Adopt a pet: Ben is ready

By Barbara Richmond
Manchester Herald

There was only one new dog at the Manchester dog pound, east of Tuesday. It's a little 8-week-old shepherd cross named Ben. He's black and tan with a little bit of white on his chest. Dog Warden Richard Rand said Ben may turn out to be Big Ben. He'll be medium to large when he's full grown, but right now he's just a cuddly baby.

Last week's featured pet, a 6-month-old shepherd cross named Silver, has been adopted by a Manchester family, Rand said. Also adopted by a Manchester family was the little Doberman pinscher cross, mentioned in last week's column. The male yellow Labrador retriever, also mentioned in last week's column, was claimed by his owner.

The phone number at the pound is 643-6642. If there is no answer, call the police department, 646-4555. Aid to Helpless Animals Inc., a volunteer organization, has many cats and kittens in need of good homes.

Police Roundup

Two injured in accident

Two Manchester men were injured Wednesday night in a two-car accident at the intersection of Tolland Turnpike and Adams Street, police said. Bradley R. Wheaton, 17, of 73 Westley St., was treated for a head cut and released, a spokeswoman at Manchester Memorial Hospital said. Robert V. Hughes, 41, of 48 Irving St., was treated for a chest cut, she said.

Both men said they had a green light at the intersection, but police said that was impossible. Their cars collided at the intersection, police said. There were apparently no witnesses to the accident, which occurred about 11:50 p.m., police said.

Accident injures 1 man

A Manchester man was injured Tuesday night during a two-car accident at the intersection of Center and Adams streets, police said. James Lamb, 21, of 3-A Walnut St., was treated for a cut to his right arm and released, a spokeswoman at Manchester Memorial Hospital said.

The accident happened at about 10:26 p.m., when Lamb's car, which was traveling south on Adams Street, failed to stop completely at a flashing red light at the intersection, police said. His car continued into the path of a car driven by Eric C. Bolin, 31, of Farmington, police said. Both cars had front end damage, police said.

Lamb was cited for failure to obey a traffic control signal, police said. Bolin was cited for failure to carry valid registration and an insurance card, police said.

Two men arrested in fight

A Manchester man was arrested and charged with assault, criminal mischief and breach of peace Thursday night after a fight broke out in the parking lot of the Island Restaurant, 109 Tolland St., police said. James P. Kallenback, 24, of 101-H Tabor Lane, was arrested after he punched an East Hartford woman and fought with a Vernon man during an incident at 11:46 p.m., police said. Police said Kallenback punched the woman. Bystander Mark David Mascar, 27, of 90 Wilshire Ave., then intervened and began fighting with Kallenback, police said. Kallenback, who was wanted by South Windsor police for violation of probation, was placed on a $1,000 bond and is slated to appear in Manchester Superior court this morning, police said. Mascar was arrested for breach of peace, placed on a $500 bond and is scheduled to appear in court on Wednesday.

TNT asks board for information

By James F. Henry
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The Neglected Taxpayers group has asked the Board of Education for information regarding contract negotiations with faculty and on discussions of entering a regional school agreement with other neighboring communities.

In a Nov. 9 letter that was made available at a school board meeting Thursday, TNT Chairman Charles Holland wrote, "Presently our group of concerned Bolton taxpayers...is taking a close look at both the quality of education at Bolton High School and the town's future plans for Bolton High School."

Holland, who was not at the meeting, has said the group favors closing Bolton High School, but added later that was only one option under consideration. The school faces a loss of tuition payments from Willington after that town decided not to send its students to the high school this year.

The letter indicated five areas about which TNT would like more information. The first item on the list asked, "What progress has been made in regionalizing Bolton High School? Have you discussed this possibility with any other town? Which ones? If yes, what is the present status of these discussions?"

The letter further asked, "Have you discussed the possibility of sending Bolton High School students to Manchester High School with anyone from the Manchester Board of Education or the administration?"

Holland and TNT Vice-Chairman Betty Martin said in a recent telephone interview that TNT is prepared to meet informally with representatives from the Manchester school system if the Board of Education is not willing to do so. Education officials have said that ultimately the school department has the final say on any negotiations.

TNT also requested information about class sizes at the high school. At past public Board of Education meetings, TNT members have expressed concern over the number of classes in the town schools that have fewer than 10 students enrolled. A common theme of TNT since it started in September has been that classes with small numbers amount to "expensive education."

TNT also requested "a copy of the current contractual agreement between the Bolton Education Association and the Bolton Board of Education. This should include the teacher's salary schedule, and fringe benefits. Also, a copy of the administrators' salary schedule."

Holland said recently that the issue of binding arbitration, under which an arbiter determines salary disputes, is one which concerns TNT members because it does not take into account the amount the town is able to pay.

The group also requested an accurate figure on the cost of education per student for the 1988-89 school year, and the final request stated, "Will you (the Board of Education) comply with our request for open format Board of Education meetings?"

Board of Education Chairman James Marshall said that it is the policy of the board not to open up dialogue at board meetings with residents who have concerns.

FAIR DEAL — Margita Bramanis of 3 Devo Drive hands in her pack of Camal cigarettes for a turkey sandwich at the Subway sandwich shop on Green Road Thursday. The shop offered free sandwiches to about 50 people who turned in their cigarettes during the Great American Smokeout sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Students are among 50 people to snuff cigarettes for sandwich

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

Nearly 50 smokers traded in their cigarettes for a turkey sandwich Thursday as part of the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout. Gertrude Sutcliffe, executive director of the Manchester North Unit of the American Cancer Society, called the turnout "excellent," considering the foul weather.

Each smoker who presented at least half a pack of cigarettes received a free 6-inch turkey sandwich and a cookie at Subway Sandwich Shop, 317 Green Road. A bonfire had been planned for 4 p.m. to burn all of the cigarettes collected during the day, but was cancelled because of the weather. Kevin Waterhouse, manager of Subway, said he thought the turnout would have been higher if it were not for the weather.

Last year 5 million people across the country quit smoking for one day as a part of the Great American Smokeout. In Manchester, the American Cancer Society held a Lucky Strike funeral procession and buried a pack of cigarettes. According to the society's figures, 139,000 people died from lung cancer last year.

School bus accident in Bolton prompts concern from parents

By James F. Henry
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — Superintendent of Schools Richard Packman, Thursday he will meet with town officials and emergency personnel to form a plan for emergencies after a school bus went off a road Monday.

Packman said the notification of the parents... was not handled as well as it could have been after a school bus left Hebron Road. One of the children on the bus received bruises in the incident and the bus driver was cited for making an improper turn, police said.

Packman said school officials were not notified of the accident until about 20 minutes after it occurred, and emergency personnel had already begun releasing children at the scene.

Three parents told the school board Thursday that the incident was not handled well.

Board Chairman James H. Marshall said school officials were scared. "They (the children) were scared. They didn't want to say that they were hurt. Was it okay to say they were hurt?"

She added that her daughter "never stopped talking about it" the day of the crash, and she was certain that "there were nightmares" that night.

Matkowski said she was able to pick up her daughter as well as a child of another parent with prior knowledge of the crash, and she was a mother at the scene. She said that if the officials had followed established procedures, she should have been able to pick up the other child.

Town to tee off Tuesday on lease with country club

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

Now that amendments have been made to the proposed lease extension for the Manchester Country Club, the Board of Directors will tee off again Tuesday to see if they will approve the two-year deal.

The directors decided in May to extend the club's lease to provide time for the completion of a study to determine the feasibility of expanding the town-owned course from 18 to 36 holes.

"We do need additional golf holes. That's a given," said Republican Director Ronald Oeslla Thursday.

The closing of two public, 9-hole courses in recent years has increased the demand to use the Country Club, he said.

Newcomer to the board, Republican Wallace J. Irish Jr., said he supports the temporary lease. He also said that he expects a new golf course will be added, and the decision about who should manage the course should be made by a committee made up of one town director and three members of the Board of Directors and three members of the group called Friends of Golf in Manchester.

Three members of the town Board of Directors and three representatives of the country club have been negotiating the short-term lease this year.

Irish is a member of Friends of Golf in Manchester and the country club. Asked whether he thought his proposed commission would be tipped in favor of the club, he said, "I think it's certainly a lot more open than the members of the Board of Directors and three members of the country club board of governors."

He said FOGIM is "more familiar with the issue and most citizens of Manchester are not."

Irish has said he supports allowing the club to manage the additional 18 holes, but added today, "My opinion isn't important here. That independent commission should bring a recommendation to the board. There's been too much politics involved."

The proposed lease extension, a two-year deal at $75,000 per year, was supposed to be acted on by the directors at their last meeting on Oct. 3, but was removed from the agenda after several directors raised concerns that three provisions requested by the owners of the country club were not included in the ordinance. The club is now paying $25,000 a year on a 25-year lease that expires in 1991.

Critics of the proposal have said the town could get higher rent if the lease extension went out to bid. However, Republican Theunis "Terry" Werkhoven, the next likely mayor, said he opposes this because the club takes good care of the course, and others may not.

Since the meeting, Manchester's Town Attorney John W. Cooney has written the amendments to the proposal.

The first addition is that if the town decides to build an additional 18 holes before the two-year lease is up, then it will negotiate a long-term lease with the Country Club for 18 of the available holes.

The second addition is that if the town decides not to add holes before the lease ends and plans to continue leasing the land, then the club will have the opportunity to buy the land by matching any offers from other companies.

The third addition is that during the proposed lease extension, the club will be allowed to increase dues and greens fees to offset the increased rent for the two years. With these amendments to the lease ordinance, the directors, with four new members and a 3-4 Republican majority, again will meet from the issue at Tuesday's meeting. As well as Oeslla, two veteran Country Club members and Democrat James F. Fogarty, who began the two-year lease is granted and recommended by the Board of Directors and three members of the country club board of governors."

He said FOGIM is "more familiar with the issue and most citizens of Manchester are not."

Irish has said he supports allowing the club to manage the additional 18 holes, but added today, "My opinion isn't important here. That independent commission should bring a recommendation to the board. There's been too much politics involved."

Charges denied in fatal crash

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

VERNON — A Massachusetts man accused of causing a fatal car accident last month on Interstate 384 in Bolton pleaded not guilty to all charges leveled against him Thursday in Superior Court.

Thomas C. Flynn, 22, of Braintree, Mass., pleaded not guilty to 11 charges, including second-degree manslaughter with a motor vehicle, second- and third-degree assault with a motor vehicle, misconduct with a motor vehicle, and operating under the influence of alcohol.

The Oct. 22 accident happened when Flynn's vehicle struck a car parked in the breakdown lane, killing 11-year-old Carmelo Torres, of Providence, R.I., and injuring four other passengers in the car, police reported.

Those injured are Rene Guerra, 19, Yvette Guerra, 18, Angelica Torres, 36, and Elizabeth Lopez, 14, all of Providence. Rene Guerra was discharged Oct. 6 from St. Francis Hospital in Hartford.

A spokeswoman there said she believed he was transferred to an out-of-state hospital, but she had no way to confirm that information.

All of the remaining victims were treated and released from area hospitals.

John Logan, 30, of New Britain, was a passenger with Flynn. He was treated for minor injuries.

In court Thursday, Flynn, who had been staying in Manchester with his grandmother, former state Rep. Elise Swenson, kept his head lowered as he entered the not guilty plea. Speaking softly and almost inaudibly, he was asked by the court reporter to repeat himself after he responded to the manslaughter charge.

He requested a jury trial, and his next pre-trial appearance was scheduled for Dec. 7.

Flynn's attorney, public defender Diane L. Welch, said he may change his plea.

This is the very beginning of the process," she said. "I have no clue what's going to happen."

Indictment is first use of threat law

NEW HAVEN (AP) — An East Haven man, who allegedly wrote dozens of letters to his ex-girlfriend threatening to kill or injure her, became the first person in Connecticut to be indicted on federal threatening charges, U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr. said.

A federal grand jury sitting in New Haven Thursday handed up an indictment charging Anthony Young, 28, with 42 counts of mail threatening communications.

The indictment alleges that Young sent 52 threatening letters to his ex-girlfriend, Christy Doherty of Branford, between November 1988 and August 1989. Twardy said Young's conduct carries up to five years in prison and a $100,000 fine, he said.

Young was scheduled to be released from Cheshire Correctional Center earlier this month after serving a prison sentence for third-degree assault and third-degree burglary. He had been in prison since May 1988 when police said he was arrested for beating Doherty while she was staying at a girlfriend's apartment in Shelton.

Young, however, pleaded guilty earlier this month to additional harassment charges for allegedly making threats against the mother of Doherty's new boyfriend. The plea postpones his scheduled Nov. 29 release date from state prison as he awaits sentencing.

Federal authorities said the indictment will further delay Young's release from prison and that it will be requested he be held without bond for the federal charges.

No arraignment date has been set for Young on the federal charges. State Rep. Michael P. Lawlor, D-East Haven, who helped Doherty press for federal charges against Young, said legislation will be introduced during the 1990 session of the General Assembly to increase penalties for threatening to kill or injure someone. He said the legislation would create a new criminal charge, felony harassment, that would apply to those defendants that have a prior record that includes convictions for violent crimes.

The maximum sentence for felony harassment would be five years in prison, he said. Under current state law a conviction for harassment carries a maximum 90-day prison sentence, Lawlor said.

FIGHTING THE STORM — Harry Polowitz of 154 Charter Oak St. works hard to keep a floor of water from his house during a rainstorm Thursday. Heavy winds from the storm wreaked havoc throughout the state.

Storm damages town hall, wreaks havoc

A windswept rain storm Thursday that felled trees throughout the state and caused widespread power outages also caused minor damage to the Community Hall in Bolton, officials said.

The storm also caused more than 2,000 customers in the greater Manchester area and about 75,000 across the state to lose power, most of which was restored today.

Helen Kemp, executive assistant to Bolton selectmen, said a branch from a tree smashed into the Community Hall, causing minor damage.

She said that employees in the town offices could hear the tree cracking just moments before it crashed, doing minor damage to the roof, siding, and a handicap access ramp by the selectmen's office.

Kemp said when employees heard the tree cracking, they left the building, but returned to work.

"Let's put it this way," Kemp said. "It rained it all afternoon, and no water leaked in."

Elsewhere, high winds blew off a section of the roof from the Winham Textile and History Museum in Williamstown as well as causing thousands of power outages.

About 75,000 Northeast Utilities customers were without power early Thursday afternoon. By late Thursday, however, power had been restored to all but 3,185 NU customers in the Litchfield County and Waterbury areas, said Jackie Harris, an NU spokeswoman.

In Clinton, a 45-foot trimaran sailboat from Maine issued a distress call Thursday morning before it ran aground on the rocks.

Before the boat broke up, the passengers were rescued.

Police will begin a fresh investigation into the mysterious death of 17-year-old Michael S. Linders three years ago, Gary Wood, police spokesman, said today.

Wood said the department decided to reopen its investigation after receiving a request from Linder's father, Kurt Linders of Vernon.

Michael Linders was found bleeding and dying behind an apartment complex at 125 Spruce St. on Nov. 14, 1986, after attending a party at the complex, Wood said. He was found with a crushed skull and slash marks on his wrists and neck, he said. No witnesses to the death have been found.

Police think "Linders either jumped off the building or was bludgeoned to death, Wood said. A February 1987 investigatory report determined the evidence was inconclusive, he said.

"It's been a while" since an earlier investigation brought police to a dead end, Wood said.

Detective Paul Lombardo will head the new investigation, he said.

Judge orders jail term in beating case

HARTFORD (AP) — A man who severely beat a mildly retarded man so he could steal $5 was sentenced to 20 years in prison suspended after 15 years after he turned down a chance to go to a mental hospital.

Norman Green, 26, was also sentenced to five year probation. Green pleaded no contest in July to charges including first degree assault in connection with the attack on Larry Levesque outside Levesque's Hartford bar.

Green repeatedly kicked the mildly retarded man's head against a wall before robbing him of a few dollars on March 8, 1988, authorities said. Levesque, 38, is now confined to a wheelchair.

Prosecutors linked Green to the crime by using a DNA analysis of blood on his shoes.

Green's sentencing was delayed several times because of questions about whether he was mentally competent. A psychiatric team at an extended care center recommended that he be evaluated for 60 days at Whiting Forensic Institute in Middletown.

Design for fire station may be adaptable selected by Public Works Director Peter P. Lavis Jr. last July as the architect to design the firehouse for the Deming Street site. Several Republicans elected to the board have said they favor doing a study before deciding on a site for the firehouse.

The disagreement is further complicated by the fact that Lawrence Associates has worked on the plans without a signed contract with the town. The directors are scheduled later this month to consider authorizing Town Manager Richard Sartor to enter into a contract for the plans.

Republican Town Director Thomas Werhoken, the town's next likely mayor, said Thursday he supported the funding for the contract would be approved by the directors, but he said he has not discussed the matter with other Republican directors.

Asked if the plans his firm has developed could be used elsewhere, Lawrence said it might be possible to adapt them to another location depending on the particulars of the site. He said the site at Lawton Road and McKee Street are similar, for instance.

When the Lawrence Associates was selected by Lavis for the design, Fire Chief John Rivosa, who served on a committee of town administrators that helped make the selection, said the firm had designed more fire stations than any of the other architects considered.

But Green said he would rather go to prison than to a mental hospital. "They'll put me on heavy medication. I'll come out like a zombie," Green said.

Green has had psychiatric problems since he was a child and his mother is worried for her safety when he was agitated, Public Defender Ronald Gold said.

If we can do this administrative job, then I'm all for that," Dodd told Scamell.

Dodd said that a move by OSHA to expand its inspection teams and increase their authority to shut down buildings sites that violate safety standards would go a long way toward accomplishing the goals of the legislation.

"If a crack had been detected and an inspection had been able to shut that operation down, arguably, 28 lives would have been saved," Dodd said.

Shays said he was pleased that Scamell seemed willing to work the bill through the state with keys to the inspection system.

"Every day that goes by, the victims' families must live not only with the loss of their loved ones, but also with the reality that their government has not responded to this tragedy," Shays said.

The Associated Building and Contractors Inc. issued a statement labeling the bill "regulatory over-load" and urging Congress not to add "still another unnecessary bureaucratic level of government."

The association called for a five-year moratorium on new regulations. It also said that employees, not just construction companies, should be held responsible for their actions at the work site.

Murder probe is reopened

Police will begin a fresh investigation into the mysterious death of 17-year-old Michael S. Linders three years ago, Gary Wood, police spokesman, said today.

Wood said the department decided to reopen its investigation after receiving a request from Linder's father, Kurt Linders of Vernon.

Michael Linders was found bleeding and dying behind an apartment complex at 125 Spruce St. on Nov. 14, 1986, after attending a party at the complex, Wood said. He was found with a crushed skull and slash marks on his wrists and neck, he said. No witnesses to the death have been found.

Police think "Linders either jumped off the building or was bludgeoned to death, Wood said. A February 1987 investigatory report determined the evidence was inconclusive, he said.

"It's been a while" since an earlier investigation brought police to a dead end, Wood said.

Detective Paul Lombardo will head the new investigation, he said.

Judge orders jail term in beating case

HARTFORD (AP) — A man who severely beat a mildly retarded man so he could steal $5 was sentenced to 20 years in prison suspended after 15 years after he turned down a chance to go to a mental hospital.

Norman Green, 26, was also sentenced to five year probation. Green pleaded no contest in July to charges including first degree assault in connection with the attack on Larry Levesque outside Levesque's Hartford bar.

Green repeatedly kicked the mildly retarded man's head against a wall before robbing him of a few dollars on March 8, 1988, authorities said. Levesque, 38, is now confined to a wheelchair.

Prosecutors linked Green to the crime by using a DNA analysis of blood on his shoes.

Green's sentencing was delayed several times because of questions about whether he was mentally competent. A psychiatric team at an extended care center recommended that he be evaluated for 60 days at Whiting Forensic Institute in Middletown.

U.S. sets conditions on trade barriers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is nearing final passage of historic legislation establishing the right to travel, but U.S. trade barriers will give way gradually.

Commerce Secretary Robert A. Mosbacher said Thursday the Soviet travel legislation will not lead to an immediate dismantling of tariffs erected by Congress 15 years ago in behalf of Soviet Jews.

He said the Soviets, at best, would get only a year-to-year waiver while restrictive trade credits would remain in place.

"We'll review it to see if it is sufficient," Mosbacher said of the Soviet legislation that is expected to clear its final hurdle by December. "We can't prejudice that."

There are several issues that need to be cleaned up. There are 600 long-term "refuseniks" who should be freed before we extend the carrot of MFN."

The National Conference on Soviet Jewry said, meanwhile, in a statement: "We welcome the initiative by the Soviet government in bringing before the Supreme Soviet a draft law providing for freedom of entry and exit."

The conference lists 51,336 Jews as emigrating from the Soviet Union by the end of October. The exodus surpasses the all-time high of 51,320 reached in 1979.

Anticipating U.S. action to facilitate trade, Soviet Ambassador Yuri V. Dubinin told reporters at the Soviet embassy. "We are expecting some positive steps from the U.S. side," Mosbacher said.

But, he added, "We are not making clear that we are not beginning negotiation of a trade agreement. This can come only after the Soviets codify their emigration legislation and after a waiver under the Jackson-Vanik amendment becomes possible."

The legislation imposed tariffs against Soviet goods that are not applied to the exports of most other countries. The restriction on trade credits, known as the Stevenson amendment, was adopted in the parallel move by Congress.

Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., who has pushed for wider credits emigration, said in a statement: "The Soviet Union is making real progress. But going all the way toward granting most-favored nation (MFN) status strikes me as premature."

Storms spread death, destruction

Violent storms caused widespread wind damage and flooding in the Northeast and Midwest on Wednesday. The two-day toll: at least 29 dead and hundreds injured, including 17 dead and 1,000 homeless in Huntsville, Ala., and a death in Canada.

Thursday's storms came from the system that spun off tornadoes in eight states in the South and Midwest on Wednesday. The two-day toll: at least 29 dead and hundreds injured, including 17 dead and 1,000 homeless in Huntsville, Ala., and a death in Canada.

Authorities and witnesses in Newburgh, N.Y., about 60 miles north of New York City, said it appeared a tornado was responsible for the death and destruction at East Coldenham Elementary School, but the weather service said it probably wasn't a twister.

The brick, cinder block and glass wall, about 30 feet high and 125 feet wide, caved in on as many as 15 first-, second- and third-graders as they were eating lunch, said Town of Newburgh Police Chief John Kulisek.

Besides the seven killed, 18 children were injured, two critically. All the victims were 6 to 9 years old.

Town of Newburgh police Lt. John J. Mahoney said he arrived 10 minutes after the wall collapsed from under the rubble.

"Some were screaming, some were lying there very quiet," Mahoney said. "You could hear them, under the debris calling for help, calling 'Take me home, take me home.'"

District schools were closed today, and school officials were assembling counselors to help the children when classes resume Monday.

Kulisek said an investigation would begin today into why the wall collapsed.

Counsel to examine banking influence

WASHINGTON (AP) — An outside counsel will investigate five senators who intervened with banking regulators to help a political contributor, a source says, indicating an intensified probe by the Senate Ethics Committee.

The source speaking on condition of anonymity Thursday, did not say whether a counsel had yet been hired to investigate the senators, who aided Charles H. Keating Jr. when he was the chairman of the failing Lincoln Savings and Loan of Irvine, Calif.

But the New York Times reported today the committee had decided to hire prominent Washington attorney Robert S. Bennett for the investigation, as well as for an unrelated review involving Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. A source says the Senate Ethics Committee is reviewing allegations that D'Amato violated rules in the Department of Housing and Urban Development scandal.

Until now, the Ethics Committee's only known interest was a letter asking the five whether Keating's contributions to the senators' campaigns or political causes — prompted them to question regulators about their examination of Lincoln.

The senators are Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; John Glenn, D-Ohio; John McCain, R-Ariz.; and Donald Riegle, D-Mich. Cranston responded to the committee Thursday as DeConcini and Riegle did earlier, all denying any improprieties. Glenn

WEST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's new premier today presented a 28-member Cabinet that included 11 non-Communists and called for more private enterprise to help the troubled economy, but he rejected a free-market economy.

In his first speech since taking office Monday, Hans Modrow also rejected the idea of German reunification as "dangerous and unrealistic."

The 500-member Parliament met today to approve Modrow's proposed Cabinet, which will replace the body that resigned Nov. 7.

East German media said Communist Party chief Egon Krenz approved the Cabinet makeup Thursday, and no serious opposition was expected in Parliament, which convened a two-day session today.

More than a third of the seats being given to non-Communists, the proposed Cabinet, in fact, former hard-line leadership of Erich Honecker, and the party still dominates.

The non-Communists all come from parties that have been Communist allies.

After Modrow's speech, however, Manfred Gerlach, head of the Liberal Democrats, announced his party would no longer run in elections in a bloc with the Communists but called for "true sharing of power" in free voting.

His party was given three seats in the new Cabinet. In the past, the Cabinet has been subservient to the Communist Party leadership.

Gerlach has proposed riding the Constitution of the Communist's 40-year monopoly on power and a parliamentary committee was to be set up to study that and other possible changes.

Modrow, in his speech to Parliament, outlined hopes for improving the lives of East Germans while retaining a planned socialist economy.

He said the nation is "open for proposals on joint ventures, investments, transfer of profits and environmental pilot projects," all of which address some of the concerns of Western business looking for openings in the East German market.

"The government sees as its most urgent responsibility the stabilization of the economy," Modrow said. He called for "increasing individual responsibility of the economic units" and the introduction of some private enterprise to encourage East Germans to produce goods and services to help end shortages.

Modrow urged improvements in the sometimes stifling planned economy but rejected a full free-market economy.

He called for a "better socialism," with better supplies of consumer goods and a "full and varied life" for the East German population.

Modrow also suggested legal and political reforms.

Washington, D.C., blew the windows out of skyscrapers in Philadelphia and destroyed a house in Piscataway, N.J., and overturned cars and blew the roof off a shopping mall in Quebec.

The National Weather Service received numerous reports of tornadoes Thursday but confirmed only one, in Montgomery County in southeastern Pennsylvania, that ripped the roof of a building housing federal offices in King of Prussia, causing four minor injuries.

A truck driver died when his tractor-trailer overturned in a town official in Philadelphia.

In Richmond, just east of St. Hilaire, a man was killed when his car was hit by a school bus during the high winds, Quebec provincial police official Bertrand Fortin said.

The storm system, churning around a collision of record warm air and extremely cold air, also was blamed for one death Wednesday in Alorton, Ill. Gov. James R. Thompson said Thursday he would seek federal disaster aid for the southern Illinois town.

In Alabama, Gov. Guy Hunt said he would seek federal relief for Huntsville, where the tornado covered between eight and 10 miles with wind speeds as high as 250 mph.

Winds of up to 100 mph blew out windows in Philadelphia at the roof of the Overseas Terminal at Philadelphia International Airport.

OPINION

Don't rush into bad weather

One of the nice things about living in New England is the change of seasons. Some readers may remember how that works. When summer ends, fall begins.

You can tell when summer ends and fall begins by consulting a calendar, which gives the official date of the beginning of fall as Sept. 23. It is good to be seasonally oriented so you will know what kind of clothes to wear and when to turn off the water to the faucet outside the houses and when to give up cooking on the outdoor barbecue and that sort of thing.

There are other signs. For instance, the leaves fall off the trees and begin their migrations around the neighborhood. The leaves do not tell all their secrets. For instance, there has never been a satisfactory explanation of how the oak leaves go on your lawn, when you and your immediate neighbors grow only maples and locusts.

The most obvious sign of the change, however, is that it gets colder and brisker. The balmy days of late summer give way to sharp breezes and sudden chills, particularly after sundown. That is the way it works, notwithstanding some of the balmy days you may have been noticing lately. There is no scientific evidence that the fifth season, Indian Summer, has totally replaced autumn in the sequence.

There are those who pretend to regret the delay in the normal progress of climatic events. They say fall is invigorating, challenging, and inspiring. Don't believe them. They are enjoying this aberration just as much as the rest of us and they'll be just as sorry when fall really arrives.

Thank you

Two weeks ago today, our home at the Clocktower Mill Apartments was destroyed by fire. We would like to thank the firefighters from the Manchester Fire Department for all they did for us.

Our apartment complex has had over fifty false alarms since the beginning of this year. We have often been astonished that the fire department continues to arrive at the scene so promptly. The residents have long since stopped paying much attention to the alarms. The speed with which they responded to this alarm for a real fire potentially saved many lives. Fortunately, neither one of us was home during the fire.

We were aided by many of the firefighters on the scene in recovering what remained of our possessions. When we first arrived, the fire was still burning. The firefighters had removed a grandfather clock that was in the entrance way and stored it safely outside. This clock was a wedding gift from Michelle's mother and of great personal value to us. In addition, Deputy Fire Chief Robert Bychowski offered to send in firefighters to retrieve some important personal items. Several men went in and saved our jewelry and what remained of our clothes. Once the fire was out and it was safe to enter, we went in to remove the rest of our possessions. The firefighters hoped to carry all of our belongings out to the parking lot. Afterwards, Deputy Chief Beckwith told me that they do not usually do this, but they really wanted to help.

We cannot tell you how much the kindness and concern of all firefighters present from the Manchester Fire Department meant to us. Their compassion made a really unbearable situation tolerable. Our hearts go out to them and their families. We will always remember what they have done for us. There are not adequate words to thank them. We are sure they would say they were just doing their job. It was a lot more than that to us.

No mulligans in politics could not have more confidence and support from the president. In such situations, some Republicans are protesting too much. After all, Quayle has solid backing where his critics find fault. Quayle has solid backing from the voters. Quayle has solid backing from the voters. Quayle has solid backing from the voters.

There are no mulligans in national politics, where Quayle might find one handy now and then. In that arena, any recent move is marked indelibly on the scorecard. That means no mistakes go unnoted, especially for a political figure whose confidence and performance ratings are persistently low, as Quayle's are.

That pressure doesn't let up; an associate sees the stress on Quayle as the vice president strives to boost his standing, knowing that any slip or misstep will be magnified into another dent in the image. At the Republican Governors Association conference this week, even the praise pointed to the problem. Quayle's friends were at pains to plug his performance and his potential as a national leader, even when it didn't quite fit the moment.

Gov. Carroll A. Campbell Jr. of South Carolina introducing him at a casual Sunday night reception, said the vice president "will make a very fine place in his chest." Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater tossed into his remarks to the governors on Monday the observation that Quayle "is doing a very fine job and job. I'm not going to do anything differently. I'm not going to do anything differently. I'm not going to do anything differently. I'm not going to do anything differently. I'm not going to do anything differently.

Congress downplays scandals

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON—A young congressional aide peeked onto the House floor last month and was surprised to see Rep. Donald "Buz" Lukens, R-Ohio, delivering a fiery speech about Poland. The wide-eyed aide figured Lukens would be hiding in disgrace, not grabbing the limelight.

Lukens is the last person in Congress who needs to call attention to himself. He was convicted in May of contributing to the delinquency of a minor because he paid to have sex with a 16-year-old girl. Now he faces an ethics investigation and his party wishes he would go away.

It is believed to be the first such sanction imposed on a Catholic elected official in the United States since a gathering of bishops last week in Baltimore agreed to intensify the church's anti-abortion stand, said Frances Kissling, who heads the Washington-based Catholics for a Free Choice.

The bishops have been sorely stung by the large number of Catholic politicians who publicly disagree with them on the question of abortion. Kissling said, "And, as is typical, they have chosen to make their first example a woman."

Though his authority is limited to his local diocese, Maher said his sanction will prevent Kissling from receiving communion "wherever she goes."

"We're doing this because the politicians have failed to recognize their obligation to bring their Catholic faith and morality into the public arena," he said Thursday.

Killea, a Democrat, is running against a Republican in a special election scheduled Dec. 5. Killea said she would continue going to Mass regularly, but would abide by Maher's order and not take communion.

Church ban doesn't deter politician

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An assemblywoman banned from receiving communion because of her public advocacy of abortion rights says she is troubled by the sanction but will not change her pro-choice position.

"I know that I was not in agreement with the church hierarchy, but I thought it all through a long time ago," assemblywoman Lucy Killea said Thursday. "I felt comfortable with it. Intellectually, spiritually and emotionally, that's where I wanted to be."

Bishop Leo T. Maher took the action Wednesday, one day after Killea began running a series of pro-choice television advertisements as part of her campaign for a state senate seat.

It is believed to be the first such sanction imposed on a Catholic elected official in the United States since a gathering of bishops last week in Baltimore agreed to intensify the church's anti-abortion stand, said Frances Kissling, who heads the Washington-based Catholics for a Free Choice.

Gray power
Nursing homes will be a boom industry of tomorrow. Americans are living longer and hospitals are discharging patients earlier. That translates into a need for more extended-care facilities. Regulatory agencies are going to have to respond with better oversight. A recent survey by the federal Health Care Financing Administration found that 43 percent of the nursing homes handling Medicare and Medicaid patients failed to meet national standards for food storage and preparation. Nearly 30 percent failed to administer drugs according to the doctors' orders. The increasingly well-organized and well-supplied nursing homes are not going to sit still for that kind of care.

Smokeout brings mixed results

By The Associated Press

Some smokers threw away their cigarettes, but others kept nicotine flowing in their veins Thursday as organizers of the 10th annual Great American Smokeout pressed Americans to kick the habit.

Newborns in New Jersey were given "I'm a born non-smoker" T-shirts; a national chain of restaurants offered "cold turkey" sandwiches for a half-price; and a hospital in Maine gave out carrot sticks and gum to relieve the craving to light up.

The American Cancer Society, the Smokeout sponsor, said it hoped that one-fifth of the country's 50 million smokers would give up smoking for at least 24 hours, and that many of them would do for good.

"The more times you attempt to quit, the more likely you are to be successful," said Kenneth A. Perkins, an assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Pittsburgh who endorsed the Smokeout concept.

Darlene Grinolds, 58, of Butte, Mont., said she began smoking when she was 9. Last year, she stayed off cigarettes for four months after the Smokeout.

"I've never smoked since," she said. "I believe a vice president should work that, it's first and foremost, with complete loyalty to the president, for the advancement of his agenda, in his interest, and that's what I'm doing."

That job description does not preclude a more aggressive effort to strengthen his own standing and improve his image. Quayle and his allies have maintained that his image problem stems largely from memories of the 1988 campaign, but it has been over a year now and the numbers aren't any better.

As a result, some Quayle advisers warn him to raise his television profile, appearing more frequently on the talk and question-and-answer programs. Those appearances have been held to a handful during the first year of the administration. There may be more in the months ahead. And there certainly will be more political outings in 1990, with 24 senators, 36 governors and the House of Representatives all up for election. Campaigning for party candidates is a traditional assignment for vice presidents.

That means the voters will be seeing more of Quayle. They'll know him better; his challenge is to convince them to like him better.

Tax credit called aid to handicapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — A separate House bill that would give small businesses a tax credit to make special accommodations to the handicapped would create an "undue hardship." The business lobby contends that the "undue hardship" provision, though defined in the statute, will leave businesses at the mercy of an individual judge's whims.

Businesses already are eligible for a $35,000 deduction for the removal of architectural and transportation barriers, but the sponsors of the tax bill say that can't help the smaller businesses.

The deduction would be cut to $20,000 under the Milums-Upton bill, and the credit would be expanded to include special services, such as deaf interpreters or equipment modifications.

The one-time credit would be limited to businesses with fewer than 15 employees and with annual gross receipts of less than $1 million.

Congress shelves abortion until sometime next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has ended its primary battle over abortion for this year, but both sides are bracing for a renewed next year of the fight over liberalizing federal financing of abortions for poor women who are victims of rape or incest.

Abortion-rights supporters in the Senate on Thursday ended their efforts to overturn President Bush's veto of a bill that would extend Medicaid abortions to women who are victims of rape or incest.

The Senate followed the House by a day in acceding to Bush's demands when he vetoed a bill that would have permitted federal money to pay for Medicaid abortions for poor women who are victims of rape or incest.

Both chambers gave voice-over approval to a $157 billion spending bill for labor, health and education programs that included language insisted upon by Bush. It continues the prohibition on federally financed abortions in all cases except when the life of the mother is in danger and she cannot afford to pay for the abortion.

Bush last month vetoed a similar version of the appropriations bill that contained a provision expanding the abortion financing to cover rape and incest. The House failed by 51 votes to override.

Although the rape-and-incest provision would cover a relatively small number of additional abortions, by some estimates, the issue became a symbolic battleground in the political struggle over abortion. That struggle has taken on increased intensity since the Supreme Court last summer gave states more leeway to regulate abortions, and proponents of abortion rights won key elections last week in Virginia and New Jersey.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional leaders are postponing sending President Bush a child care bill because they couldn't resolve a dispute among members of their own party on how to provide the new aid.

The child care legislation will be a priority matter early in the next session, House Speaker Thomas S. Foley told reporters Thursday. "I am absolutely confident that a historic child care bill will be passed, sent to the president and signed into law this Congress."

House and Senate negotiators from relevant education committees reached agreement last week on a version of the bill that would have increased direct subsidies to low-income new programs by $1.2 billion in fiscal 1990.

In response, Foley had put the bill on a fast track in the hope of getting a compromise package approved by both the House and Senate and to Bush's desk before Congress adjourns for the year-end recess.

But Reps. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., and George Miller, D-Calif., said they still intended to press for their own measure with less money but better able to withstand future whims of deficit-conscious lawmakers, said they still intended to press for their own measure if the bill came to a floor vote.

Instead of establishing new school-based programs, their bill would increase child care subsidies by $200 million in 1990 and $1.8 billion over the next five years through an expansion of block grant entitlements to states that require no annual appropriations.

No one knows exactly how much of the current block grants are devoted to child care, but estimates range from $200 million to slightly under $1 billion a year.

Brownouts one more hassle in Manila

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A radio announcer chattered away until he was cut off in mid-sentence. A few moments later, he was back on the air with an apology: "Sorry folks, it's a brownout."

Power outages are nothing new for Manila's 7 million inhabitants. But since October, they have occurred daily, frazzling the nerves of residents, who also must cope with rising crime, horrific traffic and uncollected garbage.

Some officials and newspaper commentators say the brownouts also are threatening the economy. When the electricity problem worsened last month, President Corason Aquino ordered the state-run National Power Corp. to end the brownouts.

Funding for child care sinks hopes for passage this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional leaders are postponing sending President Bush a child care bill because they couldn't resolve a dispute among members of their own party on how to provide the new aid.

The child care legislation will be a priority matter early in the next session, House Speaker Thomas S. Foley told reporters Thursday. "I am absolutely confident that a historic child care bill will be passed, sent to the president and signed into law this Congress."

House and Senate negotiators from relevant education committees reached agreement last week on a version of the bill that would have increased direct subsidies to low-income new programs by $1.2 billion in fiscal 1990.

In response, Foley had put the bill on a fast track in the hope of getting a compromise package approved by both the House and Senate and to Bush's desk before Congress adjourns for the year-end recess.

But Reps. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., and George Miller, D-Calif., said they still intended to press for their own measure with less money but better able to withstand future whims of deficit-conscious lawmakers, said they still intended to press for their own measure if the bill came to a floor vote.

Instead of establishing new school-based programs, their bill would increase child care subsidies by $200 million in 1990 and $1.8 billion over the next five years through an expansion of block grant entitlements to states that require no annual appropriations.

No one knows exactly how much of the current block grants are devoted to child care, but estimates range from $200 million to slightly under $1 billion a year.

Three who kissed and told

Do Americans renounce their respect for George Washington and Thomas Jefferson as two of our greatest presidents because they owned slaves? Does the world think less of a magnificent president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and a great World War II general, Dwight D. Eisenhower, because both had mistresses?

Republicans who know him best say Lukens was never a heavy hitter, even during his time in Congress. He was concerned about communism and other foreign issues, but he was not a political star. Frank still enjoys some support from Democrats, but Lukens does not have the backing of the GOP in his hour of crisis.

King's grandeur as a transfiguring moral revolutionary is secure forever. I recall a birthday party that King gave for me in Adam Clayton Powell Jr.'s office in July 1966. Abernathy got so drunk on champagne that he passed out on Adam's light blue couch. Later, King lovingly kidded him.

Only one thing intrigues me about Abernathy's book title. In the hymn, "Joshua fit the battle of Jericho ... and the walls came tumbling down." Is Abernathy contending that he is Joshua to King's Moses?

Pay

self no raise but let the House and others get theirs. Or it could buy into the whole deal, kill it or choose something in between.

"The leadership is pushing hard for us to adopt the House package," Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said Thursday. "Apparently, it must be a close vote."

Mitchell has said he favored the House plan but speculated the Senate might go for a more modest pay package and a more gradual elimination of honoraria.

Senators now may keep speaking fees equal to 40 percent of their salaries, compared to 30 percent in the House, so the House plan actually could be an income cut for some senators. The Senate also has its own ideas about ethics rules, including restrictions on lobbying after lawmakers leave office.

The House plan would raise salaries in a series of steps, for a total minimum 35 percent raise by Jan. 1, 1991. On top of that, lawmakers and other officials would get whatever cost-of-living adjustment is given to rank-and-file government workers on that date. President Bush, eager to raise pay for his top staff and the federal judges, has already said he'd sign the bill.

House members who took the politically unpopular plunge and voted for the pay raise Thursday were watching the Senate's moves carefully, for fear the other chamber would kill it.

"The Senate in the next 24 hours needs to think about what is politically possible," said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., co-chairman of the task force that drafted the House plan.

Another House Democrat said the pressure his chamber would put on the Senate would approach "white heat."

In a similar situation seven years ago, the Senate let the House scoot ahead in salary. But senators reconsidered six months later and gave themselves a catch-up raise.

Besides the ban on keeping honoraria, the House bill includes a broad range of changes in its rules and in federal ethics law.

Outside earnings besides honoraria would be limited to 15 percent of salary and severely restricted in scope. Rules governing the acceptance of gifts and travel from people outside the immediate family would be tightened.

The rules also would require more detailed disclosure of personal assets. The most recent congressional pay raise was in 1987, and it hasn't been raised since then primarily because members fear the political consequences.

Boles and Haugh would gain in educational terms only, according to the agreement. The proposal was drafted on Oct. 20.

Asked why Trump would want a can of tomato juice, Haugh said he learned in reading Trump's book that the real estate mogul drinks one can of tomato juice for lunch each day.

Persistence was not necessary to receive a letter from Author Harvey Mackay, who wrote the book "Swim with the Sharks Without Being Eaten Alive." Haugh sent a letter to Mackay in September, telling him how impressed he was with his book, and Mackay responded with a personal letter less than a month later.

"Of all the thousands of pieces of mail that come across my desk, none touched me any deeper than yours," Mackay wrote.

The letter also answered specific questions Haugh had written in his letter. Mackay is the president of Mackay Envelopes Co.

Bohman said she and other teachers at the school have a lot of respect for the two students, and Boles said some teachers have come to them for business advice.

Besides corresponding with Trump and Mackay, Boles and Haugh are also conducting a survey at all of the town's schools, asking the students what three items they want the most for Christmas so they will know which companies could go up in value during the Christmas shopping season, traditionally beginning the day after Thanksgiving. Boles said he knows that they are using information from other people for business gain, but added that as long as people don't get hurt, such exploitation is harmless.

Bohman has notable quotations from business-related people on her classroom walls, and one such quotation, concluding Mackay's letter to Haugh, is a source for guidance from the young entrepreneur: "Love what you do, do what you love, deliver more than you promise."

Colt reports it has a buyer

HARTFORD (AP) — Colt Industries Inc. looked in a bitter strike with unionized workers at its firearms division for more than three years, announced today that it is near an agreement to sell the division, a deal that could put 950 replacement workers out of work in January.

Colt Industries, based in New York, didn't reveal the name of the prospective buyer and didn't reveal financial details of the deal. But it appeared possible the new owners might be the striking workers.

In addition, MARC, an organization for retarded people, will staff a "goodies" booth throughout the show. Brownies, cookies, pastries, hamburgers, hot dogs, potato chips, soda and coffee will be sold.

"We are looking forward to having a lot of fun," said Laurie Prysok, executive director of MARC. "We hope the crowds are going to be big."

The money MARC raises at the booth will go toward the lease of a new bakery van to deliver products made by the organization, she said. MARC operates the MARC Bakery on Main Street.

Bulgarians oust Zhikov from head of state post

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Parliament ousted former Communist leader Todor Zhikov as head of state after one lawmaker accused him of amassing a personal fortune while the nation's economy deteriorated.

Parliament replaced Zhikov with Petar Mladenov, the new party leader. The lawmakers removed article 273 of the penal code that was used to punish people charged with slandering the state or the Communist Party. The move could lead to greater freedom for independent groups calling for reforms.

The National Assembly also created an Ecology Ministry to address environmental concerns raised by a popular grassroots movement, Ecologist.

The parliamentary session continued the dizzy pace of reform that began in Bulgaria on Nov. 10 when the hard-line Zhikov was suddenly ousted as party leader after a 35-year tenure and replaced by Mladenov.

Today's moves, and the harsh criticism of Zhikov, came during the first live television broadcast of a Parliament session in the history of Bulgaria.

On Thursday, the Communist Party's Central Committee ousted three hard-line Politburo members and promoted four liberal Communists. The new members are expected to back Mladenov's reforms.

Halvorsen withdraws from field

Disagreement between agent, race organizers is cited

By Jim Tierney
Manchester Herald

The 53rd running of the Manchester Thanksgiving Day Road Race suffered a major blow on Thursday. One of the odds-on favorites to seize the Road Race crown, John Halvorsen of Lapland, Norway, withdrew due to a disagreement between his agent Bob Wood and race organizers.

Halvorsen, 23, is the hottest road racer in the country, but is opting to run the TAC Cross Country Nationals two days after Thanksgiving in San Francisco. Halvorsen was coming off a win in the Old Reliable 10K in Raleigh, N.C.

Apparently, the disagreement arose concerning the effort Halvorsen would put forth in Manchester, since he was and is planning to run the TAC race two days later. When that could not be resolved, Halvorsen withdrew.

Halvorsen has kept up a rigorous race schedule for the past few months, competing at least once every two weeks.

UConn women's basketball looking for some respect

By Len Auster

STORRS — You'd think the players that were responsible for the University of Connecticut women's basketball team having its best season ever at 24-6, winning the school's first Big East Conference title, and earning the school's first NCAA Tournament bid would earn a smidgen of respect.

Apparently not, if you ask Lady Husky head coach Geno Auriemma. "It's disheartening to us that we don't get respect on an individual level," Pattison, who earned all-Big East rookie team honors a year ago, adds.

Co-captain Kris Lamb, one of three seniors on the squad, believes Connecticut will answer the challenge of being the hunted as defending champ rather than the hunter.

"Last year people weren't expecting a lot and we did a lot. This year it's the other way around. But I feel we will respond," Lamb said. "We still don't have some people's respect."

Lamb doesn't see "UConn living on its past success." At times it is natural that you come off a season like we had and be a little overconfident. But I don't think that will effect us."

Pattison agrees. "We'll be the hunted (as defending champ). But it comes with the territory. Last year we just went out and played. This year people will expect a lot of us. We will rest on our laurels? No, not at all. I don't think we'd do it, or be (Auriemma) would let us."

UConn opens its 1989-90 season on the road at the four-team Amarna Iowa Hawkeye Classic on Nov. 25. The Lady Huskies take on fellow easterner Penn State with host Iowa against Howard in the other bracket. The winners and rest of the people in the league. It makes you wonder, "It is a contradiction," agrees Husky sophomore forward Meghan Pattison.

Cash payoffs were normal report says

By Dean Golembeski
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Illegal payments to college football players are widespread, and many former players think the system should be changed to provide greater financial assistance to student athletes, according to a study by a University of New Haven professor.

The study of active and retired National Football League players said that 31 percent accepted illegal payments while in college, and 53 percent saw nothing wrong with breaking NCAA rules to earn extra cash.

"For me, the results said that it's far more than what they say at the NCAA. That it's not just a renegade institution or the deviant player. There's a substantial underground economy that's likely to be unstoppable," said Allen L. Sack, a UNH sociology professor who conducted the study.

"I think the problem with the system is that it's humiliating for athletes and degrading for higher education," Sack Thursday said in a telephone interview.

The study found cheating to be most pervasive in the major conferences, particularly in the Southeast Conference, where 67 percent of the league's former players admitted to taking under-the-table payments to augment their scholarships.

Seventy-eight percent of the 1,182 active and retired National Football League players said the financial aid provided student-athletes under existing National Collegiate Athletic Association rules is inadequate.

David Berke, NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement, said he hadn't seen the study. He said he expected that someone at the NCAA would review the findings.

"I don't know how to react for sure," he said. Sack said the "vast majority" of illegal payments were made by alumni, although coaches also reportedly made improper payments. Payments were made by sliding cash under dormitory doors, or in congratulatory handshakes after games, Sack said. One player said he typically found cash in his helmet every Monday before practice.

An important source of illegal cash is derived from the sale of complimentary tickets each player receives. Sack said one player admitted getting as much as $1,000 per ticket. NCAA rules prohibit players from selling the tickets.

Most players who admitted to accepting illegal payments said they received a total of about $1,000 over four years. In addition to that, they accepted free meals and clothing, Sack said. A new study was a popular payoff among older players, the study found.

The player, however, said he received a total of $80,000 in illegal payments over his college career. Another said he was offered part interest in an oil well but refused, Sack said.

Under NCAA rules, a player can only be awarded enough scholarship to cover room, board and food. A college player who accepts payment to play can be forced to forfeit his scholarship, and his school also could be subject to disciplinary action by the NCAA.

Sack worked closely with the NFL Players Association in conducting the study. The players group provided him with the names and salaries of 3,500 former and current NFL players, each of whom was mailed a questionnaire. The respondents ranged in age from 22 to 83.

The players association agreed to participate because it wanted to learn how widespread the use of agents was among college athletes. Sack said 17 percent of those surveyed said they had been approached by agents while undergraduates, which is a violation of NCAA rules.

Sack said the responses and his own research indicate the illegal payments are nothing new and, in fact, have been going on for about 100 years. To support his claim, Sack's study quotes a letter written in 1902 by a dean at Yale University to legendary football coach Walter Camp discussing under-the-table payments.

In the Southeast Conference, the study found, there was an explosion of illegal payments beginning in 1965. The study found that 83 percent of former SEC players knew of athletes who took illegal payments, while 67 percent of the former SEC players admitted to receiving payments, Sack said.

But among SEC players older than 40, 53 percent said they knew of athletes who accepted illegal payments, while only 38 percent admitted to taking any money. Sack said.

"Something started happening in 1965. Maybe it was TV or aggressive recruiting. I don't totally understand it myself," Sack said.

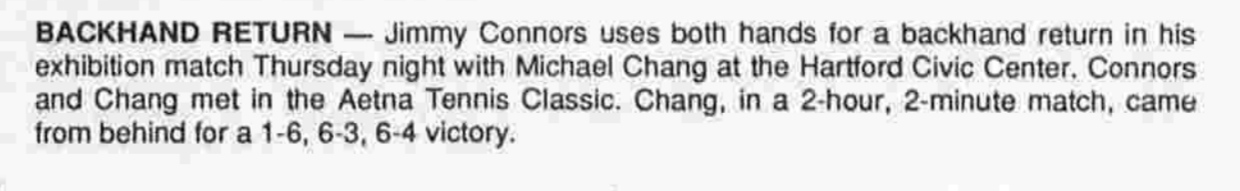

SEC Associate Commissioner Mark Womac said he had "glanced" at the study and doesn't believe it provides an accurate reflection of illegal payments in his conference. He contended the percentages are "way too high."

Womac noted that only 115 former SEC players responded, while a total of about 2,500 football players have played in the SEC since 1965 alone. The league has been in existence since 1932-33.

"The database is probably not a good indication of the college scene," Womac said in a telephone interview from his office in Birmingham, Ala.

He said the study also could be skewed because it focuses only on "superstar" college athletes, who he said are typically going to the NFL. He said these top players are the most likely of all college athletes to cheat.

The practice of accepting illegal payments has remained most consistent over the years in the Big Ten and Pac 10 conferences, Sack said.

Late explosion propels Bruins past Canadiens

By The Associated Press

The Boston Bruins were playing as well as they can — 50 hours after a 57:02-minute, the Montreal Canadiens were winning 2-0 at Boston Garden. The Bruins weren't doing badly. They just weren't scoring.

Then, with a change in strategy, the Bruins did in 57 seconds what they couldn't in the rest of Thursday night's game. They scored three times to win 3-2.

"It was tough sitting and watching us down 2-0 when we were playing so well," Bruins coach Mike Milbury said. "Against Montreal, you're not going to have your defensemen roam wild, but we had to open the gate a bit for them at that point."

So Milbury called a timeout and instructed Ray Bourque, Glen Wesley and his other defenders to get the attack going.

"On the timeout we went to the bench and told our defensemen to just go for it," Bourque said. "The coach wanted us to try to create things. We did that and it paid off."

It paid off when Bourque scored at 17:55, beating Patrick Roy on a slap shot from the left faceoff circle just 19 seconds later. Cam Neely just 12 seconds later, and he took a pass from Andy Brickley and beat Roy with a 10-footer.

"After we got the first goal we kept working," Bourque said. "We probably didn't think we were going to score three, but it happened that way."

The winner came on Wesley's short shot after he stole the puck just inside the blue line.

(Montreal defenseman Craig Ludwig fell down," Bourque said. "But we won 3-2 and it paid off."

Shayne Corson and Brent Gilchrist scored third-period goals before the Bruins came back.

"Panje set in," Canadiens coach Pat Burns said. "Everybody started running around all over the place. Up until then we played a good game and could very easily have picked up two points."

Also picking up two points Thursday was St. Louis, a 7-2 winner over Detroit, Pittsburgh, which took Quebec 8-2; the New York Islanders, who downed Toronto 6-2; Vancouver, which defeated Chicago 4-3; and Philadelphia, 6-3 victors against Minnesota. Calgary and Buffalo tied 4-4.

Blues 7, Red Wings 2: At Detroit, the Red Wings continued their horrid play, helped by a player they did not want to trade to St. Louis in the offseason.

Bass headed to San Francisco

By Dave Carpenter
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — It took less than three weeks of the offseason for the San Francisco Giants to fill their only lineup hole going into 1990.

General Manager Al Rosen can acquire a healthy pitcher or two in the time it took him to land Kevin Bass to play right field, he'll be expected to take the rest of the winter off.

Bass, the first of the 90 free agents to switch teams, ended a seven-year stay with Houston on Monday by signing his three-year contract containing $5.25 million in salary and the no-trade clause the Astros refused to give him.

A switch-hitter with good speed, power and a 275 career average, he's already been touted by Rosen and Manager Roger Craig plans to bat him second after Brett Butler and just ahead of the National League's most potent 3-5 combination: Will Clark, Kevin Mitchell and Matt Williams. That should add considerable offense to a lineup that finished second in the league with 699 runs.

"This is pretty much like a dream come true for me," said Bass, 30, who roomed for the Giants while growing up in nearby Redwood City. "I had to jump at the opportunity. ... I looked at that ballclub and said, 'Golly, if these guys can't win, who can?'"

Try NL West contenders San Diego, Los Angeles or Cincinnati, all of whom could take deeper pitching staffs into next season if Rosen doesn't do something to counter the Giants' two-year cycle of pitching injuries.

"We know there are other things we'd like to try to accomplish," Rosen said during a telephone conference call with Bass at Candlestick

Measles cancel finale

By Ed Golden
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Northeastern coach Paul Pawlak took one look at his depth chart and knew he had a problem.

Pawlak's football team would be missing 21 players, including 10 starters, for the season finale at James Madison because blood tests showed they had not developed antibodies against a measles virus that has hit the campus. So he and athletic director Irwin Cohen decided against making the trip to Harrisonburg, Va.

"It's a safety issue and that transcends all bounds of how important it is to play the game itself," Cohen said. "Football is a contact sport, a very difficult sport. It's one thing to lose, since that goes with the territory. But we would have had to put people in a position where they didn't really expect to be and that's the bottom line."

None of the players was actually sick, but state health authorities wouldn't let them travel outside Massachusetts. And Pawlak would have had to rely on inexperienced players at key positions.

"My main concern was serious injury and I didn't want to subject the kids to a situation they weren't properly prepared for. It's just not worth it," Pawlak said.

Northeastern officials had tried to convince James Madison without success, to play the game in Boston. The Ducks wanted to play the game in Harrisonburg, Va., since it was the final game for seniors and a special day for members of the school's band.

Worst is first for Colorado

By The Associated Press

Before the second-ranked Colorado Buffaloes can play the best college football program in the country, they must get past the worst.

The Buffs (10-0) appear to be a lock for a possible Orange Bowl national championship game with No. 1 Notre Dame, whose winning percentage of .759 (681-202-40) is the total yardage, needing just 90 yards to pass Harold Jackson, who led the Buffs in 1964 among the nation's 106 Division I-A teams in rushing defense, yielding 278.8 yards a game.

"It's true that we have better players than Kansas State," McCartney said. "But I think we realize that the Buffs are several years away from being a top team."

Notre Dame takes a school-record 22-game winning streak to Penn State (6-2-1). There have only been four longer major-league streaks in the last two decades. Next on Notre Dame's list is Nebraska's 23-game skid in 1970-71.

Coach Lou Holtz struggled for nice things to say about Navy and SMU. Notre Dame's last two opponents. It's easier this week since Penn State is the stingiest team in the nation, yielding just 9.2 points a game. Notre Dame, however, is a 9 1/2-point favorite.

"We went up to Penn State two years ago in much the same situation and we lost a close one (21-20)," Holtz said. "Penn State is No. 1 in the country in scoring defense. No one has scored more than two touchdowns against them, so we'll have to play a great game to win."

Three hoop players arrested

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Three Northern Arizona basketball players have been arrested and accused of taking part in a scheme to use stolen checks and a stolen credit card.

Arrested Wednesday were David Truett, 21, a 6-foot-4 junior guard from New York City; Edward Scott, 19, a 6-5 freshman forward from Inglewood, Calif.; and Corey Rogers, 18, a 6-3 freshman from La Puente, Calif.

Macias said Truett was released after being booked for investigation of attempted theft and possession of stolen property and Rogers was released after being booked for investigation of fraudulent schemes.

Scott was booked for investigation of fraudulent schemes and burglary and remained jailed.

Manley tests positive for drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defensive end Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins has tested positive for illegal drugs for a third time and faces a lifetime suspension from the NFL, according to a published report.

Today's editions of The Washington Post report that Manley was told by team doctors Thursday afternoon that he tested positive for cocaine about two weeks ago.

Manley and his attorney, Bob Woolf, were to meet with NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue Thursday afternoon in the nation's capital, league spokesman Joe Browne said.

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The Canadian promoter of Mike Tyson's scheduled heavyweight title fight against Donovan "Razor" Ruddock said Thursday that the fight has been postponed indefinitely.

Garry Stevenson said Home Box Office, which televises Tyson's fights, said it could not proceed with a Jan. 20 date for the bout because of a primitive deadline for its January program schedule.

UConn signs Shaun Ellison

FARMINGTON — The University of Connecticut men's basketball team didn't go through the early signing period without landing a recruit as Shaun Ellison, a 6-foot-8 center out of Farmington High School, signed his signed letter-of-intent to attend UConn on a basketball scholarship.

UConn coach Jim Calhoun said Ellison, who averaged 22 points, 14 rebounds and seven blocked shots as a junior, would probably play at power forward for the Huskies.

Two other possible recruits, forward Cenzo Martin of East St. Louis, Ill., and center Brian Hoppel of Oklahoma City, have put off their decisions until April. Martin is deciding between UConn, Illinois, Purdue and San Francisco and Hoppel is deciding between UConn, Ohio State, Oklahoma and Louisville.

Gorman is not optimistic

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox have made their offer to keep first baseman Nick Esasky on the team, but Lou Gorman, general manager of the American League club, wasn't optimistic.

Esasky is a free agent, and the Atlanta Braves made him an offer earlier.

Patriots lose Stanley Morgan

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Wide receiver Stanley Morgan, a 13-year veteran with the New England Patriots, suffered a fractured right fibula in practice Thursday and will be sidelined for the remainder of the 1989 NFL season.

A club spokesman said that Morgan suffered the broken leg while running hard on a rain-slicked field 20 minutes into the practice at Sullivan Stadium, where the Patriots meet the Buffalo Bills Sunday.

Morgan, 34, is the NFL's sixth leading receiver in total yardage, needing just 90 yards to pass Harold Jackson, who led the Buffs in 1964 among the nation's 106 Division I-A teams in rushing defense, yielding 278.8 yards a game.

"It's true that we have better players than Kansas State," McCartney said. "But I think we realize that the Buffs are several years away from being a top team."

Huskies after postseason playoff berth

By The Associated Press

Conference titles, a playoff berth, a part in history and pride are on the line Saturday when all but one of New England's college teams wind up their football seasons.

Yankee Conference rivals New Hampshire, Connecticut and Villanova fight for what probably will be a single at-large berth in the national Division I-AA playoffs.

Yale, assured of a share of the Ivy league championship, can win it outright with a victory over Harvard in the 106th meeting of their historic rivalry.

Holy Cross is in the same situation. By beating Bucknell, it would win the Colonial League crown by itself. By losing, the Crusaders would share it with Bucknell.

The Yankee Conference battle is the most competitive. Maine, its regular season over, has won the conference title with a 6-2 league record. New Hampshire, Connecticut and Villanova all can be 6-2, but Maine would get the title and the automatic playoff berth because it beat each of them.

Eight at-large berths are up for grabs in the 16-team Division I-AA playoffs. The field is expected to be announced Sunday.

New Hampshire, 7-2 overall after winning its last seven games, is at Massachusetts, 4-5-1 and 2-5. Massachusetts has won 10 of the last 12 matchups, including a 64-42 decision last year, but New Hampshire hasn't allowed a touchdown in the last eight quarters this year.

"We thought they rubbed it in a bit," New Hampshire cornerback Tim Byrne said. "Hopefully, this year will be different."

Connecticut, 7-3 and 5-2, plays at Rhode Island, 3-7 and 1-6. A school record-tying eighth victory may not be enough to get the Huskies into the playoffs.

"We beat UNH but Villanova beat us," Connecticut coach Tom Jackson said. "I really have no idea how the committee would go if all three of us win on Saturday."

Villanova, 7-3 and 5-2, is home against Boston University, 4-6 and 4-3 after being knocked out of the playoff chase in a 38-30 loss to Connecticut last Saturday.

THE HIGH SCHOOL WORLD

Volume LIV, No. 3 Compiled by the students of MHS, published by the Manchester Herald

New band teacher sparks enthusiasm

By Darryl Berenson. Walking down one of MHS's halls near the band room, you hear a blast of what sounds to be a recording of Beethoven or Bach. As you peer into the band room, you are happily surprised. It's not a record. The vibrant sound you hear is MHS's concert band. Looking deeper into the room, you see an unfamiliar face conducting the class.

Loss of credit is serious issue

By Brenda Rockwood. Loss of credit is a major issue at Manchester High School. Last year, in one quarter, 333 students lost credit in some area. After appealing, only eighteen percent (123) received their credit back. Why does the school have such a high rate of red-credit?

MHS teacher tunes into writing channel

By Harry Harris. Having elementary students read and find errors in the writing of a high school student seems a bit unusual. But thanks to Mrs. Karen Waggoner, a Manchester High School English teacher, it is possible. Waggoner, along with other English teachers at Manchester High and Nahant Hale, a local elementary school, decided to include live television broadcasting as part of classroom activities.

'Brodie' play continues

By Lynne Duffield. The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie continues on the Bailey Auditorium stage. The performance will run through Saturday. The drama is put on by the Sock-N-Book Drama Club of Manchester High School.

Class of 1930 reunites

By Nicole Easton. The date was 1930; the place was Manchester High School. The depression had begun a year earlier and Manchester High School was found where the Bennett Apartments are now. Students walked — some times miles — to school each morning.
