'INTERIOR DECORATOR' — Sharon Cocconi observes a display which she has contributed to at the Martin School library. Children in the school have been decorating the windows of the library as part of a program which may help stimulate interest in reading.

Childrens' creativity put to use on windows of library in school

By Dianna M. Talbot
Manchester Herald

Young interior decorators have taken over the display windows of the library at Martin School on Darlington Road.

Collections of frogs, bears, pigs and crabs, along with theme-related books, have been precisely arranged in five window displays, each of which were designed by one or a pair of students.

Each window is dedicated to its designer's theme, and every month the windows are dismantled so that a new group of children can set up their individual displays.

This marks the first school year that students have presented collections and created displays at the school, according to Lisa Plavin, a half-time librarian at the school who initiated the project.

So far, 17 children have created 15 displays, and there is a waiting list for windows for the rest of the year, she said.

In her own window display, Stephanie Myers, 11, a sixth-grader, chose to feature her favorite animal — pigs. Dozens of pigs of different sizes, shapes and colors fill three glass shelves in her window.

In the display, she also incorporated a book titled "Portly McSwine," which tells a story about a pig who plans a National Spaghetti Day.

"I just think pigs are cute," she said. "I have a dog, and I wanted a pet pig too, but my parents said,

"No."

The items were selected from her collection of about 130 items with a pig motif at her home at 162 Bobby Lane, Myers said. She started collecting pigs after her grandmother gave her a knitted stuffed pig pig, an item which has been given a special place of prominence in her window display — right in the middle.

Sharon Cocconi, 9, a fourth-grader, filled her window display with turtle-related items, from turtle-shaped inkwells to jewelry themes including horses, the Whalers hockey team and glass miniatures, Plavin said.

"I think it is a good experience for the children to have their collections featured and singled out by others who look at them," said Plavin. "It gives them a special feeling."

This month, two other windows offer colorful stuffed bear displays. They were created by fourth-graders Ashley Althiro, 9, Tara Norbit, 9, and Jennifer Rixy, 9.

A fifth window holds a fascinating collection of erasers of all sizes, shapes and colors, which was designed by fourth-grader Vanessa Makewicz, 9. She said she began collecting erasers over the summer.

Plavin said she is pleased by students' efforts and their enthusiasm for their window displays.

Earlier student displays include one of porcelain dolls and another of two students' artistic endeavors, she said. Future displays will have themes including horses, the Whalers hockey team and glass miniatures, Plavin said.

"I think it is a good experience for the children to have their collections featured and singled out by others who look at them," said Plavin. "It gives them a special feeling."

Pleas focus on schools

By James F. Henry

BOLTON — Members of the Citizens Alliance for School Excellence and The Neglected Taxpayers group pleaded their cases for the future of town schools before the Board of Education Thursday.

TNT member Stephen Rascher of Alexis Drive said his group supports closing Bolton High School and regionalizing with another school system because of declining enrollments. Reading from a prepared statement that was similar to a letter to the editor from TNT Chairman Charles F. Holland, published Tuesday in the Manchester Herald, Rascher said, "We are concerned about the quality of education at Bolton High School."

Jean Laughman, a member of CASE, urged the board Thursday to respond to Holland's letter, saying, "Letters from town residents don't carry as much weight as one from the Board of Education."

Laughman also said that she is concerned that people will read statements made by TNT and believe that they are all true.

In November, Holland said the group supported closing the high school, but he later said that was only one option under consideration.

Rascher suggested that officials investigate whether Bolton students could be sent to Manchester, Vernon or Coventry schools on a tuition basis.

A portion of Holland's letter said, "As taxpayers, we expect the board to diligently investigate all feasible alternatives."

When Holland made his earlier declaration that Bolton High School should be closed, his comments drew sharp criticism from elected officials.

Robert Campbell, the chairman of the Board of Finance, asked "at what cost?" referring to sending students to Manchester.

On Nov. 20, in place of a regularly scheduled Board of Finance meeting, Campbell, First Selectman Robert Morra, Board of Education Chairman James H. Marshall and Vice Chairman Barry Stearns held a press conference, and Morra read from a news release, saying, "We believe that the good reputation which our town and its school system has long enjoyed is well deserved. Any effort to harm that reputation unfairly with resulting harm to our town's reputation as a whole will be resisted."

In early October, Susan Nuss, another member of CASE, said the group wants to be sure town residents get accurate information on the school system so they can make informed choices.

Nuss was also at the board meeting Thursday, and she echoed Laughman's sentiments.

Following board policy, the board did not respond to any comments made. TNT has been critical of the board for not opening dialogue during regular meetings, and Holland said recently he will continue to pursue changing that policy. He has said that the Board of Education is the only board in town that does not respond directly to concerned residents.

Marshall has stated that he is not prepared to change the policy, adding that if the board responded to all concerns, the meetings would be much longer.

Thursday's open meeting lasted over 1 1/2 hours and was followed by an executive session to discuss a matter of negotiation.

Bolton board OKs plans for school roof

By James F. Henry
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The Board of Education voted on Thursday to endorse plans previously approved by the Public Building Commission to put a new roof on Bolton High School.

As they voted, school board members said that the plans are not the cheapest, but the best.

Roger E. Galliber, an architect with Galliber and Baier of Bolton, estimates the project could cost $330,000. That figure could be higher or lower depending on bids received, Public Building Commission Chairman Arthur Mensing said at the meeting.

Galliber said plans for the roofing must be approved by the state, and he hopes to have the project out to bid by Feb. 1.

Mensing said the commission wants the plans to be submitted to the state quickly so that the project can go out to bid by the Feb. 1 target date.

Board of Education Vice Chairman Barry Stearns recommended that the board accept the plans Galliber presented to the commission on Monday and the Board of Education Thursday. The question passed unanimously.

The supplies for the roofing will likely be purchased from Owens Corning, Galliber said. He said that the material he is recommending is under warranty for 20 years but that, with proper maintenance, the roof could be good for 40 years.

Board of Education Chairman James H. Marshall said he hoped Galliber was right because he does not want to face another roofing project soon.

Galliber said the approved plans call for tapered insulation to aid in drainage. He said most old roofs on buildings like the high school are flat. This insulation would put a slight angle on the roof which Galliber said will not be visibly noticeable, but will help keep the roof clear in inclement weather.

Galliber said the trend in the state is to do roofing projects during the summer, which makes a busy season for builders but allows workers to install the roofs in generally nice weather. Galliber said that will also aid the town because the quality of the work will be better.

Soon after the latter comment, the board voted unanimously to send a letter to the commissioner stating that the figures are unreasonable because the inflation rate is not likely to rise as quickly as the estimates indicate.

Board member David Fernald asked sarcastically how much money Blue Cross & Blue Shield made from investments while the town was paying its premiums.

Puckman said the board is not alone in its concern. He said Helen Kemp, the executive assistant to the selectmen, was also upset at the figures.

He said the rates of increase around the state vary from 25 percent to over 75 percent.

Insurance hikes draw protest

By James F. Henry
Manchester Herald

BOLTON — The Board of Education voted unanimously Thursday night to petition the state Commissioner of Insurance to review increases in the cost of medical insurance by over 50 percent here.

Superintendent of Schools Richard Puckman said that overall, the town has been informed that insurance rates will increase nearly 52 percent from Feb. 1, 1990, to Jan. 31, 1991, for medical coverage. That increase, according to Puckman, is based on estimates for the entire state, but not on Bolton's recent insurance claim history.

Puckman said that Bolton has not had a high claim rate in recent years and usually anticipates rebates in insurance. For the period between Sept. 1, 1988, to Aug. 31, 1989, Bolton paid $226,527 in premiums and had $235,075 in filed claims.

Comparatively, Blue Cross & Blue Shield estimates Bolton will have $366,502 in claims before inflation. The inflation rate, however, drew gasps from the board, as Blue Cross & Blue Shield predicts an inflation rate over of over 30 percent.

"How can the state let these guys get away with this?" Board Vice Chairman Barry Stearns said.

Stearns also said later, "I can't believe the state insurance commissioner isn't questioning Blue Cross & Blue Shield on what inflation rate they're using."

Soon after the latter comment, the board voted unanimously to send a letter to the commissioner stating that the figures are unreasonable because the inflation rate is not likely to rise as quickly as the estimates indicate.

Pratt & Whitney courts Soviet engine business

EAST HARTFORD (AP) — Pratt & Whitney executives say a new program underway at the company might offer it an opportunity to build jet engines for the huge Soviet airline Aeroflot.

"Aeroflot represents a significant potential customer," he said.

The state-owned airline has a fleet of more than 3,000 aircraft and reported flying about twice as many passengers and logging about twice as many revenue passenger miles in 1988 as American Airlines, the largest western carrier.

In addition, the Soviets, in the spirit of economic reform, have indicated they are interested in forming a new, private airline to compete with Aeroflot.

Although U.S. jet engine sales to Eastern European countries remain limited, Pratt & Whitney and its engine-building rival, General Electric, have already received some orders.

From Yugoslavia, for example, Pratt has received three firm orders and two options for PW4000 engines to power McDonnell Douglas aircraft ordered by JAT airlines.

Rare fish found in state

GROTON (AP) — Researchers have discovered a previously unknown population of 300 shinnosturgeon in the Connecticut River more than doubling the number of the federally endangered fish known to inhabit the river.

Thomas Savoy of the state Department of Environmental Protection's fisheries unit said a survey of sturgeon in the Connecticut River last summer found 300 in a feeding area south of Portland.

The only other known feeding area is near Hartford where there are about 200 sturgeon, Savoy said Thursday during the fall meeting of the American Fisheries Society's southern New England chapter at the University of Connecticut campus at Avery Point.

But Savoy said the discovery is not cause for too much optimism.

"That 300 is a low number in the sense that they're a long-lived and late maturing fish," Savoy said.

The shortnose sturgeon is slow to mature, often not spawning until it is 28 or 30 inches long and 15 or 20 years old, and then only spawning once every three to five years.

Savoy said research he began in July 1987 initially focused on the population near Hartford.

In a related development, Eric M. Smith, director of DEP's marine fisheries unit, said the 1989 Atlantic salmon run in the Connecticut increased 13.7 percent from a year earlier, to 108 fish.

Smith said the salmon, which the DEP is trying to restore in the Connecticut River, should have an even better run next year, based on the number and quality of smolts released in 1988.

In the Merrimack River in Massachusetts, where fish and game officials are also attempting a restoration program, the salmon return this year was up 30.8 percent, to 65 fish.

In Maine's Penobscot River, where there is a natural population, the number of fish caught this year tripled, and the total run is expected to exceed 5,500 fish.

Boy, 4, finds a pistol, shoots, kills toddler

BRIDGEPORT (AP) — Police say a Bridgeport man faces a reckless endangerment charge after his 4-year-old son found a pistol in his jacket and accidentally shot an 18-month-old cousin.

Dante Santos died late Wednesday night, six hours after he was shot, police said.

Both Johnson and the 4-year-old's mother were home, police said, as was an unidentified 7-month-old baby.

The Johnson, 22, is also known as Ashmore Rogers.

According to the National Safety Council, an estimated 300 children ages 14 and under die each year from accidental shootings. Another 3,000 children are injured, according to anecdotal data from pediatricians and child safety advocates, said Dennis Smith, a spokesman for the Center to Prevent Handgun Violence in Washington.

"More children were killed from shootings in 1987 than did of accidental poisonings. We've got parents locking up poisonous cleaners to keep them away. I think we have to do the same with guns," Smith said.

Improve your chances: Buy Lotto in Hartford

HARTFORD (AP) — New Britain and Newington are popular addresses for Connecticut Lotto winners, but Hartford is the place to buy the ticket, according to an analysis of lottery statistics.

While winning is based on chance, statistics of winners since the game began six years ago turn up some interesting coincidences.

New Britain and Newington, for instance, are the first-prize winners for every 1,700 residents. Meriden is the next most winning address, averaging one Lotto winner for every 1,900 residents.

New Haven, by contrast, averages only one winner for every 9,700 residents.

New Britain has had 44 first-prize Lotto winners since the game was established in 1983, the highest number of winners in one city in the state. Meriden is second with 31, followed by Hartford

State GOP goes go after O'Neill on tax hike

Radio advertisement is 'just a friendly little tweaking'

By Judi Everhart
The Associated Press

HARTFORD — Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill's re-election campaign isn't laughing about a state Senate Republican radio campaign now airing, reminding Connecticut voters about Connecticut's highest-in-the-country sales tax.

The Republicans, who want voters to remember this year's record tax increases when Election Day rolls around next year, say it's "just a friendly little tweaking." As for O'Neill, who is planning a run for a third full term next year, his campaign calls the commercials "juvenile gimmickry."

The opening of the one-minute commercial sounds like a regular news story, the announcer talking about how O'Neill blames the state's budget problems on sagging sales tax revenues.

Then, as Christmas music comes in, the listener hears: "Hi! I'm Bill O'Neill from Classic Connecticut where everything must go! Yes, everything in the state of Connecticut is on sale now! ...

"No reasonable offer will be refused, as long as you pay the sales tax! ... Remember, you won't find a higher sales tax anywhere in America, so shop 'til you drop ... the deficit that is!"

The campaign is the brainchild of A.J. Januchewicz, the media relations chief for the Senate Republican Caucus.

His boss, Senate Minority Leader Reginald J. Smith of New Hartford, who is a candidate for governor next year, says fiscal issues will dominate the 1990 campaign.

The governor and the Democratic-controlled General Assembly pushed through more than $900 million in higher taxes last session and the state is still having trouble keeping the budget balanced. The biggest piece of the tax-increase package was a half-point jump in the sales tax to 8 percent, the highest state sales tax in the country.

"With the radio spots, Smith said, "we just wanted to let the governor and his people know that we're not going to allow the tax increase he forced upon the people of Connecticut to go without mention during this holiday season."

"We want to keep the issue before the public," the senator said. "It's just a friendly little tweaking."

O'Neill campaign spokesman William A. Stanley called the commercials "the typical type of juvenile gimmickry that we've come to know as the Republicans' trademark."

"Instead of offering specific solutions, they have chosen to engage in childish ad campaigns. So much for their promise to run a clean, issues-oriented campaign," Stanley said.

Smith said O'Neill is wrong to blame the state's fiscal problems on sagging tax revenues. The problem is on the spending side of the budget, the senator said.

"The spending side is up dramatically and we should be learning to live within the revenue growth," Smith said. "Sales tax revenues are way up compared to last year and they're up over what was budgeted in the sales tax area" when the 1989-90 budget was adopted last spring.

Stanley said that sales taxes in many areas of the country are higher than Connecticut's, when city, county and state sales taxes are combined. Still, Connecticut has the highest state sales tax.

"Are they trying to make people remember? Sure they are," Stanley said.

Study of pond has much merit

The Board of Directors delayed decisions Tuesday on two town expenditures. One was the proposal to spend $642,400 to buy two buildings north of Lincoln Center to provide 60 parking spaces for people who need to get to municipal offices. The other was to spend $23,000 for further study of Center Springs Pond to determine what needs to be done to restore it as a skating area.

Town Manager Richard Sartor feels the land north of Lincoln Center is needed for parking at the complex of municipal office buildings and that buying it would be the least expensive way of solving the parking problem. He may be right, but the question of more parking is tied to the need for more office space and at this point the town has no clear plan for doing that.

Since the voters rejected a bond issue to pay for more municipal office space, town officials have begun to consider alternatives. They will probably decide on a plan similar to the one for which the bond issue was requested, but scale it back in size and cost.

The directors made the right decision by delaying a vote on the purchase of the land for municipal parking. They should keep their options open. It is too soon to commit more than $640,000 to the land purchase.

The study of Center Springs Pond at $23,000 is quite another case.

Disputes over whether and how to restore Center Springs Park to usefulness figured colorfully in the election campaign that brought the Republicans into power on the Board of Directors.

The only Republican director candidate who lost was one who suggested the park is a lost cause. During the campaign, Republican Director Theunis Werkhoven, ultimately elected mayor, and Democratic Director Stephen T. Cassano, ultimately chosen minority leader, outdid each other in expressing enthusiasm for restoration of the park and putting the pond in a condition that would make it usable for skating.

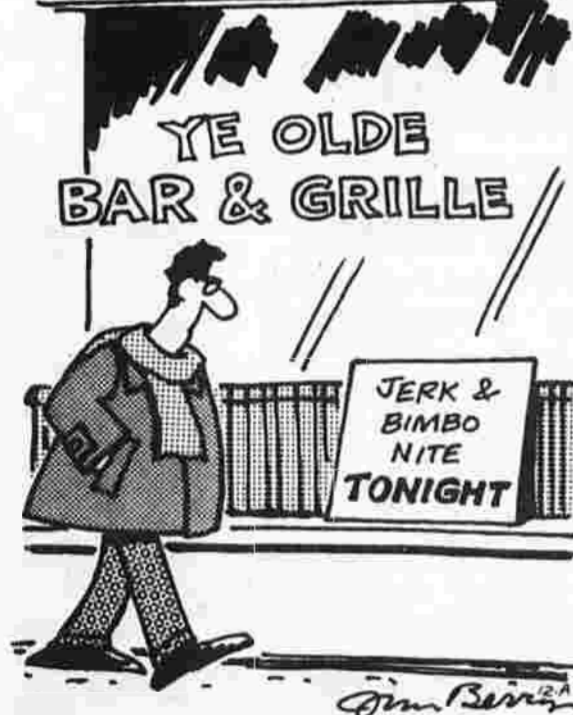

It seemed that restoration of the park would go forward no matter which party won.

Republican Director Ronald Osella is right when he says the pond restoration is the not the most pressing long-range problem facing the town.

And the $23,000 is not the only expense involved. The job may cost as much as $150,000, and there is no real guarantee that any of that money will come from the state.

The project, despite all the evidence to the contrary, may prove unfeasible. But voters have a right to assume, as a result of the support the idea got in the election campaign, that the town would at least continue its exploration of pond restoration.

The Republican directors want to consider the pond study as part of the budget. When they do, they should keep in mind the strong support Mayor Werkhoven has expressed for it.

Bush and the 'peace dividend'

By Tom Raum

WASHINGTON — President Bush is throwing himself with nerve into crafting a 1991 budget, trying to decide how to apply a "peace dividend" while admitting his own budget chief sometimes gives him "60 minutes of gloom."

The peace dividend is the savings that will come from lower defense spending because of reduced tensions in Eastern Europe.

Although some of his predecessors have approached budget choices with disdain, Bush has been going over next year's budget line-by-line in excruciating detail, according to top aides.

He's had no trouble playing Solomon in refereeing battles between agency heads and Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

On defense spending, for instance, he simply split the difference between the $294 billion in defense outlays sought by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and the $290 billion proposed by Darman.

Sources said Bush decided on a final figure of $292 billion — up just $1 billion from the current level — for military spending in the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1.

Bush will submit his fiscal 1991 budget to Congress on Jan. 22. White House and OMB officials say they expect to have final figures locked in sometime after Christmas.

Under the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law, the 1991 budget must reduce the deficit to no more than $64 billion. Since the current year deficit is expected to be from $100 billion to $105 billion, that suggests Bush must come up with $30 billion to $40 billion in budget savings.

"We've got enormous budget problems facing me," Bush recently told a group of reporters who interviewed him in the Oval Office.

"I feel very strongly about it because Darman just walked out — and when you see him walking out, I go through a period of about 60 minutes of gloom before I refocus on what else is happening out there," Bush added.

Darman is fast earning a reputation as Washington's Christmas Scrooge.

And, as some well-placed aides tell it, he's living up to the characterization placed on him by former colleague and onetime Budget Director David Stockman: "He was always asking inconvenient questions, or seemingly preoccupied with the process — tactics, trades, deals, winning."

"It's that time of year. It's December — time for Christmas and arm-wrestling with Dick Darman," said drug policy director William Bennett, who has had his own feuds with Darman over spending on the war on drugs.

The multimillion-dollar disputes with Darman are common, said presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater. "There's billions and millions of dollars (in differences) between every agency and Darman," Fitzwater said.

Darman, a master at strategy, this year devised a new process under which Cabinet officers who do not want to negotiate cuts in their programs with the OMB can take their appeals directly to

Cash may disappear in Poland

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — The glow is still on for Lech Walesa in Washington, and American greenbacks will soon start flowing to Poland. But some American grinchers are quietly expressing concern.

The problem, said one American with 10 years of experience trading with East Bloc nations, is that there is virtually no one in the Polish government who can be trusted with the nearly two-thirds of a billion dollars that the United States will provide.

"Sure, the old bosses are gone, but the bureaucrats that ruled Poland are still shuffling the papers," a businessman confided before his trip to Eastern Europe. George Bush advised caution on the cash, and "for once, George Bush is right," the businessman told us.

"The only solution," he said, "is to give about 200,000 Polish government workers good old American golden parachutes."

What he meant was that the aid will go down a rat hole unless thousands of hacks are retired from Poland's domestic and foreign economic departments. For many, the only qualification that got them a job was Community Party membership.

The money won't simply be mislaid by incompetents. There is a great deal of bribery, embezzlement and other corruption in the Polish contracting offices.

An Apple spokeswoman acknowledged that the company got some of its ideas from Xerox, but said the lawsuit was without merit because ideas cannot be patented by copyright.

The lawsuit charged that Macintosh, a predecessor, the Lisa computer system, were derived from two Xerox programs: Smalltalk, developed in the mid-1970s, and Star, copyrighted in 1981.

The Lisa system was a flop, and Apple discontinued it in 1985. But the Macintosh, introduced the year before, has been among the most successful computer systems.

Xerox said Apple co-founder Steven Jobs saw a demonstration of Smalltalk at Xerox's Palo Alto Research Center in 1979, and that he and other Apple employees were "very impressed with the unique and revolutionary user-friendly design."

Smalltalk was the first computer language to use a mouse, the handheld device that instructs the computer.

The lawsuit also charged that Apple employees saw the Star program at a trade show in Houston in June 1981 and copied substantial portions in the Lisa and Macintosh programs. Allegedly pirated files, included the design and appearance of the main application windows, dialogue boxes and menu, and some of the exact icons, or symbols, used in the program.

"Xerox never licensed Apple to use the Star computer program or its distinctive graphics or its unique design and appearance or its unique concept and feel," the lawsuit said.

Apple was, however, granted a license in June 1981 to participate with Xerox in a project to implement Smalltalk into a hardware system to be developed by Apple, the lawsuit said.

"In those days nobody put c's in a circle on a computer screen," said Ronald Laurie of Irell & Melville in Menlo Park, Calif.

Thomas C. Abbott, a spokesman for Stamford, Conn.-based Xerox, said the civil lawsuit was filed after Apple rebuffed efforts that began a week ago to reach an out-of-court agreement.

Officials of Apple, based in Cupertino, south of San Francisco, said Xerox's software graphics concepts are not protected by copyright.

"We believe the case is without merit," said Apple spokeswoman Carleen LeVasseur. "The complaint confuses the difference between ideas and expression; the copyright protects expression, not ideas."

She said Apple has always recognized Xerox and others as responsible for ideas, including computer graphics devices called mirrors and windows.

"What Apple has done is take those ideas and spend a lot of money in research and development and make our own original expression."

An independent copyright lawyer said Xerox may have trouble proving it published copyrights on the software allegedly used later in Lisa and Macintosh.

NATO approves open skies policy

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO foreign ministers today endorsed a plan to allow unarmed military jets from Eastern bloc countries to fly over their territory as part of efforts to further reduce East-West military tensions.

The endorsement ended two days of talks and followed the announcement of a historic visit by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters Tuesday, the first ever by a Soviet foreign minister.

Plans for the Soviet visit overshadowed the opening day of NATO talks, during which U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III outlined plans for shaping a wider political role for the alliance in an era of reduced tensions.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner told reporters the two would discuss "matters of common interest. This is a first contact."

Britain's foreign secretary, Douglas Hurd, described the visit as "a symbol of what's been happening in East-West relations."

The endorsement ended two days of talks and followed the announcement of a historic visit by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters Tuesday, the first ever by a Soviet foreign minister.

Plans for the Soviet visit overshadowed the opening day of NATO talks, during which U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III outlined plans for shaping a wider political role for the alliance in an era of reduced tensions.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner told reporters the

"We cannot ignore the military realities that our alliance continues to face and which lie at the heart of Europe's security problems," the officials said.

On opening their skies by unarmed Warsaw Pact planes — a proposal first outlined by President Bush in the spring — the ministers said it "has a very special value."

Under the plan, planes from both sides could fly over and observe military installations.

"The willingness of a country to be overflown is, in itself, a highly significant political act in that it demonstrates its availability to openness," it said. "Aerial inspection also represents a particularly effective means of verification."

There was no alternative, they said, to the alliance's strategy of deterrence to prevent war, based on a mix of conventional and nuclear weapons.

It also noted aerial overflights serve as an effective means of verifying whether a country is abiding by arms control agreements.

The NATO position will be presented to Eastern negotiators at a conference in February in Ottawa.

The ministers gave their backing to the eventual reunification of East and West Germany but through peaceful and democratic means. The language was identical to that included in a statement issued over the weekend by leaders of the 12-nation European Community at a summit in Strasbourg, France.

They reiterated the importance of NATO as an "indispensable foundation of stability, security and cooperation for the future of Europe."

The ministers said the surveillance could be used in making sure countries comply with the conventional arms agreement being negotiated in Vienna between NATO and the Warsaw Pact. They also renewed their commitment to reach an agreement this year on reducing tanks, armored personnel carriers and other military hardware in Europe.

On Thursday, Baker sketched his ideas for a broader political role for the alliance. He foresees NATO as a permanent monitor of the reductions being negotiated in conventional, or non-nuclear, arms in Europe and as a mediator of regional conflicts.

Xerox lawsuit charges Apple stole Macintosh software design

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Xerox Corp. charges in a federal lawsuit that Apple Computer Inc. copied pioneering Xerox graphics programs in its widely successful Macintosh computer software.

Xerox seeks at least $150 million in damages in the lawsuit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court.

An Apple spokeswoman acknowledged that the company got some of its ideas from Xerox, but said the lawsuit was without merit because ideas cannot be patented by copyright.

The lawsuit charged that Macintosh, a predecessor, the Lisa computer system, were derived from two Xerox programs: Smalltalk, developed in the mid-1970s, and Star, copyrighted in 1981.

Christmas." When a balloon drifted into the frigid night air, Ms. Casolo pointed, and shouted gleefully, "Freedom!"

Ms. Casolo had to resort to a megaphone nearly as big as her—under 5 feet tall and less than 100 pounds—after the sound system failed. She joked about that too, referring to her days as head cheerleader at Thomaston High School.

But she grew serious at one point, telling the crowd, her voice choked with emotion. "Thanks for coming out. The New York press did not overwhelm me, but you guys are overwhelming me."

When someone in the crowd asked whether she had any words for Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani, Ms. Casolo said simply, "I'm innocent."

She was accompanied to Thomaston by U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who helped arrange her release, and her father, John Casolo.

"I want to thank each and every one of you from the bottom of my heart for all the prayers and letters," John Casolo said. "You've really made this the merriest Christmas we've ever had."

"I hope you will have the same," Casolo concluded as he started to cry.

Ms. Casolo planned a private reunion with her brother, Alfredo Casolo, after the official greeting at Town Hall.

"It was something that was just kind of personal to her," said Susan Abbott, one of Ms. Casolo's closest childhood friends. "She didn't want it to be all over the TV and newspapers when she woke up in the morning."

A plywood sign erected by friends that read "Welcome Home Jennifer, We Love You" greeted Ms. Casolo on the Town Green. At the entrance to her mother's house, friends placed two more "Welcome Home" banners, one in English and the other in Spanish.

On the wall of a grocery store was a banner emblazoned with a quote from the Bible: "You may ask me for anything in my name and I will do it."

A large purple bow, bearing Jennifer's name in gold letters, hung on the front door of the Thomaston Congregational Church, where hundreds of town residents gathered Dec. 1 to pray for her release.

"Our prayers here in Thomaston have been answered," said First Selectman Eugene McMahon. "This crisis has served to unite all the people of this community in a common purpose. Indeed, we all can enjoy a merry Christmas and a happy New Year."

During the New York news conference, Ms. Casolo maintained the was framed, calling suggestions by the Bush administration that she might be guilty "stunning." She also said the ordeal has not diminished her love for the Salvadoran people.

"I wish you all could know the President of the Congress, Vityal I. Vorontikov, a member of the chamber's best-known deputies, a man who was officially vilified for decades.

He paid tribute to Sakharov both as a scientist and public figure.

"All that he did was dictated by his sleepless conscience, his deep humanitarian convictions," said Vorontikov, a member of the Communist Party Politburo and president of the Russian Federation.

Gorbachev joined the Congress in standing for a moment of silence out of respect for the Congress member.

Yankelevich told reporters at the apartment that his father-in-law died last night of what the doctors say was a heart attack. We don't see anything like a sense of relief, he said.

Thomas Lyons, who graduated two years ahead of Ms. Casolo from Thomaston High School, dismissed suggestions from some in the bar that she might be guilty.

"Knowing Jennifer, as well as I do, I know she's innocent," he said.

"It's hard to explain what Jennifer's like. She's dedicated to peace. The last time I saw her was the Fourth of July. Some kids threw a firecracker and she hit the deck."

"She's a pip. That's the best way to describe her. She's gets into something and that's it," Lyons said.

"We've been averaging about 300 requests for service per day," he said.

Most of the requests have been for jump starts because the cold weather has affected the ability of car batteries to start vehicles, he said.

McNeish said. With each drop in temperature, a car battery's ability declines, depending on the amount of charge left in the battery, he said.

Triple A recommends that car owners start their vehicles at least once per day and if possible take the vehicles out for a drive to keep batteries charged as much as possible, McNeish said.

"Most of the calls we get are on Mondays because people let their vehicles sit over the weekend without starting them up," he said.

Temperatures were expected to climb into the 20s by early afternoon, the weather service spokesman said. But sunny skies were expected to soon be replaced with clouds, he added.

Communist Party leadership were "leading the country to catastrophe, prolonging the process of perestroika many years."

It was the latest call in his final cause: to end seven decades of guaranteed Communist supremacy.

The 2,250-seat Congress formed a committee to organize Sakharov's funeral, and Gorbachev said he and the entire body will attend. At his own request, Sakharov will be buried alongside his parents Monday at Vostyakovskoe Cemetery on the southwestern edge of Moscow, said a scientific secretary at the Lebedev Physics Institute where Sakharov worked.

Vitaly I. Vorontikov, a member of the Presidium of the Congress, opened today's session with an announcement of the death of one of the chamber's best-known deputies, a man who was officially vilified for decades.

changes under way in Soviet society."

Human rights activist Natan Sharansky, who spent nine years in Soviet labor camps before immigrating to Israel in 1986, told Israel radio today that Sakharov "had tremendous influence... among dissidents, among free people in the Soviet Union and who by his own personal example helped change the whole climate in the Soviet Union."

In Strasbourg, France, the European Parliament unanimously paid tribute today to Sakharov, whose name it had given to its Human Rights Prize.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, attending a NATO summit in Brussels, Belgium, said: "He was a tremendous force for peace and freedom."

The Congress formed a committee to organize Sakharov's funeral, the official Tass news agency said. It was a reflection of Sakharov's trek from his years as a lonely voice opposed to Kremlin policies to again becoming a honored member of society.

Born May 21, 1921, Sakharov's first became known as a great scientist, inducted into the Academy of Sciences in 1953 at age 32, the youngest-ever member. Like his father, he became a physicist after cardiovascular tests.

In 1948, he joined physicist Igor Tamm in developing the hydrogen bomb and for 20 years lived and worked in secrecy, with privileges that included a good apartment, driver, high salary and government awards. But Sakharov began to worry about the morality of developing weapons of mass destruction.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Don't tell Hartford coach Rick Ley or Philadelphia coach Paul Holmgren about home-ice advantages. They know better.

Ley's Whalers moved their road record to 10-5-0, tops in the NHL, Thursday night with a 3-2 victory over the Flyers, who are 8-8-1 at home.

"I was happy with our overall effort. But we have to start winning games," Ley said.

The victory broke a three-game losing streak in Philadelphia for the Whalers dating to Dec. 4, 1986, and dealt the Flyers their first loss in the circle over Barron.

"Fans tend to be more comfortable at home. You have to play harder at home and you don't realize it until you start losing" home games, Holmgren said.

Rookie Mike Tomiak broke a tie in the third period with a power-play goal, beating Flyers goalie Ken Wreggett with a five-footer to the stick side to snap a 2-2 tie with 7:56 left in the game.

The game-winner was Tomiak's second NHL goal.

"There really wasn't anything flashy that I could do," he said. "Ray (Ferraro) made a good pass to me in the third period and I was able to score an empty net goal."

The Flyers had entered the game one point behind the first-place New York Rangers in the Patrick Division.

"It's a tough one to lose, especially when you're so close to first place," said the Flyers' Scott Melnyk. "The last two or three years, our record here has not been that outstanding. It's been real tough to intimidate teams."

The Flyers took a brief 2-1 lead 24 seconds into the final period as Jiri Lalat beat Whalers goaltender Mike Liut with a 20-footer over his glove hand.

But Hartford's Tom Martin tied the game when he poked in a loose puck around the left post at 1:49.

Rick Tocchet opened the scoring for Philadelphia when his 15-footer bounced over Liut's left shoulder at 1:44 of the opening period.

Dean Evason's shorthanded left goal tied the game with 31 seconds left in the period. Evason picked up a loose puck along the boards, skated in and lifted his own rebound over Wreggett.

Democrats Joyce Epstein and James "Dutch" Fogarty left the meeting before the vote, and Peter F. DiRosa Jr. did not attend the meeting.

If the pond study is given a second chance, Cassano said, it will be approved with the votes of the four Democrats and at least one Republican swing vote.

"Somebody will change," he said. However, Cassano and DiRosa said that the Republicans on the board appear to vote together on all issues.

"The votes are probably being rehearsed in a back room somewhere and that's not what they promised the people of Manchester," DiRosa said, referring to GOP promises of open government.

Republican Director Susan Buckno, the deputy mayor, responded today. "We do not come to the meetings with any pre-determined decisions. We come into the meetings with open minds ready to hear all of the arguments for and against all of the items on the agenda."

"Obviously they're not used to being in the minority position," Buckno said, "and they're having a great deal of difficulty with it."

But Cassano said he cannot understand how five independent individuals voted against the funding the study, especially because they seemed to be in favor of the plan when it was detailed at the Nov. 28 board meeting.

"Obviously, there's something that's taken place in the last two weeks," he said.

He said the study was a "minute investment" which if done would make the town eligible for total state

"There really wasn't anything flashy that I could do," he said. "Ray (Ferraro) made a good pass to me in the third period and I was able to score an empty net goal."

The Flyers had entered the game one point behind the first-place New York Rangers in the Patrick Division.

"It's a tough one to lose, especially when you're so close to first place," said the Flyers' Scott Melnyk. "The last two or three years, our record here has not been that

Wilander psyched for Davis Cup

By Stephen Nasstrom

STUTTGART, West Germany — The draw for the Davis Cup final starting today was identical to the one last year and Carl-Uwe Steeb made the same prediction for the opening singles.

"Yes, I predict the same result," Steeb said after Thursday's draw. "I'll try to do the same as last year."

But beating Sweden's Mats Wilander could be a lot tougher than the team despite playing before a partisan home crowd in Stuttgart.

"I'm really psyched up for this match," said Wilander, who's coming off his worst season ever after winning three Grand Slam titles in 1988.

"I feel much better. I don't know if I'm playing physically better. But mentally I feel a lot more eager. We've practiced very hard. I think the team spirit is a lot better. We all want revenge for last year."

Steeb rallied from two sets down and fought off a match point en route to a stunning victory over Wilander in the opening singles last year. West Germany eventually won the Davis Cup final 4-1 on indoor clay at Goteborg, Sweden.

The Swedes didn't prepare as well last year. This year, most members of the Swedish team have been in the Davis Cup final for 10 days.

"We've never been together so long before a Davis Cup tie," Wilander said. "Last year, we were all tired. We had won so much and it wasn't as interesting as it is this year."

Wilander, who has slipped to No. 12 in the world rankings, has been a key member on the Swedish team since 1983, when it gained the first of seven straight titles.

"The important match for me is to beat Steeb," he said. "That's really important because it would mean we won the tie for the whole tie as it did last year."

But maybe I would have preferred to have played Boris in the first match.

U.S. Open champion, will take on Stefan Edberg in the second singles match, followed by a first reverse-singles match, followed by a portable 10,500-seat Schleyer Halle.

Violence, kids don't mix well

DEAR ABBY: Last night, my husband and I went to an R-rated movie. It was a big box-office hit and had a lot of publicity. There was a lot of graphic sex and violence.

What disturbed me more than anything was a little boy, about 4 years old, sitting behind us. His comments broke my heart: "Daddy, why did he kill that lady?" "Is the other man dead?" "Is it over yet?" "I want to go home."

His daddy couldn't make his son understand that what he was seeing was only make-believe — it looked so real. That child might as well have witnessed 25 live murders that night.

Is it any wonder our children are reared up emotionally, acting out at school and using foul language as such a young age? What I witnessed last night was a passive, yet very dangerous form of child abuse.

What disturbed me more than anything was a little boy, about 4 years old, sitting behind us. His comments broke my heart: "Daddy, why did he kill that lady?" "Is the other man dead?" "Is it over yet?" "I want to go home."

DEAR WITNESS: You're a very significant letter, and I thank you for it. Too few adults realize how easily influenced 4-year-old children can be. Parents would never willingly feed their children garbage, yet they expose their impressionable young minds to the worst examples of brutality and man's inhumanity to man — believing they're too young to be affected.

DEAR ABBY: I've the perfect solution for all those people out there who are always complaining about not receiving thank-you notes. Simply do not give a gift out of obligation — try giving it out of love. Then notice that the person you give this gift to will give you a very sincere "thank you" (unless the person has no manners, in which case he or she didn't deserve the gift in the first place).

I do not mean to be ugly, but do you buy a gift only to get thank-you notes? I am giving because I care about the person I am giving it to. If giving because you care isn't the reason you give, then go out and buy something for the person you love the most — yourself. And don't forget to send yourself a thank-you note.

DEAR TRUE GIVER: People "give" for a variety of reasons. Some people give a gift to reciprocate for a gift they were given. Most people give a gift because they sincerely want to express their affection or friendship with a material token. There are those who give gifts spontaneously for no rhyme, reason or occasion — they just happen to see something they think someone they know will appreciate. I've known people like all of the above. In fact, I am one of them. But I have never met anyone who gave a gift because he or she wanted a thank-you note.

Heartburn starts as smoking stops

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I quit smoking six months ago and have been experiencing heartburn almost daily since quitting. Is there any relation between the two?

DEAR READER: I am not aware that cessation of smoking and heartburn go together. Indeed, the reverse is usually true, because nicotine stimulates gastric acid secretion.

People who stop smoking often experience an increase in nervousness and tension, which in turn may cause excessive stomach contractions. These contractions can eject acid into the esophagus, causing heartburn, indigestion and gas.

I urge you and your husband to bring your symptoms to your doctor's attention. You may need testing for ulcers or hiatal hernia; also, the physician may choose to treat you with antacids and stomach contractions. In any case, stay off the cigarettes.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Hiatal Hernia." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: About five or six months ago, I began noticing small, round, flat red spots, or spots, on my skin. I've been a sun lover all my life, so I wasn't surprised to have a basal cell carcinoma removed eight months ago. About five months ago, I completed two years of gold shots (32 in all), along with three daily doses of Zorprin for arthritis control.

Can the cause of the red spots be from what I've described, or is it from being a senior citizen in her late 60s? The red spots are very different from the basal cell, so I'd be pleased to hear your opinion on what they are and what cause them.

DEAR READER: Your rash may be due to the gold shots you received. Gold therapy is often associated with skin lesions; in fact, the appearance of a rash may indicate that the gold is producing its greatest therapeutic effect.

Unfortunately, a rash usually means the patient has developed an allergy to the gold, so this therapy must be stopped immediately if a rash appears. You have completed your course of gold treatments; however, the last shot or two could have triggered the skin reaction.

Obviously, there may have been another cause for your rash. Skin diseases, such as psoriasis, are more common in patients with rheumatoid arthritis. Therefore, you should show the rash to your doctor and follow his or her advice. Perhaps you are reacting to the Zorprin, which has been reported to cause hives, rashes and skin swelling. Arging typically causes brown or tan areas on the skin.

Schultz is decorated by Japanese emperor

TOKYO (AP) — Former U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and his wife were received by Emperor Akihiko and Empress Michiko, and Shultz was decorated for his contribution to strengthening ties between Japan and the United States.

Following the audience Thursday at the Akasaka Palace, Shultz and his wife, Helena, had lunch with the royal couple and their son, Crown Prince Naruhiko.

Shultz later met with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and received of the Grand Order of the Order of the Rising Sun, Paulownia Flowers, a foreign ministry official said.

The Shultzes arrived in Tokyo on Wednesday for a five-day visit.

Greenwood being sued

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A veterans group is suing country singer Lee Greenwood for refusing to perform at a concert when the group refused to pay in cash upfront.

The federal suit, filed Wednesday by the Veterans of the Vietnam War, says Greenwood was hired in April to perform at a concert in Albany, Ga., on Aug. 18. He received an $11,250 check and was to get the balance on the day of the concert.

On that day, Greenwood allegedly demanded the balance in cash, despite the contract's provision for payment by check, and refused to perform. The suit claims he also failed to provide sound and lighting equipment, preventing other bands from performing.

The veterans group lost about $228,000 as a result of his actions, the suit claims.

Greenwood disputed the allegations Thursday, saying the group had promised him a 30-day promissory note, not a check.

Author praises teacher

NEW YORK (AP) — Author Nicholas Gage says his writing skills were unleashed in a chance encounter with a sally-tongued teacher when he was a struggling 13-year-old student.

Gage writes in the Dec. 17 issue of Parade magazine how as a seventh-grader he met Marjorie Hines Radabaugh in Worcester, Mass.

"I'd to choose a hobby, Gage said he "decided to follow the prettiest girl in my class — the blue-eyed daughter of the local Lutheran minister."

"She led me through the door marked 'Newspaper Club' and into the presence of Miss Hines, who would become my mentor and my muse."

Gage wrote an essay for the school paper about his mother, who was killed by Communists during the Greek civil war. Hines sent it to the Freedoms Foundation in Valley Forge, Pa., where it won a medal.

Gage was a reporter for The New York Times and later recorded his mother's life and death in the book "Eleni," and his father's story in "A Place for Us."

Leukemia victims get help

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Former Olympic gymnastics champion Olga Korbut has been campaigning to raise money for a group bringing young leukemia victims from the Soviet Union.

The first of the Soviet children, 5-year-old Irina Chekhovskiy, is expected to arrive in Indianapolis within two weeks, said Mary Maxwell, a spokeswoman for Riley Children's Hospital.

Irina became sick apparently because of exposure to high levels of radiation from the 1986 accident at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant. She may undergo a bone marrow transplant, Maxwell said.

Korbut lives in Minsk, the Soviet city where the girl is from.

Winner of three gold medals during the 1972 Olympics, Korbut made more than a dozen public appearances over several days to appeal for donations to the Emergency Fund for Children Foundation, created in July to locate and help children around the world suffering from grave ailments.

Twelve Soviet children slated to visit Riley in the coming months will be the first to benefit from the organization's efforts, Maxwell said.

Now is the time to review taxes

It's time to do some year-end fine-tuning of your assets with an eye toward next April 15. Tax time is no time for surprises.

The classic example involves securities in which you have your own kind of averaging through shifting of assets and income. This requires that you have a good idea of your potential tax exposure and a sense of your income prospects for 1990.

The classic example involves securities in which you have your own kind of averaging through shifting of assets and income. This requires that you have a good idea of your potential tax exposure and a sense of your income prospects for 1990.

If, for instance, 1990 promises to be a big year for you and this year has been a modest one, you may want to sell now, so as to have the capital gain taxed at a lower rate this year.

If 1989 was a great year, you might want to wait until January to sell, making the proceeds part of the next year's tax picture.

The inverse is true as well. This may be the time to take a loss on securities that aren't performing to your satisfaction, so as to reduce your tax bill for this year. Or you can wait until January and take the loss against next year's income.

This may be the time to take advantage of a quirk in the law that lets you take a huge deduction by donating appreciated property to an IRS-approved charity. By donating the property instead of cash, you can deduct the full market value of the property or securities, without having to claim the appreciation as income. There are a few exceptions and qualifications, so it's best to consult a tax advisor.

Should you decide to take advantage of one of these strategies, you may want to act before the final trading days of the year, when the rush to reposition can affect prices. Likewise, there is no reason for you to rush to cash in early in January, if cashing in is part of your strategy.

These maneuvers should, of course, be employed only if the tax advantage is substantial. Consider brokerage fees when calculating the potential benefits. Be aware, too, that a wise investor buys securities for the long term and should require powerful reasons to deviate from that course.

If you are due a year-end bonus, you may want to ask that it be deferred until early next year, to put it on 1990's tax tab.

The wild card in all of this is whether or not tax pictures are real concerns as well. A consultation with your accountant or tax adviser will help find the year-end strategy that's best for you.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Dec. 15, the 349th day of 1989. There are 16 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: "Fifty years ago, on Dec. 15th, 1939, 'Gone With the Wind,' producer David Selznick's movie version of the Margaret Mitchell novel, starring Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable, had its world premiere at Loew's Grand Theater in Atlanta.

On this date: In 1791, the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution — the Bill of Rights — went into effect following ratification by Virginia.

In 1890, Sioux Indian Chief Sitting Bull was killed in a fracas in Grand River, S.D., as Indian police, working for the U.S. government, tried to arrest him.

In 1916, the French defeated the Germans in the World War I Battle of Verdun.

In 1938, groundbreaking ceremonies for the Jefferson Memorial took place in Washington, D.C., presided over by President Roosevelt.

In 1944, a plane carrying band leader Glenn Miller — a U.S. Army major — disappeared during a flight over the English Channel.

In 1948, former State Department official Alger Hiss was indicted by a federal grand jury in New York on charges of perjury. (He was convicted in 1950).

In 1961, former Nazi official Adolf Eichmann was sentenced to death in Jerusalem.

CBS's morning show hires a new producer

By Jay Sharbutt The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Erik Sorenson recently became the second executive producer of CBS' "This Morning" show, which has had since its debut on Nov. 30 two years ago. He has what some consider the morning version of "Mission Impossible."

Like its previous incarnations, the two-hour program remains a distant third in ratings against NBC's "Today" and ABC's "Good Morning America." Like his predecessors on past and current CBS morning shows, Sorenson is expected to change that.

"I don't think it's impossible," says Sorenson, 33, a former vice president with CBS-owned KCBS-TV in Los Angeles. "I think it's tough, though."

That it is, Nielsen figures for last month's important ratings sweeps — local stations use the results to set advertising rates — gave CBS' "Morning" a 2.5 ratings average, well behind the ABC and NBC shows; they were tied with a 4.4. Each ratings point represents 121,000 homes.

But the Nielsen contained a ray of hope for the CBS reevele team of Harry Smith and Kathleen Sullivan. The ratings were up two tenths of a point from those of the previous November. Tiny, yes, but a start.

Others contributors, he says, would report on parenting, science, the environment and aging.

In addition to his plans to rely more heavily on CBS correspondents, he has hired two new full-time staffers, features reporter Wayne Freedman and Hollywood-based movie critic Gene Siskel, best known from the syndicated "Siskel & Ebert" film-review series.

"I think a lot of viewers don't realize that CBS is a viable alternative here. And so, I don't think we would stand to gain as much from this (Paley's exit) as perhaps GMA will. But I think we certainly stand to gain."

Reassurances of stability in CBS' morning effort might help aid its cause.

No doubt for that reason, Sorenson has been downplaying Sullivan's unusually frank comment last October on "Donahue" that "my days are numbered" if her show's ratings don't improve.

Asked if she and Smith will continue as anchors all next year on "CBS This Morning," Sorenson immediately replied, "Yes."

He laughed when advised that constitutes a ringing endorsement in network TV today. He also added qualifying comments. The anchor team of Sullivan & Smith will remain "to the extent" that he has control of the situation.

"Obviously, there are forces and factors out there in the world that could change that," he said. "I suppose that for some reason, the show started bleeding ... and we started doing a 1.4 (rating) for 12 weeks in a row, somebody would have to say, 'Wait a minute, there's a mistake somewhere.'"

"But it's our intention to stay the course, stick with what we've got, and improve on the program."

OTHER SIDE OF THE STREET — Elena Nachmanoff, NBC's newly hired talent recruiting director for news, sports and cable, previously worked for six years at the talent agency of N.S. Biemack, Inc. That company may not be well known to civilians, but its president, Richard Lieberman, has a stable of network stars that includes NBC's Maria Shriver and a pair of millionaire anchors, Dan Rather of CBS and Diane Sawyer of ABC.
