Bolton board OKs question on charter

By Andrew J. Davis
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The Board of Selectmen agreed Tuesday to approve the language of a single referendum question on proposed changes in the Town Charter despite the objections of Selectman Michael A. Ziska.

In a related matter, the Republican Town Committee voted Tuesday not to take a stand on the proposed charter changes.

The selectmen voted 3-2 last month to present one question to voters. Ziska, a Democrat, voted against the language of the single question because he had supported posing several questions on the charter changes.

Ziska said the selectmen were split 2-1 in support for splitting the charter questions.

In the 3-1 vote Tuesday, Republican Selectmen Carl A. Preuss, Douglas T. Cheney and Lawrence A. Converse III voted for approving the language of the question. Democratic First Selectman Sandra W. Pioreg was absent.

Hostages affected by book

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An Iranian newspaper said today the book in diplomatic ties between Britain and Iran would adversely affect the fate of British hostages in Lebanon.

Another Iranian newspaper said Tehran must cut economic ties with Britain and threaten other Western nations with the same action unless they suppress Salman Rushdie's new novel, "The Satanic Verses."

According to a British news report, representatives in Iran's Parliament already are considering a bill that would halt trade with Britain. The domestic news agency, Press Association, quoted unidentified Iranian sources in London for its report.

The Iranian reports were carried by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia.

Kayhan International said of the Rushdie controversy: "The event will leave its negative impact on the fate of the British hostages in Lebanon."

There are three Britons among the 15 foreigners held hostage in Lebanon: Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, 49; journalist John McCarthy, 32; and Brian Keenan, 38, an English-language teacher at the American University of Beirut. All are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Muslims.

There are nine American hostages, including Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985 and has been held longer than any hostage.

Tehran's Farsi-language Abrar called for an end to economic ties with Britain just one day after Iran announced the severing of diplomatic relations.

Keyhan International and Abrar both warned that Iran's relations with other Western nations may be cut because of these countries' support of Britain and their withdrawal of envoys from Tehran.

Iran in 1987 imported $528 million in goods from Britain. Iran's exports to Britain that year totaled $21 million.

Britain's 11 European Economic Community partners, as well as Canada, Norway and Sweden, recalled their diplomats from Iran after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered Muslims on Feb. 14 to seek out and kill Rushdie for "The Satanic Verses," which some say blasphemes Islam.

Only the Swedish envoys have returned to Tehran.

A trade ban would prevent European nations from winning lucrative contracts to help Iran's reconstruction following its eight-year war with Iraq. The cost of rebuilding has been estimated at up to $50 billion.

Rushdie, a naturalized Briton born to a Muslim family in India, has been in hiding since Feb. 14, and Iranian clerics offered a $5.2 million bounty for his head.

Muslims say "The Satanic Verses" insults Islam in part by suggesting the prophet Mohammed wrote the Koran rather than receiving it directly from God.

ON THE BEACH — Coast Guardsmen in lower left are dwarfed by the 7,887-ton sugar barge Jonathon which ran aground Tuesday at Gateway National Park in New Jersey. The barge was en route from Yonkers, New York, to West Palm Beach, Fla., when 10-foot waves tore it from a tug and rammed it ashore.

Temperatures plunge in East; South might get snow today

By The Associated Press

Rain and snow dampened the Eastern seaboard from Florida to Maryland early today and cold northerly winds created snow drifts up to six feet deep in Minnesota.

A mixture of rain, sleet and snow extended from Maryland to South Carolina, while light rain was falling in southeastern Georgia and the Florida Peninsula.

A winter storm warning was in effect today for the northern coast and midlands of South Carolina, and extended to this evening for central and northern coastal areas of North Carolina.

A gale warning was in effect for the coastal areas of Virginia and North Carolina, with a coastal flood warning posted for the Outer Banks of North Carolina.

A cold front along the nation's northern tier was bringing freezing rain to northeastern North Dakota. An advisory for freezing rain and blowing snow was in effect for northwestern Minnesota, where some highways were closed today for snow. A storm was bringing showers to northern and central California and producing snow at higher elevations in the Sierra Nevada range and in the Lake Tahoe area of Nevada.

Clear skies in the Great Lakes and the Northeast allowed temperatures to plunge. Early morning temperatures were mainly in single digits and the teens, with subzero readings in northern Michigan, upstate New York and northern New England.

Today's forecast called for rain in South Carolina, northeast Georgia and southern Florida. Snow was predicted for much of North Carolina into south central and eastern Virginia. Rain also was forecast to extend from the central and northern Pacific Coast to western portions of Montana and Wyoming and northwest Utah.

Highs were expected to be in the 20s from the northern Great Lakes to New England; the 30s from the upper Mississippi Valley through the Ohio Valley to the Middle Atlantic states; the 60s and 70s from the southern half of California through the Four Corners region to the central and southern Plains and the Texas Gulf Coast; and in southern Florida, and the 80s to around 90 degrees in Arizona and southern Nevada. Highs were forecast to be in the 40s and 50s elsewhere.

Weissacker, 78, of Munich, was named for initiating dialogue between the disciplines of science and religion and for research into links between physics, cosmology and theology.

MacLeod said in a statement he would use half of the money for direct action against hunger and the other half for work for peace.

Weissacker, a Protestant layman and the brother of West German President Richard von Weizsaecker, said his share would go to deepening relationships between science and faith.

The winners were announced at a news conference at the Church Center for the United Nations by John Templeton, American investment counselor and financier, who founded the prize in 1972.

Top prize in religion shared by 2 scholars

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. George MacLeod, an innovative Scottish churchman, and West German physicist Carl Friedrich von Weizsaecker today were named winners of the 1988 Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion.

The prize, amounting this year to $435,000, is the world's biggest and is deliberately kept larger than Nobel prizes in the sciences and literature.

This is the first time in the award's 16 years that it has been divided between two winners, a result of rankings by an international panel of judges, a spokesman said.

MacLeod, 92, of Edinburgh, was chosen for his founding of the famed Iona Community, an ecumenical center of prayer, peacemaking and work that has influenced church life in many countries.

MacLeod said in a statement he would use half of the money for direct action against hunger and the other half for work for peace.

Weissacker, a Protestant layman and the brother of West German President Richard von Weizsaecker, said his share would go to deepening relationships between science and faith.

Chinese soldiers seize protesters in Tibetan capital

CHENGDU, China (AP) — Police seized people from their homes in the Tibetan capital of Lhasa today as troops converged on the city to enforce martial law after three days of anti-Chinese rioting, witnesses said.

Foreigners were given a day to leave the remote southern city.

An Australian traveler told of security forces in Lhasa pulling Tibetans out of their homes.

"One or two people were screaming really frantically as they were being taken away into a truck," he said. "They would pick up a couple people, drive off with a half dozen militia holding them down, then come back."

The Australian, speaking by telephone, said he saw police leading away another group of 12 to 14 youths, some of whom looked as young as nine.

An American tourist said thousands of soldiers had occupied the old section of the city, where Tibetans protesting Chinese rule began rioting on Sunday, stoning police and building bonfires of goods looted from Chinese-owned stores.

At midnight Tuesday, trucks with loudspeakers began announcing that the city was under martial law and that Tibetans should stay indoors.

Dozens of trucks packed with soldiers later entered the city, another foreign traveler said.

Chinese authorities announced martial law in Lhasa on Tuesday and said the entire city would be "cordoned off." Anyone "who defies martial law or instigates others to do so will be severely punished," the official Xinhua News Agency reported.

It was the first time China has publicly imposed martial law anywhere since the chaotic 1966-76 Cultural Revolution and marked a sharp escalation in the battle against Tibetan protesters, who demand freedom from China and the return of their spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama.

Troops were not deployed in three previous eruptions of violence over the past 18 months that claimed the lives of about 40 Tibetans and police.

Official reports have put the death toll in the latest violence at 12, although Tibetans say far more have died.

One American said that after martial law was declared, "the Tibetans who'd been marching around were still angry. They felt frustrated. Others were scared. I saw grown men bursting into tears."

Doje Cering, head of the Tibet Autonomous Government, was quoted on national radio today as saying separatists had taken China's restrained stance toward past demonstrations as a sign of weakness.

"Now is the time for a radical solution. If we don't adopt that now, it will seriously influence our social stability."

Travelers said police entered one hotel at 2:30 a.m. and another an hour later and announced that all foreigners must leave Lhasa by noon Thursday. About 80 foreigners were believed to be in the city.

"It's basically a choice between heading for the Nepal border and flying to Chengdu," the provincial capital of Sichuan, one traveler said. "But they won't let us out to go to the bank or prepare."

One American traveler said most of the Tibetans wounded in the clashes with police have been hiding in their homes. "It's presumed that anybody who got shot must be guilty," he said.

While he spoke, he said he was watching a truck carrying police pull up in front of a home down the street from his hotel. "They just put a Tibetan on the truck."

He and another American said some Tibetans were walking or bicycling on the streets this morning, but far fewer than normal.

Police occasionally ran or walked by, peering in buildings. Some wore riot helmets and carried clubs, he said.

All foreigners spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisal.

It was 3a5n850 whether the expulsion order applied to three Americans and one Canadian who teach in Lhasa, or to foreigners who work at the Lhasa hotel.

China has not said how long martial law will be in effect, although it is certain to last through Friday, the 30th anniversary of a failed uprising in 1959 that led to the flight of the Dalai Lama, who now lives in exile in India.

The Dalai Lama, addressing a gathering in his Himalayan home of Dharamsala on Tuesday, said Tibetans have tried to demonstrate, "but it must be non-violent."

China and the Dalai Lama have agreed to meet to discuss the Tibetan situation, but have been unable to agree on a location.

'Not stalled,' says Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is trying to dispel an impression that "nothing is happening" in his young administration, saying it hasn't been stalled by his struggle to win confirmation of John Tower as defense secretary.

Bush on Tuesday responded to news reports that his administration is drifting by recounting actions he has taken such as developing a savings and loan rescue plan, meeting with foreign leaders and presenting a budget package to Congress.

"My response is it's not drifting and there isn't malaise," he said. "I would simply resist the clamor that nothing seems to be bubbling around, that nothing is happening. A lot is happening. Not all of it good, but a lot is happening."

New TV technology needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States must move aggressively into the new high-definition television and flat-screen display industries or lose more than 3 million jobs annually and suffer a $25 billion trade deficit in electronics by the year 2010, a private study said today.

If the United States does not compete effectively with the Japanese and other nations in the high-technology arena, the personal computer and semiconductor industries alone could have respective deficits of $14 billion and $75 billion early in the next century, the report from the Economic Policy Institute said.

Its author, Robert Cohen, said: "Our nation stands at a critical juncture. If we do not create a strong industrial base centered on development of HDTV and flat-display screen technology, it will not only weaken our industrial base, but also reduce the numbers of skilled jobs that are needed to make us more competitive."

Atwater quits as trustee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesting Howard University students succeeded in driving Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater from the predominantly black school's board of trustees, saying he encouraged racism during his work for President Bush's election campaign.

Atwater submitted a resignation letter to the school Tuesday night after hundreds of students took over the administration building to protest his appointment.

Earlier Tuesday, Bush had defended the choice of Atwater, who headed his presidential campaign, but District of Columbia Mayor Marion S. Barry said Atwater should quit.

Shuttle launch due Monday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said today it is aiming for a Monday launch of space shuttle Discovery following successful installation and checkout of a new electronic unit.

"The Kennedy Space Center is pressing on toward a Monday liftoff," said space agency spokeswoman Lisa Malone.

Signs reading "5 Days to Launch" greeted workers arriving at the center's gates today. It was the first time the signs have been displayed for this flight, which has suffered a series of postponements in the past three weeks.

Socialist candidate wins

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — A close associate of four-term socialist Mayor Bernard Sanders was elected to succeed him and he promised to carry on Sanders' "fight for the rights of ordinary people."

Peter Clavelle, 38, Sanders' community development director, easily defeated Alderman President Nancy Chioffi, a Democrat, in Tuesday's election.

With all precincts reporting, Clavelle drew 5,626 votes, or 53 percent, to Chioffi's 4,400, or 42 percent.

A "tax revolt" candidate and one from the environmentalist Greens party split the rest of the vote.

Sanders, the nation's only socialist mayor, had decided to teach and write rather than serve another two-year term. Clavelle shies away from the socialist label, but ran under the banner of Sanders' third-party Progressive Coalition.

Air controllers flunk tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air traffic controllers were the largest single group of federal employees to test positive for illegal drugs under the government's program of random testing, a published report says.

The Washington Post reported today that 583 federal workers have tested positive out of the 30,397 employees tested so far in the random, spot-checking urinalysis program. That translates into a rate of 1.7 percent.

Among those testing positive were 60 air traffic controllers and 42 employees in the nuclear and chemical weapons security program, the newspaper reported.

The remaining 101 were in a number of positions, including jobs involving aviation safety, enforcement of drug laws and rehabilitation of drug users.

Think tank urges PLO talks

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A prestigious Israeli think tank today endorsed peace negotiations with the PLO and said the possibility should be left open for a Palestinian state after a 10- to 15-year transition period.

The proposal accompanied a 235-page study by Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies on options for dealing with the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"Israel can set conditions on its agreement, but it is going to have to talk to the PLO to solve the problem under the present circumstances," said Joseph Althe, director of the 29-member team that produced the study and a separate paper of recommendations.

Report assails violence against women

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Home, Sweet Home" is a cruel illusion for millions of women not just in the United States but in countries around the globe, according to an analysis of violence against women.

"If a person is murdered because of his or her politics, the world justifiably responds with outrage. But if a person is beaten or allowed to die because she is female, the world dismisses it as 'cultural tradition,'" says the report from the Worldwatch Institute in Washington.

Africa and the Indian subcontinent are identified as particular problem areas by the report, which was prepared by Lori Heise, a senior researcher with the institute. But no society or socioeconomic group has been spared the problem, she says.

Before the sun goes down today — International Women's Day — thousands of women worldwide will have been beaten in their homes by their partners and thousands more will have been raped, assaulted and sexually harassed, according to Heise's figures.

International Women's Day is a congressionally sanctioned event dating back to 1910 that features speeches and rallies. It is a day when women have made toward equality. But, as Heise sees it, just being a woman, particularly in a Third World country, can pose extraordinary risks.

In the United States, says Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, as many as 15 million women have been raped, or suffered other forms of physical and sexual assault, and the number rises by 1 million a year.

As Hedy Nareit, first vice chairman of the National Coalition of Domestic Violence, put it: "For many of us, it's safer to be out on the streets than to be in our own homes."

Heise says that, internationally, women tend to be targets because of their sex and the violence occurs "without social remorse or protest."

"Societies tacitly condone this violence through their silence or worse yet, legitimize it through laws, customs, court opinions that blatantly discriminate against women," she says.

The problem, she adds, is worthy of international attention but is seldom raised at that level. It was not until 1980 that the international women's community recognized wife abuse as a priority.

In India, she writes, countless women have died as a byproduct of the system in which a bride's parents provide gifts to the groom as part of a marriage settlement.

Murder, suicide or severe abuse is sometimes the price young brides pay if promised money or goods do not materialize, she says.

For a woman in Bangladesh, said Ishrat Shamim of the University of Dhaka, the choice is often between a violent home and none at all.

In that country, "separated, deserted or divorced women are socially unacceptable," she observes, "and remarriage is almost impossible."

A side effect of the preference for male offspring in Bangladesh can be shown in comparative statistics on health care, Heise writes that in Matlab, Bangladesh, boys outnumber girls among hospitalized children by 50 to 1.

In Bombay, sex detection tests often are used as the basis for deciding whether a fetus should be aborted. Of 8,000 abortions performed at one sheff's C.P. Charles Fertilizer, the assault occurred in a cell where

Battered woman buried

MISHAWAKA, Ind. (AP) — A woman authorities say was fatally beaten by her ex-husband while he was on prison furlough was buried today, but friends who shared her outrage on behalf of battered women vow her cause will live on.

"We want to make sure that next week, when this week's papers are thrown out in the trash, that this is not forgotten," says Michalyn Chicote, director of the Elkhart County Women's Shelter, where 29-year-old Lisa Bianco worked.

Funeral services were scheduled for today at St. Anthony Catholic Church in South Bend.

Ms. Bianco's 28-year-old ex-husband, Alan L. Matheny, was charged with murder and burglary Tuesday five days after she was strangled to death outside her home in this town near the Michigan state line.

Hours before her death, Matheny was released from a state prison on an eight-hour furlough. He had been serving an eight-year term at the Correctional Industrial Complex for beating Ms. Bianco and criminally confining their two children in 1987.

Matheny is being held without bond in Elkhart County Jail. He pleaded innocent when Superior Court.

He appeared in court Tuesday with swelling and bruises around his eyes, the result of an assault on the St. Joseph County jail, said sheriff's Cpl. Charles Feirl. The assault occurred in a cell where Matheny was being held with three other prisoners and is being investigated, Feirl said. After the beating, Matheny was placed in isolation, he said.

Ms. Bianco, who started again using her maiden name after the divorce, had been putting her life back together.

She had taken a job at the women's shelter and joined a commission on the status of women, but co-workers said she always feared her ex-husband would return to kill her.

"She said her choice at that time would be to run, change her identity and hope he wouldn't find her, or stay and fight," said Ms. Chicote.

On Saturday, while neighbors watched, Ms. Bianco was struck on the head at least 20 times with an unlicensed shotgun used as a club, authorities said. She died at the scene before help arrived, said Coronado County sheriff's Cpl. Feirl.

Matheny was arrested a short time later in nearby South Bend. He is accused of murdering a woman in the east, said Sgt. Norval Williams, who arrested Matheny.

"He had, you might say, a mission he set out to achieve."

Because of the slaying, Gov. Evan Bayh suspended Matheny from his job until the end of the month pending a review. Two state Department of Corrections employees also were suspended for granting the furlough and failing to notify Ms. Bianco.

EASTERN RALLY — Striking Eastern Airlines employees cheer on speakers at a union rally in Miami Tuesday night.

Pan Am opens 'shuttle war' while Eastern fights strike

By Gary Langer The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pan Am marshaled its ammunition as the Eastern Airlines strike loomed. More planes, more free coffee. Crates of laminated luggage tags. Stacks of frequent-flyer sign-up forms.

And when the Machinist union walked, the Shuttle War was on.

"This just gives us a golden opportunity to get those Eastern die-hard passengers," Perette Ross, a Pan Am marketing director, said Tuesday. "Hopefully they'll become loyalists to the Pan Am shuttle."

When Pan Am was struck in 1985 it did the same thing, going for their routes," shrugged Eastern's Joe Scott. "It's a dog-eat-dog world."

But the dogs were fighting over a particularly big prize this week: the immensely profitable Boston-New York-Washington shuttle business, in which Eastern and Pan Am are the only competitors.

Eastern after meeting half its shuttle schedule Saturday and Sunday and 60 percent Monday, struggled to restore its presence Tuesday, though its strike diminished work force into the effort.

"Fly Us With No Reservations," Eastern declared in full-page newspaper advertisements. Seeking to reassure time-pressed business travelers, the text pledged: "Our No. 1 priority is to keep the shuttle flying."

But ridership was low at Eastern, which has operated the shuttle for 27 years and has 29 passengers, according to a company source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Pan Am, moving aggressively, reported as much as double its normal shuttle business. The Pan Am shuttle has grown since its inception in 1986 to about 5,000 passengers each weekday, or nearly half the market.

Since Eastern's strike began Saturday, Pan Am has doubled its rush hour service, put on a bigger airplane to Boston and aggressively promoted its frequent-flyer program to shuttle passengers. It has gone so far as to laminate travelers' business cards into free luggage tags at its terminals.

Airline analysts gave the effort six thumbs up. "Pan Am has an open shot at this market right now," said Louis Marckessano, a vice president of Janney Montgomery Scott Inc., a Philadelphia brokerage house.

"The hardest thing in any marketing business is to get somebody to try your product," Marckessano said. "If Pan Am indeed is able to provide a good product, there's a good chance they'll be able to keep at least some of the additional traffic they've taken from Eastern."

The problem may not be Eastern's for long. It is selling its shuttle for $365 million to developer Donald Trump. Bruce Nobles, president of the Trump Shuttle, said he was "not the least bit worried" about losses to Pan Am.

"We're not just taking over the Eastern shuttle. We are starting a new airline," said Nobles. "So the condition of the Eastern shuttle at the time we close is really not material."

Trump's agreement with Eastern could be canceled in a case of "material adverse change" to the property, Nobles said. But no revenue level or market share was set, he said, adding, "We are going to close this deal."

Still, some analysts suggested that the strike, if it led to bankruptcy for Eastern, could endanger the sale. And others simply said Trump will be buying a tarnished property.

"It's just that instead of starting out as Number 1," said Marckessano, "he may start as Number 2."

Over the same period, individuals' consumption of goods and services rose from 63.3 percent of national income to 74.1 percent.

The increase in personal consumption was attributed largely to growth in disposable income, a rise in household wealth that exceeded the increase in national wealth, the maturing of the population to ages above 16 when spending in higher and the spending of equity that was converted to cash in corporate takeovers and buyouts.

Federal Reserve Bank of Boston Chairman George Hotiopoulos, lead author of the report, noted that even sophisticated managers will increase their spending after receiving a hefty bonus and then find themselves "in a cash-flow bind and have to borrow to make ends meet" if there is not a comparable bonus the next year.

The report said the tendency to spend what is on hand is highlighted when people receive unexpected lumps of cash from their stock investments when they are paid premiums in the course of corporate buyouts.

Rather than reinvesting the cash payments, a big portion gets spent, the authors found.

You're not saving enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — An alarming decline in the national savings rate is the biggest economic problem facing the United States today, the study found.

Full interstate banking backed

HARTFORD (AP) — State Banking Commissioner Howard B. Brown says he and Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill now favor full, national interstate banking in Connecticut.

The statement, made Tuesday by Brown to members of the General Assembly's Banks Committee, raised some eyebrows, which he said he would address on that success. "I feel I can now confidently speak out as a proponent of full, nationwide interstate banking."

"As for a trigger date to implement such a change, I leave that to the judgment and wisdom of the Connecticut General Assembly, through the commission of a study group or otherwise," Brown said.

Concern was protecting Connecticut banks and that, if the General Assembly decides the time has come for full interstate banking, he wouldn't oppose it.

Connecticut has had regional interstate banking since 1985. Brown said that since then, Connecticut banks have done well and told the committee that based on that success, "I feel I can now confidently speak out as a proponent of full, nationwide interstate banking."

Alcohol, tobacco tax hike, national lottery supported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans strongly oppose increasing general income taxes although large majorities are willing to pay higher taxes on tobacco, alcohol and people with incomes over $80,000 a year, according to a survey released today.

The poll, conducted by the Gallup Organization for the Times Mirror Co., found that a majority of Americans, 64 percent, were even favorably disposed toward a national lottery to bring in revenues.

An even bigger majority, 85 percent, favored raising taxes on alcoholic beverages to reduce the deficit, and a just slightly smaller group, 76 percent, favored boosting taxes on tobacco products.

Four out of five Americans, 87 percent, favored increasing the income taxes of people with incomes above $80,000. A smaller majority, 59 percent, endorsed a specific proposal that would create a new 33 percent income tax bracket for all income over $150,000.

On the fundamental question of whether it is possible to cut the federal deficit significantly without a tax increase, opinion was evenly divided between 45 percent of the public believing taxes are necessary and 46 saying they are not necessary.

The survey, one of a series of the Los Angeles-based news company has commissioned on American attitudes, was conducted between Jan. 27 and Feb. 5. It consisted of one-hour face-to-face interviews with 2,048 members of the general public and had a margin of error of plus or minus two percentage points.

A separate survey sampled the opinion of 280 government policy makers, corporate executives, Wall Street financiers and foreign investors in the U.S. economy.

Among the findings: ■ A majority of Americans, 54 percent, expect that things will be better for them financially next year even though they are much less optimistic about the nation's economic future.

By sizeable margins, they predicted that inflation would worsen, 64 percent, and interest rates would climb, 67 percent, and taxes would be increased, 76 percent.

There is a sharp split over the American public regards Japan, not the United States, as the world's leading economic power with 58 percent putting Japan as No. 1 and 29 percent picking America.

This view is not shared by U.S. opinion leaders, who by wide margins say America is No. 1.

N.Y. schools ban apples

NEW YORK (AP) — Students may still bring apples for their favorite teachers, but they won't be able to buy them in the school cafeteria, officials have decided in response to reports of possible health risks.

The Board of Education, which feeds students in 1,200 public and parochial schools, has barred the sale of apples under the brand name Alar, could increase the incidence of cancer in children who drink a lot of apple juice.

Apple growers have reacted angrily, saying only about 2 percent of all apples sold in the United States show any traces of Alar and those amounts are well below levels permitted by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Last year, 13 million apples were sold or distributed to public and parochial students in New York City.

Eastern appealing ruling as pilots report overture

By Don Sewell The Associated Press

MIAMI — Eastern Airlines was appealing a judge's refusal to force its pilots to cross Machinist picket lines as the pilots union reported a new overture from the paralyzed carrier, which warned it was sliding toward bankruptcy.

Pilots' support of the 5-day-old strike by the 500-member Machinists union has virtually grounded Eastern, forcing it to lay off 8,500 employees. But a nationwide job action by pilots at other airlines failed to jam up airports as feared.

On Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Edward B. Davis denied Eastern's request for a temporary injunction forcing the airline's 3,600 pilots to return to work, despite dire warnings from Eastern's attorney that the company faced imminent bankruptcy proceedings if pilots weren't forced to cross picket lines.

Eastern, which has only 1,500 employees of a pre-strike work force of 31,200 still working and contends it has "no business on the books," said it planned to file an appeal today with the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta.

"We're disappointed," Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said in a statement. "If Pan Am indeed is able to provide a good product, there's a good chance they'll be able to keep at least some of the additional traffic they've taken from Eastern."

"It's a victory for labor in general," Eastern pilots' leader Jack Davis told a raucous rally of nearly 3,000 striking employees gathered downtown Tuesday night for a teleconference beamed by satellite to 11 other groups across the country.

"All of us or none of us" chanted the crowd of strikers who jammed Miami's Knight Center. Earlier, about 200 non-union workers, most of them among those laid off this week, demonstrated on company property across from picket lines, shouting "We want our pilots back!"

"Perhaps somewhat overlooked by DOT in the course of deregulating the airline industry, the antitrust laws have a valuable role to play to ensure that competitive environment does not sow the seeds of its own demise," he said. "I would like to see the International Aviation Club."

About 60 percent of the 40,000-member Air Line Pilots Association on Tuesday followed its request that rule books be stringently observed, said Capt. Roger Hall, a union spokesman.

The job action began Tuesday and could cause major flight delays around the country, but Hall said, "the reports we have are that there has been no effect on operations." The safety action would continue, the union said.

President Bush, meanwhile, refused to budge from his opposition to government intervention to halt the walkout that the Machinists union, representing mechanics and ramp service workers, began Saturday.

A U.S. House panel, however, approved a bill that would compel Bush to appoint an emergency board to study the 17-month contract dispute and issue a recommendation. The action would include a cooling-off period of up to 60 days in which striking employees would return to work. Pilot leaders were trying to get support for the bill, which is not expected to reach the House floor before next week. Lawmakers concede there are not enough votes in Congress to override an expected presidential veto.

The pilots union also reported that Eastern management called its negotiators Tuesday evening to try to set up new talks in the dispute, but they gave no further details.

Eastern had no immediate response to the report. Bush told reporters the strike at Eastern, the nation's seventh-largest airline, should be settled through bargaining. And the president said if the Machinists try to shut down rail service later this week, he will ask Congress to ban such secondary boycotts.

Secondary boycotts, particularly in the New York metropolitan area, could disrupt commuter for hundreds of thousands of people.

"The airline wants $150 million in concessions; the Machinists want $50 million in raises.

Airline mergers due for tougher scrutiny

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's antitrust chief is promising tougher enforcement of laws to preserve competition in the airlines industry.

Assistant Attorney General Charles F. Rule said in a speech Tuesday that the antitrust division would take a harder look at mergers than did the Transportation Department, which gave up its authority to review airline deals at the end of 1988.

"Perhaps somewhat overlooked by DOT in the course of deregulating the airline industry, the antitrust laws have a valuable role to play to ensure that competitive environment does not sow the seeds of its own demise," he said. "I would like to see the International Aviation Club."

"We will ask whether the merger will result in increased prices to consumers by creating, enhancing, or facilitating the exercise of market power without generating offsetting efficiencies," he said.

Rule said that an unanticipated result of airline deregulation has been that carriers have become entrenched in regions even though the changes "have generally benefited consumers by dramatically increasing the efficiency of airline service."

GOP's guilt about Duke unwarranted

The election of former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke as a Republican to the Louisiana Legislature is a pleasing to the Democratic Party as it is dismaying to the Republican National Committee.

For the record, of course, Democrats and civil-rights organizations are expressing their dismay and horror over the election to statewide office of a bona fide bigot and black-baiter; unofficially, however, the liberal forces are having a good cackle at the expense of the GOP and attributing Duke's triumph at least in part to the racial insensitivity which is supposedly the legacy of the Reagan era.

Meanwhile, RNC Chairman Lee Atwater has been going to extraordinary lengths to distance the party from Duke, whom Atwater describes as a "pretender, a charlatan and a political opportunist who is looking for any organization he can find to try to legitimize his views of racial and religious bigotry and intolerance."

While all that is true, mainstream Republicans certainly have no reason to feel guilty because Duke opted to run under the GOP banner. The fact is that Duke became a registered Republican only two days before qualifying to run in the special election. Bigot or not, Duke's campaign stands against affirmative action, soaring welfare costs and the black crime rate are legitimate concerns for the middle-class and upper-middle-class whites, regardless of party affiliation.

No, the GOP has nothing to be ashamed about. Certainly, the Democrats themselves could not have worked harder to defeat Duke, who was denounced during his election campaign by every GOP leader, including both President Bush and Atwater. In addition, the RNC now plans to take the unprecedented step of censuring Duke, which would preclude him from any aid or financial support from the party, thereby consigning him to a kind of political limbo. The Democrats themselves could not have done more.

Miller misguided on Loomis bequest

This is a reply to Bill Miller's letter regarding the "stately old house on Boston Post Road (Route 44) bequeathed by June D. Loomis to the Porter Library."

Mr. Miller appears to be quite confused as to who has an obligation to honor the intent of the bequest of the Loomis family as to the disposition of the Loomis home.

His letter stated, "June's final act of generosity to the town was to donate to the town of Coventry, through the Porter Library, her only valuable possession for the enrichment of the lives of all Coventry citizens."

Evidently Mr. Miller is unaware that will is not written in such a manner. Had June Loomis desired to donate her home to the town of Coventry, she would have done so in her will. This she did not do. A reading of her will clearly shows

Life terms for judges? D.O.A.

It is still an inescapable fact of life, however, that naming judges is basically a political exercise with overtones of patronage. The current system of triple examination does much to play down the politics, but it's still there. Chief Justice Peters is one glowing exception. She is one of O'Neill's best finds.

Not that the idea doesn't have some appeal. Legislators who didn't want to condemn it outright, in deference to her judicial chiefship, let it down gently with comments like "interesting" or "worth looking at."

But Chief Justice Peters is an unschooled and innocent in the world of politics as she is brilliant as a legal scholar. In her more comfortable isolated quarters at the Supreme Court, and while she is a product of academia, other justices have come up from political service and could be a resource in that art if she chose to use them.

The names of Justices Arthur Healy of New Haven, Robert Callahan of Norwich, Angelo Santaniello of New London and, of course, that former holder of a black belt in the practice of dramatic politics, T. Clark Hull of Danbury, come to mind readily.

In this instance, Chief Justice Peters might have convened such an audience and asked, "OK, guys, will it fly?"

There is no question but that the appointment system for staffing the bench is always open to change. If her purpose is to settle the terms of the audience and asked, "OK, guys, will it fly?"

Mandela cozy with P.R. man

WASHINGTON — Winnie Mandela's image as a heroine for South African blacks has been on a downward slide for the past two years, and an American businessman may have given her a push.

Mandela's current problem is the death of a teen-age boy, allegedly at the hands of her bodyguards. But her taste for the finer things in life and her dealings with American public relations firms have lost her the respect of some of her impoverished "children" when she built a lavish house complete with swimming pool, and allegedly tried to cash in on her famous name. Brown was involved in both fiascos.

Brown runs B&C Associates Inc., a North Carolina public relations firm, and represents corporate clients with business interests in South Africa. His success is built on making all the right connections — like the one he made last year when he hired Stedman Graham, the fiancée of wealthy talk-show host Oprah Winfrey, to be his publicist.

Rep. William Wollenberg of Farmington, an attorney like Godfrey and Blumenthal, told reporters it would be nearly impossible to remove a judge if he had a life appointment.

Wollenberg, the ranking House Republican on the Legislature's Judiciary Committee, said "impeachment" would be the only way. The ranking Senate Republican on the same committee and also a lawyer, Sen. Tim Upton of Waterbury, dismissed the Peters proposal in one word: "Ridiculous," he said.

The chief justice addresses the assembly at the invitation of its leaders. Former House Speaker R.E. Van Norstrand of Darien, who issued the first of her three such invitations, suggested that if he a regular practice. The original idea was given to him by Joseph Shiliga of New Britain, director of communication for the House.

This year, Chief Justice Peters dealt effectively with the chilling effect which overzealous review at reappointment time can have on judges. And once again she proved to be an articulate voice for the judiciary.

But while she did not "call for" or "recommended" life terms, as some reporting had it, her saying it would be a good idea probably expired right there on the shoals of political reality.

Coventry Jaycees need new people

Do the citizens of Coventry care about the Coventry Jaycees?

The Jaycees will cease operation if the chapter in Coventry unless you care enough to join.

The Jaycees have been active in town for more than 20 years. During that time we have sponsored the town hall, sponsored our Easter egg hunts and Halloween parties, taught CPR, instituted the Coventryfest, and prolonged the life of the town landfill.

Today, the Coventry Jaycees are dedicated individuals who want to carry on the tradition. But we need the committed involvement of new people from our community if we are to continue.

As he promised, new drug czar William Bennett has kicked the smoking habit. We congratulate him for a difficult job well done and hope that he can stick to it. Now he has a more difficult job to get Americans to kick the drug habit. His sincere gesture in concerning his own addiction will no doubt boost his stock with those who have been even more debilitating addicts.

MHS won't allow talk about drugs

To Ms. Barbara Quinby, assistant principal of Manchester High School:

I'm writing this letter to inform you, and possibly others, that I feel you have done disservice to the students at Manchester High School.

On Feb. 26, my son, Hank, and a friend spoke to some classes. They spoke about drug abuse, because both of these young men are recovering addicts.

These classes went extremely well. I understand, in fact well enough that my son received a letter from Mr. Bryssel asking him to speak to his classes and Mr. Ferranti's class on March 10. On March 2, Hank received a phone call from Mr. Bryssel. He stated that he had to cancel the classes because Ms. Quinby would not allow it. When Hank questioned why you stopped it, he was told that you were "too busy" because Hank did not graduate from the program, you could not allow it.

Well, I would like to inform you that you are correct in stating that he has not graduated from the program. In fact, he will never be able to graduate from a recovery program that he has been on because it is a way of life now and he can only help and be helped by others.

These two young men were not there to counsel anyone, either. They were only there to tell their experiences and how they found help to deal with their addiction. They were there because they are proud that they were able to turn their lives in a different direction.

They were there because they felt that they wanted to make a difference for someone who might possibly be heading in the direction that they were once in, and that is self-destruction.

It is unfortunate that you did not make that phone call personally to cancel those classes, because maybe my son could have talked to you and possibly changed your mind.

I guess my point is that you do not need a degree in counseling to talk to people who are very close to you in age, as is in this case. Hank is 19 years old and knows many of the students at MHS since he graduated in June 1988. I feel that students listen to a peer about drugs, much more than they ever would from an adult. If you aren't aware of it, I would like to open your eyes to the fact that we do not live in a drug-free society. There are plenty of drugs out there and I'm sure that whatever anybody can do to help with this problem should and would be appreciated, especially when these talks cost the taxpayers nothing in these days of tight budgets.

I have talked with Hank and he is willing to talk to classes, if possible. He is not trying to counsel them. I would also like to offer my service to talk to any group or organization about how I felt as a parent of a recovering addict.

I can only hope that this letter can make a difference.

Remember 1971: Squelch sleaze

Shades of 1971! How well I remember that fall, and how soon the citizens of our town forgot!

For two months in '71, a small group of concerned citizens met, marched, probed, spoke out in every possible forum, and, in general, caused a lot of grief over the opening of an adult bookstore on Main Street. Remember?

I was proud to be one of that radical group. We all felt a little like Professor Harold Hill who warned, "There's trouble in River City."

We foretold the coming of X-rated movies in Manchester. And it happened. Even triple-X

Willington should rethink decision

To the Willington Board of Education:

As a parent of Bolton students in the sixth and 10th grades, I feel the loss of Willington students to Bolton is tragic — for both towns.

We have worked together for 10 years in an atmosphere of trust and understanding. We have taken students from Willington our own and they have made us proud. They have expanded our academic expectations as well as added substance to our arts and athletic programs.

In conclusion, I feel that to remove Willington students simply for financial reasons, without pursuing negotiations based on compromise, was a tragic decision and should be reconsidered — for the good of both towns.

Dodd Tower

member of Congress haven't done for years; hung out a shingle and sought to capitalize on his name and reputation. I don't like the practice," Dodd said. But he added, "we cannot argue that above ought to be a law prohibiting John Tower from doing what he did, and hold him to account, until we pass such a law."

Dodd's decision could help sway another undecided Democrat.

Freshman Sen. Joseph I. Lieberman, D-Conn., said Tuesday he was close to a decision on the Tower nomination and that Dodd's announcement would influence him. Lieberman said he and Dodd have discussed the nomination extensively.

"Now that Dodd has announced it becomes more appropriate for me to do so," the Connecticut Democrat said. "We've gone through the process together."

Lieberman said Dodd's decision "is a factor, but he has said to me that it should not be a conclusive factor. This is very much a personal decision."

Tower called the senator Monday, but Lieberman said he did not hear anything new to sway him in either direction.

Lieberman said he has been struggling with allegations surrounding Tower's drinking and ties to the defense industry on one hand and a president's traditional right to choose his own Cabinet on the other.

"I spent a lot of time going over the evidence and reading the various reports. It's not clear-cut," Lieberman said. "Clearly, the evidence leaves me with some doubts about Senator Tower. The question is: are the doubts significant enough to outweigh the presumption in favor of a president choosing his own team? That's really been the most difficult part for me."

"I do believe enough is enough," he said. "Why will the proponents of the nomination not permit a vote?"

An Associated Press survey shows 47 Democrats and Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., leaning against or solidly opposed to confirming Tower, and 40 Republicans and two Democrats either leaning for or supporting confirmation.

Democrats control the Senate by a 55-45 margin.

On Tuesday, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., recalling Tower's vote against the Senate censure of his father for improper use of campaign funds 22 years ago, said he would vote for confirmation.

Dodd said that although he and his family will be "eternally grateful" for Tower's defense of the late Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., his decision did not rest on personal considerations.

He said that reading the file of the FBI investigation into Tower's past behavior was evidence in too thin to support a vote to bar the former Texas senator from becoming defense secretary.

That evidence involves allegations — many of them disputed — that Tower drank excessively, displayed improper behavior toward women and permitted the appearance of conflict of interest to develop in the lucrative links he forged with giant defense contractors after leaving government service.

Dodd's decision to support Tower follows that of Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala. Together they dilute what had been a solid party line split for and against the nomination.

But Tower's defenders were jolted when Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., responding to a direct question from a Republican, said "This senator has seen Sen. Tower under the influence of alcohol on this floor, as he has seen other senators. I have not seen him inebriated to the extent that he could not perform his duties."

DeConcini said later he had seen Tower on the Senate floor "several times" when it was obvious "he had had a couple of drinks."

Lieberman said he has been struggling with allegations surrounding Tower's drinking and ties to the defense industry on one hand and a president's traditional right to choose his own Cabinet on the other.

Coleco explores a sale

NEW YORK (AP) — Coleco Industries Inc. is exploring a sale of the toy company as a means of solving its financial problems, but no potential purchasers have been identified.

J. Brian Clarke, president and chief executive officer of the Avon, Conn.-based company, said the board took the action two weeks ago. The committee representing Coleco's creditors has also approved exploring a sale, Clarke said Tuesday.

Morton E. Handel, Coleco's chairman, said no purchase offers have been received. He wouldn't say whether any talks with interested bidders have been held.

Testifying in U.S. District Court in New York on Tuesday, Clarke said selling the company is an alternative to the plan to reorganize the debt repayment plan Coleco has proposed.

Coleco, which filed in January for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code, has proposed a plan for repaying some of its $540 million in debts. The creditors' committee is fighting the plan, saying it would give most creditors only 10 cents of every $1 Coleco owes them.

Coleco's appeal, which was handled by another lawyer, to the Supreme Court was based on the claim that he did not understand the consequences he faced when he pleaded guilty and that Kelly should have been permitted to withdraw from the case.

Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr., Sterling professor of law at Yale University and a recognized authority in the area of legal ethics, said the Supreme Court ruling was correct, but he thinks Kelly should have handled the situation differently.

"I think he should have told the defendant that he could not put him on the stand if his testimony would be perjured," Hazard said.

Pat Riley has an idea it just might stand for "Alternating Current."

He explains it this way: "What A.C. brings to this team is an energy level, a power force. He's our generator, in a way, particularly when Magic Johnson is out. There's a spiritual force to A.C.'s play a flow to it. Oh, Ace just seems to plug in. He is our current."

The current is seldom out. A.C. hasn't missed a Laker game in over three years or since he became a regular. In fact, he cannot remember missing a game due to injury since he graduated from high school, Aug. 2, 1981.

Actually, playing on a Laker team that has Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson on it, you don't need a name. A number will do. You could probably play in a mask under an alias. You're a little bit like the one who holds the magician's cape on stage, or says "How hot was it?" to Johnny Carson. John Wayne's best friend is a western. The cook, Mike Tyson's cornerman. There's the suspicion anyone can do it.

But, even superstars need the ball. And not everyone can get the ball the way A.C. Green can. For the third straight year, he is leading the team in rebounds, no small feat when you consider Abdul-Jabbar has more than 17,000 career rebounds. But, it's A.C. the Lakers look for to go under and take the ball out of someone's ear these nights.

In this age of specialty, basketball forwards come in two sizes — small and power. A.C. Green is neither. In fact, through the years, when you had an Abdul-Jabbar in the pivot, you didn't need a power forward. But, now that Kareem has evolved into a 25-minute player on his farewell tour, A.C. has to play both roles. Basically, he and James Worthy swap roles. On balance, a power forward gets the rebounds, the small forward gets the baskets. Worthy is the deadlier shot. Green digs out the ball.

The Lakers being the Lakers, they never need a 25-rebound night from an individual (Wilt Chamberlain once had 55, Bill Russell 51). Some guys in the league are pure and simple rebounders. They are basketball's bricklayers. They couldn't put the ball in the Grand Canyon. No one ever called A.C. "Air." Green had to be thrown in 10 or more points 45 times last year. You leave him open at your peril.

"Ace used to defer to people," admits his coach. "He'd pass up the shot, he'd defer the power forward, he kind of played a back seat game but I told him 'Ace, we need your energy. You got to get plugged in for us to win.' Now, he makes up his energy what he lacks in size. He gets the ball quicker than those bigger guys and gets away from them quicker."

Best of all, if you ask him "Read any good books lately?" A.C. will be glad to tell you he's got a real page-turner on his hands. Couldn't put it down. And he even recommends a chapter — the 14th in John and verse 6. "I am the way, the truth, the life. I and it's not depressing. It's full of happy endings."

Tainted testimony no reason to quit

HARTFORD (AP) — The state Supreme Court has affirmed a lower court's decision not to allow a public defender who knew his client would lie on the witness stand to remove himself from the case.

On March 18, 1986, about a month before trial, Public Defender Richard Kelly interviewed Marshall Crenshaw, a Manchester man accused of killing his 16-month-old daughter.

Crenshaw told Kelly he would take the stand and deny that he had anything to do with the baby's death; he would blame the baby's mother for the murder.

Such a conflict, when created by the defendant, does not require the appointment of new counsel," Justice Alfred V. Covello wrote in the court's unanimous ruling.

"Allowing this attorney, and then all subsequent attorneys, to withdraw from this case would have impaired the defendant's right to be represented by counsel. This we cannot condone," Covello wrote.

The conflict Kelly anticipated never arrived. Two days into his trial, Crenshaw changed his plea to guilty. He was sentenced to the minimum term of 25 years in prison. The maximum sentence was 40 years.

Crenshaw's appeal, which was handled by another lawyer, to the Supreme Court was based on the claim that he did not understand the consequences he faced when he pleaded guilty and that Kelly should have been permitted to withdraw from the case.

Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr., Sterling professor of law at Yale University and a recognized authority in the area of legal ethics, said the Supreme Court ruling was correct, but he thinks Kelly should have handled the situation differently.

Pat Riley has an idea it just might stand for "Alternating Current."

He explains it this way: "What A.C. brings to this team is an energy level, a power force. He's our generator, in a way, particularly when Magic Johnson is out. There's a spiritual force to A.C.'s play a flow to it. Oh, Ace just seems to plug in. He is our current."

The current is seldom out. A.C. hasn't missed a Laker game in over three years or since he became a regular. In fact, he cannot remember missing a game due to injury since he graduated from high school, Aug. 2, 1981.

Actually, playing on a Laker team that has Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson on it, you don't need a name. A number will do. You could probably play in a mask under an alias. You're a little bit like the one who holds the magician's cape on stage, or says "How hot was it?" to Johnny Carson. John Wayne's best friend is a western. The cook, Mike Tyson's cornerman. There's the suspicion anyone can do it.

But, even superstars need the ball. And not everyone can get the ball the way A.C. Green can. For the third straight year, he is leading the team in rebounds, no small feat when you consider Abdul-Jabbar has more than 17,000 career rebounds. But, it's A.C. the Lakers look for to go under and take the ball out of someone's ear these nights.

In this age of specialty, basketball forwards come in two sizes — small and power. A.C. Green is neither. In fact, through the years, when you had an Abdul-Jabbar in the pivot, you didn't need a power forward. But, now that Kareem has evolved into a 25-minute player on his farewell tour, A.C. has to play both roles. Basically, he and James Worthy swap roles. On balance, a power forward gets the rebounds, the small forward gets the baskets. Worthy is the deadlier shot. Green digs out the ball.

The Lakers being the Lakers, they never need a 25-rebound night from an individual (Wilt Chamberlain once had 55, Bill Russell 51). Some guys in the league are pure and simple rebounders. They are basketball's bricklayers. They couldn't put the ball in the Grand Canyon. No one ever called A.C. "Air." Green had to be thrown in 10 or more points 45 times last year. You leave him open at your peril.

"Ace used to defer to people," admits his coach. "He'd pass up the shot, he'd defer the power forward, he kind of played a back seat game but I told him 'Ace, we need your energy. You got to get plugged in for us to win.' Now, he makes up his energy what he lacks in size. He gets the ball quicker than those bigger guys and gets away from them quicker."

Best of all, if you ask him "Read any good books lately?" A.C. will be glad to tell you he's got a real page-turner on his hands. Couldn't put it down. And he even recommends a chapter — the 14th in John and verse 6. "I am the way, the truth, the life. I and it's not depressing. It's full of happy endings."

A.C. prefers 'The Book' to the rest

A lot of athletes when they quit playing would like to go into politics, would like to bang "Gov." or "Sen." or "Rt. Hon." in front of their names.

The Lakers' A.C. Green would like to hang a "Rev." in front of his name. The Administration he'd like to be in is God's.

Lots of players banker to open their own bar. A.C. would like to open his own church.

A.C. doesn't need pop talks in the locker room. He gets them out of a book. He is just as apt to get his game plan from Matthew, Mark, Luke or John as Pat Riley.

Lots of guys read best-sellers on the long road trips. So does A.C. His is the best-seller of all time. In fact, it's been made into a movie more times than any other book ever written. Hardly anyone ever memorizes passages from Hemingway. A.C. can quote you passages from his book — from Genesis to Revelation — and tell you which pages they're on.

"Parson Green" has a nice ring to it but there probably aren't a dozen fans in Los Angeles, even Laker fans, who can tell you what the "A.C." stands for. That's because it doesn't stand for anything. A.C. is just identified by the first and third letters of the alphabet. In fact, he's a second generation A.C. His father was A.C. before him. He is actually A.C. Jr.

Whalers beat the deadline, send Robertson to Detroit

HARTFORD (AP) — Beating the NHL trade deadline and preparing for the Stanley Cup playoffs, the Hartford Whalers have traded left wing Torrie Robertson to the Detroit Red Wings for defenseman Jim Pavese.

Both players were expected to report to their new clubs immediately, and Pavese was scheduled to be in Hartford tonight for the Whalers game against Edmonton.

Pavese, 26, who played in 39 games with the Red Wings this season, has scored three goals and six assists and totaled 130 minutes in penalties.

Pavese, 6-foot-2, 215 pounds, went to the Red Wings last season in a trade with the New York Rangers. He had 11 goals and 31 assists in 323 NHL games. Pavese has 13 goals and 44 assists, along with 684 minutes in penalties. He has played in 83 playoff games, tallying six assists and 81 penalty minutes.

Pavese was the Blues' second choice and fifth overall pick in the 1980 NHL draft. He played portions of three seasons with the Blues and then was with them for the next three years.

Robertson came to the Whalers from Washington in October 1983. He has played six seasons in Hartford and has 36 goals, 79 assists and 1,368 minutes in penalties, a Whalers record.

This season Robertson had two goals, four assists and 84 penalty minutes in 27 games.

Robertson, 5-foot-11, 200 pounds, missed 29 games with a broken leg this season. It was the second broken leg he has suffered in three years.

Robertson's best season with the Whalers was 1984-85, when he had 11 goals and 31 assists.

"With the loss of Bob Probert, we felt we would like to add an aggressive forward to our lineup, and we believe Torrie Robertson fits the bill," Detroit general manager Jimmy Devellano said in a news release.

Probert was banned for life by the NHL on Saturday after being charged with attempting to smuggle cocaine into the United States from his hometown of Windsor, Ontario.

The Whalers are in fourth place in the Wales Conference with 46 points. Detroit is in first place in the Campbell Conference.

The Whalers also announced Tuesday that they have signed defenseman Bradshaw, who had been playing in Italy after playing the majority of the past three seasons with Binghamton of the AHL, to a one-year contract.

The signing of Shaw, 24, who was voted the top defenseman in the AHL in 1987 but has played just 11 NHL games, was called "some insurance on defense for the playoffs," by Francis.

Krein looking for a divorce after romance proves faulty

By Hal Beck
The Associated Press

The recruiting romance of Darren Krein was spirited just as you would expect it to be for a blue-chip football player. The divorce, however, promises to be bitter.

When schools were pursuing him, Krein came under siege with the usual sea of phone calls and visits from assistant coaches. There were the requisite campus visits. He listened to the parade of head coaches, each selling his program, each sweet talking him, planting visions of national championships in his mind.

He was left holding the letter of intent, which binds a student-athlete to the school with which he signs for at least one academic year.

He can ask for a release from his obligation — Miami already has said there would be none for its recruits — or he can leave without benefit of one. Leave without the release and Krein can play just two years in another program. Even with a release, he must surrender one year of eligibility.

Jimmy Johnson, however, can coach the Dallas Cowboys right now.

This did not seem entirely fair to Darren Krein, who took his case to attorney Steven D. Dawson.

"We are reviewing our options," Dawson said. "A suit is one of them."

There are others, according to the lawyer.

He can sit for two years and do nothing. That's unacceptable. He can go to a junior college, but if he plays football, he loses two years.

If he doesn't play football, he's two years behind."

"We're weighing all the possibilities."

The letter of intent is not an NCAA program.

East five eliminated by Wilby

Eagles off target in loss to Wildcats

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

WATERBURY — The final score of East Catholic's first state tournament appearance in five years was certainly misleading for those not in attendance.

The Eagles' 88-56 loss to host Wilby High in a first-round Class L state tournament game Tuesday night may seem like a one-sided affair.

Yet, it was East's cold shooting during the second and third quarters which allowed the Wildcats to gain the momentum needed to switch into high gear.

The frustrating aspect for East was it failed to cash in on several inside opportunities.

East seeded 23rd, ends the year losing its final eight games and winds up with an 8-14 record. Wilby, seeded 10th, moves to 16-5 and will take on seventh-seeded Cheshire Thursday night.

East may seem hard to believe as the Eagles only trailed the Wildcats, 20-18, after the first quarter. Senior Ted O'Lea (team-high 17 points) tossed in nine of his total during the opening eight minutes.

Hitting its first major cold spell of the game, East managed only a hoop from senior Scott Alturi (16 points) during the first half. East's 37 led in the first half.

A buzzer-beating 18-footer before the intermission by Dwayne Ellis (22 points) gave Wilby a 42-29 halftime edge. East's comeback began in the first four minutes of the third. A Lou Lott gave Wilby a 49-31 edge with 4:17 left.

The Eagles committed 10 turnovers in the second quarter and 22 for the game. East shot a combined 8-for-28 during the second and third stanzas.

"We had a couple of spells where we gave them easy baskets whereas we were working for everything we got," East Coach Ray Page said. "I thought there were two stretches where we couldn't make it a game. That one in the second quarter and right at the start of the third. We had about six shots within three feet (in the third) and didn't come out of it with any points."

Most of the Eagle turnovers occurred after they crossed midcourt.

"We started cutting off the passing lanes better," Wilby Coach Reggie O'Brien said. "I told the kids not to go by the record because they play basketball down there. We were able to run them. I thought the key was the last four or five minutes of the second quarter when we gained a decent lead."

East trailed 58-40, after three quarters and never got any closer the rest of the way.

"I was pleased with the way we came out in the third quarter, but we missed several inside shots and that really hurt us," Page said. "There's really nothing else you can do. We knew they weren't very tall, but we knew they were very quick."

Lott went over 1,000 career points with 4:54 left in the game. Alturi finished with 16 points. Alturi is one of seven seniors — including all four starters — the Eagles will lose to graduation.

Abbott does fine

PHOENIX (AP) — Jim Abbott took care of Jose Canseco just fine. His nerves, however, gave him some trouble.

"I was a little over-anxious and pressed some. I got caught more in who I was facing, rather than what I could do," Abbott admitted Tuesday after facing a major-league lineup for the first time.

Abbott, who has succeeded at every level despite being born without a right hand, struggled for two innings but wound up the winning pitcher as the California Angels beat Oakland 9-4.

On the positive side, he struck out Canseco with a hard slider that had both sides raving.

On the down side, Abbott walked three batters and was slow in handling a ground ball. Fielding has always been a major concern with Abbott, and he had a problem on the only ball hit to him.

"There were some good and bad points," Abbott said. "There were some butterflies out there. I have to overcome that."

His final line one run on one hit — a single by Carney Lansford — with two strikeouts. Abbott threw 57 pitches, 36 for strikes.

"I can tell you collusion is concurrent with his term. Would those revenues have occurred anyway? Or did he have a substantial part? I assume that the increases in revenue are not entirely divorced from the role he had to play."

Ueberroth, who last May refused a second term as commissioner, has said he does not know his future plans. He has been under consideration for chief executive jobs at Eastern Airlines and R.F.R. Nabisco, but an associate of Ueberroth, who asked not to be identified, said Tuesday that the last discussion between Ueberroth and those corporations was months ago.

Ueberroth, according to the associate, also is intrigued by the idea of running for governor of California.

Ueberroth, through spokesman Rich Levin, declined to comment on baseball finances.

vice president for membership, in a telephone interview from his home in Milford Tuesday.

The Jaycees is a volunteer public service organization that stresses leadership training. To operate, a chapter needs a minimum of 20 members, aged 21 to 40.

Membership in the local chapter has been declining for three years, says its president of one year, Libby Eddy. With only 21 members, Eddy fears the chapter might have to close.

"We're close to not having enough members to operate," Eddy said Tuesday. If membership drops below 20, the chapter will have three months to bring the number back up to the required minimum.

The problem has prompted Eddy to launch a public appeal to recruit new members by sending letters to the editors of area newspapers and taking out a full-page advertisement in a local monthly publication.

"Maybe people don't realize there is a need," Eddy said, adding there are other problems.

"Volunteerism in general is falling. Also people leave town, and with two-income families not as many women are available," said Eddy.

About half of the members in town are women. The Jaycees opened membership to women four years ago, said Eddy.

The purpose of the organization, she said, is to "make the world a better place" by helping individuals improve themselves and by working to improve the community.

Over the years, the Jaycees have pointed the town hall, constructed and hung the town logo at the town hall, held an annual Easter egg hunt, begun the Centennial — an annual fair, and helped prolong the life of the landfill by instituting paper recycling.

Recently, the Jaycees offered courses in town including stress management and personal goal setting. In April, they will sponsor an adult CPR course.

Battered man tells of his hidden shame

DEAR ABBY: I am getting tired of reading all the letters about "battered women." Yes, I know it must be a terrible experience for a woman, but nobody ever mentions the battered men. It's even worse for them because they are so embarrassed and ashamed, they never tell anybody.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

I know, I was raised never to hit a woman — even in self-defense. Many times my ex-wife would throw things at me, and come at me with her fingernails, drawing blood from my face and neck. She even broke my arm and ribs when she threw a heavy chair at me. I always made up some kind of lie when I had to go to the emergency room of the hospital after she beat me up.

I stayed in this terrible marriage as long as I could for the sake of our child. When I finally couldn't take it any longer, I divorced her. She fought the divorce, but I was firm and made the break.

She retaliated by filing charges against me, stating that I had sexually

DEAR ABBY: I have a big problem that is getting worse with time. I have a friend I've known for four years. Within the last year, her husband has been making advances toward me. This is not just my imagination. I know when a man is coming on to me. (I am not married.)

If I stay away, my friend is going to wonder why I don't come over anymore. What should I do?

FRIENDSHIP IN DANGER

DEAR IN DANGER: When you are at your friend's home, keep your distance from her husband. If he makes a move toward you, tell him to get away from you. If he persists, tell him that you would hate to stop visiting his home because you value his wife's friendship, and if she asks you why, you would be forced to tell her the truth. That should cool him down.

NO NAME OR LOCATION, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Surprise! Your case is not unusual, and from the mail I receive, I can attest to that. Thanks for writing.

An increasing number of Americans are stepping into the future, using home computers to gather information and make purchases. These people are taking advantage of what are called "on-line services."

While on-line services such as Compuserve, Etc. Dow Jones News/Retrieval and the Source have been around for years, subscriptions to these services have been limited. The largest computer terminal to date is the FIDO network.

The best known of these new services is called "Prodigy." It's a joint venture between IBM and Sears Roebuck and Co. You may have heard of it, yet, but you won't.

Prodigy went on-line — began service — in a few test markets last year. Right now it's available only in Atlanta, Hartford and several California cities. But plans call for continued expansion this year and in years to come.

Unlike the earlier on-line services, Prodigy doesn't charge by the hour. Instead, for a $9.95 monthly charge, customers the c o m p a n y c a l l s t h e m "members" with unlimited access to the service.

What do they receive? News and sports information, and electronic mailboxes — though Prodigy does not allow downloading. It does allow copying of its files into your computer.

Today, it's better Wall Street firm has signed on with Prodigy so its customers can conduct securities transactions via their home computers.

Other companies also offer or plan to start various on-line services. Rising numbers of consumers will be discovering a whole new way of shopping, communicating and gathering information. But it will not come without cost. Phone bills will be unexpectedly high in many cases, and users are likely to miss the personal interaction that comes from going to the store, newspaper or library.

Still, it's something only dreamed of a few years ago. Today, it's here. It's here to make the computer hookup a common sight in more and more American homes.

Nutritional diets are best idea

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there any medical support for the theory of combining foods?

DEAR READER: I am not sure exactly what you mean by the "theory of combining foods." Nutritionists have known for years that a balanced diet contains a variety of elements — protein, fats, carbohydrates, vitamins, minerals and fiber — which should be eaten together. As a general rule, people who follow nutrition diets consume a wide sampling of edibles. In my experience, people are more likely to develop deficiencies when they omit — by choice or necessity — certain elements, such as protein, rather than combining or not combining foods.

I should add that patients should be cautious about combining medicines with food. Some drugs, such as the antibiotic tetracycline, are inactivated by food in the stomach; other drugs are best taken with meals. Check with your doctor or pharmacist about specific medications.

For more information, I'm sending you a copy of my Health Report "Calorie-Wise Cooking." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address, P.O. Box 9386, Cleveland, Ohio 44101-2586. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've had blurred vision for about five years. It's getting worse. My ophthalmologist tells me I have hardening of the arteries behind my eyes. What can I do?

DEAR READER: Hardening of the arteries really means that you are experiencing an age-related, progressive narrowing of your arteries that is caused by arteriosclerotic plaque, a buildup of sludgy material within the arterial lining. This condition can affect all the arteries in the body, leading to heart attack, stroke, leg cramps and kidney disease, to mention a few complications.

When arteriosclerosis affects the retinal arteries, the tissues are deprived of adequate oxygen and nutrition. This results in retinal degeneration, an unfortunate consequence of growing older. Retinal degeneration can cause blurring of vision, an inability to distinguish detail or — in some cases — sudden loss of vision in all or part of one eye.

In general, this ailment is untreatable because it is due to the gradual wearing-out of tissue. Measures to retard the acceleration of arteriosclerosis, such as controlling hypertension and lowering blood cholesterol, may help, but there is no specific treatment. Sometimes special eyeglasses and the use of extra-bright lighting will assist patients in compensating for their visual loss.

Because your ophthalmologist appears to believe that your visual problems are due to arteriosclerosis, I suggest that you obtain a second opinion, in hopes that he may be incorrect and other, treatable factors may be affecting your vision.

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a young woman who has a 2-year-old son from a man she never lived with, but had a brief encounter with. The man pays for the boy's expenses, but no effort to see his son or have any kind of relationship with him. My wife sends this man gifts for his birthday and Christmas, and says they are not from her — they are from her son. She says she wants her son to know his father.

I say, she should wait until her son is old enough to decide whether he wants a relationship with his father, then he can send him gifts if he wants. What do you say?

SOMEWHERE IN THE USA

DEAR SOMEWHERE: Perhaps the boy's father is paying child support because the court demanded that he do so, but he has no real interest in "knowing" his son. Time will tell. Meanwhile, if your wife wants to keep the lines of communication open between her son and his father, two gifts a year as small reminders that the relationship exists can do no harm. And it may do some good. Don't discourage it.

New on-line service offers lots for your home computer puters. An airline has added its reservation service to the system and a supermarket chain even lets you use your computer to order groceries, which will be delivered at a specific time.

There are computer games and entertainment services, too. IBM and Sears say they are backing the effort with an advertising campaign. IBM has offered several California cities. But plans call for continued expansion this year and in years to come.

Some cases, less than perfect "on-line services" are being developed. A third kind of on-line service has evolved, and it promises to combine the advantages of the big on-line companies with a much lower cost, a little more privacy and a little more control. It's called "PC-Link."

"PC-Link" offering many of the services provided by Prodigy, the system also allows you to download files for later use. This can mean a big savings in telephone charges, because computers can absorb information far more quickly than you can read it. PC-Link also offers unlimited time for $9.95 per month, but there are a few catches: There is a surcharge for daytime use, and some services cost extra.

Ben, Ann, Tammy honored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Ben Vereen, columnist Ann Landers and country singer Tammy Wynette were honored for their efforts to educate the public about mental illness and addiction.

"I'm not proud of the fact that I once had a drug problem, but I am proud I did something about it," Ms. Wynette, who overcame dependency on prescription drugs, said Tuesday at an awards reception on Capitol Hill.

"Let's be sympathetic, let's be kind, let's be caring and let's recognize the burden these people who have mental illness are carrying. I can't tell you how much pain, how much suffering is out there," Ms. Landers urged.

Vereen, a national spokesman for the campaign for "A Drug Free America," said parents and teachers must be educated to spot mental illnesses such as depression that can lead to drug abuse, and then reach out to those afflicted.

The "From Shame to Hope" awards were co-sponsored by the Mental Health Liaison Group, the Alcohol and Drug Problems Association of North America and the Mental Illness Research Advocacy Coalition — Learning and Educating.

QUESTION: When someone predicts the future, should that be prophesy or prophesy? I've seen both.

ANSWER: Use prophesy as the verb for "make a prediction." The prediction itself is a prophesy. (Some dictionaries permit prophesy as a noun, but I prophesy that eventually the only acceptable spelling for the noun will be prophesy.)

Try a thick, rich, flavorful stew

Are you in a stew about what to prepare for your family? Well, maybe you have the answer ready, try a thick, rich, flavorful stew. This idea appeals to you, we have several suggestions that will solve your problem, and bring compliments from your family too.

What is a stew? It is any combination of meat, fish or vegetables that have been simmered together and slightly thickened. Stew is eaten with a large spoon from a bowl. The best complement to serve with a hearty stew is hot bread or crisp rolls.

Whenever a recipe calls for less-tender cuts of meat, such as chuck roast, use 30 percent power (medium-low) for cooking. This will take a little longer, but will allow the meat time to become tender.

Conventionally, one used a low heat such as 325 degrees and a longer cooking time in preparing the less-tender cuts of meat. To achieve the same results in microwaving, cook on 30 percent power for 20 minutes per pound of meat. Stews, however, include other ingredients, and therefore, require a longer microwaving time than 20 minutes per pound of meat.

To achieve the best results when microwaving stews, here are some hints to remember:

Choose very lightly marbled chuck roast for stew meat.

Pierce the meat with a fork before cutting into pieces.

Cut the meat and vegetables into uniform shapes.

Use some type of acidic ingredients, such as tomato juice or wine, in recipes to aid in tenderizing the meat as it cooks.

If possible, make stews the day before serving to allow blending of flavors.

Reheat stew on 70 percent (medium-high) power to the desired serving temperature.

Our first featured recipe is Belgian beef stew, also called Carbonade flamande. It is prepared by combining browned beef with a preparation with the microwave. This rich stew was originally browned over an open fire and

Belgian beef stew

1 1/2 cups oil
2 large onions, sliced
2 pounds boneless beef stew meat
2 teaspoons Dijon-type mustard
8 slices soft bread
1 can (12 ounces) dark beer
1/4 cup water
1 teaspoon instant minced garlic
1 teaspoon instant beef bouillon granules
1 teaspoon salt
1 bay leaf
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
2 cans (14 ounces) small white potatoes
2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes

On range top, preheat a large heavy skillet. Pour in half of the oil. Sauté onions on high heat until golden brown. Remove onions to a 4-quart microwave simmer pot. Add remaining oil and sear meat on all sides at high heat until very brown. Spread mustard on bread and place on top of onions. Transfer meat to simmer pot.

Pour beer and water into hot skillet and stir to incorporate brown meat drippings. Add garlic, bouillon, salt, bay leaf and vinegar. Combine and pour over meat in a simmer pot. Cover and microwave on high power for 8 minutes; stir to combine ingredients. Re-cover and microwave at 30 percent (medium-low) power for 30 minutes.

Drain potatoes and cut into desired size. Add potatoes and tomatoes to stew. Re-cover and let stand for 20 minutes. Best when made the day before to incorporate all flavors. Yields 6 to 8 servings.

KEEBLER RAINBOW CHIPS DELUXE, $2.19 per 12-ounce bag.

BONNIE: Even without the saturated fats Keebler's is supposed to remove from his and other of their products by the end of the year, Rainbow Chips come to many consumers as ingredients to recommend.

These artificial flavor, four different emulsifiers, and artificial colors yellow dye numbers 5 and 6. If that's not enough to ruin your appetite, consider this: Rainbow Chips also contain carnauba wax, the same stuff people use to make their cars shine.

CAROLYN: Bakers and moms have been making cookies with MM-like candies for years. It's about time a cookie company did the same thing. It was bighearted of Keebler to include chocolate chips in these cookies too. The crumbly, buttery texture of the cookie is an added plus. While not in the same league of Pepperidge Farm cookies, these are definitely worth a try.

NELLGODDARD'S COMMON SENSE OAT BRAN WAFFLES, $2.09 for 11-ounce box of eight frozen waffles with oat bran.

BONNIE: There's not an ingredient in these new waffles to be concerned about. All they contain are good things like flour, oil, egg whites, baking powder, salt, vitamins and oat bran. As you know, oat bran is the current panacea for high cholesterol. The problem is there isn't enough oat bran in a one-waffle serving of Eggo Common Sense Oat Bran waffles. (Research correlates a daily intake of 35 grams of any oat bran with a 3 percent drop in cholesterol; These waffles only contain two grams.)

Another problem is that these waffles cost up to twice as much as regular waffles. They're just as healthy, like Eggo's own Nutri Grain. If you really want to use common sense, you'd buy a less expensive brand and get your oat bran elsewhere.
