascinating. It's great to share problems and solutions and reinforce each other."

"It shows consignment shops have arrived," said Sieban. "They're a viable alternative to department store shopping."

Both stores sell second hand roughly one-third off what the garment would cost if new.

"If you can't wear it out the door right now and not look like it just came out of a department store or pretty close to that, then we won't take it," said Sieban.

Both stores try to keep clothes no longer than three months. They also won't accept any garment more than 3 years old.

Benedetto noted the consignment shop concept has been around for a long time, but came into its own in the mid-70s when many people decided there was no stigma to buying second-hand clothes. It became chic to do so.

"People can see they can make money by giving away old clothes," she said.

Those donating clothes get a part if the return if the garment is sold.

NARTS shows that consignment shops are numerous enough to be considered a thriving business concept that needs a central clearing house plus annual convention to lend support and swap ideas. The local women agreed.

Both stores have computerized systems to keep track of prices and inventory. Both use a bar-code system like that used in supermarkets and libraries, where each item has its own tag with different-length lines. When the item is bought, the person at the cash register passes an electronic pen over the bar-coded card to record the transaction.

Weisse noted that she and Benedetto found a consultant to create a special non-bar-coded program for them when they first computerized about three years ago. Then at the convention, they found a company that sold specialized software for consignment shops. They chose bar-coded system and were glad they did.

"This is a timesaver and more accurate," Weisse said of the new system.

"It does just about everything but put the clothes out on the rack," said McCaffrey of her own bar-code system at Perfect II.

QUESTION: I have several large panels of a synthetic wood with a kind of plastic finish that looks like marble. I probably will use it on a project I have in mind. The synthetic is very hard. I have a portable saber saw which I use sometimes to cut plywood. If I use it on these panels, will it ruin the saw?

ANSWER: It sounds as though you have panels of hardboard. It is not synthetic but made from regular wood logs that are converted to chips and wood fibers and bonded under heat and pressure. It can be cut with most saws but might not yield easily to a saber saw unless you use a special blade. Since there are some differences between standard hardboard and tempered hardboard, it would be a good idea to take a sheet of the material to your local lumberyard and ask what variety of hardboard it is and what saw blades can be used to cut it.

Painting — inside and out

By Andy Long The Associated Press

After reading this article and assimilating as much as you can clip it and put it away. Then reread it before you begin your next paint job, inside or out.

Here are some things that have been learned over the years about painting the interior and the exterior of your house.

Important and secondary only to the proper preparation of the surface is the addition to take your time. More amateur paint chores are ruined by the urge to get the task over with than anything except the desire to skip the boring but vital preparation chores. What's your hurry? If ever a task demanded a methodical approach, it is painting. That includes the time required to decide the kind of paint you are going to use, what effect you are trying to achieve, how you are going to handle the trim or woodwork, how much paint you will need and which applicators you will use on which surfaces.

On the inside, you generally will be choosing semi-gloss, flat or satin-finish paints. Semi-gloss reflects light and makes a room or hallway seem larger. It usually can be washed successfully with soap and water. Flat paints have a soft, less reflective appearance. Satin finishes combine the virtues of glosses and flats. They have a quiet luster, hide defects and can be wiped clean.

On ceilings, a bright white makes the room seem larger, but sometimes you may want to "soften" the room, in which case use a soft white. Textured paints have a heavier consistency than regular paints and so make an excellent base for the creation of patterns. They also can hide surface defects.

For large flat surfaces, nothing beats a roller, but brushes are better for smaller or irregular surfaces and jobs with trim. There are other kinds of applicators, including pads, for special tasks. A paint pad also works well on large surfaces or more precise areas, since they are lightweight and easy to use. Good pads usually have beveled edges and a rounded bottom.

A 'Safer' way to zap bugs

By Earl Aronson The Associated Press

What's in a name? To gardeners, the name "Safer" means a line of non-toxic bio-degradable products. An early slogan of the firm was: "The Safer Way Naturally."

I recently visited the Newton, Mass., operation and its youthful president, Milton P. Wilkins, who said that all its products must be non-toxic, effective and biodegradable, and should not contaminate water supplies.

"You can spray then eat fruit at harvest with no problem," he said. "The products are designed to control house plants and forest pests, and quickly disintegrate."

"There's a growing mainstream concern about the environment," said Fred N. DeFino, marketing manager. "Gardeners want safe alternatives to chemicals — less toxic, more natural pesticides that are easy to use, quickly effective and long-lasting."

The company was founded in Canada in the mid-1970s by two scientists working to help the Forest Service control pests environmentally. They isolated and patented a natural product, according to Wilkins, are "safe around children and pets."

Another new product is Early Alert Trapsix, which catches fungus gnats and other pests that infest house plants. Trapsix is inserted into plant containers and signals the need to apply insecticidal soap.

Company executives explained that fatty acids are a large group of compounds that disrupt the cell membranes of targeted pests — including aphids, mealybugs, whiteflies, mites, pear slugs, earwigs and crickets — but do not harm humans, pets or "good" insects. When insecticidal soap comes in contact with an insect, Wilkins explained, it enters the body through the insect's cuticle, disrupting the cell membranes and causing desiccation and death.

Wilkins said there is no known example of an insect developing resistance to Safer fatty acid insecticides.

Among the newer products developed by the research staff are Early Alert reusable insect traps, for Japanese beetles, houseflies, trips and other pests.

Wilkins said they work "without the use of harmful chemicals or poisons."

Said DeFino: "Our exclusive Biolure time-released lure (the traps) spare beneficial insects, are environmentally safe and last five months without any major change or loss in attraction efficiency."

The traps are made of a fluorescent yellow plastic that attracts and kills the bugs and, according to Wilkins, are "safe around children and pets."

QUESTION: What is the amount of the personal exemption for 1988? I understand it increased.

J.C. SAN FRANCISCO

ANSWER: The personal exemption amount increased by $50 for 1988 to $1,500. And for 1989 it goes up another $50 to $2,000. After 1989, the amount will be adjusted, if necessary, for inflation.

QUESTION: My mother passed away two years ago. I inherited stock she owned and now I would like to sell it. What amount would I use for my cost when I figure the gain on the sale?

ANSWER: Generally, for income tax purposes, the cost basis of inherited property is the fair market value on the date of the decedent's death. If an estate income tax return was filed it would show the market value (your cost basis). Your local library may have back issues of a microfilm of publications with information of stock prices. A guide to faraway places where the dollar goes far

By the Editors of Changing Times

Are you already planning where to go on your 1989 vacation?

You might consider the following vacation destinations, which will rank high with travelers this year, according to Changing Times magazine:

The Far East: Overseas, the best values will be in the Orient and the South Pacific. Airfares to prime destinations in this far-flung area have generally come down over the last decade. You can travel from the West Coast to Australia, for example, in a four-day package that includes your hotel for six nights for about $179 a day. And there are few places in the world where your dollars will buy as much as they will in Hong Kong ($1 U.S. is worth about $8 H.K.). You can spend six days in Hong Kong for about $140 a day, including airfare from the West Coast, hotel and breakfast.

Southern Europe: Although most of Western Europe remains high-priced for American tourists, the dollar still commands respect in Portugal and Greece. In Portugal your dollar buys about 145 escudos — a bottle of good port goes for 500 escudos. You can spend a week in Portugal for $11 a day, including airfare, hotel and breakfast.

In Greece, the dollar buys about 145 drachmas. You can have a good meal in Athens or on a Greek island for 1,200 drachmas per person, or about $8. A week in Greece costs about $140 per day, including airfare, hotel, most meals and ground transportation.

Traveling in the rest of Western Europe will be expensive again this year. The value of the dollar has only inched up against most Western European currencies. A cup of coffee in France can cost $2.50; a hotel room in Innsbruck, $220.

There are ways around some high tabs — for example, buying hotel accommodations, meals and ground transportation in tour packages at U.S. prices. Traveling on your own, a double room in the Bristol Hotel in Salzburg might cost you $297 a night. Break down the elements of a 14-day Germany-Austria tour package that includes a stay in the same hotel and you'll probably be paying only about $150 per night for that room. Prices of top-quality tour packages are running an average of $150 per day for Western Europe this year — a price that includes your hotel, ground transportation by tour bus and two meals a day on average.

Airline and travel agents are once again offering discount coupon books that will be widely accepted in Europe this year. With them you can get up to 50 percent off the price of restaurant meals, theater and train tickets and purchases in participating shops.

If you don't go on a package tour, you can save on travel costs with a Eurailpass. The price is $20 for first-class travel for up to 15 days and now includes travel in Hungary.

Round-trip airfares from New York to major Western European gateways — London, Frankfurt, Paris, Rome — will run from about $400 to $600 through the winter, with increases likely in the late spring as travel starts to pick up.

Summer is still the peak season, so you can save by visiting before the late-spring fare increases or waiting until next fall.

Soviet Union and Eastern Europe: With the spirit of glasnost and a warming in relations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union expected to endure for a while, the Soviet Union and Eastern Bloc countries such as Hungary, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia will be hospitable to American visitors this year.

So will their exchange rates, which are engineered by the governments to attract Yankee dollars. You can tour interesting sites and historic locales in this part of the world for $140 a day — round-trip airfare, meals, lodging and ground transportation included.

Round-trip airfares from New York to Eastern Bloc destinations are relatively high — Budapest, $789; Leningrad or Moscow, $885; Prague, $610. Since those countries are farther away, you have to make plane connections in Europe. But much lower prices on the ground more than make up for the steeper airfares.

Mexico: Hurricane Gilbert's damage to the Caribbean coastal resorts of Cancun and Cozumel has been fixed. But because some visitors may shy away this year, thinking hotels and other facilities won't be up to snuff, prices have been slashed to attract vacationers.

Round-trip airfare from Chicago, hotel and transfers will cost as little as $539 per person double occupancy for a seven-day stay. Meanwhile, the U.S. dollar buys ever more pesos — recently 2,280. That translates into dinner for two at a restaurant in Mexico City for as little as $40 to $45.

Cruises Close to Home: Particularly on cruise lines in the Caribbean and the Mexican Pacific, there are still more cruiser cabins than there are passengers signing up to fill them, says Changing Times magazine. So the cruise companies will continue to keep prices down and offer reductions in return for advance bookings or your willingness to fill a cabin at the last minute. Once aboard your cruise ship, your only out-of-pocket spending will be for tips, drinks, shopping and shore excursions. Depending on the size of the cabin you select, the length of the cruise and the cruise line, fares typically range from about $100 to $300 a day, including round-trip airfare between your home area and the cruise port (usually in Florida or Puerto Rico or, in the West Coast, Los Angeles or San Diego).

By booking a cruise three to six months in advance, you can knock up to 30 percent off the price. Travel discount clubs, such as Stand-Buys (which charges a $45 annual membership fee) can often get you a cruise at up to 70 percent off the regular fare. If you are willing to pick up and leave on two or three weeks' notice.

Don't be hard on husband

DEAR ABBY: I'm not the only woman with this problem, so maybe you can help many others if you answer this in the paper.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

My husband never gives me a compliment. When I ask "How was dinner?" he says, "I ate it, didn't I?"

If I ask, "How was your lovemaking?" he says, "I come back for more, don't I?"

If I ask, "How do I look in new dress?" he says, "I'll tell you that you look nice, you'll expect it often."

Abby, how I long for just one small compliment once in a while — a kind word, a show of affection from this man.

Perhaps someday somewhere, some other man will discover how hungry I am for a little reassurance, and he will fill that need.

Then my husband will come home from work and I will be gone, and he will never know why.

NEEDY

DEAR NEEDY: Usually those who are unable to compliment others have never been complimented themselves. And those who have never felt loved have difficulty expressing it to others.

Don't be so hard on your non-verbal husband. Tell him gently how much you long for a compliment. Don't suffer silently and hope that one day some other man will discover your need and fill it.

DEAR ABBY: There are a few things I would like to bring to people's attention about motels, since I live at one and work as a desk clerk there.

A motel is for sleeping, and is not the same as an apartment building. Please check into your room as quietly as possible.

Your next-door neighbor may be staying at the motel because he is working the night shift in the area.

DEAR ABBY: My doctor treated my urinary tract infection with Bactrim-DS and it cleared up. Now I have a yeast infection. Vaginal inserts and creams have not worked. What can you advise?

Dr. Peter Gott, M.D.

Help for yeast, urinary ills

DEAR READER: The normal vagina contains harmless bacteria and yeasts. Ordinarily, these microorganisms compete with one another, thereby preventing any overgrowth.

Problems develop when factors disrupt this balance. For example, diabetics are more prone to vaginal yeast infection because high tissue-fluid provides a rich source of nutrition for yeasts, which grow, eventually outstrip the bacteria competition and cause symptoms.

Some patients on antibiotics have discovered that they can maintain their bacteria/yeast balance by simultaneously loading their systems with harmless acidophilus bacteria in unacidified yogurt or Lactinex, taken orally.

Yeast vaginitis is exceedingly common in women who take antibiotics for more than several sometimes works. For those alert readers who have taken this discussion one step further, the answer is yes. For one reason or another, some patients may have to take anti-yeast medicine in the first place.

Thus, many cases of vaginitis can be seen as an understandable consequence of conditions that upset the normal checks and balances nature has provided.

For more information I am sending you a copy of my Health Report, "Vaginal Infections." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, Ohio 44101-3369.

Actress-director Lee Grant's career started with a bang. While still a teen-ager, she won a Tony in her first Broadway play, "The Detective Story." The same role earned her an Oscar nomination in the 1961 film version. Shortly thereafter, every-

LEE GRANT on TV Monday

Grant, 61, has won various awards for directing the TV movie "Nobody's Child," and also won an Oscar for her documentary about the homeless, "Down and Out in America." She is currently working on a drama about the same subject for CBS. On Monday, Grant returns to acting as Marilyn Klinghoffer in "The Hijacking of the Achille Lauro," an NBC-TV movie based on the 1985 incident in which terrorists seized a cruise ship and murdered Leon Klinghoffer, Marilyn's husband.

Here, Grant talks about blacklisting, terrorism and her continuing role as a rebel. QUESTION: Why did you want to play Marilyn Klinghoffer? ANSWER: She attracted me when I saw her on the news. She was determined to bring the hijackers down. She wanted to do this film. She negotiated with the producer herself. Tragically, she died of cancer four months after the hijacking, but she wanted her story told.

QUESTION: Was this an emotionally painful project for you? ANSWER: It was emotional, but also a cleansing place to go. I think we're all held hostage by fear that the plane or ship we're traveling on could be hijacked — just like the Achille Lauro. I think about it a lot.

QUESTION: After Leon Klinghoffer was shot and dumped into the sea, the mastermind of the hijack-ing, Abu Nidal, made a grotesque joke about it. ANSWER: He said maybe Leon was trying to swim for it. Leon's daughter Lisa called me about it. She and her sister were just so outraged, shocked by Nidal's trivializing of their father's death. I think the fact that Yasir Arafat embraced Nidal (recently) is a signal of the meaninglessness in which they hold our lives.

QUESTION: Do you see yourself, then, as a rebel? ANSWER: Yes. I think it's very important to be on the outside. I need to be on the outside. As an artist, I think you're either Mozart or Salieri.

QUESTION: Did being blacklisted during the '50s radicalize you? ANSWER: Absolutely. Actually, it politicized me more than radicalized me. I hadn't read a newspaper before. When I lived in Malibu, I went crazy every time my daughter or second husband went out of the house because I never knew if they'd come back — there were so many deaths on the highway in Malibu. So I had a similar fear of random death.

QUESTION: Leon Klinghoffer was an old man in a wheelchair. Of all the passengers, why would they pick such a sympathetic, defenseless figure to murder? ANSWER: I doubt if they thought of Leon as sympathetic. Certainly the way Karl (Malden) plays him and what his daughters told me about him, he was a very proud, very angry, outspoken man. Other passengers did say they heard him say, "To hell with you!" to the hijackers.

QUESTION: You've won Oscars for acting as well as directing. Which is more fulfilling? ANSWER: Acting is more of a personal outlet, just something I need to do, but directing is more of a challenge in terms of getting things done, planning, putting a script together.

QUESTION: If you were a man with your kind of track record in Hollywood, do you think you'd have a lucrative deal with a major studio to direct big-budget films instead of going small projects for cable and made-for-TV movies? ANSWER: In a word, yes. But I've accepted the fact that I work best with obstacles. Take obstacles away from me and I'd lose my backbone. I have no personal ambition. I need somebody to tell me no to the time.

Heavy-duty drama but it's depressing

Filmmeter Robert DiMatteo

THE BOOST (R) If drugs were so easy to "just say no" to, we wouldn't have rehab centers springing up all over the country. Everyone seems to want to say something about the subject. But what? Movies have turned to showing us the allure of cocaine and booze for those in the fast lane. The recent, little-seen "Clean and Sober" made such a sobering statement, before diving in melodrama. So does this heavy-duty drama that stars James Woods and Sean Young as an attractive young couple who become coke heads at the same time they are rising in the glamorous L.A. business world.

The problem with this drug drama, as with most others, is how schematic and depressing it is. It can't be accused of romanticizing drugs; that's for sure. But instead it follows its characters' downward progress with clinical determination. We can see where the film's couple are going long before they get there.

The fatal Woods has some good scenes, playing a man who is basically well-intentioned — an insecure guy who just wants to make a good living and please his wife. Drugs help him function better at parties, that's all. (Until he gets addicted.) And Sean Young has a lovely fragility as the wife. Drugs help him function better at parties, that's all. Here come the steamboats Steamboats out of the misty past. They will come in a booklet to be released March 3 at the Delta Queen Terminal in New Orleans.

The top number is John Fitch's "Experiment" of 1789-90, the first successful steam-powered craft. It was used as an excursion boat between Philadelphia and Burlington, New Jersey. The next one down is the Phoenix, built by John Stevens in 1807. It is famous for making a perilous 14-day voyage around the shores of New Jersey after being barred from New York waters by Robert Fulton and Robert Livingston. Those supermen were twisting their mistakes with a state monopoly. Their commencement came later.

Next we see the first steamboat to travel in western waters: the New Orleans, created in 1811 by Robert Fulton. It traveled 2,000 miles from the Pittsburgh area through uncharted hazards to reach New Orleans in January 1812.

The fourth stamp shows the work of Henry Miller Shreve, who pioneered the two-deck design used by the typical steamboats of the paddle-wheel era. At one time fully 11,000 boats were churning up and down the Mississippi and Ohio rivers alone.

When the Washington has made its way from Wheeling to New Orleans in 1816 it was impounded by that same Robert Fulton with another bluff. Chief Justice Marshall rode up later to put the squash on river monopolies.

The last stamp is the Walk in the Water that carried passengers, mail and cargo between Buffalo and Detroit sometime after 1818. This will be another good one for booklet collectors. (The Classic Cars came in August of 1988 and the Locomotives in October '87.) The price is right, $5, and the decorated cover can be used to get into the USPS World Stamp Expo starting in November. File the cover where you wish to look for it next fall, under F for Free; P for Pass; T for Ticket; S for Stamp Show; U for USPS or W for Washington. Just remember which.

February will see only three issues. On Feb. 3 we had a stamp to honor Philip Randolph who worked for black rights in the 1920s through '60s. On Feb. 21 we will have a bleak grain elevator scene for North Dakota Statehood and on Feb. 22 a Washington Statehood centennial with Mt. Rainier backing up Reflection Lake. Washington was recognized along with Montana and the Dakotas in 1889 on the so-called "Clothesline" Stamp. Scott number 858. Worth a look.

Kodak display salutes 'The Met'

In its 105th year, New York's Metropolitan Opera has had its premiere in Grand Central Terminal — and up to 652,000 commuters a day have been having the opportunity to view the occasion. Via an 18-by-60-foot Kodak display photograph of a grandly staged scene at the opera house.

Many of us are familiar with the shy, timid puppy that when approached squats, slumps down, eyes appear sensitive, rolls over, lifts one rear leg exposing a susceptible belly — and sometimes urinates. This may occur in the presence of certain people and varies with different breeds. Generally it is seen in some of the smaller pets (miniature poodles) or medium ones (cocker) but many also occur in some of the larger less assertive pets.

This dog-like behavior isn't necessarily triggered because of a justifiable fear. We might first think that the individual whose presence precipitates this activity has beaten or scolded the pet. But a dominant person isn't the only reason. It could be because of the memory of a past encounter that left the pet intimidated, a certain tone or voice inflection, the color of clothing or other appearance, or for no known reason. Or it might just be the pup's timidity.

How do you handle this submissiveness? The automatic reaction is to comfort the cowering pet. This, however, is reinforcement and may make the problem worse.

The best response is to neither recognize nor reward the act. Ignoring the timidly demonstrates to the pet that this behavior is non-productive. Sometimes softening one's manner, changing the tone of voice, color of clothing or whatever triggered the response

ANSWER: I doubt if they thought of Leon as sympathetic. Certainly the way Karl (Malden) plays him and what his daughters told me about him, he was a very proud, very angry, outspoken man. Other passengers did say they heard him say, "To hell with you!" to the hijackers.

QUESTION: You've won Oscars for acting as well as directing. Which is more fulfilling? ANSWER: Acting is more of a personal outlet, just something I need to do, but directing is more of a challenge in terms of getting things done, planning, putting a script together.

QUESTION: If you were a man with your kind of track record in Hollywood, do you think you'd have a lucrative deal with a major studio to direct big-budget films instead of going small projects for cable and made-for-TV movies? ANSWER: In a word, yes. But I've accepted the fact that I work best with obstacles. Take obstacles away from me and I'd lose my backbone. I have no personal ambition. I need somebody to tell me no to the time.

QUESTION: Yes, I think it's very important to be on the outside. I need to be on the outside. As an artist, I think you're either Mozart or Salieri.

QUESTION: Did being blacklisted during the '50s radicalize you? ANSWER: Absolutely. Actually, it politicized me more than radicalized me. I hadn't read a newspaper before. When I lived in Malibu, I went crazy every time my daughter or second husband went out of the house because I never knew if they'd come back — there were so many deaths on the highway in Malibu. So I had a similar fear of random death.

QUESTION: Leon Klinghoffer was an old man in a wheelchair. Of all the passengers, why would they pick such a sympathetic, defenseless figure to murder? ANSWER: I doubt if they thought of Leon as sympathetic. Certainly the way Karl (Malden) plays him and what his daughters told me about him, he was a very proud, very angry, outspoken man. Other passengers did say they heard him say, "To hell with you!" to the hijackers.

Trivia

Mr. Lincoln

Who would be no slave must consent to have no slave. Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves, and under a just God cannot long retain it.

Much is known about our 16th President whose birthday is celebrated as a national holiday. His stand against slavery as a moral, social and political evil, and his determination to keep the stakes united after the civil war. What is less known is just how well he faced the trials he put before him. One of three children, his younger brother died as an infant, followed by his mother when he was nine years old. His older sister, Sarah, died in childhood when Abraham was 19. His father was the state legislator in Illinois, and two bids to the U.S. Senate in 1854 and 1858. His first marriage proposal to a young Kentucky woman was turned down, and his stormy engagement to future wife Mary Todd was broken off at one point. Once married, he had four sons, but only his eldest, Robert, lived past his 16th birthday. Despite these hardships, he became a successful lawyer, freedom advocate, and U.S. President. He was assassinated in 1865 by actor John Wilkes Booth at the Ford's Theater.

An annoying problem

Many of us are familiar with the shy, timid puppy that when approached squats, slumps down, eyes appear sensitive, rolls over, lifts one rear leg exposing a susceptible belly — and sometimes urinates.

This may occur in the presence of certain people and varies with different breeds. Generally it is seen in some of the smaller pets (miniature poodles) or medium ones (cocker) but many also occur in some of the larger less assertive pets.

This dog-like behavior isn't necessarily triggered because of a justifiable fear. We might first think that the individual whose presence precipitates this activity has beaten or scolded the pet. But a dominant person isn't the only reason. It could be because of the memory of a past encounter that left the pet intimidated, a certain tone or voice inflection, the color of clothing or other appearance, or for no known reason. Or it might just be the pup's timidity.

How do you handle this submissiveness? The automatic reaction is to comfort the cowering pet. This, however, is reinforcement and may make the problem worse.

The best response is to neither recognize nor reward the act. Ignoring the timidly demonstrates to the pet that this behavior is non-productive. Sometimes softening one's manner, changing the tone of voice, color of clothing or whatever triggered the response

Dispositions in animals vary just as in people. Some are bold, some nervous, some submissive. But with patience most shy ones will gradually grow out of this syndrome. At least the piddling, the worst part usually diminishes.

TV SPECIAL: In late March or early April CPTV channel 24 will feature a 13-part series of 30 minute programs covering all aspects of veterinary medicine from dogs and cats, horses, birds, to zoo animals and exotics. Cow town to tinsel town How Jewish immigrants build Hollywood

By Hillel Helle
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The celebrated writer Ben Hecht once said that the "persistent banality of the movies is due to the 'vision' of their manufacturers."

This, he said, "is usually a man who has no taste to be violated or intelligence to be distorted. He admires with his whole soul the drive his underlings produce in the factory."

Hecht, co-author of that irrevocable look at the news business, "The Front Page," and a major screenwriter of the 1930s and '40s, was assailing the studio bosses who ruled Hollywood during its "Golden Age."

But the transformation of Hollywood from cow town to tinsel town could not have happened without such men as Adolph Zukor, Louis B. Mayer, Harry Cohn and Harry and Jack Warner. They were all immigrants, Jewish immigrants who arrived in this country in the late 19th century.

"The story is the story of not only Jewish immigrants, but all immigrants," said film critic Neil Gabler, author of "An Empire of Their Own" (Crown, $24.95) which chronicles the role played by Jewish immigrants in the rise of Hollywood.

They were determined to succeed, to break out of the cycle of poverty and failure that had marked their childhoods. But for a Jewish immigrant at the turn of the century, the options were limited.

So one by one, they drifted into the film business. The industry began to take hold as nickelodeons gave way to feature films.

By the '20s, movies were big business and the Jewish immigrants were in charge of the major studios. Zukor headed up Paramount, the Warners formed Warner Bros., Mayer ran MGM and Cohn was in charge of Columbia.

But the studios were more than a business for the immigrants; they were an extension of the moguls' own personalities. Zukor identified with sophisticated and smart, Gabler said, and Paramount specialized in slick, romantic comedies such as Ernst Lubitsch's "Trouble in Paradise" (1932), with Herbert Marshall and Miriam Hopkins, and his "The Smiling Lieutenant" (1931), with Maurice Chevalier, Miriam Hopkins and Claudette Colbert.

The hostile, belligerent Cohn liked his films tough and Columbia became the home of the fast-paced comedies of Frank Capra and Howard Hawks. Jack and Harry Warner considered themselves outsiders and their studio specialized in gangster films, starring actors who put the T in TOUGH — James Cagney and Edward G. Robinson.

MGM was the most "Hollywood" of all the studios, with its white sound stages and art deco administration building. Sentimental films such as "Boys Town" and the Andy Hardy pictures reaffirmed Mayer's own old-fashioned values. It was also the studio that made "Gone With the Wind."

Mayer was benevolent compared to the other studio heads, who followed Cohn's motto: "I don't get ulcers, I give 'em!" But Gabler saw underlying reasons for their ruthless style.

"Out of context Harry Cohn is a beast, if you only look at his behavior. The same thing may be true of Mayer and Zukor and others," Gabler said. "If you look at them as a group if individuals who felt the culture was against them, then their behavior takes a different context."

He spent five years writing and researching "Empire of Their Own." He would learn firsthand about the power of the immigrants' "vision" after interviewing Norma Shearer, one of MGM's biggest stars of the '20s and the wife of Irving Thalberg, the studio's celebrated production head.

Gabler and Danny Seznick, the son of producer David O. Seznick, visited the actress at the Motion Picture Home in California not long before she died.

"She was a stony woman and had no recollection of Thalberg," Gabler said. "After the interview, we took her back to her room and put her on her bed. Danny said, 'Do you mind if I kiss you?' and she said, 'No not at all.' She turned her head and said, 'This is my good side.'"

'At Home' with Vidal

AT HOME. By Gore Vidal. Random House, 303 Pages, $18.95.

A reader of the two dozen essays in "At Home" may not agree with everything Gore Vidal has to say, but he will find the variety of views put forth provocative, to say the least.

In one piece, which tells in part of his family's roots in Washington, Vidal puts forward the thesis, if unprovable, notion that the United States moved from republic to empire because of air conditioning.

"I date the end of the old republic and the birth of the empire to the invention, in the late '30s, of air conditioning. Before air conditioning, Washington was deserted from mid-June to September. The president... and all of Congress went home... But since air conditioning and the Second World War arrived, more or less at the same time, Congress sits and sits while the presidents and their staffs never stop making mischief at the White House."

American empire officially dead. For what reason? "On Sept. 16, 1985, when the Commerce Department announced the U.S. had become a debtor nation, the American Empire died. Like most modern empires, ours rested not so much on military prowess as on economic primacy... Then the money power shifted from New York to Tokyo, and that was the end of our empire."

How to cope with this shift of economic power? Vidal offers a rather unlikely and startling solution in the wryly titled "A Cheerful Response." He writes: "For America to survive economically in the coming Sino-Japanese world, an alliance with the Soviet Union is a necessity. After all, the white race is a minority race with many well-deserved enemies, and if the two great powers of the Northern Hemisphere don't band together, we're going to end up as farmers — or, worse, mere entertainment — for the more than 1 billion grimly efficient Asians."

Social Security

QUESTION: Lately I've heard a lot about this "Personal Earnings and Benefit Statement" and that everyone should send for it. I'm only 42 years old. Why should I get one now? I won't be retiring for 20 years or more.

ANSWER: Your Personal Earnings and Benefit Statement is valuable for at least two reasons. First, it enables you to check your earnings record to make sure that your earnings have been recorded correctly. It is a good idea to check your record every three years or so. Second, this statement also provides an estimate of your future retirement benefits in today's dollars for retirement at a full benefit retirement age, but also for early retirement at 62 and later retirement at age 70 if you decide to work until then. Having this information will help you plan additional sources of retirement income which may be necessary to maximize your retirement income. These first steps taken now will also help assure a more comfortable and less restrictive lifestyle in your later years.

QUESTION: I've heard a lot of people say it takes forever to get the money back from Social Security they've paid in. I know this isn't true but what is the average beneficiary getting from Social Security these days?

ANSWER: The average Social Security benefit for retired workers is $537 monthly. For couples that figure is $821. Annually, retired workers receive $6,444 and couples receive $11,052. So, you're right, it doesn't take too long to recover what you've paid into Social Security over the years. You should keep in mind though, as people are paying more into Social Security today than in the past, it will take longer in the future to get back out of Social Security everything they've put into it over the years.

QUESTION: I am a 26-year-old SSI recipient who is legally blind. My state has provided me with employment counseling and work skills training, but, as I look at my total situation, I see the cost of working as prohibitive. Since I would be receiving only a modest entry level wage, my only income is my SSI check with which I must pay for rent, food and other expenses, such as the transportation I would need to and from work if I were to obtain basketweaving (intermediate) 2 p.m.; grocery shopping (Stop & Shop), call a day in advance for ride; non-grocery shopping (Bradlee's) call a day in advance for ride. Annenberg gift: $10 million

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Walter Annenberg, who sold his TV Guide magazine to Rupert Murdoch last year for $2.2 billion, has pledged $10 million to the University of Pennsylvania, it was announced Friday. Sheldon Hackney, president of Annenberg's alma mater, said a committee of university administrators decided the entire $10 million would go to Penn's history department. Hackney said Annenberg agreed to the choice. Annenberg founded Triangle Publications, which at one time also owned the Philadelphia Inquirer, now owned by Knight-Ridder. When Triangle was sold last year, it included TV Guide, Good Food and Seventeen magazines and The Racing Form.

Another Fonda in films

NEW YORK (AP) — If the name Fonda helps an acting career like the name Kennedy helps in politics, then Bridget Fonda should have an easy time.

But the 25-year-old actress said in the March issue of Mademoiselle that she's had to battle everybody's expectations for her to "be somebody" in able to "be herself."

Private economists, skeptical about that rosy scenario, have been predicting slower growth this year and warned that the latest report from the Labor Department could lead the Fed to boost interest rates to restrain the economy and keep inflation in check.

"The report signals that the economy has launched into another significant ratcheting upward of inflation," said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co. "We all should wait for another inflation report or two to draw too pessimistic a conclusion, but my fear is that it will ultimately take a major slowdown or recession to get inflation back down to acceptable rates," Sinai said.

The Producer Price Index for finished goods had risen 4 percent during 1988, the steepest climb in seven years and nearly double the 2.2 percent increase posted in 1987. Many private economists expect further increases this year, although not at the double-digit levels that plagued the nation in 1979 and 1980.

Spiraling inflation is feared

Wholesale prices surge in January

By Nancy Benac The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices in January shot up at their fastest pace in nearly three years, the government said Friday in a report that analysts warned could signal spiraling inflation in 1989.

January's unexpected 1 percent rise in the Producer Price Index for finished goods was the biggest monthly increase since an identical surge in October 1985 and was equivalent to a 12.7 percent annual rate of inflation, the Labor Department said.

The increase was paced by the steepest rise in food prices in a year, the largest rise in energy prices in two years and sharply higher costs in a variety of other categories as well.

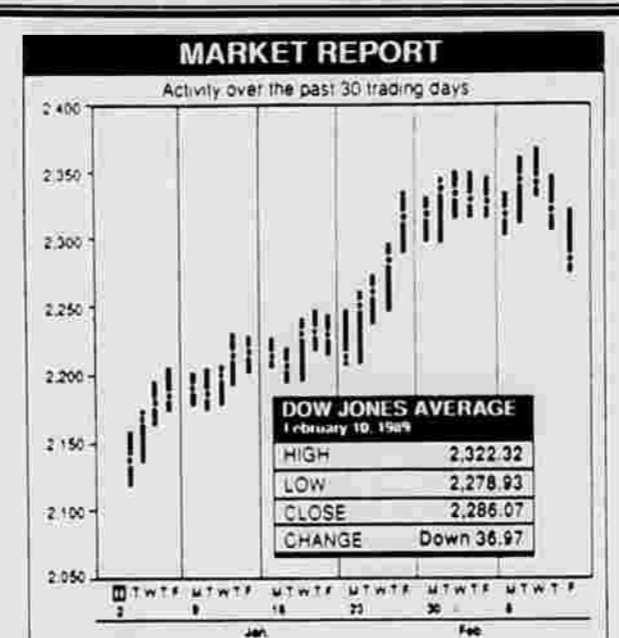

The report roiled financial markets, unleashing a storm of selling in stocks and Treasury bonds, as traders became concerned that the Federal Reserve Board would drive interest rates higher to try to control inflation.

The first inflation report since the change in administrations brought no good news for President Bush, who just a day earlier unveiled budget and deficit-reduction plans based on optimistic assumptions for falling inflation and a strong overall economic performance.

Private economists, skeptical about that rosy scenario, have been predicting slower growth this year and warned that the latest report from the Labor Department could lead the Fed to boost interest rates to restrain the economy and keep inflation in check.

"The report signals that the economy has launched into another significant ratcheting upward of inflation," said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co. "We all should wait for another inflation report or two to draw too pessimistic a conclusion, but my fear is that it will ultimately take a major slowdown or recession to get inflation back down to acceptable rates," Sinai said.

The Producer Price Index for finished goods had risen 4 percent during 1988, the steepest climb in seven years and nearly double the 2.2 percent increase posted in 1987. Many private economists expect further increases this year, although not at the double-digit levels that plagued the nation in 1979 and 1980.

In Brief

ComFed reports net loss

LOWELL, Mass. — ComFed Bancorp Inc., the holding company for ComFed Savings Bank, has reported a net loss of $1.4 million, or 16 cents per share, for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988. The company earned $1.4 million, or 17 cents per share, for the comparable quarter a year earlier, the company announced.

The bank's main office in Manchester is located at 1077 Main St. There are two other branch offices in Manchester and one in South Windsor. There are 32 branch offices in total in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

For the nine months ending Dec. 31, ComFed's net income was $17,000, compared with a net loss of $2.4 million, or 30 cents per share, a year earlier.

Income drops for Rogers

Rogers Corp. has reported net income of $1,015,000 in 1988, a drop of $2,362,000 from the $3,377,000 earned in 1987. The Rogers-based company, with a molding division in Manchester, also reported record 1988 sales of $162,476,000, up 12 percent from 1987's figure of $145,214,000.

The net income for the year was listed at 33 cents per share, down from the $1.13 per share earned in 1987, according to a news release from the company. Sales in the fourth quarter were $39,127,000, down 4 percent from $40,898,000 in the comparable period of 1987. There was a net loss in the fourth quarter of 1988 of $1,214,000, or 40 cents per share, compared to net income of $1,197,000, or 40 cents per share, in the last quarter of 1987.

Norman L. Greenman, Rogers president, said, "After first-half results that were about as expected, 1988 turned into a disappointing year for Rogers, with a sharp drop in earnings."

Northwest selects PW4000

EAST HARTFORD (AP) — Northwest Airlines has selected Pratt & Whitney's PW4000 engine to power its new fleet of 10 Airbus Industrie A330-300s in an order worth $250 million to the engine maker.

Pratt & Whitney said in a prepared statement Thursday that the order brought to nearly $1.5 billion the potential value of engine orders and options logged by the company this week.

Pratt will supply 20 installed engines plus spares for Northwest's A330s, the largest twin-engine jetliners in the world.

The Northwest order is further recognition that Pratt & Whitney's A330s, the largest twin-engine jetliners in the world, are the most profitable engine business among different aircraft, said Selwyn D. Berson, president of Pratt & Whitney's commercial engine business.

Connecticut's S&Ls remarkably healthy

By Brent Lovmon The Associated Press

STAMFORD — Although at least one Connecticut thrift institution appears in deep trouble, savings and loans in the land of national crisis, industry experts say.

Of 26 savings and loans in Connecticut, only the long-troubled Columbia Federal Savings Bank in Westport has a negative net worth according to a recent survey published by American Banker, a widely respected industry trade publication.

Industry experts, including state banking commissioner Harold Brown and federal regulators, said in a series of interviews Friday that Connecticut S&Ls have avoided the financial quagmire in which institutions in the west and southwest have been caught through conservative management.

The institutions have largely stuck with the residential real estate loans that have always been thrifths' stock in trade. The region's healthy economy has also helped keep the state's S&Ls thriving, experts said.

"Institutions in New England are stronger and better capitalized," said Roger Warren, president of the Savings and Loan League of Connecticut. "They are basically better managed, traditional institutions."

"In general, S&Ls in New England are doing quite well," said Ann Eggleston, vice president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston, a regulatory agency for thrift institutions.

"They have stuck to traditional types of lending. They have stayed close to home in terms of geographic area," she said.

Brown said, "In Connecticut, the thrift industry enjoys the same asset quality that's available for loan opportunities as the commercial banks. We have not had the problems that those out west and southern institutions have encountered."

Some analysts blame the current crisis, during which troubled S&Ls lost a post-Depression record of $9.4 billion during the first nine months of 1988, partly on new laws that gave thrift owners fresh investment opportunities — commercial and consumer loans, construction lending and direct investments in developing projects.

Some thrifths thrived in the new climate, but many of them have the experience to succeed and saw their portfolios grow ever more shaky.

According to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, there were 435 insolvent thrifths nationwide as of Multiple-organ transplants save cancer patients

By Morcia Dunn The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Eleven once-terminal cancer patients are living free of malignancy after undergoing pioneering transplant surgery that replaced four abdominal organs and left most without stomachs, their surgeon said Friday.

"We're pushing ourselves to the limit," transplant pioneer Thomas E. Starzl of the University of Pittsburgh said in an interview.

The transplants, believed to be the first of their kind, have been performed on 10 men and three women since June at Presbyterian-University Hospital. Two patients died, one of them following a second transplant, Starzl said.

"It's revolutionary," said Dr. Israel Penn, professor of surgery at the University of Cincinnati who keeps a worldwide transplant tumor registry. "It's a very drastic operation. But with patients of cancers of this type, you have to do very drastic operations to save their lives."

All 12 patients were near death and their tumors were inoperable, Starzl said. The tumors were all located in the pancreas and liver areas. All but the most recent survivors, including one who underwent the surgery Monday, are home.

Diana Hancock, 40, a computer operator from Burlington, Wis., who underwent the surgery Jan. 13, said Friday in a telephone interview she lives easily "but that goes with the territory." She expects to be discharged from the hospital in a few days.

"Naturally, you have pros and cons (beforehand) like, 'Should I do it?' she said. "But you know there's no hope the other way. I probably had a couple more months. This was a future for me."

Surgical teams removed each patient's liver, pancreas, most or all of the stomach, two-thirds of the colon, and duodenum, a 10-inch-long section of the small intestine.

The cavity was filled with a block of organs consisting of the liver, pancreas, duodenum and jejunum, a few feet of section of the small intestine. Each patient received organs from a single donor.

The stomach was not replaced since it is non-essential for digestion, which can be performed by intestines, Starzl said.

Starzl said the procedure is "a miniversion" of the five-organ transplants performed next door at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh on two 3-year-olds. Tabatha Foster of Madisonville, Ky., survived six months before dying in May 1984 and Rolandra Dodge of Fruitland, N.M., died last month, six weeks after surgery.

Both girls died of lymphoproliferative disease, an abnormal proliferation of lymphoids, or white blood cells, that obstructed the biliary system of the liver, officials said. Each had received a new liver, pancreas, stomach, small intestine and part of a large intestine.

"We need better tools" such as anti-rejection medication for transplants involving the digestive system, Starzl said. "We need to be able to manage these so-called lymphoids."

Abdominal transplants involving multiple organs "is not an all-or-none procedure," he said. "The soundness of the surgery is exemplified by the (13) procedures."

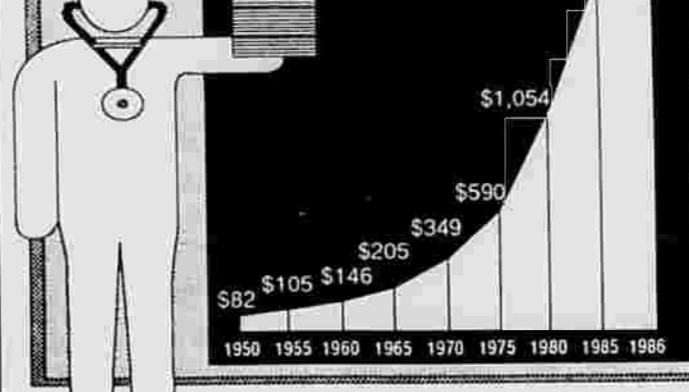

As of Dec. 31, about 1,100 people with malignant tumors had undergone liver, kidney, heart or bone marrow transplants worldwide, according to Penn. Eight months of cancer-free survival following a multiple-organ transplant is "a phenomenal accomplishment," he said.

"What he's trying to do is... remove the entire tumor plus all areas where it's most likely to spread to in hopes of curing the cancer altogether," Penn said.

Rising cost of health care

In 1990, the yearly average cost for health care in the U.S. was $92. In 1985, about $1,840 was spent per American on health care.

Thousands in state down with the flu

HARTFORD (AP) — The winter flu season has finally arrived in Connecticut, and thousands of state residents are enduring the headache, fever, chills and aching muscles that accompany the annual scourge.

"There have been numerous reports of outbreaks in the schools and other institutions," Dr. Matthew L. Carter, epidemiology program coordinator for the state Department of Health Services, said Friday.

About 100 people with flu symptoms are being treated each day at Yale University's student health service, and last week the 25-bed infirmary there was filled, mostly with flu patients, said Dr. Daniel S. Rome, director of university health services.

"We've seen a definite increase in the number of influenza-like cases here in the past two weeks or so," Rome said.

At the University of Connecticut, about 50 students complaining of flu symptoms have been seeking help every day from doctors at the infirmary, according to Mike Kurland, the university's director of health services.

Kurland said the flu outbreak at the Storrs campus was one of the worst in recent years. He said that in some university offices, including health services, only about 20 percent of the staff are showing up for work.

At East Windsor Junior and Senior High School, where nearly 25 percent of the students were out sick Monday, the girls' and boys' basketball teams had to cancel games this week because so many players were ill.

The flu season arrived late in the region this year, with the first confirmed cases in Connecticut appearing in early January, and can be expected to linger into early March, Carter said.

"The Northeastern states were a little behind the rest of the country in seeing influenza this year," he said. "But we have now caught up."

Three different strains of influenza have been identified by the state's epidemiology laboratories, Carter said. Two strains of flu type A and one of type B, a less severe flu virus, have been isolated.

A virus causing nausea, vomiting and diarrhea has also been widespread in the state in recent weeks, he said.

The flu begins with a rapid onset of chills, fever, and head and muscle aches, followed by runny nose, sore throat and cough and usually lasts from two to seven days, Carter said.

"For most people, the flu's a very unpleasant illness, but not a serious or life-threatening one," Carter said.

Judge halts logging near spotted owls

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Environmentalists trying to protect the northern spotted owl cheered a federal judge's decision halting logging on five timber tracts.

"This is a temporary reprieve only, but a significant first step toward saving these ancient forest treasures," said Vic Sher, a lawyer with the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund.

U.S. District Judge Helen Frye issued a temporary restraining order Wednesday that halts logging on five Bureau of Land Management sites in Oregon. The judge cited the potential for irreparable harm to the environment and scheduled another hearing on the matter for Feb. 17.

The order came in response to a motion filed Tuesday by conservation groups battling plans to log old-growth forests near spotted owl nests.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is being challenged in court over its refusal to list the owl as a threatened or endangered species.

Bob Rivers, acting BLM state director, said bureau officials were instructed to notify the timber companies to cease operations as soon as possible.

Wendell Wood, a spokesman for the Manchester Herald by advertiser, including over-issuances in any free distribution publications published by the Manchester Herald, Penn. Steffert, Publisher.

Wendell Wood, a spokesman for the Oregon Natural Resources Council, said one timber company spent the weekend working in a subzero weather to log 40 percent of one of the areas.

Wood, whose group is one of the plaintiffs in the lawsuit, charged that the bureau, in selling logging rights to the property, had acted "in reckless disregard for the spotted owl" and was promoting "chainsaw justice."

Rivers declined to comment on Wood's remarks.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered in 1942 that men between the ages of 45 and 64 register for non-military duty.

Hockey loses a friend in Kelly

Veteran announcer dies of cancer at age 52

By Mark Peterson
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Dan Kelly, whose crystal-clear voice enabled hockey fans across the United States and Canada to see the game by simply closing their eyes and listening to the radio, died Friday of cancer. He was 52.

"All of us in the hockey world are saddened to lose a dear friend such as Dan," John Ziegler, the NHL president, said in New York. "During the past two decades the game has known no better goodwill ambassador. Many of today's hockey fans have learned the game through Dan's vivid and exciting play-by-play calls over the airwaves."

Kelly, the voice of the St. Louis Blues for two decades, had been out of the KMOX-radio broadcast booth since Nov. 19, soon after his illness was diagnosed. He died at his home, Blues Vice President Susie Mathieu said.

Kelly's last public words were spoken from a recording he made from his hospital bed. He was

Oklahoma set to crack down on its athletes

By Owen Cowfield
The Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Three Oklahoma football players were charged Friday with raping a 23-year-old woman in the athletic dormitory, while school officials moved to crack down on misconduct by student athletes.

District Attorney Tully McCoy said Nigel Clay, Glen Bell and Bernard Hall are accused of first-degree rape in the alleged attack Jan. 21. Clay and Hall also were charged with two counts each of furnishing alcohol to a minor, he said.

The three, who did not start for the Sooners last season, were led away in handcuffs from their arraignment in Cleveland County District Court. Special District Judge Gary Purcell set bond at $40,000 for Bell and $50,000 each for Clay and Hall, pending an April 10 preliminary hearing. Their attorneys said the players would not be able to post bond.

The judge turned down defense attorneys' request for a lower bond after McCoy indicated there had been attempts to intimidate witnesses in the case. The prosecutor did not say who was involved in the alleged intimidation and would not comment outside the courtroom, but Purcell warned the three players against contacting witnesses.

Charlie Cox, Bell's attorney, called McCoy's statements "vague allegations of intimidation without any basis."

Bell, 20, is a sophomore fullback from Muskogee, Okla. Clay, 20, is a sophomore offensive tackle from Fontana, Calif., and Hall, 22, is a junior tight end from Detroit.

The three were suspended from school for two years, said university legal counsel Larry Naifeh, although he added that they could appeal that.

The charges followed an investigation into a woman's report that she was gang raped at the athletic dormitory after she and a friend went there to meet players.

Although police alleged in an affidavit for a search warrant that five men raped the woman, McCoy said only Bell, Clay and Hall would be charged. He said no one else was granted immunity.

McCoy said first-degree rape carries a minimum penalty of five years in prison and the alcohol charge a maximum of five years and a $2,500-$5,000 fine.

David Swank, the university's interim president, made a series of recommendations to the school's board of regents Friday in a meeting that also included closed-door sessions with athletic director Donnie Duncan and football coach Barry Switzer. Swank earlier said he was deeply concerned about events in the athletic department, including a shooting incident in the dormitory last month in which one football player was wounded and another was charged.

"Recent events involving a few individuals in the football program have caused a great deal of concern among our faculty, staff, students, alumni and friends, not only about the football program but the entire athletic program," Swank said.

"Much of the criticism about the other sports is unjustified, but because of the concern expressed by many individuals it is an appropriate time to make significant changes which will address not only the recent problems, but which will address issues faced by our athletic programs and other athletic programs across the nation."

The board of regents adopted a recommendation that any student charged with a crime be prohibited from participating in sports at the school while the charges are pending.

Canseco stopped by police

MIAMI (AP) — Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics, the American League's Most Valuable Player, was given a traffic ticket today after police estimated his 1989 Jaguar was traveling 125 mph on a Florida highway.
The 24-year-old Canseco was stopped in his bright red car on Interstate 95 in north Dade County at about 1:25 p.m. Florida Highway Patrol spokesman Lt. Tim Betts said. Police say they originally saw Canseco speeding in south Broward County, which is north of Miami.

Take the biggest year (19--...) of both Herb Brooks' and Denny Crum's careers, divide by the number of Big Ten Rose Bowl wins since 1970, multiply by Steve Carlton's 20-win seasons and add the weight limit for most of Archie Moore's fights.

PAYOFF: The answer is also the number of career stolen bases compiled by a speedy first baseman who also batted .400 twice. Name him.

Sunday's Games

Olajuwon the logical choice for MVP award

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Akeem Olajuwon and the Houston Astrodome are NBA history waiting to happen. Olajuwon, the starting center for the Western Conference, will be the only player from the Houston Rockets in Sunday's NBA All-Star Game. The last two years, and 10 times in 38 previous All-Star games, the most valuable player has come from the host city.

The All-Star Game also comes 21 years after Elvin Hayes of the University of Houston used the Astrodome as his personal showcase. The Big E led Houston to an upset victory over Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (then Lew Alcindor) and top-ranked UCLA before 52,693 fans at the Astrodome. Abdul-Jabbar, who is averaging just 9.9 points a game, will be playing after all this weekend, named Thursday by NBA Commissioner David Stern as the replacement for injured Laker teammate Magic Johnson. Johnson, one of the West's starters, will be missing after tearing a hamstring in Wednesday night's game with Golden State. He is expected to be out seven to 10 days. A crowd of up to 45,000 is expected, which would break the previous All-Star record of 43,146 at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis in 1985. A different seating configuration than the one used in 1988 will be in place Sunday.

"It would be nice to be the MVP in Houston," said Olajuwon, the NBA's leading scorer among centers. "But I won't put that kind of pressure on myself. My philosophy is no expectation, no disappointment." "I think he'll have a big game, but you never know with so many stars and just one ball," Rockets coach Don Chaney said. Tom Chambers, then of Seattle, won in 1987 and Chicago's Michael Jordan last year. Chambers scored 34 points and had four steals as the West defeated the East 154-149 in overtime at the Seattle Kingdome. "I remember Tom Chambers in that game two years ago." Olajuwon said. "He was shooting from everywhere. Playing center is just a little different, so it might be tougher for me." Chambers, who now plays for Phoenix, was selected to this year's West team as a backup forward. Although he is an eight-year NBA veteran, Chambers said fans remember him most for his performance in the Seattle All-Star game. "I'll always cherish that game," Chambers said. "When the crowd gets behind you, you can really get going. For that reason, Akeem has to be the early favorite for the MVP."

The West, which will be coached by the Lakers' Pat Riley for the seventh time in eight years, will have forwards Karl Malone and Alex English and guard Dale Ellis in the starting lineup along with Olajuwon. Jordan will start at guard again for the East along with Isiah Thomas. The East center is Moses Malone and the starting forwards are Charles Barkley and Dominique Wilkins. Len Wilkens, who was Seattle's coach when he led the West in the 1978 and 1980 All-Star games, will coach the East by virtue of leading the Cleveland Cavaliers to the NBA's best record at midseason.

Although none will be starting, Wilkens can call on three Cavaliers on the bench for the East in center Brad Daugherty, forward Larry Nance and guard Mark Price. Ron Harper, Cleveland's leading scorer, was not selected, however.

WEST ALL-STAR — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers, shown in a file photo, will be on the West team in Sunday's NBA All-Star game. He was named as the replacement for injured Laker teammate Magic Johnson.

Other East reserves are center Patrick Ewing and guard Mark Jackson of New York and forwards Kevin McHale of Boston and Terry Cummings of Milwaukee. The West reserves besides Chambers are guard Clyde Drexler and center Kevin Duckworth of Portland, center Mark Eaton and guard John Stockton of Utah, forward James Worthy of the Lakers and forward Chris Mullin of Golden State. Eaton and Duckworth were named as reserves ahead of Abdul-Jabbar.

Wilkens the second coach to lead both conferences

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

Lenny Wilkens will become the second coach to lead both conferences in the All-Star Game when he leads the East at Houston Sunday. Wilkens, now coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers, joins Alex Hannum in that category. Wilkens guided the West to a win in 1979 and a loss in 1980 when he was coach of the Seattle SuperSonics. Hannum led the West twice, in 1958 as coach of the St. Louis Hawks and in 1965 as coach of the San Francisco Warriors. His only win came as coach of the East in 1968, while he was with the Philadelphia 76ers.

Seven players will be making their All-Star debuts Sunday. Point guards Mark Jackson and Mark Price will play for the East and Kevin Duckworth, Mark Eaton, Dale Ellis, Chris Mullin and John Stockton are making their first appearances for the West.

Tom Chambers is an All-Star reserve for the West and the leading scorer for the Phoenix Suns, but his teammates don't lack for firepower. Kevin Johnson, Armon Gilliam and Eddie Johnson all have 40-point games for the Suns, while Chambers' season high is 28.

The All-Star Most Valuable Player has been won by a player from the host city 10 times. They are Ed Macauley of Boston in 1951, Bob Cousy of Boston in 1957, Bob Pettit of St. Louis in 1958 and 1962, Wilt Chamberlain of Philadelphia in 1960, Rick Barry of San Francisco in 1967, Adrian Smith of Cincinnati in 1966, Jerry West of the Los Angeles Lakers in 1972, Tom Chambers of Seattle in 1987 and Michael Jordan of Chicago last year.

There has never been a triple-double in an NBA All-Star Game, although three players have come close.

Oscar Robertson had 23 points, 14 assists and nine rebounds in 1961. Abdul-Jabbar had 17 points, 16 rebounds and nine assists in 1980 and Magic Johnson had 22 assists, 15 points and nine rebounds in 1984.

Sunday's game will be the second NBA All-Star contest played in Texas, following the 1986 game in Dallas. The San Antonio Spurs played host to the 1975 American Basketball Association All-Star Game.

Five former Houston Rockets were on the West team in the old-timers' game. Rick Barry, Elvin Hayes, Rudy Tomjanovich, Calvin Murphy and Mike Newlin are on the West team, which also includes Rockets coach and former University of Houston star Don Chaney. "I'm looking forward to just being in the locker room and hearing all the old war stories," Hayes said.

The West will be coached by Slater Martin, a native of Houston who played in the NBA for 11 seasons and was a seven-time All-Star.

ELECTED — Former Boston Celtic player and coach K.C. Jones was elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame, it was announced Friday.

K.C. Jones picked for hall of fame

By Trudy Vnvn
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — K.C. Jones and Lenny Wilkens, outstanding guards who played and coached against each other, were elected Friday to the Basketball Hall of Fame. They were joined by William "Pop" Gates, 71, who played with the New York Renaissance and other teams during the game's barnstorming years in the 1930s and 1940s. "This is the sort of thing that happens to superstars, all-stars and scorers, and not people who can't shoot," said Jones, who retired last year as coach of the Boston Celtics, for whom he played earlier in his career. For years, he was overshadowed by his college and pro teammate Bill Russell.

At San Francisco (where he and Russell won two NCAA championships) and the pros, my contribution was my brain, not my scoring ability. I just did the blue-collar-type things," Jones said. Wilkens, now coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers, ranks third in the NBA in career assists with 7,211, demurred. "K.C. was a fine player."

Wilkens, a standout at Providence College, averaged 16.5 points and 6.7 assists a game during a 15-year professional career with St. Louis, Seattle, Portland and Cleveland. Before coming to Cleveland two seasons ago, he coached at Portland and Seattle, where his 1979 team won the NBA championship.

He will coach the East Team in Sunday's NBA All-Star game in Houston, an honor Jones had for four straight years. Jones only averaged 7.4 points a game in his nine-year playing career with the Celtics, during which Boston won eight straight NBA championships, but he contributed an average 4.9 assists and could make his presence felt in clutch games. Although Jones, the 18th person selected with the Celtics to be enshrined, was elected the first year he was nominated and Wilkens on the second try, Hall of Fame Director Joe O'Brien said he was shocked at some of the players rejected by the honors committee.

"I can defend the purity of the process, but the basketball fan in me can't believe Earl Monroe or Dave Bing isn't in the Hall of Fame," said O'Brien, who doesn't have a vote.

Prairie View gridders strike

Team members say education ignored

PRAIRIE VIEW, Texas (AP) — Prairie View A&M football players think textbooks should be as important as playbooks so they are going on strike because they feel coach Haney Catchings isn't concerned about their education.

All 55 Prairie View team members voted to boycott all football-related activities, including the approaching spring drills, until Catchings is fired.

About 38 players who met Thursday night said the coach is holding their education hostage to get more football playing time out of them. "He threatens to cut off our financial aid," said Kevin Pierce. Pierce said that instead of giving the players what is due them at the beginning of a semester, Catchings pays monthly, holding that over the players' heads for performance. The coach also controls which players get books, Pierce said. "And last year, some of the guys didn't get their books until mid-term," the player said. "This year, after the last football game, when we had two weeks until finals, he said, 'All right, y'all, now you can go work on your academics.'" The players said 43 of the 55 team members have grade-point averages under 2.0. They claim the had scholastic performance is because they were not given books at the beginning of the semester and because Catchings disregarded a study hall for football players set up several years before. Players said they talked to Catchings and Athletic Director Brutus Jackson about the problems, but neither has offered any relief. Team captain Anthony Wallace said the team had thought about walking about about a year ago. He said he was not familiar with a similar situation at San Jose State in which a basketball team walked out on its coach. Catchings was out of town Friday and not available for comment. Jackson did not return telephone calls to The Associated Press.

Chang out of Volvo tournament

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Chang, the 16-year-old phenom who knocked second-seeded Jimmy Connors out of the Volvo Chicago Tennis tournament, took himself out of the event Friday because of tendonitis in his right leg.

His opponent, Horatio De La Pena of Argentina, advanced to the semifinal round Saturday to meet the winner of the match between John McEnroe and Brad Gilbert. It was the second free pass for De La Pena in the six-day event. He won by default against Aaron Krickstein, who had to withdraw Wednesday due to tendonitis in the right elbow. "I am very sorry to have to leave Chicago," Chang said in an statement issued by tournament officials. "I have been playing well."

Chang had problems with his leg before arriving in Chicago. And, on Thursday night, when he beat Connors, 6-3, 7-6 (7-2), he aggravated the condition. Tim Mayotte, the fourth seed, took a big step toward his third straight Chicago title by overpowering Andres Gomez 6-3, 6-1 in a quarterfinal match. Mayotte, the 11th rated player in the world, needed one hour and three minutes to dispose of Gomez.

High School Roundup

Xavier five nips East for a second time

MIDDLETOWN — The next time East Catholic sees Xavier High, it'll be too soon. Unless it's in a state championship game.

For the second time this year, Xavier High took a one-point verdict from the Eagles, annexing a 55-54 verdict Friday night in All Connecticut Conference play.

East had an opportunity to win it after a Falcon turnover with two seconds left but a 10-foot turnaround jumper by Reid Gorman in the corner missed its mark.

East, 4-4 in the ACC and 8-8 overall, dropped a 45-44 verdict to the Falcons on Jan. 24 at the Eagles' gym. The Eagles, who had shot well from the foul line all year, saw that streak desert them with a 13-for-24 performance.

"It was our worst game from the foul line this year and that hurt us," East Coach Ray Page said.

Xavier, 4-3 in the ACC and 8-9 overall, took a 21-12 lead after one quarter. "We were impatient and turned the ball over," Page said. The Eagles climbed back to within 30-25 at the half, tying it at 40-all after three periods.

"After the first half we played pretty good basketball," Page said.

It was a see-saw fourth quarter with Xavier enjoying from a 2- to 8-point spread. Xavier's Mark LeGouillon made it a 55-52 game with a bucket with a minute left before Pete Lopatka (12 points) tossed in a hoop for East with 34 seconds left.

The Eagles regained possession with two seconds left, but couldn't find the mark.

Gorman had 14 points and Scott Altrui 13 to lead East. The Eagles were without the services of 6-foot-3 center Ted Oliva for most of the game. "He hurt himself in practice (Thursday). He tried to go but was limiting pretty badly after five minutes so I took him out. Not having him didn't help," Page said.

Tim Seeger tried to make up for Oliva's loss and grabbed seven rebounds for East.

Chris Bradley had 14 points and Bari Winner and Anthony Menard 13 apiece for Xavier.

East took the junior varsity game, 70-50. Freshmen Chris Paradise (24) and Rob Penders (21) led the 13-2 young Eagles.

East's next game is its final home game of the season on Tuesday at 5 p.m. when it hosts St. Joseph of Trumbull.

Windham High girls withstand Manchester

WILLIMANTIC — The first time Manchester High girls' basketball team met Windham High this year, the visiting Whippets were a resounding 74-42 winners at Clarke Arena on Jan. 17.

It was a lot tougher Friday night. The Indians, in fact, had the halftime lead before Windham was able to take the upper hand in the second half en route to a 50-40 verdict in CCC East Division play.

The win moves the Whippets to 7-3 in the CCC East, 11-5 overall, while the loss drops the Indians to 4-6, 9-7.

Manchester's next game is Tuesday at home against South Windsor High.

"We cut our turnovers way down (from the first game)," Manchester head coach Joe DePasqua said. "Cheryl Fowler played a good game, she's really coming on. We were able to break their press this time."

Windham had a 10-8 lead after the first quarter, before the Indians took a 26-24 halftime lead. "We were in the one-and-one (bonus) early and that was the difference the first half," explained assistant coach Mike Masse.

The Indians, however, found it more difficult in the second half and were awarded only six free throws. Windham, on the other hand, was able to get to the line the second half.

"There were a couple of crucial calls (that went against us)," DePasqua said, reviewing the third quarter. Windham took a 36-33 lead after three periods and was able to hold on.

"It was nip and tuck. We had them on the ropes but we fouled them and put them on the line (and they converted in the fourth quarter)," DePasqua said. Chief nemesis to the Indians was Colleen Healy, who netted a game-high 26 points to lead Windham. She was 6-for-7 from the foul line in the stretch run.

Fowler had a career-high 14 points to pace Manchester with Tino Stone adding 10. Lisa Carter added a strong defensive game for the Indians, limiting Melanie Moreau to eight points. Moreau had 25 in the first game.

Rick Vaive had a goal and two assists for the Sabres, who have lost four in a row, while Pierre Turgeon, Phil Housley and Jeff Parker added the other Buffalo goals.

Housley opened the scoring for Buffalo.

Kings 7, Capitals 6: At Landover, Md. Luc Robitaille scored his second goal of the game 1:39 into overtime to lift the Los Angeles Kings to a 7-6 victory over the Washington Capitals Friday night.

John Tonelli fired a slap shot from the blueline that was stopped by Washington goalie Clint Malarchuk. But the rebound came free and Robitaille pushed the puck over the goal line for the game-winner.

The victory was the Kings' first in nine road games. They were 0-5-3 away from home entering the game. The Capitals have won just once in their last seven home games, going 1-5-1.

Windham Coach Neal Curland said. "They (Manchester) had their backs to the wall. They had to win this game. They took some very bad shots that went in."

The Whippets committed nine turnovers in the second quarter. Windham, which never led, ran off the first seven points of the third quarter and trimmed the Indian lead to 42-40 on a bucket by Bob Turner, who led the Whippets with 16 points. "Turner is tough," Kinel said.

Then, the Indians went on an 8-0 run capped off by a 10-footer by sophomore Darren Goddard and a layup off a steal by his older brother, Jason, for a 50-40 Indian advantage with three minutes left in the third. The Indians led 52-46 after three quarters. "We've been playing better," Kinel said. "I think we have a little more team unity than we've had in a long time. We really wanted this game. We were a little embarrassed (last time). We had a lot of motivation for this game."

Two Larned free throws cut the Indian lead to 53-51 with 6:33 to go in the game. Another Meggett 3-pointer from downtown Manchester pushed the lead to 64-56 with 4:29 left. Turner missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with 1:44 to play. A pair of free throws could have cut the margin to three.

Pieter VanderHeide added 10 for Windham. Meggett, Goddard and Goldston combined for 63 of Manchester's 70 points: "If we lost, the league (title) is basically over," Kinel said. "This keeps us in contention." Manchester also took the junior varsity contest, 57-58. Darren Goddard led the young Indians with 14 points while Ross added 10.

MANCHESTER (70) — Cory Goldston 4-6-11, Jason Goddard 11-3-16, Willie Burd 0-0-0, Eric Widmer 10-5-20, Meggett 9-3-21, Bob Turner 16-3-9, Darren Goddard 10-2-20, Jeff Ross 0-0-0, Jim Benning 0-0-0, Totals 27-11-27.

MHS TIES FOR 1ST PLACE

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

Back on Jan. 17, Manchester High was soundly beaten by Windham High, 75-55. Now, with Windham leading the CCC East by one game over Manchester heading into Friday night's clash at Clarke Arena, and with feelings of vindication as a prime motivator, the Indians were ready from the opening gun. Behind 24 points apiece from seniors Calvin Meggett and Jason Goddard, the Indians established their tempo early and went on to post an important 70-61 victory. Windham and Manchester are now tied for first in the league, each at 8-2. Manchester, which has won five straight, is 10-5 overall while Windham slips to 9-5. The Indians, who were co-CCC East champs a year ago, will be at South Windsor High Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. The 24 points were a career-high for Meggett, who canned three 3-pointers. Goddard also grabbed 13 rebounds. "Tempo was the key," Manchester Coach Frank Kinel said. "The up tempo was to our advantage. To do that, you have to have some guys play well. And, in the first half, Calvin Meggett and Jason Goddard were just on fire."

Reginald Pinto/Manchester Herald

Effectively shuffling nine players throughout, including freshmen Jeff Ross and Jim Anselmo, Manchester jumped to a 20-17 lead after one quarter behind 10 points from Goddard and seven from Meggett. "We play nine guys," Kinel explained. "I don't even watch the substitutions. There are too many. Walt (assistant coach Adams) does a great job. He basically knows what I want."

With Meggett adding 10 second-quarter points to give him 17 in the first half, the Indians built their lead to 35-27 after he nailed a long 3-pointer with 1:23 left in the half. A 3-pointer by senior Cory Goldston (15 points) four seconds before intermission gave Manchester its largest lead, 42-31, of the night. However, Rob Larned (15 points) cut the Manchester lead at the half to 42-33 with two free throws. "When another team is so up tempo like that, my kids got a little bit caught up in it."

DiRosa is probably right about hiring a 'man' as manager

By Nancy Concelman
Manchester Herald

Mayor Peter P. DiRosa Jr. has said officials hope to "hire a man" by April as new town manager, and given the current set of applicants, a man may be the town's only choice. If Manchester does hire a man, it will not be alone. There are no female town managers in Connecticut, said John Bohenko, secretary of the Connecticut City Managers Association and Plainville town manager. DiRosa said last week that no women have applied for the Manchester position so far even though the town has asked Korn-Perry International, the consulting firm aiding in the search, to seek all types of candidates. "We made it clear we wanted to make sure we touch base with all (applicant) pools, including women," DiRosa said. Korn-Perry officials could not be reached for comment.

Maria Lopes, program director of the International City Managers Association's Talent Referral Service, said a 1987 nationwide survey by ICMA of its 7,063 member municipalities revealed that white men hold most elected or appointed administrative positions except municipal clerk positions. Of the 4,800 municipalities surveyed for manager data, 552 have female town managers. Of the 1,343 surveyed for assistant manager data, 402 have female assistant managers, Lopes said. ICMA's Talent Referral Service tries to place women and minorities in manager positions. Lopes said. Since its inception about three years ago, the service has been in touch with more than 300 employers from the public and private sectors, she said. It is up to the employer to contact the service. "We've had many inquiries," Lopes said. "But the success rate hasn't been as great as we'd like it to be."

The service advisory group and a career support committee at ICMA have created a task force to find out why more minorities and women aren't in manager positions, Lopes said. The task force hopes to release a report in a year or two, she said. One of the barriers facing qualified women and minorities is that there is no federal legislation requiring the recruitment of women and minorities, Lopes said. Despite that, Bohenko said he believes women who currently serve as assistant town managers in Connecticut may become managers in the future. "I'm sure there will be (female town managers) as more women get the experience and are interested in the position," Bohenko said. Karen R. Levine, former administrative assistant in Bolton, became Avon's assistant town manager in August. She agreed to be interviewed for the position. See MANAGER, page 10

President campaigns for budget

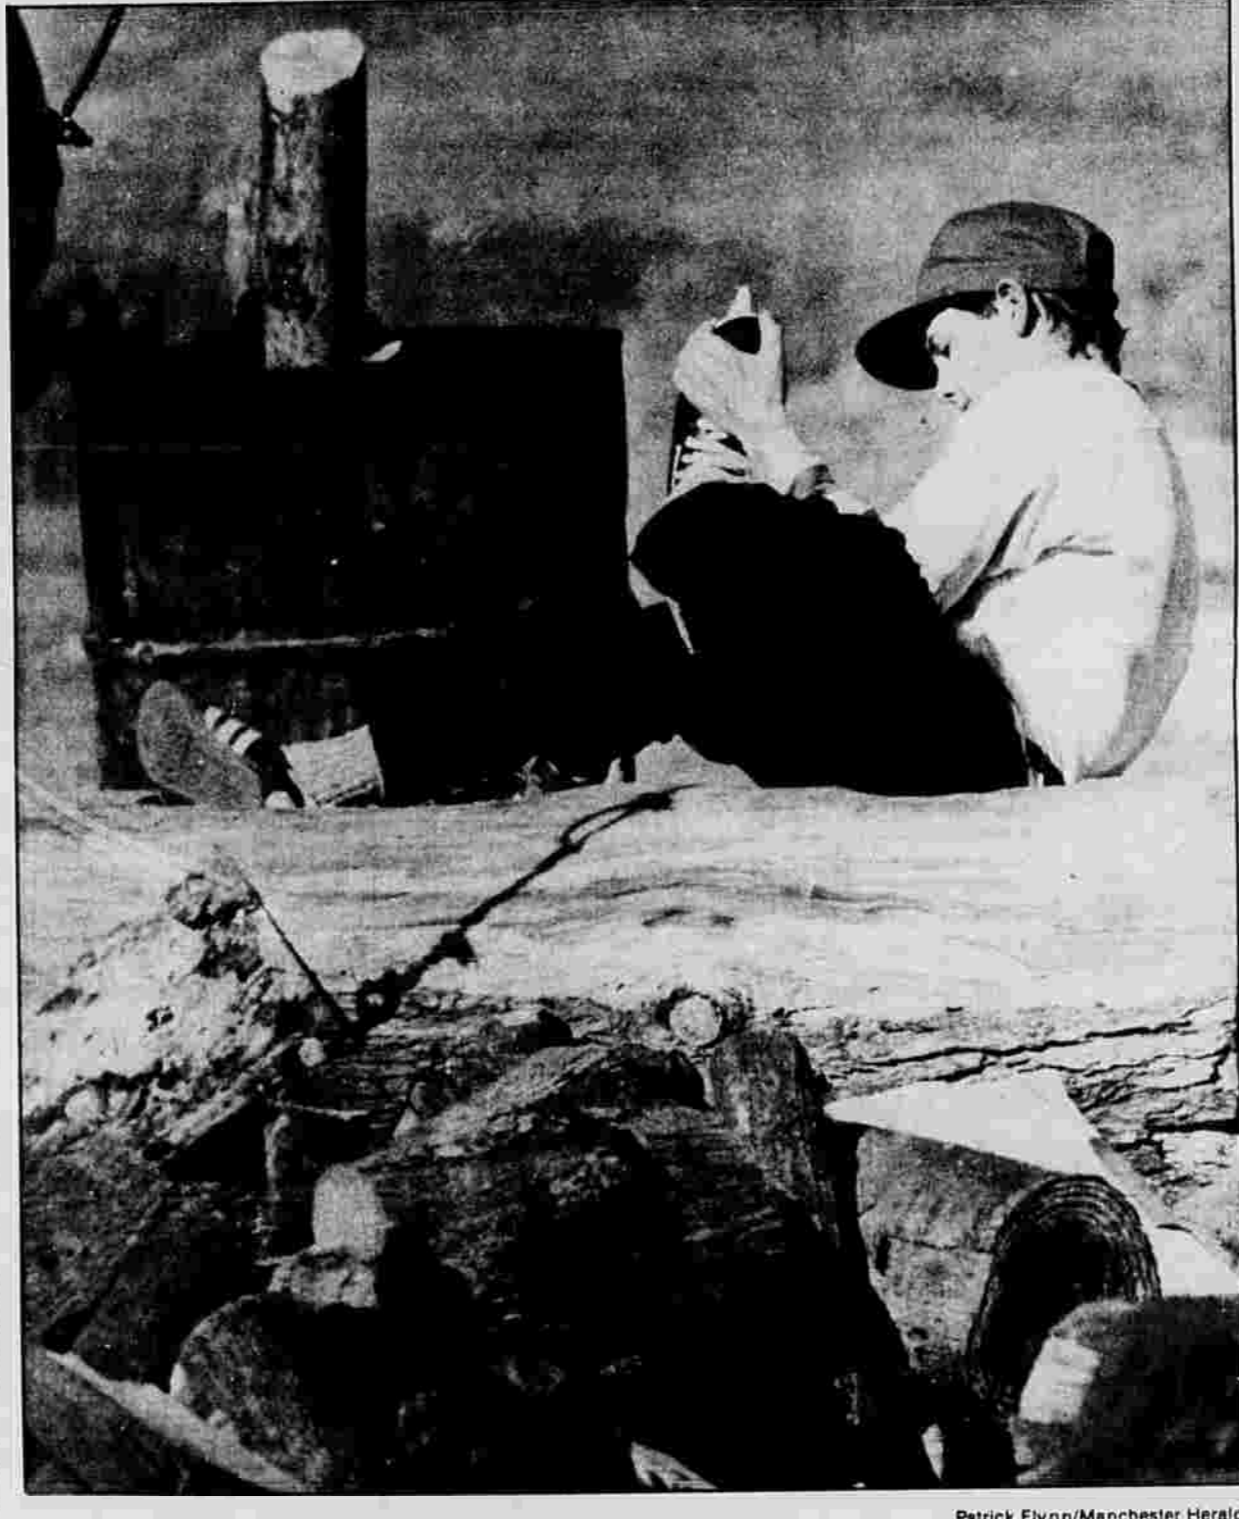

By Merrill Harrison
The Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. — President Bush opened a campaign for public support of his new budget today by returning to the state that propelled him to his White House victory and declared, "our plan is a realistic one. It is a budget plan that will work, but not with business as usual." Bush said in remarks prepared for a speech to the Business and Industry Association of New Hampshire.

Meanwhile, Bush's budget director, Richard G. Darman, prepared for talks with congressional leaders on the $1.16 trillion plan the administration unveiled last week. Bush mixed words of backing for that plan — already encountering Democratic resistance in Congress — with a sentimental thank you to the state that almost one year ago gave him his first victory in the race for the Republican presidential nomination.

"It's no coincidence that my very first stop is here in New Hampshire," said Bush, who came here after a weekend of relaxation at his seacoast retreat in Maine. His speech was the first in what aides said would be a series of talks around the country as the administration presses for agreement with Congress on spending cuts. Bush scored a decisive comeback win in New Hampshire's Feb. 16 primary election that restored momentum that had been halted with a defeat in the Iowa caucuses.

Election of woman bishop a turning point

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Religious leaders say there's no turning back from women in the Episcopal Church hierarchy now that a 2,000-year, all-male bastion has been broken by the Rev. Barbara C. Harris' consecration as a bishop. Presiding Bishop Edmond Lee Browning, spiritual leader of the Episcopal Church, said Harris' consecration Saturday "means that this church is realizing the wholeness of ministry, the totality of ministry, and I'm sure that others will be following Barbara in the days ahead." The Rev. I. Carter Heyward, one of 11 women "illegally" ordained in a 1974 service in Philadelphia that paved the way for the Episcopal Church's approval of women clergy two years later, said Harris' consecration was "a major step" for the denomination. "I think we still have a long way to go," she added. "My experience in the Episcopal Church is that it really does take some pushing, and I doubt that that's over." The ceremony made Harris the first woman bishop in the three denominations that believe in apostolic succession, that church leadership can be traced to the apostles commissioned by Jesus. The denominations are the Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox and Anglican churches. The Episcopal church is one of 28 national branches of the Anglican communion. In her first sermon as a bishop, Harris told 400 worshippers at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul on Sunday to resist the temptation to shut their eyes to issues such as racism and AIDS. "If Jesus had not taken risks, we would not be saved," said Harris, who became a priest in 1960 in Philadelphia. "If the Diocese of Massachusetts had decided to play it safe, I would not be here wearing a broche and a chalice and a pectoral cross." 'Historic day' for Manchester parishioners

Manchester Herald

As the Rev. Barbara Harris knelt Saturday to accept consecration as the first woman bishop in the history of the Anglican and Episcopal churches, three Manchester people sat in the audience of 8,000 and rejoiced. Gladys Stringfellow, her son Thomas Stringfellow Jr., and a friend, Karen Fedorchak, traveled to the Hynes Convention Center in Boston to be part of what Mrs. Stringfellow termed "a historic day." The three-hour ceremony, which was an ecumenical affair with four choirs and representatives of dozens of churches, demonstrated "unity between all people from all religions and all walks of life," said Fedorchak. "I found it very moving." Harris, who is black, divorced, an outspoken advocate of the poor, and is without a conventional divinity school degree, has faced tremendous opposition since Sept. 24. That was when she was nominated to be assistant to Bishop David E. Johnson of Massachusetts. But the fact that she does not fit the traditional mold of Episcopal bishops was part of what has appealed to Mrs. Stringfellow. "She was not chosen for her credentials. She was chosen because of the work she had done in her parish in Philadelphia, working on the streets with the poor," said Stringfellow. Stringfellow, one of only a handful of black women who are active at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, 41 Park St., said she considered Harris' race to be unimportant. See HISTORIC, page 10

North jury goes home; hearing set

By Pete Yosi
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The judge in Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial today sent the jury home and scheduled a hearing for Tuesday on a proposed agreement for additional national security safeguards that could allow the case to go forward.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell indicated he is in no hurry to rush to trial, referring to the administrative stay issued at the Justice Department's request Sunday by Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

The full Supreme Court on Friday is to consider the Justice Department's request to delay the trial. "You're still jurors in this case, of course," Gesell told the panel. "You will be advised as soon as the court knows whether the case is allowed to go forward or not. I regret the inconvenience this will cause you."

Hours after Rehnquist issued the stay, the Justice Department announced it had reached an agreement with independent counsel Lawrence Walsh to seek additional controls from Gesell designed to protect the government against disclosure of sensitive national security material by North, a former White House aide. The Justice Department said it will ask that Rehnquist's stay be vacated immediately if Gesell approves the agreement. Gesell scheduled arguments on the agreement for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday. He told the jurors to "call in tomorrow after 4" to see whether they are to be given a reporting time for court.

North and the independent counsel's office, which is handling the prosecution, then went into a closed session to discuss an undisclosed matter touching on national security. Walsh and the Justice Department had been in conflict since last Wednesday, when the department began seeking an order that would impose light restrictions on classified material that North wanted to present at trial. Gesell rejected the proposal and accepted more moderate controls offered by Walsh, who said he wanted to proceed with the trial immediately. On Thursday, the Justice Department went to court to try to delay the trial.

The department said it had concluded, and that Walsh concurred, that "the trial could not go forward without an additional protective order." Walsh had initially opposed further restrictions on evidence in the trial, but the department had countered with a threat to prevent disclosure. Such a move could make any trial of North impossible because his lawyers argue they could not present an adequate defense. It wasn't known how quickly Gesell would rule on the motion. Since Rehnquist issued the stay, Gesell is expected to send the jurors home until he does rule.

In its statement Sunday, the department said it believes that "the joint motion will resolve any remaining differences" with Walsh regarding the handling of classified information. See NORTH, page 10

'Banya' means relief to stressed-out Soviets

By Andrew Yurkovsky
Manchester Herald

MOSCOW — You could say that the "banya," where Russians go to bathe and socialize, is the father of the Finnish sauna. The sauna is known around the world as the place where Finns and non-Finns go to sweat their pounds and tensions away. The Russian banya, or bathhouse, isn't as well-known as the sauna, but is older, dating back to at least the 12th century. And it was the banya after which the Finns modeled their own sauna. Soviets will be able to read about the history of the banya when a book on the subject is published next year by Anatoly Rubinov. Eighteen years ago, when he wrote his book, the subject wasn't considered serious enough to warrant publication, said Rubinov, a journalist who thinks of himself as the foremost expert on the banya. But the book has aroused sufficient interest in the current days of Glasnost, when much effort is being made to fill in the missing pages of recent and non-recent Russian history. Rubinov, 65, a writer for the weekly newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, is a specialist on life in Moscow. His book on the banya will be called "Sandunovy," a nickname for the Sandunovskite Bathhouse on Neglinnaya Street, which he considers the most beautiful one in Moscow. The banya, as any Russian will tell you, is something uniquely Russian. Bathing may spend See BANYA, page 10
