Tax refunds due 11 people

By Dianna M. Talbot
Manchester Herald

The federal government wants to find 11 former or present Manchester residents in order to give them their individual income tax returns, a spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service said Friday.

Most of the checks are for 1988 returns that the post office sent back marked as undeliverable due to an incorrect address, illegible handwriting or failure to leave a forwarding address, said spokesman Michael L. Dobzinski, from his Hartford office. The values of the returns range from $7.81 to $953, he said.

"We do this every year," Dobzinski said, referring to the government's effort to locate these taxpayers.

The following taxpayers, or anyone with information regarding their whereabouts, should call 1-800-424-1040, he said. They are:

- James R. and Julia M. Anderson, John D. and Yvette Claffagione, Robert L. Hersey, Philomena Lapointe, David LeClair, Paul R. Marella, Richard J. Sepe, Anthony L. Tourville, James C. Tucker, Marilyn P. Van-Beveren and Christopher J. Walsh.

Almost 1.1 million Connecticut taxpayers received 1988 tax returns totaling $1.15 billion, with an average taxpayer refund of $1,055, Dobzinski said. Of these, over $460,000 of tax refund checks are waiting to be claimed by 875 Connecticut residents, he said. Values range from $1.60 to $10,550, he said.

Steps that taxpayers can take to insure prompt delivery of their refund checks, Dobzinski said, include:

- Use the peel-off label found in the tax package and make necessary changes right on the label. If you live in an apartment, or have your mail sent in "c/o" be sure to indicate that on the label.
- If you move, change your address with the U.S. Post-at Service right away. A change of address notification is good for 12 months.
- File your return electronically. Taxpayers who file electronically can elect to have their refunds deposited directly into their bank accounts thereby eliminating the possibility of a lost, stolen or undeliverable refund check.

SEARCHING — Soldiers search for leftist guerrillas in San Salvador Friday.

Religious workers, activists go into hiding after massacre

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Dozens of religious workers, labor activists, academics and political figures went into hiding Friday after the slaughter of six Jesuit priests and arrest of 12 Lutheran missionary workers.

"We have the justified fear that the assassinations are the beginning of a series of actions against unions, labor groups and politicians," said Fidel Chavez Mena, secretary-general of the opposition Christian Democratic Party.

The U.S. ambassador pressured the Salvadoran government to quickly conduct an investigation, and U.S. religious leaders condemned the slayings, blamed on right-wing forces, and called for a cutoff of U.S. aid to the government of President Alfredo Cristiani.

The government, which has received $3.5 billion in U.S. aid this decade, denied responsibility.

Fighting slackened Friday between troops and leftist rebels in parts of San Salvador, six days after insurgents launched the biggest offensive in the decade-old civil war. The troops did not appear to be making substantial progress in driving the guerrillas from the capital. An opposition politician said 300,000 residents of the capital had been cut off from food and water.

A British journalist, David Blundy, 44, of the newspaper the Sunday Correspondent, was fatally shot by a sniper during combat in northern San Salvador. Labor leaders, religious workers, academics and politicians fled to embassies or safehouses, fearing for their lives after the rector of one of the region's leading universities was killed in his home with five colleagues. Later Thursday, 12 Lutheran missionary workers, including four Americans, were arrested. The Lutherans were released unharmed Friday, the U.S. Embassy said.

Among those who fled to safe havens were Guillermo Ungo and Ruben Zamora, two of the nation's most prominent leftist politicians. Ungo was at the Venezuelan Embassy, Zamora at the Mexican Embassy.

The killings of Ignacio Ellacuria, rector of Jose Simcon Canas Central American University, vice-rector Ignacio Martin Baro, four other Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her 15-year-old daughter drew international condemnation.

"History repeats itself. They have not died, they are alive among the Salvadoran people. Martyrdom is not given to everybody, only to those whom God chooses," said Jose Maria Tojiera, the head of the Jesuit order for Central America, said at a memorial Mass for the priests.

U.N. report says torture on rise in El Salvador

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — El Salvador's government presided over a "resurgence of torture" this year that included sexual abuse and beatings of prisoners and summary executions of political opponents, according to a U.N. report released Friday.

The annual report by Jose Antonio Pastor Ridruebo, a special representative of the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, criticized both the government and leftist rebels for kidnappings and assassinations.

It was released a day after eight people, six of them Jesuit priests, were slain in San Salvador.

President Alfredo Cristiani, who took office June 1, said his government was not involved in the Jesuit slayings, which took place amid the biggest rebel offensive in the 10-year-old war.

The killings fit a pattern of rising repression, torture and political violence perpetrated by uniformed soldiers, as documented in Pastor's report.

OPENING NIGHT — Visitors tour opening night Friday at the Product Show being held at Hall Court off Hartford Road by the Manchester, East Hartford and South Windsor chambers of commerce.

Much to see at Product Show

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

Lynn Kessler's display of LGB trains going around a track at Product Show 1989 got off to a shaky start Friday. Many people were interested in the large-scale trains, but one of the trains kept stopping whenever it got to a certain point in the track.

Kessler, manager of the Train Exchange, said the problem was a short circuit in one of the tracks.

"Now I've to figure out what to do," he said.

The Train Exchange was one of 94 local businesses and organizations that assembled their wares at the Product Show at 15 Hall Court, hoping to increase sales or just gain recognition with the public.

Thomas "Terry" Werkhoven, the town's next likely mayor, cut the ribbon in the opening ceremony and two members of the Manchester Pipe Band helped kick off the weekend event.

About 100 people milled about the show just after it opened at 6 p.m. Organizers have said they expected more than 10,000 people to visit the show before it ends Sunday.

Charles Murdoch and Bruce Lazaroff, dressed in kilts, walked around the floor playing bagpipes for the first half hour.

Outside, a huge hot air balloon, courtesy of Re/Max real estate, and spotlights drew attention to the event sponsored by the Greater Manchester, South Windsor and East Hartford chambers of commerce.

Inside, a talking hydrant moved about a floor stopping children and adults to ask them if they had smoke alarms in their houses. The voice of the hydrant turned out to be that of a police officer speaking into a microphone from a short distance away.

A set of antique cars was one of the most interesting displays at the show, but none of the cars were for sale.

The Product Show was even the site of a reunion. Two cousins who had not seen each other since 1955 were reunited at the show. Ron Cavalier and his wife, LaVonne, of Minnesota, surprised Ron's cousin, Ida Fedora, the wife of Jay Fedora, when they called this morning and said they were in town.

Jay Fedora, who lives with his wife at 16 Ann St., told the couple to meet them at the show. Over the years, the cousins had been busy with their own lives and had never been able to meet up.

The Product Show will continue today from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are $3 at the door.

Minimum wage goes to $4.25 in April of 1991

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Friday signed a bill that will raise the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.25 an hour by the spring of 1991, formally accepting the compromise that ended a year of disagreement with congressional Democrats and organized labor.

Bush praised the measure, which he said would "protect jobs and put more money into the pockets of our workers."

At an Oval Office signing ceremony attended by congressional leaders and sponsors, Bush called the new act "a good example of what we can do in the future on other matters."

The increase, the first since 1981, would bring the wage to $4.25 an hour by April 1991, after going to an intermediate $3.80 on April 1, 1990.

The new law also includes a lower "training wage" for new workers who are teen-agers, a provision sought by Bush but initially opposed by congressional Democrats.

Bush in June vetoed a bill that would have increased the minimum wage to $4.55 over three years.

At an Oval Office signing ceremony attended by congressional leaders and sponsors, Bush called the new act "a good example of what we can do in the future on other matters."

"I have called for an increase in the minimum wage that would protect jobs and put more money into the pockets of our workers. In my view, this bill does exactly that. I'm pleased to sign it," Bush said.

However, Kennedy, D-Mass., who supported a higher minimum, said after the ceremony, "I think we've arrived on the 50-yard line on this."

"It's not as much as the working poor deserve, but it was a real compromise and it brought the president's position to one of not saying take it or leave it," Kennedy, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, told reporters.

Kennedy said a Democratic-led effort to boost the wage further in 1992, a presidential election year, was "a live option."

Under terms of the new law, young people 16-to-19 years old who have never worked could be paid $3.3585 percent of the minimum wage for 90 days. Employers with a training plan in place could pay the young workers a training rate for 90 days more.

The training wage can be paid to workers 16-19 years old for their first three months of work experience and for three additional months provided they are in certified training programs.

Flag burning at university sparks tension

By Larry Rosenthal
The Associated Press

MIDDLETOWN — A group of Wesleyan University students seeking to protest the new federal law against flag burning set fire to an American flag Friday in front of several angry veterans and hundreds of students. Some of the students cheered the protesters while others jeered them.

There were no arrests.

Most of those in the crowd were able only to see the puff of smoke that appeared when a city police officer on hand with an extinguisher put out the fire within seconds after five or six students ignited the flag using lighters.

A small number of students began singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the flag was burned.

A police officer filmed the entire act of defiance near the campus center, and the flag was removed as evidence. University officials, who had warned the students that police had been notified and that they could face charges, said city police would provide the FBI with the film and a report on the incident.

"As a university committed to the constitutional principles of free speech, Wesleyan respects this country's long tradition of challenging perceived infringements of the First Amendment. As an institution, however, Wesleyan is obliged to obey all the laws," the school said in a statement explaining its handling of demonstration and its decision to alert police.

The student protesters flew a second American flag behind them to show, they said, that their intent was not to be unparliamentary.

"We burn the flag not out of a disrespect for either it or our country, but out of a deep respect for and belief in the ideal on which this nation was founded. Our freedom of expression must be preserved..." said Richard Mandelbaum, 19, a freshman from East Windsor, N.J.

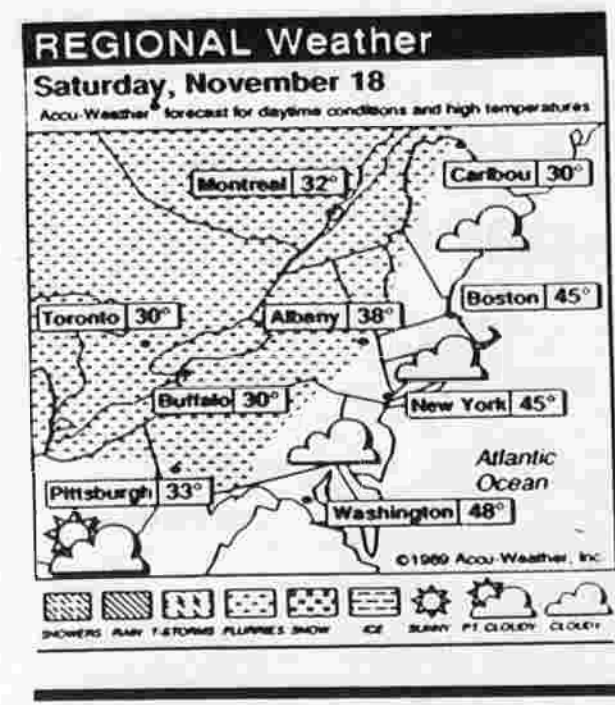

Before the demonstration even began, a Vietnam veteran who said he had spent 101 days as a prisoner of war worked his way to the front of the crowd and angrily lashed out at the students.

"You are a disgrace to this country. You're scumbags the whole bunch of you," said Sam Ranno of East Hartford, who was dressed in camouflage pants, a red sweatshirt proclaiming himself a Vietnam veteran and a U.S. Marine Corps cap. He also held a small American flag.

Ranno also got into an angry exchange with Dave Blalock, 39, of Highland Park, N.J., a member of a veterans group opposed to the law against flag burning. Blalock was invited by the students to join them at the demonstration, according to Mandelbaum.

"The flag stands for massive murder," said Blalock. Ranno yelled back, "Aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

House, with the Senate earning more at first and the House passing it later.

That would be unusual but not unprecedented. From Dec. 21, 1982 to July 1, 1983, the Senate was paid $60,662 and the House $69,800.

The final Senate action came only short while after the Senate, by a vote of 65-34, had killed a move by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., strip the pay raise provisions from the bill as passed by the House.

The House approved a bill Thursday under which congressional pay should soar from the current $89,500 to at least $120,800 and probably closer to $125,000 by Jan. 1, 1991. An initial cost-of-living raise of only 7.9 percent was in that version.

Mitchell and Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas argued through the day for the Senate to take the full raise.

"If the voters in our states look at what we do, if we work hard, have a complete disclosure of our assets, our speaking fees, then they can make the final judgment," Dole said.

"The need for Congress to come to grips with the ethics issue is evident. Public opinion demands it," said Mitchell.

Helms argued that the bill was being "rammed through." The public won't accept the argument that ethics can be reformed only if members get more pay, he said.

"Mr. Joe Lurchbucket is going to stand there and thumb his nose at any congressman who says that," he said.

Even as they were announcing their intentions on Friday afternoon to follow the House example, Senate leaders were still drafting their version of the legislation.

With President Bush's support, the House voted 252-174 on Thursday to raise its pay and that of other top government officials for the first time since early 1987.

Their pay would increase at least 35 percent in less than 14 months. If rank-and-file civil servants receive a cost-of-living adjustment for fiscal 1991, as they usually do, that would be added and the total raise would be more like 40 percent.

With the higher pay, lawmakers would be barred, beginning in 1991, from earning extra income by making speeches before interest groups. Other outside earned income generally would be limited to 15 percent of their salaries and public disclosure would be increased.

The Senate leaders planned to amend the ethics portion of the House plan to restrict post-employment lobbying by lawmakers and the president's top aides.

No lobbying anywhere in the legislative branch would be allowed for one year. Cabinet-level officials at the White House would also face a similar ban on lobbying in their branch of government, according to the provisions drafted by Sens. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and Warren Rudman, R-N.H.

Dole said the "revolving door" provision was especially important, and that senators should accept the plan even though the ban on speech fees would for many make a cut in their income. Senators are now allowed to add to their earnings by 40 percent with speaking fees.

"This isn't really a pay raise. ... It's sort of a transfer," he said. "Instead of coming from the private sector, from honoraria, it's going to be coming from the Treasury."

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., a leader of the successful fight against a proposed 51 percent congressional pay raise early this year, said eliminating the "lawdry" system of interest-group honoraria won his support for the new plan.

In addition to banning honoraria, the legislation would put new restrictions on gifts and free travel lawmakers can accept from people outside of family.

panies said it had advised employees that the company "is near agreement to sell the assets of the (firearm) division."

If the sale goes through, Colt said its two gun-manufacturing plants would stop production on or about Jan. 16, 1990. Effective with the halt of production, all workers will be dismissed, Colt said.

The company said, however, that the new owner plans to resume production at the plants and "many of the affected employees will be contacted by the prospective buyer during the next several weeks concerning the availability of jobs."

Jon Sandberg, a spokesman for Gov. William A. O'Neill, said the governor's office was following the developments. Sandberg said the governor was working to keep the Colt jobs in Connecticut, but declined further comment.

Kathleen Palm, an aide to state Treasurer Francis L. Borges, said Borges is involved in the negotiations, but had been advised by attorneys not to comment on the deal.

State Labor Commissioner Betty L. Tiant, former president of the Connecticut AFL-CIO, declined to comment on the pending sale, but said the department would be ready to help any displaced workers.

"We will meet as soon as possible with representatives of Colt Industries, as well as the potential buyer, to ascertain the number of workers who might be displaced by the developments," Tiant said in a prepared statement.

"Everything possible will be done by the Department of Labor to help workers and the potential buyer who has indicated a plan to maintain these historic manufacturing facilities in Hartford and the area," the commissioner continued.

Colt was founded in Hartford in 1836 by Samuel Colt, who invented the revolver. The firearms division is a leading manufacturer of handguns and rifles for military and commercial uses. Products include the well-known Colt 45 pistol, the King Cobra Magnum revolver, AR-15 sport rifle and the M-16 military rifle.

The company lost its contract with the Army to produce the M-16 last year. The loss of that contract, coupled with the strike, apparently figured in Colt's decision to sell the division, although company officials have denied that the lost contract was a factor.

Analysts also have estimated that Colt's debt at around $1.8 billion. The bulk of the debt was incurred when management mounted a $660 million leveraged buyout in 1988, analysts have said.

Improprieties found in UConn accounting

STORRS (AP) — University of Connecticut officials on Friday released a private audit of the school's fund-raising foundation showing that state money was improperly deposited into 48 of the foundation's 2,000 accounts.

The audit's findings mirrored an earlier report by state auditors, who disclosed that the university had improperly allowed state money meant for the university itself to find its way into the foundation, a private, non-profit entity affiliated with the university but not bound by state purchasing laws.

The private audit, commissioned by the university amid a controversy over the foundation, did not indicate that university or foundation employees converted state money for personal use.

UConn President John T. Casteen III said the audit "pointed to some major deficiencies in our procedures and also to failure to follow procedures that did exist," but he also defended the foundation and the university, pointing out that the foundation controversy has not resulted in any criminal charges.

The audit estimated that the university was deprived of about $53,000 in interest from the state money. Casteen said the foundation — which raises money to give to the university — has given an additional $53,000 to offset its improper holding of state money.

The audit, conducted by the Hartford accounting firm Post Marwick, also found that the foundation sometimes kept inadequate records of money spent from various accounts, and that the foundation used university facilities and resources to complete some research contracts, apparently without authority to do so.

The audit recommended that the foundation establish better record-keeping policies and that the university separate the foundation from the university development office, which also raises money for the school.

Casteen reported the audit's findings to state auditors and to state Attorney General Clarence Nardi Riddle in a letter dated Thursday. He described the audit as "the most exhaustive independent audit every undertaken with regard to transactions between a university and a private foundation."

The audit controversy surfaced a year ago, when the state auditors and the attorney general's office said they had uncovered widespread abuses involving the UConn Foundation and the UConn Health Center in Farmington.

Casteen's letter itself raised something of a controversy Friday. An early draft of the letter, in which Casteen aggressively defended the university and the foundation, was mistakenly sent to state auditors in Hartford, UConn spokesman Richard Veilleux said.

"He wrote it, and then he thought better of it," Veilleux said.

When the early draft was inadvertently sent to Hartford because of a clerical error, Casteen was "embarrassed and chagrined," Veilleux said.

In the second version of the letter, Casteen promised that the university's provost will conduct a follow-up investigation of the 48 accounts found to have held state money. The provost, he said, "will take appropriate action with regard to any university employees who may eventually be found to have violated university regulations."

The audit controversy surfaced a year ago, when the state auditors and the attorney general's office said they had uncovered widespread abuses involving the UConn Foundation and the UConn Health Center in Farmington.

Auditors reported that hundreds of thousands of dollars in research money that should have gone to state accounts at the university was instead deposited in foundation accounts.

Singing, music will highlight swearing in of town officials

By Rick Santos
Manchester Herald

Singing, music, and formality will highlight the swearing-in session and organizational meeting of the town's Board of Directors and Board of Education Monday night at the Manchester Senior Citizens' Center Auditorium.

The meeting, to begin at 8 p.m., will include the election of the board's chairman, presumed to be Theunis "Terry" Werkhoven, the leading vote-getter in contested races in the recent election. Also elected will be the board's vice chairman and the secretary.

Werkhoven said the GOP chose the senior center as the location of the event because it has more room for parking and a greater seating capacity than the Lincoln Center hearing room, where swearing-in sessions are traditionally held.

"We're hoping people will stay and talk with us," he said.

Republican Director-elect Wallace J. Irish Jr. said he thinks the location of the event in a hall that holds 150 to 160 is significant.

"We specifically asked that it be done this way to encourage the participation of the community," Irish said. "It is to meet our goals of more open government."

He said that Girl Scout Troop 639 of the Buckley School will be on hand to lead the Pledge of Allegiance and serve refreshments.

Retired Judge John F. Shea, a former Republican Town Committee Chairman, will administer the Oath of Office to the directors and the school board members.

A musical celebration will be performed by the Manchester High School Round Table Singers.

Police get a lesson in law on taping

By Judd Everhart
The Associated Press

ROCKY HILL — Chief State's Attorney John J. Kelly on Friday spelled out to municipal police chiefs the laws and court rulings governing the secret taping of calls in and out of police headquarters and barracks.

Kelly made it clear that calls between criminal suspects and their lawyers cannot be taped.

"Not only can they not be recorded, they cannot be overheard," Kelly told the police chiefs in a meeting at the state Veterans Home and Hospital. Once a suspect has reached his lawyer, Kelly said, "the full attorney-client privilege exists and conversations the two engage in are confidential."

The meeting was prompted by the uproar created when it was disclosed that the state police were routinely recording calls in and out of state police barracks, including those between suspects and their lawyers.

The controversy prompted Gov. William A. O'Neill to fire Lester J. Forst, the state police commander and public safety commissioner. Forst told the governor he had not been aware of the scope of the taping. Forst was replaced by Bernard R. Sullivan, former Hartford police chief.

O'Neill ordered an immediate halt to the taping of attorney-client calls. He also asked Kelly, Attorney General Clarence Nardi Riddle and the governor's legal counsel, Howard G. Rifkin, to examine state and municipal police taping policies.

In addition, the U.S. attorney and the FBI are investigating whether the state police violated anyone's rights. A federal grand jury has also been formed to investigate the taping.

After the state police taping were revealed, several municipal police departments around the state acknowledged that they had also taped attorney-client calls.

The state also faces a lawsuit filed by defense lawyers on behalf of prisoners whose cases may have been harmed by clandestine taping. Some of those prisoners could seek new trials or ask that their convictions be reversed.

Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey said after Friday's session that he had reviewed major cases in Hartford County and was confident that "we don't have any potential for problems."

Roy Bangham, chief of police in Farmington, said after the meeting that the session would help assure that municipal police departments have uniform policies.

Also Friday, the Journal Inquirer of Manchester quoted a high-ranking state police union official as saying that two state legislators had complained to the governor in 1987 about the elimination of beeps on phone lines and the fact that all lines in and out of barracks were being recorded.

However, neither legislator named — Reps. Jay B. Levin, D-New London, and Richard D. Tullisano, D-Rocky Hill — recalled the incident and Jon L. Sandberg, the governor's press secretary, said he was "confident those conversations did not take place."

Sullivan, the new commissioner, has moved swiftly by this week to reshape the top echelons of the state police.

He demoted Lt. Edward Dailey, a key member of Forst's inner circle, and transferred several other high-ranking state police officials Thursday.

Dailey, formerly the head of criminal investigations in the state's eastern district, was reassigned to head of the traffic division in the central district, a move viewed within the department as a demotion in prestige, if not rank.

Suspect's kin pleads innocent

HARTFORD — A 26-year-old Vernon man accused of impeding the investigation that eventually led to his brother being charged with the murder of a Manchester man pleaded not guilty in Superior Court Friday.

According to the affidavit for Anthony Giacomo's arrest, Manchester police contend that after he learned of his older brother John's possible involvement with the Aug. 23 murder, he went to John's Manchester apartment, helped him wash blood off his body, helped his brother pack clothes, and proceeded to drive him to Vernon, where he planned to let his brother stay at his apartment.

John Giacomo has been charged with the murder of 49-year-old James Paul in the victim's room of a 13-room boarding house at 144 Center St.

On the way to Anthony's home at 52 Mount Vernon Drive, he decided to phone his wife to inform her he was bringing his brother John home, police said. She protested, so he left his brother in Vernon.

When he was later questioned by police, Anthony Giacomo failed to provide them with the victim's name or location of the body, two facts he knew, according to the affidavit.

His brother John, 28, of 166-G Homestead St., Manchester, pleaded not guilty to murder charges in Superior Court last month. At the hearing, Anthony testified as a witness for the prosecution.

State's Attorney Edward Narus said after the hearing that the charges against Anthony Giacomo may be dropped or reduced if he cooperates fully.

Police have said the murder was drug-related.

SPOUSAL ABUSE

Women who seek to protect their children, themselves, and their home from an abusive spouse, have immediately help available from the local police and the local court. A man may not wrongfully "touch" his wife or his children. Unpermitted touching such as pushing, hitting, beating, sleeping rough with her in a violation of State law and may be complained about to the local police. Sometimes proof is needed. An attorney can help the wife at the early stage of a marital breakdown. If the husband is abusing the wife, she is well advised to seek an attorney who can discuss the several aspects of the matter, e.g., (1) documenting the improper conduct, (2) the police intervention, (3) help from the local court, (4) eviction of the husband, (5) safeguarding the children, (6) protection of the home, (7) financial support from the husband/ father and other necessary Court relief. HISTORICAL DRIVE
— Jay Savery, fundraising chairman for the Manchester Historical Society, and Dick Egan, president of the society, explain a drive to expand the society's operation at the Cheney Homestead Friday.

Society seeks funds to expand operation

By Nancy Foley
Manchester Herald

After 25 years as an all volunteer organization, it's time for the Manchester Historical Society to hire help, according to officials who unveiled a fund-raising drive Friday.

The organization hopes to raise enough money to start an endowment so it can hire a full or part-time director and secretarial staff, Jay Savery, chairman of the fund-raising committee, said at a press conference yesterday.

"It's remarkable that so many activities get done with volunteer help," Savery said.

The organization has about 650 members, and of these 30 can be counted on to volunteer their time on a regular basis, according to Geri Lemelin, treasurer.

Savery also said that the Historical Society needs to find more space for its museum collection, currently housed at 126 Cedar Street.

"We're really at the point where we've outgrown that building," he said.

The Historical Society has not set a definite figure needed to reach these goals yet, he said. The organization raises money through membership dues, donations and fund-raisers.

This year, the society will also place Historical Society cans throughout the town, for people to drop quarters into.

The activities planned for the coming year include an Open House on Dec. 3 at the Cheney Homestead, 106 Hartford Road, from noon to 4:30 p.m.

The Historical Society will also try to involve more Manchester residents in its House Marker Project, where houses 50 years old or older are given a marker that names the original owner and the date the house was built.

Doctor's infection prompts scare of measles at hospital

By Larry Rosenblatt
The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN — A resident physician at Yale-New Haven Hospital appears to have contracted measles, forcing the hospital to take steps to prevent the spread of the highly contagious virus, the hospital announced Friday.

The doctor who has apparently contracted measles was examined on Monday and left the hospital the same day, hospital officials said, adding they do not know where he may have acquired the virus.

Because measles is extremely contagious, hospital officials said they do not know the total number of people who may have been exposed.

Since the discovery, about 20 people, both staff members and patients, have been vaccinated or given other treatment to prevent against infection, said Dr. Walter Hierholzer, who is in charge of infection control at the hospital.

The doctor was not identified, but Hierholzer said it can be assumed that, as a member of the resident physician staff, he worked in many areas of the hospital.

Symptoms appear 10 to 14 days after exposure to the virus. The first symptom is usually a little dry cough, followed about three days later by a rash that goes on to cover the whole body, Hierholzer said.

A person can contract the virus simply by being in the same room as someone with measles who has coughed.

The presence of the virus can be confirmed only by conducting two tests, usually 10 days to two weeks apart, and looking for a rise in the antibodies that are peculiar to measles.

Dr. John E. Penn, the hospital's chief of staff, said all patients and employees who can be identified as having had direct contact with the doctor have been notified.

The Centers for Disease Control recommends that all people born after Jan. 1, 1957, be vaccinated for measles because early vaccines may not have been long-lasting.

Smith will run for governor

HARTFORD (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Reginald J. Smith, who earlier said he would decide by February whether to run for governor, now says he will announce his candidacy later this month.

"I've gotten such good encouragement in traveling around the state that I decided it was not in my best interest to wait any longer," Smith said Thursday.

Smith, a New Hartford resident in his fourth term as a lawmaker and third term as a top-ranking Senate leader, has considered running for governor since April, when he formed a fund-raising committee which allowed him to raise money for an unspecified office.

On Wednesday, he filed papers with the secretary of the state's office, stating that the money raised would be used for a 1990 gubernatorial bid.

Smith, 51, joins two other Republicans in the race: U.S. Rep. John G. Rowland of the 5th District and Fairfield banker Joseph McGee, who announced his candidacy on Tuesday. New Haven businessman Joel Schiavone, who has been raising money for a gubernatorial bid, is also expected to announce his candidacy.

All four are seeking to oppose Gov. William A. O'Neill, who is viewed as vulnerable after signing roughly $900 million in tax increases this year.

Smith, who was Senate majority leader in 1985 and 1986 and has been minority leader since 1987, said Thursday he would announce his candidacy for governor at a State Capitol news conference Nov. 30.

Thanksgiving help needed for families

By James F. Henry
Manchester Herald

Hundreds of individual citizens, several private and public schools, and 20 area churches have pledged support to the Manchester Area Conference of Churches 16th Annual Seasonal Sharing Appeal.

Volunteers have identified 361 families in Manchester and Bolton that meet the requirements to receive Thanksgiving baskets, containing "traditional fixings," as well as an entire week's supply of food for each household. Basket values are estimated between $35 and $150 depending on the size of the household.

Students from Manchester High School, Illing Junior High School, Bennett Junior High, St. James School, and others have been collecting food, according to MACC. In addition, 50 turkeys were donated by New England Mechanical Services. Any monetary donations will go toward purchasing meat, fruit and vegetables for the Thanksgiving baskets.

Anyone who still wants to "adopt" a family for a Thanksgiving basket, or to donate a turkey or fresh produce and baked goods, can call the MACC Department of Human Needs at 646-4114. Non-perishable foods for Thanksgiving will be left at the Seasonal Sharing Packing Center at Concordia Lutheran Church, at 40 Pitkin St. Perishable foods must be brought to Concordia by 8 a.m. on Tuesday.

Protesters seek an end to aid for El Salvador after slayings

WETHERSFIELD (AP) — While about 75 protesters mounted a sit-in protest Friday in U.S. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd's office to call for an end to U.S. aid to El Salvador, Connecticut religious leaders expressed outrage at the torture and killing of six Salvadoran Jesuit priests.

Dodd spent the day in Washington, where he called on the Salvadoran government to investigate the killings.

Dodd, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere Affairs, promised continued aid to the Salvadoran government provided that it conducts an investigation, allows the Red Cross to attend to those wounded, limits the use of helicopter gunships and other heavy weaponry, and pushes for a negotiated settlement in the country's long-running civil war.

About 75 protesters, most of them college students, gathered at 3 p.m. Friday in Dodd's Wethersfield office, said Lisa S. Heintz, a Dodd aide. Eleven protesters were arrested by Wethersfield police on criminal trespassing charges when they refused to leave the office after it closed at 6:25 p.m., Heintz and a Wethersfield police official said. Those arrested were released on written promises to appear, the police official said.

The Christian Conference of Connecticut issued a statement Friday signed by Hartford Archbishop John F. Whehan and the Rev. Stephen J. Sidorak Jr., the executive director of the CCC calling on Dodd to introduce legislation to cut off aid to El Salvador.

"We call upon President Bush and the U.S. Congress to enact an immediate suspension of all military aid to El Salvador and to demand a full, independent investigation into the tragic slayings of the six Jesuit priests, their cook and her daughter," CCC said in a prepared statement. "Moral outrage is appropriate. Action is now necessary."

Also Friday, Dodd's office was the site of press conference sponsored by "Neighbor to Neighbor," an interfaith religious group. About 30 clergy members, representing the state's major denominations, concluded a peaceful telephone conversation with Dodd, Heintz said.

Both the Salvadoran government and the military have denied involvement in the killings of the priests and two housekeepers.

Congress is poised to send an additional $85 million in military aid and $12 million for police training and equipment to El Salvador for the current fiscal year, but members of Congress are threatening future cuts unless the fighting stops and the murderers of six priests are brought to justice.

"The Jesuits of Norwich are deeply saddened by the massacre and mutilation of their brothers in El Salvador," said John Keegan, the Jesuit superior of Norwich in a written statement. "We are likewise deeply saddened and indeed outraged if the U.S. Government is in fact supporting with money and military aid a government which perpetrated or supported the murders of these servants of God."

In Washington, Dodd called on Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani to investigate and prosecute the Jesuit murder case and the recent bombings of a labor headquarters.

Minerals not only give structure to bones and teeth, they are also essential for alert nerve and muscle reaction. Minerals maintain the acid-base balance and fluid-electrolyte balance throughout the body. Calcium and phosphorus together form calcium-phosphate in the bones, but vitamin D is required to absorb and utilize the calcium. Balance is the key word for overall vitamin-mineral health.

Money not issue in home strike

HARTFORD (AP) — About 150 unionized workers at two nursing homes went on strike early Friday after failing to negotiate new three-year contracts.

Bill Meyerson of the New England Health Care Employees Union, District 1199 said the strikes began at 6 a.m. at the Colchester Convalescent Home and the Adams House in Torrington. There are about 75 workers at each facility.

Money was not an issue at the two nursing homes, Meyerson said. The issue unsettled in Colchester was how many workers to put on each shift, while at Adams House the workers were fighting for a pension plan.

No talks were scheduled for Friday, Meyerson said.

Meanwhile, three others accepted new contracts late Thursday and early Friday. Avery Heights in Hartford, Saint Mary's in West Hartford and the Jewish Home for the Aged in New Haven all agreed to new contracts with District 1199.

Meyerson said the three facilities agreed to contracts previously accepted by 16 other nursing homes.

Off-track betting site closer after lease OK'd

WINDSOR LOCKS (AP) — Construction of the state's second off-track betting theater can now resume after a two-year delay following a vote by the state Gaming Policy Board, officials say. The board voted Thursday to accept a 25-year, multimillion-dollar lease negotiated between the state's off-track betting contractor and Romcari Industries of East Granby.

The 1,100-seat facility near Bradley International Airport is scheduled to open in time for the Breeders' Cup horse race next November. Groundbreaking for the facility took place in November 1987, but only a steel skeleton had been built by the time work stopped in June 1988.

Under the lease, the state's contractor, American Totalisator Co. of Maryland, would pay rent to Romcari Industries, which will build and own the facility. The state Division of Special Revenue participated in the three-way negotiations to assure continued use of the building as an off-track betting facility.

The woman's body was taken to the state medical examiner's office in Farmington for an autopsy, state police said.

New law sought to OK abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion-rights supporters in Congress, setting the stage for a political battle next year, announced their intention Friday to push a bill that would write into law the 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion. The bill they introduced would, in effect, overturn the Supreme Court's decision last summer in the so-called Webster case that gave states greater authority to impose restrictions on abortions, supporters said. Just a few lines long, the bill would forbid states from restricting a woman's right to have an abortion before the time her fetus becomes viable for life outside the womb, or at any time when necessary to protect the life of the mother. Sponsors said their aim was to take the fight over rights to abortions away from state legislatures, allowing them to impose only those restrictions that are medically necessary to protect the life or health of the mother. Although no action was expected until next year, abortion-rights backers said the bill would become the central focus of future congressional and political debate on the abortion issue. A result, they said, would be to thrust the abortion issue even further into the politics of the 1990 House and Senate races. "This bill is the moral equivalent for women of the 1964 Civil Rights Act," said Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore. A leader of the abortion opponents, Rep. Christopher Smith, D-N.J., said he welcomed the bill because it would bring a full debate on abortion. He said he was confident the House would defeat it. "I hope they bring the bill to the floor very quickly," he said. "The question will then be very squarely: 'Will we permit abortion on demand for the whole nine months of pregnancy?'" The House bill had 88 sponsors, and a version introduced in the Senate carried 19 sponsors. The bill was aimed at writing into law the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision establishing a woman's right to an abortion and at reversing the Webster case. Abortion-rights supporters contend the Webster decision eroded rights established 16 years earlier, and signaled a possible further erosion in future high-court decisions.

700 arrested in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police arrested more than 700 anti-abortion protesters Friday on charges of violating a new District of Columbia law banning demonstrators from gathering near abortion clinics. Spokesmen for Operation Rescue, the national anti-abortion group that organized the demonstration, said more than 1,000 protesters came here from around the country to oppose the new city ordinance prohibiting demonstrators from gathering within 100 feet of an abortion clinic.

Outside a downtown Washington clinic where abortions are performed, police arrested some of about 300 protesters who were blocking the clinic's entrance and congregating on the sidewalk outside. Those arrested will face misdemeanor charges of blocking an entrance, which carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail and a $50 fine, or crossing a police line, which carries a $50 fine, police Sgt. Joe Gentile said. The protests, which began before dawn, took place at four abortion clinics. By mid-afternoon Friday, 496 people had been arrested and Peterson said the total was expected to rise.

"They are killing babies in there," said Anne Foreman, wife of acting Operation Rescue director Joe Foreman, as she stood outside one clinic. "Abortion is an industry, and they are making millions and millions of dollars exploiting women." While they blocked the entrance to the clinic, the protesters sang hymns from the civil rights movement and used bullhorns to spread their message. About 100 pro-choice demonstrators attempted to shout down the anti-abortion forces from across the street.

Bush to Gorbachev: Let's have 'peaceful' changes in Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush sent a pre-summit cable to Soviet Premier Mikhail S. Gorbachev expressing hopes for "a calm and peaceful period of change" in Eastern Europe, the White House said Friday.

Bush, responding to a virtually identical message from Gorbachev a week earlier, indicated his support for the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe and reforms under way in the Soviet Union, said White House Press Secretary Martin Fitzwater.

Separately, Bush brushed aside fears about the possibility of German reunification, saying, "I don't think history need repeat itself if there evolves a single German state."

Bush, in a radio interview with Mutual and NBC, said reunification is "a matter for the people of the Germans to determine. And it is a very — it's a highly sensitive matter as far as the Soviet Union is concerned. And it's better to leave it right there."

The opening of the Berlin Wall has prompted talk about a reunified Germany, which has been divided into East and West since the end of World War II. Gorbachev has said that talk about reunification would mean interference in the affairs of the two Germans.

Moreover, there is nervousness in Western Europe about restoring Germany to full strength, since a militarily strong Germany was at the center of two world wars in Europe this century.

"We've had discussions with countries that expressed concern in this regard because of certain historical precedents," Bush said, "but I don't think history need repeat itself if there evolves a single German state."

Bush and Gorbachev will meet on ships in the Mediterranean off Malta on Dec. 2 and 3. The dramatic changes in Eastern Europe will be the dominant topic.

The State Department meanwhile welcomed recent political changes in East Germany and Bulgaria.

Department spokesman Margaret Tutwiler said the formation of a new Cabinet containing 11 non-Communist members "could be a first step" toward meeting the East German people's demand for democratic reform. She said those demands could not be met fully without free elections.

Ms. Tutwiler also applauded the dismissal Thursday of three hardline Politburo members in Bulgaria and the installation of four officials who are likely to support non-Communist Party leader Peter Mladenov. She called it "an encouraging sign."

Ms. Tutwiler said "the will and the ability to carry out need reforms."

Fitzwater said that in his cable to Gorbachev, Bush said "the United States wants a calm and peaceful period of change in Eastern Europe, as Poland, Hungary and East Germany seek to implement their reforms."

"The president said he believes these historic steps will make a positive contribution to a Europe that is whole and free," Fitzwater said.

A senior administration official said Bush would not agree at the summit to look the other way in case the Kremlin deems it necessary to crack down against labor unrest and citizens' unhappiness over expected food shortages this winter. "This American president, like his predecessors, will have no understanding for the violent suppression of man's desire for freedom, period," the official said, insisting on anonymity.

East Berliners enjoying second weekend in West

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of East Germans snacked in the streets and gazed into the windows of electronics stores Friday night as they began a second weekend celebrating their new-found freedom in West Berlin.

Although the city was busier than usual as the visitors from the East began pouring in, there was little of the tumultuous street party atmosphere that engulfed the western sector a week ago.

City officials said 500,000 East Germans had arrived in West Berlin by Friday night.

"We'd like to stay all night and make a party," said 18-year-old East Berliner Ellen Eversberg. "But already we can see a party here costs a lot of money."

Ms. Eversberg and two friends were picking up free maps set out in the lobby of a bank. They planned to go home after a look around and return in the morning to line up at banks for their 100 marks ($54) in welcome money.

For the second straight weekend, West Berlin banks will open Saturday and Sunday to dispense the welcome money.

Electronics stores in the Kurfuerstendamm, the main shopping street, were closed like most other stores by evening, but they attracted the biggest groups of window-shoppers.

The aroma of grilled bratwurst drifted across the sidewalks from street stalls.

On the steps of the bomb-scarred Church of Remembrance, two men, each clutching a can of beer, chanted "East Berlin — there is no wall!"

Outside the offices of Berliner Morgenpost, the main daily newspaper, staffers dispensed free coffee to lines of East Berliners.

"We'd like East Germans to get to know us," one said as the new arrivals started curiously at the displays of Friday's edition.

At Checkpoint Charlie on the Berlin Wall, a steady trickle of Trabant cars and pedestrians moved through.

At a U.S. Army base at Mariendorf in the west of the city, American troops set up a soup kitchen, at the request of the West German authorities, to feed 1,400 East German families who want to stay permanently.

The families were being sent to government reception centers for the night.

As West Berliners girded for the influx, there were signs that the welcome mat might be wearing a bit thin.

"Of course, it's a wonderful thing they are free to come here," said Corie Starke, manager of an upmarket clothing store, Heinemann, on the Kurfuerstendamm.

Astronomers find Great Wall

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Astronomers have discovered a gigantic collection of galaxies that they say is the biggest structure ever seen in the universe.

The structure, which they call the Great Wall, is so difficult to explain that it raises new questions about theories of the origin and structure of the universe.

The researchers reported their discovery in Friday's issue of the journal Science.

The galaxies that make up the Great Wall form a sheet that is at least 500 million light years long, or 3,000 billion billion miles, and it is 200 million light years wide and 15 million light years thick.

By comparison, the earth's Milky Way galaxy is 100,000 light years across. The entire universe is thought to be between 10 billion and 20 billion light years across.

The Great Wall was discovered by Margaret Geller and John Huchra of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge in a detailed three-dimensional map they have been compiling of a section of the heavens. The structure is so big that it appears to run off the edges of the map.

Geller said no one knows of a force that could have produced a structure so big in the time since the universe was formed.

"My view is it's something really missing, something we really don't understand," said Geller. "It's not just a more complex version of something we already know."

Astronomers say each new survey of skies turns up still bigger structures.

"This is the latest chapter in a saga that's been going on since the late 1970s," said Edwin Turner of Princeton University. "We keep being surprised that we keep seeing something bigger as we go out farther."

He said theories about how the universe arrived in its current form already have been stretched by earlier discoveries, and it is not clear whether the Great Wall "will be the straw that broke the camel's back." Virtually all current theories hold that the universe began with a "big bang" about 15 billion years ago and expanded rapidly into a highly uniform mix of matter and energy.

In their report, the Cambridge scientists suggested building a national observatory to extend the exploration of the universe. They proposed a telescope with a light-gathering mirror four meters, or 160 inches, across, giving it six times the light-gathering power of the telescope used to find the Great Wall.

"With a telescope that size, you can not only look nearby, but you can look at large enough distances where you can begin to see how these structures really evolve," Geller said. "That's one thing we really have in our favor, that as we look out to greater distances, we look back in time."

Czech protesters attacked

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The largest anti-government rally in more than 20 years ended in a bloody melee Friday as club-swinging riot police attacked demonstrators. At least 13 people were hospitalized and dozens were arrested.

Thousands of young people participated in a memorial service at the city's Vysehrad Cathedral for a student killed by the Nazis 50 years ago.

Five hours later, riot police attacked the demonstrators as they tried to march from the memorial to downtown Wenceslas Square. At least 13 were reported admitted to a Prague hospital, including an American reporter.

Many of the demonstrators, bleeding from blows by police, fled down side streets. Witnesses said scores of people were arrested but they did not have an exact number.

They also said police used tear gas to disperse marchers chanting slogans against the hard-line Communist regime of party chief Milos Jakes. Reporters said tens of thousands of people were at the rally. The state news agency CTK estimated the crowd at 15,000.

The memorial was organized by the official students' organization in honor of Czech student Jan Opletal, killed during an uprising 50 years ago against the Nazi occupation.

During the rally the protesters shouted, "Disosaurs, resign!" and "We want freedom and free elections! Communists get out! End to one-party rule!"

It was the largest public protest since August 1969, when crowds gathered in downtown Prague a year after a Soviet-led invasion crushed the liberal "Prague spring" led by Alexander Dubcek, then Communist Party leader.

In Bratislava, the capital of Slovakia, about 500 students walked from Peace Square to Comenius University and placed flowers where a young woman reportedly was killed during the 1968 invasion. Police did not interfere.

Michael Schwarz, a staff photographer of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, told The Associated Press he went with the crowd trying to march to Wenceslas Square but was beaten on the head by police and chased away.

"Many people were bleeding on their faces," said Schwarz, who saw about 12 ambulances taking people to hospitals.

90 feared dead in mine blast

ALEXSINAC, Yugoslavia (AP) — A gas explosion and fire in a coal mine Friday trapped workers nearly a half-mile underground and about 90 miners were feared dead, the Tanjug news agency reported. It said 73 miners had escaped unharmful.

A methane gas explosion and fire erupted at noon at the Aleksinacki Rudnici mine, 120 miles south of Belgrade, as equipment was being welded in a shaft about 2,300 feet underground, mine director Bratislav Mandusic told Tanjug.

The state news agency quoted him as saying flames blocked the mine's main access shaft and it was believed the miners perished because of poisonous fumes.

A methane explosion at the same mine in 1983 killed 38 workers.

Generic drugs OK? A 'qualified yes'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration chief told Congress on Friday the agency needs more authority to punish generic drug companies that cheat on safety tests and misrepresent data to win product approvals.

FDA Commissioner Frank Young also gave a qualified endorsement to generic drugs, saying the agency's investigation of the 30 top-selling generics provides "good assurances" about their overall safety.

"Are the generic drugs on the market safe and effective? The answer appears to be a qualified yes ... our job is not done though, and we will keep that qualification until we are done," Young told a House subcommittee.

He added: "Patients using generic drugs should continue using them."

Young, testifying before the Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee, said he will work with lawmakers to beef up FDA's ability to remove problem generics from the market quicker and to take stronger action against the companies that violate FDA rules.

He noted that problems have been found with certain manufacturers, including several that switched their products for brand-name drugs in tests required to win FDA approval.

So far, he said, none of these cases, nor instances of company executives attempting to bribe FDA employees, have compromised the safety of any generic drugs that were sold to the public.

As a result of the FDA's investigation, generic drug companies have recalled a total of 83 drugs because of problems ranging from manufacturing deficiencies to cheating on safety tests.

In addition, the FDA has started the lengthy process of withdrawing drug approvals for five generic drug makers.

The FDA began investigating after the subcommittee turned up evidence of fraud. So far three former FDA employees have been convicted of receiving illegal gratuities and three generic drug manufacturing executives have been convicted on bribery charges. The investigations by FDA, the subcommittee and the U.S. attorney's office are continuing and more charges are expected.

The FDA does not have broad authority to recall drugs. In most cases, the agency relies on companies to comply with FDA requests for recalls.

Several subcommittee members brought up the possibility of giving FDA authority to bar future drug approvals from companies that are shown to have committed criminal acts to win previous approvals.

Asked if he felt FDA needed that authority, Young said, "I absolutely do."

Young is leaving after more than five years as head of the FDA next month to take another position within the Public Health Service, which is part of the Department of Health and Human Services.

In an interview during a break in the hearing, Young denied speculation that he is being forced out because of the generic drug scandal.

"If I left last March, they would say it was because of the Chilean grapes," imports of which were halted temporarily after a poisoning threat, he said.

GE buyback of stock is biggest in history

By Peter Coy
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — General Electric Co. on Friday announced a shareholder-pleasing plan to spend excess cash on the biggest single stock repurchase program in U.S. corporate history, $10 billion over five years.

The action, coupled with a 15 percent increase in dividends, was aimed at satisfying investors who complained the company has not been using the money it generates to benefit shareholders.

"We've looked at all the alternatives and reached the conclusion that GE stock is the best investment we can make," John F. Welch Jr., GE's chairman, said in a statement.

GE was up $2 a share to $59.50 at the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange, helping to support the overall stock market. The stock had already risen about $3 a share earlier in the week on speculation of some kind of announcement to benefit shareholders.

The repurchase authorized by the board of directors would amount to about 20 percent of GE's stock at current prices. Taking stock off the market benefits shareholders because profits are spread over fewer shares.

"This affirms to us that the company really believes that the stock is cheap," said Robert Spretnelli, an investment officer for the College Retirement Equities Fund, a major pension fund and GE stockholder.

GE's $10 billion total buyback is by far the biggest announced at one time, but it is spread out over five years. Other companies have announced a succession of shorter-term buybacks that total billions of dollars. The closest in a single announcement was Atlantic Richfield Co. with $4 billion in 1985.

GE's announcement caps a decade of massive and successful restructuring in which the company has sold off numerous businesses and bought others in order to focus on 13 key industries, from lighting, broadcasting and medical equipment to financial services, aircraft engines and plastics.

Welch, the chairman, said GE was not ruling out another multibillion-dollar acquisition in the 1990s, but he said the company was much more likely to stick with the businesses it has, adding bits and pieces to them.

The only acquisition that could halt the buyback, he said, would be one on the order of RCA, which GE bought for $6.4 billion in 1986. That is, "a massive acquisition that fit exactly, right down the pipeline."

GE said shares would be repurchased in the open market with funds from a combination of borrowings and cash generated by its business. It said the company reserved the right to halt or slow the buyback at any time.

GE said it had reviewed the share repurchase plan with the rating debt-rating agencies and that they had confirmed GE's Triple A debt rating.

At Moody's Investors Service Inc. analyst Alfred Pastore said, "They're pretty sharp people and we feel they're going to do the right thing with the money, not spend it foolishly."

The huge buyback provoked questions about whether GE was being too conservative with its money when it could be using it to buy other companies or build existing businesses.

But analyst Linda Shuman of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. said GE had come under heat from institutional investors for the exact opposite reason, putting money into risky investments instead of returning it to shareholders.

"There's inherent risk in acquisitions: the risk that you overpay, the risk that it doesn't work out," she said.

"They will still have enough funds available to grow internally," said Russell Leavin of Salomon Brothers Inc. "In the products that GE is involved in, I think they will remain fully competitive on a world scale."

The dividend increase brings the quarterly dividend to 47 cents a share, and GE said it would keep raising dividends in line with increases in earnings per share.

General Electric plan pushes stocks higher

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground Friday with a boost from news of General Electric's plan to buy back as much as $10 billion of its shares.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 17.00 to 2,652.66, finishing the week with a net gain of 27.05 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 8 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 766 up, 682 down and 519 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 151.02 million shares, against 148.37 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 178.23 million shares.

General Electric helped stir revived interest in blue-chip issues, reporting plans for its repurchase of stock over the next five years and an increase in the quarterly dividend from 41 cents a share to 47 cents.

John F. Welch, the company's chairman, also forecast "double-digit growth for share earnings into the 1990s."

GE shares climbed 2 to 59 1/2 as the day's most active Big Board-listed issue.

Hewlett-Packard, meanwhile, gained 3/4 to 44 1/2 on the company's report of slightly higher quarterly earnings.

Among other actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines rose 2 to 99 1/8; Philip Morris 1/4 to 41 3/8; Exxon 3/4 to 46 1/4; and Union Carbide 5/8 to 23 3/4.

The session got off to a sluggish start as interest rates rose in the bond market. Prices of long-term government bonds dropped more than 85 for each $1,000 in face value, increasing their yields to 7.92 percent-7.97 percent range.

The Commerce Department reported an unexpectedly strong 12 percent increase in housing starts for October.

The figures on new construction are notoriously subject to erratic swings, however, and have seldom exerted much lasting influence on the stock market in recent years.

Dun & Bradstreet rose 3/8 to 42 1/4 in active trading. The stock fell 7/4 after the company said it expects to post lower earnings in 1990 as it revamps its credit-services business.

Land's End gained 2 1/4 to 26 1/4. Late Thursday the company reported flat earnings for its most recent fiscal quarter.

But whatever disappointment that news engendered was apparently offset when at least one brokerage firm reiterated its favorable view of the stock.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $9.77 billion.

Eddie Murphy gets the credit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vaniy, they name is Eddie Murphy! Reaching new levels of self-promotion, Murphy's name is trumpeted across the screen five times in the opening credits for the comedian's new movie "Harlem Nights," which opened Friday.

Paramount Pictures presents in association with Eddie Murphy Productions a film by Eddie Murphy, the credits read. "Starring Eddie Murphy — executive producer Eddie Murphy — written and directed by Eddie Murphy."

During the film's media screening in Los Angeles earlier this week, laughter rippled through the theater as the Murphy barrage reached for its five-count crescendo.

"Harlem Nights" features Murphy and Richard Pryor in a foul-mouthed, violence-filled look at a 1938 nightclub in Harlem. The film marks Murphy's feature directorial debut.

As prominent as Murphy's name is in the film, the newspaper advertisement goes one better: Murphy's name appears six times.

Kenny Rogers special to be aired
ATLANTA (AP) — Singer Kenny Rogers' Christmas program is coming to television, a year after it played to a concert audience at Atlanta's Fox Theater.

"Kenny Rogers in Concert," will premiere on Georgia Public Television Dec. 2, and will air on PBS stations across the country later in the month.

The show includes a version of "O Holy Night" performed by Rogers, the Forester Sisters and the Lee College Singers from Cleveland, Tenn.

"There are Christmas songs and there are Christmas songs," Rogers said. "This song, to me, really typifies what Christmas is all about."

Sir John talks about Diana
LONDON (AP) — Actor Sir John Gielgud paid tribute Friday to the "youth and exquisite beauty" of Princess Diana as she presided over his installation as the first honorary fellow of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art.

The princess, whose husband Prince Charles is heir to the throne, is president of the prestigious drama school, and leading actors including Suzannah York and Sir Richard Attenborough were on hand for the ceremony, along with present-day students.

"My career has been marvellously lucky. I only hope that many of you will succeed as I have been lucky enough to do," said Gielgud.

Gielgud entered the academy on a scholarship in 1922 and was its president until his 85th birthday earlier this year. Princess Diana, 28, succeeded him.

Lech Walesa praises 'greatness of America'

NEW YORK (AP) — Polish Solidarity leader Lech Walesa went through a whirlwind series of meetings Friday with union officials, Jewish leaders, politicians and businessmen, and paused to praise American generosity.

He told a group of state union leaders that as he was listening to speeches that preceded his own, he came to appreciate what he termed "the greatness of America."

Walesa also met Friday with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who said: "We hardly know the man... But we cheer him for all the wonderful ideas he represents."

Walesa was scheduled to leave New York City late Friday and fly to Chicago, where Polish-Americans had been painting signs of welcome for him.

Walesa's meeting with New York state labor leaders began a day that included other sessions with Jewish leaders, newspaper editors and businessmen.

Walesa also met Friday with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who said: "We hardly know the man... But we cheer him for all the wonderful ideas he represents."

Cuomo announced plans by Harper & Row to publish a collection of Abraham Lincoln's speeches and writings on democracy in Polish and English next year.

Cuomo said he conceived of the "Lincoln on Democracy Project" during a meeting in June with teachers from Poland who told him books on Lincoln were not available in their country.

OPINION

Drop Reagan, Ford from public payroll

By Joe Spear

Let us begin with a premise that most of us can probably endorse: In our egalitarian system, there is little room for taboos.

Agreed? Fine. It is only reasonable, therefore, that at least two of our living ex-presidents be dropped from the public payroll. A strange leap of logic, you say? Read on, please.

Every U.S. citizen below age 70 who receives Social Security retirement benefits must meet what is known as an Annual Earnings Test. The figures change every year, but currently each recipient under 65 who makes in excess of $6,640 loses $1 in pension benefits for every $2 of extra money earned. Between ages 65-69, the limit on outside income is $9,360.

And so I ask: What makes former presidents any different from us ordinary Jans and Joes? If they exploit their notoriety to make millions, why should the suffering taxpayers be stuck with their pension and retirement expenses? Actually, the amount is relatively minuscule — perhaps $30 million a year total. One-seventeenth of a single Stealth bomber. But to a people bred to a sense of fairness, the principle is of paramount importance.

Let's consider, as the most unconscionable case in question, the post-presidential activities of Ronald Reagan. Wife Nancy got $2 million to pen her gossip memoirs. Ronnie got $5 million for his meanderings and a collection of his speeches. Right after he left office, he gave one lecture for free — so as not to appear too grabby — but he is now pulling in $50,000 to $75,000 per talk.

In October, a Japanese corporation spent upwards of $8 million to fly the Reagans aboard a chartered Boeing 747 (especially outfitted with bedrooms and shower) to Tokyo for an eight-day visit. Ron gave a few interviews and a couple of 20-minute speeches and pocketed a cool $2 million.

At the same time Reagan is salting away his millions, the American taxpayers are paying him an annual pension of $99,500. The citizen of California is paying him another $29,711 for the privilege of having had him as their governor. We are also providing him with Secret Service protection at a cost of $3 million a year.

We coughed up $697,034 to help him set up an office and pay salaries and benefits for a staff of more than a dozen. We forked over $375,000 to move his official papers to the West Coast and another $25,000 to fly Ron and Nancy home aboard a presidential aircraft. During the coming year, we will be providing another $559,500 for Ronnie's office and staff. After all, he has to have some place to work on his memoirs.

Modest waves of objection have begun rolling off Capitol Hill. Rep. Paul Kanjorski, D-Pa., said it was an "unmitigated atrocity" for the taxpayers to subsidize the security detail that protected Reagan as he earned his exorbitant fees in Japan. Added Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark: "We owe our former president protection and respect, but do we owe them a guarantee to underwrite whatever future business ventures they may undertake for personal gain?"

With my curmudgeon's license, I will go even further: Reagan's Japanese venture galls the hell out of me. I believe it is essential to provide former chief executives with security protection. And maybe we should pay their office expenses. But I would unhesitatingly cut the pensions of those who choose to commercialize themselves — and I would start tomorrow with Reagan.

With speeches, corporate directorships and endorsements, Gerald Ford is taking home a reported $500,000 to $750,000 a year. He doesn't need his presidential-congressional pension of $173,125. Jimmy Carter apparently earns little outside income. He should retain his $99,500 pension. Richard Nixon rejects all offers of corporate directorships and paid appearances. He clearly deserves his presidential-congressional pension of $134,513.

Nationalizing the foreigners

By Ben Wattenberg

The Mitsubishi Estate Co. of Japan has purchased the controlling interest in Rockefeller Center in Manhattan. In an earlier incarnation, Mitsubishi Corporation produced airplanes that shot at Americans.

The Sony Corporation, also Japanese, has purchased Columbia Pictures. Columbia owns the patriotic, flag-waving American classic "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," starring Jimmy Stewart.

The Japanese are the publicized lightning rods, but enormous investments are also coming in from Germany, England and Holland.

It's a clammy feeling. Suppose a later-day Rip Van Winkle fell asleep on December 8, 1941, and woke up in the fall of 1989. His first hazy thought might well be "Japan won the war." It's enough to boil the blood of any red-blooded American.

Perhaps not. Are foreigners — Japanese and others — really "buying up America"? Is what's happening bad for us? Here are some ideas and facts to consider as the debate gets screechy.

Americans have greater direct investments in Japan than Japanese have in America. (The trend, however, is moving in a pro-Japanese direction.)

It was not very long ago that the buying-up complaints were going the other way. American corporations were being pounded for investing overseas. That was said to be terrible because America needed capital. Now we're getting it.

Real estate is a particularly passive investment. Suppose Mitsubishi buys the office building you work in. As Dorothy Parker asked after the death of Calvin Coolidge, "How can you tell? What are the Mirras going to do, ship it to Yokohama? Might they raise your rent? Might they sell the building? Are those things ever done by sweet American landlords?"

The same week that Miz bought Rock, the second richest man in the world, Takichiro Mori bought Four Oaks Place, an office-building complex in Houston.

Interesting. New York City has just taken a big commercial hit. Exxon announced that it would move its headquarters to Dallas. And Houston is vastly overbuilt, with much unneeded office spaces.

So what are foreign investors saying? That the American economy, even in some of its problem areas, is still so comparatively healthy that they want to put their money here.

The real estate purchases do not create wealth or jobs. But follow the money. What happens to the $846 million that goes to the Rockefeller heirs? What will they do with the money? Perhaps invest it in American businesses that do create jobs and wealth. Alternatively, they will put the money in banks, and the banks will loan money to domestic investors.

The Sony purchase of Columbia is also a compliment. What have they bought? The right to use their capital to sell the wildly popular American entertainment culture around the world.

Perhaps Americans ought to calm down about buying up threat and about Japan. By American superpower standards, Japan is still a minor league player — Triple A to be sure, but minor league nonetheless. ("There is only one superpower left. It's us.") Japan is a country with half our population, aging rapidly, with a lower standard of living, with archaic agricultural and retail sectors, militarily defenseless, with crowded and exorbitantly expensive housing. But they do have a lot of money.

Follow the foreign money. There is an aspect of this situation that is rarely considered. Historically, no one buys up America. Investors usually only sink in.

Foreigners put their money here. Then they come over here to oversee their investments, or send their sons, or their managers, to do it.

Then the investors, or their sons, or their managers, or the wives thereof, become entrenched with the barbarian Yankee customs. And some of them settle here. (The son of the founder of Sony now lives in Colorado.)

So we get the original capital. Then we get the talent. Then we get the inheritance.

We don't nationalize the investments. We nationalize the investors. Terrible, huh?

Grounded at 65, pilots revolt

FAA stands firm on rule requiring pilot retirement

By Robert Byrd
The Associated Press

To hear Capt. Jack Young tell it, just when you've reached the peak of your abilities flying a jetliner, they kick you out of the cockpit.

"When a pilot reaches 60, he has gotten there because he's healthy and proficient," said Young, 69, who was forced by 30-year-old Federal Aviation Administration rules to quit flying airliners after 35 years in the cockpit.

Despite mounting pressure and the heroics of veteran pilots, the FAA sees no reason to change its ruling that commercial pilots and co-pilots hand over the controls at 60, or at least get in the back seat as flight engineer.

"It should be optional to continue or retire at 60 or any other age. If a man is physically fit and functionally able and motivated to continue flying, he should be able to do so," said Young during an interview in Atlanta.

He is a former Eastern Airlines pilot and the founder of the "Gray Eagles" — formally the Pilots Rights Association.

He hopes to draw on public admiration for veterans like Al Haynes, 58, the United Airlines captain who landed in Iowa in July with no hydraulic controls, and David Cronin, 59, the United pilot who safely landed in February, on his second-to-last commercial flight, after a section of fuselage blew out.

The FAA developed the rule because statistics showed "a significantly higher incidence of incapacitating events" after age 60, said John Leyden, a spokesman in Washington. "That has been the basis for 30 years."

The agency has never satisfied itself of a way to separate healthy 60-year-olds from those showing their age. Leyden said, "Making it 60 may not be the best way to go, but we don't know of any better way."

The rule, which took effect March 15, 1986, has been challenged repeatedly at the FAA and in the courts. Numerous pilots have sought exemptions but all have lost — most recently in a May decision on a request by 24 pilots.

The FAA noted that while a number of older pilots oppose the rule, others — and their union, the Air Line Pilots Association — support it.

"We're opposed to changing the rule," said Dick Stone, 57, a Delta captain and ALPA executive chairman for aeromedical resources. Health and safety aside, he said, it "ensures promotion for younger pilots. If we changed the age to an older age, it would stall the careers of some pilots."

Each side can cite studies supporting its point, but the FAA said in May that a performance probably starts diminishing past 50, and "the experience of pilots age 60 and over does not outweigh the danger they present from sudden incapacitation or otherwise diminished mental or physical performance."

The FAA said it is willing to look at any scientific evidence that will help find "a way to discriminate between those who contribute to the adverse trend of increasing accidents (involving older pilots) and those who do not."

"Age, in and of itself, should not be the criterion," said Dr. Herbert Karp, a professor of medicine and neurology at Atlanta's Emory University and medical director at the Wesley Woods Geriatric Hospital. "We know that as we get older, there are certain physiological changes that do occur."

I am a proud father! With the exception of my love for the Lord and my wife, nothing rivals my love for my 20-month-old son. The other day I received one of the greatest joys of being a father. I asked my son, "Where does Jesus Live?" He pointed at his chest and said, "Heart."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

Have you observed that some of the most gracious people have the least, while some of the worst ingrates have the most? From an anonymous wit came this gem: "It is not what you have in your pocket that makes you thankful, but what you have in your heart."

Thoughts

I hope and pray that my son will always give that reply. It is the most important issue of life. Is your heart Christ's home?

Thoughts

But when Christ is in the heart, thanksgiving is not circumstantial. And songs fill the air. "Sing and make music in your heart to the Lord, always giving thanks to God the Father for everything, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ," Eph. 5:19-20.

Cook's latest about murder

By Phil Thomas The Associated Press

NEW YORK — "I can't remember a time when I didn't want to be a writer," says Thomas H. Cook. "Obviously," he adds quickly and with a wide smile, "it was highly autobiographical."

Cook is 41 now and he's come a long way from that fledgling effort. He's published seven novels to date. Two of them he calls "literary novels." The others are mysteries, although Cook prefers to call them "police procedurals."

The latest of the latter is "Streets of Fire," a grim but gripping story set in Birmingham, Ala., in the hot and often violent days of 1963. It is a time when the civil rights demonstrators are ripping the city, and the police are hard pressed to contain the angry marchers.

Then, the body of a 12-year-old black girl is found buried in a shallow grave. She has been murdered. To head off a potentially explosive racial situation, the police pull Sgt. Ben Wellman off crowd-control duty and assign him to solving the murder.

Wellman is a withdrawn white man who is pretty much of a loner. "Each night he made his supper, read the paper, then fell asleep on the sofa in his large orange recliner, his ears tuned to the muffled wall behind the black and white Indian-head test pattern on his television screen. And each morning he woke needing less and less to make it through the day. It was a life that seemed to suit him, and he no longer felt it necessary to apologize for it, or to look for some way out of it."

Wellman's search for the killer is eventually successful, but the hunt takes him through the upper city's lower depths. And, along the way, he becomes more and more disillusioned with the racial policies of his city.

Cook, a native of Fort Payne, Ala., who now lives in New York City with his wife and their 10-year-old daughter, says: "I saw a lot of demonstrations during the civil rights problems. They were the thing that and they were constant. I wanted to take those experiences and blend them with a police procedural."

"I wanted to write about a man, Wellman in this case, who confronts a serious moral dilemma and works his way through it. Here is a man confronting a situation, racial issues, which, because of segregation, he has never had to deal with. He, like the others, has taken it for granted all of his life that blacks lived one life and whites lived another."

Cook, who speaks with a soft Southern accent, says he wrote his first novel while supporting himself by working on a magazine in Atlanta. Then he moved to New York and continued writing while working the graveyard shift as a desk clerk in "a seedy hotel in Brooklyn. In addition to having time to write, I also got a lot of experiences. I use a lot of that stuff in my books."

Now, he teaches literature and writing at a private school in Brooklyn as a relief from writing — "Writing a book can be tiresome" — and because "I enjoy teaching. I don't do it for the money as my books bring in enough money."

Having just put the finishing touches on a non-mystery novel — "It's an extremely complicated book about a photographer in search of the perfect picture" — Cook says he's researching material he hopes to use in a true-crime book about "an Alabama and Georgia murder case."

"Streets of Fire" is published by Putnam.

Correspondent returns 'home'

BACK HOME: A Foreign Correspondent Rediscovered America. By Mort Rosenblum. Morrow. 447 Pages. $19.95.

Foreign correspondents never die — they just fade back to their home country and write about their return. Most find their "home" has changed to much that it seems foreign and they "expatriates" with the inaccurate implication of "ex-patriot."

Mort Rosenblum, who considers himself a native of Tucson, Ariz., left the United States some 20 years ago to cover a war in the Congo, and now lists 145 other countries reported on. A former Paris bureau chief for the Associated Press, he was editor in chief of the International Herald Tribune and then returned to AP as special correspondent.

His return to AP is just about all you could expect in one volume (and in one lifetime), from racism to restaurants, pollution to pop culture, business to barrooms, and takes him from a starting point of New York through East Coast and West, Dixie and Dallas, the Bayou and the Rockies, Moscow and Greenland, both Washington, D.C., Kansas City and, of course, back home to Tucson.

And more people, places and politics that truly mix in the America that Rosenblum calls "no longer a melting pot. It is a stir-fry wok. Whatever new ingredients are added to the rest, each retains its particular flavor and shape."

Travels with Mort is not a tour guide nor a shopping list of complaints about what's gone wrong with America today, but a bold look with a perspective's eye, a foreign correspondent's perspective and a refreshing style that combines a sense of humor with, at times, a sense of outrage.

He backs off from little, rushing into some areas and he expounds on larger issues of racism, values and progress, and smaller ones of restaurant service, traffic and taxis.

FOCUS/Advice

Counseling is needed to deal with rape

DEAR ABBY: I am a 40-year-old woman who was raped as a teenager. My attacker had a knife, and while I was struggling to get away from him, he cut me on the upper arm. Now I carry an ugly scar about 10 inches long. I am very self-conscious about it, especially in summer when I wear sleeveless dresses.

What do I tell people who ask me what happened to my arm? Very few people know about the rape. I never reported it to the police, although now I wish I had.

I do not want to relive the trauma of that terrible experience, but people are curious. I have young nieces and nephews who have asked me how I got that scar, but I've dodged the question.

What should I say?
TRYING TO FORGET
DEAR TRYING: Call your local rape treatment facility and tell the people there your story. It's never too late to get counseling and join a support group. You have never learned how to deal with the memories of that traumatic experience. You must face it in order to put that nightmare behind you once and for all.

For now, do not wear sleeveless dresses. An exposed scar invites questions. Should anyone ask how it happened, simply say it happened years ago and you'd rather not talk about it. You might also consider cosmetic surgery to make the scar less conspicuous. But first, counseling is imperative. I wish you well.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I (both working parents) raised three wonderful children while holding onto the principle that we were 100 percent responsible for bringing those children onto this earth and, therefore, were 100 percent responsible for their upbringing and care. What we could not do ourselves, we paid others to do for us.

Now we have a grandson, "Mike." Our daughter-in-law, "Nan," started early to take him regularly to the homes of three relatives. When Nan returned to work, she and our son, "Rick," took Mike to day care, but we three relatives continued to receive equal-time baby-sitting many weeknights and weekends. Nan would apologize if we missed our turn and faithfully made up any missed baby-sitting "privileges."

We explained to our son, Rick, that since my career keeps me extremely busy, we need to indicate when we are able to give some time grandparenting. This has worked well on the calendar, but not on the issue. I am very resentful because our two-hour "visits" with little Mike have become overnights that extend to 16 hours! I don't want this to spoil my relationship with my son and daughter-in-law, but I can't help bristling every time Nan smiles and says, "Mike, if they promise not to spoil you too much, we might let you stay with Grandma and Grandpa for a while." How should this be handled?

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: Since you have already explained to your son that your career must come before the "privilege" of having your grandchild for extended overnight visits, be sure that he and Nan see this letter.

Also, remind them of your philosophy of child-rearing, but don't expect them to be good sports about it. Reliable, free, supplemental child care is hard to find, and they may resent losing yours.

Man may have to learn to live with headaches

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 64-year-old male, and my head has hurt for half my life. I've tried doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, acupuncture, biofeedback, neurologists and one dealing in neuropsychiatry, with no help from anyone. I've been on 52 different medications since 1955. If this happened to someone in your family, what advice would you give?

DEAR READER: I assume from your question that, despite your extensive exposure to the medical community, no one has diagnosed the cause of your headaches. This is curious. I would have predicted that one of your many practitioners would have come up with the reason for your pain.

I gather that your case is as tough as they come. Therefore, if you have exhausted the doctors and their therapies, you may be left with having to deal with 32 years of unexplained head pain. You could be helped by a pain clinic.

Many hospitals no offer special clinics to teach people how to live with (and control) chronic pain, using medicine, hypnosis, biofeedback and other methods. Arthritis, cancer and osteoporosis are common causes for chronic pain. Headache is one of the most troublesome forms of chronic pain, because it may start in relatively young people. Ask your family doctor to refer you to a pain clinic at a teaching hospital.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is contained in the pull-apart kind of capsules that hold vitamins, herbs and medicines? If I take one of these capsules, I have abdominal swelling and diarrhea. Yet if I pull the capsules apart and empty the contents into water, I don't suffer any consequences. This doesn't make any sense to me.

DEAR READER: Most capsule coverings are made of gelatin, a common protein. I've never heard of anyone being allergic to gelatin, but, I suppose, you could be sensitive to dyes or other compounds in the coatings. Ask your pharmacist to look up the names of the companies that manufacture the various capsules you take. Then write them and request information about what does into their gelatin coatings. This may solve your problem.

Prichard represents luxury

Like an English manor, the Prichard puts a good night's sleep about a good time fairly well.

Atop this two-story home, a fireplace-equipped master suite and other bedrooms stand ready to revitalize a spent family with a good night's sleep.

Below this private area, the main floor yields to both formal entertaining and less-formal pursuits, like lounging over coffee and a Sunday morning paper.

Built for a family, this three-car garage, low-slung looker combines luxury with livability—all on a city lot.

From the bank of picture windows in the front to the spacious entryway, the Prichard's open layout spells elbow room.

Visitors step down into a sunlit-dappled living room graced with vaulted ceilings. After cocktails, amble next door to the dining room, which opens onto the deck.

For the chef using this gourmet kitchen, pleasing the fustiest palate comes easy. Be it a hot dog or a Caesar salad, culinary delights spring to life in this magic corner of the house. The kitchen combines a country view with big-city sophistication. An island boasting a second "vegetable sink" means extra hands can join in the cooking. Also, a full pantry provides food for many days.

For more private moments, the nook acts as that perfect in-house hideaway where a best parent can savor mid-morning tea and relish a chapter of that who-did-it mystery.

If the nook means solitude, the family room—complete with wet bar—means marathon Monopoly games or singing Christmas carols around the tree and fireplace.

But upstairs, it's sweet dreams

House of the Week

amid cozy comforters and thoughtful design. The master suite features a sitting room for those penitent moods and a walk-in closet for those fashion moods. Throw in a double-sink vanity and a huge shower, and the Prichard's billpayers have what they deserve: luxury.

Another two-sink vanity in the Prichard's third full bathroom separates the other two bedrooms. And there's enough storage space for any king's ransom.

New tropical plants are challenging

By Earl Aronson
The Associated Press

Watch the fruit counter of your supermarket during the holiday season for the makings of new tropical plants for your home. During the holidays, pineapples, kamquats, dates and mangoes are displayed, along with the more common avocados, coconuts, tangerines, oranges and other citrus.

Occasionally, there will be something really new, such as the tangerine-like Clementine, introduced from Europe, but this one will be troublesome since it is seedless. In any event, growing plants from seeds of tropical fruits can be challenging and fascinating.

One plant that may be grown from seed is the date palm. Drying the dates does not destroy the seeds, but you should plant them promptly after removal of the pulp. Not every seed will grow, so plant a dozen or so to assure getting one or two

Weeders Guide

The seeds have a hard coating, reports Ray Rothenberger, a horticulturist with the Missouri Cooperative Extension Service. He advises filing off a small area on the side of the seed to permit faster water absorption and germination, which could take six months.

Keep seeds in a warm—near 80 degrees F—moist place. Put the pot into a plastic bag and tie it shut after the seeds are planted. This will help keep them moist. Use a mix of half each peat moss and sand to start tropical fruit seeds.

Kumquat, a citrus, can make an attractive foliage plant. Citrus seeds do not need a dormancy period before planting and should germinate in a few weeks. Seeds may be injured if allowed to dry, so plant promptly after removal from ripe fruit. Use a sand-peat mixture, covering seeds lightly, and keep at normal room temperature for germination.

Grapefruit, orange, lemon, lime and other citrus may be grown from seeds in the same way. They may flower indoors, but rarely will produce fruit under home conditions. If you want fruit, Rothenberger says, some of the smaller growing ornamental citrus will actually make better house plants. These include the Calamondin orange, mandarin orange, Ponderosa lemon and Meyer lemon. If these citrus do bloom indoors, they will require hand-pollination to get fruits to set.

Pomegranate seeds should be planted directly after removal from the fruit. Sow seeds in the sand-peat mix and keep them moist and warm.

'Frozen' bolts can be turned

By Andy Lang
The Associated Press

When you need exceptionally strong fasteners that can be removed at a later time if necessary, you use nuts and bolts. At least, that is the theory.

While it works most of the time, the occasion always seems to arise when a nut cannot be turned or a bolt turns too easily and will not come out.

Nothing is quite as frustrating as a nut that won't turn, usually because it has rusted or become "frozen" in place.

There are four common solutions for this problem.

First, soak the nut and/or bolt in oil. Wait 10 minutes or half an hour or an hour and then go to work on it. Usually, oil or some other lubricant will have loosened the fastener enough so that it can be turned. You can heat the rusty nut and bolt with a torch, but only if you have had some experience with a torch.

Another way is to use a hacksaw to cut the bolt below the nut, after which the nut and bolt will have to be replaced. Mechanics often use this method: holding one hammer against the side of the nut, then using a second hammer to strike the bolt from the other side.

Some bolts are small and have slotted heads like screws. Some are round. Those with flat heads will be used in either wood or metal if the holes in the metal are beveled. Machine bolts are very large bolts with square heads. A third kind, carriage bolts, are those most commonly used in outdoor furniture, such as wooden chairs and benches. A carriage bolt has a smooth oval head with a square collar directly beneath.

When the wood the bolt is used in begins to soften, the bolt turns in the wood whenever you try to turn the nut. The hand tool experts at Cooper/Tools suggest that, to loosen such a bolt, cut a wide slot in the bolt head with a hacksaw, then use a screwdriver to hold the bolt in place while you turn the nut.

To start a screw or drive a nail in a hard-to-reach place, stick a piece of chewing gum on the end of the screw. This holds the screw in place so you can use both hands to turn the screwdriver. Or use an awl to start a hole big enough to hold the screw.

To drive a nail where there is little room to maneuver a hammer, use a bolt or piece of steel rod as an extension of the hammer. Put one end of the extension on the wall and hit the other with a hammer. Always wear eye protection when doing this kind of work.

A toggle bolt is used for hanging heavy objects on walls and from ceilings. The bolt is pushed through a hole in the wall, but first it must be run through the object to be hung. This includes both the bolt and its winglike anchor. When the bolt goes through the wall, the two wings on the anchor open up and grip the wall. This is done with a screwdriver.

Be very careful, because if you remove the bolt for any reason the whole wing assembly will fall behind the wall and you will have to start over with new equipment.

When buying a bolt, remember that its diameter and its thread size combine to designate its size. Thus, a bolt labeled M-4-by-12 means it is a quarter-of-an-inch in diameter and has 12 threads to the inch.

OPEN UP — Collecting keys can be fun. There are many publications to help collectors.

Keys open up exciting world

Anybody for keys? This arrangement is my own. I bought a bagful for $5, and now the fun begins — sorting, naming and counting the lot. I'll call for help to the Key Collectors International (P.O. Box 9397, Phoenix, AZ 85068). The KCI was founded in 1978 and has 300 members. They do not flaunt meetings or conventions, but they do have a library and put out several publications: Key Collectors Journal, a Membership Directory, the Standard Guide to Key Collecting, Antique Classic Marquee Keys, and a Collectors' Guide. They reprint lost catalogs and out-of-print books on keys and locks.

Narrow Gauge" railway key.) There are three 75-dollar pieces: an Auto Dealer Presentation, Diamond, Continental, gold; a 6 to 10" key-to-the-city, gold-plated and engraved with the name of a historical person (an "obscure person" can be had for $25); and a Watch key, 14K gold, engraved. The book has three photos: a Cabinet, barrel, brass, at $5; the same in steel with Art Deco motif, $6; and a car key, Colt .45 shape, 1968 GM cars, $15. Two Edsel keys from any maker are worth $5 — perhaps because so many were hurled into oblivion. Then come the Door keys, plenty

Nerve disorder attacks cats

QUESTION: My six year old spayed cat is acting odd — she rolls circles and tilts her head to one side. Otherwise she seems fine. This just happened and I don't know why. Can you help? ANSWER: The symptoms you describe are those of a common nerve disorder in cats called feline vestibular syndrome. What is affected here are parts of your cat's inner ear that have to do with balance. Her peripheral nervous system is also involved. Common cause for this syndrome are chronic middle or inner ear infections. The accompanying inflammation interferes with the balance function of the inner ear. The aggravating agents may be bacteria, fungi or parasites — usually ear mites. Your veterinarian can diagnose this by ear examination and culturing of the ear matter. Treatment is based on the cause. Medication is effective in most cases. In severe cases, surgery may be necessary. Sometimes kittens are born with a congenital vestibular disorder, but this isn't the cause in your case. Other causes are ear accidents or head trauma causing hemorrhage or fractures in the middle or inner ear. Tumors may originate in the inner ear or in other parts of the body and spread there. A biopsy and surgical removal is often indicated. Some toxins such as certain antibiotics that produce degeneration of the vestibular system may also cause these symptoms. Strokes, though rare, may be the problem in older cats. Occasionally we see such an affected cat and can-

Photography Baby photos very popular

By The Associated Press

Babies are among the most popular subjects among amateur photographers, especially the proud parents and grandparents. And, like pictures of puppies, kittens and sunsets, snapshots of the little ones smiling innocently into the camera or mirthfully enjoying some favorite plaything are bound to elicit "oohs" and "ahs" from all but the most hard-boiled onlookers. When the baby is part of your family, all the shots he's in are precious to you, whether they're masterpieces from a photographic standpoint or poorly exposed and off-center. But, Jean Moss, an advertising and portrait photographer who specializes in photographing children, offers these tips to help the amateur photographer — even one with relatively simple equipment — make those prized baby shots even better.

- Move in as close as possible to the child; close-ups capture the moment better than do distant shots.
• Take vertical photos that fill the frame with the child.
• Get the child to look right at you by clapping or whistling, or by singing his favorite song.
• Adjust your position to the level of the child; this will enable you to capture those great "head on" expressions. (If your camera produces the "red eyes" effect, you may want to aim the lens slightly above or below baby's eyes.)
• When taking indoor shots, Ms. Moss advises using ASA 400 film, with a flash when natural light is not sufficient. She also suggests you avoid taking shots with fluorescent lighting — use a flash instead.
• For outdoor shots, she recommends positioning the baby facing the sun, making sure you, the photographer, have your back to the sun. If necessary, you can use a flash outdoors when shooting in shade or on cloudy days.
• Ms. Moss emphasizes that when taking pictures of a baby, you should keep his safety foremost in your mind.
• Successfully use these few tips, and your snapshot audience may be complementing you not only about the charms of your little one, but on your photographic skills as well.
• Ms. Moss, who has an 8-year-old daughter, will be taking baby photos as part of a Pampers picture sweepstakes next spring.

NEW PRODUCTS — Eastman Kodak Co. announced recently that it will introduce a disposable, wide-angle camera in the United States. The Kodak Stretch 35, which will carry a suggested retail price of $12.95, will enable the user to take 12 color photographs measuring 3 1/2 inches by 10 inches, Kodak said. When all the shots on the film have been exposed, the camera is taken intact to a specially equipped processing center, where the film is developed and prints are made. The camera will allow photographers to supplement their regular pictures with panoramic shots. Travelers, hobbyists and such professionals as realtors and architects should find the fixed-focus camera useful, according to Peter M. Palermo, Kodak vice president. Acme Frame Products has introduced a photo storage and display system that the Chicago-based company says will "put an end to dog-eared photographs, cumbersome albums and the usual photograph clutter."

Bridge

Squeaking through
 By James Jacoby

The Rotineros Cup is a special team event held in Sweden for Scandinavian contestants. Last April the event was won by a team from Denmark. In a match against Norway, Danish player Thorvald Aagaard played and made six clubs after a bidding sequence similar to the one shown.

Declarer won the club lead with his nine, played ace and ruffed a spade, and then played a heart from dummy, inserting the 10. This was won by West's king. West, thinking it possible that his partner held the spade king, played another spade. If this had to be ruffed in dummy with the club ace, West would have promoted his club holding to another trick. But declarer won in his hand. He now played to dummy's ace of clubs, came back to his hand with another heart, and cashied the K-J of clubs, picking up the remaining trumps from West. On this K-J of clubs, East threw two diamonds, retaining the 7 of hearts. Declarer now cashed his other high heart, hoping the suit would divide. When East was left with the high heart, the last spade was played. East of course threw a diamond, knowing that he could not relinquish the winning heart. Declarer knew that West had started with five spades and four clubs and only two hearts. Since East had begun with four diamonds, it was likely they included the king. So declarer played to dummy's ace, dropping East's king and making his contract.

No kudos on this deal to defender West. He can defeat the contract after winning the king of hearts by playing a diamond.

Esasky blows out of Boston; signs with Braves

By Ed Shearer
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Nick Esasky became baseball's first big-name free agent of 1989 to change teams Friday when he signed a three-year contract with the Atlanta Braves, a team that had been wanting the first baseman for years. "He's going to be a great addition to our ball club and our rise to the top," vice president and general manager Bobby Cox said at a news conference announcing the signing. "It was a decision that was long coming," said Esasky, a Florida native who lives with his wife and three children in Marietta, Ga., a suburb north of Atlanta. "I know there was talk for many years of me coming here," Esasky said. "It never seemed to work out. I'm totally excited about coming here and playing." During his six seasons with Cincinnati, Esasky had a .375 batting average with 14 home runs and 36 RBIs at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. He declined to say what kind of production he expected with the opportunity of playing half the season in the stadium. "I never try to put numbers up before a season," he said. "It's just gonna cause extra pressure. If I play the best I can and give 100 percent, the numbers will be there. But, this park has been my brightest spot when I was in the National League. "Boston and Atlanta are probably the two stadiums that fit me the best," he said. Nixon was asked if he might move Esasky to third base. "No," he replied. Esasky said he preferred to stay at first, not having to learn a new position. Putting Lasky at first probably puts Gerald Perry on the trading block.

said. Esasky sees a good future for the Braves, who have been mired in the NL West cellar for the last three years. "I know the team is on the way building up," he said. "They have a lot of good young players and some other players that are a little older but are playing well. I'm excited to be part of a team that's on the way up. It's been one of my dreams to come back and play at home."

OFF TO ATLANTA — Former Boston Red Sox first baseman Nick Esasky, shown here in training camp in March, signed a three-year contract with the Atlanta Braves on Friday. Esasky hit 30 home runs and drove in 108 runs for the Red Sox in 1989.

East bloc is still a sports powerhouse

By Ral Casari
The Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Sweeping political reforms will slowly Westernize the structure of sports in Eastern Europe, but the East bloc will remain a sports powerhouse, the top official of the Olympics said Friday. Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, said that together with political change "bit by bit, organizations in the East bloc will become more similar to those in Western nations." Samaranch, on his return from a two-day meeting in Warsaw with sports ministers from Eastern Europe, said sports had been an important factor of life for 40 years in these countries, "and their sporting strength will be maintained in the future." Since the 1970s, East Germany has taken a lead in the Olympics with a seemingly endless succession of champions. As a country of 16.5 million, it outdid the United States in Olympic medals at the 1988 Seoul Olympics, finishing second to the Soviet Union.

ND looks for long-lost win at Penn State

By The Associated Press

There's going to be a Notre Dame streak broken at Penn State Saturday and the Irish just hope it's the right one. Top-ranked and winner of a school record 22 consecutive games, Notre Dame still is tip-toeing warily into the lair of the No. 17 Nittany Lions. That's because the Irish haven't won at State College since 1913, three quarters of a century ago. The only Irish victory in Happy Valley came in the first game between the two schools. Since the series resumed in 1981, Penn State has won six of the eight games played, four of them at home. After last week's 59-6 romp over rebuilding SMU, Notre Dame begins a perilous two-game road trip — the Irish are at No. 7 Miami next Saturday — attempting to build on the nation's longest winning streak and set up an Orange Bowl confrontation for the national championship against Colorado. Colorado, 10-0 like Notre Dame, is a 44-point favorite over 1-9 Kansas State and a victory will clinch the Buffs' first outright Big Eight championship since 1961 and a ticket to the Jan. 1 Orange Bowl. "We feel good about our team right now, but we are also realistic enough to know that we've been beaten twice by Minnesota," he said. "I can see Minnesota being very troubling for us in Minneapolis." Both times Minnesota beat Michigan, in 1977 and 1986, it knocked the Wolverines out of national championship consideration. Now, surrounded in the rankings by three undefeated teams, Schembechler calls a chance for the championship "conceivable, but a real, real longshot." So he talks instead about the importance of conference games because they are a ticket back to the Rose Bowl Jan. 1 in Pasadena, Calif. Already assured of that date is USC (8-2) which has clinched the host role as Pac-10 champions. Ten title and a trip to the Rose Bowl. And, of course, Bo Schembechler is worried about the Gophers, who have lost all but two of the last 21 meetings with Michigan. "I worry about every game," he said. "It's true that we have better players than Kansas State, but I think we realize that on a given day, any team can beat any other team." Meanwhile, No. 3 Michigan travels to Minnesota with more at stake than the annual battle for the Little Brown Jug. A win for the favored Wolverines (8-1) would nail down a tie for a second straight Big

Manley faces possible lifetime banishment

By David Ginsburg
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Washington Redskins defensive end Dexter Manley faces possible lifetime banishment from the NFL under its drug abuse policy, his lawyer said Friday after the player met for 1 1/2 hours with Commissioner Paul Tagliabue. After the meeting, the NFL confirmed that the league's substance abuse policy was discussed. A source close to the Redskins, speaking only if assured that he remain unidentified, said the meeting involved discussions of a third violation of that policy, which draws an automatic ban. Manley's lawyer, Bob Woolf, said the meeting "wasn't an investigation. It was an inquiry." Asked if Manley faced the automatic ban, however, he said: "That is a possibility, yes." Although Manley, Woolf and Tagliabue refused to confirm it, the Washington Post reported in its Friday edition that Manley tested positive for cocaine after the Redskins' 37-24 loss to the Los Angeles Raiders on Oct. 29. In a statement released from New York, the league said a decision on Manley would come "no later than tomorrow." Although NFL rules say a third violation results in permanent banishment, an offender can apply for readmission after a year. Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke said he wouldn't speculate on Manley's guilt or innocence, "but I am absolutely devastated by the news." Coach Joe Gibbs also said the problem was "substance abuse related," but added the Redskins have one of the best records in the league concerning substance abuse violations. "You hoped it wouldn't happen to us, but it has," he said.

Gibbs said Markus Koch would move into Manley's position. "We'll count on Markus. We feel good about him," Gibbs said.

LIFETIME BAN? — Washington Redskins' defensive end Dexter Manley leaves the law office of NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue in Washington on Friday following a meeting in the wake of reports that he tested positive for a banned substance. This test could be considered his third offense and would bring him a permanent ban from playing.

Washington bank. Manley has testified before Congress on the problems of illiteracy. "The commissioner was very fair and very sympathetic. I think everybody is sympathetic toward Dexter Manley because he's been such a positive influence," said Woolf, who said he has received contract offers from a filmmaker who wants to produce Manley's life story.

Schottenheimer makes return to Cleveland

By The Associated Press

Cleveland coach Marty Schottenheimer returns to Cleveland Sunday, where his Kansas City Chiefs will try to shut down a Browns' offense he was not allowed to run. Schottenheimer left as Browns head coach after last season because he wanted to run the offense. Club owner Art Modell insisted on a separate offensive coordinator. The Chiefs (4-6) are first in the American Football Conference in overall defense, with an average yield of 256.1 yards and first in pass defense with a 143.8 average. Cleveland (7-3), holding a one-game lead over Houston in the AFC Central, has won four straight games. The Browns' attack is geared to the passing of Bernie Kosar, who did not throw an interception in the last two games nor in six of 10 games, to Eric Metcalfe, Webster Slaughter and Gerald McNeil. On the other hand, Schottenheimer's offense will have to solve a defense that is second overall in the AFC with a 276-yard average yield, first against the rush, 93.5, and third against the pass, 182.5. It also has allowed an NFL-low 150 points. Other Sunday matchups are the Los Angeles Raiders at the Houston Oilers, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Chicago, Miami at the Dallas Cowboys, the Green Bay Packers at the San Francisco 49ers, the San Diego Chargers at the Pittsburgh Steelers, the Seattle Seahawks at the New York Giants, the Detroit Lions at the Cincinnati Bengals, the Phoenix Cardinals at the Los Angeles Rams, the New Orleans Saints at the Atlanta Falcons and

NFL Roundup

Vikings-Eagles: The Vikings are off to their best start since going 8-1-1 in 1976. The Eagles (6-4) are on a two-game losing streak. In the last four games between the two clubs, three were decided by two points each and one by five. Bills-Patriots: Buffalo has beaten the Patriots (3-7) three straight times. Jim Kelly threw three touchdowns passing a 31-10 victory in first meeting this year. Last Sunday, the Bills did not allow Indianapolis to cross midfield until only 10 minutes remained in the game. Raiders-Houston: Bo Jackson of the Raiders (5-5) visits the Astrodome, where it's easier to run than to hit a home run. Jackson, who doesn't see the Dome as a member of baseball's Kansas City Royals, will be seeking a fourth straight 100-yard game. Houston is 6-4. Buccaneers-Bears: Once again it will be linebacker family reunion time at Soldier Field when the Bucs (3-7) try to sweep the Bears (6-4). They beat Chicago 42-35 on Oct. 8. Linebacker Mike Singletary of the Bears is the uncle of Broderick Thomas, a rookie linebacker for Tampa Bay. Dolphins-Cowboys: Miami (6-4) has won four of six games against the Cowboys (1-9). One of the two losses, however, was in Super Bowl VI. The Dolphins at least can dream about the Super Bowl this season. Packers-49ers: George Seifert of San Francisco should take another step toward having the best record for a first-year coach in the modern NFL era. John Madden recorded the best rookie coaching mark of 12-1-1 with Oakland in 1969. The last time the 49ers were 9-1, they finished 15-1 in 1984. Green Bay is 5-5. Chargers-Steelers: San Diego (4-6) comes off a comeback 14-12 win over Raiders. Before the Steelers (4-6) can win, they've got to beat the score. Last Sunday, they lost 20-0 to the Bears when they committed six turnovers. Seahawks-Giants: The Giants (8-2) come home from a West Coast battering by the Rams to face a West Coast team that has beaten them in their last two meetings in 1983 and in 1986. Seattle is 4-6. Lions-Bengals: It will be the only November game at home for the Cincinnati (5-5), which has a 21-13 record against NFC teams in the 1980s. Only Miami has done better at 27-7. The Lions got their second win of the season against eight loss by beating Green Bay last Sunday. Cardinals-Rams: The Rams (6-4) appear ready to roll again after beating the Giants and snapping a four-game losing streak. St. Louis (5-5) beat the Rams when they last met in 1988. Saints-Falcons: Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium is like home cooking for the Saints (5-5). They are 5-1 there against the Falcons (3-7). Jets-Colts: The Colts (4-6) can move a step closer to evening their record. The Jets can reach 500, not for the season in which they are 2-8, but in the series in which they trail 20-19.

U.S. soccer team faces must-win situation

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — Hugo Perez is back and so is Peter Vermees. For the first time in more than two years, the United States has its entire soccer team together.

And it's just in the nick of time, too, because on Sunday the Americans play what may be their most important game in 40 years — a must-win World Cup qualifying match against Trinidad and Tobago.

If the U.S. team wins, it gets the final spot in the 1990 World Cup. If it loses, it will have allowed Trinidad to become the smallest nation ever to make the tournament, the world's most-widely watched sporting event.

Perez, the best offensive player on the U.S. team, missed the last two World Cup matches after tearing a groin muscle on Sept. 29 with his club team, Red Star 96 of the French second division. Vermees, a top forward who plays for FC Volendam in the Netherlands, missed the last game with chicken pox.

"I'm so confused. I can't handle this. I have too many options," U.S. coach Bob Gansler said, joking.

The U.S. team, which has trained for 10 days at Cocoa, Fla., was to travel to Trinidad on Friday night via Miami and Bridgetown, Barbados. The Americans will have their only scheduled practice Saturday in National Stadium, where rain has softened the field.

Trinidad has been an island of soccer celebration this week but the U.S. players say the fans won't affect them.

"They might come out a little fired up at the start because of their fans," U.S. forward Bruce Murray said earlier in the week, "but we might be, too. I really don't think where we play is going to matter. I think we could play this on a practice field, and we would get the same result that we would get in front of 35,000 people."

The last time the United States was this close to the World Cup was in 1950, when the Americans were in the England 1-0 at Belo Horizonte, Brazil.

"You can make a pretty good case that Sunday's game is the most significant for the United States in this half century, at least," said Scott LeFellier, head of the organizing committee for the 1994 World Cup, which will be in the United States.

The Americans played scoreless ties against Guatemala and El Salvador in its last two matches and haven't scored in 208 minutes. The last goal was by Perez, who led the U.S. team past El Salvador 1-0 on Sept. 17.

"Hugo gives us a big lift, psychologically," Murray said. "He has a tremendous ability to get behind the defense and slip passes to us in open space, where we can do something with them. Without him, we tend to be very, very predictable."

Running backs top NFL first year players

By Barry Winor
The Associated Press

Look at the offensive and defensive backfields and you see a great rookie class in the NFL. Look elsewhere and you have to search for a contributing rookie.

It's been a banner season for first-year running backs, safeties and cornerbacks and not a bad year for placekickers and linebackers.

But on both lines, at quarterback, tight end and punter, it's been a dismal year.

The 1989 draft was loaded up front, with All-Americans such as Troy Aikman, Tony Stewart, Barry Sanders, Derrick Thomas, Deion Sanders and Broderick Thomas the marquee players. All blue-chip, can't miss players.

So far, only the two Sanders and Derrick Thomas have lived up to billing. Aikman missed more than half the season for Dallas with a broken knuckle, Mandarich held out too long, as he admits, and has yet to move into the regular lineup in Green Bay, and Broderick Thomas is in and out of the lineup.

The clear stars of this rookie crop are Barry Sanders, Eric Metcalf and Bobby Humphrey at running back, Steve Atwater, Bubba McDowell and Louis Oliver at safety, Deion Sanders, Robert Massey and Donnell Woolford at cornerback, Derrick Thomas at linebacker and placekickers David Treadwell and Pete Stoyanovich.

Also noteworthy have been runners Marion Butts, Sammie Smith and Dave Meggett; quarterback Rodney Peete, who is improving each week; DBs Camell Lake and Myron Guyton; receivers Shawn Collins and Andre Rison; center Jeff Ulbricks; guards Steve Wisniewski and Joe Wolf; and linebacker John Roper.

Barry Sanders, Metcalf and Humphrey have brought an exciting, desperately needed element to their teams.

With the Lions' new Silver Stretch offense, a decent running threat who can take advantage when the opposition stacks itself against the run 'n' shoot is a must. Sanders is on a pace to gain 1,200 yards.

"Barry is the next great runner in this league," Coach Wayne Fontes says. "He has the instincts the great ones have. You can see it from the beginning. He works hard, he understands what we're trying to do and he knows he has a burden to carry that he carries very well."

Also carrying the burden — and the ball — well have been Humphrey, the first genuine outside threat Denver has had since Otis Armstrong, and Cleveland's Metcalf.

Humphrey has 607 yards and six scores and projects to 971 yards rushing. Metcalf, who ranks second in AFC punt returning, also has rushed for 452 yards, caught 34 passes for 199 and scored seven times.

When Cleveland lost Kevin Mack to drug suspension and traded Earnest Byner, Metcalf's quick development was essential. He's a major reason the Browns lead the AFC Central at 7-3.

"It's something that I'm used to and don't think about much. Since I began to play football, I've been expected to make big plays," Metcalf says. "It doesn't surprise me, because if the Browns didn't expect me to make a big impact, they wouldn't have made me their first draft pick."

"Neon" Deion Sanders was the first pick of the Falcons, but he played baseball with the Yankees during training camp. When Sanders reported, he ran a punt for a touchdown the first time he touched the ball.

Deion is third in the NFC with an 11.9 average on punt returns, has three interceptions and has become a starting cornerback for the Falcons.

"At first, I made some mistakes by trying too hard to make the play," McDowell said. "But I think I've come on and I got more confidence through the season."

The Chiefs have confidence that Derrick Thomas will become a pass-rushing demon in the mold of Lawrence Taylor and Cornelius Bennett. He hasn't been too bad so far with 9½ sacks.

Possibly the most noticed rookies have been Treadwell and Stoyanovich.

he hired Wade Phillips as defensive coordinator and then drafted Atwater.

"Steve has the perfect style and outlook for that type defense," Reeves said. "He has that streak of aggressiveness you are always after. He's been just what we needed."

Houston's defense never would be accused of taking the least confrontational road. So Bubba McDowell of the University of Miami had little trouble fitting into the secondary.

"At first, I made some mistakes by trying too hard to make the play," McDowell said. "But I think I've come on and I got more confidence through the season."

TARPLEY AT WORKOUT — Dallas Mavericks' forward Roy Tarpley sits at a team practice in Farmers Branch, Texas, on Thursday. Twelve hours earlier, Tarpley was arrested on a Dallas freeway for drunk driving.

Police won't give Tarpley's results

By Patricia Gravino
The Associated Press

DALLAS — Police won't say whether Dallas Mavericks forward Roy Tarpley was drunk or what when they arrested him three days ago, an officer said Friday.

Police have the results of Tarpley's blood-alcohol test, but Sgt. Jim Chandler said: "It's evidence in a criminal investigation. Let me assure you that he's not being given special treatment. It's a violation of our policy to give out the results."

Chandler said any test results would have to come from the district attorney's office.

The Dallas County district attorney's office did not immediately return phone calls Friday to The Associated Press.

Tarpley, who has been treated twice for drug and alcohol abuse, was arrested Wednesday night on charges of drunken driving and resisting arrest. He faces possible lifetime suspension from the league if tests show he took cocaine or other illegal drugs.

If suspended for life, Tarpley could apply for reinstatement after two years.

Blood test results that could show evidence of cocaine or other drugs may not be available for up to six weeks, police said.

A positive test for alcohol would be a violation of Tarpley's rehabilitation program, but wouldn't necessarily be a third strike against him under NBA anti-drug rules.

Driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest are Class B misdemeanor charges, punishable by up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The Mavericks and counselors monitoring Tarpley's rehabilitation suspended him Thursday for an indefinite period without pay. Tarpley was receiving $15,000 per game.

"Roy will be suspended until he is fully in compliance with his personal after-care program. He must understand the gravity of this kind of incident and how alcohol contributes to it," said Dr. David Lewis from the ASAP Family Treatment Center in Van Nuys, Calif.

The Mavericks hosted the Los Angeles Clippers in their first game of the season without Tarpley.

Two convicted in rape trial

By Ron Jenkins
The Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Former Oklahoma football player Glen Bell was found innocent of first-degree rape Friday, hours after the same jury convicted his teammates Nigel Clay and Bernard Hall of raping a woman in an athletic dormitory.

District Attorney Tully McCoy said the 20-year-old Oklahoma City woman who had testified she was raped at least three times on Jan. 21 was "satisfied that two of the people who raped her will be punished."

He said that any woman who is sexually assaulted is "concerned that it is believed that she is raped and that responsible parties are punished and, in this case, that was done."

The split decision in the case surprised defense attorneys, but McCoy said he was never surprised by a jury's verdict.

Joel Barr, the attorney for Clay, said he thought all the defense attorneys expected the jury to return the same verdict for each of the defendants.

"But if it was going to be a split, I don't think that anyone would have predicted that split," Barr said after the jury returned Friday morning with its verdict for Bell.

"I think everyone thought Glen was in the most risk from the beginning," Bell's attorney, Charles Cox, had said as the jury continued deliberations Friday.

"This was a very difficult case. It was presented as well as it could be by all concerned. All three defendants had outstanding representation by their three lawyers and the jury did a tremendous job of evaluating all the evidence," McCoy said.

The jury recommended 10-year sentences and $10,000 fines for Hall, who is from Detroit, and for Clay, from Fontana, Calif. Sentencing is expected within the next month.

"I hope that Glen can continue his education somewhere, but it will obviously not be at the University of Oklahoma," Cox said. He also said he didn't believe Bell's football career was over.

Bell stood stoically as the judge read the jury's verdict and then softly said, "Thank God."

Cox said his client was devastated by the guilty verdicts imposed on Clay and Hall and had not recovered emotionally from that news.

Bell told reporters he didn't have anything to say.

"I have no idea," he responded when asked why he thought the jury acquitted him while finding Clay and Hall guilty.

"It's utterly mind-boggling," said Fred Shaeffer, Hall's attorney.

Shaeffer said he didn't understand how the jury could convict his client and acquit Bell when only one person placed Hall in the room at the time of the attack.

"The only person who put him (Hall) in the room was Jimmy Fennell," Shaeffer said. He said Bell was placed in the room by three witnesses.

Defense attorneys had attacked Fennell's credibility, noting he changed his statements to police twice before telling police what Fennell said was the truth.

Jury foreman Robert Kopecky said the jury of seven men and five women had agreed they would not discuss the reasons for the verdicts in a case he described as "extremely difficult."

"We talked a great deal that it would be better not to (discuss the case) because it is so complicated," Kopecky said.

However one jury member, who talked to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said a key factor in clearing Bell was the fact that no one placed Bell in the act of having intercourse with the victim.

The juror said Fennell's testimony about seeing Bell's buttocks through a mirror was not believed to be sufficient to warrant a conviction. Cox was asked earlier if he thought the fact that Bell did not testify in his own behalf had any impact on the jury. Clay and Hall did testify.

Saberhagen signs lucrative pact with KC

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bret Saberhagen, at age 25 only the ninth pitcher ever to win more than one Cy Young award, signed a three-year contract extension with the Kansas City Royals on Friday that will make him the highest-paid player in baseball.

Saberhagen's package will be worth approximately $9 million. The extension keeps Saberhagen in Kansas City through the 1993 season. Kansas City recently signed 15-game winner Mark Gubicza to a three-year contract through 1992.

Terms of Saberhagen's contract were not announced. "We are delighted that Bret's career with the Royals will continue well into the future," General Manager John Schuerholz said. "He has established himself as one of the top pitchers in major league baseball and this contract reflects that."

Saberhagen, on a Mexican cruise, said, "We're happy to have signed with the best organization in baseball. I want to thank the Royals and my wife for their support."

Dennis Gilbert, Saberhagen's agent, said the deal had been discussed since the World Series. "I wouldn't say it was an easy negotiation," Gilbert said. "It took a lot of time and hard work on the part of the Royals, myself and my lawyer, Steve Schneider."

"Getting three years was very important to Bret," he said. "He wanted to know where he would be."

Saberhagen was a runaway winner of the American League Cy Young award Wednesday, getting 138 votes to 80 for Dave Stewart of Oakland.

The right-hander also won the Cy Young in the Royals' championship year of 1985. He won two games in the World Series that year and was named Most Valuable Player.

Devils win in OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Kirk Muller, who tied the game in the final two minutes of regulation, scored a power-play goal at 3:37 of overtime as the New Jersey Devils rallied for a 5-4 NHL victory over the New York Rangers Friday night.

John Ogrodnick and Tony Granato had scored earlier in the third period to give the Rangers what appeared to be a comfortable lead at 4-1 in the Patrick Division battle.

But the Devils roared back to tie on goals by Patrick Sundstrom, Brendan Shanahan and Muller. Muller made it 4-4 when he deflected a shot from the point by Reijo Ruuska into the net past John Vanbiesbroeck with 1:47 left in regulation.

Then with the Devils given the man advantage in overtime because of a holding penalty to New York defenseman James Patrick, Muller tipped in Bruce Driver's shot from the point for his fifth goal of the season.

Tommy Sandstrom gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead at 9:36 with a breakaway goal on a 40-foot shot from the slot, a bullet that beat Sean Burke high. It was Sandstrom's 11th goal.

The Rangers went up 2-0 on Lindy Ruff's first goal of the season at 10:54 of the second period. Ruff got the puck on Mark Janssens' kick pass across the neutral zone and he went in and beat Burke with a backhand as he was falling to the ice.

John MacLean then scored his 10th goal for New Jersey, putting a rebound past Vanbiesbroeck 43 seconds later.

Ogrodnick and Granato scored 2:25 apart in the third period to boost the Rangers into a 4-1 lead. Ogrodnick scored his 12th, deflecting in a shot by Sandstrom at 3:57. Granato then put his own rebound into the net at 6:22.

The Devils cut the lead to 4-2 on Sundstrom's 50-foot shot from the top of the left circle at 7:49, then to 4-3 on a goal at 12:56 by Shanahan, who scored his 10th from 20 feet out in the slot.

Dawkins added 20 points and Mike Gminski 17 for Philadelphia, while David Robinson had 20 points and 14 rebounds and Terry Cummings 16 points for San Antonio.

San Antonio coach Larry Brown benched three of his normal starters at the beginning of the game, instead using Chris Welp, David Wingate, Caldwell Jones and Terry Cummings, along with Cheeks.

All but Cummings are former 76ers. Pistons 106, Bucks 79: At Auburn Hills, Joe Dumars scored 22 points as the Detroit Pistons ran their homecourt win streak to 24 regular-season games with a 106-79 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks Friday night.

A playoff loss to the Chicago Bulls is the Pistons' only defeat in the last 31 home games dating back to Jan. 27.

The Bucks, who were 4-2 against the Pistons last season, started well, but appeared to tire after matching an NBA record with 50 first-quarter points in a 132-113 win over the expansion Orlando Magic the night before.

Ricky Pierce, averaging 25.2 points per game, and Jack Sikma each had 16 for Milwaukee.

Mavericks 122, Clippers 105: At Dallas, Sam Perkins and Herb Williams, sharing time at suspended Roy Tarpley's strong forward spot, combined for 34 points

Friday night, carrying the Dallas Mavericks to a 122-105 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Tarpley was suspended indefinitely without pay on Thursday by the ASAP Family Treatment Center in California for violating his drug aftercare program. He was charged with driving while intoxicated and resisting arrest.

Perkins started at strong forward and scored 15 points, including eight in the third period when the Mavs pulled away.

Williams, who had 19 points, dominated the fourth period as he scored the first three baskets and had 11 points.

Rookie Randy White, the Mavs' No. 1 draft pick, had his finest night in the NBA with 18 points off the bench. Rolando Blackman joined Williams with 19 points.

Ken Norman scored 25 points and Charles Smith had 24 for the Clippers.

White scored eight points in the third period as the Mavs jumped to an 86-75 lead.

Adrian Dantley scored 13 points in the first half as the Mavericks opened a 56-51 lead. Perkins got a big ovation from the crowd when he was introduced in Tarpley's spot in the starting lineup for Dallas.

DePaul upsets No. 19 N.C. State

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Stephen Howard made a clutch basket and four free throws and DePaul's pressure defense created three turnovers in the last two minutes as the Blue Demons advanced to the semifinals of the prestigious NIT Friday night by defeating No. 19 North Carolina State 70-65.

With DePaul leading 60-56, Howard intercepted an errant pass and hit a short jumper but Carolina State's Rodney Monroe, who had 22 points, made a layup with 1:31 left.

The Wolfpack got the ball back but this time DePaul's Curtis Price stole the ball and Kevin Holland hit a 15-footer for the Demons. With 55 seconds remaining, Holland came up with a key steal and Howard sank two free throws for a 66-58 lead.

David Booth led DePaul with 23 points, Howard had 18 and Holland had 16. Brian Howard scored 17 for N.C. State.

DePaul started the second half with a 15-8 run for a 50-41 lead, the biggest of the game. Booth had his second 3-point basket and a layup in that stretch, during which pressure defense by Melvon Foster, Price and Stephen Howard created four North Carolina State turnovers.

DePaul's next game will be in New York on Wednesday night.

NBA fights Oregon over betting issue

By Bob Baum
The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The NBA began its assault on a move to add pro basketball to Oregon's Sports Action betting game, and there were indications the vehement, high-profile objections were being heard.

Charles Grantham, executive director of the NBA Players' Association, demanded at a news conference that the state's Lottery Commission "leave our game alone."

"These are not horses; we're dealing with people," he said. "We just don't think they should be on."

Grantham, who was joined by Portland Trail Blazers Buck Williams and Clyde Drexler at the news conference, said the players and NBA management are united in their strong stand against adding pro basketball to the Oregon game.

NBA Commissioner David Stern is scheduled to express his objections at the Lottery Commission's meeting Monday in Salem.

When told of Grantham's comments, state Lottery Director Jim Davey appeared to back off his strong support for adding the NBA to the Sports Action contest, which has offered wagering on pro football games all season.

"It's certainly a concern of the Lottery Commission, so it could very well mean we won't have this game," Davey said when told of Grantham's comments. "I guess it depends on how persuasive the NBA is."

Davey said the fact Stern is coming to Salem for Monday's meeting "certainly indicates to us that they have an extreme concern about this."

"We're all waiting to see what the commissioner will say to our commission. I would imagine the players probably summed up the commissioner's concerns."

Oregon began the Sports Action game over the strong objections of the National Football League. Bettors can wager $1 or more on three to 14 games each week against point spreads established by Las Vegas oddsmakers. Half of the money wagered is returned as prizes on a pari-mutuel basis. This week, the state also began a special Monday night game involving total points in each half.

The game, the only one of its kind in the country, has raised about $9 million thus far, with about $3 million going to support intercollegiate athletic programs at the University of Oregon and Oregon State University.

Grantham, Williams and Drexler said the game would place added pressure on players. Grantham used a scenario in which Portland would be favored by six points and would be leading by five when a Trail Blazer who had scored 22 points and grabbed 19 rebounds in the game missed two free throws in the final seconds.

"There is no reason he should leave the arena to a chorus of boos, but he probably will," Grantham said. "There is no reason he should have to deal with the pressure of sports writers condemning him for having 'blown' the spread, but he probably will."

"He shouldn't have to deal with someone in a supermarket, or even his neighbor, telling him that he cost them $200 because of two meaningless free throws, but that's likely to happen, also."

Davey said "it's a good possibility" the Lottery Commission would decide to leave the Trail Blazers out of the game. But that wouldn't change the players association's position, Grantham said.

Husky five is 'interesting' with interchangeable parts

By Len Auster
Manchester Herald

STORRS — The operational words when talking about the University of Connecticut men's basketball team are "interchangeable parts" and "interesting."

A year ago they may have been Cliff Robinson and Phil Gamble. But Robinson has taken his 6-foot-10 frame and enormous body of talent to the NBA Portland Trail Blazers. And Gamble is back in school fulfilling his degree requirements.

What the 1989-90 Huskies will reflect is more the personae of head coach Jim Calhoun. Calhoun, in his fourth year, has collected a band of mid-sized athletes more along the lines of the teams he had at Northeastern.

Fans can expect to see the Huskies deploy a wide-open brand of basketball, similar to the style exhibited against the Soviet National Team, at least at the outset.

"If running is our strength, then we'll continue to do so. You can always slow down," Calhoun said.

"I'm not second-guessing myself (about the style played a year ago) but if I had my drawers, I'd rather have a team that goes up and down the court."

Connecticut opens its season Nov. 24 at the Great Alaska Shootout in Anchorage against Texas A&M. It's the first of three games the Huskies, 18-13 and an NIT squad a year ago, will play in the tournament before returning home for a nine-game home stretch between Nov. 30 and Dec. 30.

"This is a real interesting team," said Husky co-captain Steve Pikiell, bringing up that word again. "We have a lot of interchangeable parts. I think we'll do some good things this year."

"We depended (last year) a lot on Cliff and Phil, and they did a lot. But some of the rest didn't look to do the things they are capable of. We don't have that superstar, but we may be more balanced because of it. (But) someone is going to have to step up and take the big shots which Cliff and Phil always did," he added.

Calhoun likes what he sees. "The teams seem to blend well together. It's an intriguing team, if we can be patient with ourselves. We have to maximize our strengths, and not have the disadvantages hurt (that much)."

I think we'll have a fun basketball season. This will be a good team. I'm not sure if it'll be in January, February or next year," he said.

Calhoun, who enters the year three wins shy of 300 (297-183), likes what he sees in the backcourt. That area begins with 6-2 sophomore guard Chris Smith of Bridgeport. "I think he'll be one of the best in the Big East," Calhoun spoke of Smith, who has had a fine pre-season. The rotation in the backcourt will also include co-captain Tim George, the only senior on the squad, John Gwynn and Pikiell. The latter is still bothered by a shoulder problem which could cut into his playing time.

The small forward slot also has enough hands with freshman Scott Burrell, junior Murray Williams, junior Lyman DePriest — the defensive specialist — and freshman Nadav Henefeld of Israel.

Henefeld, a 6-foot-7 find whom Calhoun really likes, was leaving tonight for Tel Aviv to join the Israeli National Team for a European qualifying game against France. He's expected to rejoin the Huskies in Anchorage on Thursday.

Among the inside players, 6-9 sophomore Rod Sellers, who has added some muscle and bulk to his frame, has played the best in the pre-season. "He (Sellers) has emerged as the best in games and scrimmages," Calhoun said.

UConn's two 7-footers, sophomores Dan Czynalik and Marc Sular, have had less than spectacular pre-seasons. Czynalik did show some promise against the Soviet team. Freshman Toriano Walker is another who'll get time up front, but he's only 6-6. Anything UConn gets from its big men will be a big plus.

"The team is the most athletic I've had," Calhoun says. It'll run, but how much depends on how it does on the boards rebounding-wise against the likes of Georgetown, Syracuse, Pittsburgh and St. John's, all ranked in the AP Top 25 pre-season poll.

HUSKY NOTES: The UConn-Texas A&M game will be televised live back to the Connecticut region by WTNH-TV, Channel 8. It is one of 13 regular-season games Channel 8 plans to televise. . . . When UConn dedicates the new Harry A. Gampel Pavilion in Storrs on Saturday, Jan. 27, against St. John's, it will be the first-ever Big East home game in Storrs for Calhoun. He'll have coached 28 Big East Conference games by then, all of them in either Hartford or New Haven. . . . Calhoun said he likes the experimental six-foot rule that'll be used by the Big East Conference. "It's to our advantage because we have depth, and we do have young kids in the middle. The other night Danny and Rod would have both fouled out in a normal game," he said, talking of the exhibition game with the Soviets.

Celtics devour Wolves

NBA Roundup

BOSTON (AP) — Robert Parish had 19 points and 10 rebounds in limited action Friday night as the Boston Celtics extended their home unbeaten streak to five games with a 116-99 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Parish, who sat out the entire fourth period, was joined in double figures by five teammates as the Celtics spoiled the fledgling Timberwolves' first visit to Boston Garden.

Kevin McHale had 14 points, John Bagley 12, Larry Bird 11 and Reggie Lewis and Joe Kleine 10 each as Boston coach Jimmy Rodgers cleared his bench.

The Celtics spotted Minnesota a 2-0 lead on a basket by Tony Campbell, then took command, rolling to a 30-20 lead at the end of the first period.

Boston widened the advantage to 63-43 at halftime, then to 79-48 in the third quarter before Minnesota shortened the margin the Celtics' reserves.

The Wolves made it 102-87 with 4 1/2 minutes left, but the Celtics pulled away again with an 8-2 run.

Minnesota was led by Sam Mitchell with 22 points and Campbell had 17.

Hornets 99, Warriors 98: At Charlotte, Dell Curry's 3-pointer at the buzzer gave the Charlotte Hornets a 99-98 victory over the Golden State Warriors Friday night.

Rod Higgins hit two free throws with 52 seconds remaining, giving the Warriors a 98-96 lead.

Curry then missed a shot on the other end, but for the second time in three possessions, Golden State failed to get off a shot before the 24-second clock went off and the Hornets got the ball back with 14 seconds to go.

Tyrone Bogue, who had 17 assists and now has 46 in his last three games, brought the ball up the floor and dribbled the clock down before passing to the left wing, where Curry got the shot off as time expired.

Kurt Rambis led Charlotte with 21 points on 9-for-11 shooting. J.R. Reid added 19 points and Rex Chapman 18.

For Golden State, Chris Mullin scored 27 points, but was held scoreless in the fourth quarter. Terry Teagle had 24 and Mitch Richmond finished with 20, including nine in the final period.

76ers 108, Spurs 101: At Philadelphia, Charles Barkley scored 25 points, four of them as the Philadelphia 76ers scored the last eight points of the game to defeat the San Antonio Spurs 108-101 Friday night.

It was the first game in Philadelphia for Maurice Cheeks since the guard was traded to the Spurs last summer. Cheeks received a two-minute standing ovation from the sellout crowd when he was introduced before the game, then finished with 15 points and seven assists.

Neither team built more than a five-point lead until Johnny Dawkins hit a jumper with 4:54 to play, giving Philadelphia a 98-92 advantage.

The Spurs responded with a 9-2 spurt, and Vernon Maxwell's jumper with 1:31 left put San Antonio ahead 101-100.

However, Barkley drove for a layup, Dawkins followed with another layup and two free throws by Rick Mahorn sealed the victory with 24 seconds left. Two free throws by Barkley with no time remaining produced the game's biggest lead for either team.

Cold cuts attendance at show

By Nancy Foley Manchester Herald

Falling temperatures and a building with no heat slowed attendance at the Product Show over the weekend. Exhibitors reported a good turnout for opening night on Friday, but said that by Saturday, it got colder, the crowds had dwindled.

Organizers estimated about 5,000 people passed through the show by its closing Sunday. "Basically we counted on having about 10,000 people if the weather had stayed the way it had been," said Anita Erickson, the office manager for the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the organization that sponsored the event.

Erickson said the show, which is always held at this time of year, has usually been held at a location where heat was not available. The last show in 1987 was held at Pratt & Whitney in East Hartford, about 10,000 attended, she said.

Preparations had not been made for cold weather, she said, because it was not foreseen as a possible problem.

Ninety-two companies displayed their wares at the Product Show at 15 Hall Court in the former Pratt and Whitney foundry. The Manchester Musical Flayers, the Manchester High School Band, the Manchester Pipe Band and the Senior Citizens Band provided entertainment over the weekend.

Sabrina Pool of Coventry caught the attention of visitors with a hot tub, but a more important product on display, according to Sabrina President Ronald Nadeau, was the company's new pool insulator.

The 25 by 48 foot plastic building works like a greenhouse to keep a pool warm all year round, Nadeau said.

The Product Show had given the exposure that the year-round pool insulator needed, he said. "It's hard for people to understand what it is so we're selling because it is so new."

A number of antique cars were on display, including a 1956 Pink Cadillac convertible, a 1930 Black Ford Model A, and a 1922 Studebaker. The antique cars were for people to look at and not to buy, according to Chamber of Commerce president Anne Flynn.

A display by the Town of Manchester Fire Department graphically demonstrated what a fire can do. It showed melted and charred household items, such as phones, smoke alarms and electrical outlets that had been taken from homes where fires had occurred. Smokey the Bear was on hand to talk to children as well as "Flukey," a talking fire hydrant.

"We always see people that are in trouble. This is a chance for us to get out and meet with people under enjoyable conditions," firefighter Jim Saries said.

The police department handed out balloons to children that said, "No

CURIOS STUDENTS — Members of the Manchester High School faculty stand outside the auditorium as students peer out while waiting for the results of a search for a reported natural gas odor at the school today. Students were first evacuated from the school and then allowed to return to the auditorium, cafeteria and auditorium while the rest of the school was searched. No definite cause for the odor was found.

Gas odor forces evacuation Manchester High students forced out of classes

By James F. Henry Manchester Herald

Manchester High School was evacuated this morning after an odor of natural gas was detected in the building at about 8:45 a.m.

An inspection of the school and testing was done by fire officials and employees of the Connecticut Natural Gas Co.

Spafford said the building was completely evacuated for about five minutes after fire officials arrived on the scene shortly after 9 a.m.

Town of Manchester Fire Capt. Jack Hughes said there was a faint odor resembling gas in the building, so the fire department cleared the building.

Hughes said that though the area was considered safe, he would not characterize the incident as minor. He said it was a potentially dangerous situation. Hughes said that the gas company was on the scene about as long as the fire department. Deputy Fire Chief William Griffin coordinated the investigation.

Hughes said Griffin allowed the students, faculty and staff to return to the building. He said that if the area was not safe, Griffin would not have allowed anyone into the building.

Controversy over baby swap swirls around girl, now 10

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Robert Mays sat quietly after hearing proof that he and his wife left a hospital 10 years ago with someone else's baby, leaving behind their real daughter who later died from a heart defect.

Moments after receiving the news, he asked where his biological daughter was buried, according to his attorney.

"I think it depressed him he had a child he never met that died," said Mays' lawyer Arthur Ginsburg after genetic test results made public Sunday proved Kimberly Michelle Mays is the daughter of another couple.

The 10-year-old girl has been the focus of a custody battle between Mays — a Sarasota roofing contractor whose wife, Barbara, died in 1981 — and Ernest and Regina Twigg, who claim they lost their newborn in a baby swap at a rural central Florida hospital in December 1978.

John Blakey, the Twigg's attorney, said the tests give a 99.9 percent certainty that Kimberly is the Twigg's daughter and a 98 percent chance that the girl who died last year of a congenital heart defect, Arlena, was Mays'. The tests left no doubt about parentage, lawyers for both sides said.

Arlena, raised by his one of their own, was buried in Pennsylvania. Just before her death in August 1988, the Twigg's learned through genetic testing that she wasn't related to them.

In the search for their biological daughter, they discovered that Kimberly and Arlena were born three days apart at Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula.

"We can't leave here without final disposition of this issue," said Ernest and Regina Twigg, who claim they lost their newborn in a baby swap at a rural central Florida hospital in December 1978.

The House wants to repeal the entire measure, but the Senate wants only to eliminate the surtax and most benefits, leaving coverage of hospital costs and other minor provisions intact.

The two chambers agreed Saturday to terminate the program, but that deal unraveled Sunday. Legislators remained determined to reach a new compromise, rather than returning home to angry constituents.

James E. Buss Jr. of 149 Berlin Road, Cromwell, died after being submerged in 35-degree water for one-and-a-half hours, police said.

Tolland County divers found him at the bottom of the pond, police said. Lifesaver helicopter transported him to Hartford Hospital, where he was pronounced dead, police said.

The victim's father, James E. Buss Sr., was working nearby at a condominium site being built across the access road from the mall. He was one of several people who waded into the frigid water to search for the boy, police said.

The pond, located just off the mall's access road leading in from Slater Street, is over 20 feet deep in some places, according to police.

Gary Wood, police spokesman, said the property where the pond is located is owned by Trammel Crow Construction Co. of Dallas, Texas, which is developing 200 acres that includes the pond. Wood said it is not customary to fence in such natural bodies of water.

Police and firefighters were called to the scene at 11:04 a.m., police said. Divers from Tolland County Mutual Aid arrived at 11:41 a.m. The victim was pulled out of the water at 12:10 p.m.

Attempts to revive the victim were unsuccessful, police said.

Czechoslovak students start sit-in strikes

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Students today began a sit-in strike at Prague universities to protest police attacks on demonstrators, and a Communist leader for the first time condemned the bloody crackdown.

Hundreds took to the streets of Prague again today to demand more freedom from hard-line Communist rulers. And banned playwright and prominent activist Vclav Havel canceled a trip to Sweden in protest of the beatings.

Sit-in strikes began in most of Prague's universities, student sources said.

According to unofficial reports, strike committees were negotiating with university authorities at the Technical University in Prague and the downtown Film Faculty.

At least three official Prague theaters went on a de facto strike, refusing to put on shows and terminating cooperation with official media, actors told The Associated Press by telephone. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

A statement of the official Socialist Union of Youth called Friday night's police crackdown on student demonstrators "politically irresponsible."

The communique was endorsed by Vasil Mohorita, the union's chairman and Communist Party central committee secretary. It was the first time a Communist official publicly condemned such police action.

Many people were injured Friday in clashes with the police, who used truncheons, tear gas and attack dogs during the largest demonstration in 20 years. Hospital officials said 100 people required treatment.

The march was to commemorate the Jan Opletal, killed by the Nazis 50 years ago. It was the largest demonstration in Czechoslovakia since August 1969, when crowds gathered in downtown Prague a year after a Soviet-led invasion crushed a reform movement.

The socialist daily Svobodne Slovo joined in the condemnation of the official handling of the demonstration. The paper gave full coverage to the events, even quoting witnesses of bloody beatings.

"Such police action only creates tension in society and causes natural resistance, especially of those who are the future of our country — the youth," the daily said.

By contrast, the Communist Party daily Rude Pravo in an editorial today called for "resolute action against provocations."

About 30,000 people demonstrated in Prague again Sunday to protest police brutality and demand that government and top Communist officials resign.

On Sunday, authorities arrested 10 dissidents.

Those arrested included Petr Uhl, a leading human rights activist, who was charged in connection with the spreading of news about the purported death of a mathematics student at police hands Friday. The government has called reports of the student's death "an unfounded rumor."

The state news agency CTK said Uhl was charged with "the crimes of harming the interests of the republic abroad and spreading alarming news."

Uhl, a veteran member of the Charter 77 human rights group, is associated with VIA, a dissident news service active in several East European countries. If convicted, he could be sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison.

Dissident sources in Prague and Vienna told The Associated Press

Deficit, Medicare hang up Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' race to adjourn for 1989 by Thanksgiving is running into problems from two measures that have proven intractable all year: deficit reduction and eliminating Medicare benefits for long-term illnesses.

Lawmakers planned to search for solutions to those standstills today, following an unusual Sunday session dominated by closed-door negotiations but little floor action.

"I remain determined we will be able to complete action in order to adjourn ... by Thanksgiving,"

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, told his colleagues.

But judging from the path in front of them, that might not prove easy. The House planned action today on a new version of the $14.6 billion foreign aid bill which President Bush vetoed Sunday. He complained that the measure provided funds for a United Nations agency that financed forced abortions in China, but liberals and conservatives were expected to clash over aid to violence-torn El Salvador.

House-Senate bargainers renewed their effort to decide how to roll back the 1988 catastrophic health care law. The legislation provides coverage to elderly patients with long-term medical problems that otherwise could lead to financial ruin.

When enacted, the measure had bipartisan and popular support. But well-organized lobbying by seniors objecting to the surtaxes they must pay to finance the program — reaching $800 this year for the most well-to-do — has convinced lawmakers to undo the program.

The House wants to repeal the entire measure, but the Senate wants only to eliminate the surtax and most benefits, leaving coverage of hospital costs and other minor provisions intact.
