Union wants Vincent's severance records

By Alex Girelli
Manchester Herald

Robert Harrison, president of the union that represents 26 town employees in middle management positions, has filed a complaint with the state's Freedom of Information Commission seeking release of records in connection with the severance agreement between the town and former Town Assessor J. Richard Vincent.

Vincent resigned in April 1988 in the wake of turmoil over an ill-fated attempt by the town to conduct an in-house tax revaluation. The revaluation was set aside and another is in progress under contract with a revaluation firm.

Harrison said members of CSEA unit 105 have an interest in the information because, as town employees, they should know what their own status is and whether they would have to reach individual severance agreements if they terminate employment with the town.

Harrison said Werber was named as respondent because he was unable to attend because he was under subpoena in a court case.

When the Board of Directors accepted Vincent's resignation, Republican Director Geoffrey Naab said the amount of money involved in the severance pay agreement indicated Vincent had been pressured to resign.

But in his letter of resignation, submitted after he failed to return to work after a two-week leave, Vincent defended his role in the revaluation. In it, he said, "It is unfortunate that even the best of plans can wither under the pressures of time and misconceived opposition."

Wholesale price drop is surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices fell 0.1 percent in June, the first drop in 18 months, driven down by steep declines in energy and food prices, the government said today.

Despite the overall decline, economists were likely to read mixed signals from the June report because goods other than food and energy rose 0.7 percent, the largest increase since October 1986.

Hundreds homeless in wake of storm

By Peter Viles
The Associated Press

Hundreds of Connecticut residents driven from their homes by a ferocious storm took refuge in public shelters and thousands more endured a fourth night without electricity as emergency officials surveyed damage from Monday's storm.

State troopers kept sightseers out of the hardest hit areas. Police in Hamden arrested four people Wednesday night for violating a 9 p.m. curfew, but there were no reports of looting, Smith said.

Officials worried that rats would infest destroyed homes, and were also concerned that some gas stoves might be leaking. There were no reports of gas explosions, however, Hamden officials razed four unsafe buildings.

Because food and energy prices swung widely from month to month and are less influenced by the economy as a whole, analysts look to the inflation rate of other goods as an indicator of underlying inflationary pressures in the economy.

Here's what Americans do to destroy their health

ATLANTA (AP) — People in Kentucky are bad about smoking but good about not drinking and driving, most Hawaiians buckle up and Montana residents aren't a sedentary lot, a health survey shows.

The survey, taken in 1987 and released Thursday, is the latest of the CDC's Behavioral Risk Factor Surveys — an effort to find out what Americans do to ruin their health.

"Heavier drinking" (60 or more drinks a month) ranged from 3.7 percent in West Virginia to 10.3 percent in New Hampshire.

Current Quotations

"We all appreciate President Bush's appeal, a shift from hostility to be kinder and gentler. We appreciate that he is prepared to meet and greet us and even sup with us and even shake our hands. But after six months, it is time to look beyond the smile and look at the substance, because thousands of poor people, working women, African-Americans and Hispanics need more than kindness and gentleness." The Rev. Jesse Jackson, at the closing session of the annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"It was remarkable to see someone with that tenacity to live. I'll never forget the sight of seeing him alive." - Air Force Tech. Sgt. Dave Dahl, a member of the team that rescued a pilot who survived an apparent unconscious flight and crash landing about 15 miles east of the island of Eleuthera.

"This beats any parade back home." - Robert McKean of Alameda, Calif., during a bash at the Place de la Bastille celebrating the July 14, 1789 storming of the royal prison in Paris that began the French Revolution.

Police Roundup

Sexual assault charge filed

An East Hartford man was arrested Thursday after he turned himself in on a warrant charging him with sexual assault, police said.

Anthony Gionfriddo, 23, of 102 Westerly Terrace, turned himself in at 8:10 a.m., police said. He was released on $5,000 non-surety bond pending a court appearance.

No further information was available on the case, police said.

Man charged in 2 accidents

A Manchester man was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated and evading responsibility Wednesday after his car collided with two parked cars on Princeton Street.

Bruce A. Kelsey, 21, of 286 E. Middle Turnpike, was arrested outside his home at 11:28 p.m. Wednesday, police said.

Kelsey and his father, Floyd Kelsey, 64, of the same address, struggled with police who tried to take Bruce Kelsey from his home back to the scenes of the accidents, police said. Floyd Kelsey was arrested and charged with breach of peace and interfering with police, police said.

Police said that earlier Bruce Kelsey had been driving south on Princeton Street when his car collided with a legally parked car on the side of the road, skidded out of control and struck a telephone pole. Bruce Kelsey left the scene of the accident, and he continued south on Princeton Street, where his car collided with another parked car, police said.

Police saw Kelsey running down Princeton Street to his home on East Middle Turnpike, where he confronted him, police said. Also, Kelsey kept getting in the way and was arrested, according to police.

Police found a six pack of beer in the car Bruce Kelsey was driving. Bruce Kelsey's blood-alcohol level was recorded at .17, police said. The legal limit is .10.

Bruce Kelsey and his father complained of injuries and were taken to Manchester Memorial Hospital, police said. Bruce Kelsey was treated for multiple contusions and released, a hospital spokeswoman said. His father was treated for a chest bruise and released, the spokeswoman said.

Bruce Kelsey was also charged with interfering with a police officer and reckless operation of a motor vehicle and police said. He and his father are scheduled to appear in Manchester Superior Court Monday.

Thoughts

I can't begin to count the number of times my children have told me that something is not fair. My answer is that life is not fair, but God is just God. We face many things that are unfair. It's not fair when a marriage breaks up. It's not fair that our environment is so polluted, it's not fair that our children are born handicapped. And in all this unfairness I know that God is in control.

We all face our ups and downs, our good times and our bad. If Cor. 4:8 and 9 says, "we are troubled on every side, yet not distressed, we are perplexed, but not in despair, persecuted, but not forsaken, cast down but not destroyed."

The Lord never promised us a life of ease, but He promised that He would be with us.

Let's not focus on the unfairness around us, but on the One that will give us the grace to stand through it.

Bus stop supporters claim bias

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

Parents planning to appeal a Board of Education decision to deny their request for a bus stop are writing to review tapes of transportation hearings and board meetings before making their case to the state.

The parents are claiming members of the transportation committee, which recommended that the board reject the request, showed biases against the parents because they live in a wealthy neighborhood.

"Once we get the tapes and listen to them, we'll see what we're going to do," said Lee Urbanetti, a resident of Clover Lane and father of three children.

A group of Martin School parents asked the board to deny the return of a bus stop on Haystack Road. The stop, which would be within the one-mile maximum walking distance, was used last year because of heavy traffic caused by construction in the area. Haystack, Gardner Street, and Carriage Drive.

At Monday night's meeting of the Board of Education, the board decided the stop was not needed since the construction had lightened. Parents say otherwise.

Now parents are considering appealing the board's decision to the state board of education.

Urbanetti and Reed Drive resident Brian Bottaro, who has three children of his own, have accused the board's transportation committee chairman Francis A. Maffe Jr. and committee member John A. Tucci of bias.

One of the comments parents are questioning was made by Tucci at Monday night's board meeting.

"It's not a dangerous situation. It's paradise up there," he said. Today, Tucci said, "Calling it paradise was more or less a comparison to some situations that other children have to deal with. It had nothing to do with wealth."

"I had no preconceived bias," he said. "I didn't make a judgment until I went out and investigated the area with other experts."

Parents are questioning a comment by Maffe that the parents wanted special treatment. At Monday's meeting, he said, "If you're so concerned, then why aren't you out there fighting for our budget. It's just for you and you alone, and the heck with everybody else, then you'll get treated just like everyone else."

Maffe could not be reached for comment this morning.

Urbanetti and other parents have said they would settle for a crossing guard at Gardner and Haystack, but police have said they will not place a guard at the intersection because it is safe without one.

Use of concrete on walks worries some PZC members

By Nancy Concelmon
Manchester Herald

Though taxpayers may be happy with the town's decision to use concrete for the new curbs on Porter Street instead of granite, some Planning and Zoning Commission members are questioning the use of concrete instead of granite.

Concrete costs about one-third as much as granite, Camosci said. Replacement of walks and curbs on Porter Street is costing the town about $250,000 total, but Camosci said he didn't have a breakdown of the costs.

"I'm trying to get the biggest bang for the buck," he said.

There is little developable land on Porter Street, he said, but if a developer wanted to build there the Engineering Division would probably recommend granite curbs.

"I know we make the developers do it but it's brand new (the development)," Camosci said. "They recoup the costs."

Occasionally in the past, commission members have said they were concerned with what could be perceived as an inconsistency in the rules on curbs. Some members have asked how the commission can require granite when the town uses concrete.

Bolton board puts off plans to restructure, add to school

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

Bolton community is coming from a school superintendent Richard E. Packman.

He said he did not want to have the board commit itself to a project and have the town reject it through a referendum.

Board Chairman James H. Marshall agreed a survey was needed, stressing that it has to be done correctly so that the board's proposal for the restructuring is supported by the town.

The idea for the survey is part of a joint effort by Marshall and Packman to outline the direction for the future of Bolton schools.

Other items in the outline include examining the prospects of attracting high school students from the town of Columbus into the Bolton system. The proposal suggests this could be done on a tuition basis.

Members said enrollment at the high school is expected to decrease during the next decade because of changes in the number of school-aged children in Bolton and the loss of Willington students at Bolton High School.

The town of Willington, which does not have a high school, has been sending its students to Bolton High School. Willington school officials have decided not to send freshmen to Bolton High School next school year, however.

The chairman and superintendent's outline for the future also includes working with the Public Building Commission to help determine the restructuring of the schools.

The final aspect of the outline is for the board and administration to address ways of meeting the needs of students in a small high school system.

Ellen B. Landers wants town seat; husband bows out

By Nancy Concelmon
Manchester Herald

Eighth Utilities District Director Ellen Burns-Landers, a Republican, said today she will run for the town Board of Directors.

But the race for the board will not pit Burns-Landers against her husband, District President Thomas E. Landers Jr., a Democrat. Landers said last month she was considering running but said today he will not run because he wants to see provisions of the recently approved district-town agreement implemented, including transfer of a town-owned firehouse on Tolland Turnpike to the district and construction of sanitary sewers to serve the Buckland mall.

ELLEN B. LANDERS "has a lot of friends."

"It's going to take the better part of this year to see these projects done," Landers said.

Burns-Landers, 31, is a local attorney and hearing examiner for the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities. She has been a district director since 1987 and is a member of the Republican Town Committee. She and Thomas Landers were married in 1988.

"I think I would be good on the (town) board," she said. "I would like to be on a different board than the district board of directors, which successfully fought a 1987 referendum question eliminating the district's right to veto a merger with the town."

But Garside said Burns-Landers' work with the district will probably be seen as an advantage.

"The north end and the south end are working together to get together," he said. "I think she has a lot of friends in the Eighth." Her husband did not get a similar reputation from Democratic Town Committee Chairman Theodore R. Cummings, who said he might be jumping the gun by running for town director.

But, Landers said, the district should have some representation on the town board now that the town-district agreement has been approved.

State aid possible without partnership

By Nancy Concelmon
Manchester Herald

Manchester could get state housing funds without joining a controversial housing partnership but would lose valuable funds for road repair and open space acquisition, the head of the town's Citizens' Housing Committee said today.

State officials have said Manchester could be given the same priority for state housing funds as 11 percent of Manchester's nearby 20,000 housing units are publicly assisted, said Mary Ann Handley, Democratic town director and head of the housing committee.

Manchester could request a waiver entitling it to funding without joining the partnership, which consists of nearly 62 of the state's 169 municipalities so far.

The partnership program is designed to bring local and state forces together to develop plans to provide much-needed affordable housing.

But Town Health Director Ronald Kraatz told committee members at a meeting Thursday the town would give up state funding for road improvements and open space development by joining the partnership, Handley said.

"There's more of a benefit to being in the partnership than in this," she said.

The state Department of Transportation would provide a 25 percent increase in funding to towns that join the partnership, state Department of Housing officials have said. Partnership towns would also receive "priority" from state Department of Environmental Protection for open-space grants and water-quality projects.

The local housing committee, which consists of 12 citizens and three town directors, is scheduled to make recommendations on handling Manchester's affordable housing shortage to the Board of Directors in January.

The committee will recommend that the directors do one of three things: join the partnership, waive membership but seek state aid, or create a permanent local committee similar to the partnership to handle the problem at a local level, Handley said.

Cotter's lawyers discount lawsuits

By The Associated Press

Hartford real estate developer John P. Cotter Jr., who police said killed his family before committing suicide this week, was facing civil suits seeking more than $2 million in damages, but two of his lawyers say that the legal actions were not a source of problems for the developer.

Six separate Superior Court lawsuits were filed against Cotter's company, Connecticut Building Corp., between 1986 and 1988 by former tenants of his Broad Brook Mill development in East Windsor. The suits all charge that negligence by Cotter's company caused a fire that all but destroyed the project and demand that the firm pay a total of more than $2 million in damages.

Court documents, filed in Vernon Superior Court, allege that one of Cotter's employees accidentally started the 1986 fire. Officially, the cause is undetermined, according to East Windsor's fire marshal.

One of Cotter's lawyers, Peter Perakos, asked Thursday about the insurance settlements after the fire and lawsuits, said that "the fire case was not a problem in any respect."

Cotter "was not under any pressure as a result of the lawsuits," Perakos said, adding, "This guy snapped, and there's no reason for it. There's no kinder or gentler man that I've ever met in my life."

Another lawyer for Cotter, Willis G. Parsons Jr., agreed that there was no link between the fire's legacy of lawsuits and Cotter's bizarre suicide.

"I don't think I would relate the two in any way," Parsons said. "What you and I would have done was run away from something like that. But he didn't because he wasn't like that."

Neighbors fearful after shooting

STAMFORD (AP) - Fear gripped some residents of West Main Street on Thursday, one day after gunmen sprayed a pool hall with bullets injuring at least nine people.

Police had three suspects in custody, all suffering from gunshot wounds after attempting to run a police road block. But police had no idea what sparked the Wednesday night assault.

Residents spoke reluctantly about the shooting Thursday and refused to give their names for fear that associates of the gunman would harm them.

"I've seen nothing and I ain't saying nothing," said one man who stood outside the pool hall with others as they drank from a bottle of beer wrapped in a brown paper bag.

Another man nearby leaned on his cane and said it wouldn't do any good to talk, because the authorities would be unable to protect him or stop further shootings.

Victims of storm tell their tales

By The Associated Press

Two Connecticut people, victims of Monday's savage weather, offer very different advice about where to go when a big storm hits.

Ask Elizabeth Ferri of New Fairfield, and she'll tell you the best place to be is inside a house, safe from lightning bolts like the one that zapped her.

But ask Sebastian DiLeone of Hamden and he'll tell you to go anywhere but home because his house was reduced to a pile of rubble.

DiLeone, 38, was vacationing on Cape Cod when the storm hit Connecticut Monday, ripping apart dozens of houses in his Hamden neighborhood. He learned about the storm and the damage to his house - when he picked up a Tuesday edition of The New Haven Register and his destroyed block on the front page.

He rushed back to Hamden the same day to find a 10-foot-high pile of debris where his house once stood. He was the only one who remained of his house, he said he considered himself lucky that he was home when the storm hit.

"Had I been home I would have been in the shower when it hit,"

Probe to focus on fees for project

HARTFORD (AP) - A real estate partnership owned by the principals of a political consulting firm was paid $47,000 to help secure federal subsidies for 48 rehabilitation units of low-income housing in Waterbury, a published report said.

A state loan may have been used in 1984 to pay the consulting fees to the principal of Black, Manafort, Stone & Kelly, who include Democratic National Committee member Peter G. Kelly of Hartford and top Republican adviser Paul J. Manafort Jr., the son of a former New Britain mayor.

S. Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, D-Conn., said he would make expenditures on the Waterbury project part of the focus of a congressional investigation into the federal Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation rent subsidy program.

Since April, a House Government Operations subcommittee has been investigating allegations of widespread influence peddling and other abuses by prominent Republicans at the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development during the Reagan administration.

The Fairfax Street Partnership, the real estate firm run by Black, Manafort principals, some of the money was paid to John F. Burns, a Middlebury Democrat and political housing consultant, unidentified sources told The Hartford Courant.

Charles Black, another partner in Black, Manafort, on Wednesday disclosed the payment of $47,000 in connection with the project, but they were never used, HUD officials said.

'Cathedral' destroyed

CORNWALL (AP) - The tornadoes and thunderstorms that tore through the state earlier this week inflicted heavy damage on the Cathedral Pines preserve, toppling trees that have stood for more than 200 years, officials said.

The preserve, maintained by the Nature Conservancy, was hit hard by the storm that ripped through the state Monday killing one person, flattening buildings and causing millions of dollars of damage.

The preserve is a 42-acre tract located near both the Appalachian Trail and the Connecticut Blue Trail system in the state's northwest corner. The preserve contained a massive stand of white pines and hemlocks that towered 150 feet above the forest floor and were between 200 and 300 years old.

"We have not been able to assess the total damage which has been estimated by eyewitnesses to be evident throughout the entire preserve," said Leslie N. Corey, executive director of the Nature Conservancy in Middletown. "The initial reports are that most of the legendary white pines that made the preserve so famous, and helped it to attain the Landmark status, have either been felled or severely damaged by the storm."

The Calhoun family purchased the land that serves as the preserve in 1883 and donated it to the Nature Conservancy in 1967.

"I knew I got hit by a bolt of lightning. It was really a weird feeling."

"It's like my whole body went numb. I guess not too many people got struck by lightning and get to talk about it. You have to laugh about it."

"I didn't know who my husband was, and who my daughter was," she said Wednesday as she sat in her kitchen, taking a day off from work.

Hooks calls for Washington march

DETROIT (AP) - Comparing the Supreme Court to the Ku Klux Klan for recent decisions on civil rights and affirmative action, NAACP head Benjamin L. Hooks called for a march on the nation's capital next month to protest the rulings.

"We're not going to let four men and a woman in black robes turn us around any more than we'll let white robes turn us around," Hooks said, referring to the garb traditionally worn by Klan members.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Jesse Jackson challenged President Bush to order blacks and other minorities more than "kinder and gentler" words.

(Former President) Reagan laid the tracks and built the engine to take the rights of workers and women and African-Americans and Hispanics and the poor. Bush is putting grease on those tracks, not brakes," Jackson told 3,500 cheering people at the closing session of the group's 80th annual convention.

"We all appreciate President Bush's appeal, a shift from hostility to be kinder and gentler. We appreciate that he is prepared to meet and greet us and even sup with us and even shake our hands."

The nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization, addressed this week by Vice President Dan Quayle and Bush cabinet members Jack Kemp and Louis Sullivan, decided to protest the administration's apparent inaction following the Aug. 23 march, Hooks said. The remarks by Hooks and former Democratic presidential candidate Jackson continued the attacking tone set earlier in the day by Democratic National Chairman Ronald Brown.

"We hear new words from the Republican Party," said Brown, a former Jackson campaigner and the first black to head the national party. "In politics, as in poker, there's a phrase for it."

"I believe it's time that we tell George Bush, Dan Quayle, Jack Kemp, (national GOP Chairman) Lee Atwater and the rest of those Republicans it's time to put up or shut up."

Several other speakers also attacked the Supreme Court, including former U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Chairwoman Eleanor Holmes Norton.

The program was suspended briefly earlier this year and its selection guidelines rewritten after Department of Housing and Urban Development auditors criticized project selections. Auditors said influential Republicans had successfully lobbied HUD officials in favor of projects involving their clients.

Pierce told the subcommittee last month he had no direct role in HUD funding decisions. Since then, however, there have been reports that Pierce intervened on behalf of associates, including a former law partner who was seeking HUD financing for the North Carolina project.

Ms. Wiseman has said she quit her job as HUD's assistant secretary for housing because Pierce ordered her to fund the North Carolina project over the objections of other agency officials.

Police have suspect in serial killings

SEATTLE (AP) - After searching seven years for one of the nation's worst serial killers, police say a former law student is a "viable suspect" in the Green River slayings of 48 women, and perhaps other killings in the Northwest.

William Jay Stevens II, 38, who is serving a jail term for burglary, was named in an affidavit made public Thursday.

The affidavit was filed to obtain a warrant to search two of Stevens' residences in Spokane, 290 miles east of Seattle.

Records obtained thus far have failed to provide him with an alibi for any of the 48 suspected Green River homicides, or any of those in the cities of Portland or Spokane, the affidavit said.

"Instead, interviews and records have produced the following facts for lead to establish that Stevens is a viable suspect in the Green River homicides and possibly others in the Pacific Northwest."

The Johnson Street project is one of a dozen or more federally subsidized housing projects in Waterbury that have been built outside normal channels in the early and mid-1980s.

The Waterbury arrangements were investigated by the FBI in 1986 and 1987, but the inquiry did not appear to have produced evidence of criminal wrongdoing. The Times also reported Thursday.

State housing officials say they dealt almost exclusively with Burns in deciding to grant a $385,000 loan to Middlebury developer Sherman Cooper for the Johnson Street project.

When Richard E. Coffey, then a state supervisor overseeing the project, was asked if the state, in respect, should have questioned the $76,800 consulting fee expense submitted by Cooper, he said he did not identify the fee, but they were never used, HUD officials said.

Ex-Pierce aide seeking immunity

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional investigators eager to determine former Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce's role in abuses at his agency are mulling an offer by a former Pierce aide who reportedly would implicate him in the scandal.

Sources who spoke Thursday on the condition of anonymity said Deborah Gore Dean, who for three years was Pierce's top aide, has told a House panel that if granted immunity she could testify that Pierce personally approved funding for several projects in a program under scrutiny.

Meanwhile, two former HUD officials were to testify today before the panel about a North Carolina housing project that is the subject of questions about Pierce's involvement. Scheduled to testify were Shirley McVay Wiseman and Janet Hale.

A congressional source said the chairman of the House subcommittee on employment and housing, Rep. Thomas Lantos (D-Calif.), has "an open mind" about making a deal with Ms. Dean but has made no decision.

Ms. Dean last month refused to answer questions from the subcommittee, invoking her Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. Probe to focus on fees for project

HARTFORD (AP) - A real estate partnership owned by the principals of a political consulting firm was paid $47,000 to help secure federal subsidies for 48 rehabilitation units of low-income housing in Waterbury, a published report said.

A state loan may have been used in 1984 to pay the consulting fees to the principal of Black, Manafort, Stone & Kelly, who include Democratic National Committee member Peter G. Kelly of Hartford and top Republican adviser Paul J. Manafort Jr., the son of a former New Britain mayor.

S. Rep. Bruce A. Morrison, D-Conn., said he would make expenditures on the Waterbury project part of the focus of a congressional investigation into the federal Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation rent subsidy program.

Since April, a House Government Operations subcommittee has been investigating allegations of widespread influence peddling and other abuses by prominent Republicans at the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development during the Reagan administration.

The Fairfax Street Partnership, the real estate firm run by Black, Manafort principals, some of the money was paid to John F. Burns, a Middlebury Democrat and political housing consultant, unidentified sources told The Hartford Courant.

Police have suspect

U.S. space goals topped by moon base, Mars trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Space Council, working on "a major new space initiative," is focusing on an American return to the moon, establishing a permanent base and proceeding from there to Mars.

But it will be expensive, warns Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., who was among a group of congressmen briefed Thursday on several options being considered by the council.

Any of the options, Walker said, will require "a substantial increase in resources available to NASA — it will require doubling the size of NASA and the NASA budget."

The council, headed by Vice President Dan Quayle, favors the moon-Mars scenario over other courses being considered. Walker said, but no final decision has been made. Quayle, NASA Administrator Richard H. Truly and Mark Albrecht, executive secretary of the space council, conducted the briefing.

"I basically outlined three options," Walker, the ranking Republican member of the House space science subcommittee, said in an interview.

"One, for the United States to move ahead with a robotic program and gradually phase men out of the space program; another, to go back to the moon with the idea of establishing a permanent moon base and then going from there to Mars; and third, to take us directly to Mars and then to the turn of the century."

The council is not expected to make a recommendation about America's space future to President Bush in time for inclusion in his speech next Thursday on the 20th anniversary of the first landing on the moon.

Walker said Quayle is "basically consulting with the people on Capitol Hill who have something to say about authorizing space funds as an advance of Space Council consideration of a major new space initiative."

Attending the meeting in the White House complex were the chairman and ranking members of the Senate and House subcommittees and committees that handle the space program.

The space agency has asked for $13 billion in the next fiscal year, but is likely to get far less than that from a budget-minded Congress.

"I made the point that they basically were asking for us to find about 2 percent of the federal budget for NASA in the 1990s and into the next century," Walker said. "We were almost double that level in the 1960s — this nation has shown it is capable of spending 3.6 percent of the budget for space activity if the program is truly visionary."

Arrests said to show terrorist sophistication

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI says charges that three people made technical explosive devices for Provisional Irish Republican Army use against British targets show the "high level of technical sophistication of world terrorism."

The three, one of whom had top security clearance, were arrested in different states on federal charges of conspiring to injure and destroy the property of a foreign government.

An arrest warrant was issued for a fourth person believed to be in Ireland, the FBI announced Thursday.

FBI Director William S. Sessions said the three were developing sophisticated circuits for use in remote-controlled explosive devices and the design and development of delivery systems for rockets.

Sessions, noting the three have backgrounds in electrical engineering, said the arrests demonstrate the high level of technical sophistication being employed by terrorist organizations to further violence worldwide."

The Provisional Irish Republican Army, PIRA, is an underground organization that has been fighting the British Army and police since the early 1970s trying to end British rule of Northern Ireland.

Arrested were Richard Clark Johnson, 41, of Nashua, N.H., and Harwich, Mass.; Martin Peter Quigley, 27, a citizen of the Republic of Ireland who has been living since April in Bethlehem, Pa.; and Christina Leigh Reid, 25, of Sunnyvale, Calif., the FBI said.

They were arrested in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and California, respectively.

A federal magistrate in Boston issued an arrest warrant for Peter Edmund Maguire, an Irish citizen linked to the PIRA's explosive research program. Sessions said the three were developing sophisticated circuits for use in remote-controlled explosive devices and the design and development of delivery systems for rockets.

Execution try fails, but second succeeds

ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — A mildly retarded killer died in Alabama's electric chair early today in the second execution attempt after the first try failed because of a misconnected cable.

Horace Franklin Dunkins Jr., 38, was declared dead at 12:27 a.m., 19 minutes after the executioner first flipped the voltage switch. The U.S. Supreme Court turned down two last-minute appeals to stop the execution.

State Prison Commissioner Morris Thigpen said the jacks connecting electricity to the chair were reversed, and so did not deliver enough voltage to kill Dunkins on the first try.

"I regret very, very much what happened," Thigpen said. "It was human error. I just hope he was not conscious and did not suffer."

Dunkins' attorney, Steve Ellis, described Dunkins' death as a "grizzly scene."

When the guard raised the two vinyl shades covering the window in the witness room, Dunkins was already strapped to the electric chair, his face covered by a black veil attached to the hood of the electrodes on his head.

Thigpen said the first throw of the switch at 12:08 a.m. brought no visible response from the condemned man.

A guard in the witness room opened the door to the death chamber, and told another guard directing the execution, "I believe you've got the jacks on wrong." Neither guard was identified.

Two doctors who examined Dunkins determined he was unconscious, but had a strong heartbeat. Thigpen told a news conference later.

At 12:17 a.m., the switch was thrown a second time. Ten minutes later, Dunkins was pronounced dead.

Mother convicted in baby's addiction

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — A judge has convicted a cocaine-addicted mother of delivering drugs to her two children through their umbilical cords at birth.

Rejecting arguments that the law under which she was tried was meant only for criminals engaged in illegal drug deals, Circuit Judge O. H. Eaton Jr. said he viewed the two children born to Jennifer Clarise Johnson as victims.

"These children had no ability to control what was being introduced into their bodies," Eaton said in handing down the ruling Thursday after a non-jury trial.

"The defendant had that ability," the unmarried 23-year-old woman is believed to be the first mother in Florida — and one of only a few in the country — convicted of passing drugs to her children under a criminal drug-dealing statute.

Johnson faces a 30-year sentence, but prosecutor Jeff Dent said he would recommend that she complete a drug program she is undergoing and then serve "a lengthy probation period."

In his ruling, the judge made two key determinations:

■ That the illegal substance traveled from Ms. Johnson's body into the babies at birth, but before their umbilical cords were severed.

■ And that "a child who is born but whose umbilical cord has not been severed is a person" within the Florida law under which she was tried.

The defense had argued that a newborn is not a person until the cord is severed and that Johnson could not be tried under the law that makes it a felony for someone to "deliver" drugs to a minor.

"I am convinced and find that the term 'delivery' (in the law) includes the passage of cocaine or a derivative of it from the body of a mother into the body of her child through the umbilical cord after birth occurs," the judge held.

Flag supporters split on strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders want to quickly outlaw flag burning without changing the Constitution but congressional conservatives are promising to fight any foot-dragging on their proposed constitutional amendment.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., the chairman of the House Judiciary constitutional law subcommittee, said Thursday legislation would probably reach the House floor before Congress' August recess to overturn the Supreme Court decision.

But he said it probably wouldn't be the constitutional amendment supported by President Bush. Edwards said the proposed amendment might be "reckless" in its current form because it doesn't detail what would constitute an act of flag burning or shape the penalties.

Edwards and other key Democrats, including House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., House Judiciary Committee chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, and Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., propose regular legislation designed to meet the court's House Republican leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., told Edwards' subcommittee on Thursday as congressional hearings on the flag issue began.

Rep. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., the chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, called for passage of the amendment. Without it, he said, "people will be burning flags throughout the country on every holiday occasion" drawing strong reactions, especially from veterans.

"People are going to get hurt," he said.

But in the Senate, Republicans are insisting the amendment doesn't get second-class treatment. And House Republicans say they can force their amendment out of committee if the panel tries to hold it up.

Republicans and some Democrats, conservatives say the constitutional amendment is the only way to ensure the court ruling is overturned.

"Even experts who do not favor a constitutional amendment approach say that a legislative approach would not work," he said.

Bill would ban dial-a-porn services

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House bill to levy $50 million in new and increased licensing fees on many communications businesses would also ban obscene dial-a-porn services and restrict access to indecent phone messages.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee approved the package on Thursday while also voting to enact a new fairness doctrine that requires broadcasters to air opposing views on controversial public issues.

The committee action was part of a drive to hold the federal budget deficit in fiscal 1990 to $110 billion, as required by the Gramm-Blundin deficit reduction law.

The committee attached the dial-a-porn and fairness doctrine measures to its budget reconciliation bill, which is designed to generate $50 million across-the-board increase in licensing fees charged by the Federal Communications Commission.

New fees on 17 communications areas previously exempted from charges, including ham radio operators and satellite launching businesses.

■ Increases in FCC fines that have not been changed since 1934.

The dial-a-porn provision comes in response to a Supreme Court ruling last month that invalidated a 1988 law that had outlawed the $2 billion dial-a-porn business.

China tightens rules governing the press

BEIJING (AP) — China said today it is imposing tougher rules on what books and magazines can publish, and there were reports of more executions and prison terms in a continuation of the government's drive to stifle popular dissent.

A foreign source in Chengdu, the capital of central Sichuan Province, quoted local press reports as saying two men were executed last Saturday for their actions during deadly riots in that city in early June.

The executions, which were not reported in the national press, brought to 23 the number of people known to have been put to death for disrupting social order since the June 3 military assault on Beijing in which at least 200 people were killed.

Meanwhile, the official People's Daily said today that the state Press and Publications Administration has decided to take tough new measures to weed out publications it considers unsavory.

It said publishers in recent years have "flooded the book market with low grade and vulgar material which contain violent murders and obscene pornography which have corrupted people's souls."

It added that books and periodicals to be investigated and removed from bookshelves include those with "counter-revolutionary and bourgeois liberalization propaganda."

The Chinese government has named the June violence on "counter-revolutionary rebels" trying to overthrow the socialist system and has detained or issued arrest warrants for dozens of students and intellectuals who led the pro-democracy movement.

Books by scholars now on nationwide wanted lists have been banned.
