Park plan includes town tract

By Nancy Conzelman
Manchester Herald

About 27 acres of land in southeast Manchester may become part of a regional recreation area that is proposed for a 418-acre tract lying primarily in Glastonbury.

The Metropolitan District Commission, a regional water authority, is proposing the plan for the land it owns in the two communities. Glastonbury Town Manager Richard S. Borden Jr. said today.

The Manchester portion of the land lies just north of the Glastonbury town line.

Plans for the land aren't definite, but MDC officials hope to hire a land-use planner next month to study the feasibility of the proposal.

MDC will probably wait for the results of the study before discussing its plan with Manchester officials, Borden said.

MDC officials could not be reached for comment this morning.

"The Manchester land would probably be part of the open space area," Borden said. "Some housing could spill into it."

The rest of the land could include horseback riding and hiking trails, tennis courts and a 150-acre, 18-hole golf course, Borden said.

Borden said today he had no estimate on the project cost, but said it would be substantial. Much of the MDC-owned land is south of the Manchester town line, bordering Howe and Keeney streets in Glastonbury.

Key elements of the project are still up in the air, including approvals by local planning commissions and funding, Borden said.

Officials have estimated that the land could contain about 300 housing units, but Glastonbury is not concerned with a loss of tax revenue because the land is marginally taxed now as open watershed land, Borden said.

Borden praised the MDC for its proposal. The recreation area would be similar in value to the West Hartford reservoir area developed by MDC which serves towns in that area, he said.

"MDC is committed to conservation," Borden said. "They really have some very enlightened thinking."

The MDC serves portions of Manchester, East Hartford and other Hartford area towns.

Month trial to resume

Secrets safe, justice rules in lifting stay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist today allowed resumption of Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial after Attorney General Dick Thornburgh dropped efforts to delay the case.

Rehnquist, in a brief order, lifted a stay he had granted the government on Sunday. The Justice Department says adequate safeguards to prevent disclosure of national security secrets at the trial are in place and there no longer is a need to hold up the proceedings.

Thornburgh on Wednesday accepted an order from U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell barring the attorney general from filing affidavits continuously during the trial objecting to the disclosure of classified material that North, a former White House aide, wants to introduce in his defense.

Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh, who is prosecuting North, made it easier for Thornburgh to accept Gesell's order. Walsh devised a plan saying that he will, if necessary, seek an affidavit from the attorney general to prevent the disclosure during the trial of classified information which could harm national security.

Walsh's statement added that he "is prepared to discharge his responsibility" under Gesell's order.

Thornburgh said Walsh's promise "provides the government with the substance of what we have been seeking for the past week."

As he left work, Thornburgh told reporters he was satisfied because "the independent counsel has agreed to be my representative" on all secrecy matters in the trial.

Late Wednesday, Acting Solicitor General William C. Bryson filed papers asking that the stay issued by Rehnquist be lifted.

In light of the district court's order and the report of the independent counsel, the attorney general believes that the concerns that gave rise to the relief from this court have been resolved.

Liberals want to tax income over $100,000

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Heated by the icy reception politicians and consumers have given Gov. William A. O'Neill's proposed utility tax, liberal Democrats say they will propose a tax on income above $100,000.

Democratic Rep. Gene Langlois and Sen. Thompson Rappaport of West Hartford said they would propose the tax at today's meeting of the legislature's Finance Committee.

The committee's agenda is already full of proposals for new or increased taxes that were not included in O'Neill's request last week for $737 million in new taxes to balance his $6.9 billion 1989-90 budget.

The proposed taxes to be raised today include increasing the sales tax to 8 percent, taxing lottery tickets at 7.5 percent; increasing dividends and interest taxes; increasing the real estate conveyance tax; and imposing a tax on commuters.

The income tax — which could raise as much as $500 million per year — is not on the committee's agenda. Langlois said he and Rappaport will try to get the committee to hold a public hearing on the idea.

He would not predict a successful vote.

"Quite frankly, we shouldn't be judged on what happens (today)," because this is an uphill battle," Langlois said.

Rappaport said support for a tax on income above $100,000 has been growing among Democrats since the announcement last week of O'Neill's widely unpopular utility tax proposal.

"I think sentiment is growing within the Democratic caucus and is being expanded by what we are doing today," he said.

Salvation Army losing its battle with critics of collection boxes

By Maureen LeVitt
Manchester Herald

Salvation Army collection boxes have fallen out of favor with some "sophisticated" merchants across the state, but Manchester business owners have no complaints, an army spokesman says.

"The Salvation Army is a very popular organization in Manchester," said Donald W. Potter, general manager of the Adult Rehabilitation Center in Hartford. "It has very good public appeal. The (thrift) store on Broad Street is very popular."

The Salvation Army has reduced the number of collection boxes it has in the Hartford area from 450 five years ago to about 150. Potter says that reduction contributed to a 10 percent drop in sales at the Salvation Army's thrift stores since 1986.

He said many shopping center merchants in other communities have asked that the boxes be removed because they are considered unsightly and not well maintained. The collection boxes will be phased out over the next five years and centralized collection centers will be established in place of them.

"We're not trying to get rid of the boxes; the shopping centers are helping us with that," Potter said.

In towns including Hartford and Wethersfield, where Potter said people consider themselves sophisticated, the boxes have been called unsightly.

"I think shopping centers today are trying to maintain a sophisticated atmosphere, and the boxes are not sophisticated in their minds," Potter said.

There are 14 boxes located in Manchester, including three at DAILY PICKUP — Pedro Velez of Hartford, a Salvation Army employee, bags items from a collection box at the Manchester Parkade while Mark A. Karsky, also of Hartford, loads items onto a collection truck Wednesday.

Hunger strike ends on news of freedom

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More than 100 black detainees at a prison outside Johannesburg today halted their prolonged hunger strike, and lawyers announced that most of them would be freed.

Many of the strikers have been held without charge since June.

More than 20 have been hospitalized, and fears for their health have been growing.

The hunger strike began at Diepkloof Prison on Jan. 23 and has spread to several cities around the country.

The detainees threatened to starve themselves to death unless they were freed or put on trial.

Thoughts

A cursory reading of Matthew 7:11 would give you the impression that if you ask, seek and knock you will get from God anything you wish. However, that would be a false impression. Asking, seeking and knocking are but the beginning of the process of finding God. What you will receive and find is God himself in the person of Jesus. The entrance is to the presence of God, not to a reward or a blessing making the effort of knocking. Jesus is saying to us the divine father wants to give his children good things and the best thing he can give them is love. A manly counsel of the Creator of the Universe. How many earthly parents have gotten this confused and give their children things when they need most of all their time and interest and love and belonging to Jesus.
Jesus came into our world to give us the ultimate spiritual gift that of knowing who our real heavenly parent is. He also gives us the assurance that even though we have left our spiritual home God has not abandoned us but loves and wants us back in the family. However, we need want to be in the family enough to ask, seek and knock. And if we do God gives good things to those who ask. And the best is God's personal care for us.

Town, country club tentatively OK new lease deal

By Alex Grell
Manchester Herald

Negotiators for the town and the Manchester Country Club gave tentative approval Wednesday to a two-year lease agreement for the golf course at the club.

The three town directors negotiating with club representatives left the meeting to confer. When they returned, Director Kenneth Tedford said they were "favorably inclined" to the concept of the proposal.
But Tedford said the town negotiators would refer to the town attorney the question of "first refusal" to operate the course for the town if it remains at 18 holes.
And the town negotiators want the club to put the proposal in writing.

Paul Rossetto, club president and one of the negotiators, said he will submit the proposal in written form as soon as possible. He said he had hoped to have a written version ready on Wednesday night.
But he said John F. Shea Jr., an attorney and one of the club's negotiators, was ill Wednesday and could not prepare a written proposal.
Club negotiators said their concept of "first refusal" while not detailed, involves having the town ask the club to operate the course if it remains at 18 holes after the town has determined what conditions the operator must meet.

Commenting on the possibility of giving the club some kind of favored position in operating the course, Tedford said "I think you've done a good job in maintaining the course."
He said if the club did operate an 18-hole course for the town it would have to include all of the operations for golf-cart rental and a restaurant.
The club's current lease on the course expires in 1991. The town is studying the possibility of adding 18 holes to it as a means of providing more public opportunity for golfing.
At the last negotiation session, town negotiators had suggested the two-year extension at $75,000 a year while the question of adding new holes is being investigated.

Authority rapped for garage talks

By Nancy Concepcion
Manchester Herald

An opponent of the Main Street reconstruction plan has criticized the Parking Authority for conducting "behind the scenes" discussions with a firm that wants to build a $10 million commercial complex on a municipal parking lot.

Dr. Robert H. Fish, a Main Street dentist and head of a Downtown Association to Preserve the Thoroughfare, said Wednesday he believes the authority has been negotiating in private since last summer on the proposal by Pacific Construction Co. of Philadelphia. The company wants to use a town parking lot at

Forest and Main streets for a commercial complex that would include an underground garage. "I think that's a really disgusting situation," Fish said. "Every thing's behind the scenes."
Fish is also president of Heritage Group, the condominium association that plans to file a lawsuit to block the Main Street reconstruction project. The condo association and ADAPT oppose an access road to be used as a bypass during reconstruction because the road and other elements of reconstruction would require the elimination of parking spaces.
Feb. 7 public hearing before the Board of Directors. Fish said ADAPT would fight the proposal for the lot at Main and Forest streets. But he said Wednesday he hopes to meet with the authority.

"We would be interested in talking to the Parking Authority about (the proposal), but they haven't contacted us," he said.
"Of course we're willing to meet with Dr. Fish," Apter said today.
Apter said that the plans for the municipal lot are preliminary.
"There's a lot of problems (with the proposal) to be worked out," Apter said. "Any developer who's interested in spending a million in downtown Manchester must know more about the value of downtown Manchester than we do," Apter said.

Breakfast diners help sick children

By Maureen Leavitt
Manchester Herald

Last winter, two Manchester children with life-threatening diseases and their families enjoyed four days at Walt Disney World in Florida, thanks to a community breakfast sponsored by a local severe organization.
And if enough Manchester residents can take their hearty appetites to the Masonic Temple Sunday morning, the Manchester chapter of Brotherhood in Action hopes to raise enough money to send a child to the breakfast the same dream this year.
The breakfast will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sunday at the temple, 25 E. Center St. Tickets cost $4 for adults and $2 for children if purchased before Sunday. Tickets will be available at the door for 50 cents extra.
Joseph Hachey, chairman of Brotherhood in Action this year, said the money would be used to help children from around the state. Last year, the group specified that the children be chosen from Manchester if possible.
The children are chosen from the University of Connecticut Children's Cancer Program at the University of Connecticut Health Center in Farmington. A doctor from the center must choose children who will be able to physically withstand a trip.
The mother of a Manchester child sponsored last year said her 8-year-old son, along with her husband and two other children, will never forget the experience of going to Florida. Her son suffers from leukemia.
"The woman, who did not want to be identified, said her son felt very special throughout the entire trip.
"I think it made him feel overwhelmed. Everywhere we went they made him feel very special," the mother said. "He didn't feel different. He was just being recognized for being strong." He knew he'd been through a lot."
She said her son's illness takes a toll on her other two children, so

Downtown litigation inevitable

It is unfortunate that the reconstruction of Main Street will be the subject of a lawsuit that will delay the project, but it was inevitable in light of the irreconcilable differences over how the work should be done.

If opponents of the reconstruction plan had decided not to press their case, the dispute would not have ended. It would have gone on interminably.

Every problem that arose in connection with the work (and there were bound to be some) would have produced "we told you so's" from opponents of the current plan.

Every disappointment in the economic and aesthetic results of the job would have prompted rehearsed arguments over how it should have been done.

It would have been better if those with a stake in downtown could have agreed on what is needed to ensure the continued economic viability of the area. But the further that plans progressed, the deeper the split among them grew.

Litigation will probably not resolve all the engineering questions involved, but it probably will settle the question of whether opponents of an access road and extensions into the street of pedestrian walks have legal grounds for their objections.

If the case goes forward, Manchester residents can hope it answers more questions than it raises.

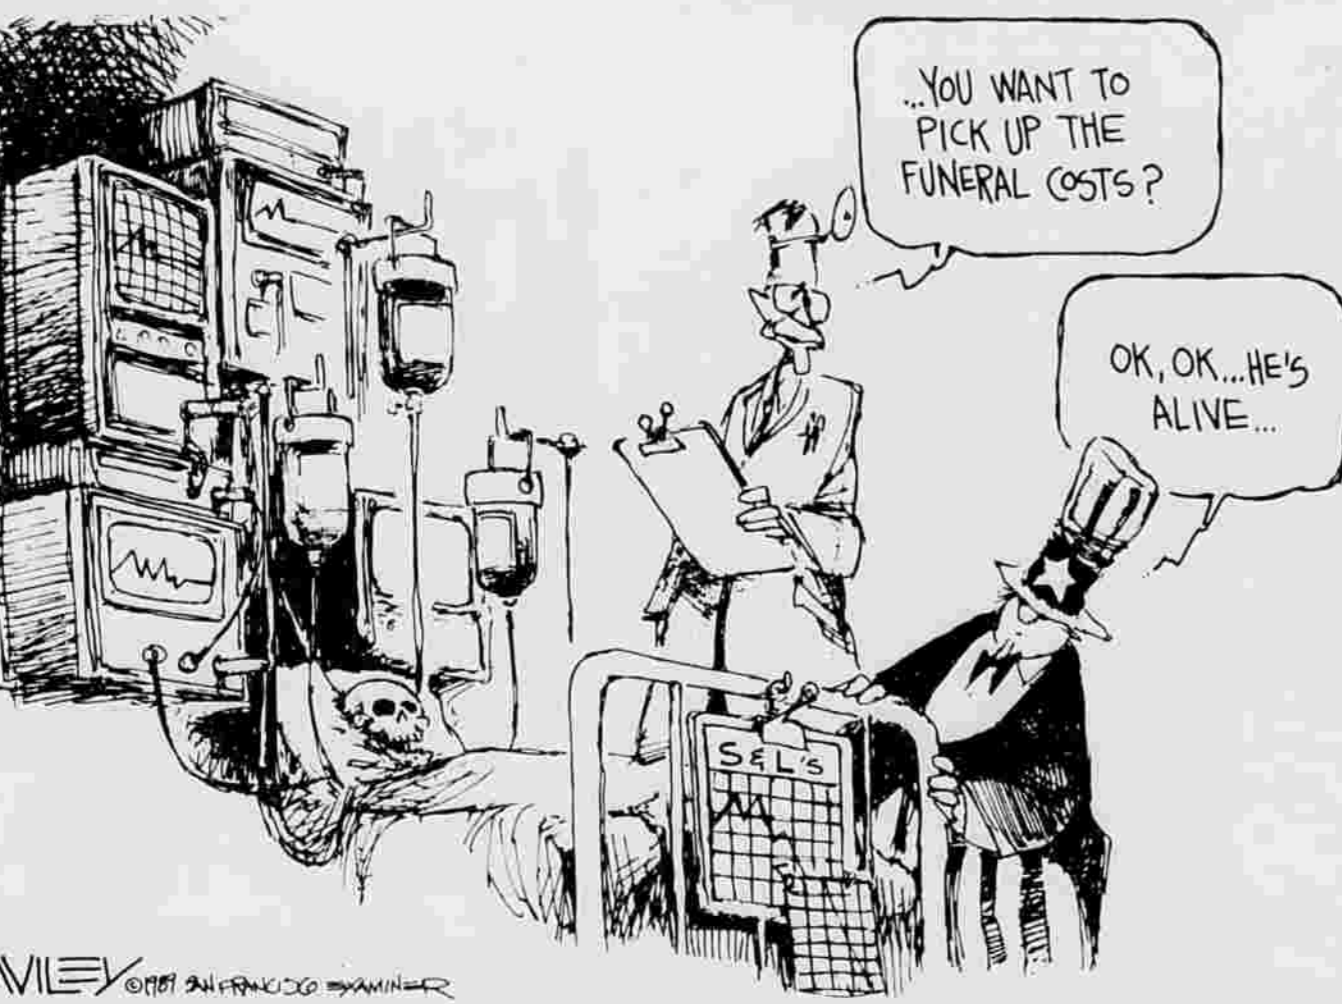

Pilot recycling shows promise

The apparent success of Manchester's pilot program of trash recycling in one section of town holds out promise for an effective town-wide recycling program in the future.

Even though the program is voluntary, 70 to 80 percent of the almost 1,000 householders in the target area have participated, indicating a willingness on the part of people to put up with the nuisance of separating their trash into categories and putting it into different bins.

The key to successful recycling lies in the willingness of citizens to make the effort necessary to make it work without having to be forced to do so.

So far, it appears people do see the necessity for inconveniencing themselves in the interest of solving the problem of saving space in precious landfills.

Workaholics have little choice

Columnist Ellen Goodman just pronounced us Americans a compulsive, competitive bunch of workaholics, more at home with the Puritan ethic than the era of Peace and Love. I'm not sure her observations will have near the impact that columnist Bob Greene's identification of the Yuppies did early in the decade, but she made some good points.

(What would we call this group, Neutric Urban Puritanism? Professionals, or Nuppies, perhaps?)

We don't want to be happy, we want to be better. We don't want to have fun, we want to accomplish. And nowhere is this competition more apparent than in the workplace, she says, where cruise vacations and power lunches have been replaced in the status race by takeout at the desk and beasts of a seven-day work week.

Under this rising star of competitiveness, being tired is a badge of loyalty. Stress is regarded as a company virtue.

I'm not saying Goodman is wrong, we've had a 10-year love affair with compulsive achievement and self-improvement. But I think she overlooked a powerful force in corporate America, one that has as much to do with this syndrome as any mass compulsion for competition: American businesses are turning into

Best possible use for Loomis house

To the Editor:

The open forum held at Coventry High School on uses of the Loomis property brought forth many creative ideas. This house was willed to the Porter Library with no specific stipulations by June Loomis, June assumed that it would be used for the Porter Library. However, long before the Board of Trustees found it difficult, if not impossible, to run the little one-room Porter Library and requested that the Board of Trustees of the Booth & Dimock Memorial Library come to their aid.

Booth & Dimock was in the process of expanding into 11,000 square feet at a cost of the town of Coventry of $1,740,000, plus $450,000 in state and federal money. The Porter Library Board of Trustees promised to convey its interest in the Loomis property, if the referendum for $1,740,000 passed, to expand Booth & Dimock.

Consequently, the referendum was passed and the Loomis house was devoted to the town of Coventry with no stipulations. It is now up to Coventry's Town Council to decide the best possible use for the Loomis house.

One thing was certain. The townspeople, specifically those of Second Congregational Church and the Coventry Grange, requested that the house be preserved and renovated in keeping with the historic character of the area and be used to house some groups that now use the town hall for offices.

One heartless person, evidently unaware of how dear June Loomis and her family have been to Coventry, said, "Sell it!" One notable person suggested using the house for a tourist bureau.

It was clear that he did not know that Town Manager John Ellessor has already applied to the state for a 50 percent matching grant for restoration of the 1876 town-owned brick building on Main Street. The town manager is further exploring a

Fake bolts find way to airline

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — Frequent fliers, take note. The fake-bolt scandal facing the military and the space shuttle has found its way to the friendly skies.

United Airlines bought bolts from the same company that federal investigators say sold dangerously fraudulent fasteners to defense contractors and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The bolts came from Lawrence Engineering and Supply Inc. of Burbank, Calif. A federal grand jury is expected to reveal the results today (Feb. 16) of its investigation into allegations that Lawrence peddled bogus bolts to government contractors. Federal investigators say the company routinely faked certificates indicating aerospace bolts met strict industry standards for strength. The required tests were rarely performed, according to the federal investigators.

We broke the story in 1988 that so-called schlock houses sold millions of substandard bolts to the government. Since then, we have reported on dangerously weak bolts in tanks, trucks, bridges and nuclear power plants. In 1987, we reported that bogus bolts had failed in private and military aircraft.

A purchase order from Lawrence Engineering files, obtained by our associate Stewart Harris, is the first hard evidence showing that Lawrence was doing business with a commercial airline. That order says the company shipped 1,000 bolts to the United maintenance center at San Francisco International Airport on March 30, 1987. United had previously said it had no record of doing business with Lawrence.

When confronted with the purchase order, a United spokesman told us the bolts were installed on pneumatic pressure controls, anti-skid systems and air-conditioning units. However, testing of many bolts revealed no problems, the spokesman said.

Bolt experts told us the tiny bolts sold to United are also commonly used on aircraft instruments and electrical motors. And, the experts warned, a broken bolt could fall into other critical flight components. The bolts were too small to be used on wing or engine attachments.

The shipment to United was during the time when federal investigators say Lawrence routinely falsified results of bolt tests that never took place. Information about the bogus tests comes from Roland Guike and Saverio Goffredo, Lawrence laboratory technicians who talked to Defense Department investigator Mike Kreps. According to an affidavit filed in federal court by the investigators, Lawrence stopped faking the test results in September 1987 after the company was caught by Teledyne Brown Engineering Inc., space shuttle contractor.

Defense investigators allege in that affidavit that many aerospace bolts sold by Lawrence failed strength tests. Martin Marietta Astronautics Group flunked 265 lots of aerospace bolts bought from Lawrence for use on Air Force missiles.

NASA also bought bolts from Lawrence. Testing showed structural defects in those bolts, even though they arrived at NASA with a certificate signed by a Lawrence employee saying they met specifications.

Lawrence also sold bolts to foreign airlines and governments, according to an alert issued by the Government Industry Data Exchange Program. An attorney for Lawrence told us the company has never been informed that its bolts have failed. "If there is any defect, it's in the (quality control) paperwork, not the product."

Lawrence is just one of dozens of bolt companies under investigation by a task force of federal agents from the defense and transportation departments and the Customs Service.

The federal probe began in 1986 when an agent in the Defense Criminal Investigative Service read our column on bogus bolts while he was sitting in his dentist's office waiting to have his teeth cleaned.

Workaholics? Sure, maybe. It's a recognizable psychological phenomenon. But when we consider the American "compulsion" for overtime work, we have to take into account the corporate wolf at the heavily mortgaged door.

These workers are unprotected by unions, and often by choice. They work long hours for the same reason they do just about everything else: They are abundant and good jobs are few, there is little incentive for employers to cooperate with union demands.

Deletion in story misleads readers

To the Editor:

This is to ask about the headline on page 9 of the Saturday, Feb. 11, issue. "Courts won't block life-saving abortion" was deleted from this Associated Press story by any mention of the fact that the attending physicians for the comatose Nancy Kelly have testified that they never even discussed a need for an abortion with Mr. Klein. Rather, he sought out another physician to help him make this claim, and then enlisted a pro-abortion activist to run interference.

The Journal Inquirer carried an article about this tragedy right above an account of a woman who successfully gave birth while in a coma, and then awoke to a family full of joy at her "return" and the safe arrival of the baby.

Mr. Klein, described first as "between third and home plate," and finally as " Jubilant," probably cannot be blamed or held responsible for his actions because of the tremendous burden of stress and grief he bears. But the folks at the Herald are to blame in this instance for seriously misleading the casual reader.

America's place of death shifting to nursing homes

By Daniel Q. Honey
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Americans are increasingly going to nursing homes to die as hospitals discharge terminally ill patients to keep them from running up big bills, thus helping reduce the nation's Medicare costs, according to two reports today.

One study, based on nationwide death statistics, suggests that the trend results largely from new Medicare rules that pay hospitals flat fees for taking care of the elderly. This approach gives them a financial incentive to keep patients' hospital stays as short as possible.

"What has to be said is that hospitals are in a bind because they are being pressured by cost cutting," said Dr. Mark A. Sager, who directed the study.

"Nursing homes are in a bind because nobody wants to pay for nursing home care. Patients are in a bind because they are in a system that does not want to provide continuity of care and health care financing is fragmented," Sager said.

His research showed that the number of elderly Americans dying in nursing homes rose sharply during the 1980s, while fewer died in hospitals.

Sager, a physician at Dean Medical Center in Madison, Wis., said that sending dying people to nursing homes rather than keeping them in hospitals "may be very appropriate and less costly."

"The issue is whether nursing homes can adequately take care of a sicker population than they were seeing a few years ago," he said.

Medicare's new system began in October 1983, paying hospitals flat fees in advance. Hospitals get the same amount for each person with a specific disease, regardless of whether a patient stays in the hospital for a day or a month.

Another report provides evidence that the strategy is saving money.

That study, directed by Dr. Louise B. Russell of Rutgers University, estimated the savings to Medicare from the new payment system and compared Medicare's projections of rising costs with what actually happened.

In 1980, the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, the federal government's branch that pays Medicare hospital bills, predicted that it would be spending about $33 billion by 1990. Instead, it appears the actual expense by then will be $43 billion in 1980 dollars.

The savings will amount to $12 billion in 1980 dollars or $18 billion in 1990 dollars. The researchers said this means the new payment program will be responsible for a 3 percent reduction in the nation's total health care bill, which is expected to be $50 billion in 1990.

Both studies were published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Sager's study found that in 1981, 65 percent of all deaths among people older than 65 occurred in hospitals. By 1985, this had fallen to 61 percent. At the same time, the percentage of deaths in nursing homes rose from 19 percent to 21.5 percent.

Sager said that although he is concerned about whether nursing homes can adequately care for their increased burden of dying patients, there is no sign that quicker hospital discharges have shortened people's lives.

His study, which used mortality data from all 50 states compiled by the National Center for Health Statistics, found that the changes were most pronounced in the Midwest, South and West.

He attributed that in part to the heavy concentration of health maintenance organizations in some states in these regions.

"HMOs save money by reducing rates of hospitalization," said Sager. "Hospitals in high-HMO states have already experienced significant cost cutting" before the Medicare program began. "They were much more threatened by the prospective payment system."

Sager's work showed that between 1983 and 1984, 33 states showed significant declines in hospital deaths, and 33 had increases in nursing home deaths.

Sea lions moved to save fish

SEATTLE (AP) — Wildlife agents who trapped two sea lions in a floating cage planned to release the mammals on the southwest Washington coast and hope they don't swim right back for the easy pickings of fish at a spawning ladder.

If the ploy works, it'll be a first. So far, protective nets, tape recordings of killer whales, firecrackers and foot-tasting chemicals have all proved powerless against the voracious California sea lions.

For five years, sea lions have been hanging out at the Ballard Locks, a few miles north of downtown Seattle, wolfing down the steelhead and salmon that use a fish ladder to get from Puget Sound to Lake Washington and the spawning streams beyond.

Some local fishing advocates suggest the 20 or so beasts be shot, but they are protected by federal law.

According to federal agents, one of the two sea lions captured Wednesday, known as Blue Eye because of a cataract, has been a problem at the locks for three years.

The plan was to tranquilize the sea lions, attach radio transmitters to them and transport them by truck on a trip of five hours or more to the coast for release today off the Long Beach Peninsula, 200 miles southwest of Seattle.

Bob DeLong, a marine mammal biologist with the National Marine Fisheries Service, admitted that scientists have no idea whether "Operation Goodbye" will work. He conceded that Blue Eye certainly knows the way back.

"He's come back at least three years in a row from California and Mexico and if he wants to come back, he'll return," DeLong said, adding that he could probably make the trip in two days if he hurried.

Wildlife officials said they eventually hope to capture at least a half dozen animals and haul them to the peninsula, then see if they return.

If they don't, the rest of the problem animals that can be caught will be moved.

Wednesday's operation was observed by Ben Deeblich, who has protested some of the anti-sea lion actions in the past but gave qualified support to the removal effort.

Deeblich said a primary concern was the drugging of the sea lions, which he said could kill the animals.

Deeblich said long-term solutions to the problem of the hungry sea lions would include modifying the approach the fish have to make to the fish ladder, and increasing the number of fish in the watershed. However, that could be difficult at the rate the steelhead are being killed by the lions.

Daube plugs plan to merge colleges

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

The president of Manchester Community College today plugged a controversial college merger plan as state legislators listened.

Jonathan M. Daube, told Manchester-area legislators that the proposal to merge technical colleges with community colleges could benefit both parties even though it has attracted fierce opposition from some technical school students and administrators.

The plan has been approved by the state Board of Governors for Higher Education, but still must be passed by the General Assembly.

"I support the basic premise of what's happening and the fine print," Daube said during a breakfast for legislators at the college.

Daube said the benefits of the plan must be explained to opponents. He said that could pose a problem because rumors spread faster than truth.

Combining community and technical colleges is the norm in other states. Daube said. He has said that system worked well when he was president of Berkshire Community College in Pittsfield, Mass.

Rep. John W. Thompson, D-Manchester, said after the breakfast that Daube's support of the merger may influence his vote.

"I guess I'm leaning toward a comprehensive college (system)," he said. "It's reassuring the college would welcome it."

A private consulting firm recommended the merger in December. The report criticized the state's technical colleges for failing in their mission at a time when state industries face a shortage of skilled workers.

The study said a merger would allow the state's two-year colleges to operate more efficiently, resolve more students and end "turf battles" between community and technical colleges.

Daube, Gall A. Dunnowicz, associate dean of students, and Mary Ann Bianchi, who directs the college's Women in Transition program, spent most of the hour-long breakfast telling legislators about the college. Its students and programs.

Dunnowicz talked about who comes to the college, while Bianchi gave an overview of her program and the Men in Transition program. Those programs offer guidance and advice to men and women who feel intimidated about coming to the college.

Daube said such meetings are held occasionally to update legislators on what is happening at the time. He said it is important since public education is one of the "creatures" of the legislature.

"It's important for legislators to get a sense of what's going on," he said.

North Taxes AIDS

North is accused of shredding evidence and lying to Congress to cover up the Reagan administration's attempt to help the Nicaraguan Contras rebels during a period in which Congress had banned direct U.S. aid.

In a preview of their defense, North's lawyers have said President Reagan and other top officials created that the efforts be kept secret.

The Justice Department on Feb. 8 sought a court order that would have barred North from disclosing any classified material without a jury ruling that it is admissible and only when there was no objection by the government.

Gesell rejected the request and last Thursday, the same day a jury was chosen in the case, the Justice Department began seeking to delay the trial.

Walsh's statement said the independent counsel will notify Thornburgh if evidence in any of eight categories is to be introduced.

Those categories include information identifying undercover CIA officers, or revealing locations of CIA stations and U.S. operations, foreign-born or government officials as well as information identifying by name or description foreigners who cooperate with the CIA.

Walsh said that if the attorney general objects to release of information, he will ask the court to take appropriate action.

Walsh also said he will object "to any classified information not previously" designated by North as being part of the evidence he plans to introduce at trial.

North faces 12 criminal charges. He is accused of concealing from Congress in 1985 and 1986 his efforts on behalf of the Nicaraguan Contras and of covering up from the attorney general the National Security Council's role in diverting money from the Iran arms sales to the Contras.

North also is accused of illegally accepting a $12,800 security system at his home from co-defendant Richard Secord, converting to his own use at least $50,000 in the CIA's funds, and Contra leader Adolfo Calero and conspiring to defraud the Treasury of tax revenue in connection with the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, and the Rev. Allan Boesak, who has fasted since Monday in solidarity with the hunger strikers.

Ms. Satchwell said the decision to halt the strike applied only to Diepkloof Prison. There was no immediate word whether a similar step would be taken by the 105 hunger strikers at St. Albans prison in Port Elizabeth, the other major center of the strike.

Spent fund on schools, leaders say

HARTFORD (AP) — The leaders of the Legislature's Public Safety Committee suggested today that unclaimed lottery prizes — which totaled $6 million last year — be shifted into the state's education budget.

State Sen. Marie A. Herbst, D-Vernon, after Rep. Larry Anastasia, D-Norwalk, said the $5.6 million now in the unclaimed fund could be shifted to special education programs and Equalized Cost Sharing grants, the portion of the education budget that goes straight to local school districts.

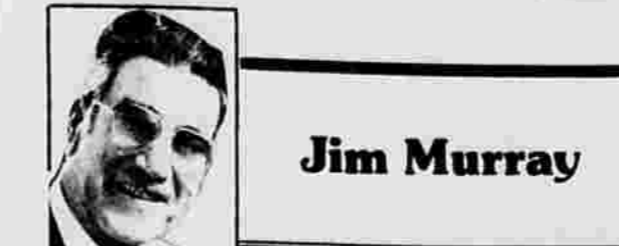

Gov. William A. O'Neill, in his proposed 1989-90 budget, allocated $21.5 million for the ECLS fund than local education leaders had expected.

The unclaimed money is currently given back to lottery players in the form of higher prizes for instant lottery games. In past years, the money has not been used to subsidize free tickets.

Harigan, a spokesman for the Division of Special Revenue, which oversees the lottery, said the agency had no immediate response to the proposal.

From 1986 to 1988, $18 million in lottery prizes went unclaimed, and $15.9 million was put back into lottery games, according to a memo from the Division of Special Revenue. The unclaimed fund now totals $5.6 million, the memo said.

Hospital sets conference on AIDS, women

A conference on the various roles of women and how the issue of AIDS relates to women will be held at Manchester Memorial Hospital on March 11.

Some other topics for the conference will be:

- Women's self-esteem, the quest for intimacy, the food-mood connection, job sharing, managing body messages and infertility.

Nurse Sue Cavaliere, an epidemiologist, will discuss the history of AIDS, the most current research on modes of transmission, and how to avoid infection.

She also will discuss the impact of AIDS on women, and how women can help themselves, their friends and their children.

A spokesman for the San Francisco AIDS Foundation expressed ambivalence about the venue.

"We find it a troubling case because it places the entire burden of safe sex on one individual and not the two," said the spokesman, Steven Petrov.

"It underscores for us again the need for everyone who engages in sexual activity to take responsibility for themselves as well as for their partners."

Attorneys in the Hudson case, who are under a gag order, would not comment on any aspect of the verdict, including the judgment will be apportioned of the defendants will appeal as expected.

Matmen shooting for state titles

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

For local wrestlers, Friday and Saturday marks the culmination of a season's hard work — the class state wrestling championships.

Manchester High (16-4-1), which set a single-season school record for wins, will participate in the Class LL Meet at East Hartford High. Competition begins at 4 p.m. on Friday and continues at 10 a.m. on Saturday.

The top three in each weight class will advance to the State Open at Glastonbury High School on Saturday, Feb. 25.

Several of the Indians' fine grapplers have solid chances of placing high and, thus advancing to the Open.

Both East Catholic (5-14) and Cheney Tech (1-24), which experienced difficult campaigns mainly due to lack of numbers, will compete in the Class M meet at Ferris High in Milford, also beginning Friday.

Seven Indians are seeded in the top eight in the Double L Meet.

Junior Walter Lee (112), who compiled a record of 17-4, is seeded sixth while Junior Corey Craft (118), 14-3-1 during the season, is seeded fifth.

Manchester Coach Barry Bernstein said, "The top eight (seeds) is key in terms of being in a good position. All of them have a good chance of placing in the top four."

Junior Scott Schilling (140), who was 17-4, is seeded sixth. Junior Aaron Dixon (152), who had a fine 20-1 record, is the highest Manchester seed at No. 2. Senior Ray Angle (189), who was 18-3, is seeded fourth while Junior heavyweight George Lata, who compiled a 17-4 mark, is seeded sixth.

"I think they're all set up in good position," Manchester Coach Barry Bernstein said. "There are no top eight (seeds) is key in terms of being in a good position. All of them have a good chance of placing in the top four."

Topping the list of Eagle representatives will be senior co-captain Jeremy Palmer (135), who compiled a 14-4-1 record. Palmer placed third in the 1987-88 season, when he was 18-3. Junior co-captain Mark McConnell (160), who missed most of the year due to injury and has wrestled since the beginning of the season, is set to put forth his best effort. McConnell was 5-0 before last season.

Senior Ed Baronecni (152), who has "come back later," according to Coach Santos Corpus, should also fare well. Baronecni was 18-8-1 Junior heavyweight Todd Saucer, who has wrestled sparingly with a 2-0 mark, is a dark horse Corpus believes.

"They should do pretty well," Corpus said. "Cheney Tech will be led by senior Todd Rose (171), who was 12-3 during the season and capped the Charter Oak Conference championship last

Whalers trying to keep it close in division race

TORONTO (AP) — The Hartford Whalers are trying at the back door.

"We're in a tight race in our division," veteran forward Paul MacDermid said. "There are our teams all within 10 points and any one of us could finish second or fifth and right out of the playoffs. We want to play well enough to put pressure on the teams in front of us."

MacDermid had a goal and two assists Wednesday night as the Whalers beat the Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2 for their third consecutive victory. The Whalers, fourth in the Adams Division, lead Quebec by four points. They have three games in hand.

"We watched the interviews after one of Boston's games and all they talked about was their battle with Buffalo," said MacDermid, returning to action sooner than expected after spraining a ligament in his right knee Feb. 4.

MacDermid's first assist came in the third period when he sneaked in from behind to give the Whalers a 2-1 lead. The Whalers got a second goal in the first round of the playoffs.

Harford trail Boston, a 7-3 winner late Wednesday night over the Los Angeles Kings, by seven points.

Kevin Dineen, Ray Ferraro and Dave Tippett, who scored into an empty net with 18 seconds left, also had goals for the Whalers in the first game of a four-game road trip. Gooker and Sidorychewicz made 26 saves for the goaltending decision. Larry Pleau coached his 200th NHL game.

Sidorychewicz got a big assist late in the game from Dean Evanson, who yanked the puck out of the crease after an Ed Olyczek shot hit off of the Whaler goalie and Brent Pettersen's face, before being cleared.

"I just tried to knock it down the ice," Evanson said. "I don't know how it got out with so many people jamming the net."

"We played solid defensively and got good goaltending," Dineen said. "With Ronnie (Francis Brockie) and Sylvain (Turgeon, dislocated shoulder) injured, we're missing a lot of offense, so we have to win our games with good defense."

Harford continues its road trip Saturday night in Minnesota against the North Stars before taking on the Jets Sunday night in Winnipeg.

Dane Marois and Mark Osborne scored for the Leafs. Alan Bester made 35 saves.

Toronto slid further from playoff contention. Last in the Norris, the Leafs now are eight points behind Minnesota and Chicago, who share third spot. As well, the Leafs share last place in overall standings with the New York Islanders at 41 points each.

"The players want to win as badly as anybody would," coach George Armstrong said. "But maybe we just wish to win and don't really want it badly enough sometimes."

"We have a shallow wish to win instead of a deeper wish to win."

At least the Leafs were in this one to a greater extent than the 8-1 loss they suffered Monday.

"We weren't happy with that game in New Jersey," right winger Gary Leeman said. "It was our rock bottom."

"We came back with a good effort but, you know, there's no answer for losing. We just have to go on and try to win."

Toronto has scored fewer goals — 165 in 57 games or only 2.9 a game — than any other NHL team.

"We're going to get some tough times," Olyczek said. "I'm not scoring many goals and when you're not scoring you're not going to win any games."

BATTLE — UConn's Willie McCloid, right, battles Seton Hall's Ramon Ramos for the basketball in their Big East clash Wednesday night at the Civic Center. The No. 12 ranked Pirates prevailed, 76-69.

Two dissidents begin church hunger strike

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Dissident parishioners at a Polish Catholic Church here, began a hunger strike to finally force church authorities to sit down with them and discuss their concerns.

"I hope we have some good news today," Halina Chmiel said Wednesday night as she left St. Michael of the Archangel Church, where two of the dissidents were locked in a confessional, vowing not to eat.

Richard Debski, 32, of Bridgeport, and Jan Sawko, 63, of Trumbull, entered the 7-by-7 confessional at 8 p.m. Wednesday after an emotional prayer service attended by about 200 dissident parishioners. The confessional was stocked with blankets, extra clothing, plastic buckets, jugs of spring water, a Polish Bible and Mass book and packs of cigarettes.

Debski vowed he and Sawko would remain there and consume nothing "until we have some communication with the bishop."

About 100 dissident parishioners, angered by the removal of a popular associate pastor in December, have occupied the church in shifts since Saturday. For Wednesday's prayer service, their numbers swelled to 200.

Among the hymns they sang at the service was one with the words: "Please listen to Jesus, how we beg you. Please make a miracle..."

Debski and Sawko were hugged by dozens of faithful supporters as they entered the confessional. "The whole world is going to know how the Catholic Church reacts to a hunger strike," said Henry Chmiel, one of the leaders of the dissidents.

He said they hoped to get a priest from another parish to get the two hunger strikers communion on Thursday.

The dissident parishioners, who haven't disrupted church services, are vowing to continue their protest until Bridgeport Bishop Edward Egan agrees to meet with them to discuss their demands. They want the Rev. Roman Palaszewski, who spent three years at St. Michael's as an associate pastor, reassigned to their church and want the present pastor, the Rev. John Bamboel, removed.

Bank robber nabbed after TV told story

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A convicted bank robber and cop shooter has been ordered back to Connecticut and probable reincarceration a week after NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" told his story.

Jean-Marie Gagnon, 35, a native of Montreal, waived Wednesday a possibility to explain his case at a hearing. Assistant Federal Defender Suzanne Laban who represented him before U.S. Magistrate Esther Mix said, "I don't believe that would be productive."

Gagnon had escaped in August 1985 while being transferred from Hartford, Conn. to a prison in Walpole, Mass. He was serving a 35- to 54-year term for bank robbery and attempted murder from a 1977 robbery in Springfield, Mass., in which a police officer was shot.

In Canada he was known as an expert in kick-boxing and was suspected of having extensive criminal involvement in armed robberies and illegal French Canadian separatist activities.

After last Wednesday's airing of "Unsolved Mysteries" on television authorities said they were tipped that a man answering Gagnon's description was living in Buford, Ga. The tipster was Gagnon's landlady there. Her name was not released.

1986, when a state of emergency took effect that allowed the government to detain people without charge.

The six-member church delegation included Anglican Archdeacon Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, and the Rev. Allan Boesak, who has fasted since Monday in solidarity with the hunger strikers.

Ms. Satchwell said the decision to halt the strike applied only to Diepkloof Prison. There was no immediate word whether a similar step would be taken by the 105 hunger strikers at St. Albans prison in Port Elizabeth, the other major center of the strike.

Attorneys for the estate attempted to portray Christian as a gigolo whose relationship with Hudson had ended when the actor learned he had the disease. They said repeated medical tests showed that Christian had not been infected by the AIDS virus. Christian's attorney pointed to sentimental love letters from Hudson to buttress the claim that their was a serious affair of the heart.

"I love you, my baby," said one of the missives.

"I can't explain it," he says. "At first, it's a rush. The wind blowing in your face, the sound, the people cheering. Then you start to figure out you can improve. Then, speed becomes your life."

"It's an addiction. There's no feeling like coming back after a record run, no feeling like in the world, and having the stands cheering. 'Ed-die!'"

Olympians the difference as Pirates rap Huskies

HARTFORD — This may not have been a game the University of Connecticut Huskies should have won.

But, it certainly was one which they could have won.

In perhaps their finest outing of the season, in terms of intensity and desire, the Huskies fell short to 12th-ranked Seton Hall, 72-69.

It was Gaze who drained a running foul-line jumper with 14 seconds left which deflated the Huskies, who had scrambled back from a 10-point halftime deficit (38-28).

Gaze drilled six of eight 3-point attempts and was 8-for-12 overall for the game.

A desperation 3-pointer by freshman Chris Smith with three seconds left rimmed the basket and fell out.

Seton Hall was a sizzling 61 percent (25-for-41 from the floor). UConn slips into eighth place in the Big East at 4-7 and is 13-8 overall. Second-place Seton Hall moves to 8-4 in the conference and 21-4 overall.

Down the stretch, UConn Coach Jim Calhoun went with lineup of Smith (14 points, seven assists), sophomore John Gwynn, freshman Rod Sellers (seven rebounds) sophomore Murray Williams (14 points) and senior Willie McCloid.

Senior Phil Gamble (1-for-12) and Junior Tim George (four-for-12) were the only players to be in the game.
