Kennelly names aide

U.S. Rep. Barbara P. Kennelly, D-Conn., recently hired Wendy Benjamins as her press secretary. Benjamins had worked for United Press International covering Capitol Hill before joining Kennelly's staff. She was also an editor for UPI on the Washington-politics desk and covered the District of Columbia for UPI's local report. Before joining UPI, she worked for The Washington Times.

RHAM pupils compete

HEBRON — Three RHAM High School students recently competed in the All-New England Music Festival in Waterford. The music festival concert was held on March 18. Only 120 of 112 students were chosen for the festival. Anne Fleischauer played piccolo in the All-New England band. Dawn Lettiss, clarinet, and Shannon Henaghan, oboe, also performed in the band.

City to lay off 50

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — The city of Bridgeport could lay off 50 employees as it begins to address a potential $5.2 million budget gap in the current fiscal year, a city official says.

The layoffs will begin as soon as Monday as the city finds itself under increasing pressure from the Bridgeport Financial Review Board, a nine-member state oversight panel, to keep the city's budget in balance.

"We're in negotiations still with some department heads," said David J. Dunn, the city's labor negotiator. He declined Wednesday to identify the positions targeted so far for elimination.

Operation nets arrests

WATERBURY (AP) — Twenty-four people have been arrested in warrants that have been issued for sale of drugs in an undercover operation police are calling "Operation Spring Break" officials said. Detectives and uniformed officers fanned out across the city earlier this week in an attempt to curb a growing crack problem, police said.

Committee favors public autopsy reports

HARTFORD (AP) — Backers of a bill making autopsy reports public say that eight years after the battle started, this is the year the bill will become law. The bill "looks like it's going to fly" this year, said Rep. Richard D. Tulsiano, D-Rock, executive chairman of the Judiciary Committee, after his committee unanimously approved the proposal Wednesday and sent it to the Senate.

Keep abuse files shut, DCYS boss tells panel

HARTFORD (AP) — The state's confidentiality law should not be changed to allow disclosure of the agency's child-abuse investigations, Department of Children and Youth Services Commissioner Amy B. Wheaton says.

In a written statement to the General Assembly's Human Services Committee, Wheaton said the department questions the appropriateness of disclosing whether it has investigated a particular child or family.

"We do not believe that the public has a right to this information any more than they have a right to review the records of a patient at one of the state's hospitals," she said, adding that the state must meet strict federal confidentiality regulations or risk losing federal funds.

Under current laws, DCYS is prohibited from discussing any aspects of a child-abuse investigation with anyone outside the department. Legislators said a bill that would allow information contained in DCYS reports to be shared with several other state agencies as well as legislators would strengthen child-protection laws and increase the department's accountability.

But Wheaton told legislators Tuesday it could involve too many people and increase the chance of confidential information leaking out. The bill was proposed after a case in Vernon last month in which a woman and her boyfriend were charged in the beating of the woman's 3-year-old daughter, who remains hospitalized.

The bill would require DCYS to notify local police departments within 24 hours of receiving a complaint about possible child abuse. Current law requires only that police notify DCYS.

The bill also would allow physicians to perform a diagnostic test without parental consent on children they suspect have been physically or sexually abused. Current law requires parental permission for such a test.

Fishing area to reopen

STAMFORD (AP) — Stamford's largest non-commercial shellfishing area closed for more than five years due to pollution from street sellers, officials said at a press conference Wednesday morning.

"Spring Break" was the third major drug undercover operation in the past 18 months. Police staged the "Blue Lightning" operation in the fall of 1987 and another dubbed "Encores" last summer. Both earlier operations concentrated on the South End and included street sales of heroin and powdered cocaine.

Play benefits center

Tickets are available now for the Mark Twain Masquers' May 11 performance of "Guys and Dolls," which will benefit the Transitional Living Center of Manchester, a home for teen-agers who can't live with their families.

The show is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Roberts Theater on the campus of Kingswood Oxford School, West Hartford. The donation is $20. Checks should be made out to the Mark Twain Masquers. Donations are tax deductible.

Tickets are available through any TLC board member or may be reserved by calling the Youth Services Bureau at 647-3484.

The TLC Foundation could raise up to $11,000 from the performance, enough to buy a new Van. TLC Executive Director William DiVeso said.

Operation nets arrests

WATERBURY (AP) — Twenty-four people have been arrested in warrants that have been issued for sale of drugs in an undercover operation police are calling "Operation Spring Break" officials said.

Detectives and uniformed officers fanned out across the city earlier this week in an attempt to curb a growing crack problem, police said.

Senate vote kills Meotti's plan for interstate banking

HARTFORD (AP) — After withdrawing an amendment that would have permitted full interstate banking next year, the state Senate voted to study a proposal to allow nationwide interstate banking in Connecticut.

"There was just not enough support," said Sen. Michael P. Meotti, D-Glastonbury, after the 32-3 vote Wednesday.

Meotti, one of the amendment's three sponsors, said he doubted another attempt would be made to get full interstate banking this session.

Also Wednesday, the Senate passed a bill that would require out-of-state mail-order companies to collect sales taxes on most purchases by Connecticut residents. The state Department of Revenue Services has estimated that the measure could raise more than $10 million a year.

Under a law that took effect in 1983, interstate banking is now permitted in Connecticut only among banks based in New England.

Sen. Steven C. Casey, D-Bristol, co-chairman of the Banks Committee, said the so-called "New England experiment" has been "a wonderful success and now it's time to turn our sights to the rest of the country."

The Senate also unanimously approved a bill exempting the location of shelters for domestic violence victims from disclosure under state freedom of information laws.

Another bill, also approved unanimously in the Senate, is designed to make it easier to report incidents of animal cruelty.

It also changes the titles of dog wardens and canine control officers to animal wardens and animal control officers and makes them responsible for administering and enforcing laws related to animal cruelty. They are.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1967 that a state couldn't impose its use tax on sales to residents by an out-of-state mail-order firm that was not doing business in the state, defined as having been responsible for advertising and enforcing laws related to animal cruelty. They are.

PATRIOTIC CAREER — Sgt. Walter A. Von Hone conducts an inspection while serving with the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve. The former Manchester resident retired March 3.

Former resident 'proud to serve country and state'

By Maureen Leavitt, Manchester Herald

Sgt. Walter A. Von Hone served 46 years in the U.S. military, but in his own words, he's "not a super-duper patriot."

Von Hone, 62, lived in Manchester for 38 years until he married in 1958 and moved to Vernon. He moved recently to South Dennis, Mass.

Von Hone, who served for many years as chairman of the Permanent Memorial Day Committee in Manchester, reminisced recently on the career he feels so close to his heart.

"More than anything else, I feel rather proud to have been able to serve the country and the state," Von Hone said in a telephone interview. "The military is something that's given me a lot, and given many other people a lot. I feel pretty darn fortunate to do what I could."

His time in the service included an adventure with the U.S. Navy aboard a transport ship during World II and concluded with him as a first-class sergeant in the Connecticut Army National Guard.

In between, he managed to serve in the Navy Reserve, the U.S. Coast Guard, and the now-defunct Connecticut State Guard.

Von Hone retired from the Connecticut Army National Guard March 3, on his 62nd birthday. The mandatory retirement age in the U.S. military is 60. But Von Hone still felt capable of serving and he was granted a two-year extension.

"I said to myself, at such time when I could no longer carry my weight, I would seek a discharge," Von Hone said. "But as long as I could do that, I wanted to stay a part of it."

Like millions of other young men eager to go to war for the U.S. in World War II, Von Hone enlisted at age 17. He joined the Navy in 1944 after graduating from Manchester High School.

Aboard the USS Runnels off the coast of Japan, Von Hone controlled a 4-inch main battery gun and performed maintenance on the ship's electric and hydraulic systems.

One time, a landing craft carrying ammunition blew up next to his ship and tossed him from one deck down 12 feet to another. Von Hone hurt his left leg and hip in the incident.

He will never forget the horrifying sights of British and Australian prisoners of war while his ship transported them to U.S. hospital ships.

After being discharged from the military, Von Hone said he enjoyed the regimentation, for one thing. "Von Hone said, 'I enjoyed the comradeship that goes along with being in the military.'"

He said his wife, Elizabeth, has fully supported his military career. He said it is imperative for spouses to support the military lifestyle if they are to succeed.

"I've really had a good, healthy existence, and the military was a big part of that," Von Hone said.

Some of Von Hone's awards and honors include the Army Commendation Medal, the Daughters of the American Revolution Medal of Honor, the Victory Medal and the Occupation of Japan Medal.

He received the Army Meritorious Service Medal just before retirement.

"I enjoyed the regimentation, for one thing," Von Hone said. "I enjoyed the comradeship that goes along with being in the military."

Defense rests in Wells Fargo trial

HARTFORD (AP) — The defense attorney for a Puerto Rican nationalist accused of masterminding the $7.1 million Wells Fargo robbery concedes that his client knew beforehand about the 1983 robbery, received the loot after the crime and helped the robber escape.

But Leonard Weinglass told jurors during closing arguments Wednesday that the government failed to offer any physical evidence or testimony to prove that his client, Juan Segarra Palmer, was responsible for the robbery itself, as charged.

"He knew what was going on. He wanted the robbery to succeed, but he was not there and the government has not proven he took steps to help it succeed," Weinglass said.

Segarra and four other men have been on trial since Oct. 11, 1988, on charges stemming from the robbery. Segarra faces 150 years in prison if convicted on all 16 counts against him.

Weinglass spent much of his four-hour summation attacking the testimony of two key government witnesses: a friend of Segarra's with a long criminal record for shoplifting who claimed Segarra recruited him to participate in an aborted robbery attempt before serving with a half-ton Guard Reserve. The former Manchester resident retired March 3.

Segarra's former lawyer, Steven S. Casey, D-Bristol, co-chairman of the Banks Committee, said the so-called "New England experiment" has been "a wonderful success and now it's time to turn our sights to the rest of the country."

Defense aide: Trial is 'exciting'

HARTFORD (AP) — Sitting quietly at the defense table during the Wells Fargo robbery trial is a young woman whose presence provides a vivid reminder of the long, sometimes violent struggle for Puerto Rican independence.

Her grandfather, Oscar Collazo Lopez, was convicted of trying to assassinate President Harry S. Truman nearly 40 years ago in a crime carried out in the name of Puerto Rican independence.

"It's more like a personal interest, since I grew up in the independence movement," Lourina DeJesus Collazo, 23, said Wednesday during a break in closing arguments in the Wells Fargo trial. "It's history and politically speaking, it's pretty exciting."

The government claims that the $7.1 million Wells Fargo robbery was carried out by Los Macheretos, a violent Puerto Rican independence group, to finance its revolutionary activities.

DeJesus put her life on hold and volunteered to come to Hartford in May to work as an interpreter and legal aide to the attorney representing Carlos M. Ayres Suarez, who is accused of using $20,000 from the 1983 robbery to finance a toy giveaway in Hartford as a Macheretos publicity stunt.

Her grandfather was 36 years old on Nov. 1, 1950, when he and another nationalist, Griselio Torresola, opened fire on Blair House, where Truman was staying while the White House was being renovated.

Truman was not injured, but Collazo's companion and a White House policeman were killed. Collazo was sentenced to die in the electric chair, but Truman commuted his sentence to life in prison in 1952.

President Carter granted Collazo clemency in 1979 along with three other Puerto Rican nationalists convicted in a 1954 shooting attack on the U.S. House of Representatives. Five congressmen were wounded in the attack.

"Surely I am proud of her," Collazo said of his granddaughter in a telephone interview from Puerto Rico. "There is no similarity except for the fact that we are fighting for the same cause," he said of the two cases. "I was involved in a violent action. This case is more a political action than violent action."

He declined to discuss the attempt on Truman's life. He said after his arrest that it was part of a plan to shock Americans into turning attention to conditions on the island. "That belongs to history," Collazo said.

Collazo, now 76, was freed from federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., and is now living with his daughter in Vega Baja, Puerto Rico.

Fawn Hall details document destruction

By Pete Vost
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Oliver North's former secretary, Fawn Hall, says she directed her staff to alter documents concerning his deep involvement with the Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a period which U.S. aid to them was against the law.

In testimony Wednesday, Ms. Hall also acknowledged that North joked about going to jail in 1985 when she typed false letters to Congress denying that North was involved with the Contras. North now is charged with lying to Congress.

"Col. North made jokes and there were jokes made about going to jail, Hall testified. "He is one to jest often... He had a great sense of humor."

Hall described how at North's instructions on Nov. 21, 1986, the day before the attorney general's aides began bombing National Security Council files for evidence of the Iran-Contra affair, she altered several classified memos.

The documents described North's recommendations to his superiors on how to help the Contras, including providing aid to Guatemala after military officials there supplied phone-end-user certificates for arms shipments to the Contras.

Ms. Hall said she made the changes and shredded the originals, adding that "it was the logical thing to do."

Asked if she had any qualms, she said, "There was a moment when I paused, but I worked for Col. North... four years. I knew his character well... knew there was a reason he was doing this."

When she asked North what to do about duplicating the handwritten checkmarks at the bottom of some of the original memos, "he said 'Check it.'"

She said her work was interrupted at one point because "Col. North was in the room with the shredder" and she went to help him. The volume of shredding was so heavy that the shredder jammed.

North was destroying 15 months worth of internal office systems computer notes. Hall said she had long wanted to get rid of a growing stack of telephone logs kept in the same drawer of a safe as the computer notes and when she asked if she could destroy them, "he said yes."

She agreed with prosecutor John Keiser that the phone logs were a record of messages from incoming calls, such as from North's courier to the Contras, Rob Owen, and from a fundraiser for the Contras, retired Army Gen. John Singlaub.

She said that on Nov. 25, 1986, the day North was fired over the secret diversion of Iran arms sale proceeds to the Contras, two NSC aides came in to seal the office.

As Hall noted through documents that North's successors would need to do their work, she found minutes of McFarlane's secret meeting the previous May in Tehran on arms sales and freeing U.S. hostages held in Lebanon, she said.

FINISHES TESTIMONY — Fawn Hall, former secretary to Oliver North, leaves court in Washington Wednesday after testifying in North's trial.

Drug smuggling, killings, bribery traced to cartel

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Leaders of a Colombian drug cartel bribed Nicaraguan officials for use of a military base as a way station for 3,000 pounds of cocaine before flying it into this country, according to a federal indictment.

Leaders of the Medellin cartel maintained the slayings of the Bahamian prime minister, of the Colombian justice minister and a U.S. drug informant, according to the federal District Court indictment unsealed Wednesday.

The indictment accuses 30 people, including an associate of the Bahamian prime minister, of participating in a ring that imported 22 tons of cocaine — $1 billion worth — in about 1974 and continuing into 1989, said Jack Hehr, a DEA spokesman.

The indictment also named Carlos Lehder Rivas, the Colombian drug kingpin who was convicted in Jacksonville last year of smuggling cocaine into the United States.

This prosecution will further dismantle the Medellin cartel and its distribution network in the United States, U.S. Attorney Robert W. Genzman said of the latest indictments.

The cartel, named for the Bahamian Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling, Bannister was a close associate of Lehder and was involved in the importation of the cartel to allow the island nation of Florida's shores to be used as a way station for drug imports.

Also indicted was Everette Bannister, a close associate of Lehder and was involved in the importation of the cartel to allow the island nation of Florida's shores to be used as a way station for drug imports.

Bush stresses family ties

130 boat people killed

TOKYO (AP) — About 130 Vietnamese boat people apparently drowned after a Japanese tanker collided with their overloaded 30-foot boat in the South China Sea, Japanese officials reported today.

Authorities said first reports of the March 8 accident did not emerge until Monday, when 35 survivors of the accident on the high seas between Vietnam and Malaysia arrived in the port of Yokohama.

The refugees said their wooden ship was carrying 168 people when it struck the propeller of the 228,000-ton Japanese tanker Nissen-Maru, said Nagasaki refugee center official Masanami Nakatakasaka.

The boat had left Long An in southern Vietnam for Malaysia on March 4, he said.

Genetic tests vetoed in baby swap case

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — A 10-year-old girl cannot be forced to have genetic tests to determine her parentage just because a Pennsylvania couple says she is their natural daughter lost in a baby swap, an appeals court has ruled.

The ruling Wednesday by the Second District Court of Appeal here was a major setback in the legal battle Ernest and Regina Twigg of Langhorne, Pa., are waging to prove the girl is their daughter.

The Twiggs contend the girl was swapped in the hospital days after her birth for a sickly child who later died. But the court ruled that genetic testing of the Sarasota girl, Kimberly Mays, would deny her "privacy and freedom from unjustified humiliation and psychological damage."

"They ruled with me every which way," said Arthur Ginsburg, attorney for Kimberly and the father who raised her, Robert Mays. "I'm thrilled about it."

Kimberly was also happy with the decision, Ginsburg said.

But the Twiggs' attorney, John Blakely, said: "The court seems to have totally ignored the anguish that Mr. and Mrs. Twigg have, knowing they have a child somewhere in the world that they have never seen."

Blakely said he plans to ask the full panel of judges to reconsider the opinion. If they refuse, he plans to take the case to the Florida Supreme Court.

If Wednesday's ruling holds, the Twiggs will have to file a new motion explaining why they want to know if Kimberly is their daughter. And the reason cannot be "merely to satisfy their curiosity," according to the appeals court ruling.

Attorneys for both sides agreed that the Twiggs' next step would be to seek custody of Kimberly, or the right to visit the girl.

If the court rules that the Twiggs don't have those rights, the question of genetic tests would become irrelevant.

"Admittedly, natural parents have certain presumptive rights of custody as to their offspring," the court said. "Those rights, however, are not absolute. Children are not property, but individuals whose needs and physical and mental well-being find protection in the law."

Ginsburg filed testimony from mental health experts who said Kimberly would be severely disturbed if she were forced to visit the Twiggs or undergo genetic tests.

"Children are not property, but individuals whose needs and physical and mental well-being find protection in the law."

Kimberly would be severely disturbed if she were forced to visit the Twiggs or undergo genetic tests.

The ruling is the latest twist in a case which began more than a decade ago in Hardee Memorial Hospital.

The girl the Twiggs brought home from the hospital, Arlena, died of a congenital heart condition last summer, and the couple now believe Arlena was actually the child of Robert and Barbara Mays, who died seven years ago.

Blood tests performed before Arlena died proved she could not have been the Twiggs' biological daughter.

Last fall, Blakely said the Twiggs would seek custody of Kimberly, in part because they believed Mays had participated in the baby swap.

But recently they softened their position, saying they would like to get to know Kimberly but wouldn't seek to take her away from the only father she has ever known.

Other residents violated deed restrictions governing placement of clotheslines and propane tanks, she said, so she didn't think Staci would be a problem when the family moved in November 1987.

Neighbors said they weren't sure whether they would continue their fight. Most live on a pension and don't have the funds for a long legal battle, and carrying on the dispute may be too stressful for those who are in frail health, Mrs. Murray said.

Staci will turn 15 on April 7 and would be allowed to stay then anyway. Still, she said she was surprised by the judge's ruling and didn't think her father had ended.

"For the most part I was shocked. I don't think it's over — maybe for the judicial system, but not for the neighborhood," she said.

Staci was kicked out of her family's home Jan. 31 after Pasco Circuit Judge Wayne Cobb threatened to jail her parents for contempt. The teen-ager went to live with a married brother several miles away, coming home to visit on weekends.

But Cobb ruled Wednesday that the ban was rendered illegal by a federal housing law that took effect March 12.

"This court cannot continue an injunction in violation of the law. The federal act now makes these deed restrictions unlawful and I'm going to dissolve the injunction," Cobb said at the end of a brief hearing.

The federal housing law is controversial in many retirement communities, where some residents say they're entitled to live quietly and without children.

All of the Elmers' neighbors who occupy the 16 other mobile homes in the small subdivision are retirees in their 60s, 70s and 80s.

The long court battle left bitterness on both sides.

"I just feel we've been taken," said Arlene Murray, who lives across the street from Beverly and Thomas Elmer. "We bought here 20 years ago with the idea of peace and quiet. We raised our family."

"It isn't that we are against children," she said. "Out of 17 families, it comes down to the fact that 16 don't have any rights — I don't think that's fair."

"I really don't care if they like me or not," said Mrs. Elmer, 45. "There are some gray-haired monsters here."

Mrs. Elmer, who sells real estate, admits she knew about the age restriction before buying the property, but liked the area because it was affordable and convenient to work and school.

Teen back home after winning court case

ZEPHYRHILLS, Fla. (AP) — A 14-year-old girl is back home today after winning an age discrimination battle but says she can't forgive the elderly neighbors who forced her eviction from a mobile home community.

"I'm glad to be home," Staci Elmer said Wednesday after a judge allowed her to return to her parents' home in this rural central Florida town.

But my family and I were segregated. I don't care if the neighbors got down on their knees and apologized. I don't think it could look that good if they forgave them. It hurt that much."

U.S. Ambassador Robert H. Pelletreau and Yasser Abed-Rabbo of the Palestine Liberation Organization smiled and chatted amiably for a few minutes over a cup of coffee, then faced each other over green balsa-covered tables.

On that note Wednesday began the first formal meeting under the administration of President Bush between Israel's biggest supporter and the principal organization struggling to import nations can handle them in an "environmentally sound" way.

Artilery blasts Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian forces today helped Moslem militia launch artillery and rocket attacks on Christian regions, witnesses said. Police said nine people were killed and 26 wounded in the fighting.

Police said more than 5,000 shells and rockets hit the capital, the Christian-dominated region of Beirut and Druse-held territory to the southeast during nine hours of bombardments by the Syrian army firing from several positions near the village. The witnesses, suffering an unspecified number of casualties in shelling from Aoun's forces.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said all foreign forces except U.N. peacekeepers should leave Lebanon.

Asked if that included the withdrawal of Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon with 40,000 troops, Redman said: "That would be all those non-Lebanese armed elements and organizations currently on Lebanese soil, with the exception of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon," whose mandate, it renewed every six months at the special request of Lebanon.

Ruling leaves New York in disarray

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling that declared the city's government unconstitutional prompted an immediate threat of secession from Staten Island, to which Mayor Edward I. Koch replied, "I'll protect it."

The Board of Estimate, a body unique to New York City, is "a substantial departure from the one-person, one-vote ideal," Justice Byron R. White wrote in the unanimous ruling Wednesday.

The justices upheld a U.S. Court of Appeals ruling requiring a plan that meets that standard. Currently, the borough of Staten Island, with fewer than 400,000 residents, has the same voting power on the board as Brooklyn, with 2.2 million.

The board governs everything from land-use decisions to setting sewer and water rates, negotiating city contracts and awarding franchises and leasing property.

It also has partial authority for the city's $2.6 billion budget.

Its powers are greater than those of City Council, a lawmaking body whose 45 representatives are elected from proportional districts citywide.

The board is made up of the five borough presidents, each with one vote, and three citywide elected officials — the mayor, comptroller and City Council president — each with two votes.

White said the underrepresentation on the board for larger communities is "inherently severe, and he rejected arguments that the make-up legitimately balances regional interests.

He said a voter is shortchanged if he may vote for one representative and the voters in another district half the size also elect one representative."

The ruling left city government in disarray before November's elections, in which all eight positions on the board will be decided. It also renewed calls from the smart-borough that it leave the city.

Staten Island "would be better off back under the rule of Governor III," said state Sen. John Marchi, who is sponsoring a bill in Albany to have his borough join the Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens and Staten Island joined together as New York City.

White said the underrepresentation on the board for larger communities is "inherently severe, and he rejected arguments that the make-up legitimately balances regional interests.

Americans warned about hijack plans

LONDON (AP) — American military personnel, diplomats and their families have been warned of a possible plan by Palestinian extremists to hijack a U.S. airliner in Europe on Easter weekend, British news media reported today.

New things in budget aren't new

The Manchester Board of Directors will face a difficult task in the next few weeks reducing the budget request of Town Manager Robert B. Weiss.

Weiss has recommended a General Fund budget of $73 million which, on the basis of present revenue estimates, would require a tax-rate increase of 4.74 mills.

Despite the proposed spending increase, the budget recommendation does not seem extravagant, and there do not seem to be places in the budget recommendation that present obvious opportunities for major reductions.

Before the budget becomes final, the state may increase the amount coming to the town above the conservative estimate used in preparing the proposal.

A provision of about $55,000 for overtime to pay for better maintenance of parks and recreation facilities is another.

A large part of the proposed $9.5 million increase in spending, a 15 percent rise, comes in the Board of Education budget recommendation of $41.5 million. And most of that comes about as the aftermath of the state Education Enhancement Act, which set the pattern for increases in school salaries.

Because a cursory inspection of the budget does not suggest any easy way to cut it, the directors will have to work harder at the task, scrutinizing and setting priorities.

One hopeful note is that as commercial development in Buckland goes forward, the Grand List will increase. The next budget should reflect much of that increase.

The key to reducing the budget increase for the coming fiscal year may be in postponing some accomplishments until that Grand List growth makes the financial burden easier to bear.

That will mean a lowering of public expectations in some cases, a work overload to put up with bad sidewalks or a like overload in social service programs.

The capital improvements budget of about $1.2 million includes replacing a number of old vehicles. It may be necessary to keep some of them in service longer.

When the public hearing on the budget is held April 4 at Waddell School, Manchester taxpayers will have the opportunity to say which services they want and which they are willing to pay for. They should take that opportunity to give the directors guidance.

'Trickle-down Republicanism'

By Walter R. Mears

WASHINGTON — One Democrat calls it "trickle-down Republicanism." Another warns of the "McDonaldization" of American politics, which is a mouthful. Their message is the same: the assumption that Democrats can count on remaining a powerful party out of power is short-sighted politics. After losing four out of five presidential elections, the party could see the trend trickle down and threaten Democratic dominance in Congress, too.

Sen. Bob Graham of Florida used the McDonald's analogy. He said people are getting political messages the same way they hear about hamburger chains, on television. Graham said that goes double for people who move from one state to another — with the Sun Belt trend taking most of them toward Republican areas.

In that situation, he said, the notion that there can be two Democratic parties, one of presidential losers and the other of congressional winners, is one that can't last forever.

William A. Galston, a University of Maryland political scientist and an advisor to former Vice President Walter F. Mondale in the landslide Democratic defeat of 1984, supplied the theory of trickle-down GOP strength.

He said that is more likely than a permanent, split-level realignment in which there's a congressional party and a presidential party. Galston pointed to Texas as an example of what could happen nationally — rising Republican strength beginning at the presidential level and gradually spreading down the ballot. Galston said that "could well turn out to be the harbinger of our party's national fate." It would have to be a very early harbinger — Democrats dominated the House 238 to 174. Whatever the pull of party, the power of incumbency is greater, and the overwhelming majority of members who ran for re-election win it. So any significant change in political alignment is probably would take years.

In the Senate, Democratic 55 to 45, change could come more rapidly, not in the next election but possibly in 1992, according to Galston. Those arguments got a sympathetic hearing at the Democratic Leadership Council, a moderate-to-conservative counterforce to the party's liberal wing. The prevailing view there is that Democrats must move to the middle in order to field a presidential candidate who can win.

When that group met recently in Philadelphia, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, the chairman, said some Democrats find solace for national defeat in congressional dominance. "But a congressional majority cannot set the nation's agenda; only a president can do that," Nunn said. "Until we regain the White House, we will be able to block, modify and amend, but not to challenge, inspire and lead."

"We will be the mechanics of national policy, but not the architects of national purpose," he said. Nunn also said it was nothing personal — "I have no plans nor any inclination to run for president in 1992."

Galston warned that "the continuation of presidential failure will relentlessly threaten every bastion we still possess."

Union foe formidable in Mexico

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — Joaquin Hernandez Galicia, the fat-cat leader of Mexico's 200,000 oil workers, may have met a canary he can't swallow. Mexico's new president, Carlos Salinas de Gortari, as one of his first presidential acts, had Hernandez arrested in January.

The story of Hernandez, known as "La Quina," is one we can tell firsthand. Dale Van Atta traveled to Mexico in 1988 to investigate La Quina. He uncovered evidence of possible fraud, embezzlement and featherbedding by La Quina and the union leadership and tracked a history of violence and murder against La Quina's critics.

Successful presidents of Mexico, since 1962, were afraid to take on La Quina and the union. In the meantime, billions of dollars were diverted by the union while Mexicans were starving. Van Atta, with one Mexican Cabinet minister who appeared to be unafraid of La Quina — Salinas, was cautious at first. He acknowledged the need to reform the union and oust La Quina, but said the time had not yet come. Salinas then urged Van Atta not to visit La Quina.

A few days later, Van Atta went to Ciudad Madero, a flyspeck town on the Gulf of Mexico, the home of La Quina. He picked up an interpreter — the first person he met at the airport who spoke English — an elderly man who turned out to be an oil worker and an ardent fan of La Quina. Many of Mexico's petroleeros would not pig-tail to La Quina's home and wait for days to see him. On some evenings, the godfather would grant audiences and bestow favors. Men pleaded for work or a loan. Women with unfaithful husbands asked La Quina to punish philanderers. Children delivered gifts.

But La Quina had no time for reporters unless they were on his payroll. One journalist who criticized La Quina states that he was kicked by his bodyguards while La Quina shouted, "I don't have any obligation to tell journalists anything. You are swine." Van Atta bluffed his way past the gun-toting guards outside La Quina's home, called "The Bunker." He found La Quina at a small desk surrounded by pictures of Don Quixote and legendary Mexican peasant heroes. The small man was soft-spoken, until Van Atta began asking about skimming union money. La Quina was insulted. The nervous translator, sweating profusely, refused to translate any more until La Quina ordered him to.

About 10 minutes into the tense interview, several of the guards stood up, one pointing an Uzi submachine gun at Van Atta. Again and again, La Quina answered questions by saying his affairs were not the business of an American.

Van Atta stood and reminded La Quina why the treachery of a Mexican union boss is indeed the business of Americans. He said Mexico was needlessly starving while the union squandered money and he reminded La Quina that Mexico had a foreign debt of $100 billion. He concluded that La Quina sold jobs to incompetent workers who invariably botched their work and caused oil spills in the ocean. In 1979, for example, the Intox offshore oil well blew and went uncapped for 294 days, creating the largest oil spill in history and ruining Texas beaches.

La Quina was furious, and his guards were waiting for an order to silence the American columnist. Before La Quina could weigh the options, Van Atta left with the terrified translator in tow. When Salinas got word of the encounter, he wrote to Van Atta and promised that somebody someone would do something about La Quina. Salinas was inaugurated president last Dec. 1, then 45 days later, he sent the Army to raid La Quina's home for a cache of weapons. A federal officer was killed and the shooter and La Quina now stands accused of the killing.

Mini-editorial

Congress didn't get a pay raise, but don't assume the lawmakers have given up. There is talk of an allowance of $88 a day to compensate them for the high cost of keeping two households. That looks like a $12,000 annual raise, tax free, but maybe they figure the taxpayers won't notice. The people who will notice are underpaid workers who won't get a living allowance. The first hearing was scheduled March 21 in Newark, and a second hearing will be March 28 at 7 p.m. at the Branford House at Eastern Point in Groton.

Deli satisfies cravings of connoisseurs

By Nancy Pappas Manchester Herald

You wouldn't think of ordering sauteed shrimp and scallops, steak au poivre or chocolate mousse at a delicatessen.

That is, unless the deli was the Pic A Dilly Deli at 697 Main St., which features the cooking of Tracy Young, a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y. Young, a Manchester native and 1980 graduate of East Catholic High School, works for her mother at the restaurant which her family opened in July. By day, she fries eggs and potatoes, or puts together chicken salad and cold-cut sandwiches.

But on Thursday evenings, Young calls on her years of culinary training, serving up dishes like medallions of pork with marsala sauce for 28 to 60 people. Priced between $11 and $15 each, these gourmet meals have found growing acceptance among customers over the past eight to 10 weeks, she said.

The type of crowd that we're hoping to get in here, in which we are succeeding, I think, is the kind of crowd that would want to go to Caves', but can't afford it, or who want to go out with some of the nicer restaurants in town, but who don't want to dress up," Young said. That may sound ambitious for a delicatessen. But Young has been cooking professionally since her junior year of high school, and has worked in high-rated French restaurants such as La Colline in Washington, D.C.

With these credentials, it was only logical that Young be recruited when her uncle, Walter Gleason, and her mother, Barbara Young, decided to open their own place. He does the bookkeeping and she handles the food. He developed a business plan, she handled the details. They are now a family, and we wanted to really do it right," said Barbara Young, who was looking for a classified advertising sales manager when she decided to switch careers.

Customers sometimes have said that Tracy Young's background may have made the young woman somewhat overqualified for a job in a deli. But Young said those people don't realize the tremendous challenges involved in opening a restaurant — principal owners of unsecured bonds called debentures. If Seabrook operates, Northeast would buy some of its power at a determined price. If it doesn't operate, owners of the company would get about $160 million for the 1,150-megawatt plant, whose pricing has reached $5.9 billion.

Public Service continues to consider the plan, but expects to receive other, competing offers. Those expressing interest in buying some of Public Service include the New England Electric System in Westborough, Mass., the New Hampshire Electric Cooperative in Plymouth, and a pairing of Central Maine Power Co. and Central Vermont Public Service Co., Ashob said.

Northeast, New England Electric and the co-op already own part of Seabrook directly or through subsidiaries.

The plan includes proposed annual electricity rate increases of 4.5 percent for two years, plus or minus adjustments for fuel costs, followed by annual increases matching inflation for five years, again, plus or minus adjustments for fuel costs. Public Service's 36 percent share of Seabrook, completed in 1986 but idle for lack of a federal operating license, would be spun off into a separate company owned by the utility's unsecured creditors — principally owners of unsecured bonds called debentures. If it doesn't operate, owners of the company would get about $160 million for the 1,150-megawatt plant, whose pricing has reached $5.9 billion.

matching inflation for five years, again, plus or minus adjustments for fuel costs. Public Service's 36 percent share of Seabrook, completed in 1986 but idle for lack of a federal operating license, would be spun off into a separate company owned by the utility's unsecured creditors — principally owners of unsecured bonds called debentures. If Seabrook operates, Northeast would buy some of its power at a determined price. If it doesn't operate, owners of the company would get about $160 million for the 1,150-megawatt plant, whose pricing has reached $5.9 billion.

Public Service continues to consider the plan, but expects to receive other, competing offers. Those expressing interest in buying some of Public Service include the New England Electric System in Westborough, Mass., the New Hampshire Electric Cooperative in Plymouth, and a pairing of Central Maine Power Co. and Central Vermont Public Service Co., Ashob said.

Delicious cravings of connoisseurs

Pic A Dilly goes gourmet on Thursdays

By Nancy Pappas Manchester Herald

You wouldn't think of ordering sauteed shrimp and scallops, steak au poivre or chocolate mousse at a delicatessen.

That is, unless the deli was the Pic A Dilly Deli at 697 Main St., which features the cooking of Tracy Young, a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y. Young, a Manchester native and 1980 graduate of East Catholic High School, works for her mother at the restaurant which her family opened in July. By day, she fries eggs and potatoes, or puts together chicken salad and cold-cut sandwiches.

But on Thursday evenings, Young calls on her years of culinary training, serving up dishes like medallions of pork with marsala sauce for 28 to 60 people. Priced between $11 and $15 each, these gourmet meals have found growing acceptance among customers over the past eight to 10 weeks, she said.

The type of crowd that we're hoping to get in here, in which we are succeeding, I think, is the kind of crowd that would want to go to Caves', but can't afford it, or who want to go out with some of the nicer restaurants in town, but who don't want to dress up," Young said. That may sound ambitious for a delicatessen. But Young has been cooking professionally since her junior year of high school, and has worked in high-rated French restaurants such as La Colline in Washington, D.C.

With these credentials, it was only logical that Young be recruited when her uncle, Walter Gleason, and her mother, Barbara Young, decided to open their own place. He does the bookkeeping and she handles the food. He developed a business plan, she handled the details. They are now a family, and we wanted to really do it right," said Barbara Young, who was looking for a classified advertising sales manager when she decided to switch careers.

Customers sometimes have said that Tracy Young's background may have made the young woman somewhat overqualified for a job in a deli. But Young said those people don't realize the tremendous challenges involved in opening a restaurant — principal owners of unsecured bonds called debentures. Naab agreed that cuts are in order. "I'm sure that it will be reduced — how much I don't know," he said today. He said that the idea of no tax hike would not be practical this year. Workhoven and Naab said the education funding was one reason he was recommending full funding. "I really don't know," said DiRosa of the need for cuts. "Education makes up half the budget (but) there are other needs." The decision on whether to reduce the education budget will depend on how much the directors want to raise the tax rate. DiRosa said. He would not say how high taxes would have to go before he would recommend cutting the education budget. "Obviously, it's going to be a very difficult year," Weinberg said. "And until I see the exact proposal, I don't have any comment to make, other than that we're going to have to make additional cuts in the proposal, as we always have done."

She didn't have a figure on how much money should be eliminated. Democratic Director Kenneth N. Tedford withheld judgment on whether cuts should be made or by how much. But he said, "The mill-rate increase of 4-plus mills is something I'm not pleased with. We're going to have to look at the expenditure and revenue side also and see what we do about the mill-rate increase."

He described Weiss's recommendations as "pretty much a hold-the-line" budget. Fogarty, DiRosa and Weinberg said that this would be the toughest budget year for them so far. Fogarty has been on the board since 1981. DiRosa and Weinberg since 1979. "There's always been a lot of state aid, and this is shortened up," Fogarty said. But Tedford said that the directors' budget review this year would be the same way as it has been in the past.

Democratic Director Mary Ann Handley said today she had not looked at Weiss's budget and would not comment on it. Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano could not be reached for comment this morning.

City man arrested after drugs found
A 27-year-old Hartford man is facing charges that he was planning to sell four ounces of cocaine worth $45,000 at a local McDonald's Restaurant Monday night, police said.

Members of the Tri-Town Narcotics Task Force arrested Lincoln P. Mierex in the parking lot of McDonald's, 70 W. Center St., about 10:30 p.m. and charged him with possession of cocaine with the intent to sell, and interfering with a police officer, police said.

Police served an arrest warrant Monday for a 32-year-old Hartford woman on charges she stole three credit cards from Vernon last October, police said.

Lee Schiraldi, of 103 Franklin Ave., was charged with three counts of possession of stolen credit cards, sixth-degree larceny by possession and failure to keep narcotics in an original container, police said.

said he was not sure how that would affect the school budget vote. Last week, Town Manager Robert B. Weiss recommended funding the full education budget. Weiss said that Gov. William A. O'Neill's proposal to cut state education funding was one reason he was recommending full funding. "I really don't know," said DiRosa of the need for cuts. "Education makes up half the budget (but) there are other needs." The decision on whether to reduce the education budget will depend on how much the directors want to raise the tax rate. DiRosa said. Economy on inflation in January and February that sent the stock market plunging, many analysts believe that growth is slowing and the central bank does not need to do more in its anti-inflation efforts. First word on the GNP performance for the first three months of 1989 will be released in April. An inflation index tied to the GNP rose at a sharp annual rate of 5.3 percent in the October-December quarter, up from a 4.7 percent rate of increase in the third quarter. Since the index, known as the GNP deflator, has been rising at an annual rate of 3.8 percent or less for the past three years, analysts said the uptick over the 5 percent mark indicated that inflationary pressures have increased. In a look at how U.S. businesses performed, the Commerce Department said corporate profits after taxes shot up 14.8 percent in 1988, aided by a 2.8 percent rise in the fourth quarter. The annual increase was the best performance for corporate profits since a huge 24.4 percent jump in 1983, the year after the end of the steep 1981-82 recession.

Bailout bill

Wednesday night. But the House debate lasted so long the Senate went home at 10:30 p.m. without acting on the bill. "It's late," said state Sen. Kevin Sullivan, D-West Hartford. "We didn't think it was seemly to make this kind of a decision in the late hours of the night or the wee, wee hours of the morning." The Senate planned a 2 p.m. session today to take up the package. Several Democrats in the Senate said they had reservations about the so-called employee furloughs, and Gov. William A. O'Neill also voiced concern about the proposal, which would apply only to state workers who make $30,000 per year or more. "You're talking about supervisory personnel and I'm not sure who's going to be around to supervise," O'Neill told reporters. "It also penalizes those who are not (union) organized," because those who would be penalized are those that are not represented by labor," the governor said. The Democratic package also calls for increased "sin taxes" on beer, wine, liquor and cigarettes, effective April 1, to raise a total of $19.4 million in three months. State taxes on beer and wine would increase 50 percent, and cigarette taxes would rise from 26 cents to 40 cents per pack. The House package also calls for: Accelerated collection of capital gains taxes; to raise $25 million. Accelerated collection of insurance premium taxes; to raise $16 million. Adding a 15 percent surcharge on the state corporation tax; to raise $35 million. Adjusting the state's estimate of the increase in the state teacher's retirement fund from a percent to 8.5 percent, which would allow the state to contribute $20 million less to the fund. Transferring $30 million from the transportation fund, which is running a surplus, to the ailing general fund. A 3-cent per gallon increase in the state gasoline tax effective July 1, would repay the transportation fund. Taking $99.4 million from the reserve or rainy day fund, which totals $130 million. Although powerless to stop the Democratic package from passing, Republicans countered with a steady and lengthy flow of anti-tax rhetoric.

Housing

dwellings would have to measure at least 18,000 square feet with a minimum front yard of 40 feet, a minimum rear yard of 30 feet and a minimum side yard of 15 feet. The proposed amendment would limit new multi-family buildings to three stories. Each unit would have to be at least 1,250 square feet and have two parking spaces, one of which would have to be enclosed in a garage. The applicants want to extend the Historic Zone east to the Great Lawn. One of the applicants, Urbanetti, is a member of the Cheney National Historic District Commission. A proposal by Gryk and Michael Lynch to change the zone of eight acres of the lawn from Residence AA to Planned Residential Development to build 26 condominiums was rejected by the Planning and Zoning Commission in July 1988. Their 1984 attempt to preserve the Great Lawn in its present state have failed. In 1984 there was talk of a bond issue to buy the lawn from its owners, but the consensus was that the bond issue would not win public support.

Pensions

after the submission of the petition. LaBelle declined to comment on the petition, which cites the state's Home Rule Act, Section 7-188 of the General Statutes. In the past, however, LaBelle has said the district had not adopted the Home Rule Act and changes in its charter had to be made by the General Assembly. Steves said the signatures of only 10 voters were needed to petition the district directors. A state special act setting up the district requires the district president or the district clerk to call a special meeting of the district when at least 10 voters petition for such a meeting. District Director Joseph Tripp, fire commissioner, said Wednesday that while the question of a pension for firefighters had been discussed in the past, it had not been discussed within the last couple of years. Tripp said, "I think some of the firefighters deserve something for their years of service, but to pay for it is something else." Steves said he believes there are only about 12 communities in Connecticut that do not provide some kind of pension for volunteer firefighters.

Semi-automatic weapons should be banned

I'm going to stick my neck out on a controversial subject among sportsmen today. And that is the banning of semi-automatic weapons and assault rifles to the general public. No waiting periods, but an absolute ban on the sale of these mostly military weapons. And while I'm at it, I'm dead set against the sale of pistol-grip shotguns to the American public. First off, before the sportsmen get all up in the air, let me say this: I am a gun owner. I've had guns since I was 16, and that's going back a "far piece." I now own guns, all shotguns, I hunt. I shoot skeet, I shoot trap, and I enjoy all three sports. And I will defend my right to own these shotguns. Sporting rifles, sporting shotguns, sporting pistols and revolvers, are all just that. Sporting armament, and that's the purpose for which they were made. A hunting rifle was made to hunt with, a target rifle for target shooting, and shotguns for both hunting and skeet, trap, or sporting clays. Some of the shotguns are plugged, for only one in the chamber and three in the tube. These are semi-automatic and though they can hold five shells, the plugs are state mandated. So it's a three-shot firearm which brings us to the assault rifles. Uzis and others of that ilk. These weapons were made for killing. Killing humans. They are weapons of war, and their origins in whatever country they originated, were for a strictly military use. Most people do not realize what shotguns can do. During World War II, I carried a semi-automatic rifle and a Thompson sub-machine gun during my time in the southwest Pacific area. I know firsthand what a semi-automatic can do, as well as what a Thompson can do to a human being when on full automatic. We survived our semi-automatic weapons to be able to fire as full automatic. Now the argument I get, is that the people who want to keep these assault weapons, want to use them for hunting. And the other argument is that they want to use them for target practice. It doesn't take too much work to change a semi-automatic to make it full, and with the full clips a lot of rounds can be poured out of one of these rifles in one heckuva short time. If a man has to go into the forest to hunt, and hang off more than three shots in a hurry, then he sure doesn't belong in the woods in the first place. If it takes 10 or 15 shots to bring down a deer, or whatever, then the hunter is in the wrong sport. Now don't get me wrong. If these assault rifles were not so readily available to the wrong people, and were kept at a semi-automatic phase, and were used strictly on a limited (cartridge) basis for both hunting and target shooting, I would not be against them. But with all the massive use of these rifles as weapons on a city streets all over this country, I say enough is enough. If it can't be controlled, do without. As for the pistol-grip shotguns. That's another weapon made to be used against people. It's easily concealed. Let me tell you a quick story. I was shooting skeet one day on a squad of four, when this "dude" showed up in combat boots, camouflage briches and shirt and a pistol-grip shotgun. He joined our squad to shoot, and informed us that he was just getting his "weapon" all tuned up. Because you never know when you might need it. After getting around to station five and only breaking one bird, my good buddy Fred Simmons (now deceased) said to this joker, "Hey, you couldn't hit a bull in the butt with a snow shovel with that thing. Now put it away, and get off the field. All you've done is point that all four points of the compass, and never out on the field." He, the short shotgun owner, and the other three types I met, who came out to our field to practice with those shotguns, looked on them as weapons, not sporting instruments. If you want to shoot skeet, or trap, use skeet or trap guns, but don't give the rest of the sportsmen in this country a bad name. If the weapons aren't available, then the criminals can't get 'em. So we don't need them. Joe Garman, a Manchester resident for many years, is a recognized authority on the subject of bamboo fly rods and the sport of fly fishing.

Joe's World

HARTFORD — Kay Whitmore didn't expect to start his first National Hockey League game in goal for the Hartford Whalers the day after he was called up from Binghamton. "In the home stretch of the regular season and in the midst of a dogfight for third place with Buffalo, Whaler Coach Larry Pleau gave the 21-year-old his first shot in the net in Wednesday night's game with Boston. Whitmore, who made 23 saves, and the Whalers responded with an intense defensive effort and utilized two goals from Kevin Dineen to hold off the Bruins, 4-2, before a sellout crowd of 15,223 at the Civic Center. Coupled with the Sabres' 2-1 loss to St. Louis, the Whalers (34-35-7) have moved to within two points of Buffalo (34-33-7) with six regular season games left for each team. "I was surprised," Whitmore said of his quick entry into NHL waters. "I thought, if I was going to get a start at all, I was going to be here for awhile. I guess sometimes it's better to get thrown right in here." As for the sellout crowd? "It was so loud, it was deafening," Whitmore continued. "In Binghamton, we had about 4,000 (people) at the games. Hartford, which had only four shots in the opening period and a total of 15 tying a Whaler home record for least shots in a game, took a 1-0 lead at 8:45 of the first. Rookie Scott Young crossed the blue line and sent a powerful 56-foot slapshot whizzing by Bruin goalie Rejean Lemelin. "I came down and happen to beat him up high," Young explained. STORRS — If there's going to be a miracle this year, it's not going to come from the state of Connecticut. Alabama perhaps. Emotionally charged after a road win at Richmond Monday night, the University of Alabama-Birmingham carried that over to Wednesday night to upset defending National Invitation Tournament champion Connecticut, 85-79, before a partisan sellout crowd of 4,064 at the Field House. "UAB reminded me of a team that wore blue and white last year," UConn Coach Jack Gattuso said after the Blazers (21-11) earned the trip to New York's Madison Square Garden for Monday night's NIT semifinal. "Emotionally, they played like you had won. We played with the normal toughness that you're supposed to have on the road." "They just had no die in them." The game marked several firsts. It was Connecticut's first home loss in Storrs since Jan. 26, 1985, when Boston College beat the Huskies, 78-77, in overtime. UConn had won 26 in a row at the facility scheduled to be replaced by the new arena. It was also UConn's first loss to a non-Big East team in the Field House since St. Peter's beat them in the 1980 NIT. "I believe in the law of averages," said UAB Coach Barret Burrow. "You just can't go out and win 50 in a row in your own building. I'm saying that partly in jest, but I do believe it." The Blazers also sent Husky seniors Cliff Robinson (23 points) and Phil Gamble (20, including 8-for-9 from 3-point range) out as leaders for the first time ever in Storrs. The pair had participated in 21 consecutive wins at the Field House before being gunned down by the fourth place finisher in the Sun Belt Conference. Rozelle ends 29-year tenure

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press
PALM DESERT, Calif. — When Pete Rozelle strode to the podium, all but half-dozen of the 50 or so people in the meeting room thought he was doing no more than opening a routine business session. A few seconds later, when the commission with the second longest tenure of any chief executive in sports history announced his resignation, there was stunned silence. "It was as if they didn't believe it," said Wellington Mara of the New York Giants, the NFL's senior owner and one of the few who knew. A few hours later, most still didn't, but even Al Davis of the Los Angeles Raiders, Rozelle's longtime adversary who embroiled the commissioner as he led the meeting room after his resignation. "I feel emotionally drained," Davis said. The tear-laden announcement Wednesday by the 63-year-old Rozelle that he was stepping down three years before his term expires Sunday, is primarily for family reasons and will move from the New York suburb of Rye to the San Diego area. Rozelle said he was in good health "except for the 20 pounds I've added since I've quit smoking a year ago," and said he was stepping down primarily for family reasons and will move from the New York suburb of Rye to the San Diego area. Rozelle

Rozelle said he made the decision last October to make the announcement now. But those close to him said it probably gained impetus by the death of his stepson — the son of wife Carrie — two days before last January's Super Bowl.

"I want to enjoy free time — stress free time — with Carrie," he said.

Unlike most major developments in the NFL, this one was top secret. The first to learn were Mara and Leon Hess of the New York Jets, whom he told last week. When he arrived here Sunday, he told four other league fixtures — Rooney, Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys, Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns and Lamar Hunt of the Kansas City Chiefs. And it wasn't until a few minutes before the announcement that he broke the news to three of his four top aides — communications director Joe Browne, executive vice president Weiss and director of broadcasting Val Pinchbeck. A fourth confidant, Jay Meyer, was away with his airline wife.

"We talked about the agenda," Browne said. "And he kept saying 'what's first.' I told him the management council was making a presentation and he said 'No, I've got something to say.' That's when he told us."

"It was like it was in the room. We were struck for a second, then he broke into tears."

He broke into tears again half an hour later, after he was applauded by reporters at a hastily called news conference — more than one media member showed up in bathing attire after having been plucked from the pool by members of the public relations staff.

Then the tributes started pouring in for the man who started a consensus that made the NFL one of the nation's preeminent sports organizations despite the tendency of 28 owners to pull it in different directions.

Elected in 1966 as a compromise candidate at age 33, Rozelle emerged from a background in public relations and as general manager of the Los Angeles Rams to build the league that shared revenue as a matter of course.

"He was able to get people in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago to share television revenue equally with people in Green Bay and Buffalo," said Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns. "That was his genius and that made us what we are today."

"Pete Rozelle dominated his profession," said Davis, to whom Rozelle barely spoke during the 10-year period that began in 1978, when Davis first proposed moving the Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles, and ended two weeks ago when the law suit against the league that was won by the Raiders was settled for $18 million.

"He had a commitment to his profession and the NFL that I greatly admire and a commitment to build a better league," said Davis, who was commissioner of the old AFL when the leagues merged in 1966.

"He had the unique ability to get people all on the same page," said Hunt, another AFL owner. "If you needed a consensus, you went to Pete," said Hugh Culverhouse of Tampa Bay.

Hunt and Mara, presidents of the AFC and NFC respectively, will head a five-man search team that will seek a successor. The other members are expected to be named today.

The search could be difficult. In fact, Modell, Schramm and other owners suggested that the league might need both a commissioner and president to run the myriad of tasks undertaken by Rozelle.

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Wade Boggs, Boston's one-man hitting machine, is striking out as trade bait.

In six seasons, Boggs has won five batting championships. His lifetime average of .356 ties him with Shoeless Joe Jackson for third place all-time. Ty Cobb is first with .367, followed by Rogers Hornsby with .358.

Boggs is arguably the best hitter in the major leagues, the only player since 1900 to get 200 or more hits in six consecutive seasons.

Now, only 30, he is at a career crossroads. His off-field love life has damaged not only his reputation, but also that of teammates and the Red Sox.

So the best hitter is available in a trade and other major league clubs are balking.

Boston general manager Lou Gorman spent virtually all day Wednesday talking trade with other major league clubs. He struck out, something Boggs does rarely.

"Maybe they feel they'll break us down," Gorman said. Reports of possible deals with the New York Mets, the New York Yankees, the Kansas City Royals, the Houston Astros and the Seattle Mariners were shot down, Gorman said. "They're there, but they're not there. You can talk to them and still not be able to do it."

"If things stay as they are, there will be no trade."

MEETING THE PRESS — Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose talks with members of the press before the start of Wednesday's game in Plant City, Fla.

Rose putting on a front while under investigation

By Joe Kov The Associated Press

PLANT CITY, Fla. — If Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose is being investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he is not showing it. Rose cracked jokes and talked baseball and sidestepped questions about gambling allegations during a 45-minute news session with reporters Wednesday before an exhibition game.

"All I worry about is the Cincinnati Reds. You find that hard to believe?" Rose said. "All I worry about is the Cincinnati Reds. You find that hard to believe?"

Rose still refuses to discuss allegations that have linked him with gambling and could jeopardize his future in baseball. One of the allegations under investigation is that Rose may have bet on baseball, possibly his own team, a baseball source told The Associated Press.

"That's what they're looking into. Nothing has been proven yet," said the source, who asked not to be identified. If proven true, Rose would be suspended or even banned for life.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and Commissioner-elect A. Bartlett Giamatti announced in a statement Monday that Major League Baseball was looking into "serious allegations" about Rose. The statement didn't mention the nature of the allegations, and gave no indication when the commissioner might act.

In a copyright story today, the Dayton Daily News reported that Ueberroth probably would announce his decision today. The newspaper quoted an unnamed source as saying "Pete will get a minimum suspension of a year. If he's lucky."

However, a source with major league baseball told the AP that "it was unlikely" any action would be taken today.

Rose has been left to issue "no comment" when asked about the allegations, and to wait for a ruling by the commissioner. Rose said Wednesday he had no information about when it might come.

"No idea. No more idea than you do," Rose said. His dugout meeting with about 75 reporters before an exhibition game against St. Louis was the first time he'd made any comment about his situation.

Rose, however, refused to talk about Major League baseball's investigation of him.

Issues, including income Rose may have derived from the sale of his personal memorabilia, the newspaper said.

D. Michael Crites, U.S. attorney for the southern district of Ohio, declined comment. The New York Post also said in Wednesday's edition that Rose's activities have the attention of the FBI's office and the Internal Revenue Service, plus the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Cincinnati police.

The New York newspaper quoted an unnamed source as saying Cincinnati police estimate the Reds manager owes bookmakers between $500,000 and $750,000. Police officials were not commenting on that report.

W.L.W.T.V. in Cincinnati said it spoke with Michael Fry, who was tied to Rose's gambling in a Sports Illustrated story this week. The station said that Fry, who is serving a prison term for cocaine trafficking and income tax evasion, told it that Rose bet up to $40,000 on football games.

The Plain Dealer of Cleveland reported today that Fry flunked an FBI lie-detector test last year while working as a government informant, and federal prosecutors said that "severely limited" the value of his use as a witness. Rose has acknowledged making legal bets at tracks, but has denied betting on college basketball.

Sports Illustrated, in its March 27 issue, quoted an unidentified source as saying Rose "exchanged signals somehow relating to baseball betting" from the dugout at Riverfront Stadium. SI also reported allegations that Rose had bet on games in which his team was not involved, he would be suspended for one year. If Rose bet on games involving the Reds, he would be banned for life. Such a penalty could hurt his chances for the Hall of Fame.

New NFL boss not easy choice

By Dave Goldberg The Associated Press

PALM DESERT, Calif. — For NFL owners, finding a successor to Pete Rozelle is like a boxing fan trying to determine who will succeed Mike Tyson as heavyweight champion. There just don't seem to be any leading candidates.

"We have to turn over every stone," said Edward DeBartolo Jr., owner of the San Francisco 49ers, after Rozelle's shocking announcement Wednesday that he is retiring three years before his contract expires.

"This guy isn't coming into any day at the beach. This man will be succeeding a legend."

"I'm older than Pete," the 68-year-old Schramm said of the 83-year-old Rozelle. "But the league is No. 1 in Chicago Bears and Schramm hedged when asked if he might be interested in taking the job on an interim basis.

Less likely are two who were hot candidates half-a-dozen years ago but whose luster has dimmed because of their involvement in the NFL's recent labor and labor troubles: Michael McCaskey, a congressman and now attorney, and George Halas, one of the league's founders, and Jack Donnan, executive director of the NFL Management Council.

The new commissioner will be named today. The local entry, Wellington Mara of the New York Giants and Lamar Hunt of the Kansas City Chiefs, respectively, were the NFL's top candidates for the job.

Several owners, led by Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns, suggested a one-game suspension for Rozelle following his one-game suspension for breaching curfew. He will join Steve Bucknall, Pete Chilcutt and Scott Williams up front.

NCAA foes eye revenge

By Owen Confield The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Although staying alive in the NCAA tournament should serve as incentive enough for Virginia and Michigan to play well tonight, each has added reason to win. It's called revenge.

In each of the past two seasons, Michigan has lost to North Carolina in the tournament. The Wolverines lost 109-57 two years ago, then were beaten 78-69 in the regional semifinals last season. Virginia, meanwhile, lost 109-81 to Oklahoma in a holiday tournament last season. In that game, the Cavaliers were outscored 27-0 in the opening nine minutes of the second half.

Fifty-ranked North Carolina, 29-7, and 10th-ranked Michigan, 26-7, play in the Southeast Regional semifinals tonight. Oklahoma, 30-5 and ranked fourth, plays Virginia, 21-16, in the other semifinal.

"We can't help but remember we've been beaten by them twice," Michigan's Loy Vaught said. "The revenge factor will hype us up. It will put fire in our eyes."

Said Virginia's Richard Morgan: "The attitude of everybody on this team is we're not going to lose by 48. It's just a whole different situation."

Michigan's interim coach, Steve Fisher, and Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs downplayed the role revenge might play. "We haven't talked about revenge at all," said Fisher, who assumed the Wolverine coaching duties prior to the NCAA tournament when Bill Frieder took the job at Arizona. "I don't think that will have a whole lot to do with it."

"There's a lot of characters missing," Tubbs said. "The guys that were there remember that, but it's a new game. I find that what's happened in the last game rarely has a bearing on the next game."

In Vaught, Glen Rice and Terry Mills, Michigan presents one of the strongest, and most efficient, frontcourts in the country. Vaught leads the nation with 68 percent field goal shooting while Rice is shooting 57 percent and Mills 56 percent.

North Carolina will have forward J. Reid back again following his one-game suspension for breaching curfew. He will join Steve Bucknall, Pete Chilcutt and Scott Williams up front.

Flyers finally clinch berth with rare comeback victory

By Ken Rappoport The Associated Press

By now, the Philadelphia Flyers are used to making the Stanley Cup playoffs. It's making comebacks that have been a problem for them this season.

They managed to do both with a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks Wednesday night in the first period when Paul Holmren said after the Flyers made the playoffs for the 17th straight year. "It's especially noteworthy because we've had trouble coming from behind this year."

Before Wednesday night, Flyers were 2-19-2 in games they've trailed after two periods. But against the Blackhawks, they scored three times in the third period to pull out a dramatic victory.

While the Flyers were making the playoffs, the Minnesota North Stars and Vancouver Canucks both missed opportunities to clinch a berth. The North Stars were beaten 3-1 by the New York Rangers and the Vancouver Canucks lost to the Toronto Maple Leafs 5-3.

Dave Poulin scored with 1:54 remaining to climax the Flyers' three-goal third period. The Flyers, blanked in the first two periods, finally broke through as Ron Sutter and Terry Carker scored three minutes apart.

Rangers' S. North Star's Jason LaRocque scored in the game's first minute and goaltender John Vanbiesbroeck turned in one of his best efforts of the season, making 36 saves.

The loss capped a three-game winning streak for Minnesota and minute left in regulation. It was the Penguins' 12th power-play goal, breaking the NHL record the New York Rangers set last year.

Steve Zetter set up St. Louis' first goal and scored the game-winner at 18:11 of the second period in a game marred by a bloody injury to Sabres' goaltender Clint Malarchuk.

The crowd of 14,448 at Memorial Auditorium was silenced with 4:43 left in the first period when Malarchuk suffered a bloody neck wound that halted play for 10 minutes. Two crushing players — Buffalo's Uwe Krupp and St. Louis' Steve Tuttle — collided with Malarchuk and the goalie fell to the ice bleeding profusely.

Malarchuk skated off the ice under his own power, leaving a pool of blood in the crease. A spokesman at Buffalo General Hospital said Malarchuk had a five-inch gash in his neck but was listed in good condition. Doctors were conducting exploratory surgery to determine if there was additional damage.

Canadiens' R. Nordiques' R. Shayne Corson scored three goals and goaltender Patrick Roy broke a 45-year-old team record for the longest unbeaten streak at the Forum.

Roy remained unbeaten in 26 starts at home this season and his 24-0-2 record broke the club mark of 23 consecutive home games without a loss set in 1943-44 by Hall of Famer Bill Durnan.

The NHL scoring leader got his 74th goal on a power play with one minute left in regulation. It was the Penguins' 12th power-play goal, breaking the NHL record the New York Rangers set last year.

Maple Leafs 5, Canucks 3: Todd Gill and Dan Daoust scored in the third period as Toronto prevented the Canucks from clinching a playoff spot in the Smythe Division.

Malarchuk listed as stable

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Sabres goalie Clint Malarchuk was rushed to a hospital Wednesday night after he neck was cut during a collision in the first period of the Sabres' game against the St. Louis Blues.

Malarchuk, obtained March 6 in a trade with the Washington Capitals, was struck in the crease by two on-rushing players — Buffalo defenseman Uwe Krupp and St. Louis forward Steve Tuttle — and immediately collapsed, bleeding profusely.

A pool of blood about three feet in diameter formed in the corner of the crease.

Malarchuk skated off the ice toward the Sabres' locker room and was taken by ambulance to Buffalo General Hospital.

The head nurse at the hospital emergency room said doctors were working on closing the wound and said Malarchuk was in stable condition.

King, Carlesimo honored

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Oklahoma center Stacey King and Seton Hall coach P. J. Carlesimo have been given top honors in college basketball this season by the Sporting News.

King, who led the Sooners to a regular-season Big Eight title and helped them maintain a No. 1 ranking nationally for part of the season, was named College Basketball Player of the Year by the St. Louis-based weekly publication.

Joining King on TSN's All-American first team were Danny Ferry of Duke, Lionel Simmons of La Salle, Sean Elliott of Arizona and Chris Jackson of Louisiana State.

Carlesimo led Seton Hall to a surprising 15 Big East Conference title this year. The Pirates finished second to Georgetown and ranked in the top 15 for nearly the entire season.

Whalers 4, Bruins 2

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins were defeated 4-2 by the Hartford Whalers in a National Hockey League game Wednesday.

The Whalers, who are in first place in the Eastern Conference, scored twice in the first period, once in the second and twice in the third.

The Bruins, who are in second place in the Eastern Conference, scored once in the second and once in the third.

Probert may be deported

DETROIT (AP) — A lawyer who specializes in immigration law said Wednesday that Bob Probert, formerly of the Detroit Red Wings, could be deported if he is found guilty of trying to import cocaine into the United States.

A federal grand jury indicted Probert on a felony charge of drug importation Tuesday, three weeks after he allegedly tried to smuggle cocaine through a tunnel linking Detroit and Windsor, Ontario.

If convicted, Probert, a Canadian citizen living in Detroit, could be banned from the United States, according to Roman Revard, a Detroit lawyer who specializes in immigration and international law.

Probert, 25, also has up to 20 years in prison and a $1 million fine, but under federal sentencing guidelines, he would serve less than two years in prison.

Pitino looking for work

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks coach Rick Pitino, who admitted earlier this season that he preferred college to coaching, has a close adviser scouting college openings, according to a published report.

"Pitino has known everything going on with the Kentucky situation for months," an NBA source was quoted as saying by the New York Post. "He's got someone looking at other possibilities, on Kentucky, in fact the latest one. Everyone in the league knows it's going on."

The Kentucky job opened Sunday when Eddie Sutton resigned.

According to the Post, Pitino has been linked to possible openings at Syracuse if Jim Boeheim leaves, North Carolina State if Jim Valvano departs, or Providence if Rick Barnes leaves. Pitino coached Providence to the Final Four in 1987 before moving to the Knicks.

Spartans own Villanova

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — Steve Smith scored 34 points, 22 in the second half, to lead Michigan State to a 76-63 victory over Villanova Wednesday night, earning the Spartans a berth in the National Invitation Tournament semifinals.

Smith rescued the Spartans from a cold second-half start that included five- and four-minute scoring droughts.

The 6-foot-6 sophomore was perfect in 10 free throws as Michigan State went 18-of-18 from the line in the final 20 minutes.

Ken Redfield and Todd Wolfe added 10 each for Michigan State.

Doug West led Villanova, 18-15, with 17 points, followed by Gary Massey with 12 and Rodney Taylor with 11.

Freshman team is tabbed

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Jackson, only the second member of his class to earn All-American honors, was named Wednesday to The Associated Press All-Freshman team.

The Louisiana State guard set the class scoring record with his 30.2 average and last week he became the second freshman ever to be named to the All-American team, following Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale who earned the honor as a freshman in 1983.

Joining Jackson on the All-Freshman team are frontcourt players Alonzo Mourning of Georgetown, Billy Owens of Syracuse, LaPhonso Ellis of Notre Dame and Don MacLean of UCLA.

The voting was conducted among a selected national panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Patriots sign Tony Eason

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots signed quarterback Tony Eason Wednesday to a two-year contract estimated to be worth $2.35 million.

The NFL club also signed free agent quarterback Marc Wilson, who sat out last season because of the Los Angeles Raiders' no-re-sign rule.

The Patriots also have 14-year veteran Steve Gronan, who underwent neck surgery in January, and Doug Flutie to play quarterback.

SCIENCE & HEALTH

Marijuana use linked to stunted babies

By Daniel Q. Honey
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Pregnant women should be warned that smoking marijuana may stunt the growth of their unborn babies, and even a single joint results in prolonged fetal exposure to the drug, researchers reported today.

"This study documents that marijuana during pregnancy is associated with poor fetal growth," said Dr. Barry Zuckerman, who directed the study.

The research, based on 1,226 patients at a pregnancy clinic at Boston City Hospital, found that women who smoked pot produced babies who averaged three ounces lighter and two-tenths of an inch shorter than non-users' newborns. Zuckerman said the study underscores the belief that the effects of had habits during pregnancy add up. While one may have a small impact on the baby, several together can significantly harm the child's growth.

"If a mother smokes a pack of cigarettes a day and uses marijuana and cocaine will produce a baby who is 15 ounces smaller than normal."

"I definitely supports the case that marijuana has an effect on the fetus," said Coryl Jones, a research psychologist at the National Institute on Drug Abuse in Bethesda, Md.

The study also confirmed earlier reports showing that cocaine users also produce unusually small babies. Zuckerman's study differs from earlier research, which has not shown a clear association between pot and fetal growth. Those studies were based solely on mother's admissions of drug use. His work, conducted with researchers from Boston University School of Medicine and published in the New England Journal of Medicine, used urine tests to document whether pregnant women were taking drugs. The babies of drug-using women "experience a double jeopardy," said Zuckerman. "They experience biological vulnerability during pregnancy from these drugs," and after birth "they are more likely to experience abuse and neglect because of their parents' use of drugs. They catch it both ways."

The researchers speculated that the active chemical in marijuana may somehow slow fetal growth. Since the drug can remain in the bloodstream for a month, the study said, "a single episode of marijuana use will lead to prolonged exposure of the fetus to the drug."

Marijuana also raises carbon monoxide levels and cuts the amount of oxygen that reaches the fetus. Although cigarette smoking does the same thing, the damage from marijuana may be greater because pot users take bigger puffs and hold in the smoke longer.

Twenty-seven percent of the women said in interviews or showed on urine tests that they had used marijuana, while 18 percent had used cocaine. When only urine test results were considered, 18 percent showed signs of marijuana and 9 percent of cocaine. The researchers said those who had drugs in their urine may have been the heaviest users.

The researchers compared the babies of mothers with positive urine tests to those of women who had negative tests and also denied drug use. Those who used cocaine produced babies who were slightly smaller than the marijuana mothers', and their babies also had unusually small heads.

The women studied were largely poor blacks and Hispanics. However, Zuckerman said their drug use may not have been much different from that of young pregnant women elsewhere.

A nationwide study in 1985 found that 31 percent of women in their late teens and early 20s said they had used marijuana during the previous year.

Professor softens state warning on eggs

HARTFORD (AP) — A nutritional scientist says egg levers shouldn't worry about consuming eggs this Easter even though the state Consumer Protection Department is warning about potential salmonella hazards.

"I eat one raw egg every day of my life and until 100, I would expect to get it once in 55 lifetimes," Kenneth H. Hall, professor of nutrition at the University of Connecticut, said of salmonella.

The department has not only warned consumers about hard-boiled eggs, but it also has urged people to be careful about soft-boiled and sunny-side-up eggs.

In addition, the department's latest advice lists soft custards, meringues and French toast as potentially risky for pregnant women, the elderly and people with weakened immune systems.

The department previously issued food poisoning warnings for raw eggs in such homemade products as Caesar salad, mayonnaise and Hollandaise sauce.

"It is overreacting to public hysteria," Hall said about the department's warnings.

Hall, also a food-safety scientist at the department, has not only warned consumers about hard-boiled eggs, but it also has urged people to be careful about soft-boiled and sunny-side-up eggs.

"Some of the information released is out of context," Hall said. "It is a worst-case scenario."

Looking to 18 degrees kills the salmonella bacteria, Hall said, but even the risk of catching the digestive tract infection from raw eggs is low. Salmonella enteritidis is a bacterium disease which can develop in humans within 24-48 hours, although an incubation period of up to seven days is possible. It produces flu-like symptoms, including cramps, diarrhea, fever and possible vomiting.

"It is generally not serious for the general population, but can prove severe or even fatal to the very young, the elderly, those suffering from other serious health problems or with immune deficiencies."

Cathy L. McCharen, vice president of the Egg Nutrition Center in Washington, D.C., agreed with Hall. Sometimes I wonder if health departments are fully informed or if they tend to overreact," she said.

Still, spokesman from the state departments of Consumer Protection and Health Services defended the latest warnings, which originated with the U.S. Department of Agriculture last September.

Air pollutants over 2 billion tons each year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials and environmental groups are calling for stronger laws to control toxic air pollutants in light of a government report showing that at least 2 billion pounds of deadly chemicals are released into the air each year.

"The magnitude of this problem far exceeds our worst fears," declared Secretary William D. Calif. after he made a report public Wednesday that provided the first nationwide glimpse into the volume of toxic pollutants released by chemical plants and other industrial sources.

The report covered 328 chemicals or chemical groups including 60 agents the government has identified as causing cancer. Among the chemicals are phosgene, used as a nerve gas in World War I, and methyl isocyanate, which killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India, in 1984.

Spokesmen for the chemical industry, which accounted for about a third of the total volume of toxic pollutants cited in the report, said it is misleading to link the raw figures to health risk because they do not take into account actual exposure or concentration.

"They said the emissions are legal and take place within the restrictions of various state and federal permits."

"Anyone who says that there is a national health crisis based on these numbers is wrong. To use those numbers is misleading," insisted Jeffrey Van, chief spokesman for the Chemical Manufacturers Association.

Waxman, chairman of the House subcommittee on health and environment, acknowledged that the raw figures do not provide a clear picture of the health impact because "we don't really know how much of which pollutants individuals are actually breathing."

Many of the chemicals on the list, however, have been linked to cancer, birth defects, reproductive dysfunction, neurological disorders and genetic mutations, the congressmen said.

The report was compiled by the Environmental Protection Agency based on information from industry. While the figures, which reflected emissions from manufacturing facilities in 1987, were called staggering by some congressmen, environmentalists and government officials suggested they represent only a fraction — perhaps more than one-third — of the toxic substances that actually leak into the air.

The emission totals are based on reports only from large chemical manufacturers and others with emissions of at least 75,000 pounds a year. It does not include smaller polluters such as service stations, dry cleaners and petroleum tank farms.

IN BRIEF

Two doctors join Optifast

Two more doctors have become affiliated with the Optifast program at Manchester Memorial Hospital as staff physicians, according to Edward Mascillo, M.D., medical director of the weight-loss program.

The two doctors are Daniel Paul Purcell, M.D., of Manchester, and Lorian L. Nixon, M.D., of Danbury.

Purcell is an internist in private practice in Manchester and a member of the medical staff of Manchester Memorial Hospital. He serves as a medical director for the Manchester Manor Nursing Home and for a group home in Manchester.

Nixon is an internist in practice with the Plainfield Medical Associates in the Mousop section of Plainfield.

Paramedic training offered

HARTFORD — Applications are being accepted for the Emergency Medical Technician-Paramedic Training Program to be offered this fall by St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center and Greater Hartford Community College.

Students attend classes at both the college and the hospital for two 15-week semesters and complete a six-week spring internship. Upon completion of the course, they receive 30 college credit hours and are eligible for the state examination for certification as EMT-Paramedics.

"For information, contact the director of admissions, Greater Hartford Community College, 61 Woodland St., Hartford 06105.

Cancer center in 15th year

NEW HAVEN — The Yale Comprehensive Cancer Center is celebrating the 15th anniversary of its founding under a mandate by the National Cancer Institute to centralize resources in cancer research, diagnosis, treatment, education and prevention.

The Yale center combines the talents and resources of the Yale University School of Medicine and Yale-New Haven Hospital to offer fundamental scientific research that can be translated into advances in clinical care. It is one of the few institutions where scientists involved in basic research can work with clinicians from the first laboratory experiments to treatment in a hospital setting.

Hair products dominate this season's styling

Trevor Sorbie's enormous influence worldwide has remained largely within the industry — defining the future direction of hair and passing on his master-craft through education. Two years ago the Sorbie hair care product line was introduced and quickly became one of the most successful salon lines because of the defined purpose and matching formulation of each product.

"The products were created specifically to fill a need — product by product — with the final result being a totally complete line," explains Trevor Sorbie. An ever evolving craft requires an innovative product line that produces "look" to achieve the "new" philosophies as they begin to dominate the coming season.

He has created Siliquid to address this "new" philosophy of healthy, shiny, soft hair by formulating an alcohol-free, fluid gel. Containing a synergistic blend of cationic polymers which permit almost limitless styling versatility, it is thick enough for molding into spikes and slicks while allowing a soft, flowing style and superb body and fullness when combed out. In addition, it contains a cationic emollient derived from rich milk oil to provide flyaway control, manageability, and shine. The pH is low to keep the cuticle closed and strong. The gel provides a medium hold and maximum shine for the "new" healthier hair of the 90s.

Lift-It, a fast-drying product in an easy-to-use spray form, is formulated with a fixative, anionic polymer, of high molecular weight which can never build up on the hair. This water soluble, moisture resistant, clear film dries to a medium firm hold to provide flexible, shiny, static-free hair.

The styler also contains a cationic conditioner, keratin protein, and emollients to further enhance manageability and control fly-away hair. The combination provides excellent stylability while leaving hair healthy, vibrant, and in control.

Cardigan sweater makes its history

There are certain fashions that have made history, for instance the French court of Louis XV with Madame Pompadour. There are also times when history has made fashion, as in the cardigan sweater appropriately named for its creator, England's James Thomas Brudenell, Seventh Earl of Cardigan, the man who led the charge of the Light Brigade.

It all happened in Crimea, in October, 1854. Due to the harsh weather the Earl and his men found themselves nearly threadbare, most were wrapped in rags. It seems that the Earl was literally down to his red two-piece knitted long Johns. Buttoned to the neck, they could be seen under his cloak. Later he wore just the top as outerwear and the legend grew.

Today, cardigans offer many more options both in style and color and are knitted in every imaginable fiber, including the luxury fibers cashmere and alpaca.

• England's contribution to fashion continues. Who better than Dawson International, maker of Ballantyne, Barrie, Braemar, Cashmere & Company and Oscar de la Renta Cashmere, to put the excitement into the new cardigan sweaters, with a variety of styles, silhouettes and colors. There are myriad combinations including solids with contrasting borders, all in varying lengths from just to the waist down to the mid-thigh as well as cardigans that button at the neck, have a V-neckline, or also sport a collar. And, patterns have been added of small floral motifs, cable stitches, or such traditional patterns as Argyles. Prices vary depending upon the fiber, the most expensive are in cashmere and are hand loomed such as those from Ballantyne.

Though poets and writers will retell the story of the charge, unfortunately, the Earl will be best remembered for his red underwear. A great testimonial to the Earl are the millions of copies of his creation. And, the history of fashion goes on for it was General Fitzroy Somerset Raglan, for whom the sleeve was named, that first gave the order for the charge. But, that's another story.

Model Barbara King is shown with a beautiful floral print dress with the look of a 2 pc. Colors and different prints are available at CASUAL LADY.

Make going formal a great experience

Let's face it! Dressing up and going "black-tie" is not an everyday occurrence for the majority of Americans. Recognizing there is the possibility of forgetting the little things that add up, Harvey Weinstein, President of Lord West/Pierre Cardin Formalwear suggests the following:

1. Go all out on the grooming routine — feel great head-to-toes.
2. Before you start dressing, check to make sure you have all the visible essentials: jacket and trousers, cummerbund or vest, shirt, tie, correct number of studs and links, hosiery and shoes. Suspenders and pocket square are optional.
3. If a wing collar shirt is your choice, let the wings fall over the tie. It's an easy natural look unless the bow tie is extra wide.
4. If you are wearing trousers with an adjustable waist, you'll enjoy the comfortable, waist hugging fit. Cover the buckles with a cummerbund. If you are wearing a vest, adjust the length at the neck so it is long enough to overlap the trouser waistband.

5. When sitting down, unbutton your jacket... and when standing tall and straight, keep it buttoned. Dancing? — Do your own thing.
6. If you choose to wear a pocket square, shape and fold it so the points are extended no more than an inch — or puff it softly and show just enough to add a note of color.
7. If a boutonniere is your thing forget the pocket square. Overkill here is not advised.
8. Wear over-the-calf hose with elastic tops. Socks creeping down your legs can detract from your feeling of assurance.
9. Patent leather plain-toe shoes, slip-on or laced, with a high polish are preferred. Save your block mocs, oxfords or wing tips for other less glamorous occasions.
10. Look in the mirror, check it all out, including your zipper and SMILE. You're "gonna have a great time."

FORMAL ATTRACTION Dressing for an occasion makes it extra special every time. Her strapless silk tross lace over satin is by Michele Piccione for Filtrations. He makes an impressive statement in a double breasted tuxedo from the new Lord West Crown Collection. It is tailored in a fine subtly striped tropical worsted. The jacket is ventless, features satin peak lapels and is worn with pleated trousers. His 100 percent cotton voile shirt and eye-catching bow tie are from the elegant La Vallere Collection.

Cotton reclaims the crown as King of U.S. fashion

It's been the nation's longest running wear test. For the past 13 years, American consumers have been touching, wearing and living in apparel made from a variety of fibers, both natural and synthetic. And while shifts in fashion have at times dictated trends in fiber, consumers have steadily moved to crown an old friend the new king of apparel — U.S. cotton.

According to data from the Market Research Corporation of America, cotton's share of the total U.S. apparel market reached 51 percent through the first nine months of 1988, making it the single most popular fiber consumed at retail, outselling all man-made fibers combined.

Cotton's return to dominance has been marked by gains in market share every year since the mid '70s, when polyester sat atop the clothing heap. Boosted primarily by the baby boom generation, which literally grew up in all-cotton jeans and tee-shirts, cotton has benefited from this group's desire for natural, comfortable apparel.

According to Cotton Incorporated, the fiber company of American cotton producers, the move to cotton was sparked by a combination of demand for comfort and overall consumer dissatisfaction with the poor performance of synthetic fibers. After years of giving man-made fibers a go, consumers became disenchanted with apparel that pilled, snagged, wouldn't wash clean, retained odors, caused static electricity and generally wouldn't "breathe."

Designers, both new and established, are now offering a variety of looks to meet demand for comfortable, fashionable apparel. They say the move to cotton has significantly impacted on the development of their own design philosophy.

FINIS, a New York-based womenswear firm founded by designers Ann and Mark McNairy, is rapidly becoming known for their use of bright colored floral prints and innovative pocket fabrications. From the onset, says Mark McNairy, the designers had decided to use cotton in their line to tap into consumer preference. McNairy said cotton's versatility helped them to realize their apparel vision.

"A lot of man-made fibers are produced to imitate different cotton qualities," says McNairy, "but they're not very comfortable. We couldn't see using a substitute when we could use the original. Cotton works well for our designs because it expresses color beautifully and gives you flexibility in styling. Plus it's difficult to feel stylish if you're not comfortable."

DESIGNER Joan Vass, has enjoyed wide-scale recognition for subtle garment styling and comfortable silhouettes. The designer's white off-the-shoulder top and black and white diamond print skirt, both in all-cotton, carry forward the tradition. Joan Vass is part of a wide range of designers, now and established, participating in the cotton renaissance. Popularity of the natural fiber is at a 13-year high, according to Cotton Incorporated, the fiber company of U.S. cotton producers.

Joan Vass, who has enjoyed enormous popularity due to her use of comfortable silhouettes and subtle styling, uses natural fibers almost exclusively in her collections. "Cotton is just plain wonderful," says Vass, "warm in winter, cool in summer, completely bi-coastal, no one is allergic to it, it works perfectly for my designs."

Menswear is the strongest apparel category for cotton, where the fiber holds a 60-percent share of the market. Tony Lambert, widely recognized for his directional sweater designs, says cotton holds a special attraction for the menswear market.

"For the past few years men have gained a special appreciation for 'feel-good' clothing," says Lambert. "It began with denim and then grew to be more sophisticated, giving birth to the sweatshirt revolution. I feel this transition continues to even more sophistication. Staying in tune with this has been a key to the success of my line. At the core though, cotton is why my business is doing so well. It's a comfort fiber. Men want the comfort of cotton, and it's making my business work."

The growth of cotton in men's and women's apparel is also boosting the fiber's presence in children's wear, says Ira B. Livingston, vice president of U.S. marketing for Cotton Incorporated. "The predisposition of baby boomers for natural products has created a whole new market for cotton in the children's market," says Livingston. "This age group is maturing and having children. It's only logical that these parents who are buying cotton apparel for themselves are looking for cotton children's clothing."

Livingston says that as a result, cotton's share of the girl's apparel market has grown from 38 percent in 1984 to 50 percent in 1988, while cotton's share of the boy's apparel market has risen from 45 percent in 1984 to 55 percent in 1988.

According to Livingston, that bodes well for the future of cotton. "Just as their parents grew up in cotton clothing and developed a natural disposition towards the fiber, today's kids are growing up in cotton. If history repeats itself, as it often does, we'll be seeing strong cotton demands for years to come."
