Wednesday, Oct. 11, 1989 Manchester, Conn. — A City of Village Charm Newsstand Price: 35 Cents

EVIDENCE FROM ROBBERY — Detective James Bowen of the Manchester Police Department places a bag of tainted money on a tarp. Bowen was one of the officers who investigated an armed robbery today at the Northwest School Employees Federal Credit Union at 233 Main St. The robbers fled the scene in a car stolen in Hartford.

Board lifts suspension of Coventry firefighter

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — The South Coventry Fire Department Board of Appeals voted to overturn an earlier decision of the Board of Firefighters and lifted the 45 day suspension against firefighter Joseph Carrilli Tuesday night, according to the president of the fire association.

In a case which has attracted the attention of the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union, Carrilli had been suspended for violating a departmental regulation forbidding firefighters from talking to the press. He had told a reporter about his involvement in the delivery of a baby on Sept. 7.

Richard Aubin, the president of the fire association, said the suspension was lifted but a letter of reprimand will be in Carrilli's file.

Aubin would not give details of the appeal but said a statement to the press will probably be issued Thursday.

Carrilli said in a telephone interview today, "I'm very happy with the results."

Carrilli was hesitant to answer questions about the hearing and said, "It's hard to answer any questions. I don't want any more bad stuff."

The hearing scheduled for 7:30 was delayed due to an emergency call.

Aubin called the hearing to order at 7:50 p.m. "I'm requesting an open meeting under state statute 118-A. If I request an open meeting I am supposed to be given one under Freedom of Information," Carrilli said, referring to the state's open meeting law.

The law says that any public officer who is subject to an evaluation of his performance can ask that the meeting be open to the public.

However there was a call for executive session under Roberts Rules of Order.

"State statute overrides Roberts Rules," said Carrilli.

Aubin asked if Carrilli had a copy of the statute with him, and Carrilli replied he did not but he carried the statute number.

"How are we suppose to know if that's so?" said Aubin. "You should have come prepared, Joe."

Members of the board voted to hold the hearing behind closed doors and asked the press to leave.

Before the hearing, Carrilli said he thought a decision had already been reached against him.

Principal puts focus 'on issues'

James Spafford takes the helm at Manchester High

MAKING THE ROUNDS — New Manchester High School Principal James Spafford walks the halls at Manchester High, Tuesday, his first day on the job.

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

"A work station" is shored in the corner of the office now occupied by James Spafford, Manchester High School's new principal. A round table surrounded by six chairs sits in the center of the room. On the table is Spafford's name plate, and on a shelf behind the table are his telephones — the office lacks a desk.

"A desk is a barrier," says the 45-year-old New England native. "I prefer to have a round table. Symbolically, in my mind, it says participation."

For Spafford, whose first day at the high school was Tuesday, the emphasis is on the right to waive technical formalities if it is in the best interest of the School Department to do so.

About Town

Computer drive at school

The Assumption School is participating in the "Apples for the Students" program sponsored by Stop & Shop supermarkets. The Home and School Association at the school will be collecting the pink cash register tapes at the school and at Assumption Church. Debbie Owen is in charge of this program.

School to hold open house

The Hans Christian Andersen Montessori School will hold an open house at 7 tonight for parents interested in enrolling a child in this year's afternoon pre-school or kindergarten programs.

The school's staff will lead a discussion about the unique Montessori approach to education, which fosters the total development of the child's intellectual, creative, social, and physical abilities. Children who are at least three and no older than six as of Dec. 31 are eligible. The school is at 212 Bolton Center Road, next to the Bentley Memorial Library. Any questions about the program should be addressed to Sarah Spurgeon at 646-5727.

Storytime at library

Children are encouraged to wear their pajamas and bring a pillow or other favorite items to an evening story telling time at the Bentley Memorial Library at 206 Bolton Center Road in Bolton tonight. The story reading starts at 7:30 p.m. Each week the session is videotaped and is played on Channel 26 on the town cable service. A day time group also meets each week from 11:30 a.m. to noon. For more information and registration, call the library at 646-7349.

Group meets tonight

The Illing Parent Group will hold its first meeting of the 1989 school year tonight at 7 p.m. in the school media center. Activity highlights being planned and the Effective Schools Project, which the school currently is undertaking, will be discussed.

ECHS class to reunite

The graduating class of 1974 from East Catholic High School will hold their 15th reunion on Nov. 11 at the Backboard in Glastonbury. If you have not received information, contact Betty Bourque at 954-5809, or Trisha Cullen at 246-1673.

Fun walk scheduled

The Hockanum River Linear Park Committee will sponsor a walk at 1 p.m. on Oct. 15 at Laurel Marsh. The walk will be 3.4 miles, and boots are required because part of the walk is in wetlands. Parking is available at the west end of Howell Cheney Technical School. Rain date is Oct. 22.

School reunion scheduled

Hartford High School class of 1929 will hold its 60th class reunion on Oct. 25 at 11:45 a.m. The event will be held at the Town and Country Club at 22 Woodland St. in Hartford. If you want to attend, and have not received information, contact Ida Greenstein at 232-8045.

Parents group meeting

The East of the River Chapter #1206 of Parents Without Partners will hold an orientation and information meeting for prospective members on Thursday at the Coventry Grange Hall on Route 14 at 7:30 p.m. For more information, call 649-1949 or 423-8058.

Join Manchester Safe Rides

Manchester Safe Rides seeks new members. People between the ages of 15 and 21 who wish to join can attend an organizational meeting tonight at 7:30 at St. Bartholomew's Roman Catholic Church at 5 Ludlow Road.

MMH programs scheduled

The October meeting of the Arthritis Support Group for the Greater Manchester area will be held tonight from 7 to 9 in Conference Room C. The film presentation "Coping with Pain," prepared by the Arthritis Foundation, will be shown, followed by a discussion.

Prior to that meeting there will be a program titled "Understanding the Pain in Our Head: From Migraines to the Common Tension Headache." That will be held at 6 p.m. in the H. Louise Rudolph Auditorium at the hospital.

Free cab ride nets charges

One of two men who tried to take a free ride in a taxi cab was charged with two counts of assault on police officers, failure to submit to fingerprints, and sixth-degree larceny, police said. Ronald Hickey, 24, of Stafford Springs, was arrested this morning on the charges along with Robert A. Knowles Jr., 17, of South Windsor, police said. Knowles was charged with sixth-degree larceny. According to the police report, Hickey and Knowles took a ride in a taxi. Once they arrived at the destination, Hickey asked the driver to wait until he went to get money inside, police said. Knowles stayed in the cab, according to the report.

Several minutes later, according to the report, Knowles darted from the car, and the driver gave chase. The police were notified, and the two were found in an apartment, police said. Hickey was given the opportunity to raise the cab fare, but could not, police said. Knowles was asleep under a table at the time. Both were arrested at that time. Knowles was released on $100 bail. He is to be arraigned in Manchester Superior court on Monday.

Hickey, meanwhile, refused to sign the fingerprint card, and raised his hands in clenched fists, saying he wanted to fight with the police, according to the police report. He was held on $2,500 bail and is also scheduled to be arraigned Monday in Manchester Superior court.

Three arrested in rape

COVENTRY — Police said they arrested three men on Monday and Tuesday for a reported rape that occurred on Aug. 27 in a remote area of town. All three were arrested on warrants obtained Friday. Arrested were Jason Gullino, 18, of 328 Merrow Road, Coventry; Marc Cyr, 23, of 89 Burbank Road in Ellington; and Richard Langley, 24, of 35 Lamotte Road, Coventry.

All three were charged with first-degree kidnapping, first-degree sexual assault, third-degree sexual assault, and third-degree assault, police said. They were all held on $150,000 bond, and all were arraigned in Rockville Superior court on Tuesday.

Arrest follows accident

Manchester police charged Thomas R. O'Marra Jr., 21, of 20 Schaller St., with failure to obey a stop sign after a minor accident. O'Marra told police his vision was obstructed by another vehicle when he pulled out of Henry Street onto Main Street where he was struck by a third vehicle. He is to be arraigned at Manchester Superior court on Oct. 20. The other driver suffered minor injuries.

Two charged in card scam

Two Hartford men were arrested Tuesday on one count each of third-degree attempted larceny in connection with their attempt to use a stolen credit card, police said.

Police said Joseph's Sound Center at 277 Broad St. reported that a man had ordered a stereo on an American Express charge card, and said his son would come down to pick it up. Joe's ran a check on the card, and discovered that it had been reported stolen, and had been cancelled, police said. Police said that when the two Wilsons came to pick up the stereo, they were told it was not ready, and would have to come back later. The police were given a description of the vehicle they were driving, and stopped them near the store. The officer brought them into the store, and an employee identified them as the people who had ordered the stereo.

Heating OK now at school

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

One day after a student walk-out to protest a lack of heat in the school building, the Howell Cheney Regional Vocational Technical School was back in operation today.

After students, gripping about the cold, left the building Tuesday, School Director Lewis Randall was forced to close the school. The heating problem, Randall said, was caused because the school's new boiler was not working, but it was repaired Tuesday night and now "there's heat in the building."

Randall said two back-up boilers are in the process of being replaced, and therefore could not be used Tuesday.

He said today's warmer temperatures helped the situation because only one boiler was needed to keep the school warm. The colder the temperature, the more boilers needed to heat the building.

He said he did not know when the work would be completed although it was supposed to be done last week.

He said the project is being done by the state Department of Public Works as the school is a state facility, which has students from several area municipalities.

He said this morning that today's attendance seemed average for any day, but the day's figures were not yet available.

The school is at 791 W. Middle Turnpike.

$4,571 change OK'd in work on 8th garage

PAINT JOBS — Raymond Twible, of 64 North School St., paints lampposts outside Manchester High School at 134 E. Middle Turnpike Tuesday. He is an employee of the Board of Education.

Directors of the Eighth Utilities District voted Tuesday night to approve a change order that will add a maximum of $4,571 to the cost of converting the former Willis garage to district headquarters. So far, change orders have added about $20,000 to the contract price of $403,592.

The change order approved Tuesday was for new roof planking and a new beam. When the roofing material was removed, it was discovered that the beam and the ends of some roof planks had rotted. Alan Lamson, architect for the conversion, recommended the change order. He said the $4,571 is the maximum to be allowed, but the final cost of the added work and materials may be less.

After the brief meeting at which the change order was approved, the directors toured the building to view the progress on the conversion. The project is expected to be completed by mid-December.

Preservation committee plan for Loomis House gets OK

By Jacqueline Bennett
Manchester Herald

COVENTRY — The Town Council voted unanimously Tuesday night to endorse the concept of using the Loomis House for a number of purposes, including a library, school or town offices, space for senior citizens and an arts and crafts room.

Those uses for the 19th-century home on Route 44 were proposed by the Preservation of Loomis House Committee. The council rejected two other proposals for the property, including a controversial request to use it as a police station and another to lease it to the town Historical Society.

"Concept" appeared to be the key word in the action by the council during the special meeting at Capt. Nathan Hale School.

By endorsing the concept of the proposal rather than accepting the proposal as submitted, it seems to allow for modification. That modification is likely to be the substitution of school administrative offices as part of the plan rather than town offices, as indicated by some council members and members of the preservation committee.

The council vote included a stipulation that a building committee be formed to investigate the proposal further and come back with a "more concrete" one.

"Town offices or school offices, it's irrelevant," said council Vice-chairwoman Elizabeth Peterson.

"I endorse the school offices proposal," said William Miller, a member of the preservation committee.

The preservation committee proposal includes use of two rooms of the Loomis House for a library, one for arts and crafts display and an area for senior citizens as well as use for town offices. Judy LeDoy, coordinator of the preservation committee, has said the idea was for offices, such as human services or Water Pollution Control Authority. But she also supports the school offices proposal.

Last week, the Board of Education asked the council to consider a proposal suggested by the new school superintendent, Michael Malinowski, to put school administrative offices there.

That proposal angered some residents because they said the deadline for proposal submissions was May 8.

Police Chief Frank Trzaskos said he was not surprised that the proposal to relocate the police department from the Town Office Building to the Loomis House was rejected.

"It was an expected action. They were negative to the proposal from the start," he said.

He added, "It's finished business." Another action by the council eliminates the possibility that the police and public safety facility proposal could be resubmitted if the council should later decide against

Buckno, a 'real doer,' plans to focus on long-range goals

By Nancy Concolman
Manchester Herald

After listening to complaints, debating on controversial issues, shaking hands and knocking on doors last year, Susan M. Buckno is back, and she's ready to do it again.

Buckno, 42, a Republican candidate for the Manchester Board of Directors, said she is more comfortable pounding the pavement and meeting voters than giving speeches or debating before audiences, although she did all of those things during her unsuccessful bid last year for a seat on the state House of Representatives in the 13th Assembly District.

"She is a tireless campaigner," Republican Town Committee Chairman John J. Garside Jr. said.

Buckno lost to Democrat John W. Thompson by 1,387 votes, an impressive showing, some of her Republican colleagues said, considering that she has never held an elected office.

Still, Buckno has been involved. She has served on the Human Relations Commission since January 1988 and is active in the Martin School PTA. She was the first female member of the Manchester Rotary Club.

She is a real estate agent for the H. Pearce Co. and is pursuing a degree in commercial real estate.

Garside said Buckno's lack of experience in an elected office won't work against her. Buckno is a doer, who listens to people's complaints and follows through, he said.

During last year's campaign, Buckno said, she found out what concerns Manchester residents: increased spending, the effect of heavy development on the town's proposed that some agency other than the PZC have authority over wetlands. Ronald Osetta said the PZC also has control over development and the dual roles create conflicts.

He suggested the wetlands authority be given to the Conservation Commission. He praised the efforts of Arthur Glasier, chairman of the Youth Commission and take authority for wetlands control out of the hands of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The proposals were made at a news conference held by the candidates. The candidates also reiterated their questions of a town plan to locate a fire station at a site on Tolland Turnpike and Denning Street.

Democrat plans for Center Springs Park also was a topic of discussion.

Susan Buckno proposed giving the Parks and Recreation Commission, which is now an advisory board, broader powers to make decisions on the park and recreation program. She also proposed reviving a Youth Commission.

The town had a youth commission years ago which has dissolved. Efforts to revive it failed and the Republicans Thursday said the failure came about because of a lack of leadership by the Democratic majority and dissension among the Democrats.

infrastructure and traffic, the quality of the town's water and condition of sidewalks.

Buckno said she isn't sure what the town can do to address some of those issues, but she believes a little planning could go a long way toward solving many problems.

"The way I lead my life is a very organized, planned way," Buckno said. "I'd like to see long-range goals developed for the town."

Buckno said, but added, "I think it's something that does require a lot of study. The question is... is it something that we can utilize 50, 75 years from now?"

Buckno said one of her main concerns is that Manchester's government is moving away from the people. She said if elected, she would continue to employ her campaign strategy and deal with residents face to face.

"There's a lot of discontent" among voters, Buckno said. "I don't think their needs are being responded to. Obviously I wouldn't be running if I thought they were."

Wetlands protection, station, park on Republicans' agenda

By Alex Givelli
Manchester Herald

Republican candidates for the town Board of Directors Tuesday proposed changes in town government that would expand the authority of the Parks and Recreation Commission, reestablish a Youth Commission and take authority for wetlands control out of the hands of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The proposals were made at a news conference held by the candidates. The candidates also reiterated their questions of a town plan to locate a fire station at a site on Tolland Turnpike and Denning Street.

Morrison raps O'Neill over 2 decisions

By Judd Ewerhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Gov. William A. O'Neill has a lackluster management style that can be seen in the early retirement program for state employees and the recent resignation of an O'Neill cabinet member, says U.S. Rep. Bruce A. Morrison.

Morrison, a four-term congressman from Hamden, said Connecticut citizens deserved to hear O'Neill's thoughts on Lenisk's leaving, which was disclosed by the governor's office on Sept. 29 after O'Neill had left.

"To a European trade mission, O'Neill won't be back until Sunday. We haven't gotten a clear answer as to whether this is Brian Lenisk's personal choice to leave and there's no change in direction required, or whether the governor believed that there was a problem with Mr. Lenisk's resignation," Morrison said in a state Capitol news conference.

O'Neill's legal counsel, Howard G. Rifkin, has said the decision to leave was entirely Lenisk's.

The congressman's 412-year tenure was marked by criticism from parents of mentally retarded people, tension with the union that represents the agency's workers and increasing tension over the commission on only by the General Assembly. His resignation is effective Jan. 31.

In his letter of resignation, Lenisk told O'Neill that he was leaving in part because he believes "a personal belief controversy over the commission can only be a disservice to people with mental retardation."

Morrison said he did not know all the reasons for the resignation, but said the public deserves comment from the governor.

Jackie Barron, O'Neill's deputy press secretary, said she expects O'Neill to comment when he returns from Europe.

As for Morrison, she said: "It's clear he has decided to campaign by criticizing."

The congressman also said the retirement incentive program, crafted this year by Democratic legislative leaders with help from the O'Neill administration, had not been well thought out.

Almost 3,000 senior state employees took advantage of the retirement incentives, including bonus pension payments and fully paid medical insurance for life. When it was created, it was expected that 2,000 would apply and that the state would save $25 million.

Morrison said there had been little thought given to who would retire and from what state agencies.

"It's really a question of management practice," Morrison said. Asked if he would have vetoed the plan had he been governor, Morrison said: "From what I know of the program, I would not have approved it."

They, too, see the need to plan for maintenance of our aging school facilities," she said.

There are 14 school buildings, one of which is 15 years old, the rest more than 20 years old.

Lappen said the types of projects the fund would be used for are they because they included maintenance costs that could have been avoided if the repairs were done earlier, the candidates said.

"This way," he said, "necessary maintenance is not postponed to a point that the final cost is increased."

However, the candidates said the fund cannot presently be set up in the name of the Board of Education because the board is not allowed to

Tenants told to take part in decisions

By Judd Ewerhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD (AP) — Tenants in public housing need to feel they can change the environment in which they live, according to a report that recommends withdrawing public funding from public housing.

"We have a massive tenant population with no say in how they live," said John Wardlaw, co-chairman of the 53-member task force that made the recommendations Tuesday. "We cannot perpetuate a culture of dependency. We need to be taking as much responsibility as we can and placing it in the hands of tenants."

With more say over how housing projects are managed, the estimated 80,000 public-housing residents statewide will share more responsibilities, Wardlaw said.

Among the task force's proposals is for the Legislature to order each of the state's public housing authorities to create tenant organizations and to reward with state grants those authorities that actively encourage tenant participation in management decisions.

The task force also recommended a number of policy suggestions, such as that tenants be notified before decisions are made about demolition, rehabilitation or any matter affecting the quality of life in housing projects; that tenants have more say in how residents of public housing are selected; and that the Department of Housing provide assistance in identifying and aiding prospective tenant leaders.

Wardlaw, the executive director of the Hartford Housing Authority, said the report represented a compromise between the view of some tenants who wanted complete management control and some housing officials who objected to tenant groups' assuming any management responsibility.

"This is a true partnership," Wardlaw said. "There was a misconception about the task force that it was an attempt to turn tenant-management down the throats of public housing authorities."

State Commissioner of Housing John Papanicolaou, who commissioned the task force a year ago, gave his support to a proposed law that would enable the department to withhold rental subsidies or rehabilitation money to authorities.

"There is no issue of greater significance in Connecticut because of the drug and deviant behavior in public housing," Papanicolaou said.

They, too, see the need to plan for maintenance of our aging school facilities," she said.

There are 14 school buildings, one of which is 15 years old, the rest more than 20 years old.

Lappen said the types of projects the fund would be used for are they because they included maintenance costs that could have been avoided if the repairs were done earlier, the candidates said.

Lawyer asks no prison time for Aparo

HARTFORD (AP) — The lawyer for Karin Aparo, accused of planning the slaying of her mother for more than a year, has filed a motion asking that she be given a special form of probation that carries no sentence.

Aparo is scheduled to go on trial in November on charges of being an accessory to murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the death of her mother, Joyce Aparo.

Less than a week ago, Aparo's case was placed on the adult trial list. Aparo, now 18, was 16 when her mother was killed.

If Aparo were granted the probation, she would serve no prison time and would be placed on probation for as much as two years, after which her criminal record could be erased.

If convicted of the accessory and conspiracy charges, Aparo could be sentenced to 80 years in prison. Aparo's attorney, Hubert J. Santos, declined to comment on his reasons for filing for the probation. The motion was filed Tuesday.

Aparo is accused of planning the slaying of her mother for more than a year along with her former boyfriend, Dennis Coleman, now 21. Coleman recently pleaded guilty and has agreed to testify during Aparo's trial that she begged him to kill her mother.

Coleman has said that he strangled Joyce Aparo with a stocking Aug. 5, 1987, in the Glastonbury condominium she shared with her only daughter.

According to the statute that provides for the pretrial accelerated rehabilitation, the program is for "persons accused of a crime, not of a serious nature."

But the law does not prohibit defendants charged with murder from applying for the special probation.

State Rep. Richard D. Tulisano, D-Rocky Hill, chairman of the legislative judiciary committee, said Tuesday he does not believe accelerated rehabilitation was ever intended for defendants charged with murder or murder-related offenses.

Stanley Suriner, who with his brothers ran a business removing and installing fuel tanks, was standing in a 9-foot ditch behind Suffield Academy Tuesday when soil began to crumble on top of him, a worker told police.

The worker yelled out a warning and Suriner tried to climb out, but slid to the bottom of the ditch and was buried by the dirt, police said.

His brother, Paul, and an equipment operator, Kevin Ferguson, dug with shovels and their hands for 10 minutes before they reached Suriner.

A medical team from the Suffield Volunteer Ambulance Association tried to revive him before a Life Star helicopter arrived and flew him to Hartford Hospital, where he was pronounced dead about 1 p.m.

A U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration investigator visited the scene Tuesday, but officials declined to comment on the investigation.

Suriner, an Enfield native, had been an auxiliary police captain since 1974. In May, his 12-year-old daughter, Lisa, died in a horseback riding accident.

He took (his daughter's) death hard, but was beginning to come around," said Enfield police Lt. Robert Boula. "I don't think he had a bad bone in him. He always smiled. I don't think he had a single enemy in this town."

More than 500 members of Teamsters union Local 559 began a strike Monday against the Finat Supermarket chain. Tempers flared Tuesday, and three pickets and a truck driver were arrested in two confrontations between striking workers and police.

As two trailer trucks tried to make their way down the narrow road to the warehouse shortly after 11 a.m., police moved to clear pickets from the road.

One man who was walking across the street in front of the lead truck was shoved aside by a policeman wielding a baton, strikers said. They said George Mitchell, 58, was knocked to the ground and arrested.

He was charged with breach of peace, interfering with a police officer and second-degree riot, police said.

"Before you know it, he (Mitchell) was on the ground, and there was a policeman on top of him handcuffing him," said Thomas Marinak, a warehouse worker from Windsor Locks.

Marinak said he thought police used excessive force to arrest Mitchell. "He had his hands in his pockets. He wasn't doing anything. It was uncalled for," Marinak said.

Gifford said he had "received no complaints of excessive force at all" and that there was no indication that excessive force had been used in making the arrests.

Two others, Richard Dunn, 43, and Norman Zeppa, 40, were also arrested in the clash. Dunn was charged with third-degree criminal mischief, reckless endangerment and breach of peace. Zeppa was charged with breach of peace and interfering with a police officer.

Mitchell, Dunn and Zeppa were all arrested on bail and are scheduled to appear in court Oct. 24.

Man killed when ditch collapses

SUFFIELD (AP) — A 44-year-old Enfield man was killed when a ditch he was digging collapsed on him, police said.

Strikers, cops clash on Finast picket line

WINDSOR LOCKS (AP) — At the end of a day marred by clashes between strikers and police who had to escort trucks through a picket line to a Finast Supermarket warehouse, a Superior Court judge issued a restraining order limiting the number of pickets allowed at the site, police said.

The judge's order, sought by Finast and issued late Tuesday, limits Teamsters union local 559 to 16 pickets at each of the warehouse's two entrance gates, Windsor Locks Police Chief William Gifford said.

On Tuesday there were more than 50 strikers blocking a narrow road at the truck entrance to the complex and another 15 to 20 pickets walked a line outside the main gate to Finast's regional headquarters.

To escort trucks in and out of the warehouse, the Windsor Locks police had to call in reinforcements from surrounding towns, Sgt. John MacDougald said.

Economic model theory wins Nobel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Trygve Haavelmo of Norway won the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science today for showing in the 1940s that mathematical formulas could be used to predict the bewildering shifts in the economy.

Haavelmo's work pioneered the field of econometrics by explaining how random samples can be evaluated to forecast economic events, the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said in announcing the award.

Econometrics holds that economic theories can be proven by testing them with mathematical and statistical models.

Assar Lindbeck, chairman of the prize committee, called Haavelmo "the father of modern econometrics" and a dominant figure in post-war economic theories.

"Through his new economic theory, scientists have learned to anticipate how governmental institutions react and how they influence people's decisions," Lindbeck said when announcing the prize.

Haavelmo, 77, a professor of economics at Oslo University, was the second Norwegian to win the economics prize. He was a research assistant to Ragnar Frisch, who won the prize in 1969, the first year it was awarded.

Haavelmo, the son of a school administrator, is a member of the American Economic Association and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He was born Dec. 13, 1911, in the Norwegian town of Skjelsmo.

The academy said Haavelmo's theories overcame the problems economists faced because they were unable to test their ideas in the same ways as physicists do in laboratories.

Economists also could not weed out the influence of millions of individual decisions that people and companies make that disturb the models theorists devised.

Haavelmo overcame these difficulties by introducing the idea of statistical probability.

"He also showed that misleading interpretations of individual relations due to interdependence cannot be avoided unless all relations in a theoretical model are estimated simultaneously," the academy said.

Haavelmo went to the United States on a Rockefeller grant in 1939, was a professor at the University of Chicago and worked for the Norwegian Trade Commission.

He returned to Norway in 1947 and has been at Oslo University since 1948.

Gramm-Rudman cuts seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders believe their chances of avoiding the Gramm-Rudman reductions are "extremely remote."

The air of defeat has arisen because of the complicated dispute that has tied up congressional leaders for the past week.

Republican senators are preparing to force the chamber to vote on a plan to lower the capital gains tax in an effort to honor Bush's campaign pledge for a cut in the rate. Bush says a rate cut will stimulate economic activity and boost federal revenues.

Democratic leaders oppose the idea, arguing it would cost the government billions of dollars in the long run.

But the Democratic leadership is on the defensive, realizing that the projected deficit for the 1990 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, is not below $110 billion.

The Congressional Budget Office projected Tuesday that the shortfall will be $141.3 billion. This would call for cuts of $41.3 billion, divided evenly between defense and domestic programs.

The CBO projections, however, are merely advisory. The White House's Office of Management and Budget issues its binding projections Monday.

capital gains cut, a shrinkage of Medicare benefits for extremely ill elderly patients, an expansion of federal day care programs and other initiatives.

Working out a way to pare those items from the legislation — and for the House and Senate to agree to a compromise bill — makes it all but impossible to finish the task by next Monday, leaders concede.

"The time to have stripped the bill down ... was before we enacted it," Foley told reporters.

Downturn of coffee prices boosts drugs

Lower coffee prices prompt more Andean planters to shift to another cash crop: coca leaves and paste, but the Bush administration is unwilling to acknowledge the connection.

Early this summer... the Colombian government pleaded with the United States to support an extension of the International Coffee Agreement to keep coffee prices stable. Instead, the U.S. trade representative's office helped dismantle the agreement, which has unleashed a price war and caused coffee prices, in real terms, to drop to their lowest level in 40 years.

More farmers will abandon coffee and turn to the more profitable ventures of (coca). ... The result is more economic muscle for the drug kingpins.

The coffee issue makes Bush's recent speech to the nation ring hollow. Bush promised a "coordinated, cooperative commitment of all our federal agencies" in the war on drugs. Isn't the U.S. trade representative's office a federal agency?

Levin seeking $1 million

By Bob Conrad

Jay Levin expects to spend a million dollars in his campaign to be elected Connecticut attorney general next year, so his fund-raising dance card is full as he skips around the state putting together a war chest to get him there.

The 38-year-old attorney from New London has about $100,000 on hand now. That's about a third of the amount his rival, lawyer Dick Blumenthal of Stamford, has collected. So Levin is alternating between practicing law and hitting the road nights and weekends to bolster his funding. This weekend, for example, he is doing a brunch in Cheshire in the middle of the state, then hopping in the car for an event in Stonington in the southeastern corner for the same purpose.

"This kid is unbelievable," says state Rep. Jim McCavagh of Manchester, a fellow Democrat and early supporter of Levin, commenting on the pace his friend is setting.

Levin and Blumenthal pretty much have the field to themselves in pursuit of the one likely opening on the Democratic slate in 1990 — unless Gov. Bill O'Neill decides not to seek a third full term, as some observers say may happen.

When the legislature goes to work in February, the pecking for attention by these two will intensify because both have coasts there — Levin in the House and Blumenthal in the Senate. Levin is the quiet favorite of many Democratic regulars, though leaders from Chairman John Dronney of West Hartford on down hold to a public pose of neutrality.

His support now for attorney general includes conservatives like McCavagh and liberal like state Rep. Lynn Taborsak of Danbury. It splits some towns: Bristol Rep. Steve Duffy is for him; Sen. Steve Casey of that city is with Blumenthal. Litchfield County High Sheriff Carolyn Wakefield supports Levin.

For man-in-motion Levin, money may be vital but organization is a key also. "We're building a network," he says.

Political notes

U.S. Sen. Barbara Kennelly of Hartford says it's old stuff for her to run a fund-raiser in an off year, but Democrats were buzzing just the same when more than 300 jammed the Hartford Club at $300 per ticket last week and netted some $72,000 for her campaign in 1990. The committee, in fact, ran out of name tags.

Obvious reaction in political circles: Will she run for re-election, or something else — like governor?

House Majority Leader Bob Frankel of Stratford added a footnote, literally, to a friendship trip he and three other legislators made in late September to Connecticut's sister state in West Germany. He was hit by a truck on a Stuttgart street, sustained bruises and a broken toe. To add insult to injury, the cops said it was his fault and nailed him for a 20-Mark ($10 fine). With him were House Speaker Rich Bladucci of Newton, Senate Majority Leader Con O'Leary of Windsor Locks and Senate Deputy Minority Leader George Gunther of Stratford.

Drug war requires elite force

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — President Bush's strategy to win the war against drugs overlooked the most effective weapon of all. The surest way to put drug traffickers out of business, in our opinion, is to go after their profits.

We urge Congress to create a "National Finance Guard" to track, intercept and seize drug profits. This should be an elite force of the nation's sharpest financial experts, empowered by Congress to monitor banking transactions, subpoena financial records and confiscate assets that are illegally acquired.

The National Security Agency already has the resources to eavesdrop on the drug rings, intercept their communications and trace their banking transactions electronically. Since the Medellín cocaine cartel of Colombia is a subterranean superpower that threatens U.S. security, the National Security Agency should focus its all-seeing and all-hearing devices on the drug traffickers.

Washington should then call upon all nations to adopt emergency laws and treaties that would authorize the confiscation of drug money, with severe penalties against those who knowingly launder dirty dollars. Nations that refuse to cooperate, such as Panama, should be barred from access to the international monetary system.

These moves would permit the "Finance Guard" to intercept drug profits before they are laundered and strip the drug dealers of their assets. Billions of dollars should be confiscated, enough to finance the ongoing war on drugs.

Congress should also empower the "Finance Guard" to trace laundered money that is invested in legitimate enterprises. Underworld investments contaminate legitimate businesses, undermine their independence and obstruct free competition. Any holdings knowingly purchased with drug money should be subject to penalties or confiscation.

While these measures are drying up drug profits, stronger measures could also be taken to dry up the drug market. By their purchases, drug users have brought a plague upon America. Recreational users and hard-core addicts alike are accomplices to the pain and misery that the drug gangs have spread.

We should enact drug users to be Public Enemy No. 1 and treat them as such. We should call for the prosecution of every user who is caught and a stiff fine against everyone who is convicted. The fines should be in line with the user's ability to pay, so the penalty hits the rich as hard as the poor. The money should be spent confining the addicts to drug treatment centers until they are cured.

To stimulate enforcement, Congress should authorize a reward for informers. If their information leads to convictions and confiscations, they should receive 10 percent of the confiscated assets. This would unleash a horde of modern bounty hunters upon the pushers and their customers.

Many of our suggestions could be implemented under existing laws, but it will take tough new laws to win the war against drugs. We remind our political leaders that nothing troubles Americans more deeply than the drug problem, with its terrible toll in violent crimes and ruined lives. An overwhelming 92 percent of American adults, according to a Gallup poll, want tougher laws and stronger action.

There are naysayers who claim that the anti-drug fervor among Americans could lead to a trampling of constitutional rights. That is a legitimate concern, but it shouldn't scare politicians away from exploration of an all-out legal offense under the broad powers of the Constitution. Let's not stand by and watch our nation destroyed because we do not trust the strength of the Constitution or our public commitment to it.

Painful advice

Congressional aides are investigating reports that a high-level State Department official gave the Palestine Liberation Organization some startling advice. The official allegedly admitted a round table discussion at which Americans and Palestinians were present. He reportedly said that the PLO wouldn't get favorable action from the United States until it escalated the level of violence to the point that it pained the United States. He cited as an example the 1973 square miles which produced long gas lines in America.

Mini-editorial

The United States has complained for a decade that Nicaragua does not have a legitimately elected government. Now our own government is considering rigging the next Nicaraguan election by giving $3 million to one candidate and spending money to monitor the fairness of the election. It is acceptable. But an outright donation of U.S. dollars to a single candidate is outrageous. It isn't allowed in this country and it shouldn't be allowed in another.

Copter crash kills 5

LACEY TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A helicopter's main rotor fell off before it crashed onto a highway median, killing all five aboard, including three of the Trump Organization's top casino executives, said a witness and authorities.

"There was a loud bang, like a piston rod going," said Tom Murray, 38, of East Providence, R.I., who was camping near the site of Tuesday afternoon's crash, a wooded area between north- and south-bound lanes of the Garden State Parkway.

"I fell below the tree line and I didn't see it crash," he said. "It went straight down... it seemed like an eternity watching it."

No one on the ground was hurt. State police Sgt. Anthony Aceto said the main rotor was found a quarter-mile from the crash site about 30 miles north of Atlantic City, where the helicopter was returning the executives from New York City.

The National Transportation Safety Board investigators were looking into a rotor malfunction, said Frank Ghiorso, the agency's regional director.

"If the main rotor separated from the rest of the aircraft, it was out of control," Ghiorso told reporters.

He said investigators were looking for the tail rotor to help them re-create the problem. Investigators say the loss of one of the two rotors could have caused the rotor to fall off.

Trump spokesman Dan Klores identified the executives as Stephen Hyde, 43, chief executive officer of Trump's Atlantic City casino operations; Mark G. Eises, 38, president of the Taj Mahal casino project; and Jonathan Benamir, 33, senior vice president of Trump Plaza casino.

"They were three fabulous young men in the prime of their lives," billionaire developer Donald Trump said in a statement from his New York office. "No better human beings were ever hearted. We're deeply saddened by this devastating tragedy. Our hearts go out to their families."

The New York Daily News, quoting an unidentified source, said Trump had been scheduled to take the one-hour flight to Atlantic City, but had canceled at the last moment because he got too busy.

The other killed were pilot Robert Kent Ronkonkoma, N.Y., and co-pilot Lawrence Diener of Westbury, N.Y., state police said.

Glitch will delay shuttle 4 days

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A judge cleared the Atlantis for launch, but a computer glitch forced NASA to delay the space shuttle's planetary mission for at least four days.

Engineers today were replacing a faulty engine control system that forced the postponement. The delay was announced Tuesday night, shortly after a federal judge rejected a request by three anti-nuclear groups that the launch, which had been scheduled for Thursday, be halted.

Officials said the liftoff of Atlantis and its Jupiter-bound Galileo probe could be rescheduled as early as Monday, but they would not have a definite date for a day or two.

NASA wants to launch Atlantis as soon as possible because Jupiter will be in the proper position only until Nov. 21; any delay beyond that would push the flight off until mid-1991.

If a postponement goes beyond 10 days, Galileo's altered course then would miss the opportunity for the spacecraft to take the first closeup look at two asteroids, Gaspra and Ida.

The space agency also has two other shuttle launches planned this year, and any lengthy delay could affect that schedule.

The decision to hold up the mission came after engineers tested the master controller in one of three main shuttle engines and could not learn why it had given a false signal about low pressure on a fuel pump, said launch director Bob Sieck. Subsequent tests did not duplicate Monday night's bad reading.

"We have to ascertain that we completely understand the problem and that there is no chance it will reoccur in flight and put us in jeopardy," said Bob Crippen, director of the Mission Management Team, which gives final launch clearance.

"The worst condition is that we would shut down an engine and have to abort the flight and we want to make sure there is no probability of that."

Sieck said repairs began immediately. It required opening up the engine compartment to get at the computer glitch which is the size of a 17-inch portable television and controls all engine functions during liftoff.

The countdown, which began Monday, was halted. Shuttle workers received the bad news not long after getting the news from U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch in Washington that they could proceed with launch preparations.

The anti-nuclear groups had sought to block the liftoff on grounds that radioactive plutonium-238 particles would spread over east-central Florida if Atlantis exploded. The plutonium is in two nuclear-powered generators that provide electricity for the Galileo.

"The court concludes that NASA has complied with requirements of the National Environmental Protection Act," Gasch said.

Justice Department attorneys representing the National Aeronautics and Space Administration argued that Galileo's $1.5 billion, six-year mission to Jupiter carried very low risks. They said the nuclear generators were well shielded and similar to 38 generators that had flown on 22 previous space missions.

The anti-nuclear groups said that if they lost in court they would attempt to halt the launch by trying to infiltrate the Kennedy Space Center and put people on the launch pad.

South Africa plans prisoner release as show of conciliation

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government says it will free five African National Congress leaders jailed 25 years ago with Nelson Mandela, but the man most black South Africans consider their leader will stay in prison.

President F.W. de Klerk said eight aging prisoners, including leading ANC political strategist Walter Sisulu, would soon be released to "contribute to the spirit of reconciliation which is presently evident in our country."

He gave no date but a prison official said it would be within two weeks.

Anti-apartheid activists welcomed Tuesday's announcement but called the move insufficient unless the government also legalizes banned organizations, frees Mandela and lifts restrictions on many black leaders not in prison.

"What is the use of releasing them when we still have a state of emergency and when our organizations are still banned," the Rev. Allan Boesak asked 4,000 people at a rally at the University of the Western Cape Tuesday night.

"Eight is not enough, with detainees and political prisoners, including Nelson Mandela, still being held hostage," said Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

The government has indicated Mandela may be released within the next few months.

State radio acknowledged in an editorial today that the prisoners have a constituency among South Africa's black majority and need to be part of negotiations.

"Where Walter Sisulu... and others are recognized by some communities in South Africa as their South African leaders — and they subscribe to democratic and peaceful objectives — there is a need for them to be placed in a position where they can make a contribution to the debate on just how a future South Africa should look," Radio South Africa said.

Sisulu is the country's most respected black leader after Mandela.

Today, de Klerk was to meet in Pretoria with three leading anti-apartheid activists: Boesak, Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and the Rev. Frank Chikane, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches.

Mandela, told of the releases in advance, was with a group of anti-apartheid leaders at his home on the Victor Verster prison farm north of Cape Town when state television made the announcement.

"Mr. Mandela said he would greatly enjoy his sleep tonight after all his efforts to secure their release," said Murphy Morobe, a spokesman for the banned United Democratic Front anti-apartheid alliance.

He quoted the 71-year-old ANC leader as saying to South Africans: "The people are going to be greatly endowed by the leadership who are coming out of jail."

"This unexpected turn of events will take the townships by storm and thousands are expected to welcome home," the Sowetan, the nation's largest black daily newspaper, said today.

In Blackpool, England, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher welcomed the announcement of the releases, calling it "a major step in the right direction."

The releases had been expected as ammunition for Mrs. Thatcher to use at the Commonwealth summit against imposing further economic sanctions on South Africa because of its white-controlled government denies the black majority a say in national affairs. The summit, in Malaysia, begins Oct. 18.

De Klerk said the men would be freed "as soon as the necessary formalities" are handled. A prison official said privately the process can take from an hour to two weeks.

De Klerk took office in August and, unlike his predecessors, appears to be in earnest when he says he wants to allow eventual power-sharing with the black majority.

Sisulu ran daily operations of the ANC as its secretary-general in 1945-54, when the government ordered him to resign. He was sentenced to life in June 1964, along with Mandela and other leaders of the ANC's internal military wing, for sabotage and plotting the overthrow of the government.

Colombian journalists slain

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Drug traffickers killed two journalists for the assassination of a newspaper and threatened to kill its remaining 11 workers in Medellín if they don't leave.

A magazine journalist and four other people also were gunned down Tuesday in Colombia's cocaine trafficking capital.

The shootings in Medellín followed 13 bombings in three other Colombian cities late Monday and Tuesday — the most serious rash of attacks since the country's drug lords went to war with the government nearly two months ago.

Last month, a car bomb exploded under the main offices in Bogotá of the El Espectador newspaper, injuring scores of bystanders and causing extensive damage.

In a telephone call to El Espectador, a man said a group called the "Extraditables" would kill the 11 members of the paper's Medellín staff if they did not leave the city in three days, an editor at the paper said. The staff is composed of journalists, secretaries and administrative workers.

The anonymous caller said for Tuesday's assassinations in Medellín of the paper's administrator and circulation manager for the city of 2 million, said the editor, who asked not to be identified for security reasons.

Drug traffickers have issued statements under the name "The Extraditables." The country's top cocaine barons fear extradition to the United States, which seeks to put them on trial.

In announcing the anti-drug campaign, President Virgilio Barco put in place emergency decrees restoring an extradition treaty with the United States and empowering security forces to seize the property of cocaine bosses.

Millions of dollars in property allegedly belonging to the traffickers has since been seized, but only one reputed high-level drug figure has been extradited to the United States.

Killed within an hour of each other Tuesday afternoon were El Espectador's administrator, Martha Luz Lopez, 35, and its circulation manager, Miguel Soler, 45. Both employees were shot by unidentified gunmen traveling on motorcycles.

Police said gunman later Tuesday killed Roberto Sarathy, the 55-year-old director of Cronista Democrática magazine, while he was walking on a downtown street with another journalist. His companion was slightly wounded.

At about the same time, another group fired at a crowd at a bar in Manrique, a northern Medellín barrio, killing four people before fleeing. Manrique is a known recruiting ground for "sicarios," or assassins used by drug traffickers.

Police said that they not been able to establish the motives for the killings of Sarathy or the four people in Manrique.

The El Espectador editor denied local radio reports that the paper's owner had decided to close the Medellín offices because of the assassinations and threats.

However, one of the paper's owners, speaking in Monterrey, Mexico, at the annual conference of the Inter American Press Association, said El Espectador may close its Medellín office.

"I don't know if we'll be able to continue operating in Medellín under present conditions," said Luis Gabriel Cano, whose brother, also in Manrique, was killed by cocaine traffickers on Dec. 17, 1986.

Defends lunches

To the Editor:

I feel it necessary to express my concern and annoyance on behalf of the cafeteria workers in the Manchester school system. Bad taste (not a pun) is exemplified by the depiction of a typical school lunch in a cartoon that appeared in your newspaper.

The members of Local 991 that work in the school system prefer to eat in the schools' cafeterias because the meals are not only nutritionally balanced but delicious.

There are many children in this country that eat their only meal of the day in a school cafeteria and these children are extremely grateful that the cafeteria workers are there for them.

Manchester cafeteria workers don't get thank yous but certainly don't expect to pick up a newspaper and become a laughing stock. I believe that these men and women deserve an apology from your newspaper.

Please do a little journalistic research so that you have the ability to report with some knowledge and accuracy.

Renovations needed

To the Editor:

As Chairman of the town's Citizen Space Study Committee, I want to assure the voters of Manchester that the proposed renovation and addition to Town Hall is needed, it is needed now, and was thoughtfully planned.

Our committee, a group of taxpayers that has been meeting over the past 10 months, spent many hours looking at Town Hall space needs, alternative Town Hall locations, and various building schemes. We concluded the following:

1. The Town Hall complex should contain approximately 50,000 square feet of office, meeting room, storage and vault space. (The proposed plan contains 50,288 square feet.)
2. The town government offices should remain in the center of town and the existing

Defends TNT

To the Editor:

Most likely the person who wrote the recent letter attacking the TNT group is a decent, intelligent and likable man or woman. I have never met him or her.

The letter is well constructed and clearly expressed, but it reflects a lack of understanding of the TNT group, and it is rather vicious. For the latter reasons I must respond. Practically all of the facts presented are common knowledge.

Most of the remainder of the letter consists of hypothetical questions for which at this time there are no answers.

It is very easy to argue as this person does when facing only a sheet of paper. As for the leadership of our group (TNT), we are not against improvements to the schools, the Board of Education or anything else except complacency and an uninformed public.

To this end we will disseminate information concerning important town affairs, and make an effort to influence more townspeople to attend town meetings, appropriate board meetings, and all important referendums.

Further, we intend to emphasize the need for all of us in Bolton to sharpen our ability to distinguish the difference between what is realistically needed for most of the people in town, and what is merely desirable for a few.

We members of TNT group believe that to be willing and able to make this distinction, and to act upon it, is for the people of Bolton, the key to more responsible decision by the town's governing bodies. It is in this

Club is fair

To the Editor:

Once more we hear the same tired, old complaints from less than a half-dozen people that they are being "discriminated against" by The Manchester Country Club. Over two years ago, at a public meeting, The Board of Directors requested that these complaints be submitted in writing, with names, dates and details so that they could be investigated. Has this every been done? I doubt that it has.

Any review of the club records will prove that non-members have continued to play daily, following the same procedures to get starting times that the members are required to follow. I hope that not too many non-golfers are being misled by this continuing campaign of misinformation. Too much time has already been devoted to the gripes of a handful of disgruntled complainers.

Principal

ment of a parent, teacher, student, organization at Manchester High School. An open house at the high school has been scheduled for 7 tonight.

"It would be the community organization that would act in an advisory capacity to the building principal," he said.

Spafford says he requests this type of assistance because in schools where he is principal, "everyone is equal."

"There's no rank order. I don't have a different chair," he says gesturing toward a large, wooden chair, an outcast isolated from the table and the six equal chairs. "We'll find someone who wants it."

Relating the subject of office furniture to his style of administration, he says, "Let's focus on the issues, not who's in what position."

The main issue with which Spafford is concerned is promoting his educational philosophy, which has three parts.

"The highest priority is the mutual respect students have for one another and for their differences," he said.

His second priority is academic excellence, and his third is student activities.

Spafford hasn't had much time to spread his philosophy and said he spent most of his first day simply getting acquainted with students, staff, faculty, and the building itself.

He comes to Manchester after serving for two years as principal of Linton High School in Schenectady, N.Y.

Spafford, an educator for most of his professional career, spent five years in the private sector — four years as a field manager for Reader's Digest in Ridgefield and one year as a real estate broker in Norwich.

Born and raised in Springfield, Mass., he received his bachelor's degree in physical education and health from Springfield College in 1966. He received his master's degree in education administration and physical education from the University of Bridgeport in 1970.

He earned his certificate of advanced study from Fairfield University.

Poll of state employers finds confidence is low

HARTFORD (AP) — The approval of $800 million in new state taxes this year "has eroded employers' confidence in Connecticut as a good place to do business," the state's largest pro-business lobby said today, citing a survey of 1,200 businesses.

The Connecticut Business and Industry Association's survey found a profound lack of confidence in state government's economic policies and found that three out of five businesses would be more likely to relocate out of state than in Connecticut.

The survey found:

• 75 percent of Connecticut's businesses lack confidence in state government's ability to make decisions that will strengthen the state's economy; 55 percent said they were "not very confident" in state government, and 30 percent said they were "not at all confident."

• Sixty-two percent said they would be most likely to relocate or expand to another state if they were to expand or move their company. Only 36 percent said they would expand in Connecticut.

• 73 percent of them said they would either relocate or expand out of state.

Of those who said they would relocate or expand out of state, 62 percent said their primary reason for leaving would be lower business taxes.

The survey found one trend encouraging to businesses: that the state's labor shortage appears to be easing.

The percentage of businesses that said they were having difficulty finding professional workers dropped from 44 percent last year to 27 percent this year. By that measure, the shortage of technical workers dropped from 64 percent to 45 percent, and the shortage of production workers dropped from 79 percent to 55 percent.

Police charge teen-ager in bombings at high school

Anderson, Ind. (AP) — Police have arrested a 16-year-old on charges of planting two bombs that exploded at his high school on consecutive days.

Anonymous tips led officers Tuesday night to the home of the boy, whose name was withheld, Detective Kevin Smith said. Police searched his home but would not say what they found and gave no motive for the bombings.

Bombs exploded Monday and Tuesday at 1,200-student Anderson High School, causing no injuries. Classes were canceled and students sent home both days. Damage was estimated at less than $800.

As word of each blast spread, telephoned bomb threats were phoned to several other high schools in the area of central Indiana, authorities said.

Earlier Tuesday, Chief Ron Rheam said police would step up surveillance at the school today. "I do not fear for any teacher or student coming to the school tomorrow," he said.

Only a few students and teachers were in the building at the time.

Prosecutor William F. Lawler Jr. said he will ask the juvenile court to waive jurisdiction on the bombing suspect. This would move the state's case into adult courts and mean the suspect could face stiffer penalties.

Monday's explosion occurred in a wrestling room below the west end of the school's 9,000-seat gymnasium.

The crudely made device was a small fire extinguisher filled with gasoline and a smokeless powder, police said. It was placed atop a heater 15 feet above the floor, Peterson said.

The bombs were placed in areas where there is not heavy traffic flow, so that the person that is placing the bombs has some feeling that he does not want anyone hurt," Rheam said.

Prosecutor William F. Lawler Jr. said he will ask the juvenile court to waive jurisdiction on the bombing suspect. This would move the state's case into adult courts and mean the suspect could face stiffer penalties.

Monday's explosion occurred in a wrestling room below the west end of the school's 9,000-seat gymnasium.

The crudely made device was a small fire extinguisher filled with gasoline and a smokeless powder, police said. It was placed atop a heater 15 feet above the floor, Peterson said.

The bombs were placed in areas where there is not heavy traffic flow, so that the person that is placing the bombs has some feeling that he does not want anyone hurt," Rheam said.

Police charge teen-ager in bombings at high school

Anderson, Ind. (AP) — Police have arrested a 16-year-old on charges of planting two bombs that exploded at his high school on consecutive days.

Anonymous tips led officers Tuesday night to the home of the boy, whose name was withheld, Detective Kevin Smith said. Police searched his home but would not say what they found and gave no motive for the bombings.

Bombs exploded Monday and Tuesday at 1,200-student Anderson High School, causing no injuries. Classes were canceled and students sent home both days. Damage was estimated at less than $800.

As word of each blast spread, telephoned bomb threats were phoned to several other high schools in the area of central Indiana, authorities said.

Earlier Tuesday, Chief Ron Rheam said police would step up surveillance at the school today. "I do not fear for any teacher or student coming to the school tomorrow," he said.

Only a few students and teachers were in the building at the time.

Prosecutor William F. Lawler Jr. said he will ask the juvenile court to waive jurisdiction on the bombing suspect. This would move the state's case into adult courts and mean the suspect could face stiffer penalties.

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR — Charlene LaFerriere, high school secretary, doubles as the athletic director at Coventry High School. No one else in the school system wants the position.

LaFerriere does job that no one wants

COVENTRY — Sometimes it's not easy to reach a high school's athletic director. A majority are classroom teachers among their other duties, and just not accessible instantaneously.

That's not necessarily the case at Coventry High School, which has a unique situation all on its own.

When you reach the school by telephone, you might not have only contacted a secretary, you might have found the school's athletic director, too.

Charlene LaFerriere, school secretary, is the school's athletic director. It seems no one in the entire Coventry school system wants the position.

"They wouldn't get any release time," LaFerriere, who is serving as AD for a third year, explained. "Teachers get a prep (preparation) period, but that's for everyone. They're not offering anything extra."

Harvey Pulansky, a former vice principal, held the position from 1980-85. Ron Badstuber, the school's boys' basketball coach, was AD the next two years. Then it was vacant, until LaFerriere, who became active in school sports when her two sons approached high school age, semi-volunteered.

Her first involvement in sports came under the direction of Roger Thalacker. The pair was instrumental in forming a booster club that helped keep junior varsity teams afloat at the school when there was no funding. Junior varsity sports were never cut, and eventually the funding from the Coventry board of education was restored, LaFerriere said.

"The first time (she took the athletic director's job) I said to Dennis (high school principal Dennis Joy) 'let's you and I split it.'"

The position, just ask any athletic director, is thankless. You have coaches always putting in for funds with none available. And then there's the paperwork. "There are thousands and thousands of pieces of paper," LaFerriere said with a smile.

She handles all the changes associated with rainouts, making sure officials are assigned to every home game, drawing checks, and making sure athletic events are properly staffed. She serves as timer at soccer and basketball games, too. She's been able to recruit a couple of friends to help her out in this necessary area.

There are some limitations. "I do everything but don't make any executive decisions. I go to (Charter Oak Conference) league meetings, but (assistant principal Mark Wollman) usually goes to the AD meetings."

Joy also does his share. "I do it with the principal because according to the CIAC (Connecticut Inter-scholastic Athletic Conference) you have to be certified and I'm not certified," LaFerriere declares.

The position paid LaFerriere a modest $2,300 for the school year, 1988-89. She received a slight raise, after some discussion, for this year, to $2,900. "It's a lot of work. And you do take it home with you," she said.

Her tenure may continue on for awhile. "We put it (the AD job) every year, but no one wants to do it," LaFerriere says. "I resign every year, but no one wants to take it." Except LaFerriere.

Bolton suffers first defeat

Bolton, which held a substantial 25-11 edge in shots, will travel to Middletown to face Vinal Tech Friday afternoon at 3:30.

With the game tied 1-1 with 12:18 left, Cromwell, in one of its few offensive opportunities of the second half, was awarded a direct kick 25 yards out. Ken Czapczynski lofted a seemingly harmless ball to the right post.

The play Piruzello recalled was at the six-minute mark of the second half. Bolton's Dana Fortin's well-placed header was tipped up and over the crossbar by Piruzello. When Cliff Doonan's last gasp effort from 15 yards out sailed over the bar with three seconds left, Bolton tasted defeat for the first time.

Rob Lambert gave Cromwell a 1-0 lead at 5:13 of the first half on a 25-yarder into the upper right corner. Bolton tied it at 8:55 of the second when Stefan Reichertorfer headed in a 12-yard corner kick. It was his eighth goal of the year.

"We played our game in the second half," Boyd said. "The first half we were flat. I was definitely afraid of coming out flat after Bacon (Academy), Cheney Tech and East Hampton. We did exactly that. Their keeper did a good job. He kept them in. We had good opportunities to score and we were dominating the second half. I give them a lot of credit. They run through everything. They try to beat you to the ball. We haven't been involved in a game where we actually had to go out and beat people to the ball."

Piruzello knew exactly what his club had to do to gain the win. "We had to win the 50-50 ball and we had to keep them from developing any type of offense," he said. "I think defensively, we checked that pretty good. They (Bolton) are a solid club. They're a legitimate 8-0 club."

Piruzello has recorded 30 career shutouts in goal.

Bolton 0 1-1
Cromwell 1 1-2
Scoring: C. Lambert, Ursin, B. Reichertorfer. Coaches: Mike Piruzello 17, B. David Boles 6.

IT'S A GOAL — Manchester High's Corey Craft (15) heads for teammate Nigel Cooper (10) after scoring his second goal of the game Tuesday afternoon against Rockville High at Memorial Field. Rockville's Matt Hewey, hands his hips, shows his dejection after the Indian score. Manchester won the CCC East Division battle, 2-0.

MHS very much in title hunt

While Manchester was getting opportunities up front, Rockville could close only once. That was 14 minutes into the second half when a Joe Krone drive was wide of the left post.

"Manchester played very well defensively against us," Saimond said. "We didn't have too many opportunities. We play well and lose. We have a decent team, but we're not scoring."

Sweeperback Emil Isavri led the Indian defense that also featured Jeff

McCarthy was able to get his message across at the break. "I said at the half we needed to control the midfield. I suggested the midfielders do a better job, and they did."

"We were quicker in the second half. And you have to give credit (for that) to the wind; more than I'd like to," McCarthy continued.

Midfielders Nigel Cooper, Dave Stephenson and Jason Dieterle were quicker to the ball after the break. It was a Dieterle direct kick that set up the Indians' first score.

After a Rockville foul against a hustling Stephenson, Dieterle's 40-yard direct free perfectly into the box. Striker Corey Craft, who missed a head ball moments before, headed one inside the left corner at 3:01.

Some nice runs by wingers Peter Giansante and Peter Farley put the Rams on the defensive in the second half when Manchester enjoyed an 11-2 edge in shots. The Indians didn't get their second goal until 41 seconds remained.

An alert Giansante intercepted a clearing attempt at the top of the box. The ball bounced to Craft, and he hitch-kicked it home for his sixth goal of the season.

"It's extremely doubtful right now, and right now says it all," Howe said of a comeback. "It's definitely not happening now, but until my partner here gets a chance to see if I can still stand up..."

Howe, 61, was referring to his wife Colleen, and both laughed when he made that remark.

"Gordie would love to think that this could happen," she said. "There's more to it than Gordie saying, 'Oh, I'm going to go out and do this.'"

"He would definitely have to go into training. He's not going to do it unless he feels like he can do it, even for one game. If he were to do this he would probably get real serious about it."

Gretzky, acquired by the Kings from the Edmonton Oilers before last season, picked up three assists in Sunday night's 3-0 victory over

Training Division has been made yet.

"We have been directed by the House Appropriations Committee to go ahead and develop a plan in conjunction with the U.S. Army forces command in Atlanta," Hanley said, adding that the plan will be submitted to the committee when it is finished.

At stake are 1,463 Army reserve positions including 808 in Connecticut, 250 in Maine, 210 in Rhode Island, 138 in New Hampshire and 57 in Vermont. Some 80 full-time positions in Connecticut would also be lost.

The Army plan, originally floated last summer, would involve merging the 76th with the 78th Division based at Fort Dix in New Jersey. The Army cited declining recruitment and federal budget cuts as reasons for the proposal.

"While we have been verbally assured that all options are still open, we have the definite impression that this whole process is designed to arrive at a predetermined conclusion," the legislators wrote.

They called on Stone to consider alternative money-saving measures that would have a less severe impact on any one region of the country.

Since word of the proposal first surfaced last June, the Connecticut delegation and other legislators have been lobbying to block the merger of the two divisions. The Army initially delayed a decision until August and then moved the decision date to December.

Lawmakers met with Army officials on Aug. 1 to oppose the move.

"The briefings left us with the impression that the Army is pursuing a course of action without fully considering a range of alternatives," the letter stated. "We remain utterly unconvinced that reductions within the Army Reserve could not be more equitably distributed so as not to impact adversely upon one region or result in the elimination of a major command."

Daughter should honor mom's wish

DEAR ABBY: My dad recently died. He was 97. Mother, who is a few years younger, buried Dad according to his wishes in his family's plot near his parents, who also lived to a ripe old age. Now for the problem: Mother says that when her time comes, she wants to be buried near her mother in a different cemetery in a nearby town. I promised her that her wishes would be carried out, but I am having problems with my sister. (We are both in our 70s.)

Sister says, "When mother's time comes, if she isn't buried near Dad, it will be a slap in Dad's face. Also, Mom will never know the difference." Mother and Dad had been married nearly 75 years, and there was a less than loving marriage, if you get my drift. What should be done?

THE OLDER SISTER

DEAR SISTER: Since you gave your word to your mother, you are honor-bound to keep it. If she isn't buried near your dad, it will hardly be a slap in his face, because he won't know the difference either.

DEAR ABBY: Can you recommend any literature on how to talk to my 11-year-old daughter and 9-year-old son about AIDS? The subject is so frightening and overwhelming that I'm afraid I'll blotch it and scare them — so I keep putting it off.

ABBY, there is so much being published about AIDS these days — some of it is very technical — and I'm not sure I understand it completely myself. How do I keep from passing my own fear and confusion on to my little ones?

DEAR ABBY: I have a comment concerning the schoolteacher who caught two girls "cheating." One girl (a good student) was caught giving another girl (a poor student) the answers during a final exam.

DEAR ABBY: My dad recently died. He was 97. Mother, who is a few years younger, buried Dad according to his wishes in his family's plot near his parents, who also lived to a ripe old age. Now for the problem: Mother says that when her time comes, she wants to be buried near her mother in a different cemetery in a nearby town. I promised her that her wishes would be carried out, but I am having problems with my sister. (We are both in our 70s.)

Sister says, "When mother's time comes, if she isn't buried near Dad, it will be a slap in Dad's face. Also, Mom will never know the difference." Mother and Dad had been married nearly 75 years, and there was a less than loving marriage, if you get my drift. What should be done?

THE OLDER SISTER

DEAR SISTER: Since you gave your word to your mother, you are honor-bound to keep it. If she isn't buried near your dad, it will hardly be a slap in his face, because he won't know the difference either.

DEAR ABBY: Can you recommend any literature on how to talk to my 11-year-old daughter and 9-year-old son about AIDS? The subject is so frightening and overwhelming that I'm afraid I'll blotch it and scare them — so I keep putting it off.

ABBY, there is so much being published about AIDS these days — some of it is very technical — and I'm not sure I understand it completely myself. How do I keep from passing my own fear and confusion on to my little ones?

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Ex-CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite says he misses television journalism, but has kept busy sailing and working occasionally since retiring eight years ago.

Chances slim for patient

DEAR DR. GOTT: A very good friend has just been diagnosed with cancer of the liver. What is the prognosis for a complete recovery?

DEAR READER: This is a bad one. Liver cancer is difficult to treat because it is usually an aggressive malignancy that affects a vital organ. Chemotherapy, with or without radiation, may help control pain and slow the growth of the tumor but, I'm afraid, the outlook is far from encouraging.

I might add that I based my answer on the supposition that your friend has primary liver cancer. The liver is often the site of metastases (spread of malignancy) from cancers elsewhere in the body. This is called secondary liver cancer; the outlook varies, depending on the type of cancer and the extent of the metastases.

For example, liver metastases from a colon cancer will shrink and even disappear during chemotherapy for the primary tumor. Therefore, although the chance for a cure is slim, the prognosis depends on the type of cancer, its extent and how well your friend tolerates therapy. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my health report "Viruses and Cancer." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your recent column about microwave ovens contained a few mistakes. While you probably were simplifying your comments for a general audience, I hope you will correct the inaccuracies.

DEAR READER: I oversimplified my recent answer to a reader who inquired about microwave ovens and the "radiation hazard" they present. I wanted to make a clear distinction between microwaves and radiation from X-rays.

To that end, I clarified microwaves as sound waves. This definition produced more confusion than clarity. I'm afraid high-pitched sound waves, such as radar or the squeaks emitted by bats, cannot be heard by the human ear. Microwave devices were originally called Radaramps by Raytheon, the first manufacturer of microwave ovens. However, sound waves are not powerful enough to heat tissue. Microwaves exist in the electromagnetic spectrum, between radio waves and light; X-rays exist in the frequency beyond light. Therefore, microwaves are far weaker than X-rays; they produce no effect of nuclear radiation.

A second point needing clarification is the method by which microwaves produce heat. I stated that microwave radiation cooks food by agitating the water molecules within it. This is true. Microwaves actually cook food by vibrating the water and around the cells. This is why foods high in water content, such as fresh vegetables, cook faster in a microwave oven than do foods containing relatively little moisture. Also, microwaved food cools as the water within it gives up its heat to the environment.

Abortion bills beat back . . .

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Four bills to restrict abortion were soundly defeated by a state Senate committee during the nation's first special legislative session on the issue since the U.S. Supreme Court's Webster ruling.

"The battle isn't over," Jon Peck, a spokesman for Gov. Bob Martinez, said after the first day of the session.

About 1,000 abortion-rights activists, however, celebrated outside the Capitol.

"The real news story is that nothing is going to happen here," Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, told the cheering crowd. "Martinez is suffering a very embarrassing defeat."

Abortion-rights lawmakers predicted four more Martinez proposals would die in a second Senate committee meeting today.

Florida lawmakers convened in the afternoon amid tight security after more than 10,000 pro-choice and anti-abortion demonstrators held rallies.

As police guarded the doors to the Democratic-controlled Senate and House chambers, activists marched around the Capitol.

The abortion-rights side sang "America the Beautiful" and hired an airplane to trail a banner saying "Keep Abortion Legal."

Anti-abortion activists wore T-shirts with the words "Spoken As a Former Fetus . . . I'm Glad I'm Here."

Police made two arrests. A 14-year-old was charged with a misdemeanor for wearing a derogatory message on his jacket that referred to the governor, and 49-year-old Carl Carlander, an abortion-rights supporter, was jailed on a charge of aggravated battery after he allegedly struck a man in the face with a video camera.

The Senate Health Care Committee today was expected to defeat four bills it had to consider, including three measures to expand abortion clinic regulations, according to panel chairman Sen. Jeanne Malchoire, a Democrat and an abortion-rights supporter.

Technology shifts debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as the abortion battle intensifies in the courts and statehouses, some political observers and population experts say the issue is being moved to a new arena — and maybe even without their consent.

They say the "abortion pill" in growing use in France inevitably will reach America, legally or illegally, and forever change the argument: women who want abortions will have them without having to visit clinics, possibly without doctors — and maybe even without knowing whether they are pregnant.

To anti-abortion forces, the French pill is a cloud on the horizon. It comes as the Supreme Court faces another opportunity to overturn its 1973 decision that legalized abortion and as Florida legislators meet in the nation's first special session on an abortion since the high court's July 1983

Noriega alleges U.S. role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Panamanian officers who led last week's abortive coup were recruited by the U.S. government, Gen. Manuel Noriega charged in an interview. The Panamanian leader also alleged that Panamanian businessmen and Nicaraguan Contras served as messengers for U.S. officials, relaying messages between the United States and the plotters, the Los Angeles Times reported in Thursday's edition. "The United States was involved before, during and after the coup," Noriega said. "They had to make the contacts, work them, convince them. It's a lot of work before you've hooked the fish. But they were the hook and the useful tools were the fish."

Cops searching for armed bandits

Credit union official denies $107,000 taken. By James F. Henry, Manchester Herald. The FBI and Manchester police were still searching Monday for two men who robbed the Northeast School Employees Federal Credit Union Wednesday morning in a crime similar to other robberies in the Hartford area. Police initially said the robbers, who were wearing ski masks and carrying a gun, had taken $107,000, but credit union President Patrick Kelly said today the figure was not accurate. He refused to release the accurate figure, saying the union would sue if the police used the earlier figure. Kelly said today that the credit union, located at 233 Main St., does not release information about the amount of money stolen. He said he does not know where the couple of $107,000 came from and added that there was a man with a handgun in a car in front of Bob's Stores on North Main Street. The robbery was reported at 8 a.m. Wood said today that it is possible that the first call was a diversion. The credit union said it was a mile from the store. Police said that when officers arrived at Bob's Stores, there was no one fitting the description made by the photographer. Wood said he does not know the exact time officers arrived at Bob's Stores. One of the bags filled with money was left in the parking lot of the credit union, because it contained a "red dye pack" that explodes when outside of the credit union. The pack exploded when the car the robbers were driving was dumped and they were getting away. The FBI is offering a reward of as much as $10,000 for information that could lead investigators to the criminals. Over the past year, credit unions in Hartford, Windsor, Middletown, Meriden, New Britain, Bristol, and Waterbury have been robbed, according to a spokesman for the FBI. In Hartford, The entire crime Wednesday took two minutes, according to police. At least two witnesses saw the men flee in a stolen, rust-colored Toyota car. That description fits the one the anonymous phone caller gave police before the robbery. Wood said that police are not sure what year the car was, or the model. Wood said the car has not been recovered. The FBI spokesman said the Fire chiefs support gag rules as way to control misinformation

John Mac, chief of the Eighth Utilities District Fire Department, can imagine the confusion that would result if every district firefighter had free reign to talk about incidents to the press. "I don't believe a person should be able to give information to the media. That's one of the reasons the department, like many other departments, has a spokesman, as well as the chief, to give information to the media. "I don't believe a person should be able to speak on behalf of the department unless he is authorized to do so," Mac said. The issue came to the forefront this month when a County firefighter was suspended from his job for 45 days for speaking to the press about his involvement in an incident when firefighters helped deliver a baby. The firefighter, Joseph Carilli, was suspended for violating a department bylaw which says all communication with the media must come through the chief or the fire association president. In a meeting Tuesday night, the South Coventry Fire Department Board of Appeals revoked the suspension. That's one of the reasons the department, like many other departments, has a spokesman, as well as the chief, to give information to the media. Spruce St. up in arms over crime

About 60 residents, many saying they are fed up with crime in the Spruce Street area, attended a crime watch meeting Wednesday night at Nathan Hale School, Manchester. Kevin MacKenzie, the owner of the M & S Mini-Mart on Spruce Street, said residents started the watch in July after they tired of drug-related crime in the area. Police Officer Gary Frost said today that broken drug dealers actually were standing on streets trying to sell their wares before police began to crack down on them. MacKenzie told the crowd at the meeting that the turnout was encouraging. "This is really something. This really says a lot for this area," he said. Most told residents gathered at the meeting that "block captains" were important to a successful crime watch program. A block captain is a person who coordinates information on crime in a particular area and gives it to police. MacKenzie said a block captain is needed for the eastern side of Birch Street, from the intersection of Spruce Street to the dead end. He
