Storytelling set in Bolton

The Bentley Memorial Library, 206 Bolton Center Road, Bolton, will hold programs and story hours for preschool children through sixth grade during the months of July and August. Story hours for children ages 3 to 5, will be held every Wednesday at 11 a.m.

Programs for children in first through third grades will be held every Thursday at 2:30 p.m., and programs for children in fourth through sixth grades will be held every Thursday at 3:30 p.m. Parents must register their children at the library. Call 646-7248 for more information.

Class of 1918 still strong

The Class of 1918 of the former South Manchester High School recently celebrated its 71st anniversary with a luncheon at Adams Mill Restaurant. The class has been meeting three times a year since 1927. Two of the teachers who taught the class are still living: Marion B. Turner, 96, of South Carolina, and Elizabeth Olson, 101, of New York.

Class President John A. Herr of Branford presided at the luncheon. Others present included: Eva M. Johnson, vice president; Lillian G. Grant, secretary-treasurer; Edhel Faulkner McKay; Lillian Crawford Westbrook; and Helen Ingraham Henry.

Other classmates who were not present include: Irene Crockett Duncan; Air Osborne Beeler; Merle Tuttle Steane; Ralph Hills Birk; Helen Carr Hazrick; Laura Gotthberg; Ann Gerard Reidemann; Edith Wilson; Anna Lindberg; and Dr. Charles W. Strant.

Depression is group's topic

Depression Anonymous, a support group for those suffering from depression, meets every Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Lowe Program Center at Manchester Community College. The group follows the 12-step program modeled after Alcoholics Anonymous. No dues or fees are required. For more information, call Marie E. 644-9664.

Summer space program set

The Whiton Memorial Library is sponsoring "Apollo Man on the Moon" as the topic of the 11th annual "Workshop in Astronomy and Space Science." The program will be held July 19 at 6:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the library, 100 North Main St.

It will feature moon rocks, and a special film. The free program will acquaint people with some of the most recent scientific discoveries and technological advances. Registration is required. Call 643-6892 for more information.

College Notes

On Rensselaer dean's list

Joe Hyuk Lee of 24 Thompson Road, Manchester, a sophomore majoring in biology and Marie Louise Laby of 518 E. Center St., a junior majoring in biomedical engineering, have been named to the dean's list at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N.Y. for the spring semester.

Others named to the dean's list were: Malcolm Leigh Ferguson, 11 Converse Road, Bolton, a senior majoring in electrical engineering; Ray Robert Engler Jr., of 272 Richmond Road, Coventry, is a freshman majoring in engineering.

Graduates from Loomis

Barbara J. Chisholm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chisholm of Manchester, graduated recently from the Loomis Chaffee School, Windsor. She will attend Swarthmore College in Swarthmore, Pa. in the fall.

She graduated cum laude from Loomis and received the graduation prize given to the strongest member of the Loomis Chaffee academic, athletic and social communities.

She also received the Jennie Loomis prize, was a National Merit finalist, and in her junior year, received the Koppelman American History award. She was also a member of the varsity volleyball and track teams, and was captain of the volleyball team this year as well as being the most valuable player. She also played the flute in the school ensemble and orchestra. This year she also served as president of the STOP Nuclear War and the Debate Clubs.

Police Roundup

Woman arrested in stabbing

Police arrested a 42-year-old Manchester woman on charges she stabbed her boyfriend in the abdomen Sunday night with a steak knife, police said.

Maureen A. Thomas, of 105 Spruce St., was charged with first-degree assault in the stabbing police said.

George Tjunnels, also of 105 Spruce St., was listed in satisfactory condition today at Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Thomas reported the stabbing about 10 p.m., police said. She repeatedly told police the stabbing was an accident, police said.

Thomas told police she was helping another roommate prepare dinner when Tjunnels came toward the kitchen sink where she was standing, police said. She told police she had a serrated steak knife in her hand, and when she turned around, she accidentally stabbed Tjunnels in the abdomen.

The roommate told police Tjunnels has been trying to get Tjunnels to leave the apartment, and that Tjunnels was aggravating and irritating Thomas all night, according to the police report.

Thomas said she responded to an argument between the couple just before 1 a.m. Sunday. Tjunnels told police he had just awakened and tripped and fell on the knife in the hallway between the bedroom and bathroom, police reports indicate.

Thomas was held overnight and was scheduled to appear in court today.

Men face drug charges

Two Manchester men were arrested Saturday on drug and alcohol charges after police stopped them for following a woman driving in another vehicle near the Manchester Parkade, police said.

Christopher Mateya, 26, of 38 Wilfred Road, and Ralph L. French IV, 26, of 66 Seaman Circle, were charged with possession of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia, and possession of alcohol by a minor, police said.

Mateya was additionally charged with possession of cocaine, and operating a motor vehicle without insurance, police said.

An 18-year-old woman stopped police in a parking lot at 401 W. Middle Turnpike to complain of a car following her, police said. As she spoke, a car resembling the car the woman saw drove by, and police stopped it.

While talking to Mateya, police saw a bottle of whiskey underneath some newspapers, police said. Police also found plastic pipes containing marijuana residue, razor blades, and a small scale, items commonly used with illegal marijuana, the car, police also found a "chunk" of a white substance which tested positive for cocaine, police said.

Both men were released on $1,500 cash bonds, police said. They are scheduled to appear in court July 5.

Driver cited in accident

A 16-year-old Manchester youth collided with a car Thursday night while he was riding his bicycle, police said.

Damien Cersosimo, of 360 Oakland St., was treated for a skull fracture and released from Manchester Memorial Hospital, a spokesman said today.

Khoun Chanh, 51, of 35 Edgerton St., was fined and issued a summons for making an improper right turn, police said.

Cersosimo was riding his bike westbound on Center Street next to Chanh, who was driving his four-door 1988 Chevrolet, police said. Chanh started to make a right-hand turn onto the street in front of Cersosimo, whose bicycle struck the right rear quarter panel of the car, police said.

Cersosimo grabbed onto an open window on the car to get the driver to stop, police said.

Chanh said his car had been in the shop for several days. He said he was riding his bike to work.

Chanh said he was riding his bike to work. He said he was riding his bike to work.

Carrier forged friendships over 4 decades of service

By Maura Leavitt
Manchester Herald

Louise Ouellette has probably delivered close to 500,000 newspapers over the years as a carrier for the Manchester Herald. And she's enjoyed delivering almost every one of them.

Ouellette, of 25 Willard Road, retired Saturday after more than 35 years of service. She said she wasn't sure exactly how long she had been doing the job, but one customer said Ouellette has been his carrier for at least 40 years.

Over the years, she has made many friends on her route, and has won the admiration of her customers for her promptness, reliability, and friendliness.

She has walked her route, pushing a small cart and delivering about 600 papers a week. She stuck with the job because she enjoyed the friendships she developed with her customers.

"I'm really going to miss it," Ouellette said. "I do it every day. It isn't all the money you get, it's how you like to help others."

She began carrying papers after her son, Roger, took on a route as a youngster. She said she helped get new customers and extend the route, and decided to continue delivering. Her son also has continued to carry for the Herald.

She receives gifts from her customers as a token of their appreciation. She has delivered not only papers, but also gifts to her customers when they were ill, or if she knew someone was having a baby.

She said her customers have always been nice to her and were always happy to see her come. People enjoy her so much, she said, because she takes the time to listen to them.

"I'm a good listener. I always made time to find food and tried to make them cheery," Ouellette said.

Children are now crossing Princeton Street where the sidewalk on the west side of that street ends. Last March, a 6-year-old was hit by a vehicle while crossing the street, police said.

Werkhoven said in a June 29 memo to former Town Manager Robert B. Weiss and new Town Manager Richard J. Sartor that cars travel at 30 to 40 mph in the school zone.

The Board of Directors would have to appropriate funds for the new walks. The Engineering Division said new asphalt walks could cost $10,000 and new concrete walks, $30,000.

But Werkhoven said the town should move about 295 feet of walk on the east side of Princeton Street 8 to 10 feet closer to the school so an asphalt surface could be built in front of the walk, between Harvard Road and Henry Street.

Parents could park in the asphalt area to pick up their children, eliminating the need for parents to cross Princeton Street between parked cars.

At a public hearing before the Board of Directors in May, a Harvard Road resident said parents park illegally on both sides of Princeton Street. The resident said that was to blame for the hazardous conditions more than the lack of walks on the west side of the street.

Manafort pushed Georgia deal in exchange for federal funds

HARTFORD (AP) — Paul J. Manafort's business associates unsuccessfully pitched a project in Savannah similar to one in New Jersey that is the focus of a congressional probe into alleged influence peddling, according to a published report.

Richard Collins, executive director of the Savannah, Ga., housing authority, said Manafort's business associates told him last year that the authority would get coveted federal housing subsidies if it supported a project of the Hartford-based CEM Development Corp. The Hartford Courant reported in its Sunday editions.

CFM had proposed to buy and rehabilitate a 150-unit building in Savannah known as Park Villas with aid from the federal Section 8 program. Collins said. The deal eventually fell through in late 1988.

Manafort, a Bush campaign strategist and New Britain native who owns a third of CEM, recently acknowledged to a congressional subcommittee that his political consulting firm engaged in influence peddling in connection with a New Jersey housing project.

Part of the congressional investigation into the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development centers on whether developers improperly gained commitments from HUD officials to subsidize for-profit projects.

Such subsidies are supposed to be awarded only after local housing authorities request them and then solicit bids from developers.

Collins said Russell Cartwright, an associate at Manafort's high-powered Washington consulting firm of Black, Manafort, Stone and Kelly, assured him that authority would get subsidies if the authority would pass the subsidies on to CFM. As a result, Savannah would get more and improved low-income housing.

Boating fatalities sinking to record low in country

By Christopher Callahan
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fatal accidents involving recreational boaters have decreased dramatically over the past two decades, but many weekend skippers fear increasing congestion in waters such as Long Island Sound has made pleasure trips more dangerous than ever.

Fewer recreational boaters were killed last year than in any year since the Coast Guard began charting such statistics in 1961, despite a 300 percent increase in the number of pleasure crafts in U.S. waters.

"Without a doubt, the waters are safer," said John Dane, Department of Environmental Protection, said it would be "tough to convince me that recreational boating is safer today than it was a decade ago."

The fatality rate, which peaked at 22 deaths per 100,000 boats in 1971, was 5.3 per 100,000 boats last year, according to Coast Guard documents.

The Coast Guard said 946 recreational boaters died in 1988, the first time the number of fatalities has dipped below 1,000. The number of boats, meanwhile, has increased from less than 6 million to an estimated 17.3 million.

Connecticut mirrored the national trend. From 1985 through 1988, the state averaged 17 recreational boating deaths a year. That has dropped to nine deaths a year since 1981, although 12 marine deaths last year was Connecticut's highest since 1985.

Not everyone believes the fatality statistics are a reflection of a safer boating environment. "I dare say the waters are probably less safe than they were 20 years ago," said Michael Scullia, vice president of Boat Owners Association of the United States, which represents 310,000 recreational boat owners. "I hear from many boat owners that they are fearful of drunk boaters, those who don't know the rules of the road, and they're fearful because of the increasing congestion of boats on our waterways."

"The fatality rate reduction ... is a remarkable achievement. Nonetheless, it may be somewhat deceptive to claim that we have reached the peak of boating safety. There is no doubt great strides have been made, but that is only one measurement of boating safety, and I'm not sure it is the primary measure."

MaJ. Randolph Dill, chief of boating safety for the Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection, said it would be "tough to convince me that recreational boating is safer today than it was a decade ago."

"We had a training session on the Connecticut River, and I swear from my position we could have written 100 tickets in two hours," Dill said. "It was just an absolute mess. And that was typical."

While a lack of knowledge among boaters is a problem, Dill said the biggest danger facing boaters in the region is the growing congestion in places such as the Long Island Sound.

"We just have a lot of people in a lot of boats out there," Dill said. "Years ago, it was fine to go out and not know a lot about boating. If you made a mistake, you were not going to run into anybody. Today, that's not the case. We can't afford mistakes made out of ignorance."

And congestion, it seems, will only get worse. After dipping dramatically in the first five years following enactment of the federal law, from 20.2 to 9.9 per 100,000 boats, the fatality rate leveled off through the late 1970s.

The rate however, continued its downward spiral during the 1980s, from 9.5 in 1980 to 5.3 last year. Coast Guard Capt. Bill Griswold, chief of the Coast Guard's auxiliary, boating and consumer affairs division, attributes much of the recent decrease to public awareness programs targeting drunkenness at sea.

Other boating experts, while praising public awareness programs such as the National Safe Boating Council's "Booze and Boats Don't Mix" campaign, point to the recent proliferation of stiff anti-drunk boating laws by states and beefed up state marine enforcement that took up the slack created by Coast Guard cutbacks during the Reagan years.

Reported boating injuries increased from 2,757 in 1985 to 3,476 three years later. Boating officials, however, are quick to point out that only about 10 percent of the non-fatal marine accidents are reported.

"When the figures change, it's not easy to tell if there are more or less accidents or better reporting or other factors. It's hard to draw conclusions," said Albert Marmo, assistant chief of the Coast Guard's auxiliary, boating and consumer affairs division.

Even if congestion is causing more accidents and injuries, most experts agree the steadily declining fatality rate is impressive. The first turning point in recreational marine safety came in 1971 when Congress passed a sweeping safety law that included mandatory federal standards for boat construction.

In the 11 years before the law was enacted, the annual fatality rate was 19.8 per 100,000 boats. Over the next 17 years, the average fatality rate was less than 10 per 100,000 boats.

New Haven projected to be state's largest city by 1995

NEW HAVEN (AP) — New Haven will be the state's largest city by the middle of the next decade, according to projections released by the state Census Data Center.

The projections indicate that New Haven will pass Hartford as the state's second largest city next year and will overtake Bridgeport as the largest by 1995. New Haven will have 140,000 residents next year and 148,000 by 1995, the projections say. In 1980, the city's population was 126,109, according to the U.S. census.

The data center projects the population of Hartford will be 136,200 in 1995, almost no change from 1980. It projects Bridgeport will have a population of 147,000 in 1995, a gain of about 5,000 since 1980. Bridgeport has been the state's largest city for 15 years.

The center's projections for New Haven are much higher than those in several previous surveys by public and private organizations, including a 1984 survey that said New Haven's population in 1990 would be 126,000.

The projections, released Friday, were done for Connecticut municipalities and the state. The state's population was projected at 3.5 million in the year 2010, up from 3.1 million in 1980.

A wide assortment of public and private groups, such as city planning departments, social service agencies, hospitals, nursing homes, utility companies and the media use population projections to plan and market.

Officials in New Haven said they believe the city is growing, but not as fast as the new estimates suggest.

"They're using a new statistical model," said Mary Lou Skerritt, a city planner in New Haven. "It's an interesting one, but who knows if it's accurate. The numbers do seem high."

A 1988 survey by Donnelly Marketing Information Services of Stamford projected New Haven's population in 1993 at 121,233 — about 20,000 less than the Census Data Center's projections.

The state Department of Health Services estimated this year that New Haven's 1988 population was only 127,750, an increase of about 1,000 over 1980.

James G. Palma, senior analyst at the data center, part of the planning division of the state Office of Policy and Management, said new methods are helping his office more accurately gauge movement in and out of cities.

He said the three surveys used the same birth and death rates, but used different means to measure people's movement.

Palma said the data center started in 1987 to measure migration in each city and town by studying elementary school enrollment, driver's licenses, and elderly people in the state's Medicaid program over the past seven years.

"This offers us better coverage of the entire population," he said.

Palma said the data center used the new methodology to revise its 1985 population for New Haven from 124,006 to 133,000.

Palma pointed out, however, that all projections "are suspect until they can be checked against the U.S. census."

Motorcycle club members arrested after argument

WATERBURY (AP) — State police have arrested two Waterbury men who they say became hostile toward detectives seeking to talk to them about last week's shooting death of a motorcycle club president, police said.

Police, investigating the possibility that Jose Barriera's death was the result of a feud between Barriera's Compadres Motorcycle Club and the Helter Skelter Motorcycle Club, went to Helter Skelter's Waterbury headquarters on Saturday, Sgt. Scott O'Mara said.

When detectives tried to interview Patrick J. Daigle, 28, there Saturday afternoon, Daigle became argumentative and combative and was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct and interfering with a police officer, O'Mara said.

Later in the day, detectives tried to interview another Helter Skelter member, Barry Lasky, 42, who also became combative. O'Mara said Lasky was arrested and charged with breach of peace and two counts of possession of dangerous weapons, he said.

The weapons charges were brought when detectives found that Lasky was carrying two knives, O'Mara said.

O'Mara said the police investigation of Barriera's murder has been slowed by a lack of cooperation from many motorcycle club members.

"In our attempts to interview these people there is a lack of cooperation and in some instances, as we've seen, some aggression towards our investigators," O'Mara said.

Daigle was being held on $50,000 bond and Lasky was being held on $10,000. Both were scheduled to appear in Waterbury Superior Court today.

Barriera was shot while driving on Route 8 near the Waterbury Naugatuck line by someone who apparently pulled alongside his car and opened fire.

Lawyer loses license

HARTFORD (AP) — A New Haven attorney, who used a lengthy series of legal appeals to continue working as a lawyer, has once again been ordered to stop practicing law for a year.

Judge Joseph J. Purtil ordered Friday that Daniel V. Presnick's license be suspended for a year beginning July 28. Purtil had first ordered the suspension two years ago, but it was postponed while Presnick appealed the disciplinary action against him.

During the period between the two orders, Presnick has continued to practice law.

Purtil ordered the suspension in 1987 after concluding that Presnick had arranged for his brother to buy a house belonging to an elderly Hamden man for less than its appraised value.

At the time he ordered the suspension, Purtil stayed the suspension to allow Presnick to appeal the punishment.

Presnick, whose license also is threatened with suspension in connection with a separate series of ethical violations, appealed to the state Appellate Court.

The appeal was rejected and he then asked for, but was denied, a hearing by the full Appellate Court. Finally, the state Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal from Presnick.

Presnick said Friday that he would decide during the week whether to pursue other strategies to continue practicing law.

One such strategy would be asking the U.S. District Court to re-impose the stay while he appeals his suspension to the U.S. Supreme Court, he said.

Another strategy would be asking Purtil to extend the stay while he completes pending work for some of his clients, he said.

"I'm not a quitter," Presnick said. "I've never quit anything. I've ever felt it important. On the other hand, no one wants to look foolish or desperate. And there may come a point where we are simply going to have to say, 'Life is unfair, and live with the consequences of that.'"

The suspension of Presnick's license was postponed until July 28 to give Purtil time to determine whether another lawyer, acting as a trustee, should be appointed to advise Presnick's clients.

A decision on the possible appointment of a trustee could be made during a hearing before Purtil July 14.

Second 'wood chipper' trial opens Thursday in Stamford

By Dean Golembek / The Associated Press

STAMFORD — The fanfare of a high-profile criminal trial unfolded this week in a small, decaying courtroom in Stamford when jury selection begins in the so-called wood chipper murder trial.

Former airline pilot Richard Crafts, 51, of Newtown, will stand trial for a second time in the bizarre and brutal murder of his wife, Helle.

Helle Crafts, an airline stewardess, was last seen alive in November 1986. Police say that Crafts killed his wife at their Newtown home, dismembered her body and then disposed of some body parts using a wood chipper.

Crafts was subsequently arrested in January 1987 and charged with murder even though a body was never recovered. His first trial ended in a mistrial last year in New London Superior Court. The mistrial was declared after one juror refused to continue deliberations and vote with 11 other jurors to find Crafts guilty.

The second trial was moved to Stamford Superior Court after it was determined that it was the best location for finding potential jurors unfamiliar with the highly-publicized case. The Crafts murder has been reported nationally by newspapers and television.

The jury selection, following delays to complete transcripts from the first trial, will begin Thursday before Judge Martin Nigro.

"We're ready to go," Crafts' public defender, Gerard Smyth, said Friday.

Smyth said no one is guessing how long it might take to select the 12 jurors and three alternates needed to begin hearing evidence.

"That's the unknown quantity at this point," Smyth said.

The selection process will begin with a pool of 150 potential jurors on Thursday, according to court officials.

Nigro and the attorneys in the case estimate that it will take at least three months to present the evidence. That means it will likely be late fall before the case is concluded.

The trial itself will be held at the Norwalk Superior Court, with a tentative starting date of Sept. 6, because of the cramped and

Eleven voted 'guilty'

HARTFORD (AP) — If the majority of jurors in Richard Crafts' first murder trial had their way, the former airline pilot would be serving a prison sentence instead of facing a second trial.

Last July, Crafts' first trial in New London Superior Court ended in a mistrial when one juror, Warren Maskell of Preston — the lone holdout among 12 jurors for an acquittal — refused to return to the jury room for deliberations.

"I just want to look at their (jurors') faces," said Janis Rousseau of Waterford. "So I know who to picture when I read the paper."

Maskell, whose refusal to go along with the jurors caused controversy last summer, declined to comment on the case. Maskell has said he plans to sue the prosecutor in the case, claiming that Danbury State's Attorney Walter Flanagan defamed him by calling him a coward after he refused to continue to deliberations.

NEW LONDON (AP) — Greens Harbor Beach will remain closed until at least Thursday as city health officials try to determine the cause of high levels of bacteria.

The levels of enterococci, a fecal bacteria, at the beach were found to be 130 colonies per 100 milliliters. The state Department of Health considers water with 60 or fewer colonies per 100 milliliters safe for swimming.

All other area beaches showed bacteria levels to be about 10 colonies per 100 milliliters, well within safety limits, Mitchell said.

The beach was closed Saturday morning.

Mitchell said the city's sewage treatment plant has not overflowed recently, and if an overflow had been the cause of the contamination, several other beaches would have shown it.

Septic systems in the area have been tested and determined not to be the cause, Mitchell said. More research will be done to pinpoint the source of the contamination.

Water samples will be taken again Wednesday and tested, so the beach will not be open until Thursday at the earliest, Mitchell said.

Real estate developer sues partners in firm

MYSTIC (AP) — A Stonington real estate developer says in a pending lawsuit that her four partners in a real estate syndicate fraudulently misrepresented company holdings and siphoned off money for their own use.

Maureen Clark, a partner in Barres-Kleeman Properties, claims in the pending suit that the other general partners have improperly used company funds to pay for expensive homes, limousines, a yacht, airplanes and helicopters for their own use.

Ms. Clark also alleges the partners improperly transferred and intermingled assets in order to deny her a rightful share of the properties.

The Barres-Kleeman partnership, which controls more than 20 apartment complexes in Connecticut and Florida, purchases and develops large real estate developments, owns some properties as general partners but also sells shares in some projects to

At 9:30 p.m. sharp, the first rockets reached toward the stars as the Atlas Display Fireworks company began their 500-plus shell display.

Deputy Fire Marshal Rudy Kismann, a member of the celebration committee, said today he was pleased by the safety precautions taken by the company and the town.

"There was safety taken into consideration, that was our first line," Kismann said. "The shooter we had this year, it was his first priority too. I think it was excellent, this guy did a nice job. Judging from the crowd's roar, you could tell they enjoyed it."

He said the display was a good balance of color and sound, which is what many shooters strive for when putting on a display.

Atlas will be handling the fireworks display tonight at the Hartford Riverfest celebration.

The show began with single rockets, and built up to a mini-finale midway through the show, with a barrage of fireworks, Kismann said. The finale contained 320 shells alone.

"Both show-wise and crowd-wise, it was a perfect year," Kismann said. "There was no humidity and the air was clear."

The sights and sounds could be seen and heard from Grassman's Lumber, located on Spencer Street, thanks to the weather conditions.

INDEPENDENCE SUNDAY — The Rev. George A. Stallings leads his independent Catholic congregation in prayer at Howard University in Washington Sunday.

Black priest ignores warning, forms 'African Congregation'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The founder of the new African American Catholic Congregation says he will adhere to Catholic teachings on issues such as abortion and priest celibacy while incorporating African and southern black religious traditions. The Rev. George A. Stallings celebrated the Imani Temple's first service on Sunday before about 2,000 people at Howard University Law School. Stallings said he created the church because he believes the establishment Catholic church had failed to meet the spiritual and cultural needs of Blacks. Imani means "faith" in Swahili. But Cardinal James A. Hickey of Washington has condemned Stallings' plan for the new church, which were announced two weeks ago, and forbade Stallings to celebrate Mass. "In spite of his claims to the contrary, Father Stallings' action is a serious step toward separating himself from the Roman Catholic Church," Hickey said recently in a statement. Stallings has said that he has been fired by Hickey as evangelist for the archdiocese. Sunday's service began with an entrance procession that included participants wearing "dreadlocks" and others who shook bells and used rattles traditionally used in African ceremonies. The ceremony included Catholic prayers and liturgy, along with words borrowed from African and Southern black revival traditions. Black representatives of other faiths, including Baptists and Muslims, attended to show support for Stallings' move. At one point, Stallings chanted, "We can't wait."

Abe Stolar is coming home after 58 years in U.S.S.R.

CHICAGO — Abe Stolar is coming home to celebrate the Fourth of July after 58 years in the Soviet Union, a time that began with Depression-era dreams of finding a workers' paradise and ended with a fight to emigrate. Despite it all, the 77-year-old Stolar is still a Chicagoan. When he talks, the accent is pure West Side. Stolar left the Soviet Union in March, departing abruptly after fighting for 15 years to go to Israel with his wife, his son, his daughter-in-law and two grandchildren. He and his wife, Gita Rozovskaya, are arriving in Chicago on Tuesday, the first stop in a 12-city U.S. tour that will take them from Anchorage, Alaska, to Miami before it winds up in Los Angeles on Aug. 13. "His memory of Chicago is just frozen in time, in 1931," said David Carle, a spokesman for Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who helped draw attention to Stolar's plight. "His passion is opera, but that's talk," Ms. Opper said. Stolar also has vivid memories of the grand 3,000-room Stevens Hotel, now the Conrad Hilton and populated largely by Eastern European Jews when he left — is largely Hispanic. But Wrigley Field looks much the same, though the venerable ballpark now has lights. Stolar is to watch Wednesday night's game between the Cubs and the San Diego Padres. Still, "baseball is not his passion," said Linda Opper of Chicago Action for Soviet Jewry, which is financing and arranging his visit. "His passion is opera, but that's talk," Ms. Opper said. "He is philosophically an optimist. I think that has helped him stay healthy. I think that has helped him stay young." One day, Stolar's son came home excited at winning a school contest.

HUD funds available to the well-connected

WASHINGTON — Several months after floods devastated West Virginia in November 1985 and left thousands homeless, the state's senators pleaded with the Department of Housing and Urban Development for federal housing money. The answer was no. At the same time, Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, President Reagan's close friend, sought funds to upgrade aging apartments in Reno. The answer was yes. The contrast is instructive of the way HUD was run during the Reagan administration. If you were well-connected to the president or had friends in high administration posts, HUD funds were generally available. But not even the Senate Democratic leader, Robert Byrd, could shake money to help homeless flood victims in his home state of West Virginia. "The November flood devastation greatly exacerbated the already-existing need for housing help," Byrd wrote. West Virginia's junior senator, Democrat Jay Rockefeller, reminded HUD of its responsibility to help the state. "As you know, all funds and units provided by the Congress for your agency's programs are intended to be distributed on a fair share basis," he wrote June 5, 1986. HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce responded that fair share distribution was no longer the rule. Laxalt wrote on June 16, 1986, seeking money for "owners of multi-family rental properties in the state of Nevada." A 1987 Virginia request serves as a typical example of how Congress members were involved. Steve Smith, commanding officer of The Salvation Army in Alexandria, Va., sent a letter Feb. 10, 1987, to Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va., saying that approval of a Mississippi teen-ager, who was possible for over 300 low-income families to remain in Arlington (an Alexandria neighborhood) and provide labor for low-income paying positions in restaurants, stores, (for) office and blue collar workers. "Trible, in turn, wrote to Pierce asking for the funds. Pierce responded that 'every consideration' would be given to the request. Democratic Rep. Frederick Boucher of Virginia asked HUD in 1985 to support a proposal by B&W Associates of Radford, Va., to rehabilitate 152 housing units for the elderly in Loudoun County. The housing secretary responded with a three-paragraph letter saying "we regret to inform you that it is unlikely that it will be funded this year." In January 1986, Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., received funding for proposals that included the HUD office from 1984 to 1987 showed legislators requesting funds for housing projects that

Rebels begin campaign with conciliatory stand

KATUTURA, Namibia (AP) — The rebel group SWAPO flowers fought for independence from South Africa has opened Namibia's first official campaign for a generally conciliatory stance toward the territory's white minority. In announcing its platform on Sunday, the South-West Africa People's Organization, which SWAPO also pledged to improve the lot of the impoverished black majority and to champion socialism. "SWAPO does not conceal its belief in the moral superiority of socialism over capitalism," the group's campaign manifesto said. With banners waving about 25,000 people, almost all black, attended SWAPO's first official campaign event Sunday in the fourth-month campaign for elections that are to lead to independence. "This is the beginning of a new era," SWAPO spokesman Danny Tjongoero told the crowd at a community center in Katutura, a black township outside Windhoek, the capital. SWAPO's platform is generally kind to opposition groups, such as the 75,000 whites who make up just 6 percent of the population but own the majority of private land and businesses. "No wholesale nationalization of the mines, land and other productive sectors is envisaged in the foreseeable future," said Hugo Geingob, the leader of SWAPO's election campaign. In the election, SWAPO is widely favored to win the most votes and possibly the two-thirds majority needed to control the writing of a new constitution. Sunday's crowd, dressed in the red, blue and green colors of SWAPO, frequently broke into song and chants of "SWAPO Must Win!" Many supporters wore T-shirts with the face of SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma who has yet to return from more than 20 years in exile. Despite the pledges against nationalization, SWAPO's platform also advocates a strong government role in shaping and controlling the economy. Geingob said the organization's main objective is to bridge the gap between wealthy whites and impoverished blacks and to upgrade basic services such as education, health care and housing. "He did not say where the money would come from.

Heavy rains hit the South Tropical Storm Allison taking its toll

By Stephen Nono The Associated Press

Flood waters kept hundreds from their homes today in southeast Texas and 200 in Mississippi. About 700 homes in Louisiana remained flooded. Allison and its aftermath were blamed for four deaths in Texas and three in Louisiana. The body of a Mississippi teen-ager, who was swimming in a swollen creek, was recovered Sunday morning near Natchez. A companion was missing. Sunday night's storm was not related to Allison, said Hugh Crowther of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo. The remnants of Allison moved into Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio. Today's forecast was for scattered showers and thunderstorms in Texas, with heavier showers and thunderstorms in Louisiana and Mississippi, Crowther said. In Oklahoma City, a house caught fire Sunday after it was struck by lightning, causing $65,000 damage. High winds blew down a mobile home in Ponca City, Okla., and dented some power lines and trees. When the storm reached Abilene, concertgoers were still waiting to hear the headliners, Alabama and the Charlie Daniels Band. But officials canceled the concert when the storm hit. Several people were taken to the hospital, for head injuries and because of the heat, but officials said the injuries were minor. John Val Lynch of Sweetwater, Texas, said he felt shortchanged.

Study finds less trauma at full moon

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The old folk tale that the blood rises during a full moon, inducing violent crime, shouldn't scare anyone, according to a group of researchers. In fact, fewer people are hospitalized when there is a full moon and those who are admitted fare slightly better than those admitted at other times of the month, according to a report by two doctors and a statistician at Allegheny General Hospital. "This theory of the lunar cycle impacting the type and number of patients with traumatic injuries that an emergency room gets when the moon is full has been part of medical folklore almost forever. So we decided to take a look at it," said Dr. Dietrich Jehle, director of emergency medicine research at Allegheny General. The study was published Saturday in the Annals of Emergency Medicine. Jehle, Dr. Wendy Coates and statistician Eric Cottingham reviewed the type and extent of injuries for 1,444 trauma patients admitted to the hospital during a 12-month period. They also noted the patients' outcomes. The team identified 190 patients who were hospitalized on the day of the full moon, the day before or the day after. The researchers compared that group's medical problems and outcomes to 1,315 trauma patients admitted on the 330 days of the year when there wasn't a full moon. During the full moon, the average number of patients admitted was 3.58 per day, compared with 3.98 per day the rest of the month.

Florida, Los Angeles cops arrest over 2,400 in raids

By Brian Murphy The Associated Press

One thousand officers from the Florida Panhandle to the Keys arrested 2,000 people on charges of using or dealing crack, and more than 400 people in anti-gang sweeps. Many of the Florida suspects were nabbed by undercover officers posing as dealers, while others were captured in raids and dramatic foot chases. Many also were back on the street within hours. After the 48-hour roundup ended early Sunday, officers counted 2,076 arrests. In addition to the arrests, they seized 3,300 rocks of crack cocaine, 327 vehicles, more than $55,000 in cash, nearly 10 pounds of powdered cocaine and 50 firearms. "It's gone way above our expectations," said Broward County Sheriff Nick Navarro, who organized "Operation Rock Play," believed to be the largest coordinated effort against street-level drug users and dealers. At some places Saturday night, officers were taking in suspects at the rate of 100 an hour, with more than a third of the arrests in south Florida. The Florida Sheriffs Association plans to meet later this month to plan more large drug sweeps, said Al Gordon, Broward Sheriff's spokesman. "I look how much crack we took in. It shows these type of operations work. You can expect more," Gordon said. Gang members were the targets of the police sweeps in Los Angeles, part of a continuing effort against the city's drug trade. U.S. Embassy spokesman Sheridan Bell said Embassy Charge d'Affaires Raymond Burghardt delivered the note of protest about the shooting incident to the Foreign Ministry, which did not immediately respond. Chinese soldiers fired hundreds of bullets into the Jinguaneiwai apartment compound on June 6, a day after the State Department said the U.S. Embassy had given refuge to two Chinese dissidents, Li Zhi and his wife, Li Shuxian. A U.S. Embassy report on the shooting charged it was premeditated but did not link it to China's anger over U.S. protection of Fang and Li. The United States filed one protest shortly after the shooting. The new protest challenges for the first time the Chinese account that the soldiers were responding to sniper fire from within the apartment compound. At the time, Radio Beijing said one soldier was killed and three were injured, and plainclothes officers who went into the compound brought out a Chinese man they claimed was the sniper. No witnesses reported seeing Chinese soldiers hit, however. The U.S. report said the arrest appeared to have been staged. Vogel, who has gained notoriety for seizing suspected drug money from interstate motorists near Daytona Beach, said the statewide effort will be repeated until street-level buyers and sellers get the message: "If you sell crack cocaine or purchase crack cocaine, you're going to jail."

U.S. protests attack at diplomats' homes

BEIJING (AP) — The U.S. Embassy filed a protest today over what it called a premeditated army attack on the apartments of American diplomats and other foreigners two days after clearing the city center of student protesters. The move was likely to further worsen relations already made tense by U.S. criticism of China's violent suppression of the pro-democracy movement. Also today, two Taiwanese reporters said a colleague was taken away by security forces after he reportedly met with fugitive student leader Wang Dan. The reporters said they thought Wang also was arrested. U.S. Embassy spokesman Sheridan Bell said Embassy Charge d'Affaires Raymond Burghardt delivered the note of protest about the shooting incident to the Foreign Ministry, which did not immediately respond. # OPINION

Educators can't forget the mission

It should not come as a surprise to Manchester residents that Manchester High School has received high grades from a committee of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges which studied the school for re-accreditation.

The school has had a good reputation, and the town's education system in general has also maintained consistently good quality, due in part to the fact that the townspeople have been willing to spend the money needed for sound education.

Neither should it come as a surprise that the few problems that bothered the study committee have to do with the nitty-gritty of plant maintenance. When decisions are made about the best way to spend available money, the physical plant tends to get low priority.

But holes in the bottom of refrigerators in the cafeteria need to be repaired, and the other small maintenance problems have to be resolved before they become big renovation problems. Perhaps more maintenance staff is needed. Maybe different maintenance procedures will be adequate. At any rate, it should not be a difficult problem.

More serious is the observation, similar to one made by a team that studied Bolton High School, that more emphasis needs to be placed on the needs of non-college bound students.

A study that has been made of industrial arts and vocational programs may show the way to providing more for those students.

But the indication is that members of the Board of Education and school administrators have to keep reminding themselves that a comprehensive secondary school has to provide for a wide variety of students, not all of them destined to go on to college.

Driving drunk carries more severe penalty

This time, the Legislature has put drunken drivers on notice that the state means business. Both the House and Senate overwhelmingly approved a measure recently that sets up an automatic system for suspending the licenses of drivers who are arrested and fail blood-alcohol tests.

Unless a hearing officer later finds the arrest to be improper, a blood-alcohol reading of .10, or a refusal to submit to a test at all, would mean an automatic administrative suspension. The suspension would be 90 days for the first offense, one year for a second offense, and two years for a subsequent offense.

For one thing, the new law is tougher than what exists in that drivers who now refuse blood-alcohol tests automatically lose their licenses for six months, but those who take the test and fail it can continue to drive, and can avoid a license suspension by completing pretrial alcohol education courses. No more of that. The new law will impose the suspension right away, a reflection of the state's growing intolerance with even first-offense drunken driving.

The legislation does put enormous power and discretion in the hands of the arresting officer, and it presupposes the accuracy of the blood-alcohol test. There is a remedy — the driver who contests an arrest can have an administrative hearing with a chance to get the license back. But it is the driver who has to prove his innocence, not the arresting officer and prosecution that has to prove his guilt.

Clearly, the tougher legislation made possible this year — state Rep. Edith Prague, D-Columbia, had lobbied tirelessly for it — without success in the past — was possible because of a growing support in the public at large for getting tough on drunk driving.

We support this uncompromising and tough stance. However, we hope that the law will be executed with due caution and respect for the rights of the accused — and that they will have a fair hearing if subject to suspension. Let's watch it to see how it works.

The time clearly has come to be intolerant of drunks on the road. The efforts of Mothers Against Drunk Driving and other organizations have done much to increase our awareness of this terrible problem. But let's have the law mind that extraordinary circumstances always provide the rationale for those who are willing to put a dent in civil liberties.

'Hey, Gorby, let's get together'

By Walter Mears

WASHINGTON — It's an unlikely opening for a super summit conference, the president of the United States calling the leader of the Soviet Union to say, "Hey, let's get together."

President Bush says maybe that's the way he'll arrange to meet with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev when the time comes. He's not saying when that time will be, although he often is asked.

When there is a Bush-Gorbachev summit, arrangements won't be quite that casual, despite the president's breezy suggestion. But his latest observations on summit prospects underscore that such meetings usually are longer on drama than on diplomatic results.

What Bush's cautious course toward Moscow lacks in excitement it may make up in continuity. The president says he's comfortable with the state of U.S.-Soviet relations and feels they are on the right wavelength.

He took his time getting there despite unilateral and weapons cuts Gorbachev announced last winter and spring, scoring public relations points in the process. Bush ordered a strategic review and stuck to his methodical pace despite complaints in Congress. He announced his proposal for swift, drastic cuts in U.S. and Soviet forces in Europe at NATO on May 29.

"I wish I'd never felt pressured," Bush said when I first came in we were going to take over and we were going to study and we're going to think it out, and we did exactly that. It seems to be handing summit talks the same way.

"There will, obviously, at some point be a meeting," he said Tuesday, "but I will tell you the meeting to be seen as productive rather than just the meeting itself."

"I feel comfortable about the wavelenght we're on with the Soviet Union now."

Bush said he thinks the Soviets feel the same way, knowing that the United States wants to move forward on strategic arms reduction talks and on negotiations for conventional force cuts.

He said that while a summit has to be seen as productive, that doesn't necessarily mean signing an agreement as evidence of progress.

"I would like to think that the criterion, the governing criterion, would be so that the world would see the meeting as having been successful, something good happening out of it."

"I've been around this track long enough to know that you can always whip out something to sign, a fishing agreement or something of that nature."

Gorbachev and President Reagan did sign fishing and maritime agreements at their Moscow summit in 1988. Their major arms treaty, eliminating intermediate range nuclear missiles, was signed at a Washington summit in 1987.

They met five times, all during Reagan's second term. The president said when I first came in we were going to take over and we were going to study and we're going to think it out, and we did exactly that. It seems to be handing summit talks the same way.

Weapon threatens suppliers

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon has a weapon that can deliver substantially more payload at cheaper prices, a prospect that should strike fear in the hearts of Soviet generals. But the ones sweating are U.S. defense contractors.

"Split sourcing," the government jargon for competition, is actually the weapon, and it represents one of the most overdue Pentagon procurement reforms. Because split-sourcing threatens the trough of the defense contractors' money, they have been feeding for decades, the military establishment is likely to keep it in mothballs even though it's a scandalous because even the threat of split sourcing produces wondrous results, such as cheaper weapons with no reduction in quality and performance.

For example, the price for Texas Instruments' anti-radiation missiles plummeted from $1 million to $400,000 when the specter of split sourcing was raised.

Lockheed Corp. built the Cadillac of military transport planes, the C-130. Yet one of the Pentagon's most successful contractors, the C-130, so Lockheed knows there is a price for poor quality.

Ford Aerospace builds the best rocket engine in the world; the Sidewinder, that's no coincidence because Ford knows Raytheon is also in the Sidewinder business — and is vying with Ford for future contracts.

It shouldn't require a rocket scientist to absorb these lessons. However, when the moment arrived for the military to build the Sgt. York air-aircraft gun, Ford Aerospace received sole contract for the gun. Former Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger ordered the Sgt. York program junked in 1987.

But it's clear that there is no harm, and there is no high expectation. There's a ration of realism in that the Pentagon's weapons usually have been significant because they were held rather than for any specific use.

Here's a state-by-state review of abortion laws

By The Associated Press

Here, at a glance, are the current state laws relating to abortion. States with laws banning abortions have been unable to enforce them because of the Supreme Court's 1973 decision in Roe vs. Wade, legalizing abortion.

ALABAMA: Pre-1973 law on the books bans abortions except to preserve a woman's health. The penalty is a fine of up to $1,000 and up to one year in jail. Alabama also requires teenagers under 18 to obtain approval from a parent or a judge before getting an abortion.

ALASKA: Law requires parental permission for minors and requires women to have lived in the state for at least 30 days. Violations are punishable by a maximum $1,000 fine and five years in jail. Assistant Attorney General Elizabeth Shaw said the law never has been enforced in criminal proceedings.

ARIZONA: Pre-1973 laws ban abortions except to save a woman's life. The penalty is one to five years in prison for the woman and two to five years for whoever performs the abortion. Laws also bar use of public money for abortions and prohibit experiment with weapons.

ARKANSAS: Law prohibits use of public funds on abortions except to save a woman's life and requires minors to notify their parents before having an abortion. A 1969 law provides penalties for anyone other than a physician to induce abortion.

CALIFORNIA: Imposes no restrictions on first- and second-trimester abortions. A 1987 law restricting unmarried minors to obtain parental or court permission was overturned in a state court decision now on appeal. A pre-1973 law requiring hospital committee approval for all abortions has been repealed. The Legislature has imposed restrictions on Medi-Cal abortion funds, but California courts have struck down those restrictions.

COLORADO: Bars Medicaid funding for abortions for poor women. Colorado's abortion laws have been relatively liberal for years.

CONNECTICUT: A pre-1973 law banning abortion remains on the books. The state permits the use of Medicaid funding of of rape and incest. A 1969 anti-abortion law remains on the books. It required three surgeons to certify that a woman's health would be endangered if child would be born deformed or that rape or incest caused the pregnancy.

DELAWARE: Pre-1973 laws banned abortions except to protect the woman's health. In cases of rape or incest, or when the child would be born deformed or that rape or incest caused the pregnancy.

FLORIDA: Prohibits the advertising of abortion services and experimentation with live fetuses. Married women must obtain the consent of their husbands. Another law, enforcement of which has been suspended, pending a ruling on its constitutionality, requires unmarried women under 18 to obtain the consent of a parent. State law prohibits abortions in the last trimester except to preserve the health of the mother. Provides no Medicaid funding except in cases in which the woman's life is threatened.

GEORGIA: Bars abortions after the second trimester unless necessary to preserve the woman's health and prohibits Medicaid funding for abortions except in cases in which the woman's life is threatened. The courts have blocked laws requiring parental notification before a minor could undergo an abortion. An appeal is pending.

HAWAII: No Medicaid or parental consent restrictions.

IDAHO: A 1973 law would ban abortions under penalty of two to five years in prison for those performing them, and one to five years for those receiving them. Law requires doctors to advise patients on alternatives and the potential health effects of various options. Doctors are required to notify the parents of any girl under 18 who seeks an abortion. The Legislature has given tentative approval to a measure requiring funding for abortions but that has not been enacted.

ILLINOIS: Law on the books says abortion would again be illegal if the Roe vs. Wade decision is overturned. Various restrictive laws have been declared unconstitutional.

INDIANA: Requires minors to obtain parental consent for an abortion. The law prohibits use of any public funds to pay for abortion unless it is necessary to preserve the woman's life.

IOWA: Prohibits use of public funds for abortions.

KANSAS: Bans use of public funds for abortions, except to protect the woman's life, or in the case of rape and incest.

MAINE: A federal judge has declared invalid a law requiring parental notification of a minor's health and prohibits Medicaid funding for abortions except in cases in which the woman's life is threatened. The courts have blocked laws requiring parental notification before a minor could undergo an abortion. An appeal is pending.

MARYLAND: Laws on books would make abortion illegal except in cases in which the woman's life or mental health is threatened. If the child would be born with a physical deformity, or in cases of rape. Hospital authorities would be required to advise patients on alternatives and the potential health effects of various options. Doctors are required to notify the parents of any girl under 18 who seeks an abortion. The Legislature has given tentative approval to a measure requiring funding for abortions but that has not been enacted.

MASSACHUSETTS: Has a pre-1973 law requiring parental notification of a minor's health and prohibits Medicaid funding for abortions except in cases in which the woman's life is threatened. The courts have blocked laws requiring parental notification before a minor could undergo an abortion. An appeal is pending.

MISSISSIPPI: Still has a pre-1973 anti-abortion law on the books. In 1986, a federal judge blocked enforcement of a state law that required written consent from the parents of any woman under age 18 before an abortion could be performed.

MISSOURI: Missouri's law was the one before the Supreme Court. It banned the use of public hospitals or public employees for abortion, prohibited use of taxpayer money for abortion counseling, required a doctor to test a fetus older than six weeks for viability and declared that life begins at conception.

MONTANA: Requires, except in cases in which the woman's life is threatened, that doctors tell a woman before an abortion about the stage of fetus development, the physical and psychological effects of abortion and available alternatives.

NEBRASKA: Requires that all abortions be recorded and reported to the Department of Health. A parental notification law on the books has been unenforced since a similar statute was declared unconstitutional.

NEVADA: A 1985 law requires a doctor to notify the parents of a minor who requests an abortion before the procedure can take place. Nevada bans public funding of abortions except in cases in which the woman's life is threatened.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Still has three pre-1973 statutes making it a crime to induce abortion. If the woman dies, doctors could face life in prison if malice is proved. A parental notification law is on the books with a maximum one-year jail sentence and $1,000 fine for inducing an abortion, but that has been unenforced since a similar statute was declared unconstitutional.

NEW JERSEY: A law limiting Medicaid funding for abortion was struck down by the state Supreme Court.

NEW MEXICO: Provides no public funding for abortions for poor women except in cases in which the woman's life is in danger. Pro-choice groups say they have stopped 17 anti-abortion bills in the Legislature since 1973.

NEW YORK: Has liberal abortion legislation. Provides Medicaid money for abortions for poor women.

NORTH CAROLINA: Provides funding for poor women's abortions, although the fund has been cut back in recent years. A bill requiring parental consent for minors is pending in the Senate.

NORTH DAKOTA: Laws require parental consent before abortions and bar state funding except when the woman's life is endangered. A bill banning abortion was defeated in the 1989 Legislature.

OHIO: Prohibits the use of public funds for abortions unless the abortion is necessary to protect the woman's physical or mental health. Ohio's parental consent law was declared unconstitutional and is awaiting review by the U.S. Supreme Court.

OKLAHOMA: Still has a pre-1973 law on the books prohibiting abortions.

OREGON: Considered a pro-choice state, has no laws on the books restricting availability or public funding of abortions.

PENNSYLVANIA: Public funds are available only in cases of rape or incest. Last year the Legislature approved a provision that would require parental consent for a woman under 18 to have an abortion, but that has been blocked by a court challenge.

RHODE ISLAND: Requires doctor to receive a woman's written consent before abortion. Courts have struck down provisions requiring a waiting period, fetal description and criminal sanctions. Minors must get parental consent or a court order before undergoing an abortion. A 1975 law making it manslaughter to perform an abortion on a fetus under 18 who is viable when she is 18 is not enforced.

SOUTH CAROLINA: Law requires unmarried minors under age 18 to get parental consent. A third-trimester abortion requires the consent of the woman, her husband, the state physician, and an independent second physician.

SOUTH DAKOTA: A pre-1973 anti-abortion law remains on the books but was tailored to allow the practice under federal guidelines after Roe vs. Wade. A 1977 law would forbid abortions if allowed by federal law imposing penalties of up to two years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

TENNESSEE: Has a parental consent law requiring approval of a court or both parents before a minor can get an abortion. She can seek court permission if the parents refuse.

TEXAS: Prohibits abortions after the point of viability of the fetus, except in cases in which the woman's physical or mental health would be in jeopardy or in cases of severe fetal abnormality.

UTAH: Law requires that the woman be counseled on fetal development and the possibility of adoption. The law also requires consent of parents for minors and husbands for married women. Utah restricts Medicaid funding for abortions unless the woman's life is threatened.

VIRGINIA: No restrictions on abortions. Legislative efforts to require parental notification have been defeated.

WASHINGTON: A pre-1973 law permits abortions through the 18th week of pregnancy, requires spousal consent if the two are living together and requires women to have lived in the state 90 days in order to get an abortion. The state provides money for poor women to get abortions.

WEST VIRGINIA: Law on the books prohibits abortions unless the woman's life is in danger. An unmarried minor must notify her parents before having an abortion.

WISCONSIN: Pre-1973 law still on the books prohibits abortions except to save the woman's life. A 1985 law makes it a felony to abort a viable fetus. Wisconsin prohibits its public financing of abortion unless the woman's life is threatened.

WYOMING: Requires minors to get parental consent or court approval before getting an abortion. An abortion performed after the fetus is viable is unlawful except in cases in which the woman's life is threatened.

The challenge began quickly to Missouri's abortion law

By Carl Manning

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Missouri's abortion statute quickly drew a legal attack after it passed in 1986 and a federal court blocked its implementation even before it took effect.

That was what supporters wanted. The law was passed with the intention of making it difficult to challenge, so that the abortion issue could be reviewed by the current Supreme Court, seen as more conservative than the one that decided Roe vs. Wade.

Republican Gov. John Ashcroft, a strong abortion opponent, signed the bill, which was to have taken effect Aug. 13, 1986. But Reproductive Health Services of St. Louis, Planned Parenthood of Greater Kansas City and others filed suit in July in U.S. District Court in Kansas City seeking to overturn the law.

On July 31, 1986, U.S. District Judge Scott Wright ordered the state not to enforce the statute until the lawsuit could be heard. A four-day trial was held the following December.

The case became known as Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, after one of the plaintiffs and Missouri Attorney General William Webster.

Wright struck down major portions of the law in March 1987, and the state appealed to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. The appeals court warrants the Missouri law, but Wright, saying it conflicted with Roe vs. Wade.

In addition to declaring that human life begins at conception, the law said no public funds, employees or facilities could be used to perform or assist in an abortion, and that a woman could not have an abortion.

The appeals court upheld a provision in the law banning the use of taxpayer money for performing or assisting an abortion, but that has been unenforced since a similar statute was declared unconstitutional.

Among the record 78 friend-of-the-court briefs filed with the Supreme Court was one signed by 127 Missouri lawmakers asking the justices to uphold the state's law and allow each state to determine what its abortion laws should be.

According to that brief, Missouri passed its first abortion law in 1825, and from 1835 until 1973 the state prohibited abortions except when necessary to save the mother's life.

The Missouri Department of Health said the state's law was performed statewide last year, 17,574 in 1987, 19,039 in 1986 and 19,482 in 1985. It says all abortions were performed in private facilities.

North Dakota celebrates statehood

MANDAN, N.D. (AP) — Covered wagons rolled into town as modern-day pioneers, dusty and tired but grinning, retraced their ancestors' journey across the prairie to mark North Dakota's 100 years of statehood.

The modern-day pioneers aren't going to seem like anything," said Myrtle Worth, a teacher from Healy, Alaska.

She joined the Red River Centennial Wagon Train on horseback 15 days and 300 miles ago, when it was assembled at her brother's farm in Abercrombie, near the North Dakota-Minnesota line.

The Red River wagon, with about 30 wagons and 150 riders, ended its trek by meeting Sunday with three smaller wagon trains in Bismarck and neighboring Mandan for the state's four-day "Party of the Century."

Organizers expected up to 100,000 people would come to Bismarck and Mandan, which together

But he added in an interview with British Broadcasting Corp., Gromyko was not "an especially enlightened Soviet leader."

But perhaps his most important work came at bargaining tables from Yalta to Geneva, where he helped negotiate everything from allied war strategy to the SALT nuclear weapons treaties.

Court entangling game's integrity

By Hal Beck
The Associated Press

Only in the rabbit-hole world of baseball and the courts could the commissioner try to do his job of protecting the integrity of the game and wind up instead as the defendant in a lawsuit.

That will be the situation again Thursday when attorneys for embattled Pete Rose pursue their case against Commissioner Bart Giamatti in the Cincinnati courtroom of Judge Norbert Nadel.

They will argue for Judge Nadel to continue his restraining order that prohibits Giamatti from conducting a hearing in which Rose might answer charges that he bet on baseball, charges that could get Rose thrown out of baseball.

Who else should conduct the hearing? Reds owner Marge Schott? Schott's team's St. Bernard mascot? This is the job of the commissioner.

Instead of keeping a low profile and tip-toeing over the thin ice Rose chose instead to galumph along, suing the commissioner, charging that Giamatti has prejudged the case. In the midst of all this, Rose surfaced in Atlantic City, of all places, selling his autograph to kids for $15 a pop. "It was an arrogant thing to do under the circumstances, but no more arrogant than challenging the commissioner's authority."

It is likely that Rose's lawyers will have a sympathetic hearing listening to their arguments this week. It was Nadel, after all, who granted the original restraining order after deciding Giamatti had prejudged the matter.

The judge said that decision on the "smoking gun," an ill-advised letter written to a federal judge over Giamatti's signature, supporting bookmaker Ron Peters, Rose's chief accuser.

But if, as Rose argued, Giamatti really had prejudged the case, why didn't the commissioner move against him right away, back in March when this matter first surfaced?

Why, if the commissioner had already made up his mind on this nasty bit of business, was Rose granted a 30-day delay of the original hearing date by Giamatti? If this was a cut-and-dried case, why wasn't Rose suspended as soon as the damning 225-page Dowd report was submitted?

Those are the questions that occur to Fred Wilpon, president and chief executive officer of the New York Mets.

"What really concerns me in all of this," Wilpon said, "is that I've known Bart Giamatti for a long time, worked closely with him on a lot of issues, and I've never known a man who was more honorable, with more integrity or more forthright, sometimes to a fault."

"To be in a position where that is questioned is just not right. I know he bent over backwards to be fair. This is not a usual person. He is learned and cultured, a man of integrity. I've seen it 100 different ways in the last five years."

Wilson feels that if you hire a man for a job, you step back and let him do what he knows. Giamatti's job is to govern baseball. "There are rules," the Mets president said. "If they are violated, it is the commissioner's responsibility to uphold the rules of the game."

Then there is the matter, as Nadel put it, of the court "sticking its nose" into baseball's affairs. "The Supreme Court refused to do that with the NCAA and Jerry Tarkanian. How can a county court judge do that with baseball and Pete Rose?"

"That's Rose's argument," said Rose. "I was the worst kind of home-court ruling. How a jurist can involve himself in a private matter like this is unfathomable."

"It wears you down. What he should be thinking about now is whether the Reds are better than the Giants or the Orioles or the Yankees. This is just not good for our game, for the season and for the fans."

But if, as Rose argued, Giamatti really had prejudged the case, why didn't the commissioner move against him right away, back in March when this matter first surfaced?

A more selective Johnson takes aim at .300 barrier

By Bill Vole
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Howard Johnson has never hit .300 for a season. But because he's learning not to swing at bad balls, his manager thinks Johnson will break that barrier.

"He's worked hard and he's being very selective from both sides of the plate," said New York Mets manager Dave Johnson after Sunday's 7-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, in which Howard Johnson hit two doubles and his 22nd home run of the season and drove in three runs.

"The first half of the season is going to be Holo highlights," the manager said, referring to his third baseman's shortstop's nickname.

"With his speed, he'll hit over .300," he added.

Howard Johnson's best average for a season was .285 in 1987. "They've been throwing him breaking balls and now he's looking for breaking balls, not hitting them hard," Dave Johnson said.

Yount

RBIs but St. Louis won in seven games.

In his 15 seasons, Yount has been only three All-Star games. Yet, he's 500 hits away from probably going to the Hall of Fame.

In addition to 2,500 hits, Yount also has 196 homers, 1,071 RBIs and 214 stolen bases.

"Robin doesn't care about his stats," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "He's just a player who's 2,500 hit today and tomorrow it will be forgotten. He'll say go talk to the other guys."

Yount reached the 2,500 mark at 33 years and 10 months. Ty Cobb was the youngest to reach 2,500 hits at 31 years and seven months and Pete Rose, 34.

Others to reach 2,500 hits at a younger age than Yount include Rogers Hornsby at 33, Hank Aaron at 33 and four months and Mel Ott at 33 and five months.

Nancy Lopez, who won the LPGA Championship in May, started at 5-under and got to 8-under on the 12th, but lost four shots to par over the last six holes and finished with a par-72 for a 283 total.

Green, the 1987 rookie of the year, won $90,000 and now has $172,821 in winnings this year. Her previous best finish was second at last year's Sara Lee Classic and this year's Dinah Shore. The first of the majors.

IN BRIEF

Green wins 1st tournament

MONTREAL (AP) — Tammie Green made her first LPGA victory a big one, holding off Pat Bradley and Betsy King Sunday for a one-shot victory at the $600,000 du Maurier Classic, the third of the year's four majors.

Green, in her third year on the LPGA Tour, shot a par-72 at the 6,261-yard Beaconfield Golf Club for a four-round total score of 6 under.

Bradley, a three-time champion, matched the best score of the day and the tournament with a 67 but could only manage a share of second with King. This year's leading money-winner, who closed with a 70.

Patty Sheehan and 1979 winner Amy Alcott shot 68 and were next at 281.

OSU set to name Ayers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Randy Ayers will become the first black head basketball coach in Ohio State University history when he is named today to succeed Gary Williams, according to a published report.

Ayers, who served as an assistant under Williams, will become the Buckeye's 11th coach and only the fourth black head basketball coach in Big Ten Conference history, according to reports in today's editions of The Columbus Dispatch.

Williams resigned in June to become the head basketball coach at Maryland, his alma mater.

Athletic director Jim Jones called a news conference for 3 p.m. to announce the selection of a new head coach, but he would not confirm the selection of Ayers.

The Dispatch reported that a source close to the three-week search said Ayers, 33, a graduate of Miami University, was chosen over Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson and former Tennessee coach Don DeVoe.

Tudor out with soreness

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Tudor, making his second start of the season after off-season elbow surgery, left Sunday's game against Pittsburgh after three innings with a sore left shoulder.

"It just hurts when I throw a baseball, which unfortunately is what I have to do to live," Tudor said.

The Los Angeles left-hander threw 42 pitches and allowed two hits, two walks and no runs. He left his first start last Tuesday against San Diego, in the fifth inning with shoulder soreness.

"I didn't have anything on the ball — all changeups," Tudor said. "I didn't make a whole lot of sense for me to go out there again for another inning."

The Dodgers said that Dr. Frank Jobe, the doctor who performed the elbow surgery on Tudor last Oct. 27, will examine Tudor's shoulder on Monday.

McEnroe still around at Wimbledon

By Larry Siddons
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — "Well," John McEnroe said, "I'm still here."

All of the big names are still around, it seems, as Wimbledon begins its second week, the one that really matters.

With the men's and women's singles fields each down to the last 16 players, Wimbledon began an amount normal for the grass courts of the All England Club, where bad humors and big-serving opponents often leave big names making early exits. Last year, for instance, 10 men's seeds and 11 women's remained as the fourth round started.

What made that figure surprising was that though the crowd swelled when Wimbledon began last Monday, that the seedings were bloated by oldtimers living off past glories and teen-agers whose bustle games would be exposed as fast grass.

The 100th edition of the Grand Slam tournament, which is being celebrated by veterans such as the 38-year-old Jimmy Connors and 34-year-old Chris Evert, can still play. And that upstart with six 17-year-old French Open champions, Michael Chang and Arantxa Sanchez, are to be reckoned with.

What made that figure surprising was that though the crowd swelled when Wimbledon began last Monday, that the seedings were bloated by oldtimers living off past glories and teen-agers whose bustle games would be exposed as fast grass.

I wanted to get through this week and that's what I've done. Evert said after beating Anne Hobbs of Britain 6-4, 6-1 on Centre Court Saturday. Evert decided at the last moment to play Wimbledon this year after skipping the French Open because of a lack of motivation. She said her game still lacked aggressiveness but expected that to come as the tournament progressed.

"I think now the whole level of tennis is going to be better the second week because you've got the top grass-court players left," the three-time women's champion said.

Moody's putter touches off controversy

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

LIGNONER PA. — Once an object of curiosity, Orville Moody's 50-inch putter now has become the subject of a controversy.

Some of golf's more respected figures, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player among them, called for the banishment of that elongated piece of equipment.

And they have the ear of golf's rulemakers. "It isn't golf," P.J. Boatwright, the director of rules and competition for the U.S. Golf Association, said Sunday. A few hours before Moody brushed in a key 36-foot eagle putt on the way to a two-stroke victory in the U.S. Senior Open Golf Championship.

"That putt turned the game right around," Moody said on the edge of the sixth hole at the Laurel Valley Golf Club gave him sole control of the lead and he held it the rest of the way, eventually finishing with a final round of 70 and a 279 total, nine shots under par.

White the putt turned the tournament around, the putter has turned Moody's career around.

Moody has won so much money it won't make any difference.

"I'm not going to worry about it," the 55-year-old Moody said. "They might do it. And if they do, it might be a while off and I might be ready to hang it up by then anyhow."

"If they hold off," Dale Douglass added, "Orville will have so much money it won't make any difference."

Moody's second victory of the season, and 11th of his career, came at the expense of Frank Beard, who had been out of competitive golf in 1981 until he joined the over-50 set two months ago.

They were in a head-to-head battle and, over the last 18 holes, no one else really was in hunt.

"I would like to see a change in the rules of golf to do it," Boatwright said. "It is on that basis, he said, that the Executive Council of the USGA opened discussions last month at Rochester, N.Y., which could lead to a rule change that would ban the long-shafted putter, just as the croquet-styled putting stroke used by Sam Snead was outlawed in 1981."

Mitchell's homers proving important

By The Associated Press

Kevin Mitchell not only keeps hitting home runs, he keeps hitting important ones.

"That's as big a home run as I've hit all year," Mitchell said after his two-run homer capped a three-run rally in the eighth inning Sunday and gave the San Francisco Giants a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"It was clutch," Mitchell said. "I really needed this win. Max's starts will be the spark that gets us going."

With the Giants trailing 3-1, pinch-hitter Greg Linton led off with a single off Rick Sutcliffe, 8-6. Linton was forced to second by Brett Butler, who advanced to third on a stolen base and catcher Damon Berryhill's throwing error.

One out later, Will Clark hit an RBI single and Mitchell hit Sutcliffe's next pitch over the fence in right.

"Sutcliffe was pitching me away all night," Mitchell said. "It surprised me because the wind was blowing that way. I knew I had a shot the moment I hit it."

Jeff Brantley, 2-0, pitched three innings of one-hit relief and Steve Bedrosian pitched a perfect ninth for his 12th save. Six of his seven saves go to the Giants, who acquired him from Philadelphia two weeks ago.

Padres 5, Cardinals 2: Bruce Hurst pitched his fourth complete game and triggered a four-run third-inning hit with his second major-league hit. He entered the game 1-for-3.

Marvell Wynne helped San Diego take advantage of first baseman Fred Gonzalez's error by hitting a three-run double off Jose DeLeon, 8-8.

Viola makes the most of his lessons

Must've seemed like old times at the Metrodome — Frank Viola and Bert Blyleven pitching well and the Minnesota Twins winning.

This time, though, it was Viola vs. Blyleven as the Twins beat the California Angels 2-1.

Viola, scheduled to pitch on Tuesday, asked manager Tom Kelly to move him up so he could face his former teammate.

"Bert is a real close friend and to be able to go up against him is an honor," Viola said. "I learned a lot from him while he was here."

Blyleven, traded to the Angels in the off-season, said Viola, "showed how much it meant to him the way he wanted the ball on three days' rest. He pitched an outstanding game."

Blyleven, facing the Twins for the first time this season, pitched seven shutout innings and left with a slightly stiff shoulder.

Viola, 7-8, pitched a four-hitter. He struck out seven and did not walk a batter in his fifth complete game.

In other games, Oakland beat Cleveland 11-3. Detroit defeated Baltimore 7-3. Milwaukee routed New York 10-2. Boston defeated Toronto 4-1 in 11 innings and Chicago stopped Kansas City 7-3.

The Seattle at Texas game was rained out.

Smith goes to the Expos

By The Associated Press

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal made the second major addition to its pitching staff in less than two months, acquiring Zane Smith from the Atlanta Braves Sunday for three minor leaguers.

Smith, 1-12 in 17 starts this season with the Braves, will be used primarily in relief. Expos general manager Dave Dombrowski said Smith has lost eight consecutive decisions for the worst win-loss record in the majors.

Smith, who began the season with a 38-46 lifetime record, was obtained for pitchers Sergio Valdez and Nate Minchey and outfielder Kevin Dean. Valdez and Dean are at Class AAA while Minchey is at Class A.

In May, the Expos acquired Mark Langston from the Seattle Mariners.

Ruddock knocks out Smith

By The Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Razor Ruddock survived a second-round knockout to beat James "Bonescrusher" Smith on Sunday, scoring a seventh-round knockout of the former world heavyweight champion.

Ruddock, 23, used a left uppercut to send Smith against the ropes and finished the ex-champ with a flurry of punches. Smith fell face first onto the canvas and was counted out at 2:18 of the seventh round of the 10-round event at the Cumberland County Memorial Arena.

Ruddock, the Canadian heavyweight champion, is 22-1-1 with 15 knockouts. Smith, the former World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, is 19-8-1.

Ruddock was ahead on all three judges' cards when the fight ended.

1912 - Rube Marquard of the New York Giants runs his season record to 19-0 with a 2-1 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers. His winning streak ended five days later against the Chicago Cubs.
1931 - Max Schmeling knocks out Young Stribling in the 15th round to retain the world heavyweight boxing title in Cleveland.

IN BRIEF

Hodina tri-captain at UoH
WEST HARTFORD - Sophomore Monica Hodina of Coventry will be a tri-captain of the University of Hartford women's soccer team at the end of the season.
Hodina, an All-State performer while at Coventry High School, started all 20 games for the Hawks as a freshman at a wing fullback slot.

Hartford posted a 7-9-4 mark last season.
Forcum to run at display
HEBRON - Terry Forcum, the National Lead Driver, will be appearing at Blackledge Golf Course on Thursday at 5 p.m. Forcum will put on an exhibition of his various tricks during a junior event that day.

Soccer Club sets tryouts
The Manchester Soccer Club will hold tryouts for its fall travel teams on Saturday and Saturday, July 15, at Charter Oak field. The tryouts are for boys and girls born in 1979 and 1980 and will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m.
The club is planning on fielding four to six boys' teams and two girl girls' teams, depending on the number who try out.
For more information, call Sal Altrui at 646-3928 or Chris Hornbostel at 643-8308.

Pair tie for first place
OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) - Peter Jacobson and Mark McCumber finished tied at 13-under par 275 after 72 holes of the $1 million Western Open at the Butler National course on Sunday and will conclude the tournament on Monday with a sudden-death playoff.
The playoff, which will begin on the par-4 No. 1, was moved because of darkness in the rain-delayed tournament.
McCumber shot a final-round 69 and Jacobson had a 68 for his 275, as both broke the Butler National Western record of 276 set by Tom Weiskopf in 1982.
Paul Azinger shot a 69 and missed the playoff by one shot.
The leaders completed six holes before play was stopped because of thunder, lightning and rain.

Faldo wins French Open
CHANTILLY, France (AP) - Nick Faldo birdied No. 18 to capture the $472,000 French Open with a one-stroke margin and a final round of under par 68.
Bernhard Langer fired a 66 to pull up into a share of second place with Mark Roe and Hugh Sotgiu, a shot behind Faldo at 174.
Faldo's shot behind Faldo at 174.

HoJo player of month
NEW YORK (AP) - Howard Johnson of the New York Mets and Mike Scott of the Houston Astros were named the National League Player and Pitcher of the Month for June on Sunday.
Johnson hit 340 with 11 homers and 34 RBIs. Scott was 6-1 in seven appearances with a 2-20 earned run average and 28 strikeouts.

Pair goes out on top
INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - Karol Kiriay and Steve Timmon ended their careers with the national team as the United States defeated the Soviet Union 15-0, 15-0, 15-5 in the championship match of the USA Cup on Saturday.
Kiriay and Timmons, who helped the United States capture gold medals in the 1984 and 1988 Olympics, are retiring to pursue other interests, including pro beach volleyball.

Da Silva takes the lead
LUXEMBOURG (AP) - Acacio da Silva of Portugal, who grew up in Luxembourg, grabbed the overall lead in the 10th Tour de France bicycle race Sunday after winning the 84-mile first stage through the Duchy.
In Sunday's second stage, a team time trial in the afternoon, da Silva's Carrera team placed 12th, but he still held on to the overall leader's yellow jersey. The Super 11 team was the winner of the time trial in 53 minutes, 48 seconds over the 28 1/2 miles.

Fathers should pay for child support

DEAR ABBY: I am writing on behalf of a large group of children who had no father to honor on Father's Day. Their fathers are not dead; they are "dead-beats" who make up the 2 million absent parents nationwide (85 percent of whom are fathers) who don't pay their child support.

DEAR MR. COHEN: You have made an important contribution to this column. On behalf of more than 2 million children whose fathers have failed them (financially, thank you for writing.

DEAR ABBY: Since my husband and I divorced five years ago, legal debts and other expenses have kept me on the brink of bankruptcy. Six months ago, I took a new job as a secretary, and I need to know what I can say to my co-workers when they invite me to join them for lunch at nearby restaurants. I've already told them that it is only rarely (once a month at the most) that I can afford to eat out. I had to explain my circumstances because they know approximately what my salary is, and they can't understand why I can't afford expensive lunches. I am tired of having to trot out these circumstances, and I don't want them taking pity on me and "treating" me when I know I can't reciprocate. If I merely say "I'm having financial problems," they may think I don't know how to handle money.

'Kennebushport' cashing in on president

By Dirk Beveridge
The Associated Press

KENNEBUSHPORT, Maine (AP) — Merchants are a few miles from what they feel is a summer neighbor. His presence allows them to hawk dozens of Bush knock-knocks, ranging from photo opportunities with a life-sized Bush likeness to Bush whiskeys, jiggers to Bush Christmas tree balls to bumperstickers and T-shirts re-christening this tiny seaside town "Kennebushport."

But some merchants worry the Bush presence will keep tourists away. They blame news stories chronicling the circus atmosphere surrounding the president, the Secret Service and the White House press corps.

"It may be possible that some people have been scared away by stories in the press, but we don't know that yet," said Susan M. Savell, executive director of the Kennebunk-Kennebushport Chamber of Commerce. Ms. Savell said merchants won't be able to fully judge the impact of the Bush factor until after the Independence Day weekend, which the Bushes were spending at their home on Walkers Point.

The town has vacancies, she said, but businesses were hoping things will pick up as the season wears on.

At the tourist shop What's In Store, proprietor Jack Bigioni is offering for sale all things Bush.

"I expected it to be a bang-up spring," Bigioni said. "Unfortunately, a lot of the papers are writing that it's a mob scene and there's a lot of traffic and no parking, and I'm afraid it's had an adverse effect."

Still, Bigioni sells quite a bit of Bush memorabilia, including photographs of people posing with a likeness of the president and house shoes that feature pinkish plastic caricatures of the president and the first lady peering out from under red, white and blue bedspreads. There's even a George Bush mask, billed as "A kinder, gentler coverer." The Bush slippers have sold out twice, but the picture opportunities are the best seller, even though an ordinance prevents Bigioni from putting the Bush likeness on the sidewalk.

Bigioni hopes to get Bush himself to come pose. "It'd be a great picture," Bigioni said. "Hopefully by the end of the summer, he'll do it."

At the Kennebunk Book Post, books on Bush are popular. Bush may not be buying much of the kitsch that bears his name, but he did autograph a pair of the George and Barbara slippers for Mabel Hanson, who has been serving fresh seafood and homemade desserts for 20 years at Mabel's Lobster Claw. The Bushes, who are regular customers, explained into laughter when they saw the slippers, Ms. Hanson said.

"They just broke up," she said. "You could hear them laughing downtown. She said, 'George, my nose doesn't look like that.' He said, 'It does, too.'"

Despite such popular fare, the poll found that Americans watch movies on home videocassette recorders far more often than they do to the theater. And half of VCR owners said they go out to movies less since buying their machines.

Ten percent of all respondents said they had gone out to a movie in the previous week. A third said they had rented a movie cassette in the previous week. On the favorable side, 31 percent rated the movies "good" and just 3 percent said "excellent." The few others had no opinion.

Respondents who identified themselves as liberals were more tolerant of profanity and nudity in the movies, although they objected to violence as much as others.

The poll, conducted May 8-18, also found that 3 percent of respondents visited a movie theater more than 30 times in the previous year, but 25 percent said they had rented a movie for their home VCR more than 30 times in the year.

In all, 75 percent said they owned a VCR. The poll's reviews were not all

Public prefers VCRs over trips to cinemas

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans believe that Hollywood's golden age is gone, victim of the videocassette recorder and the movie industry's own excesses. Even as the summer's blockbuster smash box-office records, a majority in a Media General-Associated Press poll gave unfavorable reviews to most new films. And most said the overall quality of movies has been declining.

Three reasons were sex, violence and profanity. Overwhelming majorities said most new movies have too much of each, and most of the 1,084 adults in the poll said they prefer not to attend such films.

Ticket prices were another complaint. While three-quarters of respondents paid $5 or more for their last ticket, a sizable 45 percent said the price was unreasonable. Moreover, six in 10 of the most avid moviegoers, those under 30 years old, said ticket prices were too high.

Many film critics say Hollywood reached its pinnacle a half-century ago, when the quality of movies had been getting worse. That sentiment ranged from 42 percent of the youngest group to 68 percent of the oldest, and from 48 percent of 64 percent of women.

Similarly, 27 percent overall rated most new movies as "poor" and 34 percent rated them "only fair," an unfavorable review by 61 percent overall. On the favorable side, 31 percent rated the movies "good" and just 3 percent said "excellent." The few others had no opinion.
